such matters as its ownership, origin, and quality may be established (all her linen was marked by embroidered initials) (English gold and silver articles are marked, to attest their purity, with the official mark of the Goldsmiths' Company) (the marks of old age are appearing in his face) (bringing with him the marks of his rank and privilege, the silver and china, the linen and damask, the portraits in peeling gold frames—Warren) Brand basically implies a burning or searing with a hot iron to make a permanent mark that serves to identify (as in respect to status, ownership, quality, or make) (cattle on the open range were branded to show their owner) But brand has been extended to other methods of marking and then commonly stresses the indelibility of the mark and this implication affects its various extended uses much as does the more basic one (see brand n under STIGMA) (history has once again branded this lesson on the minds of those who choose to see—Beachcroft) In particular the noun often implies a being the identified product of a specified maker (accustomed to ask for goods by brand) (a store that carries only well-known brands) Stamp (see also IMPRESSION) basically implies an impressing of a mark of identification, authentication, or authorization upon some softer material by means of a machine or instrument that hammers it in; it may imply also any comparable method of affixing a mark, usually with some suggestion of permanence or indelibility (every coin is stamped with a particular design that certifies it as belonging to a certain country and as having such and such a value) (the meat was dark red with uneven white edges of fat. Blue inspection stamps were on the white fat—Wirt Williams) (stamp a bill "Paid") (stamp a letter with the date of arrival at the post office) (put a ten-cent postage stamp on that letter) (this passport now bears all the necessary stamps) (his paternity was stamped so indelibly on his outer shell—Costain) (a poet who has left her stamp on her generation—S. H. Hay) Label implies the affixing of a piece of material (as paper, metal, or cloth) upon something to show its name, description, origin, or the person and address to which it is being sent (label all the minerals in the collection) (she affixed a small paper label to each jar of preserves) (the contents of every bottle should be carefully labeled) In its extended use label usually applies to the applying of an epithet, often rather arbitrarily, to something or someone (when I was at Harvard all the types of narrative were labeled and classified like beetles in a case—Marquand) (changing the subversive label on their own liberal clergy—Winnett) Tag is applied to a label loosely attached (as to a package or a piece of baggage) giving directions or information; it often implies less permanent attachment than label (a tag pinned to his lapel, bearing his name and destination—Current Biog.) (tag a parcel for shipment) (price tags) (write out tags for all the pieces of baggage) Ticket in the relevant sense is more common as noun than verb and basically denotes a slip (as of paper, cardboard, or metal) usually conveying information or evidencing a right. Often the word is interchangeable with label or tag without loss of meaning (many retailers who attach their own store tags to the merchandise look at the manufacturers' tags and labels as auxiliary tickets supplementing their own—Women's Wear Daily)

Ana imprint, impress, print (see corresponding nouns at IMPRESSION): recognize, identify (see corresponding nouns at RECOGNITION)

2 *characterize, distinguish, qualify

Ana *indicate, betoken, attest, bespeak, prove, argue: intimate, hint, *suggest marriage, matrimony, wedlock, wedding, nuptial, espousal

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

are comparable though not always synonymous because they all refer directly or indirectly to acts by which a man and woman become husband and wife or to the state of being husband and wife. Marriage is the common term; it may apply to the rite or ceremony (many were present at their marriage) (a civil marriage) but it more often applies to the legal or spiritual relation which is entered upon (joined in marriage) (annul a marriage) or to the state of being married (theirs was a long and happy marriage) or to the institution as an abstraction (nor does he dishonor marriage that praises virginity—Donne) In extended use the term is applicable to any similarly close and intimate union (let me not to the marriage of true minds admit impediments—Shak.) (the same sort of poetic effect as the Romantics obtained by the marriage of fertile words—Day Lewis) Matrimony is in most contexts interchangeable with marriage, but it is the more appropriate term in religious and sometimes in legal use; in many Christian churches it designates one of the seven sacraments (matrimony is the sacrament which unites in holy wedlock a man and a woman, between whom there is no impediment that would render marriage null and void—Currier) The term therefore may be chosen in place of marriage when a religious ceremony or sanction is implied (joined in bonds of holy matrimony) In general the term is more often applied to the relationship which exists between husband and wife than to the ceremony or the state of marriage (so prays the Church, to consecrate a vow "The which would endless matrimony make"—Wordsworth) Wedlock, chiefly legal or archaic, applies especially to marriage as a legally or ecclesiastically sanctioned relationship or state; thus, children born out of wedlock are children of parents who are not legally married (grave authors say, and witty poets sing, that honest wedlock is a glorious thing—Pope) Wedding is the common term for the ceremony that marks a marriage and the festivities that accompany it (a thousand invitations to the wedding were sent out) Nuptial, usually as the plural nuptials, is a more rhetorical term than wedding; it also carries a stronger implication of an elaborate ceremony (I don't object to married priests, but I do strongly object to their nuptials. . . . When a priest . . . indulges in an immense artistic wedding, I feel there is something undignified and almost unpleasant about it—Mackenzie) Espousal, often as the plural espousals, differs little from nuptial except in its extended application. In the latter use it implies a spiritual union, especially one that is dependent upon a vow or pledge (let every act of worship be like our espousals, Lord, to thee—John Wesley) marshal vb *order, arrange, organize, systematize, methodize

Ana array, range, align, *line, line up

Con derange, disarrange, *disorder, disorganize, unsettle, disturb: *scatter, disperse, dissipate martial, warlike, military carry as their basic meaning belonging to, suitable to, or characteristic of war. Martial distinctively implies reference to war in general and to its essential and fundamental characteristics; it often specifically suggests the pomp and circumstance of war (standing in martial array) (the army set out to the martial strains of a fife and drum corps—Amer. Guide Series: Calif.) Warlike, as a rule, implies reference to war as a reality, its actual causes, its actual methods, its actual effects; it therefore applies more often to feelings, acts, or activities that lead to or accompany real war than to those which suggest its thrilling or stirring qualities; thus, a warlike temper suggests bellicosity or readiness to fight to the bitter end, whereas a martial temperament suggests qualities (as dauntlessness, spiritedness, and eagerness) that bespeak one likely to behave well and valiantly in war (a warlike race) (tales of warlike feats—Wordsworth) (everything that might be of value to a warlike power—the muskets, the cutlasses—was thrown overboard—Forester) (the Huns, whose warlike fury had swept the earth like a living flame—Stoker) Military is the broadest of these terms since it may imply reference to war, to arms, or to armed forces or might (a military expedition) (the military needs of the nation) (a distinguished military career) (of military bearing, six feet in height, erect and compact, with black hair and commanding appearance—Colegrove) Sometimes military in reference to armed forces is specifically opposed to civil or civilian (a military governor) (it is beyond the scope of any military representative to effect a solution by political means—Cilley) (Spencer also could see only two main types of states, the military, fashioned primarily for war and extremely authoritarian, and the industrial state, set up chiefly for productive industry and implying democratic politics, extensive civil liberties and extreme limitation of state activities—H. E. Barnes) or it may be restricted to land, or land and air, forces and is then opposed to naval (among military and naval attachés, military rank takes precedence of “courtesy to the stranger”—Squire)

Ana *belligerent, bellicose, pugnacious, combative: *aggressive, militant: *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome

marvel n *wonder, prodigy, miracle, phenomenon

Ana astonishment, amazement, surprise (see corresponding verbs at SURPRISE): perplexity, mystification, puzzle (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE)

masculine *male, virile, manful, manly, manlike, mannish

Ana *vigorous, energetic, lusty, strenuous: robust, *healthy, sound

Ant feminine —Con womanly, ladylike, womanlike, womanish, *female mash vb *crush, smash, bruise, squash, macerate

Ana pound, *beat mask n portrait, photograph, *image, effigy, statue, icon mask vb *disguise, cloak, dissemble, camouflage

Ana conceal, *hide, secrete, screen: protect, shield, *defend, guard, safeguard

Con discover, divulge, disclose, *reveal: expose, exhibit, display, flaunt, *show mass n 1 *bulk, volume

Ana *aggregate, aggregation, conglomerate, conglomeration: *sum, amount, total, aggregate, whole

2 heap, pile, stack, shock, cock, bank (see under HEAP vb)

Ana accumulation, hoarding or hoard, amassment (see corresponding verbs at ACCUMULATE) mass vb *heap, pile, stack, shock, cock, bank

Ana *gather, collect, assemble, congregate: *accumulate, amass, hoard: merge, blend, fuse, coalesce (see MIX: consolidate, *compact, unify, concentrate) massacre n Massacre, slaughter, butchery, carnage, pogrom are comparable when they mean a great and often wanton killing of human beings. Massacre implies promiscuous and wholesale slaying, especially of those who are not prepared to defend themselves and can make little or no resistance (the tyrannous and bloody deed is done, the most arch act of piteous massacre that ever yet this land was guilty of—Shak.) (the vengeful murder of the mutiny's bloodthirsty ringleader, and the massacre of most of the surviving crew by natives—Dulles) Slaughter, basically a butcher's term for the killing of animals used as food, suggests extensive and ruthless killing, whether the scene of that killing be a battle or a massacre (the chief . . . cut his way through the enemy with great slaughter—Irving) (determined not to repeat the slaughter of the First World War, during which hundreds of thousands of soldiers were sacrificed in fruitless frontal attacks—Bethe) (it was no longer a battle but a slaughter . . . From nine o'clock in the morning until seven o'clock in the evening, when it began to get dark, the killing went on—Graves) Butchery adds to slaughter the implication of exceeding cruelty or of cold-blooded indifference to the sufferings of the victims (boasting of his fights, his cruelties and his butcheries—Kingsley) (thus was the butchery waged while the sun clomb Heaven's eastern steep—Shelley) Carnage is often not easily distinguishable from slaughter, except that it sometimes carries additional connotations similar to those of massacre (a slight resistance was followed by a dreadful carnage—Gibbon) (war and all its deeds of carnage—Whitman) Pogrom applies especially to an organized massacre of helpless people carried on usually with the connivance of officials. It is often applied specifically to such a massacre of Jews, especially in one of the European countries (the pogroms at Gomel and Kishinev in Russia in 1903) (he carried on a full-scale pogrom against the Jews, slaughtering hundreds of thousands—New Republic) (the Hindus interpret every manifestation of individual violence . . . as the launching of a pogrom against them—Edmond Taylor)

Ana assassination, murdering or murder, slaying, killing (see corresponding verbs at KILL)

massive, massy, bulky, monumental, substantial are comparable when they mean impressively large or heavy. Massive distinctively stresses solidity and strength of construction and may imply an imposing appearance (its ceilings . . . heavy with massive beams—Dickens) (the mainland of Asia, and especially that part of it occupied by the massive bulk of China—Owen Lattimore) (a man whose massive shoulders and determined cast of features ought to have convinced him that such an enterprise was nothing short of desperate—Shaw) Massy, chiefly a literary word, carries a stronger implication of ponderousness than massive, but an equal implication of solidity and strength (your swords are now too massy for your strengths and will not be uplifted—Shak.) (hast thou a goblet for dark sparkling wine? That goblet right heavy, and massy, and gold?—Keats) (it was a castle, steadfast among storms, its side a massy wall—Sinclair Lewis) Bulky stresses size rather than weight, and the excessive amount of space occupied rather than solidity or strength of construction (a bulky parcel) (a bulky report) (its front door and steps were wide, presumably in order to permit the passage of bulky objects—Chidsey) (the museum finds it impossible to accept for display a great number of interesting but bulky items such as aircraft, guns or tanks—Report on Nat'l Development (Ottawa)) Monumental implies greatness of size, but it distinctively suggests an imposing massiveness (me, Goddess, bring to arched walks of twilight groves, and shadows brown . . . of pine, or monumental oak—Milton) (the monumental fourpost bed has been taken down—Daily Telegraph) (a tall red-haired woman of monumental build—Wharton) Substantial stresses solidity and strength of construction but it carries a weak implication of size or outwardly imposing appearance and a strong implication of established quality, worth, and stability (the most substantial buildings in England today are the old Norman cathedrals) (the Philadelphia crowd in their drab, substantial, gray and brown clothes—Dorothy Canfield) (substantial homes, and substantial relatives of some sort or other, on whom we could fall back—Galsworthy)

Ana *heavy, weighty, ponderous: solid, hard, *firm: immense, enormous, *huge, gigantic, colossal massy *massive, bulky, monumental, substantial

Ana ponderous, hefty, cumbersome, cumbersome, weighty, *heavy: *large, big, great: solid, *firm, hard master n *chief, chieftain, head, leader masterful, domineering, imperious, peremptory, impera- tive are comparable when they apply to persons or their acts, utterances, and demands and mean governed by, or manifesting, a strong tendency to impose one's will on another. One is masterful who by the strength and virility of his personality is able to enforce his will on others or who deals with affairs commandingly and compellingly (the major was a masterful man; and I knew that he would not give orders for nothing—Kipling) (the man had such a masterful and magnetic personality . . . that it was impossible not to take fire at his ardor—Huxley) One is domineering who tries to enforce his will or to make a show of his power by an overbearing or insolently tyrannical manner (they are . . . not courageous, only quarrelsome; not determined, only obstinate; not masterful, only domineering—Shaw) (the European nations, arrogant, domineering, and rapacious, have done little to recommend the name of Christianity in Asia and Africa—Inge) One is imperious who by temperament or by position is fitted to command or who assumes the air or manner of such a person; the term implies more arrogance than masterful and less insolence than domineering (this ancient despot—this imperious old Louis XIV in a black front and a cap and ribbon—Thackeray) (one could not have passed him on the street without feeling his great physical force and his imperious will—Cather) One is peremptory who insists, often with curtness, on an immediate response to his commands; the term usually implies authoritativeness and a refusal to brook disobedience or delay or to entertain objections however valid (the general issued a peremptory summons) (two peremptory raps at the door—Shaw) (when we say of . . . a man that he has a great deal of character, we generally mean that he has disciplined his temperament, his disposition, into strict obedience to the behests of duty; that he has clear and peremptory ideas about right and wrong—Brownell) One is imperative who, or whose behavior, is peremptory because of the urgency of the situation rather than because of a domineering temperament (“Go back!” cried the old man, with an imperative jerk of the head—M. E. Freeman) (he heard her imperative voice at the telephone; he heard her summon the doctor—Glasgow)

Ana magisterial, *dictatorial, authoritarian, oracular, dogmatic, doctrinaire: arbitrary, *absolute, despotic, tyrannical masterly *proficient, adept, skilled, skillful, expert

Ana *dexterous, deft, adroit: preeminent, superlative, transcendent, *supreme match vb Match, rival, equal, approach, touch are comparable, especially in negative constructions, when they mean to come up to or nearly up to the level or standard of something else. One thing matches another when it proves to be its mate, rather than its duplicate, in power, strength, performance, beauty, or interest (it has been said that no language can match French in expressing ideas with clarity and exactness) (the beauty of his person was matched by the grace and dignity of his spirit—Buchan) (no mortal builder's most rare device could match this winter palace of ice—J. R. Lowell) (we are prone to imitate the vices of those whose virtues we cannot match—McCartney) One thing rivals another when it closely competes with it for superiority or in excellence (but would you sing, and rival Orpheus' strain, the wond'ring forests soon should dance again—Pope) (work of a beauty certainly not rivalled until we come to the Norman builders—Quiller-Couch) (some of them are furnished with colors that rival or excel the brilliance of the famous Morpho butterflies—Curran) (while my father could never have rivalled the sartorial magnificence of some of his friends, he dressed in the ceremonial manner of the time—Brooks) One thing equals another when it rises to the same level or plane (as in quantity, value, or degree) and there is no question concerning a difference, especially a deficiency (such a striking civility . . . ought to be imitated, though it could not be equalled, by some exertion of politeness on their side—Austen) (no other measure of our work equals the sight of the product put to its full uses—Suzzallo) (its society was formed by religion to an extent never equaled in any other epoch of its history—M. W. Baldwin) One thing approaches another when it so nearly equals or matches the other that the difference, though detectable, is seldom important (an adult reader with trained habits of . . . concentration will absorb the contents of a book with a speed and retentiveness which no child can approach—Eliot) (an unlettered speaker may startle you with his power of giving to the spoken word an urgent aptness that approaches the vivid instancy of an involuntary cry—Montague) One thing touches another thing when it closely approaches the other (as in excellence or beauty) (not another woman there to touch her—W. J. Locke) (Yeats, the last in the aristocratic tradition of poets . . . none of us can touch his later work—Day Lewis)

Ana correspond, harmonize, *agree, conform, square, accord

Con *differ: vary, *change, alter, modify material adj 1 Material, physical, corporeal, phenomenal, sensible, objective are comparable when they mean belonging to or having a relation to things that belong to the world of actuality or of things apparent to the senses. Material applies to whatever is formed of matter or relates to things formed of matter; it often implies an opposition to spiritual, but it may imply an antithesis to ideal, formal, intangible, or impalpable (material objects) (transporting his material possessions) (believes in no other world than the material world) (busy with material affairs—Conrad) (bathrooms . . . , motorcars, and other material comforts of which that age was ignorant—Russell) (these poor Christians are not thrifty like our country people at home; they have no veneration for property, no sense of material values—Cather) Physical (see also BODILY) differs from material chiefly in suggesting an opposition to psychical, mental, metaphysical, imaginary, and, less often, spiritual; it applies especially to things perceived by the senses or capable of being dealt with in the same manner as objects of sense, and it usually implies a contrast to things knowable only through thought or intuition or built up by the mind or imagination; thus, the material objects and the physical objects within one's reach may be exactly the same objects, but material suggests their substantial nature and physical suggests their susceptibility of perception and identification, or, what is more important in science, of being weighed and measured. In scientific use physical is also applicable to things that are not objects, but forces, actions, motions, or states which are operative in nature or in mechanics and which can be measured or calculated, or put to use, even though, strictly speaking, they cannot be handled (physical properties of light) (physical effect of radiation) (everything physical is measurable by weight, motion, and resistance—De Quincey) Corporeal (see also BODILY) applies to what not only has physical existence but also is tangible or can be described as a body; thus, energy in itself has no corporeal existence though it is a physical power found usually in corporeal things (in a monistic . . . sense "the mind" may be regarded as a living, growing "structure" even though it lacks corporeal tangibility—Science) (the spiritual life commences where the corporeal existence terminates—Frazer) Phenomenal implies a relation to what is known or knowable through the senses and experience, as distinguished from what is knowable only through thought or intuition because beyond perception by the senses; the term is chiefly used in philosophy and science when there is an intent to mark the line between what is actually perceived and what has been ascertained by the reason, has been accepted by faith, or is theoretical or hypothetical (phenomenal reality is often specifically called actuality) (phenomenal nature is reduced to an array of events in the four-dimensional continuum—Jeans) (her introspective bent has yielded more and more, in her recent writing, to a determination to capture the phenomenal world—Redman) Sensible which basically applies to what is known or knowable through sense experience and thereby comprehends the specific terms visible, audible, tangible, palpable is sometimes opposed to intelligible, conceptual, or notional (there is no sensible movement of the earth) (is this a dagger which I see before me, the handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch thee . . . are thou not . . . sensible to feeling as to sight? or art thou but a dagger of the mind, a false creation—Shak.) (the man of science may carry us off into a world of symbols, but his symbols stand for features of the external world and he is bent on verifying them by sensible experience—Alexander) Objective (see also FAIR) implies the same kind of existence as phenomenal and sensible, but it stresses the apartness of the thing known through the senses from the person who perceives it through his senses; the term, therefore, implies not only material existence but an existence which is or is felt as uncolored by the prejudices and preconceptions of the perceiver (the ancient Hebrew . . . saw the rainbow as an objective structure set in the heavens for all men to behold—Jeans) (acosmism, the theory which denies the objective existence of the world or universe—Inge)

Ana *carnal, fleshly, sensual, animal: actual, true, *real: tangible, *perceptible, appreciable, palpable

Ant immaterial

2 *relevant, germane, pertinent, apposite, applicable, apropos

Ana important, significant, consequential, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE): vital, cardinal, *essential, fundamental

Ant immaterial

material n *matter, substance, stuff

Ana *element, constituent, ingredient, component materialize externalize, objectify, incarnate, embody, actualize, *realize, hypostatize, reify matériel 1 *equipment, apparatus, machinery, paraphernalia, outfit, tackle, gear

2 *armament, munitions, arms, ordnance, artillery, ammunition matrimonial, marital, conjugal, connubial, nuptial, hymeneal mean of, relating to, or characteristic of marriage.

Matrimonial is the most general term applicable to whatever has to do both with matrimony and with marriage in most of its senses (see MARRIAGE) (matrimonial vows) (the matrimonial state) (with close fidelity and love unfeigned, to keep the matrimonial bond unstained—Cowper) (matrimonial bliss) Marital which sometimes implies specific reference to the husband and his part in marriage (marital rights) (marital authority) is often used interchangeably with matrimonial (marital vows) (the marital relationship) Conjugal and connubial are frequently used interchangeably. More discriminatively, conjugal refers to persons who are married (they flaunt their conjugal felicity in one's face—Wilde) (I count it my good fortune that never once in . . . my childhood was I the witness of any conjugal jar—Ellis) and connubial to the marriage state (of my friends who have been least successful in connubial contracts—Johnson) (enter the connubial state) Nuptial has primary reference to the marriage rites or ceremony (the nuptial torch—Milton) (the nuptial ceremony was then performed by the Superintendent—Motley) Hymeneal is a poetic or literary word, suggestive of the splendors of marriage rites and festivities (hymeneal songs) (chorus hymeneal, or triumphal chaunt matched with thine would be all but an empty vaunt—Shelley) (one fully expects that . . . the characters will join hands at the conclusion and dance off the stage to hymeneal music—Booth)

matrimony *marriage, wedlock, wedding, nuptial, espousal

matter n 1 Matter, substance, material, stuff are comparable when they mean what goes into the makeup or forms the being of a thing whether physical or not. In the relevant sense matter basically denotes that of which all physical objects are made, but to the physical scientist this may imply the component of the observable universe that includes among its properties extension, inertia, and gravitation and is held to consist ultimately of relatively few kinds of elementary particles, to be convertible into energy, and together with energy to form the basis of objective phenomena (but what is more common than matter? We and the universe about us are matter. We know nothing of force or energy, nor of any physical phenomenon, except through the agency of matter—Foley) (matter is a form of energy and . . . presumably in nature processes go on in which matter is destroyed and transformed into more familiar forms of energy such as heat, radiation, and mechanical motion—E. O. Lawrence) while to the philosopher it tends to imply an unordered material substratum distinguishable on the one hand from immaterial qualities (as spirit or energy) and on the other from form or formed bodies (Aristotle defined the word matter figuratively and successfully when he said that matter is to substance what the bronze is to the statue—Richard Robinson) (it may be worth noting here the fundamentally opposed characters of Aristotle's matter and that of the new science. Aristotle's matter is the source of being, but not of intelligibility. To analyze an entity into its material components is to lose its essence. Modern science's matter, on the other hand, is the most intelligible of natural principles—W. D. Oliver) In more general use matter often specifically applies to a particular portion or kind of physical matter (strain the solid matter from the broth) (living matter) Substance usually implies a particular kind of matter (hard substances) and often one of known chemical or physical nature (gaseous substances) (an object may be either a homogeneous mass of a single substance, such as water, or a combination or mixture of different substances, as for instance a cup of tea—Jeans) or it may distinctively suggest the particular matter or kind of matter that enters into the composition of something or gives it its characteristic properties (the substance of this vase is porcelain) (are we not all of the same substance—men, planets and earth, born from the heart of darkness, returning to darkness, the consoling mother—Sitwell) Material applies basically to matter or substance as a constituent of physical and especially of made things (a cake made from the best materials) (the material of this dress is silk) (the sculptor, who is limited to a few materials like stone, wood and metal—Read) But often it subordinates physical nature to the fact of being made and then may imply the idea of actuality or a basis in actuality rather than physical substance; thus, raw materials are usually physical substances capable of refinement or manufacture but they also may be events, ideas, or facts capable of further use (as in literary creation) (adventures which would make good raw materials for several novels—J. H. Burton) (a region rich in coal, iron, and other raw materials) (is the whole creative effort of the artist an endeavor to form material so that it will be in actuality the authentic substance of a work of art?—Dewey) Stuff may replace material or substance in reference to constituent materials or substances (the house was built carelessly and of poor stuff) (creating out of raw material a skilled working class . . . they are the stuff of which The New Congo is made—Marvel) but more often it refers to all the parts, parcels, objects, or items that make up an aggregate or a whole; in both cases it is likely to imply indeterminateness and suggest vaguely if at all the nature of the constituent materials or parts (pick up the stuff you left on the table) (ambition should be made of sterner stuff—Shak.) Sometimes, distinctively, stuff carries an inherent implication of inferiority (not a line of the volume was ever included by Bryant in his later writings, and he spoke of the pamphlet with testy disgust as stuff—Nevins) (what was the psychological impulse behind the pedantic and elaborate stuff he called in the end Finnegans Wake?—Desmond MacCarthy)

2 *affair, business, concern, thing

3 *subject, subject matter, argument, topic, text, theme, motive, motif, leitmotiv matter-of-fact *prosaic, prosy

Ana stolid, phlegmatic, *impassive: arid, *dry: downright, *forthright

Con fanciful, *imaginary, fantastic, chimerical, quixotic, visionary: ideal, transcendent, transcendental (see ABSTRACT adj): romantic, *sentimental mature adj Mature, matured, ripe, mellow, adult, grown-up are comparable if not often interchangeable because they all bear the same underlying meaning "fully developed." Mature, in its basic use as applied to living things, stresses the completion of development; as applied specifically to persons, it usually implies attainment of the prime of life, when a person is at the height of his powers, physically and mentally (a great writer of the past is known by the delight and stimulus which he gives to mature spirits in the present—Brooks) (the life has a mature tone, an intellectual alertness, a sense of proportion—Laski) As applied to things, mature usually equals matured, which implies the completion of a course, process, or period; thus, a matured plan is a fully thought-out plan; a matured wine is one that has been allowed to age properly; a matured note is one that has reached the date when payment is due (must be replaced by the maturer concept that virtue is its own reward—Davies) (a matured poetic intelligence is often happily fused with the creative beat of poetic imagination—Horace Gregory) Ripe, though it implies maturity, stresses readiness for use or enjoyment; in its basic sense it is applied chiefly to such things as fruits ready for eating, grains or vegetables ready for harvesting, or seeds ready to germinate. In extended use it often connotes merely readiness or full preparedness for action, activity, or use (ripe for exploits and mighty enterprises—Shak.) (to be careful, in teaching history, not to obtrude aspects which are interesting to us until the child is ripe for them—Russell) Sometimes, however, ripe connotes one or more of the characteristics of ripe things, especially ripe fruits, such as ruddiness, plumpness, or richness (Greek sculpture, in its ripe perfection—Binyon) Mellow stresses either such agreeable qualities associated with ripe or slightly overripe fruits as softness, tenderness, sweetness, or the loss of their opposites, the signs of immaturity, such as hardness, harshness, or bitterness (mellow cheese) (mellow wine) (the more mellow and cheerful outlook of his second book—Buchan) Adult is the equivalent of mature in its application to the physical characteristics of living things (a rhesus monkey . . . is infantile 1.5 years, juvenile 6.5 years, and adult some 20 years—La Barre) It presupposes, however, a clearer line of demarcation, especially when used of human beings. An adult person physiologically is one that has passed beyond adolescence; in law, he is one that has attained his majority (people born in this country who have not been within its borders in all the years of their adult lives—Discovery No. 3) In extended use adult implies the attainment of that point in development where the weaknesses of immaturity or of imperfection are surmounted (the difference [between Romanticism and Classicism] seems to me rather the difference between the complete and the fragmentary, the adult and the immature, the orderly and the chaotic—T. S. Eliot) (people supremely adult and specially schooled to comprehend ideas and employ logic—Flanner) Grown-up is sometimes used in preference to adult when an antithesis to childish is needed (adults incapable of grown-up behavior)

Ant immature: childish —Con *childlike: *youthful, juvenile, boyish, puerile, maiden

mature vb Mature, develop, ripen, age are used in reference to living, growing things or to things with latent capacity for betterment and mean to come or cause to come to the state of being fit for use or enjoyment. When employed with reference to living things or their specific characters, mature stresses fullness of growth and readiness for normal functioning (in warm climates human beings mature more rapidly than in cold climates) (in his maturing days, young Warren was a cheerful and attractive personality—S. H. Adams) (he was matured by six years' practical experience in a New York militia regiment—Robert Lowell) while develop stresses the unfolding of all that is latent and the attainment of the perfection that is appropriate to the species or is possible to the individual (the kitten's hunting instinct was not yet developed—Russell) and ripen emphasizes the approach to or the attainment of the peak of perfection (the fruits are now sufficiently ripened) (there is nothing here of slow budding, of fruits ripening in stillness—Carlos Baker) (at twenty-three she was still young enough to ripen to a maturer beauty—Glasgow) Age may equal mature when it is applied to the young (hard work ages a boy) but more often and in other contexts, routinely, it implies approach to the period of decline or decay (the leaders of the movement are aging rapidly) (as the individual matures and then ages, he constantly has to unlearn patterns of response which have ceased to be effective—Linton)

In their extended applications to things with latent capacity for improvement all these terms imply a perfecting with time. Mature suggests that something not fully formed undergoes completing changes (mature a plan) (an art that toiling ages have but just matured—Cowper) (his ideas about the novel continued to develop and mature—Cousins) while develop especially applies to the unfolding into full being or effectiveness of something that is potential, latent, or nebulous (the environment fitted to develop . . . a genius at once so subtle and so humane as that of Socrates—Dickinson <the sense of fact is something very slow to develop—T. S. Eliot> Both ripen and age imply a becoming fit for some use, action, or purpose over a period of time. Distinctively, ripen tends to suggest the addition of desirable qualities <time had ripened his life and mellowed its fruits—Brooks> <the civil law, which was in force in most of the countries of continental Europe and their colonies, was the accepted product of the ripened experience of many centuries of Roman jurisprudence—Encyc. Americana> while age may suggest the elimination of unwanted qualities <water for tropical fish should be aged by standing long enough for toxic substances to escape> <aging tends toward the restoration of real equilibrium in the metal, and away from any unstable condition induced by a prior operation—Rusinoff> but often the two are used without distinction <beef, mutton, venison, and game birds become more tender and palatable by the process of ripening, hanging, aging, or maturing—Ashbrook>

Ana *harden, season, acclimatize, acclimate: *habituate, accustom, inure, addict matured *mature, ripe, mellow, adult, grown-up

Ana completed, finished (see CLOSE vb): *deliberate, considered, advised, designed, studied, premeditated

Ant unmatured: premature —Con crude, green, callow, uncouth, *rude, rough, raw: *youthful, juvenile, puerile, boyish: childish, *childlike maudlin mawkish, *sentimental, romantic, soppy, mushy, slushy

Ana confused, muddled, fuddled, addled, befuddled (see CONFUSE): embarrassed, rattled, fazed, discomfited, disconcerted (see EMBARRASS)

mawkish maudlin, *sentimental, romantic, soppy, mushy, slushy

Ana flat, vapid, jejune, *insipid, banal, inane maxim *saying, saw, adage, proverb, motto, epigram, aphorism, apothegm may *can

meager, scanty, scant, skimpy, scrimpy, exiguous, spare, sparse are comparable when they mean so small (as in amount, number, or size) as to fall short of what is normal, necessary, or desirable. Meager stresses thinness: as applied to persons or animals, it suggests emaciation <meager were his looks, sharp misery had worn him to the bones—Shak.> but as applied to things in general, it implies the absence of elements, qualities, or numbers necessary to a thing's richness, substance, or potency  <an outline in itself is meager, truly, but it does not necessarily suggest a meager thing—James> <his austere and meager life bred too little sensuousness of nature and too few intellectual passions—Parrington> <meager appropriations which necessitated the most rigorous economies—Pahlow> Scanty emphasizes insufficiency in amount, quantity, or extent  <the book . . . is not, like some biographical essays with scanty material, stuffed out with appreciation and conjecture—T. S. Eliot> <such a scanty portion of light was admitted . . . that it was difficult, on first coming in, to see anything—Dickens> Scant may differ from scanty in suggesting a falling or a cutting short (as in amount or quantity) of what is desired or desirable rather than in what is necessary or essential <the work of those hours was miserably scant—Hardy> <they were held in scant esteem—Grandgent> Skimpy and the less common scrimpy as applied to things may be quite interchangeable with meager (sufficiently recovered from her cold to climb out of bed and into a skimpy, strapless blue gown—Capote)  <four acres is scrimpy measure for a royal garden, even for a king of the heroic ages, whose daughter did the family washing—Notes & Queries> but often they are more strongly colored by the related verbs, skimp and scrimp, and then usually suggest niggardliness or penury as the cause of the deficiency <prevents skimpy construction that often leads to airfield shutdowns and aircraft accidents—Livingston> <European art books commonly come out with hundreds of huge, magnificent color plates. American art books, especially those produced by commercial publishers, are often skimpy, starved and inadequate by comparison—Frankenstein> <more proud of their breeding than they were of the scrimpy, almost stingy respectability of the ménage—White> Exiguous stresses a smallness in size, amount, extent, or capacity that is more or less inherent in the thing under consideration and makes it compare unfavorably with other things of its kind <brains too exiguous to hold more than half an idea at a time—Amer. Speech> <building ships to supplement his exiguous navy—Buchan>  Spare (see also LEAN, SUPERFLUOUS) implies merely a falling short of what is easily or fully sufficient; unlike scanty and meager, it seldom suggests resulting loss or hardship  <spare, alert, and jaunty figure—Wolfe> <the journals . . . are by no means always spare and laconic—Dulles> Sparse stresses a lack of normal or desirable thickness or density; the term need not suggest insufficiency or inadequacy in numbers or in quantity, but it always connotes a thin scattering of the units <the sparse population of the mountainous district> <facing the facts of her defeat and her poverty and by encouraging sparse, stringent living—Anthony West>  Ana *thin, slender, slim, slight, tenuous, rare: thinned, attenuated, extenuated, diluted (see THIN vb): jejune, flat, *insipid, inane: penurious, *stingy, parsimonious

Ant ample: copious

mean adj Mean, ignoble, abject, sordid can all be applied to persons, their behavior, or the conditions in which they live with the meaning so low as to be out of keeping with human dignity or generally acceptable standards of human life or character. Mean usually suggests such repellent antisocial characteristics as malevolence or cupidity. It almost invariably connotes small-mindedness <those who are tempted by the flesh have usually nothing to fear from avarice or the meaner vices—Mackenzie> <her father is a decidedly vulgar person, mean in his ideals and obtuse in his manners—Erskine> Often mean implies conduct or an attitude that is detestable and unworthy of a human being <Delane . . . flung him off like a thing too mean for human handling—Wharton> <now and then in his pages war flashes out in romantic or heroic episodes, but for the most part it is mean and degrading, a thing to be hated—Parrington> Ignoble, like its opposite noble, usually implies qualities of mind or soul. It frequently comes close to mean except that it seldom connotes small-mindedness. Its distinguishing implication is loss or lack of some essential high quality (as spiritual elevation, moral dignity, or intellectual excellence) <to see how those he has converted distort and debase and make ignoble parodies of his teaching—Huxley> <these are . . . as low and ignoble, as gutter-fallen and dispiriting, as can only be found in the gloomier literature of imperial Russia—J. M. Brown> Abject, in its most inclusive sense, means little more than extremely low in station or in degree <had not that fear of beautiful and rich things which renders abject people incapable of associating costliness with comfort—Shaw) Sometimes it is merely an intensive applied to something that is itself low in the scale (the wars and their changing fortunes, which made abject ruin and undreamt-of power occurrences of every day—L. G. Deruiseau) In discriminative use, however, abject carries the implication of being cast down and so variously implies abasement, debasement, or contemptible servility (disgrace not so your king, that he should be so abject, base, and poor, to choose for wealth and not for perfect love—Shak.) (resolved to be a man who . . . would live no longer in subjection to the past with abject mind—Wordsworth) (the stagnation and the squalor that are the abject human realities left by the ebb of power and splendor—Edmund Wilson) Sordid emphasizes the degrading baseness associated with physical or mental corruption (the counterrevolution . . . ranks among the most sordid periods in Chinese history. Compromise, blackmail and treachery mark the pages devoted to this episode—Lasker) (books filled with sordid, filthy statements based on sexual deviations—U.S. House of Representatives Report)

Ana *base, low, vile: *contemptible, despicable, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby, pitiable

mean vb 1 *intend, design, propose, purpose

Ana wish, want, *desire: *aim, aspire, pant

2 Mean, denote, signify, import are comparable when they mean to convey to the mind a definite idea or interpretation. Not only words or phrases can be said to mean, denote, signify, or import something, but also whatever admits of interpretation or of being intellectually appraised (as a poem or an essay or an act of Congress, or the behavior of one person to another, or a set of circumstances). These words are commonly employed without distinction, but precision in their use is often possible and desirable. In their general application mean is the most common; it is often more expressive or poignant than the others when used to connote not only interpretation but also evaluation or appraisal (he can have no idea of what it means to be the daughter of Mr. de Barral—Conrad) (national prosperity . . . has two surfaces: ability to sell means ability to buy; employment means production—Benedict) Denote, in its widest application, is distinguished from the others by its taking for its subject things that serve as outward marks or visible indications; signify, by its taking for its subject things of a symbolic or representative character (his somber expression denoted a worried mind) (slumped into a chair near the doorway, his posture denoting complete exhaustion—Douglas) (the scales in the hands of the figure of Justice signify impartiality) (the Eucharistic rite signifies one thing to Protestants and another to Catholics) (the “&c.” signified that portion of King Henry’s title . . . which, for the sake of brevity, was not written in full—Maitland) Signify often suggests distinctiveness or importance (events which signify little at the time of occurrence often attain significance when the history of that period is written) (I did not understand that I was living in a debtor land, nor what that signified—White) Import frequently conveys an implication of carrying into the mind (new ideas import little to those not intellectually fitted to receive them) but it frequently comes close to signify (what this imported I could ill divine—Wordsworth) (it imports little whether the sensible citizen is a Democrat or a Republican, an Episcopalian or a Presbyterian; it imports a good deal whether he is nationalist or internationalist—Gerould)

In their special use in reference to the interpretation of the content of a term, these words are not always distinguishable. Mean, however, is capable of implying reference to the term’s full content, that is, to the idea or relation between ideas which it conveys to the mind and the suggestions which it evokes (only a philosophically minded person can grasp what beauty and truth mean in Keats’s lines “Beauty is truth, truth beauty,—that is all ye know on earth, and all ye need to know.”) Signify can, as mean usually does not, suggest symbolic relationship between the term and the idea it conveys (the phrase “bread and butter” signifies the material needs of life) Denote (see also DENOTE 2) can imply a logical definition in which the idea named or expressed by a term is clearly marked out and its application or range of application accurately determined (“decoration” denotes one of three ideas, the act of adorning, or a thing used in adorning, or the results achieved by one who adorns) Import, used with less frequency in relation to terms, is precise in its implications. A term imports not what it denotes, or bears as a definition, but any or all of the implications involved in its interpretation (does it [the word “necessary”] always import an absolute physical necessity . . .?—John Marshall)

Ana *carry, convey, bear, transmit: *denote, connote: define, assign, *prescribe: *suggest, imply, intimate, hint mean n 1 *average, median, norm, par

2 Mean, instrument, instrumentality, agent, agency, medium, organ, vehicle, channel denote a person or thing through or by which work is performed or an end is effected. Mean, usually in the form means which may be either singular or plural in construction, is the most general of these words; it may be applied not only to persons and to such concrete things as implements, tools, and machines, but also to their actions or operations; it may also be applied to methods, policies, devices, and strategies (the habit of regarding the laboring class as a mere means to the maintenance of the rest—Dickinson) (the manufacturer who doesn’t look into every possible way and mean to show . . . where he may practically and economically find new business—Harry Martin) (the justification of barbarous means by holy ends—Muller) (the principal means of transportation was . . . Afghan camels—Hoover) Instrument is applied especially to persons who merely carry out another’s will or intention, often as tools, sometimes as dupes (he . . . turned on me . . . suspecting perhaps that I only wished to make an instrument of him—Hudson) (if they [judges] were to be used as the instruments, and the knowing instruments, for violating what they swear to support—John Marshall) When applied to concrete things, instrument often derives connotations from its musical sense (as susceptibility to manipulation and responsiveness to touch or use) (he knew his brain was now a very uncertain instrument, sometimes quite good, sometimes a weary fount of half-formed ideas—H. G. Wells) Instrumentality is interchangeable with means but not with instrument because its chief implication is effective action by, or effective use of, the instrument (through the instrumentality of the police he was able to locate his relatives) (without the instrumentality of a free press liberty could not be preserved) Agent is applied chiefly to persons and only by extension to things; the term usually names the one who does the work as distinguished from the one who wills, plans, or orders (I often think, Jean, how you were an unconscious agent in the hands of Providence when you recalled me from Tucson—Cather) (ultimately these tattooed devils . . . were turned into effective agents for the maintenance of law and order—Heiser) When applied to a thing, agent names what effects a desired result or serves as a cause producing a definite effect

⟨the cooling agent in making ice cream is a mixture of ice and rock salt⟩ Agency, like instrumentality, is not usually interchangeable with its related noun (agent) for it names the activity or operation of the agent or of something used to produce an effect. It is distinguished from instrumentality by its implication of causative, as opposed to effective, activity ⟨some communicable diseases are transmitted only through the agency of vermin or insects⟩ ⟨presumptuous thoughts that would assign mechanic laws to agency divine—Wordsworth⟩ Medium is more often applied to things than to persons; it designates especially a substance or material through which something, usually something intangible, is conveyed from one person or thing to another or given objective form ⟨air is the medium through which sound and light waves are transmitted⟩ ⟨language is the medium through which a person communicates his thoughts and feelings⟩ ⟨the sculptor's medium may be bronze, marble, or wood⟩ An organ is a part or representative that performs a particular function ⟨the political cartoon is one of the greatest organs of propaganda—Harmsworth⟩ or accomplishes a particular end ⟨the cabinet's function as a general organ of government without special regard to the king's wishes—Times Lit. Sup.⟩ or presents a particular point of view (see under JOURNAL). A vehicle is a medium that serves to carry and especially to carry effectively something which is to be revealed through it ⟨the play was an excellent vehicle for the genius of Booth⟩ ⟨we must find a new form of verse which shall be as satisfactory a vehicle for us as blank verse was for the Elizabethans—T. S. Eliot⟩ A channel is a medium that provides either an outlet or a fixed course through which something may flow from one to another ⟨the accident which directed my curiosity originally into this channel—Lamb⟩ ⟨submitting material to the Defense Department without going through the prescribed Army channels—N. Y. Times⟩

Ana *method, mode, manner, way, fashion, system: machinery, apparatus, *equipment, paraphernalia

3 in plural form means resources, assets, effects, *possessions, belongings

Ana *money, cash, currency: riches, wealthiness, affluence, opulence (see corresponding adjectives at RICH)

mean adj average, median, par (see under AVERAGE n)

Ant extreme

meander stray, roam, ramble, *wander, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse meaning, sense, acceptation, signification, significance, import are comparable when they denote the idea which something (as a word, a passage, a facial expression, an action, or a situation) conveys to the mind or is intended to convey to the mind. Meaning, the general term, may be used interchangeably with any of the remaining terms; it may be used of whatever can convey information when properly interpreted and therefore is not only applicable to language and expressions or gestures but to such more cryptic things as symbols and works of art ⟨a dictionary gives the meanings of words⟩ ⟨if human and the words formed from it can have an exact meaning . . . that meaning must refer to those qualities, characteristics, and powers which distinguish the human being—Krutch⟩ ⟨understand a plain man in his plain meaning—Shak.⟩ ⟨the sentence has meaning to Sam even if it will not have meaning to you. A great many ruminations, discoveries, and memories contribute their connotation—Mailer⟩ Sense (see also SENSE 2) denotes either the meaning or, more often, one of the specific or particular meanings, of a word or phrase, or sometimes of an allegory ⟨some words have many senses⟩ ⟨the literal and figurative senses of Pilgrim's Progress⟩ ⟨in the sense usually implied by the word, Minneapolis has no slums, even though it admits to neighborhoods where substandard housing conditions prevail—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.⟩ More abstractly, it refers to intelligibility in general ⟨speaks things . . . that carry but half sense—Shak.⟩ ⟨in the first authentic edition . . . the words, I believe, ran "and a table of green fields," which has no sense—Newman⟩ ⟨if his work rarely has startling originality . . . it always has sense and penetration of judgment—Schlesinger b. 1917⟩ Acceptation (see also ACCEPTANCE) differs from sense as denoting a meaning of a term chiefly in its stress upon the actual use of that sense or upon its acceptance by a large number of writers and speakers (it is necessary first to consider the different acceptations of the word knowledge—Locke) ⟨[philosophy] in its common . . . acceptation . . . signifies the search after wisdom—Fielding⟩ ⟨where German has separate words for each subsidiary meaning, French is content with a general term, leaving it to the context to specify which particular acceptation is relevant—Ullmann⟩ Signification and significance (see signify under MEAN vb 2; significance under IMPORTANCE) are often used interchangeably in spite of the fact that they can be carefully differentiated in their meanings. Signification applies specifically to the established meaning of a term, a symbol, or a character, or to an established sense of a word; it usually implies that when a particular term or symbol or character is used only such an established idea is evoked in the mind of informed persons ⟨the significations of the characters which serve as Roman numerals⟩ ⟨I find it very . . . interesting to know the signification of names, and had written to ask him whether Jerusalem meant "the vision of peace" or "the foundation of peace"—Arnold⟩ ⟨the counsel for the appellee would . . . restrict a general term, applicable to many objects, to one of its significations. Commerce, undoubtedly, is traffic, but it is something more: it is intercourse—John Marshall⟩ Significance, on the other hand, applies specifically to the covert as distinguished from the established or the ostensible meaning of something; it may from its other sense (see IMPORTANCE) carry a connotation of weight or moment ⟨his language is so grandiose that one wonders if his speeches have any significance⟩ ⟨no one knows for a certainty the significance of some early Christian symbols⟩ ⟨for the mathematically illiterate, like myself, these things are . . . mere scribbings, without significance—Huxley⟩ ⟨explaining all the minute happenings of the ranch . . . as though each of them had a special joyous significance—Mary Austin⟩ Import (see also IMPORTANCE), like significance, may imply momentousness, but in contrast with that term, and like signification, it denotes the idea or the impression conveyed or to be conveyed to the mind by the medium of words ⟨spoke words in her ear that had an awful import to her—Meredith⟩ ⟨Kim gathered the import of the next few sentences—Kipling⟩ Ana suggestion, implication, intimation, hinting or hint (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST): denotation, connotation (see under DENOTE) meaningful significant, pregnant, sententious, *expressive, eloquent

Ana important, consequential, momentous, weighty (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

Ant meaningless

measly paltry, trifling, trivial, puny, *petty, picayunish, picayune

Ana *contemptible, despicable, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby: *stingy, parsimonious, penurious, miserly mechanic workman, workingman, artisan, *worker, operative, hand, laborer, craftsman, handicraftsman, roustabout mechanical automatic, instinctive, impulsive, *spontaneous

Ana stereotyped, hackneyed, *trite: dull, slow, *stupid, dense, crass, dumb

Con vital, cardinal, *essential, fundamental: *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, fiery, spunky, gingery mechanism *machine, machinery, apparatus, engine, motor meddle, interfere, intermeddle, tamper are comparable when they mean to busy or concern oneself with someone or something officiously, impertinently, or indiscreetly. One meddles with or in something that is not one's concern or is strictly the affair or the responsibility of another or of others; the term usually suggests the interposition of oneself without right or without permission or authorization (it would be better if government meddled no farther with trade than to protect it—Franklin) (his enemies accused him . . . of . . . meddling in matters which did not belong to him—Newman) (it is inexpedient to meddle with questions of state in a land where men are highly paid to work them out for you—Kipling) One interferes (see also INTERPOSE 2) with someone or something or in something when one meddles, whether intentionally or not, in such a way as to hinder, frustrate, molest, check, or defeat (a physicist is not interfering with nature, any more than an architect is interfering with nature when he directs the building of a house—Darrow) (the Puritans made life in many ways a great deal less pleasant for the poor by interfering with their leisure—Lewis & Maude) One intermeddles with or in something when one meddles impertinently and officiously and in such a way as to interfere (the board of control had no right whatsoever to intermeddle in the business—Burke) (a petition to parliament sets forth how all kinds of unlearned men intermeddle with the practice of physic—Coulton) One tampers with someone or something when one seeks to make unwarranted alterations, to perform meddlesome experiments, or to exert an improper influence; the term need not suggest corruption or clandestine operation (provided, the farmer said, nobody had been tampering with any of his witnesses—Meredith) (money and sex are forces too unruly for our reason; they can only be controlled by taboos with which we tamper at our peril—L. P. Smith) (the goal of the search was fixed; it was sacrilegious and dangerous to tamper with the dogmas—Thilly)

Ana *intrude, obtrude, interlope, butt in: *interpose, interfere, intervene: discommode, incommode, trouble, *inconvenience

meddlesome *impertinent, intrusive, obtrusive, officious Ana interfering, meddling, intermeddling, tampering (see MEDDLE); prying, snoopy, nosy, inquisitive, *curious median n *average, mean, norm, par median adj average, mean, par (see under AVERAGE n) mediate intercede, intervene, *interpose, interfere

Ana arbitrate, *judge, adjudge, adjudicate: conciliate, propitiate (see PACIFY); reconcile, accommodate, *adapt medicament, medication medicine, *remedy, cure, specific, physic medicinal n *drug, pharmaceutical, biologic, simple medicine *remedy, cure, medicament, medication, specific, physic mediocre *medium, middling, second-rate, moderate, average, fair, indifferent

Ana poor, wrong, *bad: *common, ordinary, vulgar meditate *ponder, muse, ruminate

Ana contemplate, *consider, study, weigh: reflect, reason, speculate, deliberate, *think, cogitate: examine, inspect, *scrutinize meditative contemplative, speculative, *thoughtful, reflective, pensive

Ana pondering, musing, ruminating (see PONDER) medium n *mean, instrument, instrumentality, agent, agency, organ, vehicle, channel medium adj Medium, middling, mediocre, second-rate, moderate, average, fair, indifferent mean midway, or about midway, between the extremes of a scale or measurement or evaluation. Medium usually presupposes reference to some scale of measurement or comparison, whether by literal use of an instrument, or through mental power of measuring or gauging attained by experience (a boy of medium height) (a book of medium size) (a medium grade of motor oil) (a medium gray) (the reports . . . received from about 70 publishers, large, medium and small, of hard-cover books—Publishers' Weekly) (cheddar . . . is mild, medium, or sharp, depending on the amount of acidity in the milk—Standen) Middling is seldom used when accurate measurement or gradation is implied; it is employed chiefly in estimations (as of quality, rank, or value) to describe what is as far removed from the worst or lowest as it is from the best or highest. It may appropriately describe something that fails to measure up to the best or the first rate yet does not merit disapproval or rejection (I discovered that I had been poised for an enormous sale or a failure—a middling success was cruel to take—Mailer) (both of the writers lauded highly . . . contemporaries who were certainly no better than middling performers in their several arts—Montague) (not all merchants were merchant princes. The great majority were middling people, mildly prosperous—Plumb) In commercial use middling sometimes specifically designates the second of three grades (carded yarn spun from 1-in. middling cotton—Sheldon & Blake) Mediocre tends to be more depreciative than middling; thus, one who describes a moving picture as middling implies that it was good, but far from excellent, but one who describes it as mediocre gives ground for the inference that it was distinctly less than what one might call good. Often the word is modified by an adverb of degree (it is a very mediocre poem) (he has only mediocre ability) (my performance is mediocre to the last degree—Austen) (a best seller is the gilded tomb of a mediocre talent—L. P. Smith) Second-rate implies a ranking midway between extremes regarded as first-rate and as third-rate (he is possessed of a good heart, and a second- or third-rate brain—Erskine) (fears that a strong continental coalition would soon surpass Britain . . . and the United Kingdom would gradually sink from the status of a second-rate to a third-rate power—Patrick McMahon) Frequently second-rate loses all suggestion of a position on a scale of rating and then connotes inferiority and is used interchangeably with mediocre (a second-rate singer) (a second-rate performance) (even an occasional notable critic like Edmund Wilson has dismissed him as second-rate—Cordell) (a gang of second-rate imitators who enjoyed moving in the reflected glory of the man who could outrun, outdrink, outfight, outlove, and outcuss any other man in the County—Lockridge) Moderate (see also MODERATE 1) stresses limitations in quality, intensity, or degree; it implies distance from the extreme or from either of the extremes possible to a thing of its kind (moderate wealth) (a man of moderate ability) (a moderate wind) (attain moderate success) (an infusion of moderate strength) (I was a moderate scholar and a competent athlete—Benson) Average (see also under AVERAGE n) implies a theoretical level at which all things of a given kind, class, or category would find themselves or would seek, if their inequalities were resolved <published an article called "The Eclipse of the Highbrow," in which the average man was exalted—Forster> <an average June day> However the term is applied more often to what seems of the common run or is undistinguished either by its superiority or its inferiority, or is not exceptional or outstanding in any way; thus, a man of average ability seems to have neither greater nor less ability than that of the ordinary man <the only one . . . with whom he cared to probe into things a little deeper than the average level of club and cophouse banter—Wharton> <Mr. Shaw has understood everything but the average values of average living. His virtues, like his values, have all been exceptional—J. M. Brown> Fair is applied to what is neither notably good nor bad, excellent nor poor, large nor small; often, only the context can reveal whether the implication is one of adequacy or of deficiency <scraped together a fair breakfast> <the enrollment of 475 was composed largely of freshmen, with a fair representation from other classes—Kinne> <his health was only fair> <this region has had a fair amount of rain>  Indifferent is applied to what is difficult to rate because it is completely unimpressive, warranting neither praise nor censure <play an indifferent game of bridge> <it is not cluttered up with indifferent and unimportant records, and aims at . . . the best—Edward Sackville-West> <the surprising obscurity and even indifferent Latinity of Locke the perfectionist—Times Lit. Sup.>

Ana mean, median, average, par (see under AVERAGE n): *common, ordinary, vulgar, popular

meed n guerdon, prize, award, reward, *premium, bounty, bonus

Ana recompensing or recompense, remuneration, satisfaction (see corresponding verbs at PAY) meek modest, *humble, lowly

Ana gentle, mild (see SOFT): subdued, submissive, *tame: *compliant, acquiescent, resigned: *forbearing, tolerant, lenient: patient, long-suffering (see corresponding nouns at PATIENCE)

Ant arrogant —Con *proud, lordly, overbearing, haughty: *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, spunky: rebellious, contumacious, *insubordinate

meet vb 1 Meet, face, encounter, confront can all mean to come across or to run into someone or something face-to-face or as if face-to-face. Meet fundamentally implies the action of two or more persons or things which from different directions come across each other by design or by accident; often it implies nothing more <the narrow strip of Syrian seaboard which they occupied when we first meet them in history—Clodd> <where the Mohawk meets the Hudson river> <the little girl ran to meet her father as he came up the hill> Beyond this, the word may suggest such actions or intentions as finding, experiencing, or dealing with successfully <I never met with such kindness before> <it is perhaps only in England that such ideas can be expressed without meeting anger or ridicule—Sykes> <Hobart . . . could talk; he could assert; produce opinions and information, but he couldn't meet or answer arguments—Rose Macaulay> Face may imply nothing more than a standing or a meeting face-to-face (as of persons or things that merely present their faces or their fronts to each other) <they faced each other across the table>  but it more often emphasizes the act or intention of one who with courage or resolution or confidence, or with effrontery, or with desperation, looks upon or meets another person or thing <the government faced a strong storm of protest over its decision—Current History> <the artist must face life and defy it—Bambrick>

<she couldn't face a lifetime of misery> Encounter in its earliest and still not uncommon sense implies mutual hostility or active conflict <the armies are now ready to encounter each other> There has, however, been a progressive weakening of this implication, so that the word more frequently implies a running up against something that presents a difficulty, hardship, or obstacle <after half an hour's free indulgence of grief . . . Catherine felt equal to encountering her friends—Austen> <the difficulties that had been encountered in attempting to perfect the machine—Anderson> <the innumerable hardships and discomforts to be encountered in the provinces—Heiser> Often, even this notion of difficulty or hardship in turn is lost and the term means nothing more than meet, especially by chance or unexpectedly <groping about, his hand encountered something warm that started at his touch—Meredith> <walked the whole of the six or seven miles . . . without encountering a soul—Mackenzie> Confront more clearly than the other terms stresses the unavoidable face-to-face nature of the meeting and often also carries a strong implication of a resolute intent or firm determination to clarify an issue or settle a difficulty through such meeting <he was confronted by several witnesses of the accident> <the predicament with which our civilization now finds itself confronted—L. P. Smith> <when he was confronted by accidental extinction, he had felt no will to resist—Cather>

Ana accost, greet, salute (see ADDRESS): collide, *bump, clash: *experience, undergo, sustain, suffer: *wrestle, grapple, tussle: forestall, anticipate (see PREVENT)

Ant avoid —Con evade, elude, shun, *escape 2 *satisfy, fulfill, answer

Ana equal, approach, *match, touch: gratify, *please: content, *satisfy

Ant disappoint

meet adj suitable, proper, *fit, appropriate, fitting, apt, happy, felicitous

Ana adapted, adjusted, accommodated, conformed, reconciled (see ADAPT): right, *good: just, equitable, *fair

Ant unmeet

melancholia melancholy, *sadness, depression, dejection, gloom, blues, dumps melancholic adj Melancholic, melancholy, atrabillious, hypochondriac are comparable when they mean gloomy or depressed, especially as a manifestation of one's temperament or state of health. Melancholic and melancholy are often used interchangeably without additional implications or suggestions <the drawings Thurber has produced . . . calling into being an ineradicable population of fierce-looking women, furtive men, and gently melancholic dogs—Newsweek> <the Cape Colored, a gentle and melancholy people—N. Y. Times> although each can be used discriminately to suggest the differences inherent in their related nouns (see melancholia and melancholy under SADNESS). In such use melancholic describes a person who is afflicted with or inclined to melancholia <those recurring moods of melancholic suspicion which had so tortured me . . . remained absent and she seemed on the road to recovery—Ellis> Melancholy, on the other hand, describes a person, or the mood, disposition, acts, or utterances of a person, who is excessively sad or detached in spirit and, usually, averse to what is cheerful or gay <"They say you are a melancholy fellow." "I am so; I do love it better than laughing"—Shak.>  <there is no merriment . . . comparable to that of melancholy people escaping from the dark region in which it is their custom to keep themselves imprisoned—Hawthorne> Atrabillious preserves the implication of an unhealthy physical condition more strongly than the preceding words; often in modern use it suggests the morose or choleric disposition of the dyspeptic or the predilection for gloom of those who have been subjected to severe strain (neither were those plump rosy-gilled Englishmen that came hither, but a hard-faced, atrabilious, earnest-eyed race—J. R. Lowell) (that the American genius was foredoomed to fail was the atrabilious Ames's firm conviction—Brooks) Hypochondriac comes close to atrabilious in its suggestion of constitutional gloominess but it implies also an unwholesome anxiety about one's state of health (she was rather hypochondriac and was gloating over the tale of her symptoms—Edmund Wilson) (the culture just had gone hypochondriac, and all members of the society, whatever their congenital individual dispositions, had fear and pessimism pounded into them from childhood on—Kroeber)

Ana *despondent, despairing, hopeless, forlorn, desperate: pessimistic, misanthropic, *cynical, misogynic

melancholy n *sadness, melancholia, dejection, gloom, depression, blues, dumps

Ana miserableness or misery, wretchedness (see corresponding adjectives at MISERABLE); despondency, despair, hopelessness, forlornness, desperation (see under DESPONDENT); *tedium, boredom, ennui, doldrums

Ant exhilaration —Con joy, delight, *pleasure, enjoyment, delectation, fruition: hopefulness, optimism (see corresponding adjectives at HOPEFUL)

melancholy adj 1 *melancholic, atrabilious, hypochondriac

Ana morose, gloomy, glum, *sullen, dour, saturnine: depressed, oppressed, weighed down (see DEPRESS); *despondent, despairing, hopeless, forlorn, desperate 2 Melancholy, dolorous, doleful, lugubrious, rueful, plaintive are comparable when they mean expressing or suggesting sorrow or mourning. All of these words have, to a greater or less extent, weakened from their original meaning and are often used with a half-humorous connotation. Melancholy may stress a quality that inspires pensiveness or sad reflection or awakens mournful thoughts or recollections which are not only not necessarily painful or disagreeable, but often agreeable, especially to the poetic or thoughtful mind (sweet bird, that shunn't the noise of folly, most musical, most melancholy!—Milton) (the tender images we love to trace steal from each year a melancholy grace—Rogers) (I have in the present moment only the melancholy pleasure of an easy conscience—Warren) The term more frequently applies to something which expresses or excites dejection or depression (his melancholy old house on the hill—Deland) (that melancholy problem of a money-earning occupation which lay so heavily on my thoughts—Ellis) Dolorous describes what is lamentable in its gloom or dismalness or is exaggeratedly dismal (that dolorous aspect of human nature which in comedy is best portrayed by Molière—T. S. Eliot) (a rapid succession of warnings, as dolorous and pessimistic as the little booklets of possible mishaps that accompany the sale of English cars—Gallant) Doleful and lugubrious are also frequently applied to what is exaggeratedly dismal or dreary, but doleful connotes a weight of woe (a doleful and lackadaisical air) (the mourners, who are singing a very doleful dirge—Goodenough) and lugubrious, an undue, and often an affected, heaviness or solemnity (dark funeral barges like my own had flitted by, and the gondoliers had warned each other at every turning with hoarse, lugubrious cries—Howells) (a lugubrious obituary quality in the treatment given by the American press to Sir Winston's resignation—Reporter) (a lugubrious place which filled me with dread—Henry Miller) Rueful implies sorrow and regret but it often suggests a quizzical attitude (the woebegone heroes . . . eyed each other with rueful countenances—Irving) (the fleeting glory of Napoleon, the rueful memory of Josephine and her somehow less enviable successor—Cassidy) Plaintive applies chiefly to tones, sounds, utterances, or rhythms that suggest complaint or mourning or that excite pity or compassion (the plaintive cries of a child) (he sighed, his voice became plaintive—Huxley) (the clarinet sings, in its eerie plaintive tone—S. R. Watson)

Ana pathetic, poignant, *moving, touching: hopeless, forlorn, despairing (see DESPONDENT): pensive, reflective, *thoughtful: discomposing, disquieting, perturbing, disturbing (see DISCOMPOSE)

Con happy, *glad, cheerful, joyous, joyful, lighthearted: *lively, vivacious, gay melee fracas, row, *brawl, broil, rumpus, scrap

Ana altercation, *quarrel, wrangle, squabble: *confusion, disorder mellow ripe, matured, *mature, adult, grown-up

Ana *tender, warm, sympathetic, responsive, warm-hearted

Ant unmellow: green —Con raw, crude, callow, uncouth, *rude, rough melodramatic histrionic, theatrical, dramaturgic, *dramatic

Ana *showy, pretentious, ostentatious: *sentimental, romantic, maudlin, mawkish melody, air, tune all denote a clearly distinguishable succession of rhythmically ordered tones. Melody stresses the sweetness or beauty of sound produced by such an arrangement of tones (sweetest melodies are those that are by distance made more sweet—Wordsworth) It also commonly suggests expressiveness or moving power and a carefully wrought pattern (nerve-dissolving melody—Tennyson) (tis a rich sobbing melody, with reliefs full and majestic—Keats) Technically, as applied to complex musical structure, melody implies a contrast to harmony; it designates that kind of musical beauty produced by a continuous series of tones in one or more of the voice parts, in distinction from that produced by simultaneously sounded tones in all the voice parts. Air is applied technically to the dominating melody, usually carried by the upper voices (as in a chorale or part-song) (and whistle all the airs from . . . Pinafore—Gilbert) In more general use air is often applied to an easily remembered succession of tones which identifies a simple musical composition (as a song, a ballad, or a waltz) and which is more commonly and more precisely called tune; thus, one may refer to the air, or the tune, of a song (hum the air of the Marseillaise) (left her fancywork and played for them some old Scotch airs—Black) (he . . . can invent a good tune which immediately captivates one—Dyneley Hussey) Tune is also applied to the musical setting of a text (as a ballad, psalm, or lyric) (a hymn tune) and to a simple composition whether unison or harmonized (a dance tune) (many hundred texts and tunes of English-Canadian folk songs—Report on Nat'l Development (Ottawa))

melt *liquefy, deliquesce, fuse, thaw member *part, portion, piece, detail, division, section, segment, sector, fraction, fragment, parcel

Ana *element, component, constituent: branch, limb, *shoot, bough memento *remembrance, remembrancer, reminder, memorial, token, keepsake, souvenir

Ana token, earnest, *pledge: *gift, present, favor memoir *biography, life, autobiography, confessions memorable *noteworthy, notable

Ana remembered, recollected, recalled (see REMEMBER): salient, remarkable, *noticeable, outstanding, striking, arresting: *exceptional memorandum *letter, epistle, missive, note, message, dispatch, report memorial n *remembrance, remembrancer, reminder, memento, token, keepsake, souvenir

Ana monument, record (see DOCUMENT): *sign, mark, token memory, remembrance, recollection, reminiscence, mind, souvenir are comparable though not wholly synonymous terms since all involve the ideas of remembering and of being remembered. Memory applies chiefly to the power or function of remembering what has been experienced or learned; in this sense it suggests the power to reproduce images of what is no longer before one, to retain something (as words, ideas, or skills) that has been learned, and to recognize and identify something previously known <he has a remarkably good memory for names> <her memory . . . went slipping back upon the golden days—Tennyson> Memory often occurs in the sense of something remembered either as an aggregate or as a single item. More than the other words memory as used in this sense suggests a keeping in mind rather than a bringing back and often, therefore, a treasuring as something intimate or personal  <it was the merest memory now, vague and a little sweet—Galsworthy> <you must have had a charming evening . . . if I may judge from the way you have kept the memory green—Conrad> Remembrance applies primarily to the act or the process, as distinguished from the faculty, power, or function, of remembering <the remembrance of all that made life dear pierced me to the core—Hudson> <Roman soldiers . . . keep the restless Jews in remembrance of their provincial status—Douglas> <as April's green endures; or will endure like her remembrance of awakened birds—Stevens> Remembrance also denotes the state or fact of being kept in the memory <moments . . . that live again in remembrance—Gibson> <our literature is going to be our most perdurable claim on man's remembrance—Quiller-Couch> Recollection often takes the place of remembrance but it may carry a strong suggestion of more voluntary and sometimes even more effortful recalling to mind often of something forgotten or for long unconsidered <he looked . . . alarmed; but with a moment's recollection and a returning smile, replied—Austen> <half a word fixed upon or near the spot, is worth a cartload of recollection—Gray> <there came to him a slight uneasiness, a movement of the memory, a distant recollection of something, somewhere, he had seen before—Dahl> But recollection is quite as often used of something remembered, especially as the result of conscious effort <vivid indeed is my recollection of our halts before shaded homesteads, our protracted and usually successful parleys with lean housewives, hungry for conversation—Grandgent> <carried away from Casablanca an unpleasant recollection of indignities to which he believed he had been subjected—Funk> Reminiscence carries a stronger implication of recovery through retropection than any of the other terms. Like remembrance and recollection it denotes either the act or the process of remembering but it further suggests the recollection of what has been long unremembered, especially because it belongs to one's remote past <the old man spent hour after hour indulging in reminiscence> <after another quarter of an hour of reminiscence they had got around to the things that had happened to each of them since they had last met—Mary Austin> <spurred into reminiscence

. . . revealed a strange tale told to him years earlier—Rippin> The term is often used in place of recollection in the concrete sense where what is remembered serves as a contribution to biography, an autobiography, or a history <the author's own reminiscences of childhood and youth—Times Lit. Sup.> or is recalled from the past in conversation or in writing by an aging or aged person <enjoy the reminiscences of the old veterans> or is a phrase, a passage, a thought, or a custom that is so like one found in an earlier writer or people as to be regarded as an unconscious imitation or repetition or a survival <the young poet's best phrases are reminiscences of Keats> <reminiscences of medieval pageants in modern carnivals> <here and there are to be found the reminiscences of Rimski-Korsakov's mannerisms—Sargeant> Mind (see also MIND 2) is found in the sense here considered chiefly in certain idiomatic phrases where it means either the entity (as distinct from the function) which stores up what is remembered <I shall keep your need in mind> <out of sight, out of mind> or the power to remember <like . . . assorted autocrats since time out of mind, always referred to himself in the third person—Pynchon> Souvenir, which more commonly denotes a material memento, may sometimes replace memory <then she carefully restored them, her mind full of souvenirs newly awakened—Bennett>

Ana *mind, intellect, soul, intelligence, brain, wit: remembering, minding, recalling, reminding (see REMEMBER): awareness, consciousness, cognizance (see CORRESPONDING ADJECTIVES AT AWARE)

Ant oblivion

menace vb *threaten

Ana alarm, terrify, scare, *frighten: *intimidate, cow: presage, portend, forebode, forecast (see FORETELL) mend vb Mend, repair, patch, rebuild are comparable when they mean to put into good or fitting order something that is injured, damaged, or defective. Mend basically implies a freeing from faults or defects <mend your manners> <the wound mended slowly> but in its most common use it specifically suggests a process of making whole or sound something that has been broken, torn, or injured (as by wear or use). In such use the term is especially applicable when the task calls for no extraordinary skill or unusual equipment; thus, one mends a dress by sewing up tears, darning holes, or reinforcing worn spots <mend a broken dish with glue> <mending the stone wall with cobbles from the field> <over here the roads were never mended unless a few of the farmers agreed to give so much labor—Glasgow> Often, and especially in extended use, mend stresses the resulting putting in order without much regard to the nature of the means of its attainment <he mended the fire while he was speaking and the glow fell over the darkened room—Roberts> <whenever civilization palled upon him, he learned to mend his soul by going to sea—Erskine> Repair is often interchangeable with mend in the sense of to make whole or sound, but typically it implies greater or more professional skill by the performer and usually correspondingly greater complexity both in the task involved and in the equipment used; thus, an old-time cobbler mended shoes so that they were good for further use but a modern specialist may repair them so well that his work cannot be detected; a boy may know how to repair a car but be unable to do so for lack of essential tools <mending refers to minor restoration, not involving the replacement of any material or the separation of book from cover . . . Repairing is the partial rehabilitation of a worn book, the amount of work done being less than the minimum involved in rebinding and more than the maximum involved in mending—Library Jour. > In extended use, too, repair may be quite like mend <the plain fact is that peace—or what passed for peace before it was broken—cannot be mended, cannot be repaired, cannot be restored—MacLeish> but often it more specifically implies a making good or making up for something <reminds himself that he had not wept for the death of his mother a year or so earlier, and proceeds to repair the omission—Times Lit. Sup.> <although his range of reading was wide, he could not in some respects repair the lack of early education—Collis> Patch basically implies a mending by covering, filling in, or reinforcing such a defect as a hole, rent, or weak spot, typically with the same or a similar material <patch overalls worn thin at the knee> <patch holes in the road with asphalt> <patch an inner tube> Sometimes, often with up, it implies careless, hurried, clumsy, or temporary mending <$4,800,000 appropriated to start a new prison in New Jersey has been since diverted to patch up the 118-year-old penal slum at Trenton—O'Leary> and in much of its extended use this is the aspect stressed <he hastily tries to patch up his marriage and purify his politics—Bentley> <relations between the two men had to be patched up repeatedly—Ishbel Ross> Sometimes, often with together, patch implies a making from bits and pieces or odds and ends <patch a quilt> <patch a car together from pieces out of the junkyard> <his life must be patched together from scattered references in the contemporary colonial records—J. T. Adams> Rebuild, which normally means to build again something which has been razed or ruined, is often preferred in industry and business to repair because it implies a thoroughgoing repairing with addition of new parts when necessary that makes a thing like new  <rebuild a carburetor>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana *improve, better, ameliorate, help; emend, remedy, redress, *correct, rectify, reform; *renew, restore, renovate, rejuvenate, refurbish; fix, *adjust, regulate mendacious *dishonest, lying, untruthful, deceitful

Ant veracious —Con *reliable, dependable, trustworthy; honest, *upright, just, scrupulous, conscientious, honorable menial servile, slavish, *subservient, obsequious

Ana abject, *mean, sordid, ignoble; *base, low, vile; groveling, wallowing (see WALLOW)

mental, intellectual, psychic, intelligent, cerebral can mean of, relating to, or characteristic of that sum total of powers or functions called variously mind, intellect, soul, psyche, or brain (compare MIND 2). In general mental applies directly to what has to do with the mind as a real or as a purely theoretical entity <his mental life>  <mental diseases> <mental processes> <because every experience is constituted by interaction . . . between a self and its world, it is not itself either merely physical nor merely mental—Dewey> <even if he dreads no physical betrayal, he suffers . . . at every hint of mental estrangement—Santayana> Intellectual differs from mental not only in its reference to the intellect, and therefore to such higher powers of the mind as the comprehension of the abstract or difficult and the ability to reason, but also because it is directly applicable to persons, their utterances, acts, and qualities <an intellectual person> It often carries an implied contrast to emotional and suggests an attachment to study and reflection <all the intellectual qualities of the liberal mind—detachment, subtlety, complexity, understatement, irony—Lerner> <the detective story, as created by Poe, is something as specialized and as intellectual as a chess problem—T. S. Eliot> <it was only on her intellectual side that Elizabeth touched the England of her day. All its moral aspects were simply dead to her—J. R. Green> Psychic implies a relation to the inner self or psyche and guides the attention away from notions of the physical, physiological, or organic <you keep talking about maladies of the mind and soul. I don't accept the idea of psychic diseases analogous to mental diseases—Mackenzie> <the humorist was a type that pioneer society required in order to maintain its psychic equilibrium—Brooks> Intelligent (see also INTELLIGENT 2) implies such a degree of mental power in a person or animal as to make possible appraisal of a situation and formulation of sound or reasonable decisions; it is often contrasted with stupid or silly <men are intelligent beings> <some dogs are more intelligent than others> <intelligent self-interest> <friends, who were a little more intelligent and would understand—Hersey> Cerebral basically calls to mind the higher centers of the brain and may suggest intellectual activity or inclination especially as being coolly analytical and withdrawn from the sensuous and emotional aspects of the mental life <the musical expression is sufficiently cerebral not to inflame anyone's libido—Kolodin> <too cerebral a style, too baldly intellectual, to be wholly satisfactory—Brand Blanshard> <doubtful if he ever can become a popular hero. He is too detached, too cerebral, and too rigid—Gunther> mention vb Mention, name, instance, specify are comparable when they mean to make clear or specific by referring to something explicitly. Mention indicates a calling attention to, usually by name where possible, sometimes by a brief, cursory, or incidental reference <I shall mention the accident which directed my curiosity originally into this channel—Lamb> <intellectuals are such puritanical devils, that they usually recoil with horror when prayer is mentioned—Forster> <usually the class is not directly mentioned in our statement; but there must be an implicit understanding, since otherwise the probability would be indeterminate—Eddington> <mentioning several minor figures in his lecture on Shakespeare> Name implies clear mention of a name and therefore may suggest greater explicitness <naming Doe and Roe in the report and implicating their associates> <he names golf, tennis, and music as his chief means of recreation—Current Biog.> Instance may indicate clear explicit reference or definite emphasis as a typical example or special case <examples can be instanced from the first to the twentieth century—Latourette> <is it unfair to instance Marlowe, who died young?—Quiller-Couch> <I have instanced his book because it was flagrant, not unique—Leech> Specify implies statement so explicit, detailed, and specific that misunderstanding is impossible <the standards specify the names under which these five varieties must be sold—Americana Annual> <as changes emerge from the storm of civil commotion, it is often just as hard to specify the exact day on which a government is born or dies—Jessup> <to specify the structure of a skeleton is to specify the bones of which it consists and their interrelations—Clement>

Ana *refer, allude, advert; cite, *quote

mephitic toxic, *poisonous, venomous, virulent, pestilent, pestilential, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmatic

Ana *offensive, loathsome, revolting, repulsive, repugnant; fetid, noisome, putrid, *malodorous; noxious, *pernicious, baneful mercantile *commercial mercenary adj Mercenary, hiring, venal, hack are comparable though not closely synonymous terms when they are applied to persons, or their acts, services, or products with the meaning actuated or motivated chiefly

by a desire for profit. Mercenary stresses self-interest and often self-seeking as the guiding motive; it usually, except when applied to soldiers who serve a foreign power for a wage, applies to persons or services that should be prompted by altruism or by noble aims or should be characterized by unselfishness or selflessness (the faithful service of the heart; so rendered and so free from any mercenary taint—Dickens) (if a writer's attitude toward his characters and his scene is as vulgar as a showman's, as mercenary as an auctioneer's, vulgar and meretricious will his product for ever remain—Cather) Hireling suggests the attitude of one who serves for the wage involved or is guided by servile motives; the term usually, especially in its more common opprobrious use, implies a motive no higher than that of the reward promised or foreseen (prostituted muse and hireling bard—Byron) (the Quaker was a mystic . . . who denied the Scriptural validity of a Hebraized Calvinism and a hireling priesthood—Parrington) Venal implies purchasability (his initiation to venal love is sordid and mournful—Peyre) The term often connotes the use of bribery and nearly always carries a strong implication of corruption or of corruptibility (venal politicians) (venal members of the ill-paid police force discovered in opium a perquisite much greater than the customary squeeze—Berrigan) (women can take many forms . . . this gift for metamorphosis could be used to further all kinds of venal and petty schemes—Cheever) Hack is used of a person, or of the work of such a person, willing to forfeit freedom of action and initiative or personal and professional integrity in return for an assured reward (as regular wages or political spoils). The term (and especially its corresponding noun hack) commonly combines some of the implications of mercenary and venal; like the former it implies self-interest and like the latter corruptibility. Distinctively, hack regularly stresses the mediocre and uninspired quality of the person or his work and may imply a background of previous professional failure or inherent low order of ability (his voice had all the mechanical solicitude for unimportant facts common to a hack policeman anywhere in the world—MacLennan) (like a hack politician fighting the winged aggressor with yesterday's magic coat of ragged words—MacNeice) (some of the novels . . . were very good, some were so-so, some mere hack work—Hass) (the official Soviet histories and monographs, justly denounced . . . as crude travesties executed by official hacks and sycophants—Times Lit. Sup.)

Ana abject, *mean, sordid, ignoble: *covetous, greedy, acquisitive, grasping, avaricious: debased, corrupt, corrupted, depraved (see under DEBASE)

merciful clement, *forbearing, tolerant, lenient, indulgent

Ana compassionate, *tender: benignant, benign, *kind, kindly: forgiving, pardoning, condoning (see EXCUSE vb)

Ant merciless —Con *grim, implacable, relentless, unrelenting: cruel, fell, inhuman, *fierce mercifully forbearingly, tolerantly, clemently, leniently, indulgently (see under FORBEARING)

mercifulness clemency, forbearance, tolerance, leniency, indulgence (see under FORBEARING)

Ana *mercy, clemency, lenity, charity, grace: compassion, commiseration, pity, ruth (see SYMPATHY)

Con severeness or severity, sternness (see corresponding adjectives at SEVERE): rigorousness or rigor, rigidity, strictness, stringency (see corresponding adjectives at RIGID) merciless implacable, relentless, unrelenting, *grim

Ana pitiless, ruthless, compassionless (see corresponding nouns at SYMPATHY): wanton, uncalled-for, gratuitous (see SUPEREROGATORY): cruel, fell, *fierce: inexorable, obdurate, *inflexible, adamant, adamantine

Ant merciful —Con clement, *forbearing, tolerant, lenient, indulgent mercurial *inconstant, fickle, capricious, unstable

Ana volatile, effervescent, buoyant, expansive, *elastic, resilient: *changeable, changeful, variable, protean, mutable: mobile, *movable: *clever, adroit, cunning, ingenious

Ant saturnine

mercy, charity, grace, clemency, lenity are comparable when meaning the disposition to show compassion or kindness in one's treatment of others, especially of those who offend one and who are in one's power to punish or rebuke. Mercy implies compassion so great as to enable one to forbear, even when justice demands punishment, or to give help or comfort even to the lowliest or most undeserving (earthly power doth then show likest God's when mercy seasons justice—Shak.) (souls who God's forbearance try, and those that seek his help, and for his mercy sigh—Wordsworth) Charity stresses benevolence and goodwill, especially as it reveals itself not only in giving generously (for this sense see CHARITY 2) but in broad understanding of others and in kindly tolerance (with malice toward none, with charity for all—Lincoln) (lack of another faculty: the faculty which theologians still call charity. Nowhere, in the whole of the volume, does any character act out of genuine kindness—Time) (it is far commoner at the University to meet men of great attainments combined with sincere humility and charity—Benson) Grace implies a benignant attitude toward those who are dependent on one and a disposition to grant favors or to make concessions to them (each in his place, by right, not grace, shall rule his heritage—Kipling) (that quiet but unabashed hospitality which is a common grace in Mexican households—Cather) (though the wages of sin are exacted with biblical sternness, a tender grace is present in a hundred minute particulars—Gaither) Clemency (see also clement under FORBEARING) implies a mild or merciful disposition in one whose duty or function it is to administer justice or to punish offenses (clemency . . . is the standing policy of constitutional governments, as severity is of despotism—Hallam) (off went poor Tom . . . to rejoice in the clemency that spared his appearance at Sessions—Meredith) Lenity differs from clemency only in its greater emphasis on lack of severity. It often suggests undue gentleness or softness or even at times undue leniency (what makes robbers bold but too much lenity?—Shak.) (if it produces a proper lenity to our citizens in captivity, it will have the effect we meant—Jefferson) (errors which, had he been regarded with a less affectionate lenity, would have stood against his official account—S. H. Adams) Ana compassion, ruth, pity, commiseration (see SYMPATHY): mercifulness, clemency, forbearance, tolerance, leniency, indulgence (see under FORBEARING)

Con vengeance, revenge, retribution, reprisal, *retaliation: punishment, chastening, chastisement, disciplining or discipline, correction, castigation (see corresponding verbs at PUNISH) mere, bare are often employed with little or no distinction in the sense of being such as the term qualified states but nothing more. But mere is commonly used to emphasize the limitations of a thing, as if it were declared to be "simply what it is and nothing more" (it began to rain—not a mere hill-shower, but a good, tepid, monsoonish downpour—Kipling) (is mere living . . . without reference to any intrinsic values, a thing of any worth?—Inge) (the saying that we are members one of another is not a mere pious formula . . . without any meaning: it is a literal truth—Shaw) Bare is stronger and frequently suggests that the thing just escapes falling short of what it actually is (elected by a bare majority) (the short-lived Ukrainian Republic which lasted a bare four years before succumbing—Current History) (some must know higher mathematics, but the bare elements suffice for those to whom mathematics is distasteful—Russell) meretricious *gaudy, tawdry, garish, flashy

Ana *showy, pretentious, ostentatious: vulgar, *coarse, gross: deceptive, delusive, delusory, *misleading merge blend, fuse, coalesce, amalgamate, commingle, mingle, *mix

Ana consolidate, concentrate, *compact, unify: *unite, combine, conjoin: *integrate, concatenate, articulate merger *consolidation, amalgamation meridian culmination, zenith, apogee, *summit, peak, pinnacle, climax, apex, acme merit n 1 *due, desert

Ana meed, reward, guerdon (see PREMIUM); *worth, value: gaining or gainings, winning or winnings (see GET) 2 *excellence, virtue, perfection

Ant fault: defect

merit vb *deserve, earn, rate

Ana reward, award (see corresponding nouns at PREMIUM); requite, recompense, repay (see PAY)

merry, blithe, jocund, joyial, jolly mean indicating or showing high spirits or lightheartedness often in play and laughter. Merry implies a gay, cheerful temper or mood and uninhibited enjoyment of frolic, festivity, or fun of any sort (a merrier man, within the limit of becoming mirth, I never spent an hour's talk withal—Shak.) (let us drink and be merry, dance, joke, and rejoice—Jordan) (for the good are always the merry, save by an evil chance, and the merry love the fiddle, and the merry love to dance—Yeats) Blithe carries a stronger implication of freshness, buoyancy, and lightheartedness than merry; it usually suggests carefree, innocent, or even heedless gaiety (see this lovely child, blithe, innocent, and free. She spends a happy time with little care—Shelley) (he wrote blithe gay idiocies to me—White) (entertained by the author's blithe companionship and his engaging chatter—Percy Atkinson) Jocund heightens the implication of gladness and usually also connotes liveliness, exhilaration of spirits, or elation (a poet could not but be gay, in such a jocund company—Wordsworth) (he was . . . in that jocund, new-married mood—Mary Austin) (invested the matter with a clownish significance that perfectly fitted the spirit of the circus—jocund, yet charming—E. B. White) Jovial connotes especially good-fellowship or conviviality (a jovial, full-stomached, portly government servant with a marvelous capacity for making bad puns—Kipling) (his manner became more jaunty, jovial, half-jesting—Wolfe) Jolly often suggests higher spirits than jovial and an even more manifest attempt to keep others laughing (as by jesting, bantering, and playing tricks) (I don't care; I'm not refined. I like the jolly old pantomime where a man sits on his top hat—Chesterton) (ran down the street . . . with so jolly an air that he set everyone he passed into a good humor—Stevenson)

Ana gay, vivacious, *lively, sprightly, animated: joyful, joyous, cheerful, *glad, happy, lighthearted: mirthful, gleeful, hilarious (see corresponding nouns at MIRTH)

mesa *mountain, mount, peak, alp, volcano message missive, note, *letter, epistle, dispatch, report, memorandum metamorphose *transform, transmute, convert, transmogrify, transfigure

Ana *change, vary, alter, modify: develop, *mature, age, ripen metamorphosis transformation, transmutation, conversion, transmogrification, transfiguration (see under TRANSFORM)

Ana *change, mutation, alternation, permutation, vicissitude: change, variation, alteration, modification (see under CHANGE vb)

metaphor simile, *analogy metaphrase *translation, version, paraphrase meter *rhythm, cadence

method, mode, manner, way, fashion, system are comparable when they denote the means taken or the plan or procedure followed in doing a kind of work or in achieving an end. Method may denote either an abstraction or a concrete procedure, but in both cases it implies orderly, logical, and effective arrangements (as of one's ideas for an exposition or an argument, or of the steps to be followed in teaching, in investigation, in the treatment of a disease, or in any kind or piece of work); often, also, the term connotes regularity or formality in procedure (his teaching is too informal to be said to have method) (the inductive method of reasoning) (the crude methods of trial and error—Suzzallo) (the method of unfolding the course of a plot must in some ways be different in a play meant for acting and in a book meant for reading—Montague) (always omitted the vowels in accordance with the Arabian method of orthography—Krutch) (surely not to leave to fiftful chance the things that method and system and science should order and adjust—Cardozo)

Mode (see also FASHION 2; STATE) is sometimes used interchangeably with method, but it seldom stresses orderly or logical arrangement; rather, it denotes an order or course pursued as the result of custom, tradition, or personal preference (the reasons given . . . do not seem very plausible to our modes of thought—Binyon) (a man to whom music was a necessary mode of expression—Read) (a study of fictional villains and the mode their villainy assumes—Austin Warren) Manner is often used in place of mode where the reference is to a personal or peculiar course or procedure, or to a method, whether pursued by a number of persons or not, that seems to be individual or distinctive (mark the manner of his teaching—Shak.) (the mathematician . . . is not capable of giving a reason in the same manner as the dialectician—Jowett) (it is not consistent with his manner of writing Latin—Sellery) Way (see also WAY 1), the most general of these terms, may be used in place of any of the rest and is found in many familiar idiomatic expressions where theoretically method, mode, or manner might be more explicit (religion implies not only a way of worship but a way of life) (it was the white man's way to assert himself in any landscape, to change it, make it over a little . . . it was the Indian's way to pass through a country . . . and leave no trace—Cather) (the century has brought us not only new things to see but new ways of seeing—Day Lewis) (Sally used to answer Robert's letters, sadly and patiently, and with no reproaches;—that was Sally's way—Deland) Fashion differs from way not so much in denotation as in connotation derived in part from its commoner sense of style or vogue (see FASHION 2). The term often suggests an origin or source that is not so deep or a motivation that is not so abiding as those usually connoted by way; often also it is the idiomatic term in prepositional phrases introduced by after or in (he will, after his sour fashion, tell you—Shak.) (subjects serious in themselves, but treated after my fashion, non-seriously—Lamb) (I have been faithful to thee, Cynara! in my fashion—Dowson) (we hear them talking . . . in different fashions under different moods—even as you and I—Loves) But fashion sometimes comes very close to mode when it means the way that is characteristic of or peculiar to a group or type <swim dog fashion>  System suggests a fully developed and often carefully formulated method <the mind can scarcely conceive a system for regulating commerce between nations which shall exclude all laws concerning navigation—John Marshall> <the system of classification used by botanists> <his manners, his speech and habits of thought all seemed so prescribed, so intricately connected to one another that they suggested a system of conduct—Cheever> As an abstraction, however, meaning orderliness or plan in arrangement or procedure, system is often preferred to method <housekeeping without system> <he follows no system in his reading>

Ana *process, procedure, proceeding: classification (see corresponding verb at ASSORT): disposition, *disposal methodical *orderly, systematic, regular

Ana methodized, systematized, organized (see ORDER vb): *careful, meticulous, scrupulous: *logical, analytical

Ant unmethodical: desultory —Con *random, haphazard, casual, hit-or-miss: *irregular, unnatural: confused, disordered, chaotic, jumbled (see corresponding nouns at CONFUSION)

methodize systematize, organize, *order, arrange, marshal Ana regulate, *adjust: *set, settle, fix, establish meticulous *careful, scrupulous, punctilious, punctual Ana fastidious, finicky, particular, fussy, permickety, *nice: accurate, exact, precise, *correct mettle *courage, spirit, resolution, tenacity

Ana *fortitude, backbone, sand, grit, pluck, guts: nerve, hardihood, *temerity, audacity: gallantry, valor, *heroism mettlesome *spirited, high-spirited, spunky, fiery, peppery, gingery

Ana courageous, bold, audacious, intrepid, *brave: *impassioned, passionate, ardent, fervent: restive, *impatient, restless miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmal *poisonous, toxic, venomous, virulent, pestilent, pestilential, mephitic

Ana contagious, *infectious, catching: noxious, *pernicious, baneful, deleterious microbe *germ, bacterium, bacillus, virus microscopic minute, *small, little, diminutive, miniature, petite, wee, tiny, teeny, weeny middle n *center, midst, core, hub, focus, nucleus, heart middling *medium, mediocre, second-rate, moderate, average, fair, indifferent midget n manikin, pygmy, *dwarf, homunculus, runt midst middle, *center, core, hub, focus, nucleus, heart mien demeanor, deportment, *bearing, port, presence Ana air, *pose, affectation, mannerism: aspect, *appearance, semblance, look might n strength, energy, *power, force, puissance

Ana vigorousness or vigor, strenuousness, energeticness, lustiness (see corresponding adjectives at VIGOROUS): potency, powerfulness, forcibleness, forcefulness (see corresponding adjectives at POWERFUL) mild gentle, smooth, lenient, bland, *soft, balmy

Ana *forbearing, tolerant, clement, merciful, lenient, indulgent: delicate, dainty, exquisite, *choice: temperate, *moderate: *calm, serene, tranquil, placid

Ant harsh: fierce milieu environment, setting, *background, mise-en-scène, backdrop militant *aggressive, assertive, self-assertive, pushing, pushy

Ana bellicose, pugnacious, combative, contentious, *belligerent: combating, opposing, antagonizing or antagonistic (see corresponding verbs at RESIST): fighting, warring, contending, battling (see CONTENT)

Con *pacific, pacifist, pacifistic, peaceful, peaceable: acquiescent, resigned, *compliant military *martial, warlike mime *actor, player, performer, mummer, mimic, thespian, impersonator, trouper mimic n *actor, player, performer, mummer, mime, thespian, impersonator, trouper mimic vb *copy, imitate, ape, mock

Ana play, impersonate, *act: counterfeit, feign, simulate, sham, pretend, *assume mind n 1 *memory, remembrance, recollection, reminiscence, souvenir

2 Mind, intellect, soul, psyche, brain, intelligence, wit are comparable when they mean the sum total of powers, often felt as a distinct entity, by means of which each individual knows and understands both his inner life and the external world and establishes effective relations between them and which are commonly felt as the distinctive possession of human beings. Mind indicates the complex of man's faculties involved in perceiving, remembering, considering, evaluating, and deciding; it contrasts variously with body, heart, soul, and spirit <the mind must have its share in deciding these important matters, not merely the emotions and desires—Rose Macaulay> Mind may indicate the peculiar complex of a particular individual as differing from all others <the mind of a dreamer joined to the temperament of a soldier—Buchan> Intellect, sometimes interchangeable with mind, may focus attention on the powers of knowing and thinking by which one may comprehend, consider, and conclude and especially the more coldly analytic powers, independent of and discrete from willing and feeling <the emotionalist steep himself or herself in luxurious feeling and pathetic imagination, which makes no severe call upon either the will or the intellect—Inge> <now the significance of Sir Thomas Browne lies in the fact that he was at once by intellect a force in the forward movement and by temperament a reactionary—More> Soul (see also SOUL 2), used with considerable variation in meaning and suggestion, may indicate that principle which vitalizes, directs, selects, or inspires in matters emotional and volitional as well as mental <my inner existence, that consciousness which is called the soul—Jefferies> <the soul is an intelligent, sensitive, and vital principle, a trinity which forms and moves the body predisposed to such action, as well as feels, thinks, and wills—Thilly> Psyche may refer to the totality of self composed of all attributes, powers, and activities not purely bodily or somatic but definitely including the unconscious or subconscious <by the psyche I understand the totality of all the psychic processes, both conscious as well as unconscious; whereas by soul, I understand a definitely demarcated function-complex that is best characterized as a "personality"—Baynes> Brain, often as the plural brains, may more forcefully than intellect focus attention on powers of individual comprehension or independent thought <it requires brains and education to follow the argument—Inge> <have I ever even felt inclined to write anything, until my emotions had been unduly excited, my brain immoderately stirred, my senses unusually quickened, or my spirit extravagantly roused?—Galsworthy> Intelligence is likely to imply specific ability to cope with problems and situations and may apply to exhibition of the play of powers of the intellect or comparable ones <had turned capable men into mere machines doing their work without intelligence—Shaw> <wild animals are not automata—they have intelligence if they lack intellect—Clarke> Wit, often as the plural wits, may refer to a mind marked by inborn capacity, strong common sense, bright perception, or ready intelligence <the un-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

tutored natural wit of savages—Shaw) (everyone had to be a jack-of-all-trades, everyone had to live by his wits—Brooks)

Ana *power, function, faculty: *reason, understanding, intuition: wisdom, judgment, *sense, gumption mind vb 1 *remember, recollect, recall, remind, reminisce, bethink

2 *obey, comply

Ana defer, *yield, submit, bow: accede, *assent, consent, agree, acquiesce

3 *tend, attend, watch

Con *neglect, ignore, disregard, forget, slight mingle *mix, commingle, blend, merge, coalesce, amalgamate, fuse

Ana *join, combine, unite, conjoin, connect: consolidate, *compact, unify, concentrate miniature adj minute, diminutive, *small, little, wee, tiny, teeny, weeny minimize depreciate, *decry, belittle, disparage, derogate, detract

Ant magnify —Con aggrandize, *exalt: extol, eulogize, acclaim, laud, *praise minister envoy, *ambassador, legate, nuncio, internuncio, chargé d'affaires minority *infancy, nonage

Ant majority

minstrel bard, troubadour, *poet, versifier, rhymer, rhymester, poetaster minute n *instant, moment, second, flash, jiffy, twinkling, split second minute adj 1 *small, little, diminutive, miniature, wee, tiny, teeny, weeny

2 *circumstantial, particular, particularized, detailed, itemized

Ana meticulous, scrupulous, *careful, punctilious: precise, accurate, exact, right, nice, *correct

Con general, *universal: *abstract, ideal: comprehending or comprehensive, including or inclusive, embracing or embracing (see corresponding verbs at INCLUDE) miracle *wonder, marvel, prodigy, phenomenon miraculous *supernatural, supranatural, preternatural, superhuman mirage hallucination, *delusion, illusion mirror n *model, example, pattern, exemplar, ideal, standard, beau ideal mirth, glee, jollity, hilarity are comparable when they mean the mood or temper of a person or a group of persons manifesting joy or high spirits especially in laughter, play, or merrymaking. Mirth often implies lightness of heart and a love of gaiety; it may, however, imply great amusement or cause for laughter (Darcy was not of a disposition in which happiness overflows in mirth—Austen) (some of them literally throwing themselves down on the ground in convulsions of unholy mirth—Kipling) (they seem to quiver on the edge of mirth, as if some deep continual laughter was repressed—Hallam Tennyson) Glee is often employed in reference to an individual who by reason of special circumstances is filled with joy, delight, or happiness, and shows his exultancy by laughter, smiles, and cries of joy (full well they laughed, with counterfeited glee, at all his jokes, for many a joke had he—Goldsmith) (the best of constitutions will not prevent ambitious politicians from succumbing with glee and gusto to the temptations of power—Huxley) But glee may express the exultation of one who takes more or less malicious delight in another's misfortunes or predicaments (in great glee over his friend's embarrassment) (with malicious glee they quoted a previous boast of the President's—F. L. Allen) (it betrayed the glee felt by the mean-spirited when they see people who do not deserve humiliation forced to suffer it—West) Jollity, on the other hand, usually implies mirth in a group, especially a merrymaking group. Distinctively, however, it connotes exuberance and lack of constraint and may imply revelry of any kind (midnight shout and revelry, tipsy dance and jollity—Milton) (contributed more than his share of the jollity by turning out puns by the hamperful—Balliett) Hilarity fundamentally implies the exhilaration of spirits (as by wine, pleasurable excitement, or great amusement) (wine gives not light, gay, ideal hilarity, but tumultuous, noisy, clamorous merriment—Johnson) (through all the works of Chaucer, there reigns a cheerfulness, a manly hilarity—Coleridge) but it often carries implications of boisterousness or exuberance (he entered wholeheartedly into the hilarity of the boys, till he too was talking only nonsense—Rølvaag) (the hilarity of a New Year's Eve celebration)

Ana cheerfulness or cheer, lightheartedness, joyfulness, gladness, happiness (see corresponding adjectives at GLAD): joy, *pleasure, delight: merriment, blitheness, jocundity, joviality (see corresponding adjectives at MERRY)

Con *sadness, depression, dejection, melancholy, blues, dumps: *tedium, boredom, ennui misanthropic pessimistic, misogynic, *cynical

Ant philanthropic —Con benevolent, humane, humanitarian, *charitable, altruistic miscarriage 1 *failure, neglect, default, dereliction

Ana abuse, maltreatment, misuse (see corresponding verbs at ABUSE)

2 *abortion

miscellaneous, assorted, heterogeneous, motley, promiscuous are comparable when they mean marked by diversity or variety and are applied to the things that make up a group, a collection, or a mass, or to a group, collection, or mass. Miscellaneous usually implies a mixture of many kinds, showing few signs of selection, and often suggesting dependence on chance (there is always a miscellaneous assemblage at the meetings of the association) (Joyce's wide and miscellaneous acquaintanceship—Colum) (the contents of the chests were of the most miscellaneous description:—sewing utensils, marling spikes, strips of calico, bits of rope—Melville) (what appears at first to be a miscellaneous lot of books often reveals, on closer inspection, an interesting pattern of interrelationships—Redman) Assorted (see also ASSORT) and the related noun assortment also imply a mixture but not a haphazard one; they carry the implications of a selection including various kinds or involving consideration of various tastes or needs (a box of assorted candies) (there were passable performances of potpourri from assorted operas—Copland) (none of these authors has published books of assorted essays—R. B. West) (a case containing an assortment of tools) Heterogeneous is applicable chiefly to masses or groups in which the individuals or the elements are in proximity or close relationship to each other by chance; it suggests not only variety or diversity in the individuals or the elements but also absence of uniformity or unity and little evidence of fusion (the task of transforming a heterogeneous selection of mankind into a homogeneous nation—Russell) (the family is heterogeneous enough to make quite a good party in itself—Rose Macaulay) (the heterogeneous structure of granite) (a photograph lacks organization and unity . . . It is haphazard, heterogeneous, aimless, and amorphous—just as is nature—S. S. Van Dine) Motley adds to heterogeneous the suggestion of discordance in the individuals or elements or their striking contrast to each other; perhaps from the notion of discordance it is more depreciative than the foregoing terms and is more likely to qualify groups made up of elements felt as inferior or undesirable (one would enquire from whence this motley style did first our Roman purity defile—Dryden) (motley support drawn from Tammany Hall Irish, Wall Street bankers, and odds and ends of all factions—Parrington) (that motley aggregation of impudent and flattering camp followers—Walker) Promiscuous may suggest haphazardness or the appearance of it, but it usually implies selection that is completely devoid of discrimination and that results in disorderly confusion; thus, a miscellaneous acquaintanceship may imply a catholicity of taste, but a promiscuous acquaintanceship implies an absence of taste and good judgment; from a description of a club's membership as heterogeneous one might infer its interesting diversity but from a description of it as promiscuous one can infer only a diversity that is distasteful and senseless from the point of view of the speaker or writer (a classless, promiscuous world where True Story and London's New Statesman and Nation share the same rickety table—Time) For this reason, promiscuous as applied specifically to people or their acts, emotions, and relations stresses not only lack of discrimination, but lack of restriction within bounds set (as by prudence, good sense, or sound morals); thus, promiscuous charity is imprudently lavish charity extended without reference to the needs of those helped; promiscuous blame suggests stupid indifference as to the persons or things one's censure may affect; promiscuous sexual intercourse implies licentious disregard of normal standards of conduct (sanity involves some order and discrimination, rather than a promiscuous acceptance of all our impulses as good—Cohen) (the dangers to civil freedom of a promiscuous and unprincipled attack on radicalism—Schlesinger b. 1917)

Ana various, diverse, divergent, disparate, *different: multifarious, divers, sundry, *many Con similar, alike, *like, identical, uniform mischance *misfortune, adversity, mishap Ana *accident, casualty, mishap: *disaster, calamity, catastrophe, cataclysm mischief *injury, hurt, damage, harm Ana perniciousness, detrimentalness or detriment, deleteriousness, noxiousness, banefulness or bane (see corresponding adjectives at PERNICIOUS); *evil, ill: impairment, marring, spoiling (see corresponding verbs at INJURE) mischievous roguish, waggish, impish, *playful, frolicsome, sportive Ana annoying, bothering or bothersome, vexing or vexatious, irking or irksome (see corresponding verbs at ANNOY); naughty, *bad, evil, ill, wicked: tricky, foxy, insidious, artful, *sly miscreant *villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rascal, rogue, scamp, rapscallion Ana *criminal, malefactor, culprit, delinquent mise-en-scène *background, setting, environment, milieu, backdrop miserable, wretched both describe something (as a person's state of health or of mind, a state of affairs, a human being with reference to his condition or character, or a thing compared with others of its kind) that is deplorably or contemptibly bad or mean. A person is miserable if in misery or in a state either of extreme or acute distress of body or mind ([Plato] would forbid any novelist to represent a good man as ever miserable—Ellis) (Gideon has been absolutely miserable, and gone about like a man half stunned, ever since it happened—Rose Macaulay) or of pitiable poverty or degradation (a miserable creature of a crazed aspect . . . shattered and made drunk by horror—Dickens) A thing is miserable when it is exceedingly mean or paltry, and provocative only of misery in the person affected or of strong distress or dislike in the observer (a miserable cold) (a miserable dinner) (the squalor of mean and miserable streets—Binyon) A person is wretched who is extremely unhappy or abjectly despondent (as from want, grief, oppression, affliction, or anxiety); a thing that relates closely to the happiness of a person is wretched if it produces such dejection or mental suffering (O cruel death! To those you are more kind than to the wretched mortals left behind—Waller) (it was her unhappy lot to be made more wretched by the only affection which she could not suspect—Conrad) (she's "poor Ellen" certainly, because she had the bad luck to make a wretched marriage—Wharton) A thing, in general, is wretched if it is extremely or deplorably bad (a wretched French cabaret, smelling vilely—Meredith) (wretched crops) (it was the wretched truth, and not something I had conjured out of imagination—Deasy)

Ana forlorn, hopeless, despairing, *despondent: pitiable, piteous, *pitiful: doleful, dolorous, *melancholy Ant comfortable

miserly penurious, parsimonious, niggardly, tight, tight-fisted, *stingy, close, closefisted, cheeseparing, penny-pinching Ana avaricious, greedy, *covetous, grasping: *mean, sordid, abject, ignoble

Con bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, munificent, *liberal, generous: benevolent, *charitable, altruistic misery *distress, suffering, agony, dolor, passion Ana adversity, *misfortune: affliction, visitation, *trial, tribulation: melancholy, dejection, *sadness, depression Ant felicity, blessedness —Con *happiness, beatitude, bliss: comfort, ease, repose (see REST) misfortune, mischance, adversity, mishap are comparable when they denote bad luck or adverse fortune or an instance of this. Misfortune is both the most common and the most general term; it is applicable equally to the incident or conjunction of events that is the cause of an unhappy change of fortune (by misfortune he lost his job) or the ensuing state of distress (a crass and stupid person who had fallen through luck into flowing prosperity. His every good fortune spattered others with misfortune—Malamud) and it may denote a particular unfortunate incident (they could by cooperation brave misfortunes and supplement each other's efforts in bettering the lot of the common man—Middle East Jour.) Mischance rarely applies to a state of distress but is otherwise very close to misfortune from which it differs chiefly in greater objectivity. While sometimes used to imply grave affliction or even death it is especially appropriate when the situation involves no more than slight inconvenience or minor annoyance (I threw a stone and hit a duck in the yard by mischance—Yeats) (they proceeded on their journey without any mischance—Austen) Adversity, on the other hand, denotes the state or the instance but not the cause; it is distinctly the strongest of these words and in its typical use implies a state of grave and persistent misfortune (a wretched soul, bruised with adversity—Shak.) (what fairy palaces we may build of beautiful thought—proof against all adversity—Ruskin) In application to the instance adversity is normally used in the plural (the many misfortunes and adversities Bolivia has suffered have brought this national spirit to a high pitch—Americas) Mishap, (see also ACCIDENT) like mischance, commonly implies triviality (directed the concert without any of the mishaps expected of a twenty-year-old's performance—Current Biog.)

Ana *disaster, calamity, catastrophe, cataclysm: *accident, casualty: *trial, tribulation, cross, affliction, visitation

Ant happiness: prosperity — Con felicity, bliss, blessedness, beatitude (see HAPPINESS): comfort, ease (see REST): *victory, triumph

misgiving foreboding, presentiment, *apprehension

Ana mistrust, distrust (see under DISTRUST vb): suspicion, doubt, skepticism, *uncertainty: *fear, alarm, dread, fright mishap 1 *misfortune, mischance, adversity

2 *accident, casualty

Ana *misfortune, mischance: *disaster, calamity: *chance, fortune, hap, hazard mislay *misplace mislead delude, beguile, *deceive, betray, double-cross Ana entice, inveigle, *lure, tempt, seduce: *dupe, gull, hoodwink, hoax, bamboozle misleading, deceptive, delusive, delusory all mean having an appearance or character that leads one astray or into error. Misleading is the general term applicable to something which, intentionally or otherwise, leads one away from the right course or direction in thought or action and, therefore, into confusion or error (the bare statement that "art is useless" is so vague as to be really meaningless, if not inaccurate and misleading—Ellis) (it is not necessary to prove an injury to a competitor to stop misleading advertising; it may be stopped merely because it is unfair and deceptive—Fisk & Snapp) Deceptive applies chiefly to things that by their aspect or appearance give a false impression; the term need not imply the intention to deceive (deceptive solemnity) (a deceptive air of innocence) (while the communication was deceptive and so intended, it was not technically mendacious—S.H. Adams) Delusive and delusory, though otherwise similar to deceptive, carry a strong implication of befooling or cheating as well as misleading (delusive hopes) (delusory promises) (it is important for this Court to avoid extracting from the very general language of the Fourteenth Amendment a system of delusive exactness—Justice Holmes) (arguments for universal selfishness seemed to fall short of complete proof and some of them appeared quite delusive and logically fallacious—Garvin) (dangerously delusory habits of relying on industrial potential per se as a bulwark in war—C. B. Marshall) Ana fallacious, casuistical, sophistical (see under FALLACY): *false, wrong: confounding, bewildering, distracting, perplexing, puzzling (see PUZZLE vb)

misogynic misanthropic, pessimistic, *cynical

Con benevolent, *charitable, altruistic misplace, mislay both mean to put in the wrong place and both in their basic use imply that the thing in question is as unavailable as if lost though firmly believed to be still in one's possession. Misplace basically implies a putting of a thing in another than its proper or customary location (misplace a book) (invoices continually being forgot or misplaced—Terry Southern) but it more often suggests a setting or fixing of something where it should not be (my confidence in him was misplaced) (she is suffering from misplaced affections) (the globe and scepter in such hands misplaced—Cowper) Mislay usually implies a misplacing in the basic sense but stresses a forgetfulness of the place in which the thing has been put; it therefore often means to lose through misplacing (misaid her glasses in the excitement over the fire) (mislay an umbrella) In its extended use it differs little from lose (almost inevitably some of the literary qualities of Darkness at Noon have been misaid in the process of bringing it to the stage—J.M. Brown)

Ana displace (see REPLACE): derange, disarrange, *disorder

misrepresent, falsify, belie, garble mean to present or represent something in a manner that is contrary to the truth. Misrepresent usually implies an intent to represent or portray falsely, and therefore may take as its subject not only a person or his utterance but also such things as an organization, a political platform, or a cartoon; it often carries a suggestion of deliberate lying, but it may suggest bias or prejudice or a desire to do injustice (misrepresent a candidate's statement) (misrepresent the value of an article) (the account misrepresents not only his actions but his motives) Falsify implies a perversion of the truth, either by deliberately altering the facts in whole or in part (falsify bookkeeping records) (falsified her account of the accident) or by giving something an appearance that does not accord with the truth or reality (falsify the meaning of a document by an incorrect translation) (good breeding has made the tongue falsify the heart—Steele) (a low-priced sunglass lens said to be completely effective without falsifying the colors seen through it—Newsweek) Belie implies an impression given that contradicts or is at variance with the truth or the facts; it usually takes as its subject an appearance, a manner, or a form of speech, and lacks the implication of intent that is usually present in the preceding words (his confident words were belied by his anxious look) (a brusque manner that belies a real kindness of heart) (you are an Englishman . . . unless your physiognomy belies you—Kingsley) Garble implies a mutilation or distortion of statements, testimony, evidence, or messages that need not be deliberate but that creates a wrong impression of the original and frequently gravely alters its tone or implications (the newspapers have sadly garbled the account of his speech) (by the time the story had passed from mouth to mouth until it reached him again, it was so garbled that its original form was barely recognizable) (the manufacture and dissemination of propaganda literature, for the purpose of rousing the passions of the people by garbled statements—Inge)

Ana *disguise, dissemble, cloak, mask, camouflage: simulate, counterfeit, feign (see ASSUME): *lie, prevaricate, equivocate, palter

misrepresentation *lie, falsehood, untruth, fib, story Ana dishonesty, deceitfulness, mendaciousness or mendacity (see corresponding adjectives at DISHONEST): sophistication, doctoring, loading, weighting, adulteration (see corresponding verbs at ADULTERATE): sophistry, casuistry (see FALLACY) missive *letter, epistle, note, message, dispatch, report, memorandum mist n *haze, fog, smog mistake vb Mistake, confuse, confound are comparable when they mean to mix up things, typically by taking one thing for another. One mistakes one thing for another when by an error of perception or of thought or as a result of a predisposition or a bias one fails to recognize the thing or to comprehend its real nature and identifies it with something not itself or with something of another nature (pointed out that Johnson's a's and o's have been mistaken one for the other—Sherbo) (the tendency of the rest of us to mistake gush for vigor and substitute rhetoric for imagination—Day Lewis) One confuses one thing with another when one fails to distinguish two things that have similarities or common characteristics or to observe their lines of demarcation (very possibly some of the cases confuse the principles that govern jurisdiction with those that govern merits—Justice Holmes) (far too intellectually keen to confuse moral problems with purely aesthetic problems—Ellis) One confounds things, or one thing with another, when one mixes them up so hopelessly that one cannot detect their differences or distinctions. Confound usually carries a stronger connotation of mental bewilderment or of a muddled mind than the preceding words and accordingly is often preferred when the differences are more or less obvious to a clear-headed or intelligent person <Courage must not be confounded with brutality. Brutality is pleasure in forcing one's will upon other people; courage is indifference to personal misfortunes—Russell> <the temptation to confound accumulated knowledge and experience with intrinsic progress is almost irresistible—Inge>

Ana addle, muddle, *confuse

Ant recognize mistake n *error, slip, lapse, blunder, faux pas, bull, howler, boner

Ana confusion, confounding, mistaking (see corresponding verbs at MISTAKE): inadvertence (see corresponding adjective at CARELESS): neglecting or neglect, omitting or omission, disregarding, slighting or slight (see corresponding verbs at NEGLECT)

mistreat maltreat, ill-treat, misuse, *abuse, outrage

Ana see those at ILL-TREAT mistrust n 1 suspicion, skepticism, doubt, *uncertainty, dubiety, dubiousity

Ana misgiving, presentiment, foreboding, *apprehension

Ant trust: assurance —Con confidence, faith, reliance, dependence (see TRUST): *certainty, certitude, conviction 2 distrust (see under DISTRUST vb)

mistrust vb *distrust

Ana apprehend, anticipate, *foresee: alarm, *frighten, scare: appall, *dismay

Con *rely, trust, depend: confide, entrust, relegate, *commit misuse vb *abuse, mistreat, maltreat, ill-treat, outrage Ana hurt, *injure, harm, damage, impair, mar, spoil: pervert, *debase, corrupt

Ant respect —Con esteem, regard (see under REGARD n): cherish, treasure, prize, *appreciate mite bit, *particle, smidgen, whit, atom, iota, jot, tittle mitigate allay, *relieve, alleviate, lighten, assuage

Ana temper, *moderate: abate, reduce, lessen, diminish, *decrease: *palliate, extenuate

Ant intensify —Con aggravate, heighten, enhance (see INTENSIFY): *increase, augment mix, mingle, commingle, blend, merge, coalesce, amalgamate, fuse denote to combine or become combined with resulting diffusion or interpenetration of particles, parts, or elements. Mix, the most comprehensive of these terms, need not imply loss of identities, but even when the elements are distinguishable it suggests a homogeneous character in the product <mix salt and pepper> <mix colors for painting> <oil and water do not mix> <told in a style that mixes erudition and bawdiness—Sat. Review> <manual and intellectual labor seldom mix well—Canby> So far as they differ, mingle, rather than mix, implies that the constituent elements are distinguished in the product <the evil . . . strangely mingled with the good—Babbitt> <mingling, as no other school of dramatists has done, the oratorical, the conversational, the elaborate and the simple—T. S. Eliot> <he recognized in her look of mingled anxiety and pleasure the suspense of someone who introduces one part of life into another—Cheever> Commingle may suggest a more intimate and often a harmonious union <commingled with the gloom of imminent war, the shadow of his loss drew like eclipse, darkening the world—Tennyson> <the commingling in him of earthiness and sophistication—Pick> Blend may be the equivalent of mix or mingle  but usually it implies a mixing of harmonious or compatible things, a union so intimate as to obscure the individuality of the component parts and a sharing of their qualities by the resultant product <blended teas> <offshore where sea and skyline blend in rain—Kipling> <the faltering accents of the supplicant, blending the cadences of the liturgy with those of perplexed brooding thought—Edmund Wilson> Merge still more distinctly implies the loss in the whole of the constituent elements or the complete absorption of one element in another <merge the private in the general good> <Archer often wondered how, after forty years of the closest conjugality, two such merged identities ever separated themselves enough for anything as controversial as a talking-over—Wharton> <all these people did not, however, merge anonymously into some homogeneous mass—Handlin> Coalesce suggests a natural affinity for each other in the things merging and a resulting organic unity <all these descriptive details do not coalesce for us into the distinct image of a living woman—Babbitt> <the vernaculars of the various groups began to coalesce into one recognized form of language somewhat distinct from the English of the mother country—Mathews>

Amalgamate implies a tendency to merge or draw together largely as a result of contact or association and sometimes suggests effective or harmonious union more than loss of identity <the Indian race . . . formed no part of the colonial communities, and never amalgamated with them—Taney> <the “by-pass” engine tries to amalgamate the speed and the height characteristics of the pure jet with the fuel economy of the jet-prop—Charles Gardner> Fuse stresses even more than blend and merge the loss of identity of each of the component elements, and, more than coalesce, the indissolubility of their union. It often implies a powerful cause which operates like heat melting and bringing into one mass disparate substances <the Scotch nation, nobles and commons, ministers and people, wonderfully fused together by fiery enthusiasm—Goldwin Smith> <truth at white heat—the truth of terror and mystery and baleful beauty, fused into one flaming impression—Lowes>

Ana *join, combine, unite, conjoin

Con *separate, part, divide, sever, sunder

mixture, admixture, blend, compound, composite, amalgam denote a product formed by the combination of two or more things. Mixture is the most inclusive and most widely applicable term; it has, however, many specific applications; thus, a fabric made by interweaving yarns of different colors is a mixture; a pipe tobacco in which several varieties are combined to give a particular flavor or quality is a smoking mixture. The word often implies miscellaneousness <“society” in a small town is very much of a mixture> Admixture adds to mixture the suggestion of the alien character of one or more of the constituent elements <the admixture of coffee with roasted and ground cereals or other inert adulterants—Encyc. Americana> Blend, on the contrary, adds to mixture the implication of thorough mingling of usually similar or congruous elements or ingredients. Like admixture, it implies that the product is not pure or simple but, unlike it, it usually suggests harmony or complete integration  <unorthodox was the blend of executive responsibility, legislative power and financial control—Buchan> Blend is applied in commerce to mixed whiskeys, teas, coffees, or tobaccos to indicate that a new product has been formed that combines the flavors of several varieties of the basic thing and that the products contain no other substance than such varieties. Compound usually implies the union of two or more distinguishable or analyzable parts, elements, or ingredients <it was not fear, it was not ardor,—it was a com- pound of both—Scott > (rare compound of oddity, frolic, and fun—Goldsmith) In its technical senses compound is definitely restricted in application. In chemistry a compound is a distinct substance formed by a union of two or more elements or radicals in definite proportions by weight <water is a compound of oxygen and hydrogen> As applied to words, a compound is a word or group of word elements which is formed of recognizable parts but has a distinct sense often not inferable from the meanings of its component parts. A compound may be written solid (as blackboard), hyphenated (as long-distance), or open (as all right). Composite is often interchangeable with compound in its general sense, but there is a tendency to prefer composite when the constituent parts are artificially or fortuitously combined (the American people is a composite of many races) <the opinions of America are formed from the composite of the voices of America, official and unofficial, true and false—A. E. Stevenson> An amalgam is basically an alloy made by adding mercury to a metal; the term is particularly applicable to such alloys that are intended for use in dental restoration, usually contain several metals in addition to mercury, and set into a firm mass after a relatively brief period of time. In its extended use amalgam may draw on the notion of complexity of mixture <one's judgment is inevitably an amalgam of impressions of the work and impressions of the man—T. S. Eliot> or it may stress the hardening into final form

Ana joining, combining, uniting (see JOIN) moan n groan, sigh, sob (see under SIGH vb)

Ana crying or cry, wailing or wail (see CRY); lamenting or lament, bemoaning, bewailing (see DEPLORE)

moan vb groan, *sigh, sob

Ana mourn, *grieve, sorrow: bemoan, bewail, lament, *deplete mob n *crowd, throng, press, crush, rout, horde

Ana *multitude, army, host, legion

mobile *movable, motive

Ana fluid, *liquid: *changeable, changeful, protean, variable: *inconstant, unstable, mercurial, fickle, capricious

Ant immobile

mock vb 1 taunt, deride, *ridicule, twit, rally

Ana flout, *scoff, jeer, gird, gibe: caricature, parody, travesty, burlesque (see under CARICATURE n)

2 *copy, imitate, mimic, ape

Ana counterfeit, feign, affect, simulate, *assume mode n 1 *state, condition, situation, posture, status 2 *method, manner, way, fashion, system

Ana trend, drift, *tendency, tenor: procedure, *process mode n *fashion, style, vogue, fad, rage, craze, dernier cri, cry

model n Model, example, pattern, exemplar, ideal, standard, beau ideal, mirror are comparable when they denote something set or held before one for guidance or imitation in conduct or endeavor. Model applies to a person or thing set before one for imitation by oneself or another; the term may suggest nothing more <art students painting the human figure from a model>  <served as model for most of the State capitols built in the ensuing twenty-five years—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.> Often the term applies to a person or thing that is eminently or even preeminently worthy of imitation <there is no poet in any tongue . . . who stands so firmly as a model for all poets—T. S. Eliot>

<the Saint whose name is given to a child serves as . . . an ideal model to be imitated—Nurnberg & Rosenblum> Example applies chiefly to a person (or his acts or conduct) that is or may be imitated by others; the term usually implies that the person, or the act, or the conduct, for some good reason is one that is likely to be imitated, whether good or bad, right or wrong  <she always followed the example of her mother in her social behavior> <one of the immortal examples of a true man in a world of bounders, cowards, and squeaking specters—Sullivan> Sometimes, however, example applies to what is not intended to be imitated, but rather to serve as a warning <let it profit thee to have heard, by terrible example, the reward of disobedience—Milton> Example is also used in a highly abstract sense in antithesis to precept, then implying the setting of an example, usually but not necessarily a good example <the mistake of thinking that all can be done by precept, when . . . example is no less potent a force—Benson> Pattern applies either to the divine archetype of a thing or to a carefully worked out design or plan (as an architect's drawing) to be followed in fashioning a thing <according to an heavenly pattern . . . which He had fashioned in his wise foresight, He man did make—Spenser> <almost all the common things we use now . . . are made by machinery, and are copies of an original pattern—Jevons> In a more general sense (see also FIGURE 3) pattern applies to what merits or seems to merit imitation; it often differs from model in suggesting a more clearly worked out design, or a fuller presentation of details, or in connoting fixity or compelling power  <the ancient pattern of life had been woven continuously for so many centuries that even illiterate farmers knew how to be courtly and dignified—Blofeld> Exemplar often comes closer to pattern than to example because it usually applies to something set before one as worthy of imitation and, therefore, inherently good <Christ is the . . . exemplar that all preachers ought to follow—Latimer> <dear . . . as an exemplar of goodness, probity, and pure life—Thackeray> Sometimes, however, exemplar is specifically applied to a person or thing that exhibits a quality, or sums up all the characteristics that distinguish a type, whether that quality or type be in itself good or bad <Sisyphus, the legendary exemplar of cunning—Thirlwall> <Stendhal's Julian Sorel . . . this exemplar of ruthless individualism—Huxley> Ideal may specifically imply existence not in the actual world but in the mind and therefore may suggest a remoteness from reality and especially perfection exceeding what is possible in reality <traditions grew up around his name, to be interpreted according to the hearers' own ideals of personality and education—D. E. Smith> But ideal also may apply to a real person or thing that is held before one as embodying or representing the perfection one hopes to realize or attain <the boy found his ideal in his father> <[Livia] embodied in her life the ideal of the Roman matron—Buchan> Frequently ideal is almost indistinguishable from standard when it applies not to a person or object that serves as a pattern or exemplar, but to something (as a rule, a practice, an aim, or an established level of excellence) by which one seeks to maintain a high quality in a product or of performance <the ideal of general cultivation has been one of the standards in education—Eliot> <[accuracy] is still a noble and inspiring ideal. It is the morality of the intellect: it prescribes what it ought to strive for—Ballard> <each generation . . . has its own ideals and its own standards of judgment—Crothers> But standard (see also STANDARD 2) is interchangeable with ideal only when it applies to what is the test of perfection or of human perfection (the very art . . . incommensurable with any standard except that of pure beauty—I refer of course to the art of music—Dickinson) (with the spread of impressionism literature has lost standards and discipline, and at the same time virility and seriousness—Babbitt) Beau ideal applies to one and especially a person felt to be a fit model or ideal because of high excellence (the beau ideal of all that was romantic, exquisite, and passionate—Harrison Smith) Mirror applies to something so exemplary of its kind that it may serve as a model (no modern building could act as a better mirror of functional needs . . . than this seventeenth-century Spanish mission—Liturgical Arts) Ana criterion, touchstone, gauge, *standard moderate adj 1 Moderate, temperate are often used interchangeably to denote not excessive in degree, amount, or intensity (a moderate allowance) (temperate heat) When contrasted moderate often connotes absence or avoidance of excess and is opposed to excessive and immoderate, while temperate connotes deliberate restraint or restriction and is opposed to intemperate and inordinate; thus, “a moderate drinker” suggests free but far from excessive indulgence in intoxicants, and “a temperate drinker” suggests restrained and cautious indulgence; “moderate enthusiasm” suggests lukewarmness, “temperate enthusiasm” suggests keeping a hold over one’s exhibition of feeling; one’s anger may be far from moderate, yet one’s reply may be temperate. Especially in technical language moderate and temperate often denote falling or staying within a range midway between extremes or designate a point (as in a scale) characterized neither by excess nor by deficiency of something understood. When so used they are not usually interchangeable, for custom or terminology has determined the selection (moderate temperature) (a moderate breeze) (a temperate climate) (a temperate zone) In this sense both moderate and temperate have two antonyms, one on the side of deficiency and the other on the side of excess. These antonyms are usually specific and vary according to the application, for example: light and strong (of breezes); arctic and torrid (of climate); abstemious and gluttonous (of eating); mild and violent (of something having force and intensity).

Ana ordinary, *common, familiar: gentle, mild, bland, *soft: *sparing, economical

Ant immoderate —Con *excessive, extreme, inordinate

2 *medium, middling, mediocre, second-rate, average, fair, indifferent

Ana decent, *decorous, proper: *steady, even, equable, constant moderate vb Moderate, qualify, temper are comparable when they mean to modify something so as to avoid an extreme or to keep within due bounds. Moderate stresses reduction of what is excessive, but it does not necessarily imply finding the happy mean (the sun at midday moderates the cold) (you must moderate your demands if you wish to be listened to) (“Moderate your language, old man,” I said; “remember that you are addressing a superior”—Hudson) (moderating his big voice to the dimensions of the room—Clifton Daniel) Qualify emphasizes restriction or more precise definition that brings a thing closer to the truth or facts or that makes it less general, inclusive, or sweeping or that gives it a clearly defined quality or character of its own (it is time to qualify the over simple account I have given of the artist’s process of creation—Alexander) (almost every important point must be qualified with adverbs and adjectives expressing uncertainty, approximation, tentativeness—Urey) Temper strongly implies accommodation to the needs or requirements of someone or something; it need not suggest moderation or qualification, but it usually implies the addition of a counterbalancing or mitigating thing (God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb—Old Proverb) (denunciation must be firm, tempered with sadness over the falling from grace—MacInnes) (temper justice with mercy)

Ana abate, reduce, lessen, diminish, *decrease: mitigate, alleviate, lighten, *relieve: slow, slacken (see DELAY) Con *intensify, aggravate, heighten, enhance: augment, *increase

modern adj 1 Modern, recent, late, though not close synonyms, are subject to confusion when they are used to date things or events which have taken place, come into existence, or developed in times close to the present. Modern (see also NEW) is the term of widest range of meaning; it may date anything that is not medieval or ancient (the ancient languages have now been superseded by the modern languages in popular favor in high schools and colleges) (the date of the discovery of America, 1492, is often used arbitrarily as the beginning of modern history) (the weed-caught wrecks of ancient galleys, medieval ships and modern dreadnaughts—Beebe) or anything that bears the marks of a period nearer in time than another (modern surgical techniques) (the modern novel) (the ornate mansions of a bygone era mingle with more modern concepts of architecture—N. Y. Times) or less clearly to anything that is new, fresh, or up-to-date (she is very modern in her clothes and in her manners) (we all have to remember that what is modern today and up-to-date, what is efficient and practical, becomes obsolete and outworn tomorrow—Roosevelt) In all these uses a change or contrast in character or quality is to some extent implied by the term modern. Recent is usually without such implication and may simply indicate a date that approximates that of the immediate past, though the time to which this term, too, refers depends upon the thing that is qualified; thus, “recent geological ages” designates those ages immediately preceding the present geological age, although, since each age may represent millions of years, recent is obviously used relatively; “Shakespeare is a more recent author than Chaucer” implies only a comparative status, for Shakespeare was born in the sixteenth century and Chaucer in the fourteenth; “we have all the recent books” implies an absolute relation to a time that may be described as the immediate past (recent news) (recent rains) (a recent purchase) (a recent issue of a magazine) Late (see also TARDY, DEAD) implies a series or succession of which the person or thing so described is the most recent in time (the late war) (the servant’s late master testified as to his honesty) (moose which of late years have been showing up around Stewartstown—Holbrook) Sometimes the word carries an implication that is less definite and equivalent to “not long ago holding the position of or serving as” (the firm’s new director of research was the late professor of applied chemistry at the University)

2 modernistic, *new, novel, new-fashioned, newfangled, original, fresh

Ana *contemporary, contemporaneous, coincident, concomitant, concurrent: *prevailing, current, prevalent Ant antique: ancient modernistic *new, new-fashioned, newfangled, novel, modern, original, fresh

Ant antiquated

modest 1 *humble, meek, lowly

Ana retiring, withdrawing (see GO): *moderate, temperate

Ant ambitious —Con *showy, pretentious, ostentatious: arrogant, haughty, *proud, overbearing: *shameless, brazen, barefaced, impudent

2 *shy, bashful, diffident, coy

Ana reserved, reticent, *silent: shrinking, recoiling (see RECOIL): nice, seemly, proper (see DECOROUS)

3 decent, *chaste, pure

Ana *moral, virtuous: *decorous, proper, seemly, decent

Ant immodest —Con indecent, indelicate, *indecorous, unseemly, improper modification change, alteration, variation (see under CHANGE vb)

Ana transformation, metamorphosis, conversion, transmogrification (see under TRANSFORM): qualification, tempering (see corresponding verbs at MODERATE)

modify *change, alter, vary

Ana temper, *moderate, qualify: *transform, convert, metamorphose, transmogrify modish *stylish, fashionable, smart, chic, dashing

Ant antiquated

moist *wet, damp, humid, dank

Con *dry, arid molecule atom, *particle, corpuscle mollify appease, placate, *pacify, propitiate, conciliate

Ana *relieve, allay, mitigate, lighten: *moderate, temper, qualify: abate, lessen, reduce, *decrease

Ant exasperate

mollycoddle vb humor, pamper, *indulge, spoil, baby molt *discard, cast, shed, slough, scrap, junk moment 1 *instant, minute, second, flash, jiffy, twinkling, split second

2 *importance, consequence, significance, import, weight

Ana value, *worth: advantage, profit, avail, *use momentary *transient, transitory, passing, ephemeral, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent, short-lived

Ant agelong

momentum impetus, *speed, velocity, pace, headway monastery *cloister, convent, nunnery, abbey, priory monetary *financial, pecuniary, fiscal money n Money, cash, currency, legal tender, specie, coin, coinage are comparable when they mean pieces of stamped metal or their equivalents issued by a government, or by an authority recognized by the government, to serve as a medium of exchange in the country or section under the control of that government. Money applies to both coined gold, silver, copper, or other metal issued as a medium of exchange and to certificates or notes, often called specifically paper money, that sometimes promise payment in metal money, are issued by a government or governmentally recognized authority (as a bank), and pass like coined metal as a medium of exchange. Cash applies to money, sometimes specifically called ready money, actually in hand or immediate possession of an individual or a business or institution (the firm's supply of cash was very low because the larger part of the day's accumulation had just been deposited in the bank) Currency may apply to all of the money in circulation, as distinguished from that which is not in circulation for one reason or another (the first panacea for a mismanaged nation is inflation of the currency—Hemingway) but it may also apply to paper money as distinguished from coined metal. Legal tender applies specifically to the type of money which the law authorizes a debtor to offer and requires a creditor to receive as payment of money obligations and may or may not at any given time include all lawful money of a particular jurisdiction. Specie, coin (only in a collective sense), and coinage apply only to minted or coined money; they therefore imply an opposition to all forms of paper money (as treasury notes and bank notes) (payments were demanded in specie, or in the coin of the realm) (we are far more concerned today with his debasement of the coinage—Shaw)

monk *religious, friar, nun

Ana *recluse, hermit, eremite, anchorite, cenobite monkeyshine n *prank, caper, antic, dido monograph treatise, disquisition, dissertation, thesis, *discourse

Ana article, paper, *essay

monopolize, engross, absorb, consume mean to take up completely. Monopolize, the general term, means to possess or control exclusively (monopolize the year's crop of cotton) (a child should not be allowed to monopolize the attention of his family) (every railroad monopolizes, in a popular sense, the trade of some area—Justice Holmes) (the party in power at Washington can organize the two houses of the Congress . . . but it cannot monopolize the business of lawmaking—Holcombe) (never attempted to monopolize or even dominate the discussion—J. G. Gray) Occasionally engross implies getting a physical control of (as by purchase of the available supply) (the process of engrossing the land which attended the ascent to power of the aristocracy—Becker) and this notion may persist in extended use (the sun engrossed the east, the day controlled the world—Emily Dickinson) but more often the verb takes an immaterial object and implies a preoccupying (political theory has long engrossed the Indian mind—Poleman) (the works manager who . . . is engrossed chiefly with the engineering problem of securing maximum output with minimum input—Hurff) Absorb is frequently interchangeable with engross, but it is less often predicated of persons as conscious agents and more often of things that have an inherent capacity for monopolization (manual occupations do not engage the mind sufficiently But composition, especially of verse, absorbs it wholly—Cowper) (it is arithmetically impossible for every child to absorb the whole time of an adult tutor—Russell) Consume comes into comparison with engross and absorb chiefly in an extended sense of each, implying monopolization of one's time, attention, or interest (Flané is determined that men and their convictions shall be given a true and proper evaluation. He is consumed with the idea of justice—Boyle) (the consuming anxiety of the ride still held him though the reason for it was gone—Wheelwright) Ana possess, own, *have, hold; utilize, *use, employ; control, manage (see CONDUCT vb)

monopoly, corner, pool, syndicate, trust, cartel are comparable rather than synonymous terms when they apply to a means of controlling prices. Monopoly denotes the exclusive control of a service (as telephone or telegraph service) or traffic (as transportation of goods and passengers by railroad) or of a commodity (as wheat or petroleum) in a given market. Monopoly may imply exclusive control created by the state (as by franchise or patent or copyright). More frequently, however, the term is used to imply exclusive power to buy or sell a commodity or service in a given market, especially as a result of ownership or control of the sources of supply (as mines) or of the available stock of a commodity (in the reign of Edward III [German traders] had a practical monopoly of the carrying trade—Pattison) In extended use monopoly also denotes the group or organization having such control (it might be that when a combination reached a certain size it might have attributed to it more of the character of a monopoly merely by virtue of its size than would be attributed to a smaller one—Justice Holmes) A temporary or local monopoly (as of a particular security on a stock exchange or of a particular commodity on a produce exchange) constitutes a corner, so called because it puts all those who are determined to buy into a corner, or position where they must pay the price asked <maintained his corner on wheat for three days> Pool in this relation applies primarily to a combination of property, or of interests of different persons or companies, by means of which a more or less permanent control or monopoly is acquired. Distinctively, however, pool implies a joint undertaking or end which cannot be attained unless the market is managed either by manipulating prices (as of a commodity or security) or by destroying the effects of competition (as through agreements concerning prices or rates, regulation of outputs, or division of earnings of each organization concerned). Syndicate is applied chiefly to a group of individuals, firms, or corporations (as banking houses) which organize for a limited time to accomplish a given purpose or more specifically such a group that is organized to market an issue of a security, makes its profit from the difference between the agreed-upon sum advanced to the issuing corporation for the securities and the fixed sale price at which they are marketed, assumes responsibility for absorbing any surplus securities not marketed, and dissolves when the marketing period is completed. Outside of the field of finance, the use of the term is extended in its application to any combination (as of newspapers, business concerns, or criminals) interested in a common project or enterprise, and often implies relation to a monopoly. Trust specifically applies to a merger in which stockholders in the merged corporations exchange their stock for trust certificates in the new corporation and surrender their rights to trustees who operate the combined corporations, but trust is often extended to any combination of business entities, especially when felt to represent a threat to healthy competition. Cartel implies an international combination for controlling production and sale of a product or group of products.

monotonous dreary, pedestrian, humdrum, *dull, stodgy Ana wearisome, boring, *irksome, tedious, tiresome Con varying, changing (see CHANGE vb): fresh, novel, *new: *interesting, absorbing, engrossing monstrous 1 Monstrous, prodigious, tremendous, stupendous, monumental are comparable especially in their extended more or less hyperbolic senses in which they mean astonishingly impressive. Monstrous commonly applies to something abnormal, usually in actual or relative size, but often also in shape or character; the term frequently carries suggestions of deformity, extreme ugliness, or fabulousness <the imagination turbid with monstrous fancies and misshapen dreams—Wilde> <he seemed of monstrous bulk and significance—G. D. Brown> <the monstrous way of living that mankind had made for itself out of the industrial revolution—Connolly> Prodigious usually implies a marvelousness that exceeds belief; it sometimes applies to something entirely out of proportion to what is the previous or usual best, greatest, or largest <the prodigious demand for steel in the First World War> <men have always revered prodigious inborn gifts, and always will—Eliot>  Tremendous may come closer to awe-inspiring or terrifying in its immensity than to gigantic or enormous, its common denotations in more literal use <must have made the animal in life look very much like a crocodile and the bite must have been tremendous—Swinton> <how shall we compare the cramped and limited vision of mankind in old time with the tremendous vistas opened out to us by modern science—Inge> <the spell and tremendous incantation of the thought of death—L. P. Smith>

<[he] too, had his appointed or acquired limits. He could never be tremendous—Montague> Stupendous implies the power to stun or astound; it describes something that because of its size, its numbers, its complexity, or its greatness exceeds one's power to describe or explain <all are but parts of one stupendous whole, whose body Nature is, and God the soul—Pope>  Monumental in its extended sense (see also MASSIVE) applies to something as conspicuously impressive or as massively framed or constructed as such a monument as a great cathedral or an impressive memorial <his magnum opus . . . the five monumental volumes of his history of the writer in America—Trilling> <the Mexican peon has a monumental reserve beside which the Englishman becomes an idle chatterer—Woodcock>

Ana enormous, immense, *huge, vast, colossal, mammoth, gigantic

2 *outrageous, heinous, atrocious

Ana *flagrant, glaring, gross, rank: *ominous, portentous, fateful: flagitious, nefarious, infamous (see VICIOUS) monument *document, record, archive monumental 1 *monstrous, prodigious, tremendous, stupendous

Ana colossal, gigantic, enormous, mammoth (see HUGE): impressive, *moving

2 *massive, massy, bulky, substantial

Ana imposing, stately, majestic, august, magnificent, *grand mood, humor, temper, vein mean a temporary state or frame of mind in which one emotion or desire or one set of emotions gains the ascendancy. Mood is the comprehensive term for any such frame of mind, regardless of its particular cause, its particular character, its effect on others, or its length of existence <he indulged his moods. If he were surly, he did not bother to hide it—Mailer> Mood carries a stronger implication of pervasiveness and of compelling power than the other terms; also, it may refer not only to the frame of mind <feel in a mood to work>  but to its expression in a literary or artistic work <the language, the stresses, the very structure of the sentences are imposed upon the writer by the special mood of the piece—Cather> or to what is seen or heard in such a way as to evoke a mood or to harmonize with one's mood <the mood of the landscape, achieved by the beauty of the evening light—Kenneth Clark> <watching land and water, rocks and trees, and their ever-changing hues and moods—Semon> Humor (see also WIT 2) applies chiefly to a mood which is the result of one's peculiar temperament or of one's physical or mental condition at the moment; it may be preferable to mood when the idea of capriciousness or of whimsicality is to be suggested <I am not in a humor to hear you further. Leave me, please—Hardy> <the women were horrified or admiring, as their humor moved them—Wharton> <victims of nature's cataclysmic humors—Julian Dana> Temper (see also DISPOSITION 2) applies to a mood dominated by a single strong emotion, often specifically that of great anger <“He is in a temper!” “I never knew him so out of patience with them”—Millay> When qualified by an adjective indicating the controlling emotion, temper may apply to any humor that manifests itself in a display of feeling <that meekness has done me more harm than the bitterest temper—Hardy> <she was evidently now in a gay, frolicsome temper—Hudson> Vein (see also TOUCH) is often used in the sense of mood but with a stronger implication of transitoriness and seldom with any suggestion of a temperamental or physical basis <the merry vein you knew me in, is sunk into a turn of reflection—Pope> <the whole is written in a vein of ironic seriousness—Laski>

Ana *disposition, temper, temperament, character, personality, individuality: *soul, spirit: emotion, *feeling, affection

moor vb *secure, anchor, rivet

Ana *tie, bind: attach, *fasten, affix, fix: balance, steady, *stabilize, trim

moral adj Moral, ethical, virtuous, righteous, noble are comparable when they mean conforming to a standard of what is right and good. Moral is the most comprehensive term of the group; in all of its pertinent senses it implies a relationship to character or conduct viewed as good or bad or as right or wrong. Sometimes moral implies relationship to or concern with character or conduct as distinguished especially from intellectual or physical nature <moral goodness may be distinguished from intellectual goodness or spiritual goodness> <the whole tendency of modern thought . . . is to extenuate the responsibility of human nature, not merely on the moral side, but equally on the spiritual side—Mackenzie> <we find ourselves confronted with a most disturbing moral problem . . . those situations, now of such frequent occurrence, in which good means have end results which turn out to be bad—Huxley> Moral also applies to such things as literary works, works of art, and philosophies, or to writers, artists, and philosophers concerned with the determination or teaching of principles of right conduct or good living  <moral essays> <paintings that convey a moral lesson> <tragedy . . . hath been ever held the gravest, moralest, and most profitable of all other poems—Milton> The term also applies to men or communities, to acts, or to conduct in the sense of conforming to the accepted standard of what is right and good, often specifically in sexual conduct, or of conforming to the customs or conventions of a people regarded as binding laws <lead a moral life>  <the moral ideals of the community> <I had a character who was ambitious, yet in his own way, moral, and with such a character one could travel deep into the paradoxes of the time—Mailer> <his nature was purely sensuous, and she strove to make him moral, religious—D. H. Lawrence> Ethical primarily implies a relationship to ethics, the branch of philosophy which deals with moral principles, or more specifically with the principles governing ideal human character and with the ideal ends of human action <an ethical system> <an ethical code> Although ethical is often used interchangeably with moral, it characteristically gives a slightly different impression owing to certain subtle connotations; thus, ethical principles may, according to the context, convey a strong suggestion of principles derived from a certain school of ethics, or of a formulated code behind them, or of an idealistic quality; an action is often described as ethical rather than moral when it accords with what the writer or speaker believes to be a higher or finer standard of morality than the one generally accepted, or when it is in keeping with the code of ethics governing a profession (especially law and medicine); the phrase “an ethical person” often differs from the phrase “a moral person,” in suggesting an assent to ethical principles or an attention to the niceties of ethics or to the ideal ends suggested by a system or code of ethics <meanwhile we hear . . . the ethical instinct of mankind asserting itself with splendid courage and patience—van Dyke> Virtuous implies the possession or manifestation of moral excellence in character; in its most general sense it implies rectitude, justice, integrity, and all other virtues, but in more restrictive use and especially as applied to women, it often means little more than chasteness or perfect fidelity in marriage <poor people . . . whether they be lazy or busy, drunken or sober, virtuous or vicious—Shaw> <her life had been virtuous, her dedication to innocence had been unswerving—Cheever>  Righteous differs from virtuous chiefly in its stronger implication of freedom from guilt or blame; as applied to persons, it often implies justification, especially worthiness of salvation in the theological sense <I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance—Mk 2:17> <what but thy malice moved thee to mischief of righteous Job—Milton> As applied to acts, conduct, and even displays of passion, it usually implies justifiability and often consciousness of rectitude <righteous indignation> But righteous is the one of these words that is freely used in a worsened sense to imply an invalid and sanctimonious assumption of the appearance of rectitude <left most of the work to his assistants . . . and when he found that they were doing as they pleased, he was not righteous nor rebuking—Sinclair Lewis> <meets the resultant gossip, and the ruin of Lily's reputation, with a righteous indifference to either its unfairness or his share in it—Harper's Bazaar> Noble (see also GRAND) applies to persons, their acts, utterances, careers, or lives, and implies the possession and exhibition of a conspicuously high character. Often the word carries no other clear implications and seems little more than a term of high praise implying moral or ethical eminence <that noble passion for human rights and civil liberties possessed by . . . judicial libertarians—Gressman>  At other times the term suggests not only moral eminence but the absence of all taint of any such petty or dubious thing as self-seeking, self-interest, or concern for the world's standards; it then often suggests independence, or magnanimity, or high courage, or some other outstanding moral excellence <this was the noblest Roman of them all. All the conspirators, save only he, did that they did in envy of great Caesar; he only, in a general honest thought and common good to all—Shak.> <the disinterested search for truth is certainly one of the highest and noblest careers that a man can choose—Inge> Ana right, *good: *upright, honest, just, honorable, scrupulous, conscientious: *chaste, pure, modest, decent: ideal, *abstract morale, discipline, esprit de corps although not always close synonyms, are comparable when they mean a condition or spirit which holds together a body of persons. Morale usually applies to the qualities of an entire body of men (as an army or a regiment, a people, or a community) with respect especially to their courage and endurance under stress, but it sometimes may refer to an individual in his capacity of a member of a body held together by such qualities <morale . . . describes the communal condition of mind and emotion, and it is incorrect to refer to the low or high morale of an individual, except in his or her relationship to the group—Times Lit. Sup.> <by military leadership we . . . mean . . . the capacity to weld 50 to 250 men into a unit of high morale and lead them into battle—Psychiatry> Discipline applies to the order maintained and observed by a body or an individual that is or has been subjected to training (as in uniform behavior, in control over the passions or other individualistic traits, or in military exercises) so that the whole moves under command as one and the individual thinks of himself only in relation to others (troops noted for their discipline) (true discipline is intelligent obedience of each for the consequent effectiveness of all—Ageton) (books . . . written by men who have subjected themselves in a superior degree to intellectual discipline and culture—Dewey) Esprit de corps especially applies to the spirit of loyalty that is manifest in a body (as a profession or a society) by jealous regard for the honor or the interests of the body as a whole or for fellow members as belonging to it; often esprit de corps implies a spirit that distinguishes one body and brings it into opposition to others (among the professions noted for their esprit de corps, that of physician ranks high) (esprit de corps . . . in each specialized part of the body politic, prompts measures to preserve the integrity of that part in opposition to other parts—Spencer) (though the development of a strong esprit de corps is most desirable, within a small and exclusive group it becomes dangerous . . . assumes the form of a closed club, the members of which can, in each other's eyes, do no wrong—Political Science Quarterly) (the inspired and faultless esprit de corps of her flesh and her bones and her blood; never were the features and the colors of a face in such serene and unassailable agreement, never had a skeleton been more singularly honored by the integument it wore—Stafford)

Con *immoral, unmoral, amoral, nonmoral

Ana *vigor, spirit, drive; self-confidence, self-possession, assurance, *confidence; nerving, steeling (see ENCOURAGE) Con enervation (see corresponding verb at UNNERVE) morality *goodness, virtue, rectitude

Ana integrity, probity, honor, *honesty; *excellence, perfection, virtue, merit morally *virtually, practically morbid *unwholesome, sickly, diseased, pathological

Ana hypochondriac, atrabilious, *melancholic; gloomy, morose, saturnine (see SULLEN)

Ant sound —Con *healthy, wholesome, well, hale, robust; *healthful, healthy, hygienic mordant *caustic, acrid, scathing

Ana *incisive, trenchant, cutting, biting, clear-cut, crisp; *pungent, poignant, piquant, racy, spicy, snappy; *sharp, keen, acute moreover besides, furthermore, likewise, *also, too moron imbecile, idiot, *fool, simpleton, natural morose glum, gloomy, saturnine, dour, *sullen, surly, sulky, crabbed

Ana splenetic, choleric, *irascible, testy, cranky, cross; peevish, snappish, waspish, petulant, *irritable; brusque, gruff (see BLUFF) mortal adj *deadly, fatal, lethal

Ana destructive (see corresponding verb DESTROY); virulent, venomous, *poisonous; implacable, unrelenting, relentless (see GRIM)

Ant venial (especially of a sin) mortified *ashamed, chagrined

Ana harassed, harried, worried, annoyed (see WORRY vb); humiliated, humbled, abased (see ABASE); abashed, embarrassed, discomfited (see EMBARRAS) mostly *largely, greatly, chiefly, mainly, principally, generally motif n 1 device, design, pattern, *figure

2 *subject, matter, subject matter, argument, topic, text, theme, motive, leitmotiv motion n Motion, movement, move, locomotion, stir mean the act or an instance of moving. Motion is the appropriate term in abstract use for the act or process of moving, without regard to what moves or is moved; in philosophical and aesthetic use it is an especially comprehensive term, for it may apply to manifestation of change or of changing not only from place to place, but from condition to condition, or from step to step in a progression (the laws of motion) (this vicissitude of motion and rest, which we call life—Steele) (in all the arts the principle of motion prevails increasingly over the principle of repose—Babbitt) (movement is always to be preferred to inaction. In motion a man has a chance, his body is warm, his instincts are quick—Mailer) Ordinarily, however, the term implies discernible physical moving (the motion of the planets) (I was lying . . . injured, and incapable of motion—Hudson) (the restless motion of the sea) (every step and every motion in the old dances had meaning—Reginald & Gladys Laubin) Movement usually implies definite regulated motion; the term is used less often than motion to denote an abstraction, although it may be extended to denote a quality of representation in a work of art that suggests motion (movement is one of the most striking characteristics of the Elgin marbles and of the Winged Victory) (the new freedom and variety in the movements of the Apostles in the boat . . . are proofs of Giotto's rare power of invention—Fry) or a quality in literary work (as poetry) that suggests a definite rate of speed or progression (as in the meter, the rhythm, or the action) (no one will so well render Homer's swift-flowing movement as he who has himself something of the swift-moving spirit of Homer—Arnold) In concrete use movement implies a passage, whether self-initiated or under guidance or compulsion, from place to place, from situation to situation, or from condition to condition; it may, in this sense, be used interchangeably with motion in the collective singular or in the plural (the movements of the planets) (the restless movement of the sea) (the movement of troops to the front was then in progress) (severe storms hindered the movement of trucks carrying supplies) (large regions in which, though earth movement has occurred rather recently, this has scarcely anywhere dislocated the land surface—C. A. Cotton) (there may be a complex double rhythm of annual movement; sowing in the north, extensive migration south in later winter, return for the harvest—W. B. Fisher) Movement also is frequently used for an instance of moving (a movement among the ferns attracted Adrian—Meredith) (every movement of the bird was watched by the cat) Move is particularly likely to denote a beginning of a movement (so shocked that no one made a move to leave) or to apply to a definite instance of moving or moving something from one place to another (make a move in a chess game) The word may stress the notion of change and then is particularly applicable to a changing of one's abode (planning a move to a new farm) or to a physical or figurative moving to attain an end or objective (viewed as a move to encourage . . . organized labor's full participation—Current Biog.) (the Turks would not be frightened into submission by any Russian move—Collier's Yr. Bk.) Locomotion usually suggests travel especially by artificial means (as by boat, train, airplane, or automobile) (every improvement of the means of locomotion benefits mankind morally and intellectually—Macaulay) but it may apply to natural means (as wings or legs) (pseudopodia and cilia are primitive organs of locomotion) Stir applies to a motion or movement, often without an implication of changes of place or condition or of progress, that involves a not necessarily displeasing disturbance especially of what has been quiet or at rest or free from excitement, bustle, or agitation (not a stir of child or mouse—Stevenson) (many persons find stir, and movement, and the presence of a crowd an agreeable stimulus—Benson) (it is an age of stir and change—Galsworthy)

Ana impetus, momentum, *speed, velocity, pace, headway motivate actuate, *activate

Ana stimulate, quicken, *provoke, excite: arouse, rouse, *stir: inspire, animate, fire, *inform motive n 1 Motive, spring, impulse, incentive, inducement, spur, goad all denote a stimulus inciting or prompting a person to act or behave in a definite way. Motive applies chiefly to such an emotion as fear, anger, hatred, or love or to a desire (as for fame, wealth, knowledge, supremacy, or revenge) or to such a physical appetite as hunger or sexual desire which operates on the will and definitely moves it to activity <always seeking the motive of everyone's speech or behavior—Brownell> <whenever a man does a thoroughly stupid thing, it is always from the noblest motives —Wilde> <I could slay no living thing except from motives of hunger—Hudson> <even where some piece of knowledge is uninteresting in itself, a man can force himself to acquire it if he has an adequate motive for doing so—Russell> Spring, often as the plural springs , is used in place of motive without much difference in meaning; however, it may refer to the underlying or basic motive which is often not fully recognized even by the person affected and is especially hidden from all but the most penetrating observers <it is difficult . . . to come at the true springs of action—Forrest> <the love of gold was the sordid spring of the most brilliant enterprises of the republic—Merivale> <laying open to his view the springs of action in both parties—Peacock> Impulse need not imply, as motive and spring regularly imply, actual performance of an act or engagement in an activity; the term stresses impetus, or driving power, rather than its effect; thus, one may check, or restrain, or forgo, or dismiss an impulse . In its more general sense impulse is applicable to a powerful incitement or instigation to activity, especially one arising within oneself as the result of a native propensity, one's peculiarity of temperament, or one's intellectual or emotional constitution <he was not a man . . . to yield timidly to the impulses of others—Prescott> <in Brave New World . . . all are permitted to indulge their sexual impulses without let or hindrance—Huxley> <men like the elder Cato, Varro, and the elder Pliny liked to record the curiosities of nature, but they had not the systematizing impulse , the restless passion for order, of the Greeks—Buchan> Specifically, impulse is applicable to a spontaneous and often unconsidered and nearly irresistible urge to do something <Dr. Lavendar . . . said to himself, chuckling, "If I'd followed my impulse , I'd have married them then and there, and made no bones of it"—Deland> <the first impulse of a child in a garden is to pick every attractive flower—Russell> <Gard suffered an odd impulse to get up and kick his chair over; but people don't do those things. He kicked the back log instead—Mary Austin> Incentive applies chiefly to a cause which incites and encourages action or activity and especially to one for which the person affected is not himself responsible or which does not originate within himself <offer a bonus as an incentive to greater speed and efficiency in production> <with some pupils praise is not an incentive to study> <money is not the only incentive to work, nor the strongest—Shaw> <the great incentive to effort, all through life, is experience of success after initial difficulties—Russell> <people . . . cut off here without the influence of example or emulation, with no incentive but some natural yearning for order and security—Cather> Inducement is narrower than incentive , for it consistently suggests an external influence and often an attempt to entice or allure to action or activity (the chief inducements to serve were the pension and the right of citizenship which awaited a soldier on his discharge—Buchan) <his method of holding his followers together by culinary and bibulous inducements has often been described—L. M. Sears> Spur applies to an impetus to action which not only incites but stimulates the mind and increases its energy and ardor <fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise . . . to scorn delights and live laborious days—Milton> <fear or despair may be a temporary spur to action—Sat. Review> Goad applies to a stimulus to action or activity that keeps one going in spite of one's will or desire <the daily goad urging him to the daily toil—Macaulay> <insecurity, considered by some management people as the indispensable goad for workers' efficiency—Dun's Review>

Ana *cause, determinant, antecedent, reason: *desire, appetite, urge, passion, lust: *feeling, emotion, passion: purpose, intent, *intention, aim, end

2 *subject, matter, subject matter, argument, topic, text, theme, motif, leitmotiv motive adj *movable, mobile

Ana *active, operative, dynamic: moving, driving, impelling or impulsive (see corresponding verbs at MOVE) motley adj 1 *variegated, parti-colored, checkered, checked, pied, piebald, skewbald, dappled, freaked 2 heterogeneous, *miscellaneous, assorted, promiscuous Ana *different, diverse, divergent, disparate, various: discrepant, incompatible, uncongenial, incongruous (see INCONSONANT)

Con uniform, parallel, akin, alike, identical (see LIKE) motor *machine, mechanism, machinery, apparatus, engine motorcade *procession, parade, cortege, cavalcade mottle vb *spot, spatter, sprinkle, fleck, stipple, marble, speckle, spangle, bespangle mottled spotted, spattered, sprinkled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)

motto proverb, adage, *saying, saw, maxim, epigram, aphorism, apothegm mount n *mountain, peak, alp, volcano, mesa mount vb 1 ascend, soar, *rise, arise, tower, rocket, levitate, surge

Ant drop

2 *ascend, climb, scale

Ant dismount

mountain, mount, peak, alp, volcano, mesa denote a relatively steep and high elevation of land. Mountain, the ordinary and inclusive term, varies somewhat in meaning according to locality. In general it designates an elevation higher and steeper than a hill, rising more or less abruptly from its surrounding country, and standing out conspicuously when viewed from a distance. Mount is often used in proper names of mountains. Peak, when applied to a mountain, designates one that rises to a sharp point; it may be isolated or one of a range. Alp suggests a towering, dizzy, or unscalable height <yet do I sometimes feel a languishment . . . to sit upon an alp as on a throne, and half forget what world or worlding meant—Keats> Volcano designates a cone-shaped mountain formed chiefly of ejected molten rock or ash and topped, usually, by a crater. Mesa is used especially in the southwestern part of the United States to designate a flat-topped elevation, usually comparable to a hill in height, but more suggestive of a mountain because of its steep clifflike sides.

Ana *height, altitude, elevation mountebank n *impostor, faker, charlatan, quack mourn sorrow, *grieve

Ana lament, bewail, bemoan (see DEPLORE): weep, keen, wail, *cry

Con rejoice, gladden, delight, *please movable, mobile, motive mean capable of moving or of being moved. Movable applies not to what has independent power of motion but to what can be moved by men or machines (as by lifting, drawing, pushing, or driving) (a movable steam engine) (one's movable possessions) (some of these cabins were movable, and were carried on sledges from one part of the common to another—Macaulay) or to what is not fixed in position or date (printing from movable type) (a movable attachment for a machine) (movable feasts such as Easter and Whitsunday) Mobile stresses facility or ease in moving or, less often, in being moved. It often describes the quality of flowing which distinguishes a fluid from a solid (the mobile liquid passes into a compact rigid solid—T. H. Huxley) or which characterizes an electric current or charge (long-lasting circulation of the mobile charge, around and around the circuit—Darrow) or the character which distinguishes something or someone that moves or is equipped or able to move quickly and readily, or to go (as from place to place or from one condition to another), from what is slow-moving or unlikely to engage in major moves (a mobile army) (a mobile radio unit) (they attract the more ambitious, the more mobile young people—Amer. Jour. of Sociology) (American society, though highly mobile by European standards, is not classless—Times Lit. Sup.) But equally often mobile describes features, faces, expressions of face, or thoughts which respond quickly and obviously to changing emotions, mental states, or external stimuli, often at the same time connoting either fickleness or instability or flexibility and versatility (the gray restless eye, the thin mobile lips—J. R. Green) (you are as mobile as the veering air, and all your charms more changeful than the tide—Millay) (delicately sniffing the air to the left of him with his mobile nose end—Dahl) Motive implies a moving only in the transitive sense of driving, or causing movement, or impelling to action; the term is used chiefly with reference to power or energy or their sources (as fuel, steam, or electricity) viewed as agent in a process of moving (diesel engines supply the motive power for the new ship) (when horsepower and man power were alone employed, the motive agent was not bound up with the tool moved—Spencer) Even when the reference is to something which constitutes a motive for action, "motive power," "motive force," or "motive energy" is likely to be used (there was no motive power in experience. It was as little of an active cause as conscience itself—Wilde) (this new wave of motive energy began to penetrate the deep absorption in their own affairs of her husband and children—Dorothy Canfield) (his motive force is a blissful and naïve faith—Rosten)

Ana *changeable, changeful, variable, mutable

Ant immovable: stationary —Con fixed, set, settled, established (see SET vb)

move vb 1 Move, actuate, drive, impel are comparable when they mean to set or keep going or in motion. Move is so general that the direction or nature of the motion can be gathered only from the context; it may imply an agent or an agency as the mover (what power or force moves the rotating earth?) (the mechanism that moves the locomotive) (vessels moved by wind, steam, or electricity) Actuate is more restricted in its reference than move, being used chiefly in connection with machinery and mechanisms; it stresses the communication of power to work or to set in action (a turbine is actuated by the force of a current of fluid under pressure) (most of the hydraulically operated items of equipment are actuated by pistons and cylinders—W. R. Sears) Drive implies forward and, usually, continuous rather than recurrent motion; it often emphasizes the effect produced, as of speed, violence, or show of power, rather more than the impetus given (a ship driven by wind and tide) (the washing machine is driven by electricity) (the heart drives the blood through the arteries) (air and petrol vapor . . . produce explosions powerful enough to drive the engine of a motorcar—Toynbee) Impel, when used of physical motion, adds to drive the implication of great force in the impetus (imitated the action of a man's being impelled forward by the butt ends of muskets—Dickens)

These words also are synonymous when they mean to excite or provoke a person to a given act or action or to given conduct or behavior. Move may imply an agent, an external influence, or an inner spring or motive as the mover (if kingdom move thee not, let move thee zeal and duty—Milton) (he was, through the years, a hard man to move—Malamud) Actuate presupposes such an inner stimulus as a desire, a feeling, or a motive (it used to be the thing for parents to represent themselves as Olympians, immune from human passions and always actuated by pure reason—Russell) (would deny with indignation that they are actuated in their esteem for science by its material serviceability—Dewey) Drive presupposes a compelling force, sometimes outer, sometimes inner, which affects the freedom of the will (it was the crass materialism of America . . . that drove him to exasperation—Parrington) (what had I ever done to you that would drive you to such a step?—Mary Austin) Impel, like actuate, implies an inner prompting, but it suggests greater urgency in the desire or motive and more headlong action (a life of adventure . . . was that to which his nature irresistibly impelled him—Arnold) (she was a prey to shoddy, facile emotions . . . none of which had power to impel her to any action—Rose Macaulay)

Ana *activate, actuate, motivate: *provoke, excite, quicken, stimulate: *induce, persuade, prevail, get

2 Move, remove, shift, transfer are comparable when they mean to change or to cause to change from one place to another. All of these terms are general in that they do not in themselves and apart from the context imply a definite kind of agent or agency or a definite means of conveyance or transportation or give an indication of the extent of distance covered. Move is by far the most comprehensive term and is chiefly used when nothing more than the motion or activity involved in a change of place is to be indicated (move a table from a corner to the center of the room) (moved his family from New York City to Chicago) (move a house across the street to a larger lot) (he will not move from that chair until he is called to dinner) Remove adds to move the implication that the person or thing that changes or is changed from one place to another is moved from or quits a place which is his or its normal or original location, station, position, or occupation for one which is new or temporary (remove the cover from a platter) (remove the dishes from the table) When the idea of getting rid or eradicating is stressed, remove is appropriate (remove a person from office) (they removed the cause of the epidemic of typhoid fever when they put the typhoid carrier under close surveillance) Shift throws so much emphasis on change of location or direction that the implications of voluntary or guided motion or activity are seldom apparent; therefore the term is often preferred when unrest or uncertainty or instability is to be suggested (the cargo shifted in the storm) (the wind will shift during the night to due east) (shifting his weight from one foot to another) However, shift also is used when a mere change in position is implied (shifted his quid of tobacco to the other side of his mouth before answering) (decided to shift his desk into a better light) Transfer (see also TRANSFER 2) commonly implies a change from hand to hand, or from one mode of conveyance to another, or from one depository to another; it is often used in a specific sense especially in the business of transportation (you will need to transfer to another train at Albany) (there was no way in which he could transfer his own memories of European civilization into the Indian mind—Cather)

Ana displace, *replace, supplant, supersede: convey, *carry, bear, transport, transmit move n movement, *motion, locomotion, stir

Ana change, alteration, variation, modification (see under CHANGE vb): transformation, metamorphosis, conversion, transmogrification (see under TRANSFORM) movement *motion, move, locomotion, stir

Ana *action, act, deed: change, alteration, variation, modification (see under CHANGE vb): activity, operativeness or operation, dynamism, liveness (see corresponding adjectives at ACTIVE) moving, impressive, poignant, affecting, touching, pathetic are comparable when they mean having the power to excite or the effect of exciting deep and usually saddening and solemn emotion. Moving, the most general of these words, can be used in place of any of the others; the rest, though not mutually exclusive in their implications, can be used very specifically. Something moving stirs one deeply or evokes a strong emotional response (as by thrilling, entrancing, agitating, or saddening) (a moving scene in a play) (a moving appeal for help) (a modern version of the hero who for the good of mankind exposed himself to the agonies of the damned. It is always a moving subject—Maugham) (a moving revelation of child life in an orphanage—MacColl) Something impressive imposes itself forcibly on the mind and compels a response (as of admiration, awe, wonder, or conviction) (scenery . . . majestic without severity, impressive without showiness—Hardy) (ordinary men cannot produce really impressive artworks—Shaw) (I regret that I cannot put into more impressive words my belief that . . . the defendants were deprived of their rights—Justice Holmes) Something poignant produces so painfully sharp an impression that it pierces one's heart or keenly affects one's sensitivities (it was warm and yet fresh; blindfold, one could have mistaken it for a morning in early May: but this kind of day . . . had a more poignant loveliness in autumn than in spring, because it was a receding footfall, a waning moon—Jan Struther) (she left him with relief and a poignant sense of all she had wasted of the night—Malamud) Something affecting moves one to tears or to some similar manifestation of feeling (even the most callous found the play affecting) (an affecting reunion of a mother and her child) (it would spoil this affecting story to explain what happened; but the reader's sickening anxiety may be relieved to hear that Rosa escaped with her purity still white as driven snow—Cunnington) (the scenes of disappointment are quite affecting—Whitman) Something touching arouses tenderness or compassion or melts the heart (a clean sober little maid, with a very touching upward look of trust—Galsworthy) (touching not in the sense of pathos . . . but in the sense of sweetness, warmth, and gaiety—Mannes) (most men's touching illusion as to the frailness of women and their spiritual fragility—Conrad) Something pathetic moves one to pity. Sometimes the word suggests pity induced by compassion for one in sorrow or distress (a lonely old man . . . Rather pathetic!—Archibald Marshall) (pathetic gropings after the fragments of a shattered faith—Day Lewis) Sometimes it suggests pity mixed with contempt for what is weak, inadequate, or futile (a pathetic confusion of aims—Binyon) (a pathetic attempt to make a virtue of necessity—Huxley)

Ana exciting, stimulating, quickening, provoking (see PROVOKE): thrilling, electrifying (see THRILL): stirring, arousing, rousing, awakening, rallying (see STIR)

muddle vb *confuse, addle, fuddle, befuddle

Ana *puzzle, perplex, mystify, bewilder, distract, non-plus, confound, dumbfound: faze, rattle, discomfit, *embarrass: fluster, flurry, upset, agitate, *discompose

Ant enlighten

muddle n *confusion, disorder, chaos, disarray, jumble, clutter, snarl muddy *turbid, oily

Ana murky, gloomy, obscure, *dark: confused, muddled, addle (see CONFUSE): *dirty, filthy, foul, nasty, squalid

Con *clear, transparent, translucent, lucid, limpid muff vb *botch, bungle, fumble, cobble mug n *face, countenance, visage, physiognomy, puss mult *penalize, fine, amerce

Ana exact, require, *demand, claim mulish *obstinate, dogged, stubborn, pertinacious, stiff-necked, pigheaded, bullheaded

Ana headstrong, intractable, recalcitrant, refractory, ungovernable, *unruly: fixed, set (see SET) multifarious divers, numerous, various, *many, several, sundry

Ana disparate, diverse, divergent, *different: incongruous, incompatible, uncongenial, discrepant, discordant, *inconsonant, inconsistent multiply *increase, augment, enlarge

Ana propagate, reproduce, breed, *generate: expand, spread, stretch (see corresponding nouns at EXPANSE)

Con *decrease, diminish, lessen, reduce, abate multitude, army, host, legion mean, both in the singular and plural, a very large number of persons or things. They do not (as do the words compared at CROWD) necessarily imply assemblage, but all of them can be used with that implication. Multitude stresses numerosness with respect to what is the standard for or the test of numerosness in the thing referred to; thus, in "that child always asks a multitude of questions" and "I never saw such a multitude of books before in one house" multitude obviously refers to a much smaller number in the first than in the second illustration (we must not . . . expect systematic education to produce multitudes of highly cultivated and symmetrically developed persons—Eliot) When applied to a group of persons taken as a whole, multitude suggests an assemblage of a large number of persons (moved his arms with large pawing gestures, as though he were distributing lay blessings to a kneeling multitude—Wharton) but multitude with a definite article suggests the masses of ordinary people or the populace (speeches that sway the multitude) (a book that appeals to the multitude) (both scorns and seeks the understanding and approbation of the multitude—Knight) Army usually adds to multitude the implications of orderly arrangement without a suggestion of crowding and often, especially in clearly figurative use, a progressive advance without any suggestion of halting or gathering (they were served by a vast army of waiters) (an army of locusts) (we have considered science as a steadily advancing army of ascertained facts—Inge) (he discovered around him . . . a world whose existence he had neither known nor suspected, the army of persons who know no routine labor—Purdy) Host has for its primary implication numerosness. It may mean nothing more (she has a host of admirers) (he knows hosts of people) (the burning of hosts of unfortunate old women—and sometimes young ones—as witches—Cobban) but it may suggest more strongly than any of the other words a concentration in great numbers of the thing referred to; in such cases it often connotes an impressive or striking array (a clear, cold night and a host of stars in the sky) (I saw a crowd, a host, of golden daffodils—Wordsworth) (a host of exquisite creations, the expression of a great artist's subtle vision and faultless technique—Read) (a very uneasy division, giving rise to a host of perplexities whose consideration has occupied the intervening centuries—Whitehead) Legion in general use retains little suggestion of its basic application to the chief unit of the Roman army and but little more of its scriptural uses; typically it applies to an indefinitely or incalculably large number (the windy arguments of this legion of aberrants—McComas) (the legion of animal owners is also rising fast—Investor's Reader) (a legion of friends hastened to his support—W. B. Parker) (armies of angels that soar, legions of demons that lurk—Browning)

Ana horde, throng, press, mob, crush, *crowd mummer performer, mime, mimic, player, *actor, thespian, impersonator, trouper mummary *gibberish, hocus-pocus, abracadabra mundane worldly, *earthly, earthy, terrestrial, sublunary

Ana fleshly, sensual, *carnal, animal: secular, temporal, *profane

Ant eternal —Con *infinite, sempiternal, boundless: heavenly, *celestial, empyrean, empyreal munificent bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, *liberal, generous, handsome

Ana benevolent, *charitable, philanthropic, eleemosynary, altruistic: *profuse, lavish, prodigal munitions *armament, matériel, arms, ordnance, artillery, ammunition murder vb *kill, slay, assassinate, dispatch, execute murky obscure, gloomy, *dark, dim, dusky

Ana *turbid, muddy, roily: lowering, glowering, glooming or gloomy (see corresponding verbs at FROWN): lurid, grim, *ghastly

Con *bright, brilliant, radiant, effulgent: illuminated, illumined, lightened, enlightened (see ILLUMINATE): *clear, transparent, translucent, lucid muscular, brawny, sinewy, athletic, burly, husky are applied to persons in the sense of strong and powerful in build or physique. Muscular implies well-developed, but not overdeveloped, muscles and, usually, a stalwart build (hard exercise . . . built into a strong, muscular body that had been a frail and sickly frame—White) Brawny implies the full development of the muscles; it carries no connotation of fatness but rather suggests the might that is associated with hard flesh and great size (blond, healthy-looking fellows, with brawny, bare arms, who were approached with dread by all—Zangwill) (tough, weather-ruddied, brawny hunters of whales—R. L. Cook) Sinewy attributes no less power to the muscles than brawny, but it suggests greater energy and quickness and seldom connotes hugeness. Rather it often implies a leanness, toughness, and liteness that are the result of training or of persistent exercise; thus, such people as blacksmiths, steelworkers, stevedores, and prizefighters are often described as brawny, but fencers, runners, and acrobats, more often as sinewy (worthy fellows; and like to prove most sinewy swordmen—Shak.) Athletic as used in anthropometry denotes a particular body build marked by heavy frame, large chest, and powerful well-developed muscles. In more general use athletic may suggest much the same type, but more often it stresses fitness for athletic activity and emphasizes muscularity, sinewiness, quick reflexes, and vigor of health (a tall, athletic young man) and it is with this latter aspect that the term is usually extended to the mental life or its products (imaginative skepticism and dramatic irony . . . keep the mind athletic and the spirit on the stretch—Blackmur) (she had tried . . . to shock and startle: and yet . . . had feared to begin with Shaw's athletic wit—Yeats) Burly stresses massiveness of build to such an extent that it often carries connotations of corpulence, of coarseness, or of grossness and suggests the possession of brute force (tall . . . burly, quite fearless, built with such a jaw that no man's rule could be his law—Masefield) (a great, burly, red-faced individual, huge in frame, with a stentorian voice—Jesse) Husky implies a powerful athletic build and brawniness (the huskiest members of a football team are placed on the line) (good food and leisure and heredity gave me a husky build—S. E. White)

Ana robust, *healthy, hale, sound: *strong, sturdy, stalwart, stout: *vigorous, lusty muse vb *ponder, meditate, ruminate

Ana *consider, study, contemplate, weigh, excogitate: reflect, reason, *think museum, library, gallery, archives, treasury are comparable but not synonymous terms when they mean a place serving as a repository for monuments (see DOCUMENT 1 for this sense) of the past. Museum is the most general of these terms; it usually implies the intention both to preserve and to exhibit for the education of the public. A museum may be an institution concerned with the preservation and exhibition of objects of historical or scientific interest, especially such as illustrate the development of human civilization or the evolution of species, or it may be one providing for the preservation and exhibition of works of fine art (as paintings and sculptures), or it may combine both purposes. Consequently, the term is usually qualified in proper names or in general designation (the Museum of Fine Arts) (the Museum of Natural History) (an art museum) Library is applicable to a place (as a room, building, or institution) which houses a collection of books not for sale but available for use by specified persons or sometimes the general public. But library is applicable also to a collection of literary material and as such may vary in scope from a handful of books making up a personal collection to a usually public collection consisting of a vast store of books of all kinds and of all ages, manuscripts, records, documents, files of journals, and often, in addition, works of art and serving primarily to preserve works of literature and of reference and documents in all fields of research and to make them available to scholars. Gallery (often art gallery) is used for a room, a suite, or a building housing and exhibiting works of art and especially paintings and pieces of sculpture. The term is used of a place housing a private as well as a public collection and (especially in the plural, galleries) of a place where works of art are exhibited for sale. Archives, when the term designates the place where a collection of old records, old documents, old files, and similar papers are kept rather than the collection itself (see DOCUMENT 1), may refer to a building or, as is more common, to a part of a building (as of a library or museum) where such a collection is housed (the archives of the city hall) (the archives of the department of state) (place a manuscript in the archives of the Royal Society) Treasury is used to designate a place, often a room, where possessions of intrinsic value and often historical significance are stored and in some instances displayed to visitors (in the treasury of the cathedral . . . there is a fine, whole, uncut chasuble—Rock) The term is often extended to things or places that are or are felt to be storehouses of precious things (forests whose treasury of bird and beast and insect secrets had been only skimmed by collectors—Beebe)

⟨for quotable good things, for pregnant aphorisms, for touchstones of ready application, the opinions of the English judges are a mine of instruction and a treasury of joy—Cardozo⟩

mushy *sentimental, romantic, mawkish, maudlin, soppy, slushy muster *summon, summons, call, cite, convoke, convene Ana collect, congregate, assemble, *gather: marshal, organize, arrange, *order: align, *line, line up, range, array musty fusty, *malodorous, stinking, fetid, noisome, putrid, rank, rancid

Ana *dirty, filthy, foul, nasty, squalid: sloppy, *slipshod, unkempt, slovenly mutable *changeable, changeful, variable, protean

Ana unstable, *inconstant, fickle: fluctuating, wavering, swinging, swaying (see SWING)

Ant immutable —Con *steady, even, constant, uniform, equable: *lasting, permanent, durable, stable mutation *change, permutation, vicissitude, alternation Ana shifting or shift, moving or move, removing or remove (see MOVE): variation, modification, alteration (see under CHANGE vb)

Con stabilizing or stability, steadying or steadiness, poising or poise (see corresponding verbs at STABILIZE): fluctuation, wavering, swinging or swing (see corresponding verbs at SWING)

mute adj *dumb, speechless, inarticulate mutilate 1 *maim, cripple, batter, mangle

Ana *injure, damage, hurt, spoil, mar: disfigure, *deface 2 *sterilize, castrate, spay, emasculate, alter, geld, caaponize mutinous rebellious, seditious, *insubordinate, factious, contumacious

Ana recalcitrant, refractory, intractable, *unruly, un-governable: disaffected, alienated (see ESTRANGE)

mutiny *rebellion, revolution, uprising, revolt, insurrection, putsch, coup

Ana *sedition, treason: traitorousness, treacherousness, perfidiousness or perfidy, faithlessness (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS)

mutual *reciprocal, common

Ana shared, participated, partaken (see SHARE): joined or joint, united, connected, related, associated (see corresponding verbs at JOIN) mysterious, inscrutable, arcane mean beyond one's power to discover, understand, or explain. Something mysterious excites wonder, curiosity, or surmise yet baffles all attempts to explain it ⟨extremes in Nature equal ends produce, in Man they join to some mysterious use—Pope⟩ ⟨God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform—Cowper⟩ ⟨brought back a vivid report on remote and mysterious Tibet—W. O. Douglas⟩ Something inscrutable defies all one's efforts to examine or investigate it and leaves one with a sense of hopelessness or defeat ⟨great God, thy judgments are inscrutable!—Browning⟩ ⟨the plaything of an inscrutable power, called Fortune—Bradley⟩ The word is often applied to a person whose intentions, motives, or mental processes are so well concealed that they defy interpretation ⟨many fathers feel that, if they are to maintain their authority, they must be a little distant and inscrutable—Benson⟩ ⟨people who prefer to stand at the bar have, universally, an inscrutable look—Pynchon⟩ Something arcane is beyond comprehension because known or knowable only to the possessor of the secret (sometimes by implication God, Nature, the Fates, or the authorities). The word may come close to occult in meaning, but it stresses the reservation of what is necessary for comprehension rather than the supernatural or magical character of what is not understood ⟨by behaving as if he were a trickster, Shaw managed to hide the arcane processes of his imaginative life—Anthony West⟩ ⟨not surprised to find his ways crossed and contested by his wife, who had her own arcane rites such as arranging flowers and cleaning closets—Cheever⟩ Ana occult, esoteric, *recondite, abstruse: cryptic, enigmatic, ambiguous, equivocal, *obscure: *mystical, mystic, analogical, cabalistic

mystery, problem, enigma, riddle, puzzle, conundrum are comparable when they denote something which baffles or perplexes and challenges one's power to solve it. Mystery may, especially in theological use, imply the thing's incapacity for comprehension by the human reason, but it is also applicable to any of the facts of the world about us which defy all attempts to explain their cause or nature ⟨this mystery of growth and life—Jefferies⟩ ⟨we must be humble, for we are compassed by mysteries, and our spiritual faculties are poor and dull—Inge⟩ The term is also used to denote something which is guarded by secrecy or is in itself or by design mystifying while at the same time so intriguing as to compel speculation ⟨he always makes a mystery of his intentions⟩ ⟨it's a mystery to me how he can keep going⟩ ⟨Freud was a genius, an incredible mighty discoverer of secrets, mysteries, and new questions. But the answers he gave were doctrinaire, deathlike—Mailer⟩ ⟨lovers of mystery who like to think of some Wild Man of the Snows treading the heights, eating yaks and men, need not despair. Other monsters have successfully withstood the attempts of scientists to label them—Country Life⟩ Problem applies not only to a perplexing question that demands a solution ⟨a geometrical problem⟩ but also to a person or situation that causes perplexity or puts one in a predicament ⟨that child is a problem to his parents and teachers⟩ ⟨the problem . . . how to find healthy, happy leisure for all the working millions who are now being liberated by machines—L. P. Smith⟩ ⟨if a great hate and a great determination could solve the problem, Kelley would solve it—Theodore Sturgeon⟩ Enigma applies to whatever hides its meaning under obscure or ambiguous allusions so that one can only guess at its significance ⟨a metaphor should not be farfetched, for then it becomes an enigma⟩ ⟨the ancient oracles usually spoke in enigmas⟩ The term can be extended to whatever is inscrutable or beyond the range of unaided understanding ⟨Leonardo . . . worked so slowly, he left so much unfinished, he seemed to them so volatile and unstable. He was an enigma to which they never secured the key—Ellis⟩ ⟨the enigmas of history, of man's freedom and responsibility and of his guilt, cannot be solved as easily as modern culture assumed—Niebuhr⟩ Riddle applies to an enigma involving paradoxical or contradictory statements and definitely proposed to be guessed ⟨made up riddles for the amusement of her guests⟩ ⟨"What did one wall say to the other wall?" he asked shrilly. "It's a riddle!"—Salinger⟩ The term can be extended to any problem which is difficult because of its inner contradictions ⟨he tried to read the riddle of this girl's future—Galsworthy⟩ ⟨the riddle of Actium is not in the details of the fighting but in the minds of the combatants—Buchan⟩ Puzzle applies to a problem or enigma which tests one's ingenuity or skill in solution or which is peculiarly baffling ⟨hoary old puzzles of Ethics and Philosophy—L. P. Smith⟩ ⟨there are few things in the world so difficult to explain as real change; it appears to me that most scientists are far from realizing the complexity of this metaphysical puzzle—Inge⟩ Conundrum specifically applies to a riddle phrased as a question the answer to which involves a paradox or a pun or an equivocal use of words ⟨they roused him with jam and judicious advice: they set him conundrums to guess—Lewis Car- roll) The term can be extended to unsolved or unsolvable problems which provoke speculation rather than serious attempts at solution <do you think life is long enough to let me speculate on conundrums like that?—Black> <fail to touch on the political conundrums involved, particularly the problem of how the richer areas of the South can be made to subsidize the poorer—Cater>

mystic adj *mystical, anagogic, cabalistic

Ana occult, esoteric, *recondite, abstruse: *mysterious, inscrutable: visionary, quixotic, *imaginary mystic n *ascetic

mystical, mystic, anagogic, cabalistic are comparable when they denote having a meaning or character hidden from all except those who enjoy profound spiritual insight or are spiritually initiated. Mystical and mystic, though often interchangeable, can be distinguished in use. In general, mystical suggests comprehension of something beyond the range of the perceptive or ratiocinative powers; its use therefore often implies belief in the possibility of such comprehension and the word variously connotes penetration into sacred mysteries, holiness of life, idealism, detachment from material concerns, ecstatic contemplation, or spiritual rapture (the mystical philosophy of Plotinus) <mystical religions such as Buddhism> <the mystical poetry of William Blake> <there is something mystical in this doctrine, this faith, as of Keats, that "what the Imagination seizes as Beauty must be Truth"—L. P. Smith> Mystic is appropriately used when one wishes to avoid these special implications of mystical or to suggest others more in keeping with a rationalistic or skeptical point of view. Therefore mystic often imputes to the thing it describes: (1) an occult, esoteric, or visionary character <mystic ceremonies> <the mystic symbolism of Blake's poetry> (2) a mysterious, enigmatic, or sometimes nebulous quality <words of mystic import—Shelley> <[Guérin's] expression has . . . , more than Keats's, something mystic, inward, and profound—Arnold> (3) a connection with magic or the arts of magic <mystic numbers> <each silver vase in mystic order laid—Pope> Often its basic denotation is completely obscured and it means merely unintelligible, unfathomable, or incomprehensible <the mystic gulf from God to man—Emerson> Anagogic refers basically to an ultimate underlying meaning, especially in the Bible, perceptible only to those of profound spiritual insight <when Dante . . . describes his poetry as polysemous, with literal, allegorical, moral, and anagogic meaning levels, he at the same time insists that the literal meaning comes first in comprehension—Burnham> <looming in the distance, there was the final or anagogic meaning that transformed the symbolic object into a spiritual truth—Malcolm Cowley> Cabalistic in its primary meaning applies to a secret interpretation of Scriptures (Cabala) held to have been revealed to Moses and handed down orally through a line of chosen Jewish rabbis. The system came to be used by medieval magicians and sorcerers. Both aspects color the extended use of cabalistic so that it sometimes comes close to mystic in its connotations <the power of the theurgic rite or cabalistic word, understood only by the gods—H. O. Taylor> <self-conscious artists, working for the admiration of small followings and often requiring cabalistic analysis before they could be fully understood—Time> but commonly it is closer to occult or magic <by describing with the hands certain cabalistic patterns on the air and uttering at the same time the proper Sanskrit formulas it was believed that goblins and demons . . . could be exorcised—Noss>

Ana profound, *deep, abysmal: *ultimate, absolute, categorical: spiritual, divine, sacred, *holy: *supernatural, supranatural, miraculous mysticism asceticism (see under ASCETIC n) mystify bewilder, perplex, *puzzle, distract, nonplus, confound, dumbfound

Ana discomfit, faze, rattle, *embarrass: *discompose, disquiet, perturb, disturb, agitate, upset

Ant enlighten

myth 1 Myth, legend, saga all mean a story which has come down from the past, which ostensibly relates a historical event or events, and of which the origin has been lost or forgotten. Myth varies considerably in its denotation and connotation depending on the persuasion of the user. Often the word is used to designate a usually fanciful and imaginative story that explains a natural phenomenon or a social practice, institution, or belief <the old myth, imported hazily from the East, which represented the cat-moon devouring the gray mice of twilight—Replier> It is also used to designate a story, belief, or notion commonly held to be true but utterly without factual basis <the doubts that women have about themselves are man-made, and most women are so enslaved to the myths of their own inferiority they are unable to see the truth for the myths—Ashley Montagu> The word may be used with wide comprehensiveness in general writing or with narrow exclusiveness and specificity in more limited use <myths may be subdivided into such classifications as origin myths, ritual myths, incidents involving the lives of the gods, stories of culture heroes, trickster tales, journeys to the other world, human and animal marriages, adaptations of old world myths, and retellings of biblical stories—L. J. Davidson> <myths are said to be expressions or objectifications of "collective wishes" which are personified in the "leader" who is endowed by a given society with powers of social magic to fulfill the collective wish—Kroeber> Legend is likewise used with latitude, but in its most typical use it is likely to apply to a story, incident, or notion attached to a particular person or place that purports to be historical and often has or seems to have a basis in historical reality although as a whole it is either incredible or unverifiable <the medieval legends of the saints> <the wrecking of the Palatine which, according to legend, did not sink but rose flaming into the sky—Zimmer> <the violent deaths of several slaves quartered in them gave rise to a legend that this part of the house is haunted—Amer. Guide Series: Md.> Saga may refer to a long, continued, heroic story that is action-packed but not especially romantic, that deals with a person or group, and that is historical or legendary or both <the Saga of Burnt Njal> <the building of the railroad in the Northwest was one of the great sagas of man's enterprise—Le Sueur>

Ana *fiction, fable, fabrication, figment: invention, creation (see corresponding verbs at INVENT)

2 *allegory, parable, fable mythical *fictitious, fabulous, legendary, apocryphal

Ana *imaginary, visionary, fanciful, fantastic: invented, created (see INVENT)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

N

naïve unsophisticated, artless, ingenuous, *natural, simple Ana *sincere, unfeigned: *spontaneous, impulsive, instinctive: fresh, original (see NEW) naked *bare, nude, bald, barren

Ana revealed, disclosed, discovered (see REVEAL): *evident, manifest, palpable, obvious: uncolored, *colorless: *pure, simple, sheer name n Name, designation, denomination, appellation, title, style mean the word or combination of words by which something is called and by means of which it can be distinguished or identified. Name is so general that it can be used of any such word or combination whether it distinguishes a person or an object, an individual or a class, a particular or a universal, a thing having distinct existence in fact or a thing having distinct existence only in thought (all nouns are names) (love is the name of an emotion) (the child's name is John Joseph Brown) Sometimes name is thought of as something apart from the real character of the thing to which it is attached (what's in a name? that which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet—Shak.) (for sixty years he had been a name, not a figure—Bennett) More often, however, the term connotes identification of the word with the thing or, especially, the person it names, so that what affects one affects the other ([Oxford] home of lost causes, and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties!—Arnold) (if I discovered the worst, and it had to be exposed, I must see that Jane's name was kept entirely out of it—Rose Macaulay) This common feeling of a mutual and almost inevitable relation between the name and the thing named is what distinguishes name from designation, denomination, appellation, all of which are thought of as given and therefore as having an artificial association with the thing and a utilitarian purpose such as description or identification. A designation is a name given primarily for the sake of distinguishing one thing, whether an individual or a class, from other things of the same general description (the French revolutionists changed the traditional designations of days and months) (recognizing that this parasite was new, [he] . . . gave it the designation Aphytis A—Jour. of Economic Entomology) (Madame Curie chose polonium as the designation of the newly discovered radio element in honor of her native Poland) Denomination (see also RELIGION) is the name given especially to a class, to a category, or to a closely knit group (as of persons); the idea of a class name is so deeply rooted in the word that in extended use it often means the kind or group distinguished by a particular name (most of George Eliot's works come under the denomination of novel) (a roll of bills containing notes of every denomination) (in the classic world of antiquity they called outsiders, indiscriminately, barbarians—a denomination which took on an increasingly depreciative sense—Ellis) Appellation is the name by which a thing or person is known or called; the term implies actual use and differs from designation and denomination in precluding the idea, but not necessarily the fact, of self-choice (James Tubbington Brown, a boy better known to his fellows by the appellation Stinky) (the government of the United States has been emphatically termed a government of laws, and not of men. It will certainly cease to deserve this high appellation, if the laws furnish no remedy for the violation of a vested right—John Marshall) A title is either a distinctive name given to a work (as a book, a picture, a play, or a musical composition) or an honorary appellation coming to a person by virtue of his rank, office, dignity, or descent or given to him as a mark of respect (the head of the state must have a title—Buchan) When used without reference to a particular work of art or person title is sometimes preferred to denomination because it connotes distinction and dignity (any admixture of logical, of "prose" meaning detracts from the value of a poem, if it does not disqualify it for the title of poetry altogether—Day Lewis) When used abstractly in preference to name or designation it often connotes the lack of an essential relation between the name and the thing it names (things change their titles, as our manners turn—Pope) Style is used to emphasize the exact form of a name and is applicable chiefly to such legal and formal titles as the legal name of a firm or corporation or the complete, formal designation of a royal or other exalted personage as used in documents or in ceremonial address (a business incorporated under the style of the Globe Manufacturing Co.) (Thrones and Imperial Powers, offspring of Heaven, ethereal virtues! or these titles now must we renounce, and, changing style, be called Princes of Hell?—Milton)

name vb 1 *designate, nominate, elect, appoint

Ana *choose, select, prefer, elect, opt: *declare, announce, publish, advertise

2 *mention, instance, specify

Ana *refer, allude, advert: *designate: identify, recognize (see corresponding nouns at RECOGNITION): cite, *quote nap vb catnap, doze, drowse, snooze, *sleep, slumber narcotic *anodyne, opiate, nepenthe narrate *relate, rehearse, recite, recount, describe, state, report

Ana tell, *reveal, disclose, discover: *discourse, expatiate, dilate, descant narrative *story, tale, anecdote, yarn

Ana chronicle, *account, report, story, version: *fiction, fabrication, figment, fable narrow, narrow-minded *illiberal, intolerant, bigoted, hidebound

Ana rigorous, *rigid, strict, stringent: obdurate, *inflexible, inexorable: provincial, parochial, local, small-town, *insular

Ant broad, broad-minded —Con *liberal, progressive, advanced, radical: tolerant, *forbearing, indulgent, lenient narrows *strait, sound, channel, passage nasty *dirty, filthy, squalid, foul

Ana *coarse, gross, vulgar, obscene, ribald: tainted, contaminated, polluted, defiled (see CONTAMINATE): indelicate, indecent, unseemly, improper, *indecorous nation *race, people

national n *citizen, subject

native adj Native, indigenous, endemic, aboriginal, autochthonous all mean belonging to or associated with a particular place by birth or origin. A person or thing is native (opposed to foreign, alien) that has had his or its birth or origin in the place in question (a native American) (a native New Yorker) (a native tradition) (native artists left the state and studied . . . abroad—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) (a one-story structure of native stone—S. S. King) A person or thing is indigenous (opposed to naturalized, exotic) that is not only native but also has not been introduced from elsewhere into the place indicated (maize is indigenous to America) (Southern Rhodesia at present employs about half a million Africans, of whom half are indigenous and half are migrants from neighboring territories—Peter Scott) (no written flora anywhere in the world admits as indigenous that lusty weed . . . called Good-King-Henry—Peattie) Indigenous is applied usually to kinds (as species or races) rather than to individuals and often implies reference to a larger area than native (as to a country, or to a region characterized by a particular type of climate). A thing is endemic (opposed to exotic and in medicine to pandemic) which not only is indigenous but is also peculiar to, or in the case of a disease, prevalent in, a restricted region because of special conditions favoring its growth or existence (edelweiss is endemic in the Alps) (that complacency which is an endemic disease of academic groups—Conant) A person or thing is aboriginal that belongs to the earliest known race inhabiting a country or to the people found there (as by explorers, colonists, and invaders); the term usually implies the lack of a known predecessor and often connotes a primitive culture (Indians are the aboriginal Americans) (America must turn again to catch the spirit of her own dark, aboriginal continent—D. H. Lawrence) (the Kooboos, a primitive aboriginal race in the south-east of Sumatra—Frazer) Aboriginal is more rarely applied to the earliest ascertainable native plants and animals. Something is autochthonous which has its origin in the place in which it is found (autochthonous rocks) (an autochthonous flora) When applied to races of men or their achievements, it implies purity of stock or freedom from all external influences (as long as the States continue to . . . be dominated by the poetry of the Old World, and remain unsupplied with autochthonous song . . . so long will they stop short of first-class nationality—Whitman)

Ant alien, foreign natural adj 1 *regular, normal, typical

Ana ordinary, *common, familiar: *usual, customary, habitual, accustomed, wonted

Ant unnatural: artificial: adventitious

2 Natural, simple, ingenuous, naïve, unsophisticated, artless, unaffected are applied to persons, their acts, and their utterances, in the sense of wholly free from pretension or calculation. Natural implies, on the one hand, freedom from every sign of artificiality, effort, constraint, or affectation and, on the other hand, an ease, a spontaneity, or a flexibility that suggests nature rather than art; the term often implies opposition to whatever is labored, stiff, formal, or artificial (set him to write poetry, he is limited, artificial, and impotent; set him to write prose, he is free, natural, and effective—Arnold) (it is of the essence of such talk that it should be natural and attractive, not professional or didactic—Benson) (she was so friendly and so natural that it was nice to talk to her about what was interesting him—Archibald Marshall) (the fact is that a poetic language which appears natural to one age will appear unnatural or artificial to another—Day Lewis) Simple stresses complete freedom from everything that might suggest unconscious or conscious duplicity. It usually implies lack of confusion of aims, desires, interests, or values and therefore may carry one or the other of connotations as divergent as mental immaturity and intellectual ripeness, as the lack of experience characteristic of the child and the fullness of wisdom characteristic of the sage, or as the transparency of those who do not know how to conceal their nature or motives and that of those who have nothing to conceal (nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed, to be simple is to be great—Emerson) (a man of mild and simple character who up to then had shown no interest in anything at all except his collection of modern paintings—Dahl) (she was so simple and trustful that I always thought it would be as wicked to hurt her as to hurt a babe in swaddling clothes—Webb) Ingenuous stresses inability to disguise or to conceal one's thoughts or feelings; it usually implies frankness or candor, lack of reserve, or freedom from dissimulation, often with a hint of childlike simplicity (Father had set a dog on him. A less ingenuous character would be silent about such passages . . . but that is not his quality—H. G. Wells) (to post-Freudian ears this kind of language seems touchingly quaint and ingenuous—Huxley) Naive implies freedom from all that is artificial, conventional, or acquired; in early use and still often, especially in its derivative noun naïveté, it suggests freshness, spontaneity, and genuine expression of a nature untouched by worldly influences and without affectation or artifices (by contrast with the poetry of Vergil, that of Homer seems strikingly naïve) (a delightfully naïve personality) (he claimed to himself to be innocent or naïve, but his pretense was the thinnest—Cheever) But it may sometimes become a term of derogation and then often implies lack of worldly wisdom (Sophia, the naïve ninny, had actually supposed that her walking along a hundred yards of pavement with a god by her side was not going to excite remark!—Bennett) (one does not ask favors, if it can be avoided, of persons one genuinely respects; one puts such burdens upon the naïve and colorless, upon what are called the good-natured—Mencken) Equally often, especially in learned use, it suggests the point of view of the untutored or unenlightened person or of one whose judgments are not corrected by advanced scientific or philosophical knowledge and who therefore supposes that things are what they seem to be (the naïve science of an earlier day merely took it for granted that space and time existed in their own right—Jeans) (that naïve patriotism which leads every race to regard itself as evidently superior to every other—Krutch) Unsophisticated also stresses lack of wisdom, especially worldly wisdom. It does not, however, emphasize native simplicity as strongly as naïve; rather, it suggests lack of the experience or training necessary for worldly success or, more specifically, for graceful and adroit social relations (she's not the type of the moment, not elegant or artificial, too much the unsophisticated child of nature—Rose Macaulay) (Italian civilization had, in short, everything to dazzle the imagination of unsophisticated northerners emerging into a period of prosperity—T. S. Eliot) Artless lays the stress on the absence of design; it suggests naturalness that is the result of indifference to, or unawareness of, the effect or impression one is producing (overflowing with . . . artless maternal gratitude—Austen) (almost every turn in the artless little maid's prattle touched a new mood in him—Meredith) (he hated to seem heavy or profound or anything but artless and spontaneous to Cecily—H. G. Wells) Unaffected centers the attention on the absence of affectation, but it usually implies both naturalness and simplicity without any hint of childishness, unworldliness, guilelessness, or indifference (a well-bred, unaffected girl) (he was extremely simple and unaffected in his attitude, and readily approachable—MacCallum) (gratified by his young guest's unaffected admiration for this treasure—Wylie)

Ana *spontaneous, impulsive, instinctive: ingrained, constitutional, *inherent Con formal, conventional, ceremonious, *ceremonial: pretentious, ostentatious, *showy: affected, assumed, counterfeited, feigned (see ASSUME) natural n *fool, idiot, imbecile, moron, simpleton nature *type, kind, sort, stripe, kidney, ilk, description, character

Ana *structure, anatomy, framework: *disposition, temperament, character, personality: *form, figure, shape, conformation naughty *bad, evil, ill, wicked

Ana mischievous, roguish, impish, waggish (see PLAYFUL): froward, balky, restive, wayward, *contrary, perverse nauseate vb *disgust, sicken

Ana vomit, disgorge, *belch: *offend, outrage nautical *marine, maritime, naval naval nautical, *marine, maritime near adj & adv *close, nigh, nearby

Ant far

near vb *approach, approximate

Ana rival, *match, touch, equal

Con vary, *change, alter, modify: *differ nearby adj & adv *close, near, nigh

Ant far off

nearest, next are both superlative forms of near, but they are not always interchangeable. Nearest may be used wherever the intent is merely to indicate the highest degree of propinquity (as in space, time, or kinship) (the nearest house is five miles distant) (their nearest neighbor lives two miles away) (her nearest relatives are her father and mother) Next has lost this sense and usually implies immediate succession, or sometimes precedence, in an order, a series, or a sequence; thus, the next house is the house just beyond the one in mind in a row or series of houses; their next child is the one who comes after the child under consideration in order of birth; the next best is the second best in a rating or choice (the next chapter of the story) (the next day) (the next time they met) (ask the next person we meet) But in law one's nearest relative is one's "next of kin"; one's "next friend" is a person (as a near relative or natural guardian) who has the right or is appointed by a court to act for a person (as an infant) who by the law of the state has not full legal capacity to sue or make other legal moves. In ordinary language "nearest of kin" is found as often as "next of kin," but "nearest friend" applies distinctively to one's most intimate friend.

nearly, almost, approximately, well-nigh are comparable when they mean within a little of being, becoming, reaching, or sufficing. Their differences in meaning are often imperceptible. However, nearly is suitable when mere proximity is implied (they are nearly at the end of their journey) (it is nearly six o'clock) (she was nearly hysterical with fright) Almost is more explicit when the emphasis is on a falling short or a deficiency (they had almost finished when they were interrupted) (she is almost out of her mind with grief) (the news is almost too good to be true) Approximately is an appropriate choice when the difference is of no practical importance and a reasonable approach to accuracy is implied (there were approximately 10,000 present) (government meteorologists make approximately correct forecasts) Well-nigh often equals virtually (he is well-nigh mad) (the difficulty of selecting the best of his short essays for a strictly limited space is well-nigh insuperable—Desmond MacCarthy) neat, tidy, trim, trig, snug, shipshape, spick-and-span mean manifesting care and orderliness. Neat through all its variations in sense keeps as its basic implication clearness, such as the clearness from dirt or soil that is manifest chiefly in perfect cleanliness (her house is as neat as a pin) (the cat is the neatest of domestic animals) (he was remarkably neat in his dress—Johnson) (it was a neat place, with its piles of magazines and newspapers stacked in orderly fashion—MacInnes) or the clearness that is indicated in simplicity and freedom from what clutters, complicates, or confuses or that indicates orderliness, deftness, or adroitness (neat workmanship) (a neat style) (neat minds, who prefer things in their proper places, ticketed and pigeonholed—Dixon) (a neat retort) Tidy commonly suggests a pleasing neatness and order diligently maintained (he's always tidy without being smart; his coat is old and his trousers are increased, but they're both clean, and nothing's loose or torn—Richard Harrison) As distinguished from neat, tidy throws the stress on orderliness, careful arrangement, or a place for everything, rather than on cleanliness or simplicity (a tidy desk) (a tidy sewing basket) (once upon a time the universe was all tidy, with everything in its proper place, and . . . ever since then it has been growing more and more disorderly—Russell) (they have an unailing instinct for doing things in a tidy way—their busy airports handle passengers with remarkable smoothness—Rolo) Trim implies both neatness and tidiness; it stresses, however, such smartness or spruceness in appearance as is given by clean lines and excellent proportions (a trim clipper ship) (a trim figure) (his shoes and buckles, too, though plain, were trim—Dickens) (a crisscross of trim . . . paths—Lowes) Trig, though close to trim, tends to carry a stronger implication of compactness, of neatness, and of jauntiness of appearance and is especially applicable to persons or their clothes (she has a trig new tailored suit) (his hair was hardly even gray, and he stood as straight and trig as a fence post—Hersey) (a wonderfully trig beret, wide and flat—New Yorker) Snug (see also COMFORTABLE) in the present relation applies basically to ships and suggests a fine trimness of line and construction (a snug little ship) or adequate and orderly preparation for a voyage and especially for riding out a storm (soon all was snug aloft, and we were allowed to go below—Dana) In other applications the term may imply a neat, compact, ordered state that affords security or sheltered ease (everything on this snug property was bright, thriving, and well kept—Hardy) (snug little shops that once offered Cornhill the best soups and jellies—West) Shipshape is often used in place of snug to describe not only ships where tidiness and trimness prevail but whatever depends for its success or well-being upon habits of tidiness and orderliness (his affairs are in shipshape condition) (look to the babes, and till I come again keep everything shipshape—Tennyson) (everything from rifles to shoelaces got a complete going over. It was my job to see that all was perfect. Finally, I felt confident everything was shipshape—H. V. Kaltenborn) Spick-and-span, which stresses the brightness and freshness of something new, is applicable also to what by care and cleanliness has been kept new in appearance or made to look like new (spick-and-span white shoes) (the kitchen was spick-and-span) (spick-and-span machinery) (no spots came on his clothes. No slovenly habits crept upon him. He was always spick-and-span—White)

Ana *clean, cleanly: fastidious, *nice, dainty, finicky: exact, precise, *correct, accurate

Ant filthy —Con unkempt, disheveled, slovenly, *slipshod, sloppy: slack, lax, remiss, *negligent: confused, muddled, addled (see CONFUSE)

neb *bill, beak, nib necessary 1 *needful, requisite, indispensable, essential Ana compelling or compulsory, obliging or obligatory, constraining (see corresponding verbs at FORCE): important, significant, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE): cardinal, vital, *essential, fundamental

2 *certain, inevitable

Ana unavoidable, unescapable, inescapable, ineluctable, *inevitable: *infallible, inerrable, inerrant, unerring necessitous *poor, indigent, needy, destitute, penniless, impecunious, poverty-stricken

Ana impoverished, drained, depleted, exhausted, bankrupt (see DEplete)

Con *rich, wealthy, affluent, opulent necessity *need, exigency

Ana compelling or compulsion, constraining or constraint, obliging or obligation, coercing or coercion (see corresponding verbs at FORCE): indispensableness, requisiteness or requisition, needfulness (see corresponding adjectives at NEEDFUL) need n Need, necessity, exigency may all denote either a state or condition requiring something as essential or indispensable or the thing required. Need implies pressure and urgency arising either from external or internal causes or forces; it may merely suggest the call of an appetite or demand for emotional or intellectual satisfaction (he is in need of food) (children have a need for affection) (he felt the need of an education) or it may imply circumstances (as a breakdown or interruption of activity, poverty, a storm, or a threat of war) that expose a lack of or create a demand for something indispensable (as to the well-being, protection, security, success, or functioning of those or the one concerned) (the need of a city for an adequate water supply) (provide food and lodging for those in need) (the European war has taught Americans the need for a two-ocean navy) (order and discipline were the crying needs—Malone) Necessity, though often interchanged with need, usually carries a stronger suggestion of an imperative demand or of a compelling cause (telephone me only in case of necessity) (as soon as war is declared, every nation or institution must subordinate all other considerations to the necessity of victory—Inge) (necessity rather than charity was responsible for Republican commitments to the United Nations—Feuer) (amid these malign forces, our haunting anxiety and our paramount necessity is the defense of our country—Hoover) Necessity may also apply to a compelling principle or abstract force inherent in nature or in the constitution of a thing and inevitable in its operation or inescapable in its results (there is no logical necessity apparent in the conclusions you have reached) (such families get the necessities of life regardless of prices. To them differences in price levels mean only a difference in luxuries—T. W. Arnold) (one of the unhappy necessities of human existence is that we have to “find things out for ourselves”—T. S. Eliot) Exigency (see also JUNCTURE) implies the compulsion of necessity or occasionally of an inherent compelling principle, especially as a result of such special circumstances as a crisis, an emergency, or an accident, that imposes severe restrictions or great stress and strain; in either case, the term emphasizes, more than either of the preceding words, extreme urgency, demands of a peremptory and exacting character, and difficulties that cannot be easily overcome (figures which are doing nothing in particular . . . striking an attitude which is dictated not by the inner necessities of balance or motion, but by the exigencies of the composition—Binyon) (such travel exigencies as having to scout around for a room when you're tired—Joseph) (it may be argued that the exigencies of their work—the tension, the deadline . . . the abrupt arrivals and departures—drove them to alcohol—Hubbell)

Ana *stress, strain, pressure: *lack, want, dearth, absence, defect, privation: *poverty, indigence, penury, destitution, privation, want need vb *lack, want, require

Ana *demand, require, claim, exact: *long, hanker, pine, yearn, hunger, thirst: crave, covet, *desire, wish needful, necessary, requisite, indispensable, essential are comparable when meaning urgently required. Needful carries the weakest suggestion of urgency, but it applies to something that is required to supply a want or to fulfill a need (forts, magazines, arsenals, dockyards, and other needful buildings—U. S. Constitution) (tradesmen carrying what was needful to British ports—Replier) (a sensitive, flexible, resourceful adaptation to objective facts is especially needful—Muller) Necessary implies more pressing need or urgent constraint but, except where the compulsion of necessity in the sense of an inherent, logically compelling principle (a necessary consequence) (a necessary conclusion) (patience . . . is a necessary mark of the liberal mind—Dewey) is suggested, the word need not connote that the thing so qualified cannot be done without but more often indicates it to be infinitely desirable rather than absolutely required; thus, tires are necessary to proper management of an automobile, but in a sufficient emergency one might drive without them (his personal return was most required and necessary—Shak.) (it was nineteen-thirty-five and honeymoons in Europe were not considered necessary by anyone—Flood) (made himself so necessary to the company that by 1849 he was general superintendent of the road—Harlow) (always finding a more necessary article for which a less necessary had to be discarded—Cather) (of all the bitter and heavy things in this sorry old world, the not being necessary is the bitterest and heaviest—Deland) Requisite differs from necessary chiefly in being applied to something that is specifically required by the nature of a thing, the end that is in view, or the purpose to be fulfilled; usually the adjective suggests an imposed requirement rather than an inner need and so suggests constraint from without or, often, from official sources (complete the subjects requisite for college entrance) (the vigor requisite to success—Grandgent) (the requisite quorum of forty members was not present—Schuyler) Indispensable not only carries a stronger implication of urgency than the preceding terms, but it also distinctly implies that the thing so qualified cannot be done without, especially if the implied or expressed end is to be attained (there is no such thing as an indispensable person, though many persons have made themselves virtually indispensable) (the jury is the indispensable element in the popular vindication of the criminal law—Frankfurter) (rigid truthfulness in adults towards children is . . . absolutely indispensable if children are not to learn lying—Russell)

Essential (see also ESSENTIAL 2, INHERENT) is often used in place of indispensable as implying no less urgency but as being less extravagant in its suggestion; it usually also implies inherent necessity from the point of view of what a thing is or must be by its very nature or end (knowledge of one's subject is essential to successful teaching) (essential raw materials) (you are essential to her perfect happiness—Dickens) (the builders must have begun with the central piers and the choir, because the choir was the only essential part of the church—Henry Adams) (the construction of the pier was desirable for the more convenient repair of warships, but it was not essential—Justice Holmes)

Ana wanted, needed, required, lacked (see LACK vb): vital, cardinal, *essential, fundamental needy adj *poor, indigent, destitute, penniless, impecunious, poverty-stricken, necessitous

Ana & Con see those at NECESSITOUS nefarious iniquitous, flagitious, infamous, corrupt, degenerate, *vicious, villainous

Ana heinous, *outrageous, atrocious, monstrous: *fla-grant, glaring, gross, rank negate *nullify, annul, abrogate, invalidate

Ana negative, *neutralize, counteract negative adj *neutral, indifferent

Ant affirmative

negate vb 1 *deny, gainsay, traverse, contradict, im-pugn, contravene

2 *neutralize, counteract

Ana *nullify, negate, annul, abrogate, invalidate neglect vb Neglect, omit, disregard, ignore, overlook, slight, forget are comparable when they mean to pass over some-thing without giving it due or sufficient attention. Neglect usually implies intentional or unintentional failure to give full or proper attention, especially to something one is doing (as a task) or should do (as a duty) or to someone who has a claim upon one's care or attention (he was changing into his dress clothes . . . He had neglected to hang them up the night before, and for once they were be-draggled—Mailer) (he asked Mr. Powell with some brusqueness if the chief mate had neglected to instruct him that the captain was to be found on the port side—Conrad) (<neglect his family) Omit implies a leaving out of some-thing which forms a part of a whole (<omit two stanzas of a hymn) (<got up late and omitted breakfast) or a neglect-ing entirely through oversight, inattention, or absorption of an important detail, opportunity, or aspect (<Constance remembered small possessions of her own which she had omitted to remove from the cutting-out room—Bennett) Disregard usually implies voluntary, sometimes deliberate, inattention; the term may or may not imply justifiable neglect (<disregard petty annoyances) (<disregard an unimportant piece of evidence) (<she persists in disre-garding the wishes of her mother) (<nearly all the humane alleviations of brutal violence, introduced and practised in the days when professional armies fought for a dynasty or for a point of honor, were disregarded—Inge) (<flouting convention and disregarding his own clerical position—Handlin) Ignore usually implies either an intention to disregard or a failure to regard something more or less obvious; it may even suggest a deliberate closing of the eyes to what one does not wish to recognize (to those who agree with me I am uttering commonplaces and to those who disagree I am ignoring the necessary founda-tions of thought—Justice Holmes) (<its mathematics approaches mysticism and its theory contains certain impossibilities which are ignored in practice—Theodore Sturgeon) (<by tacit agreement they ignored the remarks and insinuations of their acquaintances—D. H. Lawrence) Overlook implies an omitting or disregarding, sometimes through intention but more often through haste, or lack of care (<overlook an item in an account) (<it is the practice of good nature to overlook the faults which have already, by the consequences, punished the delinquent—Johnson) (<wincing when he heard so young a man call him by nickname, but he overlooked this also in light of what had happened—Purdy) Slight may imply neglect, omis-sion, or disregard, but it also usually implies a contemptu-ous or an arrogant attitude that makes one undervalue a thing's importance, treat a person disdainfully, or be neglectful in performance of a task or duty (<nothing in the service was slighted, every phrase and gesture had its full value—Cather) (<I have been slighted, tricked, threatened, insulted, made ill . . . but I am justified—H. G. Wells) Forget (compare FORGETFUL) often retains in this relation the implication of losing the memory of something or someone, so that when it implies neglect, it usually carries a suggestion of willful ignoring or of a failure to impress the thing neglected upon one's mind (<I shall not be surprised to be neglected and forgot—Nelson) (<still, he told Hannah to get the boy better clothes—though he forgot to give her any money for the purpose—Deland) (<it was—well, until yesterday—all but forgotten—put out of mind, I mean—de la Mare)

Ant cherish —Con *appreciate, value, prize, treasure: *nurture, nurture, foster, cultivate neglect n 1 *failure, default, miscarriage, dereliction

Ana omitting or omission, disregarding or disregard, ignoring, slighting, forgetting, overlooking (see corre-sponding verbs at NEGLECT): forgetfulness, oblivion (see adjectives at FORGETFUL)

2 *negligence

Ana neglecting, omitting or omission, disregarding or disregard, ignoring, slighting, forgetting, overlooking (see corresponding verbs at NEGLECT)

neglectful *negligent, lax, slack, remiss

Ana *careless, heedless, thoughtless

Ant attentive —Con *thoughtful, considerate negligence, neglect are not always clearly distinguished in use, even though the lines between them may be drawn with some clearness. Negligence stresses the quality or fact of being negligent or careless either as shown in a lack of care in the performance of a task, a duty, or a piece of work or in the operation or handling of a dan-gerous machine or mechanism which requires effort or close attention (<the amazing negligence of some house-keepers) (<an act of criminal negligence) (<no one has done more through negligence to corrupt the language —Byron) (most of these are involved in accidents through their own negligence—Theodore Sturgeon) or as shown in a temperamental or assumed indifference to small niceties (as in dress, manners, or style) that gives an impression of casualness, artlessness, or lack of artificiality (<spoke with conviction, yet with a gentlemanly lightness, almost a negligence, as though to cancel any tone of dogmatism . . . in his words—Wouk) (<his companion wore well-cut tweeds with a sort of aggressive negligence, as though he hated them—I. A. R. Wylie) Neglect, on the other hand, applies either to the act or fact of leaving undone or carelessly, inadequately, or imperfectly done something which it is one's business or duty to do (<convicted of neglect of duty) (<we made a nice tidy cleanup . . . If I hadn't done it I ought either to have been shot for neglect or dismissed for incapacity—H. G. Wells) (<in dealing with the infant . . . there is need of a delicate balance between neglect and indulgence—Russell) or to the state or fact of being neglected, slighted, ignored, or forgotten (<rescue my poor remains from vile neglect—Prior) (<a . . . motive for reading it . . . [that] ensured poetry against neglect—Day Lewis) (<destined either to constantly inadequate execution or to complete neglect—Virgil Thomson) For these reasons the phrase "the negligence of a person" always refers to a quality of character of the person as an agent or to its outward manifestation (as in an act, a piece of work, or an accident) while "the neglect of a person" refers to the act of another who neglects, slights, ignores, or forgets the person, thereby making the latter his victim.

Ana laxness, slackness, remissness (see corresponding adjectives at NEGLIGENT): indifference, unconcernedness or unconcern, incuriousness (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT)

Ant attention: solicitude —Con *care, concern, anxiety, worry: diligence, assiduity, sedulousness (see corre-sponding adjectives at BUSY) negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss are comparable when applied to persons, their ways of working or acting, and the results of their work or activities with the meaning culpably careless or manifesting such carelessness. Negligent implies such culpable inattentiveness as is likely to result in imperfection, incompleteness, slovenliness, or danger or damage to others (his family knew him to be . . . a most negligent and dilatory correspondent—Austen) (so negligent in his poetical style . . . so slovenly, slipshod, and infelicitous—Arnold) (a careless workman, negligent of detail—Edith Hamilton) Neglectful is usually more derogatory or censorious than negligent, for it carries a stronger connotation of laziness or deliberate and blameworthy inattention (parents neglectful of their children's health) (a government at once insatiable and neglectful—Mill) (show no trace of shame, and . . . are utterly neglectful of what we consider the first requirements of decency—Westermarck) Lax (see also LOOSE) implies a usually blameworthy lack of necessary strictness, severity, or precision; the term applies chiefly to persons who do not satisfy the rigorous demands made upon them by their work or duties or to work or an activity performed or carried on without the close attention, constant care, or strict adherence to law or custom that is necessary (a lax parent) (a lax discipline) (a lax morals) (a lax interpretation of a law) (scandalously lax in restraining drunkards from annoying the sober—Trevelyan) (we do not intend to leave things so lax that loopholes will be left for cheaters—Roosevelt) Slack (see also LOOSE) stresses the want of proper or necessary diligence and expedition as well as of care; the term usually also implies indolence or sluggishness or indifference (a slack workman) (we keep our wits slack—H. G. Wells) When applied to what is accomplished by a slack worker, the term usually suggests neglect of important details necessary to the completeness, finish, or perfection of the work (a three-quarters figure of admirable design, though of rather slack execution—Stobart) (a fine nose for what was slack in the play or insufficiently developed—Mailer) Remiss implies culpable carelessness that shows itself in slackness and forgetfulness or in negligence; it is applied chiefly to something lax in performance or maintenance, but it may be applied to a person who is unduly careless or lax in the performance of his duties (remiss housekeeping) (a remiss police officer) (it certainly had been very remiss of him, as Mayor . . . to call no meeting ere this—Hardy) (so remiss did they become in their attentions that we could no longer rely upon their bringing us the daily supply of food—Melville)

Ana *careless, heedless, thoughtless, inadvertent: *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious: *slipshod, slovenly Con *rigid, strict, rigorous: *thoughtful, considerate, attentive negotiate 1 parley, treat, *confer, commune, consult, advise

2 Negotiate, arrange, concert are comparable when they mean to bring about or accomplish by mutual agreement especially after discussion or parley. Negotiate and arrange both imply prior exchange of views and wishes and, sometimes, settlement by bargaining or compromise. Negotiate, however, is somewhat more formal and is especially appropriate when the dealings are carried on by diplomatic, business, or legal agencies, while arrange (see also ORDER) may retain some notion of its basic idea of putting in order and is especially applicable to dealings tending to the establishment or restoration of order or to those carried on by private persons or their representatives (negotiate a treaty) (arrange a marriage) (negotiate a monetary understanding with the British government—Current Biog.) (arrange the settlement of a case out of court) (a peace with the native chiefs was arranged and the crisis passed—McPherson) Concert implies a planning together and especially a settling upon a joint course of action through conference and negotiation (a conference of Commonwealth finance ministers . . . to discuss the balance-of-payments crisis in the sterling area and to concert action to deal with it—Americana Annual) (with in another generation there will be another world war if the nations of the world do not concert the method by which to prevent it—Woodrow Wilson) neighborhood *locality, district, vicinity neighborly friendly, *amicable

Ana peaceful, peaceable, *pacific: *social, hospitable, gregarious, cooperative: cordial, sociable, *gracious

Ant unneighborly: ill-disposed —Con antagonistic, *adverse neophyte *novice, novice, probationer, postulant, apprentice neoplasm *tumor, malignancy, cancer nepenthe *anodyne, opiate, narcotic neritic *aquatic, marine, oceanic, thalassic, pelagic, abyssal, lacustrine, fluvial, fluvialite nerve n effrontery, *temerity, audacity, hardihood, cheek, gall

Ana boldness, intrepidity (see corresponding adjectives at BRAVE): *fortitude, grit, pluck, sand, guts: foolhardiness, recklessness (see corresponding adjectives at ADVENTUROUS) nerve vb *encourage, inspirit, hearten, embolden, cheer, steel

Ana *strengthen, invigorate, fortify, energize: rally, *stir, rouse, arouse: *renew, restore, refresh

Ant unnerve —Con enervate, unman, emasculate (see UNNERVE): *discourage, dishearten, dispirit, deject nervous 1 *vigorous, lusty, energetic, strenuous

Ana forceful, forcible, potent, *powerful: *spirited, mettlesome: virile, manly (see MALE)

2 *impatient, restless, restive, unquiet, uneasy, fidgety, jumpy, jittery

Ana excited or excitable, stimulated, provoked or provocative (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE): *inconstant, unstable, mercurial

Ant steady —Con constant, even, equable, uniform (see STEADY) nettle provoke, exasperate, *irritate, aggravate, rile, peeve Ana *annoy, irk, bother, vex: disturb, perturb, agitate, upset, *discompose: fret, chafe, gall (see ABRABE)

network *system, scheme, complex, organism, economy neurologist, psychiatrist, alienist, psychopathologist, psychotherapist, psychoanalyst are comparable though not synonymous terms that denote a specialist in mental disorders. A neurologist is a physician skilled in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of the nervous system, that is, of diseases (as epilepsy or locomotor ataxia) that involve structural or functional disorder of nervous tissue. Psychiatrist, alienist, psychopathologist all designate a physician who devotes himself to the diagnosis and treatment of diseases affecting the mind or emotions and especially, as distinguished from neurologist, of disorders (as neurasthenia, hysteria, and paranoia) not demonstrably of physical origin. Psychiatrist is the general term, applicable to any such physician, while alienist is the preferred term in medical jurisprudence and may especially suggest skill in detection of mental derangements or of insanity, and psychopathologist may specifically apply to a physician specializing in emotional disorders and dealing largely with the dynamic factors (as defects of personality or unfavorable environment) underlying such disorders. A psychotherapist may be either a physician or a layman (as a psychologist, social worker, or clergyman) who treats mental or emotional disorder or maladjustment by psychological means and especially those involving verbal communication. A psychoanalyst is a psychotherapist and usually a physician (nonmedical psychoanalysts being often distinguished as lay analysts) who employs a form of psychotherapy, especially in the treatment of psychoneuroses, that is designed to bring unconscious and preconscious material into consciousness and involves largely the analysis of resistance and the establishment and analysis of a transference neurosis.

neutral adj Neutral, negative, indifferent are comparable when they mean lacking decisiveness or distinctiveness in character, quality, action, or effect. Neutral, in one of its earliest and still common senses, applies to states, governments, parties, or persons who refuse to take sides with either of two or any of several contending parties. The term need not imply an attitude of impartiality, but it usually implies either indecision or a refraining from positive action (his family connections kept him neutral, and the household was never drawn into the war—Buchan) (revolutionary verse . . . makes the neutral reader wonder whether it is aimed to win him for the communist or fascist state—Day Lewis) (the bucks bridled a little when I came in, and then ignored me. Once the atmosphere had become neutral again, Thompson was willing to talk—Mailer) When otherwise applied (as to colors or terms, to a character or personality, to a substance in chemistry, or to an entity in philosophy) neutral implies a quality, an appearance, or a reaction that belongs to neither of two opposites or extremes; the term therefore often connotes vagueness, indefiniteness, indecisiveness, ineffectualness; thus, a neutral character is one that reveals neither positive virtues nor positive vices; a chemically neutral substance (as distilled water) is neither acid nor basic; a neutral color (as taupe) is not clearly or positively any definite color, often because it verges on gray (the artists of the Far East . . . use positive tints quite sparingly, giving them for foil large spaces of neutral tone—Binyon) (the land itself cannot be described as rich or poor, good or bad, favorable or unfavorable. The land is entirely neutral—P. E. James) (atomic . . . was until 1945 as emotionally neutral a word as pyroborate or hygrometric. But since the explosion at Hiroshima it has assumed a new implication—Savory) Negative carries a stronger implication than neutral of absence of positive or affirmative (compare AFFIRMATIVE) characteristics or qualities; the term therefore usually implies inaction, ineffectiveness, or a failure to assume a definite or concrete form (there is certainly a vague and widespread discontent with our present results [in education]; but it is all a negative opinion—Benson) (so much of the dream was described in negative . . . terms: no hostility, no friendliness, not feared, not welcomed, not grateful, not anxious—Kelman) (the negative happiness that follows the release from anxiety and tension—Huxley) Indifferent (see also INDIFFERENT 1, MEDIUM) implies a character or appearance that does not readily define itself or fall into any clearly marked class or category; the term is applicable to things or occasionally to persons that stir up no feeling or elicit no decision as to whether they are good or bad, in accordance with one's principles or not, necessary or unnecessary, or pleasant or unpleasant (though they disliked each other, they could converse at length upon indifferent subjects) (either one attitude is better than the other, or else it is indifferent—T. S. Eliot) (the injustice . . . in making penal an act which when committed seemed innocent or at least indifferent—Radin) (nature is indifferent to the survival of the human species, including Americans—A. E. Stevenson)

Con biased, disposed, predisposed (see INCLINE vb): positive, *affirmative: *decided, decisive

neutralize, counteract, negative are comparable when they mean to make something inoperative or ineffective usually by means of an opposite force, influence, or effect. Neutralize implies an equalizing, making ineffectual or inoperative, or nullifying by an opposing force, power, agency, or effect (a quinine that can neutralize his venom; it is called courage—Davis) (neutralize the effects of propaganda with counterpropaganda so as to render the international environment favorable—Latham) (our esteem for facts has not neutralized in us all religiousness—James) Counteract may imply merely neutralizing or counterbalancing; it is often used in situations in which the good and bad or the beneficial and deleterious are opposed (these two principles have often sufficed, even when counteracted by great public calamities and by bad institutions, to carry civilization rapidly forward—Macaulay) (frequently visited the Choctaws, in an effort to counteract the influence of the French and to win them to an alliance with the English—Ghent) Negative implies an annulling, a contradicting, a making futile, useless, or ineffective, or a vitiating by an opposing force, effect, or trend (as if the wind might blow it over, thus negating the idea of solidity—Bennett) (it is only in literature that the paradoxical and even mutually negating anecdotes in the history of a human heart can be juxtaposed and annealed by art into verisimilitude and credibility—Faulkner)

Ana offset, countervail, counterbalance, counterpoise (see COMPENSATE): defeat, overcome, subdue, *conquer

new adj New, novel, new-fashioned, newfangled, modern, modernistic, original, fresh can all mean having very recently come into existence or use or into a connection, a position, or a state (as of being recognized). A thing is new that has never before the time of its advent been known, thought of, manufactured, or experienced, or that is just ready for use, sale, or circulation, or that has just been acquired (new books) (new ideas) (a new washing machine) (no man putteth new wine into old bottles—Mk 2:22) (a new way of dressing her hair) A person is new if he has just been taken into a military, business, social, or other group (a new soldier) (a new stenographer) (three new members) or if he has received his first experience (he was . . . frightened, being new to the sight—Dickens) or if he has been renewed in spirit or in mind or in body (the quiet hills which I am now seeing again, with a new and contented eye—O'Connor) (the hot food made a new man of him) A thing is novel which is not only new but so out of the ordinary course as to strike one as strange, unusual, or unfamiliar (novel forms of government, like those of Russia and Italy—Frankfurter) (novel schemes of salvation—L. P. Smith) (sermons . . . bold in thought and novel in language—Wharton) A thing is new-fashioned which is so different in form, shape, style, or character from what was previously known that it challenges curiosity or has only recently met general acceptance (new-fashioned modes of painting) (new-fashioned hats for women are regarded as absurd by many men) (the type of old-fashioned scholarship . . . the type of new-fashioned criticism—S. E. Hyman) A thing is newfangled which strikes one as unnecessarily or as ingeniously novel; often, however, the term differs little from new except in suggesting disparagement (newfangled toys) (newfangled theories of art) (a newfangled nomenclature—Hamilton) (quite a modern hostelry for its time. It had such newfangled doodads as mechanical dishwashers and potato peelers

—Green Peyton > A person or thing is modern that belongs to the present time or is especially characteristic of it; the term often implies up-to-dateness and novelty or a contrast with what has been long accepted and still is the choice of the conservative: in this special sense modernistic may be preferred to modern, but more often modernistic carries a contemptuous suggestion of the ephemerally novel <when I refer to modern music, I do not mean necessarily modernistic music, much of which is a pale afterglow of the great and original modernism of yesteryear—Virgil Thomson> Modern, however, is always preferred to modernistic when contemporaneity only is implied <in modern art atmosphere counts for so much—Wilde> <this strange disease of modern life, with its sick hurry, its divided aims, its heads o'ertaxed, its palsied hearts—Arnold> But modern is also applicable to things of more remote origin than any of the other terms; as opposed to ancient and medieval it usually implies reference to the centuries beginning with the full Renaissance up to the present <modern languages> <modern civilizations> Often, however, the dividing line between what is modern and what is too far distant in time to be called modern has to be supplied by the context <the Victorian era gave way to the modern age of machinery> <most modern well-to-do Englishmen and Americans, if they were transported by magic into the age of Elizabeth, would wish themselves back in the modern world—Russell> A person or thing is original that is or produces something new or novel and, at the same time, the first of its kind <that he would be successful in an original way, or that he would go to the dogs in an original way, seemed equally probable—Hardy> <they contain no new ideas . . . [he] was anything but an original thinker—R. A. Hall> <some areas were occupied by savages, in others there were brilliant and original civilizations—Poole> A thing is fresh that is or seems so new that it has not had time to lose the signs of newness, such as liveliness, energy, brightness, or virginal quality <fresh footprints> <receive a fresh impetus> <make a fresh start> <this was a new voice falling upon the attentive ears of youth—a fresh challenge to its native and impetuous generosity—Replier>  newfangled *new, novel, new-fashioned, modernistic, modern, original, fresh new-fashioned *new, novel, newfangled, modernistic, modern, original, fresh

Ant old

news, tidings, intelligence, advice are comparable when they designate a report or the reports of occurrences and conditions not previously known. News stresses novelty and freshness of information <the gossip was not news to her> <the letter contained no news> <wanted to tell her as quickly as he could his evil news—Buck> Since news is specifically applied to the information disseminated through public media (as radio and journals) shortly after the incidents have occurred, it also often implies distribution, even in its general sense <experts in handling news> or when used in combination <newspaper> <news-mongers> Tidings, which may be singular in construction, is somewhat bookish; it is often appropriate when it refers to news orally communicated or disseminated (as by a herald or messenger) <must have a courier who will carry the tidings of distress to those who are there to save when signals reach their ears—Cardozo> <no trace or tidings of Lynchheau was ever found—Rooney> Intelligence stresses the desirability or the practical value of the information rather than its freshness <their visits to Mrs. Philips were now productive of the most interesting intelligence—Austen> In specific military use intelligence suggests clandestine methods of gathering information (as by secret agents). It is therefore applied not only to the information gathered but to the branch of the service commissioned to gather it <an enemy superior in numbers, who possessed also the advantage in armament, position, and more accurate intelligence—Buchan> In comparison with intelligence, which often suggests the gathering of important information, advice stresses the transmission of information and implies the immediacy of its value. It, or its plural advices, is often applied to the means (as letters, telegrams, or messengers) by which this information is communicated <no doubt he had advices that Casale was sufficiently provisioned to last for many months, perhaps a year—Belloc> <beginning their advices with the revelation that a rich potential for future prosperity and happiness had been discovered in atomic energy—Burlingame> newspaper *journal, periodical, magazine, review, organ next *nearest nib *bill, beak, neb

nice 1 Nice, dainty, fastidious, finicky, finicking, finical, particular, fussy, squeamish, persnickety, pernickety can all mean exacting or displaying exacting standards (as in selection, judgment, or workmanship). Nice (see also CORRECT, DECOROUS) implies fineness of discrimination and power to distinguish the very good from the merely good; the term may connote more of intellectual quality than the other words <an appetite for knowledge too eager to be nice—Johnson> <he had a nice taste in literature and had edited Crashaw and Vaughan with conspicuous taste and much perception—Mackenzie> Nice is also applicable to questions or problems which require such powers of discrimination and subtlety or delicacy in handling if the solution is to be found  <the situation raises a nice question> <it is a nice point in ethics whether it is dishonest to rob one's own money-box—Lynd> Dainty (see also CHOICE) usually implies a tendency to select carefully what does, or to reject with more or less disdain what does not, satisfy one's extremely delicate taste or sensibility; it usually connotes chariness or a tendency to pick and choose, especially in eating <I have been silent—the hungry cannot be dainty—but it is useless to tell a pampered man this—M. W. Shelley> <no shape but his can please your dainty eye—Shak.> <it's all right to be dainty about money when you've lots of it as you have—Behrman> Fastidious implies a strong aversion to something that does not satisfy one's sense of what is right, proper, or in good taste; it may suggest the possession of ethical, artistic, social, or other standards that are so high that they impose a strain upon those who would meet them <it is . . . an advantage for an author to have two or three fastidious readers whom he can imagine sniffing at his pages—L. P. Smith> <he isn't always easy to work for, being fastidious in his standards and uncompromising in his demands—Wechsberg> or that cause suffering to the possessor when they are not satisfied <the disorder was almost more than his fastidious taste could bear—Cather> or that foster extreme care in selection from what is offered or available <why such a desperate orgy of literature? I thought you were of a more fastidious habit—not like Stanley, who insists on reading everything—Rose Macaulay> <he liked people, was . . . not too fastidious to get along with barkeepers and party toughs and sufficiently cultivated to get along with gentlemen—Commager> Finicky and finicking as well as the less common finical imply an affected or overnice fastidiousness <his reserve, his delicacy, his distaste for many of the persons and things surrounding him . . . have produced an impression of Gray as being a man falsely fastidious, finical, effeminate—Arnold) <his voice is too soft, his manners too precise. He is genial, yet he is finicky—Mailer) <finicking fishermen demand almost as many rods as there are varieties of fish—Monsanto Mag.) Particular implies an insistence that all details or circumstances must be exactly as one wishes them or that one's special or peculiar standards must be met. In contrast with fastidious, particular need not imply what others would call a high standard; the term usually suggests standards which the individual regards as high or exacting <she is particular about the way steak should be broiled> <every year it used to get a nice coat of paint—Papa was very particular about the paint—Hellman) <when it came to sharing his walks, Henry was rather particular. Alcott served for a stroll, but the real art of walking was beyond him—Brooks) <as she approached, George Adams, who had a particular mother, rose, and Niel followed his example—Cather) Fussy is applicable not only to fastidious or particular persons and to acts that manifest a disposition to be querulous or fidgety <she was not one of the trivially fussy domesticated women—Ellis) <men who are finicky and a bundle of nerves. Fussy about their food, too—Christie) <in this matter Augustus moved slowly and tactfully. He was no lawyer, and he had not the fussy interest of Claudius in the work of the courts—Buchan) <indenting each paragraph half the width of a page, in a fussy, old-maidish sort of way—Robert Lewis) but also to things that are especially difficult or complicated <he looked like a natural for the fussy bookkeeping routine of an orderly room—Birney)  Squeamish implies a tendency to be easily nauseated by the sight, taste, smell, or hearing of something disagreeable <the starved stomach is not squeamish—Hudson) In its extended use it implies a disgust for or an aversion to anything that does not satisfy one's standards of what is decent, delicate, or nice; it therefore sometimes connotes extreme sensitiveness or prudishness or scrupulousness <as to the nudities . . . they might well have startled a not very squeamish eye—Hawthorne) <our nerves . . . are unduly delicate, and our tastes too squeamish—Stephen) <he came of vigorous stock, prone to consult its own will and speak its opinions with no squeamish concern for a neighbor's views—Parrington) <since the daughter may fascinate the duke, and he would feel squeamish about incest, the relationship must be kept secret—Times Lit. Sup.) Persnickety and pernickety convey the user's reaction of annoyance, exasperation, or disgust toward persons who are unduly fussy or finical, or tasks or problems that are so delicate or complicated as to impose severe strain on one's patience and good temper <approached native food and drink pretty much like a persnickety peacetime tourist—Pyle) <the grammarian, the purist, the pernickety stickler for trifles—Mathews) <new mechanical devices . . . may be all right for those pernickety fellows, the exact scientists or the social scientists, but the humanities get along well enough without them—H. M. Jones)

Ana *wise, judicious, sage, sapient: punctilious, meticulous, scrupulous, *careful: discriminating, discerning, penetrating (see corresponding nouns at DISCERNMENT)

Con *coarse, gross, vulgar: crude, callow, green, uncouth, raw (see RUDE): *negligent, lax, remiss, neglectful, slack

2 precise, exact, accurate, *correct, right

Ana strict, *rigid, rigorous, stringent: exquisite, delicate, rare (see CHOICE adj)

Con *random, haphazard, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky:

*careless, heedless, inadvertent

3 proper, seemly, *decorous, decent

Ana fitting, *fit, appropriate, suitable, meet niggardly parsimonious, penurious, miserly, *stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, cheeseparing, penny-pinching

Ana *covetous, avaricious, grasping, greedy: *sparing, economical, frugal, thrifty: *mean, ignoble

Ant bountiful —Con *liberal, generous, bounteous, openhanded, munificent, handsome: *profuse, lavish, prodigal nigh adj & adv *close, near, nearby

Ant far

night adj *nightly, nocturnal nightly, nocturnal, night all mean of, relating to, or associated with the night. Nightly, opposed to daily, may mean no more than this <all is quiet, no alarms; nothing fear of nightly harms—Housman) <the increase in body size may have been an important factor in releasing the early primates from their nightly or twilight feeding habits, by allowing them better to hold their own against aggressors—LaBarre) But nightly is the one of these terms that usually carries a strong implication of recurrence and is especially appropriate to convey the idea of happening night after night <there is only one novel this writer can recall which delves beneath the surface of the daily and nightly life and death of a great and influential newspaper—Harrison Smith) Nocturnal, opposed to diurnal, is often interchangeable with nightly, especially in its more general sense <the squares of light along the fifteenth story testified until midnight of their nocturnal industry—Auchincloss) <the changing beauty of nocturnal landscapes—Bennett) but distinctively it may mean active at night <shopping, working, theatergoing, and arguing hours in Barcelona never cease to amaze visitors from less nocturnal countries. Some shops stay open until well after midnight, and then are closed until the next noon—Wechsberg) <the eyes of most fish are adapted to the conditions of dim illumination associated with nocturnal feeding—Dowdeswell) Night in much of its use is interchangeable with nocturnal and may be preferred to the latter when a less formal term is required <night noises> <the night train>  Distinctively, the term is used to describe persons who work at night  <ask the night clerk> and things that occur or are intended for use at night <night baseball>

Ant daily

nightmare dream, vision, *fancy, fantasy, phantasy, phantasm, daydream

Ana *delusion, hallucination, illusion: threatening or threat, menacing or menace (see corresponding verbs at THREATEN) nimble *agile, brisk, spry

Ana sprightly, *lively, animated: alert, wide-awake, vigilant, *watchful: *supple, limber, lithe nip vb *blast, blight

Ana check, *arrest: squeeze, *press: *frustrate, thwart, balk nip n blast, blight (see under BLAST vb)

Ana arresting, checking (see ARREST vb): frigidity, freezing (see corresponding adjectives at COLD) nobility *aristocracy, gentry, county, elite, society noble 1 stately, majestic, imposing, august, magnificent, *grand, grandiose

Ana glorious, *splendid, resplendent, superb, sublime: illustrious, eminent (see FAMOUS)

Ant ignoble: cheap —Con despicable, *contemptible, sorry, scurvy, beggarly

2 virtuous, righteous, *moral, ethical

Ana honorable, *upright, just, honest Ant base (of actions): atrocious (of acts, deeds) nocturnal *nightly Ant diurnal noise n *sound Ana *din, uproar, babel, hubbub, clamor, racket, pandemonium noiseless silent, quiet, *still, stilly Ana *calm, tranquil, serene, placid Con clamorous, *vociferous, strident, boisterous noisome fetid, stinking, *malodorous, putrid, rank, rancid, fusty, musty Ana foul, nasty, squalid, filthy, *dirty: noxious, baneful, *pernicious, deleterious: loathsome, *offensive, revolting Ant balmy —Con *odorous, fragrant, aromatic, redolent nomadic *itinerant, peripatetic, ambulatory, ambulant, vagrant nom de guerre *pseudonym, alias, pen name, nom de plume, incognito nom de plume pen name, nom de guerre, *pseudonym, alias, incognito nominate *designate, name, elect, appoint Ana propose, *intend, mean, purpose: present, tender, *offer, proffer nominee *candidate, aspirant, applicant nonage *infancy, minority Ant age nonchalant unruffled, imperturbable, unflappable, *cool, composed, collected Ana unconcerned, *indifferent, aloof, detached: light-hearted, cheerful, *glad: *easy, effortless, light, smooth Con concerned, solicitous, anxious, worried, careful (see under CARE n) non compos mentis *insane, mad, crazy, crazed, demented, deranged, lunatic, maniac nonconformist n dissenter, sectary, sectarian, *heretic, schismatic nonesuch *paragon, apotheosis, nonpareil nonmoral unmoral, amoral, *immoral nonpareil *paragon, apotheosis, nonesuch nonplus bewilder, distract, confound, dumbfound, mystify, perplex, *puzzle Ana faze, rattle, *embarrass, discomfit, disconcert: *confuse, muddle: baffle, balk, *frustrate nonreligious unreligious, *irreligious, ungodly, godless Ana secular, *profane, lay, temporal nonsense, twaddle, drivel, bunk, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull are comparable when they mean something said or proposed which is senseless or absurd. Nonsense is the most general of these terms; it may be referred to action or behavior as well as to utterances or to proposals, and it may imply foolery or humbuggery as well as absurdity or senselessness <no throaty oratorical nonsense was there—White> <she told them she would stand no more of their nonsense> <then let Esther give up this nonsense of hers!—Deland> Twaddle applies to silly empty utterance and suggests the speech of persons who know nothing about a subject yet talk or write about it foolishly, verbosely, or artlessly <weary of the twaddle of theorists> <that reasoning was unadulterated twaddle—Roosevelt> Drivel implies a flow of such idle, inane, or commonplace talk as might befit an imbecile or an idiot; it is a highly contemptuous term for nonsensical spoken or written utterances <phrases which on the face of them may be platitudinous to a degree approaching drivel—Montague> <writes endless narcissistic drivel in a stream-of-consciousness and disorganized manner—Deutsch> Bunk is an equivalent of nonsense and applies especially to an utterance (as a speech, an opinion, or a doctrine) which, though lacking in real worth or substance, either by intent or by the gullibility of those who listen or accept, hits the popular fancy because it is pretentious, plausible, or high-sounding <they denounced the scheme as bunk> Balderdash and poppycock may apply to confused, turgid, complex utterances that lack or seem to lack sense  <the Dissertations are a fascinating farrago of the soundest linguistic common sense and the most egregious poppycock—Pyles> but both words may imply an attempt to mislead or deceive by such utterances <repeats more than once the old and obvious balderdash that the court . . . eschews the deciding of “political questions”—Rodell> <psychology is the youngest of the sciences, and hence chiefly guesswork, empiricism, hocus-pocus, poppycock—Mencken> and both may suggest an unwillingness to see sense on the part of the one that uses them <Uncle William, who thinks your views are all poppycock—Glasgow> <nothing looks stronger or less in need of scrutiny than a commonplace, up to the moment when, having outlived its usefulness, it begins to be called poppycock—Gill> Gobbledygook is used of wordy unintelligible jargon especially when featuring the obscure or technical verbiage of some special field (the current law is a masterpiece of complexity and gobbledygook, and few will contend that the law is successful at all in distinguishing excess profits from ordinary profits—Magill> <the all-too-common passion for pseudo-scientific gobbledygook—one of the ill-begotten offspring of excessive specialization—Odegard> Trash, rot, and bull are applicable to utterances regarded as worthless or confusingly inaccurate or misleading. Trash may stress the empty worthlessness especially of written material <this book is utter trash . . . pure quackery and without scientific standing—Zirkle> and rot, the user's disbelief or disgust <you are just the sort of woman to believe in that kind of rot—Braddon> Bull in its more general use may apply to a grotesque or ludicrous blunder in language <in their most telling appearance they are, to make a bull of it, invisible—Liebling> but often it is a slang term denoting trivial, verbose, and commonly boastful or inaccurate utterance <have no fear of “essay exams,” even prefer them, and the instructor must watch out for the fine old custom of writing bull—La Farge> <sat around shooting the bull> or facile speech intended to deceive <he said bluntly, “You think I'm givin' you a line o' bull—Harold Sinclair>

Ana absurdity, preposterousness, silliness, foolishness (see adjectives at FOOLISH): asininity, fatuousness (see corresponding adjectives at SIMPLE)

nonsocial *unsocial, asocial, antisocial norm *average, mean, median, par normal *regular, typical, natural

Ana ordinary, *common, familiar: *usual, customary, habitual, wonted, accustomed

Ant abnormal

nosy *curious, inquisitive, prying, snoopy

Ana meddlesome, *impertinent, intrusive, obtrusive notable *noteworthy, memorable

Ana *noticeable, remarkable, prominent, outstanding, extraordinary: eminent, celebrated (see FAMOUS)

note vb remark, notice, perceive, discern, observe, contemplate, survey, view, *see, behold, descry, esp note n 1 *sign, mark, token, badge, symptom

Ana indication, betokening, bespeaking, attesting (see corresponding verbs at INDICATE): character, *quality, property, attribute, accident

2 *remark, observation, comment, commentary, obiter dictum

Ana annotation, gloss (see under ANNOTATE): remembering, reminding or reminder, recalling (see corresponding verbs at REMEMBER)

3 *letter, epistle, missive, message, dispatch, report, memorandum noteworthy, notable, memorable mean having some quality that attracts one's attention. Noteworthy implies a quality and often a degree of excellence in a person or thing that justifies observation or remark (enough to make a philosopher noteworthy . . . not enough to make him great—Arnold) (the appearance of a book which formulates a distinct philosophy of life is a rare and noteworthy event—Cohen) Notable too stresses the power of a person or thing to attract attention, but often it distinctively connotes such a special feature as an excellence, a virtue, a value, or a significance that gives rise to its being noted or remembered (the clock kept time with notable accuracy and pertinacity—New Yorker) (it is a symbol of the abnormality of our days that it should be notable when anyone dares stand up and criticize what is happening in America—Bliven b. 1889) (Elizabethan and Jacobean poetry . . . had this and that notable quality, but, when we wish to admit that it had defects, it is rhetorical—T. S. Eliot) Memorable stresses the capacity in a person or thing not only of attracting attention but of being worthy to be remembered; it sometimes implies a personal reason for remembrance (a girl with long black hair and a memorable figure—Gibbs) (for the irrepresible Lyovochka this first venture into the great world beyond the towered gates was a memorable event—Simmons) (this extravagant temperament endeared him and his work to the public, and it let him write and draw with memorable vividness—Devoe) (his very occasional compliments, steeped in vinegar though they always were, seem more memorable than those of others—Osbert Sitwell)

Ana *noticeable, remarkable, prominent, conspicuous: patent, manifest, *evident

notice vb remark, observe, note, perceive, discern, *see, behold, descry, espy, view, survey, contemplate

Ana recognize, *acknowledge: *refer, advert, allude

Con ignore, slight, overlook, disregard, *neglect noticeable, remarkable, prominent, outstanding, conspicuous, salient, signal, striking, arresting can all mean attracting or compelling notice or attention. Noticeable implies that the thing so described is unlikely to escape observation (a noticeable aversion to his company) (so slight a movement it was barely noticeable—a tiny pushing forward of the hand—Dahl) Remarkable adds to noticeable the further implication of inviting comment or of demanding a call to others' attention; it commonly imputes to the thing so described an extraordinary or exceptional character (he has a remarkable gift for making friends) (far too much has been written and said about ghosties and ghoulies . . . They're remarkable enough, but have you ever realized that things that are remarkable are by definition rare?—Theodore Sturgeon) Prominent seldom loses its basic implication of protuberance or projection above a level or beyond a surface; it is applied appropriately to things that noticeably protrude from their background (a prominent nose) (feeble gleams . . . served to render sufficiently distinct the more prominent objects around—Poe) In extended use it is applied to persons or things that stand out so clearly from their surroundings that they are often in evidence, are generally known or recognized, or are frequently pointed out; in such use it typically attributes superiority or importance to what it describes (the church occupies a prominent position in the community) (the second prominent fault in our reading and thinking is that we have not learned to fix our attention discriminatingly—Mott) (with regard to ill fortune . . . fate is given the most prominent part—Linton) Outstanding, although it implies prominence, is applicable only to what rises above or beyond others of the same kind and is remarkable by comparison with them (stories of outstanding legislators who had to resign simply because they couldn't afford to serve any longer—Armbrister) Conspicuous is applicable chiefly to what is so obvious or patent that the eye or the mind cannot miss it (conspicuous merit) (conspicuous bravery) (there was also some Yankee shrewdness here, for to be conspicuous—to be a hero—might entail some untoward financial responsibilities—Cheever) It is also used to describe what strikes the eye or the mind, often unpleasantly, through its singularity (wear conspicuous clothes) (made himself conspicuous by his affectations) (his supporters are conspicuous by their absence) (against spending money for cement sidewalks, which he considered conspicuous waste—E. W. Smith) Salient stresses emphatic quality and is applied to what demands the attention or impresses itself insistently upon the mind; it imputes significance more often than obtrusiveness to the thing so described (there are days rich in salient news and days far from rich in it—Montague) (pick the salient details out of dull verbiage—Marquand) Signal suggests such distinction from what is ordinary or usual that the thing so described is in itself remarkable or memorable (a signal mark of esteem) (such an appointment is a signal distinction though its value is mainly honorific—Manoukian) (Emily Dickinson is a signal illustration of this assertion. The imagination of this spinster . . . was constantly aware that the universe surrounded every detail of life—Thornton Wilder) Striking is applicable to what impresses itself powerfully and deeply upon the observer's mind or vision (one easily remembers the striking scenes in a play) (give a striking example of loyalty) (a woman of striking beauty) (one of the most striking and fearful figures in our early fiction—Parrington) Arresting adds to striking the suggestion of capturing attention or of being of more than passing interest (an arresting personality) (an arresting story) (the slight, steel-colored figure with steel-colored hair, was more arresting in its immobility than all the vociferations and gestures of the mob—Galsworthy)

Ana *evident, manifest, obvious, palpable, patent notify apprise, advise, acquaint, *inform

Ana announce, *declare, proclaim, publish, promulgate, broadcast: *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge, tell notion *idea, concept, conception, thought, impression

Ana *opinion, view, belief, conviction, persuasion, sentiment notoriety reputation, repute, éclat, *fame, celebrity, renown, honor, glory

Ana *publicity, ballyhoo, promotion, propaganda notwithstanding, in spite of, despite are often interchangeable prepositions. Notwithstanding, the least emphatic, merely implies the presence of an obstacle; in spite of, the most emphatic, suggests active opposition or strongly adverse considerations to be encountered; despite is somewhat lighter in its emphasis than in spite of and otherwise is closer to notwithstanding than to in spite of (notwithstanding the rain, I shall go) (I shall go in spite of all your efforts to prevent me) (despite his assurances, I doubted him)

nourish *feed, pasture, graze

Ana *nurture, nurture, foster, cultivate nourishment nutriment, sustenance, *food, aliment, pabulum, pap

Ana support, keep, maintenance, sustenance, *living novel adj *new, new-fashioned, newfangled, modern, modernistic, original, fresh

Ana *strange, singular, unique, peculiar Con *usual, customary, habitual: ordinary, *common, familiar novice, novitiate, apprentice, probationer, postulant, neophyte are comparable when applied to one who is a beginner, especially in a trade, a profession, a career, or a sphere of life. Novice and the less common novitiate may be applied to anyone who comes under this description, since inexperience is their chief distinguishing implication   <acquaint the novice with the manuscripts about which the experts talk—Monaghan> <show the Communist novitiate as a human being with idealistic impulses—Daniel Bell> <*novitiate*s to the druidic priesthood required twenty years' training in the mysteries—C. W. Ferguson> Novice is specifically applied to a new member of a religious order who is undergoing training before taking first and usually not the final vows. Apprentice is applicable to a beginner who is serving under another as his master or teacher  <the breathless, the fructifying adoration of a young apprentice in the atelier of some great master of the Renaissance—Brooks> In such applications it emphasizes subjection to supervision and discipline rather than inexperience. It often denotes a young person who is starting his working career as a beginner at a skilled trade under an arrangement involving both work and on-the-job tuition and often a planned schedule of supplementary study or applies to an enlisted man in the United States Navy (usually called in full apprentice seaman) who is receiving instruction in seamanship, gunnery, and the rudiments of a general education. Probationer designates a beginner who is on trial for a period of time and must prove his aptitude for the work or life <the young ones who are seeking recognition and establishment—the graduate students and the instructors—in general, the probationers in the field—R. M. Weaver> <the brevity and vanity of this life, in which we are but probationers—Richardson> Postulant implies candidacy for admission (as into a religious order); it may also imply acceptance for a period of probation <the Essenes had books of their own which the postulant for admission to their sect had to swear to preserve—Jeffery> <words . . . often answering to calls too subtle for analysis, are constantly presenting themselves as postulants for recognition—Fitzedward Hall> Neophyte usually suggests initiation, and is applicable to one who is learning the ways, methods, or principles of something (as an art, a science, a society, a club, or a religious faith) with which he is newly connected <such an encounter usually perplexes the neophyte at first—M. C. Cooke> It often carries connotations of innocence and youthful eagerness derived from its association with a newly baptized person or convert to Christianity <the old philosopher of Monticello was more than pleased with this ardent neophyte Not since his own years abroad had Jefferson seen such an eager student—Brooks>

Ana beginner, starter, commencer (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN): *amateur, dilettante, dabbler, tyro

novitiate *novice, apprentice, probationer, postulant, neophyte noxious baneful, *pernicious, deleterious, detrimental Ana injurious, hurtful, harmful (see corresponding nouns at INJURY): *poisonous, virulent, venomous, toxic, pes-tilent, miasmatic: noisome, stinking, fetid, putrid (see MALODOROUS)

Ant wholesome, sanitary nuance *gradational, shade

Ana distinction, difference (see DISSIMILARITY): *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, dash, tinge: *trace, vestige

nucleus *center, middle, midst, core, hub, focus, heart nude adj *bare, naked, bald, barren

Ant clothed

nudge vb *poke, prod, jog

Ana *push, thrust, shove nudge n poke, prod, jog (see under POKE vb) nugatory *vain, otiose, idle, empty, hollow

Ana worthless, valueless (see affirmative nouns at WORTH): trifling, trivial, *petty, paltry; ineffectual, *ineffective, inefficacious: fruitless, bootless, *futile, vain, abortive nullify, negate, annul, abrogate, invalidate in general use are often interchangeable without marked loss. All then mean to deprive of effective or continued existence. One thing nullifies another when it reduces the latter to nothingness or deprives it of effectiveness, validity, or value <[his] historical breadth in posing the problem of human life and destiny has been nullified . . . by his philosophic narrowness in seeking the answer—Mumford> <each of his virtues . . . was nullified by some rampant vice—Buchan> <when intelligent people murder themselves, or are nullified by inertia, or stereotyped by publicity, it's serious—Morley> One thing negates another when one cannot coexist with the other or both are mutually destructive <our actions often negate our principles> <in the water, however, buoyancy largely negates gravity, and a mass that would mean crushing death on land is supported under water without trouble—Asimov> One thing annuls another (see also ANNUL) when it neutralizes the effect of the other or deprives it of power to act or work <mystery does not annul meaning but enriches it—Niebuhr> <steady, appeasing; mitigating the need, annulling even the reason for action—Boyle> One thing abrogates another (see also ANNUL) when it effectively dispenses with or abolishes the latter <this law abrogates the rights of the minority> <abrogated their right to the atomic bomb when they drove a few leading scientists from their shores—Berkner> One thing invalidates another when it deprives the latter of its force or legality. Invalidate usually implies failure to meet tests of soundness or to conform to imposed conditions  <let us try to discover how far the facts confirm or invalidate this proud claim—Huxley> <he . . . had the misuse of an extensive vocabulary and so was able to invalidate a great number of words and expressions—Connolly> Ana *neutralize, negative, counteract: offset, counter-vail, counterbalance, *compensate: *limit, restrict, confine number n 1 quantity, whole, total, aggregate, *sum, amount

2 Number, numeral, figure, digit, integer are comparable when they mean the character or characters by which an arithmetical value is designated. Number is the general term and is interchangeable with the others; it may refer to the word as well as to the character or characters <the number forty-five> and it may designate an abstraction or may have reference to concrete things <6 is a perfect number, that is, it represents the sum of its divisors 1, 2, and 3> <the number of books was 1200> A number may be classified as a cardinal number, according as it answers the question, how many? <ten or 10 and thirty-three or

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

33 are cardinal numbers) or as an ordinal number, according as it indicates order or succession (the ordinal numbers first or 1st and second or 2d) Numeral is much narrower for it refers only to a cardinal number that is expressed by a character or characters; it therefore stresses the characters more than the values (the Roman numerals I, V, X, L, C, D, M) (the Arabic numerals 1, 2, 3 . . .) (a license plate bearing both letters and numerals) (the numerals on the boys' sweaters indicate their class by telling the year when they will graduate) Figure applies to the character representing a numerical value, and usually suggests use of Arabic notation. The term is frequently employed in the plural implying the use of these characters in expressing a number (write all your numbers in figures) (the cost went into four figures) (legally, when there is a discrepancy in a document between numbers written out and expressed in figures, those written out are accepted) Digit may refer to any of the whole numbers from one through nine or the numerals that denote these, or it may expressly refer to any one of the ten Arabic numerals (0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9) by which all numbers can be expressed (the nine digits in arithmetic—Priestley) (the numbers in arithmetic are expressed by the . . . ten digits—Charles Hutton) Integer is a mathematical term for a number (whole number) that is not or does not contain a fraction (11 $\frac{2}{3}$ is not an integer) (express your answers in integers, omitting all fractional parts)

number vb *count, tell, enumerate

Ana *calculate, compute, estimate, reckon numeral n *number, figure, digit, integer numerous *many, several, sundry, various, divers, multifarious

Ana *large, great, big: abundant, *plentiful, plenteous nun *religious, monk, friar nuncio legate, internuncio, chargé d'affaires, *ambassador, minister, envoy nunnery *cloister, monastery, convent, abbey, priory nuptial adj *matrimonial, conjugal, connubial, hymeneal, marital nuptial n *marriage, matrimony, wedlock, wedding, espousal nurse vb Nurse, nurture, foster, cherish, cultivate are comparable especially when they mean to give the care necessary to the growth, development, or continued welfare or existence of someone or something. Nurse basically implies close care of and attention to someone (as an infant or a sick person) unable to care for himself with the idea of helping that one to grow strong and self-sufficient (he was slowly nursed back to health) In extended use the term implies similar sedulous attentions that feed or nourish and thereby strengthen what was at first weak, indefinite, or tentative (when I would muse in boyhood . . . and nurse resolves and fancies—Housman) (we sat very quiet, not speaking at all, each nursing his own fears and excitements—Dahl) (they sulkily avoid his eye, and nurse their wrath in silence—Shaw) Nurture stresses the rearing and training, and so the determination of the course the person, or by extension the thing, will follow (by solemn vision, and bright silver dream, his infancy was nurtured—Shelley) (reverence for age and authority, even for law, has disappeared; and in the train of these have gone the virtues they engendered and nurtured—Dickinson) Foster implies encouragement or promotion of the growth or increase of something (age, I find, fosters the finer feelings—L. P. Smith) (everything . . . had fostered in the princess a like conviction—Henry James) (the teaching that fosters these ends succeeds; the teaching which neglects them fails—Suzzallo) (governments have deliberately fostered nationalistic fervor to serve their own political purposes—Huxley) Cherish stresses loving, protective care (as of a nurse or a parent for a child, or of a husband for a wife) (to love and to cherish, till death do us part—Anglican Marriage Service: Book of Common Prayer) In its extended use it is not always distinguishable from nurse, but it may retain its implications of holding dear or as a thing of value, and stress prizing and preserving rather than brooding over or causing to increase in strength (tablecloths and napkins . . . washed and ironed again and again, mended and cherished—Shirley Jackson) (from the first, separately and together, she and I had cherished ideals of freedom and independence . . . and cast contempt on the narrow self-absorption of domestic love—Ellis) (Julius was a bold iconoclast about republican forms which had survived their usefulness; Augustus sought to cherish whatever of these forms could be made to work—Buchan) Cultivate basically implies the care and attention given to land in order to increase its fertility or to plants in order to improve their condition. In its extended use it implies comparable and equally sedulous attentions to the improvement or growth of some usually desirable thing (his sense of personal initiative is cultivated instead of being diminished—Russell) (we shall do well to foster the studies most conducive to the habits we wish to cultivate—Grandgent) (bred to patience—a barmaid since age thirteen—she had cultivated and perfected a vast cowlike calm which served her now in good stead—Pynchon)

Ana *feed, nourish: promote, *advance, further, forward: *indulge, pamper, humor nurture vb foster, *nurse, cherish, cultivate

Ana raise, rear (see LIFT): train, educate, school, discipline (see TEACH): *support, uphold, back

Con *neglect, overlook, disregard, ignore nutriment nourishment, sustenance, *food, aliment, pabulum, pap

Ana maintenance, support, keep, bread and butter, *living

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

O

obdurate inexorable, *inflexible, adamant, adamantine Ana *hardened, indurated, callous: *obstinate, stubborn, mulish, stiff-necked: *immovable, immobile Con *tender, compassionate: yielding, submitting, succumbing, relenting (see YIELD)

obedient, docile, tractable, amenable, biddable mean submissive to the will, guidance, or control of another. Though applied chiefly to persons, they are sometimes extended to things. Obedient implies due compliance with the commands or requests of a person or power whose authority one recognizes or accepts (obedient to the law) (he seemed to have lost all power of will; he was like an obedient child—Maugham) When applied to things it implies compulsion by a superior force or movement in accordance with natural law (tides obedient to the moon) (and floating straight, obedient to the stream, was carried towards Corinth—Shak.) (faces of others seem like stars obedient to symmetrical laws—Spender) Docile implies a responsiveness to teaching, but it stresses either a predisposition to submit to guidance or control or an indisposition to resist impositions or to rebel against authority (that is a question which you must excuse my child from answering. Not, sir, from want of will, for she is docile and obedient—Hudson) (whatever doctrine is best calculated to make the common people docile wage slaves—Shaw) (she is a gentle, docile person . . . I think she can be molded into exactly what you would wish her to be—Gibbons) Tractable, which is nearly as often applied to things as to persons and animals, suggests success or ease in handling or managing (one of the most tractable liquid propellants is gasoline—Space Handbook) Unlike docile, which in many ways it closely resembles, it seldom when applied to persons or animals implies a submissive temperament; thus, a docile child is always tractable, but a strong-willed child may prove tractable when he is wisely guided (kept warning him that it really was pneumonia, and that if he wouldn't be tractable he might not get over it—Day) (a wave of rebelliousness ran through the countryside. Bulls which had always been tractable suddenly turned savage—George Orwell) Amenable stresses a temperamental willingness or readiness to submit, not so much in the spirit of obedience as because of a desire to be agreeable or because of a natural openness of mind (well, Joan had a broad brow; she thought things over; she was amenable to ideas—H. G. Wells) (one cannot say that Sean was amenable, but he was pliable, and more than that a wife does not need—Maurice Walsh) (the question they ask is, would he be amenable—would he play ball with the Regulars—New Republic) Biddable, a more homely word than docile, is used chiefly of children (well-behaved children, biddable, meek, neat about their clothes, and always mindful of the proprieties—Cather) (so used to being biddable that words and wishes said and shown by older folks were still like orders to her—Guthrie)

Ana *compliant, acquiescent, resigned: submissive, subdued, *tame: deferential, obeisant (see corresponding nouns at HONOR)

Ant disobedient: contumacious —Con *insubordinate, rebellious: *contrary, perverse, froward, wayward: recalcitrant, refractory, intractable, *unruly, ungovernable

obsequance deference, homage, *honor, reverence Ana allegiance, fealty, loyalty, *fidelity: respect, esteem, *regard: veneration, reverence (see under REVERE) obese corpulent, rotund, chubby, *fleshy, fat, stout, portly, plump

Ant scrawny —Con *lean, spare, angular, rawboned, lank, lanky, gaunt, skinny: *thin, slender, slim, slight obey, comply, mind are comparable when they mean to follow the wish, direction, or command of another. Obey is the general term and implies ready or submissive yielding to the authority of another (as by the performance of his command or bidding) or subjection to a higher principle or to the agency, force, or impulse by which it is actuated (honor and obey your father and mother) (the fiercest rebel against society . . . obeys most of its conventions—Muller) (in the feudal regime, disobedience to an order was treason—or even hesitation to obey—Henry Adams) (he marks how well the ship her helm obeys—Byron) (a wholesome and strenuous effort to obey at all costs the call of what was felt as “truth”—Ellis) Comply, often with with, usually carries a stronger suggestion than obey of giving in to or yielding to a person's desires or expressed requests, the rules of an organization, the requirements of a law, or the conditions of one's environment (she complied with them in order to get the instruction, but her own inner fancies broke through—Dodd) It therefore often comes close to conform and accommodate and tends to imply complaisance, dependence, or lack of a strong opinion (if he offered her any more sherry she would not be able to refuse, since all her instinct at this moment was to comply—West) (the rich woman can terrorize the poor woman by threatening to go to law with her if her demands are not complied with—Shaw) (on being invited by the brute to go outside, what could Gerald do but comply?—Bennett) Mind, though often used in the sense of obey, especially in reference to children (mind your mother, Bobby) in a weaker sense carries the implication of heeding or attending to an expressed wish, demand, or command in order that one may comply with it (now mind, mother, not a word about Uncle Richard yet—Lytton) (but if your reverence minds what my wife says, you won't go wrong—Macdonald)

Ana submit, *yield, defer, bow, succumb: accede, acquiesce, subscribe, agree, *assent

Ant command, order

obfuscate *obscure, dim, bedim, darken, eclipse, cloud, becloud, fog, befog

Ana *confuse, muddle, befuddle, fuddle, addle: stupefy, bemuse, *daze: perplex, mystify, bewilder, *puzzle obiter dictum *remark, observation, comment, commentary, note object n 1 *thing, article

Ana *affair, concern, matter, thing: *form, figure, shape, configuration

2 objective, goal, end, aim, design, purpose, *intention, intent

Ana *motive, incentive, inducement

Con result, *effect, consequence object vb Object, protest, remonstrate, expostulate, kick mean to oppose something (as a course, a procedure, a policy, or a project) especially by making known one's arguments against it. Object carries so strong an implication of dislike or aversion that it often is lacking in a clear or definite implication of vocal or other outward opposition, though frequently such a reaction is suggested (why do you always object to everything he wishes to do for you) (there's nothing wrong with being painted in the nude; artists do it all the time. But our silly husbands have a way of objecting to that sort of thing—Dahl) Protest (see also ASSERT 1) implies strong opposition and usually the presentation of objections in speech or in writing against the thing to which one objects (the residents of the district unanimously protested against the granting of the license) (swearing and protesting against every delay in the work—Anderson) (she marched with the pickets, protesting atmospheric testing—Kleiner) Remonstrate implies protestation but it carries so much stronger an implication of an attempt to convince or persuade than protest carries that it is especially appropriate when the objection is to something being done by a child, a friend, or a relative, rather than by an official or an impersonal agent, or when reproof is also implied (now and then a well-meaning friend of Sir Austin's ventured to remonstrate on the dangerous trial he was making in modeling any new plan of education for a youth—Meredith) ("Father Joseph," he remonstrated, "you will never be able to take all these things back to Denver"—Cather) Expostulate differs little from remonstrate, but it usually carries a heightened implication of firm, earnest, but friendly reasoning or insistence on the merits of one's arguments (the priestly brotherhood . . . prompt to persuade, expostulate, and warn—Cowper) (lost his temper when reporters at his press conference expostulated against playing favorites—New Republic) Kick implies strenuous protestation and, usually, an exhibition of recalcitrancy or defiance (wherefore kick ye at my sacrifice and at mine offering—1 Sam 2:29) (when the tax rate was raised for the fourth successive year, everybody kicked) (I kicked at that and said that Asquith might be limited but he was honest—Laski)

Ana *demur, balk, scruple, jib, boggle, shy, stick, stickle: *criticize, denounce, reprobate

Ant acquiesce —Con *assent, consent, agree, accede objectify externalize, materialize, incarnate, embody, *realize, actualize, hypostatize, reify objective adj 1 *material, physical, corporeal, phenomenal, sensible

Ana external, outside, *outer, outward: tangible, palpable, *perceptible

Ant subjective

2 impartial, unbiased, dispassionate, uncolored, *fair, just, equitable

Ana & Ant see those at OBJECTIVE 1 objective n object, end, goal, aim, design, purpose, *intention, intent objurgate *execrate, curse, damn, anathematize

Ana revile, vituperate (see SCOLD); condemn, denounce, reprobate, *criticize

Con applaud, *commend, compliment obligation 1 Obligation, duty are comparable when they denote what a person is bound to do or refrain from doing or for the performance or nonperformance of which he is held responsible. In ordinary usage obligation typically implies immediate constraint and a specific reference (he is under the obligation of supporting his aged mother) (the place in which folk assembled not only for worship but for the fulfillment of many other social obligations, civic, educational, and recreative—Raven) (it was plain that Greene was carrying out what he regarded as a fixed obligation—Basso) (the Ralstons fulfilled their obligations as rich and respected citizens—Wharton) Duty, on the other hand, often suggests less compulsion from immediate circumstances but a greater impulsion on moral or ethical grounds; thus, a person weighed down by a sense of duty is keenly aware of what in general he ought to do; one has a sense of obligation only in a particular case and for a particular reason (Stern Daughter of the Voice of God! O Duty! if that name thou love who art a light to guide, a rod to check the erring—Wordsworth) (the old statesman was now in a sad frame of mind, torn between duty and self-interest—Buchan) (Russell tries hard to find a place for duty in his system; he suggests that we "ought" to do the act that would through its consequences satisfy the widest range of human desires—Brand Blanshard)

Ana compulsion, constraint, restraint (see FORCE n): responsibility, accountability, answerability (see corresponding adjectives at RESPONSIBLE)

2 *debt, indebtedness, liability, debit, arrear

Ana burden, *load: promising or promise, engagement, pledging or pledge (see corresponding verbs at PROMISE) oblige 1 constrain, coerce, compel, *force

Ana *tie, bind

2 Oblige, accommodate, favor mean to do a service or courtesy. To oblige a person is to make him indebted by doing something that is pleasing to him (Punch was always anxious to oblige everybody—Kipling) (most hotels . . . will oblige if on a particular occasion you wish your meal served at a special time—Roetter) It is commonly used as a conventional acknowledgment of small courtesies or offices (there is an oversight . . . which I shall be much obliged to you to correct—Macaulay) Accommodate, when it is used of services, is often interchangeable with oblige. Sometimes, especially in the participial adjective, it implies gracious compliance (an accommodating host) or it may connote the intent to be of assistance (I was willing to accommodate you by undertaking to sell the horse—George Eliot) But accommodate often suggests a business transaction rather than an act of kindness, and an obligation to pay or repay. In such use it usually implies a loan of money or acceptance as a paying guest (see also CONTAIN) (the bank accommodated him with a short-term loan) (the hotel could not accommodate the crowd) To favor, by contrast, is to render an attention or a service out of goodwill and commonly without imposing an obligation on, or expecting a return from, the person favored (luck avored him in all his enterprises) (it was possible for one avored by the accidents of pigmentation to pass surreptitiously outside the narrow confines set by the prevailing race conceptions—Handlin) Sometimes there is a suggestion of gratuitousness or a patronizing character in the action (favor a friend with advice) (the stupidity with which he was avored by nature—Austen)

Ana gratify, *please: *benefit, profit, avail: *help, aid, assist: *support, uphold, back

Ant disoblige —Con *inconvenience, incommode, discommode, trouble obliging good-natured, complaisant, *amiable

Ana helping or helpful, aiding, assisting (see corresponding verbs at HELP): accommodating, favoring (see OBLIGE): *compliant, acquiescent: *thoughtful, considerate

Ant disobliging: inconsiderate oblique *crooked, devious

Ana *awry, askance, askew: *indirect, circuitous, roundabout

Con *direct, immediate: *straightforward, forthright: downright, *forthright obliterate efface, cancel, expunge, *erase, blot out, delete

Ana *abolish, annihilate, extinguish: *destroy, raze: annul, abrogate, negate, invalidate, *nullify oblivious *forgetful, unmindful

Ana disregarding, ignoring, forgetting, neglecting, overlooking (see NEGLECT vb)

Con *aware, conscious, cognizant: *thoughtful, attentive, considerate: alert, vigilant, *watchful obloquy 1 *abuse, vituperation, invective, scurrility, billingsgate

Ana censuring or censure, condemning or condemnation, denouncing or denunciation, criticizing or criticism (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE): calumny, *detraction, backbiting, slander, scandal

2 *disgrace, dishonor, disrepute, shame, infamy, ignominy, opprobrium, odium

Ana *stigma, brand, blot, stain: humiliation, humbling, degradation (see corresponding verbs at ABASE) obnoxious distasteful, invidious, abhorrent, *repugnant, repellent

Ana *hateful, odious, detestable, abominable: *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting

Ant grateful

obscene gross, vulgar, ribald, *coarse

Ana indecent, indelicate, *indecorous: lewd, lascivious, wanton, *licentious: foul, nasty, *dirty

Ant decent

obscurantist n Obscurantist, philistine, barbarian denote one inaccessible or opposed to enlightenment. An obscurantist is one who is precluded (as by prejudice, traditionalism, or bigotry) from intellectual candor and open-minded inquiry and who is opposed to the introduction of new and enlightened ideas and methods (from this class of obscurantists who had hitherto resisted all Western innovations there now came young leaders eager to emulate Japan—Peace Handbooks) (if liberals have not always recognized this, their opponents—obscurantists, authoritarians, and enemies of enlightenment and scientific method—have amply done so—Cohen) (as soon as one begins to hint that the strain of wickedness in the human race . . . is still with us, he is called an obscurantist and is disqualified from further public hearing—R. M. Weaver) A philistine is one whose attention is centered on material or worldly things, and is indifferent or blind to whatever makes an appeal only to the mind or soul. The term usually implies obtuseness and insensitiveness (it is only the Philistine who seeks to estimate a personality by the vulgar test of production—Wilde) (the Philistine wants to talk about morals, not to understand what is morally wrong—Farrell) Barbarian seldom wholly loses the notion of incompletely civilized that so strongly characterizes the adjective barbarian. As a result the term may be applied aptly to one whose cultural deficiency suggests that befitting a lower or more remote stage of civilization (teachers of freshman composition and mathematics search in vain for even an awareness of the recurring problem of each year's new invasion by lovable but illiterate barbarians who have to be taught the elements of grammar and arithmetic—Gideonse) (have him take his meals in the dining room . . . Let him sit with me, or he'll grow up a barbarian, with no manners—Deland)

obscure adj 1 murky, gloomy, *dark, dim, dusky

Ana shady, shadowy, umbrageous (see corresponding nouns at SHADE)

Con *clear, lucid: *bright, brilliant, luminous

2 Obscure, dark, vague, enigmatic, cryptic, ambiguous, equivocal are applied to language or expression (or less often to causes, motives, or thoughts) with the meaning not sufficiently intelligible or clearly understood. Something is obscure the true meaning of which is hidden or veiled, because of some fault or defect either in the thing itself or in the person trying to understand it (that decorum and orderliness without which all written speech must be ineffective and obscure—Ellis) (this sordid, often obscure book, without visible motive or meaning—Purdy) (the mere text of the play will often look scrappy and disjointed and obscure to a reader who does not bring to it the special theatrical imagination—Montague) Something is dark which is imperfectly revealed and therefore mysterious (I will utter dark sayings—Ps 78:2) (dark hints of revenge) (“Poison!” he whispered. But he pronounced it pye-zn, making it into a soft, dark, dangerous word—Dahl) Something is vague which is lacking in distinct outlines or in clear definition, either because it is too general or because it is so imperfectly conceived or thought out that it is incapable of clear formulation (managed to gain from Judith a vague half-promise that she would be ready as suggested—Gibbons) (we shall never gain power from vague discourse about unknown or unassimilated facts—Grandgent) Something is enigmatic which puzzles, mystifies, and, often, baffles one seeking its true meaning or significance (the enigmatic announcement was an appropriate addition to the tangled story of this country's oddest piece of real estate—Thruelsen) (here Shaw's stage direction . . . has the additional advantage of being so enigmatic that even the reader cannot understand it without aid from other Shavian sources—Nethercot) (puzzling out the threats, or the enigmatic promises, of a starry sky—Pater) Something is cryptic which is stated or expressed darkly or enigmatically; the word often implies a definite intention to perplex or to challenge (you had to intercede, with your cryptic innuendoes and mysterious head-waggings—S. S. Van Dine) (gave cryptic indications of his doubts but prudently refrained from open statements of them—Davies) Something is ambiguous which admits of more than one interpretation, largely because of the use of words having a dual or multiple meaning without giving an indication of which sense is intended (the title of this chapter is ambiguous. It promises a discussion of the end of the world, but it does not say which end—Eddington) (we are here not far from the ambiguous doctrine that art is “expression,” for “expression” may be too easily confused with “communication”—Ellis) Something is equivocal which permits a wrong or false impression, thereby admitting uncertainty and confusion or fostering error. As applied to use of words, equivocal is distinguishable from ambiguous in that it may suggest intent to deceive or evade (nor could he find much pleasure in the subtle, devious, and equivocal utterances of Solomon—Omni-book) (veil the matter with utterances capable of more equivocal meaning—H. O. Taylor) In extended use equivocal is applied to something such as an act or a mode of life that admits of two possible or plausible interpretations, one of which may be harmful or discreditable (equivocal conduct) (an equivocal gesture)

Ana abstruse, *recondite, occult, esoteric: difficult, *hard: complicated, intricate, involved (see COMPLEX); *mysterious, inscrutable

Ant distinct, obvious: celebrated (as a person) —Con

*clear, perspicuous, lucid: *evident, manifest, obvious: express, *explicit, definite obscure vb Obscure, dim, bedim, darken, eclipse, cloud, becloud, fog, befog, obfuscate all mean to make dark, indistinct, or confused. Of these terms obscure, dim, bedim, and darken all suggest the effect obtained by the lessening or the removal of illumination—the making of an object difficult to see clearly or the weakening or impairing of the ability to see with the eye or the mind. Obscure stresses the indistinctness, often concealment, of the object or idea or the uncleanness of the vision or the comprehension (there are readers of papers who . . . like the ordinary, average day, with its good human humdrum; they do not want to have its nature denied or obscured—Montague) (the faded yellow building, its original austerity of line somewhat obscured by a comfortable porch—Amer. Guide Series: Vt.) Dim and bedim stress the diminishing of light or of clarity, intensity, or luster or the consequent diminishing of capacity to see, distinguish, or comprehend (celestial tears bedimmed her large blue eyes—Byron) (the old patriotic glow began to dim its ineffable fires—H. M. Jones) Darken, although like dim and bedim suggesting a diminishing of illumination, is much richer metaphorically in suggesting strongly the alteration of an object or the impairment of clear or normal vision or mental comprehension by reason of confusion, ignorance, or evil (the yearly migrations of passenger pigeons . . . literally darkening the sky—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) (his intellect was indeed darkened by many superstitions and prejudices—Macaulay) (evils enough to darken all his goodness—Shak.) Eclipse may stand alone in suggesting the effect of an actual astronomical eclipse, the partial or total darkening or concealment of one object by another and, hence, the overshadowing or supplanting of one object by another (in the English field, Anglo-Saxon never eclipsed the study of Shakespeare or Milton—Guérard) Cloud, becloud, fog, befog, and obfuscate all suggest the obstruction or impairment of vision by clouds, fog, or vapor or, in extended use, the making of the mental perception or object of that perception murky or confused. Cloud and becloud stress the obscuring of the object, or the murky view of the object, becloud being somewhat more literary than cloud (the beginnings of our physical universe are necessarily beclouded in the swirling mists of countless ages past—F. L. Whipple) (smoke clouding the prospect before us) (the actual issues clouded by prejudice and politics) (reasoning clouded by hysteria) Fog and befog are applied possibly more frequently than cloud and becloud to matters of the understanding or mental comprehension and usually suggest a greater obstruction or impairment of clear vision of eye and mind and, so, a greater and more unnecessary indistinctness, illogicality, or confusion; fog, however, occurs freely in both the basic sense and extended or metaphorical use while befog is uncommon in literal application (their breaths fogged the windshield—Hunter) (a time of . . . pressure for him and, if his memory fogged slightly, he was not alone—S. L. A. Marshall) (questions of . . . shaking hands or not befog many people—Miall) (the willfully created misunderstandings that so often befog the American political scene—Sandburg) Obfuscate, a somewhat pompous word, suggests strongly an avoidable, often willful, obscuring of an object or confusing of the mind by darkening or illogicality (the process, not of enlightening, but of obfuscating the mind—Thoreau)

Ana *hide, conceal, screen: *disguise, cloak, mask, camouflage: *misrepresent, belie, falsify Ant illuminate, illumine obsequious *subservient, servile, slavish, menial

Ana deferential, obseisnt (see corresponding nouns at HONOR): *compliant, acquiescent: sycophantic, parasitic, toadyish (see corresponding nouns at PARASITE): cringing, fawning, truckling, cowering (see FAWN vb) Ant contumelious observation *remark, comment, commentary, note, obiter dictum

Ana *opinion, view, belief: annotation, gloss (see under ANNOTATE): *criticism, critique observe I *keep, celebrate, solemnize, commemorate Ana respect, esteem, regard (see under REGARD n): *revere, reverence, venerate

Ant violate —Con *neglect, ignore, overlook, disregard, slight

2 survey, view, contemplate, notice, remark, note, perceive, discern, *see, behold, descry, espy

Ana *scrutinize, examine, scan, inspect observer *spectator, beholder, looker-on, onlooker, witness, eyewitness, bystander, kibitzer obsolete *old, antiquated, archaic, antique, ancient, venerable, antediluvian

Ant current

obstacle, obstruction, impediment, bar, snag denote something which seriously hampers action or progress. Obstacle, which is used of both material and immaterial things, applies to an object, condition, or situation which stands in one's way and must be removed or surmounted if one is to progress or attain one's ends (love seats especially constructed for ardent couples who find such devices as armrests an obstacle to affectionate hips and hands—Green Peyton) (they smash themselves against the obstacles of circumstance—Cloete) (as to other social advancement, his record was an obstacle—S. H. Adams)

Obstruction may be used of immaterial things, but such use is often obviously figurative, for the word suggests a blocking of a way or passage (an intestinal obstruction) (any phrase repeated too often becomes an obstruction to the flow of thought and feeling. It forms a clot—Crothers) (a very much denser obstruction is in the process of being erected now by literary critics—Day Lewis) Impediment is applied to something material or immaterial which serves to hinder or delay action or progress until one is freed from it (the refugee's limited knowledge of English was for a long time an impediment to his progress in his profession) (I have made my way through more impediments than twenty times your stop—Shak.) (legal restriction is a less effective impediment than the general sentiment that respectable people do not discuss birth control—Petersen)

Bar applies to something interposed, whether by nature or by man, which serves to prevent admission or escape as effectually as the bars of a cage or prison (long sentences are a bar to easy reading—Mott) Sometimes the word carries a strong suggestion of prohibition, especially when it applies to a law or condition that restrains (under the immigration laws, a criminal record, an infectious disease, and illiteracy are bars to admission to the United States) (he found his infirmity no bar to his success in his profession) (must I new bars to my own joy create?—Dryden) Snag, from its application to a stump of a tree with jagged points which lies hidden under water and proves a hazard to boats, is extended to an obstacle or impediment which is hidden from view and which one encounters suddenly and unexpectedly (might run into a snag on the question of whether federal aid should be extended—W. H. Lawrence) Sometimes snag suggests a mere temporary impediment (after an early snag . . . he was able to proceed with his work—The Irish Digest)

Ana barrier, *bar: hindering or hindrance, blocking or block (see corresponding verbs at HINDER)

obstinate, dogged, stubborn, pertinacious, mulish, stiff-necked, pigheaded, bullheaded are comparable when they mean fixed or unyielding by temperament or nature. Obstinate implies persistent adherence, especially against persuasion or attack, to an opinion, purpose, or course; when applied to persons or to their ideas or behavior the term often suggests unreasonableness or perversity rather than steadfastness (they will not be resolute and firm, but perverse and obstinate—Burke) (so yielding doubtful points that he can be firm without seeming obstinate in essential ones—J. R. Lowell) (she was—is—a damned obstinate old girl, and the more he swore it was Elsie, the more she swore it was Deacon—Sayers) (unfortunately grammar is the subject that of all others arouses the most obstinate propensities in the human mind—Richards) Dogged adds the implication of downright and tenacious, sometimes sullen, persistence; usually, also, it connotes great determination or an unwavering purpose (dogged veracity) (dogged perseverance) (men whose hearts insist upon a dogged fidelity to some image or cause—Hardy) (his mother's influence was to make him quietly determined, patient, dogged, unwearied—D. H. Lawrence) (had a hard personality in those days . . . dogged, not altogether fair—Mailer) Stubborn is often used interchangeably with obstinate and dogged, for it implies the unyielding adherence of the one and the tenacious determination of the other; more strongly than either of them, however, it carries an implication of a native fixedness of character or of a deeply rooted quality that makes a person sturdily resistant to attempts to change his purpose, course, or opinion, or that makes a thing highly intractable to those who would work it, treat it, or manipulate it (there is something stubborn in him that makes him follow his own path even though he isn't certain where it goes—Malcolm Cowley) (Paddy and his old mare are teamed up . . . man and beast joined against stubborn nature—A. F. Wolfe) (it was all but impossible for the carpenter ever to admit himself in the wrong; but upon this occasion he swallowed his stubborn pride—Nordhoff & Hall) (poetry whose democracy is tempered by a stubborn conviction that democracy thwarts the development of the individual at its peril—Lowe) Pertinacious lacks, as compared with obstinate, the implication of resistance, and as compared with stubborn, the suggestion of inherent quality; it usually implies a chosen course and stresses its pursuit with stick-to-itiveness and, often, with a persistence that is annoying or irksome (a pertinacious beggar) (his originality lay not in any purely speculative views, but in the pertinacious curiosity, practical in its origin and aim, with which he attacked and sifted the ethical conceptions of his time—Dickinson) (arrive and look with becoming modesty at the photographers. These cynical and pertinacious gentlemen do not disappoint them—Munro) Mulish suggests an obstinacy as characteristic or as unreasonable as that of a mule (a mulish determination to make the worst of everything—T. S. Eliot) (a fierce, hot, hard, old, stupid squire . . . small brain, great courage, mulish will—Masefield) Stiff-necked, more even than obstinate or stubborn, stresses inflexibility; it often also suggests a haughtiness or arrogance that makes one incapable of respecting the commands, wishes, or suggestions of others (be ye not stiff-necked, as your fathers were, but yield yourselves unto the Lord—2 Chron 30:8) (she would have felt stiff-necked and ridiculous if she had resisted, like a republican who refuses to stand up in a London theater when "God Save the King" is played—West) (he was formidably upright . . . too stiff-necked to kneel—Dorothy Thompson) Pig-headed and bullheaded suggest a particularly perverse or stupid kind of obstinacy; therefore they are chiefly terms of severe reproach; pigheaded, however, often suggests impenetrability to argument and bullheaded, headstrong determination (many of the managing posts will be filled up by pigheaded people only because they happen to have the habit of ordering poor people about—Shaw) (there was to be no relieving intermission. Using my prerogative as author, I had been bullheaded on this point—Paul Green) (she's so bullheaded. She always has to have her way—Ginder) Ana headstrong, willful, recalcitrant, *unruly: obdurate, inexorable, *inflexible: resolute, steadfast, staunch (see FAITHFUL) Ant pliant, pliable —Con *plastic, malleable, ductile: submitting or submissive, yielding, succumbing (see corresponding verbs at YIELD): *compliant, acquiescent obstreperous *vociferous, clamorous, blatant, strident, boisterous Ana *unruly, ungovernable, intractable, headstrong, refractory: uproarious, rackety (see corresponding nouns at DIN) Con restrained, curbed, checked (see RESTRAIN): quiet, *still, silent, noiseless obstruct impede, block, *hinder, bar, dam Ana *prevent, preclude, obviate, avert: *restrain, check, curb, inhibit obstruction *obstacle, impediment, bar, snag Ana hindering or hindrance, blocking or block (see corresponding verbs at HINDER): arresting or arrest, checking or check, interruption (see corresponding verbs at ARREST) Ant assistance —Con forwarding, furthering, promoting or promotion, advancing or advancement (see corresponding verbs at ADVANCE) obtain *get, procure, secure, acquire, gain, win Ana gain, *reach, achieve, attain: effect, fulfill, accomplish, *perform obtrude *intrude, interlope, butt in Ana *interpose, interfere, intervene, mediate obtrusive intrusive, meddlesome, *impertinent, officious Ana inquisitive, *curious, prying, snoopy, nosy: blatant, strident (see VOCIFEROUS) Ant unobtrusive: shy obtuse *dull, blunt Ana insensitive, *insensible, anesthetic, impassible: stolid, phlegmatic, *impassive Ant acute —Con *sharp, keen: sensitive, susceptible, open, exposed (see LIABLE) obverse n *converse, reverse obviate preclude, *prevent, avert, ward Ana evade, elude, avoid, *escape: forestall, anticipate, *prevent: *interpose, interfere, intervene obvious *evident, manifest, patent, distinct, apparent, palpable, plain, clear Ana prominent, conspicuous, salient, signal, striking (see NOTICEABLE) Ant obscure: abstruse occasion n 1 *opportunity, chance, break, time Ana *juncture, pass: situation, posture, condition, *state: moment, *instant 2 *cause, determinant, antecedent, reason Ana incident, *occurrence, event: *origin, source, inception occasional *infrequent, uncommon, scarce, rare, sporadic Ana casual, desultory, *random: incidental, *accidental Ant customary —Con *usual, habitual, accustomed, wonted: constant, *continual, continuous occult esoteric, *recondite, abstruse Ana *mysterious, inscrutable, arcane: mystic, cabalistic, *mystical, anagogic occupation employment, *work, calling, pursuit, business occur *happen, chance, befall, betide, transpire Ana rise, arise, *spring, emanate, issue, proceed: *follow, succeed, ensue, supervene occurrence, event, incident, episode, circumstance are comparable when they denote something that happens or takes place. Occurrence is the general term for something which takes place (such a happy and convenient occurrence, the princess's conversion—H. G. Wells) (chanced to witness Pussy's death—happily no common occurrence, as a cat, like an Englishman, considers dying a strictly private affair—Replier) (I have not . . . quoted conversation or described occurrence from the private life of named or recognizable living persons—Yeats) Event is frequently regarded as arising from an antecedent state of things and is usually applied to a more or less important or noteworthy occurrence (the events of the year) (the sequence of events that followed the declaration of war) (the course of human events—U.S. Declaration of Independence) (events acting upon us in unexpected, abrupt, and violent ways—Dewey) (the flat, monotonous plains stretch away . . . a single tree . . . becomes an event—Moorehead) An incident (compare incident under ACCIDENTAL) is commonly an occurrence of subordinate character or secondary importance, either a mere casual happening having little relation to major events or an occurrence that merely follows because of them (her tone implied that bedroom fires were a quite ordinary incident of daily life in a place like Bursley—Bennett) (very few individuals can be considered as more than incidents in the life histories of the societies to which they belong—Linton) The term may, however, be used of a single event that stands out or is marked off clearly from the other events (as in a story, a play, or a history) in its nature or significance (the book narrates a series of thrilling incidents) (he was delighted and looked upon the incident as an adventure—Anderson) (and beat him she did—in just over 72 days—with only one dangerous incident. A “titled cad” tried to flirt with her—Sat. Review) or applied to a critical event that provokes a break in diplomatic relations between countries or suggests the possibility of war (border incidents) Episode (see also DIGRESSION) is often used in place of incident in the sense of a single or outstanding event, but the term usually carries a stronger implication of distinctiveness or apartness from the main course than does incident (a pretty little domestic episode occurred this morning—Meredith) (Clare would inevitably . . . come to regard her passion for Oliver Hobart and its tragic sequel as a romantic episode of girlhood—Rose Macaulay) Circumstance is used as a synonym of incident only when the latter is thought of as a specific or significant detail (before closing his door for the night, [he] stood reflecting on the circumstances of the preceding hours—Hardy) The word is also occasionally used as a synonym for event in its more general sense (a life every circumstance of which is regulated after an unchangeable pattern—Wilde)

Ana appearance, emergence (see corresponding verbs at APPEAR): *juncture, pass, exigency, emergency, contingency: posture, situation, condition, *state oceanic *aquatic, marine, thalassic, neritic, pelagic, abyssal, lacustrine, fluvial, fluviate odd queer, quaint, *strange, singular, unique, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, outlandish, curious

Ana bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic: anomalous, *irregular, unnatural

Con *usual, customary, habitual: ordinary, *common, familiar: normal, *regular, typical, natural odds *advantage, handicap, allowance, edge odious *hateful, abhorrent, abominable, detestable

Ana *repugnant, repellent, distasteful, obnoxious: *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting odium obloquy, opprobrium, ignominy, infamy, *disgrace, dishonor, disrepute, shame

Ana *hate, hatred: *antipathy, aversion: abhorrence, abomination, detestation, loathing (see under HATE vb)

odor *smell, scent, aroma

Ana *fragrance, perfume, redolence, incense, bouquet odorous, fragrant, redolent, aromatic, balmy mean emitting and diffusing scent. Odorous applies to whatever has a strong, distinctive smell, whether it is pleasant or not

(odorous flowers such as lilies, tuberoses, and narcissuses) (odorous chemicals are often malodorous) (odorous gums from the East—Wilde) (ability to detect and to identify infinitesimally small traces of odorous and savory materials—Morrison) Fragrant applies to something with a sweet and agreeable odor, especially to flowers, fruits, spices, and beverages that through their lingering sweetness or richness of scent give sensuous delight (fragrant roses) (where the fragrant limes their boughs unite, we met—and we parted forever!—Crawford) (perhaps far back . . . certain Chinese preferred fragrant tea to insipid water—Heiser) (the recollection that these unfortunates had once been fragrant children—Cheever) Redolent occasionally means pleasantly odorous; in such use it applies not only to things that diffuse a scent but to the scent itself (the redolent scent of pine) (every flower and every fruit the redolent breath of the warm seawind ripeneth—Tennyson) More often it applies to a place or thing impregnated with odors, especially with those that are penetrating (dim, shady wood roads, redolent of fern and bayberry—Millay) (ordinary salt air but stronger, redolent of seaweed, damp, and dead fish—Nancy Hale) (the air for half a block was redolent with the fumes of beer and whiskey—Asbury) Aromatic is more restricted in its implications than aroma, for it distinctively suggests a pungent, often fresh, odor of the kind associated with the foliage of balsams, pine, and spruce, the wood of cedar, the dried leaves of lavender, such spices as cloves, and such gums as myrrh. It is therefore often applied to preparations scented with substances that are aromatic (aromatic blends of tobacco) (as aromatic plants bestow no spicy fragrance while they grow; but crushed, or trodden to the ground, diffuse their balmy sweets around—Goldsmith) (aromatic spirit of ammonia) Balmy applies chiefly to things which have a delicate and soothing aromatic odor (the balmy winds breathed the animating odors of the groves around me—Bartram) (their tender beauty of balmy, flowery vegetation—Muir) Ant malodorous: odorless —Con stinking, fetid, noisome, putrid, rank, rancid, fusty, musty (see MALODOROUS) offal *refuse, waste, rubbish, trash, debris, garbage offend, outrage, affront, insult mean to cause vexation or resentment or damage to self-respect. One offends by displeasing another, by hurting his feelings, or by violating his sense of what is proper or fitting (if the First Amendment means anything, it means that a man cannot be sent to prison merely for distributing publications which offend a judge's esthetic sensibilities—Potter Stewart) (fangless perceptions which will please the conservative power and delight the liberal power, offend no one—Mailer) (knew that he had offended his father but guilt would have been too exact a word for the pain and uneasiness he felt—Cheever) One outrages by offending another past endurance, or by offending his pride or his sense of justice or honor (her power to make him do things which outraged all his upbringing—Sackville-West) (listened to the beginning of the uproar, the shrill cries of the ladies and the outraged unbelieving exclamations of the men—Dahl) (“Grief of two years' standing is only a bad habit.” Alice started, outraged. Her mother's grief was sacred to her—Shaw) One affronts who, either with an intent to offend or with deliberate indifference to civility or courtesy, humiliates or dishonors a person and arouses his deep resentment (a moral, sensible, and well-bred man will not affront me, and no other can—Cowper) One insults who wantonly and insolently offends another so as to cause him humiliation or shame (you can annoy, you can insult, you cannot move me—Meredith) (he would insult them flagrantly; he would fling his hands in the air and thunder at their ignorance—Auchincloss)

Ana *annoy, vex, irk, bother: exasperate, nettle, *irritate: pique, *provoke, excite: chafe, fret, gall (see ABRADE)

offense 1 offensive, aggression, *attack

Ana assault, *attack, onslaught, onset

2 Offense, resentment, umbrage, pique, dudgeon, huff are comparable when they mean a person's emotional reaction to what he regards as a slight, an affront, an insult, or an indignity. Offense implies an often extreme state of displeasure or of wounded feelings (he is so sensitive that he takes offense at any unintentional or seeming slight) (this tiny breath of genuine criticism had given deep offense—Forster) Resentment implies more indignation than offense, more prolonged dwelling upon what one regards as a personal injury or grievance, and, often, more ill will to the person who has offended (as long as I am free from all resentment . . . I would be able to face the life with much more calm—Wilde) (have no right to trifle with their lives merely to gratify an old man's resentment of skepticism—Anthony Boucher) Umbrage, used chiefly in the phrase "to take umbrage," differs from offense in carrying a clearer implication of being slighted or unfairly ignored; the term therefore generally suggests ruffled pride, resentful suspicion of others' motives, or jealousy of those favored (he took such umbrage at Eliot—who had been delayed at his bank—arriving a few minutes late on the platform, that I doubt he ever forgave him—Osbert Sitwell) Very often umbrage is not clearly distinguishable from offense (the instance of a Southern defender who took umbrage at our saying that the leader of the Confederacy was outstandingly dumb—N. Y. Herald Tribune Book Rev.) Pique applies to the reaction of one who has taken offense or umbrage, but it distinctively suggests a petty cause and a transient mood and often connotes wounded vanity (when the wanton heroine chooses to . . . flirt with Sir Harry or the Captain, the hero, in a pique, goes off and makes love to somebody else—Thackeray) (had not for . . . years allowed his young green jealousy to show itself in words or pique—Buck) Dudgeon applies chiefly to a fit of angry resentment or indignation provoked by opposition to one's views or a refusal of one's request (left the recent meeting in high dudgeon when compulsory purchase powers were eventually granted—Ian MacLennan) (sometimes the employer . . . will in a dudgeon refuse to sit in the same room with the union representatives—Bromley) Huff, like dudgeon, applies to a fit of anger, but it comes closer to pique in suggesting pettiness of cause and transitoriness; distinctively it implies petulance and a sulky refusal to have more to do with those who have offended (at the first hint that we were tired of waiting and that we should like the show to begin, he was off in a huff—Henry James) (half of 'em will be disgusted, and go away in a huff—De Morgan)

Ana *affront, insult, indignity: indignation, wrath, *anger

Con *pleasure, delight, joy: gratifying or gratification, rejoicing (see corresponding verbs at PLEASE)

3 Offense, sin, vice, crime, scandal are comparable as general terms denoting a more or less serious or conspicuous infraction or transgression of law or custom. Offense is the term of widest application, being referable to a violation of any law, including the law of the state, the law of the church, natural law, moral law, or standards of propriety and taste set up (as by society or the arts). It is also applicable to any transgression regardless of its triviality or gravity or its voluntary or involuntary character, provided it injures or tends to injure the welfare or well-being or happiness of others (O, my offense is rank, it smells to heaven; it hath the primal eldest curse upon't, a brother's murder—Shak.) (had been a strike leader, which, though not a crime, was certainly an offense in New England in 1920—Stong) (the greater the number of laws, the greater the number of offenses against them—Ellis) Sin primarily applies to an offense against the moral law especially as laid down in the Ten Commandments and in laws derived from them. Theologically its essential character is disobedience of the divine will and willful opposition to the law of God; in somewhat wider use it implies a failure to live up to the moral ideals of one's time or environment or to the moral ideal one has set as the standard of one's own conduct (regarded stealing and lying as sins) (the sin of sacrilege) (nonobservance of the Sabbath was the sin most abhorred by the settlers of that region) (sin, remember, is a twofold enormity. It is a base consent to the promptings of our corrupt nature . . . and it is also a turning away from the counsel of our higher nature—Joyce) (it may not have been much of a culture, crude, bloodthirsty, harsh, and worst sin of all, different—Agnew) Vice (see also FAULT 2), though frequently applied to any of the offenses that from the theological and religious points of view are called sins, often carries little direct suggestion of a violation of divine law; rather, it more uniformly imputes to such offenses a character suggestive of moral depravity, corruption, or degradation; also, the term less often applies to single acts or single transgressions than to habits and practices that debase the character of a person or group of persons (spare then the person, and expose the vice—Pope) (treachery and cruelty, the most pernicious and most odious of all vices—Hume) (opium smoking was, and still is, considered a gentleman's vice—Maurer & Vogel) (our vices as well as our virtues have been imputed to bodily derangements till character has become identified with a chemical reaction—Cardozo) Crime in its basic sense applies to an infraction of law, especially of common law or statute law, that is punishable by the state or by any power that constitutes itself as the guardian of such law; it is not a technical legal term, but it is often used in the courts and is sometimes defined in penal codes, usually as a general term applicable to any act or omission forbidden by law and punishable upon conviction. In such use the term comprehends many clearly distinguished types of offenses (as a misdemeanor, a felony, or an act of treason) (the reason for excluding evidence obtained by violating the Constitution seems to me logically to lead to excluding evidence obtained by a crime of the officers of the law—Justice Holmes) (offenses against marriage such as adultery, which is a crime punishable by death in Papua and only a sin in civilized society—Social Science Abstracts) (human society may punish us for crimes; human monitors reprove us for vices; but God alone can charge upon us the sin, which He alone is able to forgive—James Martineau) Crime and, less often, sin may be applied to offenses that are of exceedingly grave nature; in fact, this implication is often found in crime, even in its quasi-legal sense (the betrayal by a people of itself is the ultimate historical crime: the final and the most degrading suicide—MacLeish) (I've not been guilty of anything more than an indiscretion . . . I behaved foolishly, but that's not a crime—Mackenzie) Scandal (see also DISGRACE) applies to an offense against a law that is also an offense in another sense of that word—that of an act, a condition, or a practice which offends the public conscience or which puts a stumbling block in the way of those who should obey the law or should be trained to obey it; unlike the words sin, vice, and crime, scandal carries no implication of probable or certain punishment or retribution but emphasizes the distressing effect it has on others or the discredit

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

it attaches to religion, morals, or respectability <Catholics . . . could not appear in Protestant assemblies without causing scandal to the weaker brethren—Froude> <scandal is an act or omission that is sinful . . . and that is for another an occasion of sin—Ferrell>

Ana *injustice, injury, wrong, grievance: *breach, infraction, violation, transgression, trespass, infringement, contravention offensive adj 1 attacking, aggressive (see under ATTACK n)

Ana invasive, incursive (see corresponding nouns at INVASION): assaulting, assailing, attacking, bombarding, storming (see ATTACK vb)

2 Offensive, loathsome, repulsive, repugnant, revolting are comparable when they mean utterly distasteful or repellent. Something offensive subjects one to painful or highly disagreeable sensations. Sometimes the term implies injured feelings as a result of an affront or insult (Olly, though without the tact to perceive when remarks were untimely, was saved by her very simplicity from rendering them offensive—Hardy) <your attitude is offensive. Is any given truth any the less true for having been uttered more than once?—Theodore Sturgeon> and frequently it suggests the evocation of such aversion that endurance involves mental strain or moral distaste (a most untypical story for Alan to tell, a little out of place, not offensive exactly, but irritating and inconsequential—Mailer) or it may imply a vileness (as of appearance or odor) that excites nausea or extreme disgust (her head thrown back, her face discolored, her eyes bulging, her mouth wet and yawning: a sight horribly offensive—Bennett) Something loathsome is so foul or obscene that one cannot look upon it, hear it, feel it, or have to do with it without a sense of deep disgust and abhorrence (a most loathsome literary world, necrophilic to the core—they murder their writers, and then decorate their graves—Mailer) Often the term is not clearly distinguishable from offensive in the sense of disgustingly nauseating but is applied more often to things which are generally or universally distasteful; thus, some people find the heavy fragrance of tuberose offensive, but nearly everyone finds the sight and odor of meat rotting and crawling with maggots loathsome (<loathsome diseases> <loathsome prison conditions> <takes some dirty horrible incident or sight of the battlefield and describes it in loathsome detail—Rose Macaulay> Something repulsive is so ugly in its appearance or so completely lacking in all that attracts or allures or charms or even challenges interest that it either drives one away or makes one unwilling to dwell on it (Mary was not so repulsive and unsisterly as Elizabeth—Austen) <work which is now repulsive can be made no irksomer than the general run of necessary labor—Shaw> <in those days all school books were as repulsive as publishers could make them. Their appearance went a long way in discouraging any intimacy with their contents—Replier> <he smiled at me, showing two rows of pale-pink, toothless gums, but it was a pleasant smile and there was nothing repulsive about the way the gums showed—Dahl> Something repugnant (see also REPUGNANT 1) is highly offensive or loathsome because in direct conflict with one's nature, one's principles, and one's tastes and irreconcilable with them (this frightful condition of internal strain and instability was . . . intensely repugnant to human nature, being a condition of chronic terror that at last became unbearable—Shaw) <the door is not barred and bolted for a solution less repugnant to our deepest intuitions—Eddington> Something revolting is so extremely offensive, loathsome, repulsive, or repugnant to a person of delicate sensibilities that the sight or thought of it arouses in him a desire or determination to resist or rebel (his whole body shivered and started into awe-inspiring movement monstrous and inhuman, revolting as a spectacle of degrading vice—O'Flaherty) <to developed sensibilities the facts of war are revolting and horrifying—Huxley> <revolting cant about the duty of obedience and the wickedness of resistance to law—Henry Adams> Ana repellent, *repugnant, abhorrent, distasteful, obnoxious, invidious: *hateful, odious, abominable, detestable offensive n *attack, aggression, offense

Ana assault, *attack, onslaught, onset

offer vb Offer, proffer, tender, present, prefer can all mean to lay, set, or put something before another for acceptance. Offer, the most common of these words, frequently implies a putting before one something which may be accepted or rejected (there was a crown offered him: and being offered him, he put it by—Shak.) <had he succeeded, he told me, he would have offered me the post of subeditor—Ellis> <offer a suggestion> <the dress department offers several new models this week> <he offered $10,000 for the house> <we must ask in the end what they have to offer in place of what they denounce—T. S. Eliot> Proffer differs from offer chiefly in more consistently implying a putting or setting before one something that one is at liberty to accept or reject and in usually stressing voluntariness, spontaneity, or courtesy on the part of the agent (<proffered his arm to a lady having difficulty in crossing a street> <felt that it would be indelicate just then to ask for any information which Casaubon did not proffer—George Eliot> <rejecting the proffered assistance of a couple of officious friends—Shaw> <the flavor of social success is delicious, though it is scorned by those to whose lips the cup has not been proffered—L. P. Smith> Tender was originally and still is a term in legal use meaning to offer something to the court or to a person concerned, according to the terms of the law, for formal acceptance or approval (<tender a thousand dollars in full satisfaction of a debt> <the defense will tender evidence to prove its contention that the defendant has a sound alibi> <will purchase all shares of preferred tendered to it before the redemption date—Wall Street Jour.> <tender the oath to a justice being sworn into office>) In general use tender differs from offer and proffer in carrying a stronger connotation of modesty, humility, or gentleness on the part of the one who makes the offer (my gracious lord, I tender you my service—Shak.) <they are not judgments in name or form, but are expressed only as advice humbly tendered to Her Majesty—Hogg> Tender, however, is the idiomatic or polite term in certain collocations (three of us have already tendered our resignations—Bretnor) <this symposium is tendered to John Dewey as he enters the tenth decade of his life—Sidney Hook> <tender one's congratulations> Present (see also GIVE) carries a stronger implication of ceremonious exhibition or of outward show than any of the preceding terms; otherwise it often suggests little more than offer in the sense of to lay or put before one for consideration, selection, or approval or for one's use or pleasure (the butler presented the letter on a salver) <the producer will present a new play this week> <my last, least offering, I present thee now—Cowper> <whether Proust has not intended . . . for all his apparent deliquescent Romanticism, to present us with a realistic case history—Edmund Wilson> <the legislation was presented in July. The debate did little to clarify the specific issues—Comstock> Prefer (see also CHOOSE) is disused in the sense of proffer or present except in some legal use (<prefer an indictment> <prefer a claim> although common in writing up to late in the nineteenth century <he spake, and to her hand preferred the bowl—Pope) <I don't prefer any claim to being the soul of romance—Dickens>

Ana *give, present, bestow, confer: *adduce, advance: propose, design, purpose, *intend

Con accept, take, *receive: reject, refuse, *decline offhand *extemporaneous, extempore, extemporary, improvised, impromptu, unpremeditated

Ana casual, desultory, *random: abrupt, hasty, sudden, *precipitate, impetuous: brusque, curt, blunt (see BLUFF)

Con studied, advised, considered, *deliberate office *function, duty, province

Ana *work, business, calling: *task, job, chore, stint officious meddlesome, intrusive, obtrusive, *impertinent

Ana meddling, interfering, intermeddling, tampering (see MEDDLE): annoying, vexing, irking, bothering (see ANNOY): pushing, assertive, *aggressive offset countervail, balance, *compensate, counterbalance, counterpoise

Ana *neutralize, negative, counteract: *nullify, negate: redeem, reclaim, save, *rescue offspring, young, progeny, issue, descendant, posterity are comparable when they mean those who follow in direct parental line. Offspring applies to those who are by birth immediately related to a parent; the term does not necessarily apply to human beings, for it may refer to animals or sometimes to plants <at each farrow the sow produces many offspring> <the son endeavoring to appear the worthy offspring of such a father—Steele>

Young is used most often of the offspring of animals  <turtles bury their eggs in beaches and sandbanks and the young dig their way out when they hatch>

Progeny usually applies to the offspring of a father or a mother or of both; the term more often refers to those of human parentage, but it is used occasionally of the offspring of animals and plants <from this union sprang a vigorous progeny—Hawthorne>

In comparison with offspring, however, it has somewhat extended use, being sometimes applied to those who trace their ancestry more remotely or to those who are the spiritual or intellectual successors of a great man <all the progeny of David>

<the intellectual progeny of Plato> Issue, chiefly a legal term, is more abstract than the preceding terms and is used merely to call attention to the fact that a union has or has not reproduced its kind <die without issue> <in the event of issue, the estate will pass to the children who are born of this union>

Descendant, on the other hand, applies to anyone who has or, in the plural, to all who have a right to claim relationship with a person as an ancestor in direct line; the degree of nearness does not matter, but the relationship of each as child, grandchild, great-grandchild, and so on must exist <they are descendants of the first settlers of the town>

<the claims of certain people to be descendants of George Washington are absurd, since he died without issue>

Posterity differs from descendants only in connoting all the descendants of a common ancestor <the unnumbered posterity of William Bradford>

The term is also often used of the generations that come after a person, a race, or a people <his fame will live to all posterity>

<we are leaving many problems for posterity to solve> oft *often, frequently, oftentimes often, frequently, oft, oftentimes may be used with little or no distinction to mean again and again in more or less close succession. But often stresses the number of times a thing occurs, without regard to the interval of recurrence; frequently usually stresses repetition, especially at short intervals <he came often> <he called frequently>

<the disease is often fatal> <I frequently examined the color of the snow—Tyndall>

<you will often find this to be true>

<unless you write me more frequently I shall feel out of touch with you>

Oft and oftentimes differ little from often; oft, however, is used chiefly in compound adjectives

<the oft-told tale of her hairbreadth escape—Cerf> <an oft quoted statement> or occasionally in formal discourse

<seemingly trifling events oft carry in their train great consequences—Coolidge> and oftentimes is occasionally preferred for intonational reasons  oftentimes *often, frequently, oft oil vb Oil, grease, lubricate, anoint, cream all mean to smear or treat with an oily, fatty, or greasy substance, but they vary greatly in their implications of the substance used and the purpose for which it is employed and in their idiomatic applications. One oils the parts of a machine or mechanism subject to friction, typically by drops or squirts of a liquid substance, usually a mineral oil. Also, one oils a fabric (as cloth, silk, or paper) when one impregnates it with oil so as to make it waterproof. One greases a thing when one rubs on or in a thick fatty substance, often an animal fat or oil, for some purpose such as to increase speed by reducing friction <grease axles> or as a medicinal application <grease the chest with lard and turpentine> or as a preventive of cohesion <grease a baking dish>

One lubricates when one oils, or greases, or provides for the feeding of a lubricant (as oil or grease or graphite or a silicone) to contiguous surfaces in a machine or mechanism to make them slippery, thereby reducing friction, eliminating roughness, and preventing cohesion. Lubricate stresses the effect intended or produced; oil and grease, the substance used or the method of its application. One anoints the body or a part of the body when one smears it with, or rubs into it an oily or fatty substance for some purpose (as a protection from the sun or an aid in massage). Anoint, however, is especially employed in reference to ceremonial uses of oil. In the application of oily or fatty cosmetics, especially those which are called creams, cream is the customary term.

oily unctuous, oleaginous, *fulsome, slick, soapy

Ana hypocritical, pharisaical, sanctimonious (see under HYPOCRISY): bland, politic, diplomatic, smooth (see SUAVE)

old 1 *aged, elderly, superannuated

Ana *weak, feeble, infirm, decrepit

Ant young

2 Old, ancient, venerable, antique, antiquated, antediluvian, archaic, obsolete all denote having come into existence or use in the more or less distant past. Old, opposed to young or new (see also AGED), applies to what has lived or existed long or has been long in use or has stood for a long time in a particular relation to something; ancient, opposed especially to modern, to what lived, existed, or happened long ago or has existed or come down from remote antiquity

<old wine> <old friends> <old as the hills> <O heavens, if you do love old men . . . if yourselves are old—Shak.>

<this new exception condemns an advertising technique as old as history—W. O. Douglas>

<from the ancient world those giants came—Milton> <some illustrious line so ancient that it has no beginning—Gibbon>

Venerable suggests the hoariness and dignity of age <venerable as Anglo-Saxon is, and worthy to be studied as the mother of our vernacular speech—Quiller-Couch>

<green ropes and leafy ladders hung down from the high limbs of a venerable bread tree—Bemelmans>

Antique applies to what has come down from former, ancient, or classical times or is in some way related to them; with regard to articles (as furnishings, implements, or bric-a-brac) the term suggests an old-fashioned type characteristic of an earlier period <an antique highboy that had belonged to his great-grandmother) <even a Leonardo regretted his failure to recover the antique symmetry, but he at least imitated the ancients vitally—Babbitt> <refreshing our minds with a savor of the antique, primeval world and the earliest hopes and victories of mankind—Binyon> Something antiquated has gone out of vogue or fashion or has been for some time discredited; the word often implies some degree of contempt <is it true that antiquated legal ideas prevent government from responding effectively to the demands which modern society makes upon it?—Frankfurter> <this very lack of manner keeps him from becoming antiquated. His style does not “date,” like that of many of his contemporaries—Tinker> <cherished still their old rage against the northern invaders, a stout and defiant loyalty to their antiquated limitations—Edmund Wilson> Something antediluvian is so antiquated and outmoded that it might have come from Noah's ark <the whole system of traveling accommodations was barbarous and antediluvian—De Quincey> <those were antediluvian times. Unions were weak or nonexistent; employers were backed by the courts, the police, and the federal government—Dwight Macdonald> Something archaic has the characteristics of an earlier, sometimes of a primitive, period; with regard to words, specifically, archaic applies to what is not in use in ordinary modern language but retained in special context or for special uses (as in biblical, ecclesiastical, and legal expressions and in poetry) <we visited Medinina, a town so archaic and unreal in its architecture that it was difficult to believe that it was actually inhabited by the human race—Hoffman> <much of the remote past is conserved in the husk of convention, and archaic usages govern his conduct toward all the crucial issues of life—Norman Lewis> <to those who do not learn to read Shakespeare as a school text his archaic language presents formidable difficulties—Bottrall> Something obsolete has gone out of use or has been or needs to be replaced by something newer, better, or more efficient that has subsequently come into being <obsolete as the feudal baron—Snaith>  <it was she who had raised a fund for the granite horse trough . . . and who, when the horse trough became obsolete, had had it planted with geraniums—Cheever> <charged that United States Navy ships were equipped with obsolete torpedoes—Current Biog.>

Ana primitive, primeval, pristine, primal (see PRIMARY)

Ant new

oleaginous oily, unctuous, *fulsome, slick, soapy

Ana see those at OILY oligarchy, aristocracy, plutocracy are comparable when they mean government by, or a state governed by, the few. The terms are often applied to governments or states that are ostensibly monarchies or republics but are, in the opinion of the user, actually governed by a clique. Oligarchy is the most inclusive term referable to a government or state where the power is openly or virtually in the hands of a few men <democracy and oligarchy shade into each other and are chiefly distinguished by the degree of the citizens' participation in government—McKean> Aristocracy basically and historically suggests the rule of the best citizens <true aristocracy is just this, the government of the best, of a ruling class dedicated to the common well-being—F. G. Wilson> but it retains this implication chiefly when it is used in distinction from oligarchy and the latter connotes power seized or held for selfish or corrupt reasons <it ceased to be, in the Greek sense, an aristocracy; it became a faction, an oligarchy—Thirlwall> Its more common implication is power vested in a privileged class, especially in a nobility that is regarded as superior by birth and breeding and that by owning or controlling much of the land exercises direct control over a large portion of the population; in this sense Great Britain was until recent generations an aristocracy <Clay was right . . . revolution was abroad among the people, shifting the basis of our government from aristocracy to democracy without destroying its essential republicanism—Rossiter> Plutocracy, unlike the other terms, is usually derogatory; as a rule it implies concentration of power in the hands of the wealthy and, in consequence, a withholding of power from those to whom it properly belongs, either the people or their representatives <Ward held that we must differentiate three types of democracy . . . the second plutocracy, or the control of the state by organized and predatory wealth—H. E. Barnes> <Carthage was a plutocracy and the real power of the state lay in the hands of a dozen big shipowners and mineowners and merchants—van Loon>

omen n augury, portent, *foretoken, presage, prognostic Ana *sign, mark, token, badge, note, symptom: foreboding, *apprehension, presentiment, misgiving ominous, portentous, fateful, inauspicious, unpropitious basically mean having a menacing or threatening character or quality. What is ominous has or seems to have the character of an omen, especially of an omen forecasting evil; the term commonly suggests a frightening or alarming quality that bodes no good, and it may imply impending disaster <there was something ominous about it, and in intangible ways one was made to feel that the worst was about to come—London> <my ears were startled by the . . . uproar of yelling and shouting. It sounded ominous, but . . . I had to go on—Heiser> What is portentous has or seems to have the character of a portent; portentous, however, less often than ominous suggests a threatening character; it usually means little more than prodigious, monstrous, or almost frighteningly marvelous, solemn, or impressive <his gravity was unusual, portentous, and immeasurable—Dickens> <the assertion that children of six are “mighty prophets, seers blessed,” . . . seemed to him portentous nonsense—Babbitt> <it is portentous . . . that here at midnight, in our little town a mourning figure walks, and will not rest—Lindsay> What is fateful has or seems to have the quality, character, or importance decreed for it by fate or suggests inevitability <the fateful conference that brought on war> <to meet a Persian, any Persian, in New York seemed a fateful coincidence—Mehdevi> but the term often means little more than momentous or appallingly decisive <the great cases that make the work of the United States Supreme Court of fateful significance—Cohen> What is inauspicious (compare auspicious under FAVORABLE) is or seems to be attended by signs that are distinctly unfavorable <an inauspicious horoscope> But inauspicious usually means nothing more than unlucky, unfortunate, or unlikely to succeed <an inauspicious beginning of a great project> <you come at a singularly inauspicious moment, when I need all my strength to forget the world—Sabatini> What is unpropitious (compare propitious under FAVORABLE) carries or seems to carry no sign of favoring one's ends or intentions <unpropitious omens> In its more common extended sense the term means merely unfavorable, discouraging, or harmful <made a by-election necessary at a time highly unpropitious for the Government—Cockburn> <sleep and exercise are unpropitious to learning—Jowett>

Ana *sinister, baleful, malign, malefic, maleficent: threatening, menacing (see THREATEN) omit *neglect, disregard, ignore, overlook, slight, forget

Ana cancel, delete, efface, *erase: *exclude, eliminate

Con *remember, recollect, recall: *tend, attend, mind, watch omnipresent, ubiquitous mean present or existent everywhere. Though they carry this as a basic meaning, they are often used hyperbolically. Something omnipresent is present everywhere at the same time. Though basically applicable to the Supreme Being (<omnipresent Deity) the term is often, especially in a weakened sense, applied to something that is or is felt to be always present or existent (as in a class or a type wherever it may be found or in an area to which it belongs) (<an omnipresent sense of social obligation—Eliot) (<the creeping, silent atmosphere of omnipresent fear that I have sensed in the capitals of the satellite countries—Wechsberg) (<the mechanization of entertainment through . . . the omnipresent radio—Millett) Something ubiquitous is found everywhere and, often, at the time or in the situation specified or implied (<electrons being so numerous and so ubiquitous—Darwin) (<the big public services will have to be made practically ubiquitous—Shaw) Ubiquitous is applicable to a type or an individual, often with the specific implication that one cannot escape him or it wherever one goes (<the ubiquitous American tourist) (<the sad, ubiquitous spinner, left behind . . . by the stampede of the young men westward—Brooks)

on 1 *at, in

2 *at, in

onerous, burdensome, oppressive, exacting are comparable when they mean imposing severe trouble, labor, or hardships. All of these terms are applicable to a state of life, its duties or obligations, or to conditions imposed upon a person by that life or by another person; oppressive and exacting are applicable also to persons or agents responsible for these difficulties. Onerous stresses laboriousness and heaviness but often also implies irksomeness or distastefulness (<the tyranny of a majority might be more onerous than that of a despot—Whitehead) (<“What were the conditions?” “Oh, they were not onerous: just to sit at the head of his table now and then”—Wharton) Burdensome usually implies mental as well as physical strain and often emphasizes the former (<a burdensome tax) (<burdensome Government regulations which are a nuisance to everyone—Roosevelt) (<the burdensome and invidious job of a formal application to the Board of Trade—Economist) Oppressive adds to burdensome the implication of extreme harshness or severity; it therefore usually connotes the unendurableness of what is imposed or inflicted, whether by nature or circumstances or by man, or cruelty or tyranny in the one responsible for the impositions or inflictions (<oppressive heat) (<oppressive rulers) (<there are more ways of coercing a man than by pointing a gun at his head. A pacifist society may be unjust and oppressive—Inge) (<the women are . . . kind and they mean very well, but sometimes they get very oppressive—Cheever) Exacting, like oppressive, implies severity of demands, but otherwise it differs because it commonly suggests rigor, sternness, or extreme fastidiousness rather than tyranny in the one who demands, or the tremendous care or pains required of the one who satisfies these demands (<an exacting technique) (<an exacting employer) (<the exacting life of the sea has this advantage over the life of the earth, that its claims are simple and cannot be evaded—Conrad) (<the pity of it was that even the least exacting husband should so often desire something more piquant than goodness—Glasgow)

Ana *heavy, weighty, ponderous, cumbrous, cumbersome, hefty: arduous, *hard, difficult onlooker looker-on, *spectator, observer, beholder, witness, eyewitness, bystander, kibitzer only adj & adv Only, alone are often used interchangeably (though alone is not found in the attributive position), but seldom without a slight change in meaning or emphasis. Only is especially appropriate when restriction to what is specified or asserted is implied and the term is equivalent to sole or solely; thus, “I want only this book” implies a wish for one and no more; “of all the family only John and Helen came,” that is, the specified persons and no more (<to distinguish . . . that which is established because it is right, from that which is right only because it is established—Johnson) Alone may be chosen when the idea of the elimination of all other possibilities is expressed and the term is the equivalent of exclusive or, more often, exclusively; thus, “I want this book alone” implies a wish for a particular one and no other; “of all the family John alone came,” that is, John and none of the others (<man shall not live by bread alone—Mt 4:4)

onset *attack, assault, onslaught

Ana aggression, offensive, offense, *attack: storming, bombarding, assailing (see ATTACK vb): *invasion, raid, incursion onslaught *attack, assault, onset

Ana see those at ONSET

onward, forward, forth are comparable when they mean in the act of advancing or getting ahead (as in a movement, progression, series, or sequence). They are frequently used with little or no distinction, but onward often suggests progress or advance toward a definite goal, end, or place (<half a league onward . . . rode the six hundred—Tennyson) (<onward into future lives—Hawkrige) Forward, opposed to backward, has more specific reference to movement or advance with reference to what lies before rather than back in place (see forward under BEFORE) or in time (<his skill in reconciling conflicting points of view and his forward-looking spirit—Dean) (<from this time forward Webster's bête noire was party spirit—Warfel) or in a succession (as of incidents in a narrative or of steps in a process) (<the center has not yet been rebuilt, though they are . . . getting forward with it—Rowse) Forth is often interchangeable with forward without loss (<expeditions went forth into the interior—P. E. James) (<from that day forth) but in certain idioms it may be quite distinctive and imply a making known, present, available, or real something previously unknown, lacking, unavailable, or hidden; thus, one brings forth from or as if from a place of concealment (<bring forth a precious jewel) and one sets forth by providing (<set forth an ample supper) or by making simple and clear (<in his charge to the grand jury . . . he set forth the democratic basis of the new state government—Meriwether) opalescent, opaline iridescent, *prismatic open adj 1 exposed, subject, prone, susceptible, sensitive, *liable

Ant closed

2 plain, candid, *frank

Ana *straightforward, aboveboard, forthright: *natural, simple, ingenuous, naïve, unsophisticated: *fair, equitable, impartial

Ant close, closemouthed, close-lipped: clandestine openhanded bountiful, bounteous, *liberal, generous, munificent, handsome

Ant closefisted, tightfisted —Con *stingy, niggardly, close, penurious operate *act, behave, work, function, react operative adj *active, dynamic, live

Ana *effective, effectual, efficacious, efficient: *fertile, fecund, fruitful

Ant abeyant operative n mechanic, artisan, hand, workman, workingman, *worker, laborer, craftsman, handicraftsman, roustabout opiate *anodyne, narcotic, nepenthe opinion, view, belief, conviction, persuasion, sentiment are comparable when they mean a more or less clearly formulated idea or judgment which one holds as true or valid. An opinion is a more or less carefully thought-out conclusion concerning something that is or may be questioned. The word not only does not exclude the suggestion of consideration of all the evidence and of arguments on both sides, but it sometimes implies such consideration <seek an expert opinion on the authenticity of a painting> <the word opinion . . . should be restricted to views entertained on subjects that admit of doubt and are open to controversy. . . . Matters that are not debatable are not open to opinion—Corry> <the attending physician said he would like the opinion of a consulting physician> However, the term more consistently suggests even in the preceding instances a personal element in the judgment, the possibility of its being in error, and the strong probability that it will be disputed <books . . . are a public expression of a man's opinions, and consequently they are submitted to the world for criticism—Benson> <the tolerant but untrained . . . will rarely know the difference between their tastes and their opinions—Virgil Thomson> A view is an opinion more or less colored by the feeling, sentiment, or bias of the individual <fond of airing his views in public> <each member was asked to state his views on the proposed change in the constitution> <must take the manly view, which is that the failure of the western democracies . . . is due to the failings of the democratic peoples—Lippmann> <in the fourth century . . . adopted the view that deceit and lying were virtues if in the interests of the Church—Cohen> A belief differs from an opinion or view in that it is not necessarily formulated by the individual who holds it, but may have been proposed to him for acceptance (as in the form of a doctrine, a dogma, a proposition, or an authoritative opinion). The emphasis in belief is placed on intellectual assent or assurance of truth <the belief that the whole system of nature is calculable in terms of mathematics and mechanics—Inge> <just one single example of real unreason is enough to shake our belief in everything—Theodore Sturgeon> A conviction is a belief which one holds firmly and unshakably because one is undisturbed by doubt of its truth <if any one had asked him the reason of this conviction he could not have told them; but convictions do not imply reasons—Deland> <the teacher should learn not to take sides, even if he or she has strong convictions—Russell> <he had overlooked this fact, borne along on his conviction of the abundance of life—Cheever> A persuasion is usually at once an opinion and a belief. The term often implies that one's assurance of its truth is induced by one's feelings or wishes, rather than by argument or evidence <it was the avowed opinion and persuasion of Callimachus . . . that Homer was very imperfectly understood even in his day—Cowper> <his strong interest in good government and the proper solution of social problems threw him more and more toward the Democratic persuasion—Michener> Sentiment (see also FEELING 2) is becoming uncommon in this sense except in a few idiomatic phrases <those are my sentiments> The term applies to a more or less settled opinion, often with reference to something which involves one's feelings or which is formulated so as to suggest the stimulus of emotion <there is no expression in the constitution, no sentiment delivered by its contemporaneous expounders, which would justify us—John Marshall> <it is the actions of men and not their sentiments which make history—Mailer> <he would inform Miss Graves of his sentiments and she would translate them into a polite and brief answer—Bemelmans>

Ana thought, notion, impression, *idea, concept, conception: inference, deduction, conclusion, judgment (see under INFER): deciding or decision, determining or determination, settling or settlement (see corresponding verbs at DECIDE) opponent, antagonist, adversary all denote one who expresses or manifests opposition. Unlike enemy they do not necessarily imply personal animosity or hostility. An opponent is one who is on the opposite side in a contest (as an argument, disputation, or election) or in a conflict (as of opinion) <since [in France] opposition is never considered to be legitimate, the Government has no opponents—only enemies—Revel> <opponents of the desegregation decision have . . . largely founded their dissent on the principle that law cannot move faster than public opinion—Roche & Gordon> Antagonist implies sharper opposition, especially in a struggle or combat for supremacy or control <where you find your antagonist beginning to grow warm, put an end to the dispute by some genteel badinage—Chesterfield>  Adversary ranges in connotation from the idea of mere opposition to that of active hostility <do as adversaries do in law, strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends—Shak.> <your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour—I Pet 5:8>

Ana *enemy, foe: rival, competitor, emulator (see corresponding verbs at RIVAL)

opportune *seasonable, timely, well-timed, pat

Ana happy, felicitous, appropriate, fitting (see FIT adj): propitious, auspicious, *favorable: ready, prompt, *quick, apt

Ant inopportune

opportunity, occasion, chance, break, time are comparable when they mean a state of affairs or a combination of circumstances favorable to some end. Opportunity is perhaps the most common of these terms; it applies to a situation which provides an opening for doing something, especially in line with one's inclinations, ambitions, purposes, or desires <the suspect had both motive and opportunity for the murder> <to keep in the rear of opportunity in matters of indulgence is as valuable a habit as to keep abreast of opportunity in matters of enterprise—Hardy> <on the whole an infant's desire to learn is so strong that parents need only provide opportunity—Russell> <to strike out in search of new opportunities in new surroundings—Truman> Occasion (see also CAUSE 1) carries the basic denotation characteristic of its leading senses—a definite moment or juncture, but it applies only to a moment that provides an opportunity or that calls for or prompts action of a definite kind or nature <had occasion to prove the seaworthiness of this type of lifeboat in a gale—N. B. Marshall> <he took the occasion to satisfy his desire for revenge> Occasion may suggest more strongly than opportunity a juncture that provokes or evokes action <with great things charged he shall not hold aloof till great occasion rise—Kipling> <so long as a child is with adults, it has no occasion for the exercise of a number of . . . virtues . . . required by the strong in dealing with the weak—Russell> <it has also produced and spread occasions for diseases and weaknesses—Dewey> Chance applies chiefly to an opportunity that comes seemingly by luck or accident <they had no chance to escape> <it was war that gave Lenin his chance. He might have died in angry exile in Switzerland—Brogan>

Sometimes the word means little more than a fair or a normal opportunity, especially in negative expressions (the feeling that the system under which we live deprives the majority of the chance of a decent life—Day Lewis) Break applies to the occasion of a stroke of fortune that is usually good unless the term is qualified (as by an adjective indicating the kind of chance or suggesting its outcome) (had been haunting . . . the tryouts, for two years; and this was her first break—Wouk) (ascribe his fortunes to luck, to getting the breaks—Cozzens) (she always did have a bad break if it was possible to get one—Nevil Shute) (shady folk . . . are generally given a fine break—Lancaster) Time denotes a juncture that is well-timed or opportune (as for the execution of one's end or purpose) (time and tide wait for no man) (the Mozartian scheme, in which the soloist bides his time in full confidence that he will be handsomely rewarded in the end—Kolodin) (the time has come to sift and synthesize the findings—Towster) (this is the time to buy stocks)

Ana *juncture, pass, contingency, emergency; posture, situation, condition, *state oppose contest, fight, combat, conflict, antagonize, *resist, withstand

Ana *contend, fight, battle, war; *attack, assail, assault, storm, bombard; *defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard opposite n contradictory, contrary, antithesis, antipode, antonym (see under OPPOSITE adj)

opposite adj Opposite, contradictory, contrary, antithetical, antipodal, antipodean, antonymous are comparable chiefly as applied to abstractions and as meaning so far apart as to be or to seem irreconcilable with each other. The same differences in applications and implications are found in their corresponding nouns, opposite, contradictory, contrary, antithesis, antipode, antonym, when they mean one of two things which are opposite or contradictory. Opposite is the inclusive term; it may be used interchangeably with any of the others, though few of the others are interchangeable in precise use. Opposite may be used to describe the relation of either of two abstract elements (as ideas, terms, statements, qualities, or forces) to the other when they are set against each other so as to bring out sharply the contrast, conflict, or antagonism between them (opposite views) (attraction and repulsion are opposite forces) (the plant does two opposite things at once. It is making sugar from carbon dioxide . . . and at the same time burning a little sugar—Michael Graham) (his private thesis that correction . . . entails retreat to a diametric opposite rather than any reasonable search for a golden mean—Pynchon) Contradictory, though often used as an equivalent of opposite, may retain its fundamental implication of denial, and therefore, especially when it is applied to terms, propositions, and principles, may further imply that if one of the two opposites be true, the other must be false, or if one be false, the other must be true (contradictory predictions are being made, some gloomy, some optimistic—Farrell) Words, propositions, or principles that are contradictory in this strict sense are mutually exclusive and, therefore, admit no possibilities between; thus, "John is English" and "John is not English" are contradictory statements, one of which must be false if the other is true; alive and dead are contradictory terms because they cannot both be truly applied to the same thing (stamped with the mint of our contradictory popular culture (where sex is sin and yet sex is paradise)—Mailer) Contrary (see also CONTRARY 2) as applied to intentions, motives, and opinions usually implies extreme divergence with no basis for agreement (take a contrary view of the situation) (from the center of capitalist and imperialistic America he seemed to diffuse

a contrary purely humanitarian influence—Santayana) (he maintained that the contrary was true) But especially as applied to terms and propositions contrary may imply diametrical opposition or the greatest conceivable or possible difference between the things opposed. Contraries are poles apart; unlike contradictories both may be false, for they represent extremes and do not mutually exclude every other possibility; thus, destitute and opulent are contrary terms as applicable to a person's circumstances, but they may be inapplicable in a vast number of particular cases for they describe only the extremes; "John is parsimonious" and "John is prodigal" are contrary statements, but John in truth may be neither parsimonious nor prodigal, but merely close, or thrifty, or free, or liberal, in the expenditure of money (a theory for which neither physics nor common sense can offer confirmatory or contrary evidence—Clement) Antithetical and especially antithesis (see also COMPARISON) imply an intent to set the thing under consideration against its opposite, usually its diametrical opposite, in order to emphasize its significance or to reveal or define sharply its true nature. Both words are applicable to persons and things regarded objectively as well as to ideas, qualities, and terms (antithetical symbolism of ice and flame—Rees) (that mystic faith in unseen powers which is the antithesis of materialism—Rose Macaulay) (the essential interests of men and women are eternally antithetical—Mencken) Although antipodal or antipodean and the corresponding noun, antipode, which often occurs as the plural antipodes with singular or plural construction, also imply diametrical opposition, they do not suggest a logical relation but rather emphasize the unlikeliness and the remoteness from each other of the things contrasted. So strong are these implications that often the things contrasted are only figuratively, not generically, opposites, and the contrast constitutes in a sense an inverse simile (the unspannable gulf between the two brothers is widened by their antipodal attitudes toward money—Behrman) (flashy, crude, essentially shallow, but nevertheless at the antipodes from villainy. He is good-hearted and generous—Walcott) (the very antipode of Gropius. Where the American is romantic, the German is rationalistic—Werner) Antonym and antonym are applicable only to a word or term which is so opposed to another in meaning that it, in effect, negates or nullifies every implication of it. Antonyms or antonymous words may be contradictory or contrary terms, as defined, or they may be terms which negate other terms by implying the undoing or reversing of what is denoted by them; thus, retain is the contradictory antonym of lose, but recover is the reverse antonym of lose.

Ana reverse, converse (see corresponding nouns at CONVERSE); antagonistic, *adverse, counter, counteractive Con reconciling, conforming, adapting, adjusting (see ADAPT): consistent, compatible, congruous, congenial, *consonant oppress 1 *depress, weigh

Ana *abuse, mistreat, maltreat, ill-treat, outrage; *worry, annoy, harass, hary

2 *wrong, persecute, aggrieve

Ana *afflict, torment, torture: overcome, subdue, subjugate, reduce, overthrow (see CONQUER) oppressive *onerous, burdensome, exacting

Ana extorting or extortionate, extracting (see corresponding verbs at EDUCE): compelling or compulsory, coercing or coercion, constraining, obliging or obligatory (see corresponding verbs at FORCE): despotic, tyrannical, *absolute, arbitrary

Con humane, humanitarian (see CHARITABLE): compassionate, *tender opprobrious *abusive, vituperative, contumelious, scurrilous

Ana reviling, vituperating, railing, berating (see SCOLD): *malicious, malevolent, malign, malignant: *execrable, damnable, accursed opprobrium obloquy, odium, ignominy, infamy, shame, *disgrace, dishonor, disrepute

Ana *abuse, invective, vituperation, obloquy, scurrility: censure, denunciation, condemnation, reprehension (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)

Con prestige, authority, credit, *influence opt vb *choose, select, elect, pick, cull, prefer, single

Ana take, accept, *receive: *adopt, embrace, espouse optimistic *hopeful, roseate, rose-colored

Ana *confident, sanguine, assured: cheerful, lighthearted, joyous, *glad

Ant pessimistic —Con *cynical, misanthropic option *choice, alternative, preference, selection, election

Ana *right, prerogative, privilege opulent 1 affluent, wealthy, *rich

Ana lavish, *profuse, prodigal: *showy, pretentious, ostentatious

Ant destitute; indigent

2 sumptuous, *luxurious

Ana luxuriant, lush, exuberant (see PROFUSE): *splendid, resplendent, gorgeous, superb opus *work, product, production, artifact oracular doctrinaire, dogmatic, *dictatorial, authoritarian, magisterial

Ana positive, certain, *sure, cocksure oral 1 *vocal, articulate

Ant written

2 Oral, verbal are often confused in use. Oral (see also VOCAL 1) implies utterance and speech; it is distinctively applicable to whatever is delivered, communicated, transacted, or carried on directly from one to another by word of mouth (an oral as opposed to a written confession) (receive oral instructions) (oral teaching of the deaf as distinguished from teaching by signs) Verbal stresses the use of words and may apply indifferently to what is written or spoken, for it carries no implication of the method of communication (verbal difficulties caused by ambiguous or equivocal language) (he often loses himself in little trifling distinctions and verbal niceties—Gray) The use of verbal as a substitute for oral fails to convey the intended distinction or suggests unintended or irrelevant distinctions or contrasts; thus, one would speak of an oral invitation or oral testimony when spoken is to be implied, because verbal would be ambiguous.

oration *speech, address, harangue, lecture, talk, sermon, homily orbit *range, gamut, reach, radius, compass, sweep, scope, horizon, ken, purview ordain *dictate, prescribe, decree, impose

Ana order, *command, enjoin, direct order n 1 *association, society, club

2 *command, injunction, bidding, behest, mandate, dictate Ana instruction, direction, charging or charge (see corresponding verbs at COMMAND) order vb 1 Order, arrange, marshal, organize, systematize, methodize are comparable when they mean to put (a number of persons or things) in proper place especially relatively or to bring about an orderly disposition of individuals, units, or elements that comprise (a thing). Order is somewhat outmoded when the idea of putting in a definite order is to be expressed; it more usually implies a straightening out and may connote either the elimination of friction or confusion, often with resulting peace or harmony, or the imposition of a fixed and rigid discipline (ordered his affairs in expectation of death) (it was a home strictly ordered, and he would have to conform to its ordering—Archibald Marshall) (the Greek states . . . were not well ordered; on the contrary, they were always on the verge, or in the act, of civil war—Dickinson) (a period of yearly relaxation in London, ordered and increasingly stately—Sackville-West) Arrange is more often used than order where the idea of setting in proper sequence, relationship, or adjustment is uppermost. The word often implies a notion of what is orderly, fit, suitable, or right and a placing of things in accordance with this notion (they are the great organizers . . . the Germans classify, but the French arrange—Cather) (arrange the furniture in a room) (arrange fruit in a dish) (each of us arranges the world according to his own notion of the fitness of things—Conrad) Often the term implies a determination of the way in which the things are disposed by an end in view and then suggests careful management or manipulation (we shall arrange matters so that you will not be inconvenienced) (arrange the details of a conference) (she arranged leave for a counselor whose mother was ill—Auchincloss) (political and economic life had been arranged in Utopian fashion—Henry Miller) Marshal usually connotes generalship and implies assemblage and arrangement either for ease or advantage in management (as under stress) or for effectiveness in display or exhibition (marshal troops for battle) (paused to marshal his thoughts before beginning his address) (marshaled like soldiers in gay company, the tulips stand arrayed—Lowell) (thanks to Mr. Dawson's erudition and his gift of marshaling facts, we begin to have a notion of what it is all about—Huxley) Organize implies an arrangement in which all persons or things are so related to each other that they work as a unit, each individual having his or its proper function or duty (organize the supporters of a candidate for the presidency) (part of this service is organizing—cataloging, classifying, and arranging on shelves—the collected literature—Bercaw) (the traditional logic was a logic for clarifying and organizing that which was already known—Dewey) Systematize implies arrangement according to a definite and planned scheme; thus, one systematizes one's daily work when one reduces it to routine order (if grammar was to become a rational science, it had to systematize itself through principles of logic—H. O. Taylor) (how Philosophy . . . blindly spineth her geometric webs, testing and systematizing even her own disorders—Bridges) Methodize differs from systematize in suggesting the imposition of orderly procedure rather than of a fixed scheme; thus, one can methodize one's work without giving it the character of routine (that art of reasoning . . . which methodizes and facilitates our discourse—Shorthouse) (philosophical decisions are nothing but the reflections of common life, methodized and corrected—Thilly)

Ana *adjust, regulate: *line, line up, align, range, array

2 *command, bid, enjoin, direct, instruct, charge

Ana prohibit, *forbid, interdict, inhibit, ban

Con permit, allow, *let: license, *authorize, commission orderly adj Orderly, methodical, systematic, regular are comparable when they mean following closely a set arrangement, design, or pattern. Orderly implies observance of due sequence or proper arrangement especially in the harmonious or careful disposition of persons or things (the guests passed in orderly groups into the ballroom) (an orderly placing of furniture) or in obedience to the rules of conduct or behavior that guide disciplined persons (an orderly group of children) (an orderly assembly of citizens) <an orderly election> or in keeping a place free from litter or confusion (his study is always orderly) <an orderly housekeeper> or in a scheme or system when all details stand in their proper relations, each playing its due part without interfering with that of any of the others  <the difference seems to me rather the difference between the complete and the fragmentary, the adult and the immature, the orderly and the chaotic—T. S. Eliot> Methodical implies the observance of an order that has been carefully worked out so that the steps to be followed are exactly known or the pattern that is accepted seems logical or inevitable under the circumstances <make a methodical search for evidence> <give methodical instructions to a new employee> <begin a methodical study of the Bible>  Systematic comes close to methodical in ordinary use <needed a systematic brain, and a sympathetic nature—Andrew Buchanan> <composing is self-expression and that is hard and systematic work—Toch> but systematic, which always retains some notion of the ordered complex unity implied by the related noun (compare SYSTEM), may be preferred when the stress is not upon the order followed but upon the integrated and ordered whole involved; thus, methodical study implies study pursued in regular increments according to a predetermined schedule while systematic study implies study pursued according to a scheme in which each increment leads logically to the next and the end result is exposure to an integrated block of information <the realization that all languages are systematic structures—A. A. Hill> <at the highest level, there stands . . . systematic theory, the conceptual framework within which a whole discipline is cast—Easton> Systematic also may be used to suggest order in occurrence, in progression, and especially in repetition, still with some notion of an underlying system; thus, a systematic error is one that is inherent in a system of measurement or calculation and recurs whenever that system is used  <they were not your gabbling, laughing eaters . . . they were quiet, systematic, devastating; they advanced steadily in good order from the first slice of ham to the last slice of chocolate cake—Priestley> <nowhere else in our literature can such a systematic and chill-blooded series of rendings, gorings, murders, suicides, and executions be found—Aldridge> Regular, with its basic implication of conformance to a rule (see also REGULAR 1), may come very close to orderly <even the most “realistic” work, if it is one of art, is not an imitative reproduction of the things that are so familiar, so regular, and so unimportant that we call them real—Dewey> <the umbrageous trees, which rose in a regular line from either side—De Quincey> The term may imply steadiness or uniformity (as in following a schedule) <regular meals> <the gentleness of their morality, their regular and industrious habits—de Tocqueville> or it may suggest occurrence and recurrence (as at fixed or stated intervals or in uniform amount) <the regular ebb and flow of the tides> <the revenue of government from the taxes was not regular but capricious and exceptional—Belloc>

Ana tidy, *neat, trim, spick-and-span: formal, conventional, ceremonious (see CEREMONIAL): peaceable, *pacific, peaceful

Ant disorderly: chaotic ordinance canon, precept, *law, rule, regulation, statute ordinary adj *common, familiar, popular, vulgar

Ana *usual, customary, habitual, wonted, accustomed

Ant extraordinary —Con *abnormal, atypical, aber-rant: *exceptional: *irregular, unnatural, anomalous ordnance *armament, matériel, munitions, arms, artillery, ammunition organ 1 medium, vehicle, channel, *mean, instrument, instrumentality, agent, agency

2 *journal, periodical, newspaper, magazine, review organism *system, scheme, network, complex, economy organize 1 systematize, methodize, *order, arrange, marshal

Ana design, project, plan, scheme (see under PLAN n): form, fashion, shape, *make

Ant disorganize

2 institute, *found, establish

Ana *begin, commence, start, initiate, inaugurate: *adjust, regulate oriel *window, casement, dormer orifice *aperture, interstice origin, source, inception, root, provenance, provenience, prime mover denote the point at which something (as a process, a growth, a development, a custom, a habit, or an institution) begins its course or its existence. Origin applies chiefly to the point at which the thing under consideration has its rise or to the person or thing from which it is ultimately derived; it often applies specifically to the causes in operation before the thing itself is finally brought into being <the origin of the custom of giving presents at Christmas> <is probable that the origin of language is not a problem that can be solved out of the resources of linguistics alone—Sapir> Often, when used in reference to persons, it means little more than ancestry or parentage; it is then used either in the singular or the plural <his father was of no great origin—Belloc> <quickly realized how far he had traveled from his origins—Commins>

Source basically applies to the point at which waters from a spring or fountain emerge to form the beginning point of a stream or river <the source of the Hudson river> In extended use source more often than origin applies to what serves as the ultimate beginning of a thing, especially an immaterial or intangible thing; however, since the term is sometimes qualified by such words as immediate or secondary which weaken or destroy this implication, it is often in this sense modified by ultimate, fundamental, or primary <an ever-present energy, which is the source of all cosmic movement—Inge> <the power of concentrated attention as the fundamental source of the prodigious productiveness of great workers—Eliot> <theoretically the mob is the repository of all political wisdom and virtue; actually it is the ultimate source of all political power—Mencken> Source is also applied to the one (as the person, book, manuscript, or document) from which a person derives information; in this sense a primary source is a person who has firsthand knowledge or a work that was written at the time under discussion, especially by one who had firsthand knowledge; a secondary source is a person who has learned the facts from others or a work which is based upon information gathered from others <graduate students in history are discouraged from using secondary sources> Inception is often preferred to origin when the reference is to the actual beginning (as of an undertaking, a project, an institution, or a practice); the term carries a weaker connotation of underlying causes than origin, yet does not, as source often does, carry a suggestion that the thing so called is the ultimate origin <they joined the League of Nations Union. . . . Stanley did so, at its inception, and became, in fact, a speaker on platforms in the cause—Rose Macaulay> <the subject may and does change between the inception of the work and its completion—Alexander> Root often suggests that the actual origin of a thing goes back to something very deep and fundamental and that the thing itself is only an outward manifestation of its influence. Root therefore more often than source applies to what is regarded as the first or final cause of a thing (the love of money is the root of all evil—1 Tim 6:10) (John Brown has loosened the roots of the slave system; it only breathes—it does not live—Phillips) Provenance and provenience are chiefly used to designate the place or, sometimes, the race or people from which a thing is derived or where or by whom or among whom it originated or was invented or constructed (antiquities of doubtful provenance) (he would have some difficulty in guessing its provenience, and naming the race from which it was brought—Lang) (a fragment of a cast copper dagger had been discovered earlier, but its provenience is not certain—Daifuku) (in the provenance, or history of previous ownership, of many of the Duveen works appeared the names of kings and the mistresses of kings—Behrman) Prime mover is chiefly used as a designation of an ultimate and original source of motion or motive power; when applied to a personal agent, it usually refers to an inciter or instigator of an action or course (convinced that the great man is best understood as an effect or manifestation rather than as a prime mover—L. A. White) (the prime mover in the whole matter was Hugh the Great—Freeman) In mechanics the term specifically applies to the natural or mechanical power which sets a thing moving or in motion; it has been used in reference to wind (as in driving a sailing ship), steam (as in driving a steamship), a waterwheel, a windmill, or a steam or diesel engine.

Ana beginning, commencement, initiation, starting (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN): derivation, origination, rising or rise (see corresponding verbs at SPRING): *ancestry, lineage original adj 1 *initial, primordial

Ana beginning, commencing, starting (see BEGIN): *primary, primal, pristine, primeval: basic, *fundamental Con deriving or derived, stemming or stemmed, proceeding or proceeded (see SPRING): imitated or imitating, copied or copying (see COPY): simulated or simulating (see ASSUME)

2 *new, fresh, novel, new-fashioned, newfangled, modern, modernistic

Ant dependent: banal: trite originate rise, derive, arise, *spring, flow, issue, emanate, proceed, stem

Ana *begin, commence, start ornament *adorn, decorate, embellish, beautify, deck, bedeck, garnish

Ana enhance, heighten, *intensify ornate, rococo, baroque, flamboyant, florid can all mean elaborately and often pretentiously decorated or designed. Ornate is applicable to anything heavily adorned or ornamented or conspicuously embellished (an ornate style of architecture) (the room's communicating door, heavily ornate with late Renaissance panels and tarnished silver handles—MacInnes) (in the fiacre were Gerald and a woman. Gerald . . . was talking eagerly to his ornate companion—Bennett) (introduced the direct and colloquial manner upon the American public platform, as distinguished from the highly elaborated and often ornate style which had been established—Higginson) Rococo basically applies to a French architectural style originating in the eighteenth century and characterized chiefly by the extravagant and often fantastic use of curves, shellwork, and fanciful excrement. The term therefore implies the ornateness of design characteristic of this decorative style especially as evident in architectural details, in furniture, and in mirror and picture frames.

It is often extended to describe a style (as in painting or writing) that seems tastelessly or meaninglessly ornate or overadorned (decided instead to have the wedding, rococo excess and all—Wouk) (doesn't mind getting caught out with a rococo phrase or an overstuffed image—Los Angeles Times) Baroque, which is sometimes interchanged with rococo, basically applies to a style of art and architecture which prevailed from the latter part of the sixteenth century to nearly the end of the eighteenth century and which emphasized energy in conception, amplitude in design, the use of dynamic contrasts, extremely high relief, and the employment of curved and often contorted forms (I entered this baroque interior, with its twisted columns and volutes and high-piled, hideous tombs, adorned with skeletons and allegorical figures and angels blowing trumpets—L. P. Smith) In its extended sense baroque may suggest more grotesqueness and extravagance and less fancifulness than rococo, although it too may imply tasteless ornamentation (baroque poetry with its frigid vehemence, its exhibitionistic forcefulness and false dynamism, its arbitrary twisting and distortions—H. L. Davis) (their literature, their modern painting and architecture, their music—it's all baroque. It gesticulates rhetorically, it struts across stages, it sobs and bawls in its efforts to show you how passionate it is—Huxley) Flamboyant basically applies to a late French Gothic architectural style characterized by curves that suggest ascending flames (as in the tracery of windows). In its more general application flamboyant can suggest ornateness but more often stresses such elements as excess of color, conspicuous vigor and dash, or bold and daring display that suggest the freedom and brilliancy of flames (a flamboyant display of courage) (flamboyant penmanship—Dowden) (the flamboyant period of prose—Saintsbury) (these . . . flamboyant tricks of virtuosity have gone quite out of fashion—Quiller-Couch) (some [people] are simply present at accidents, without being involved at all—catalysts of death, if you'll pardon a flamboyant phrase—Theodore Sturgeon) Florid implies richness, usually overrichness, in details, shown particularly in the use of color, figures of speech, or flourishes, for their own sake; it implies, therefore, showy and ostentatious embellishment (a florid style of poetry) (a florid musical composition) (the screen was an old one, of gilt Spanish leather, stamped and wrought with a rather florid Louis-Quatorze pattern—Wilde) (inexplicable how a book . . . can . . . be banned because of the manner in which it is advertised and sold. However florid its cover, whatever the pitch of its advertisements, the contents remain the same—W. O. Douglas)

Ana adorned, decorated, ornamented, embellished (see ADORN): flowery, aureate (see RHETORICAL): *luxurious, sumptuous, opulent: *showy, ostentatious

Ant chaste: austere

orotund *resonant, sonorous, ringing, resounding, vibrant Ana *loud, stentorian, strident oscillate *swing, sway, vibrate, fluctuate, pendulate, waver, undulate

Ana vacillate, waver, *hesitate, falter: *shake, tremble, quiver, quaver ostensible *apparent, seeming, illusory

Ana specious, *plausible, colorable: pretended, assumed, affected, simulated, feigned (see ASSUME) ostentatious *showy, pretentious

Ana vainglorious, vain, proud (see under PRIDE): flaunting, parading, displaying (see SHOW vb): boasting, bragging, gasconading (see BOAST)

ostracize *banish, exile, expatriate, deport, transport, extradite otiose *vain, nugatory, idle, empty, hollow

Ana *superfluous, supernumerary, surplus: *futile, vain, fruitless, bootless oust *eject, expel, evict, dismiss

Ana *exclude, eliminate, shut out, rule out, debar, disbar: *dismiss, discharge, fire, cashier, sack out-and-out *outright, unmitigated, arrant outcast n Outcast, castaway, derelict, reprobate, pariah, untouchable are comparable when they mean one who has lost contact with or has been excluded from association with men in general or with a particular group. Outcast is usually applied to a person who has been rejected by society and is forced to live without its help, its companionship, or its approval; the term does not imply a degraded or abject condition; but it does suggest a loss of the comforts that accrue from one's association with other men (the casual offender expiates his offense . . . and after devastating years is given back an outcast to the society that made him—Cardozo) (Arnold the heart-broken outcast from the snug household of faith—Montague) Castaway usually implies abandonment as the result of shipwreck and suggests the wretched and pitiable condition of one isolated from both human society and normal human comforts (took part . . . in that passage through the Straits of Gibraltar which landed him as a castaway on the Portuguese coast—Sellery) (a pitiful wreck of an old man he had picked up . . . a castaway Englishman, Henry Atkins by name—Cather) Derelict basically applies to property and especially to a ship abandoned and left to the mercy of the elements. In application to human beings the term emphasizes a cutting off from normal social association particularly because of irresponsible or dissolute habits and more often than outcast or castaway suggests a debased state more or less voluntarily assumed (chronic ne'er-do-wells, useless derelicts of society, seldom hired and then not for long—F. L. Allen) (strange things happen on a racetrack where human derelicts and equine aristocrats fashion bonds . . . beyond the comprehension of the outside world—Gerald Beaumont) Reprobate basically applies to one who, because of his sins, is rejected by God. In extended use reprobate is more likely to imply the disapprobation of society than actual rejection by society, and, while it may impute grave wrongdoing, it is very likely to suggest a degree of social tolerance (may paint his hero as a gay, devil-may-care reprobate, striding to the gallows with a twinkle in his eye—Pawley) (an old reprobate who acted as medicine man, astrologer, doctor, wizard, rainmaker—Birtles) Pariah and untouchable are words basically used to denote specific socially inferior or unacceptable groups in India but in their more general applications often used without reference to the original meaning. Pariah in such general application typically denotes a person who especially as a member of a group is, justifiably or unjustifiably, rejected or despised by society (with us, prison makes a man a pariah. I, and such as I am, have hardly any right to air and sun—Wilde) (many virile minds dare not speak out for fear of . . . becoming political pariahs—L. L. Rice) (a man who had disgraced himself in battle was a pariah in his native land—Dickinson) (hundreds of thousands of lepers still exist throughout the world as social pariahs—Heiser) Untouchable is applicable not only to an individual but to a group (as a people, nation, or class) which another and supposedly superior group regards as beneath its notice or outside the sphere of its consideration (those in Whitehall may go on thinking there is something extremely meritorious in treating Russia as a diplomatic untouchable—Daily Express) (that former untouchable of the Atlantic, the Tourist-Class passenger—Sutton)

Ana *vagabond, vagrant, tramp, hobo outcome *effect, result, consequence, upshot, aftereffect, aftermath, sequel, issue, event

Ana *fate, lot, portion, destiny: termination, *end outdo excel, outstrip, transcend, surpass, *exceed outer, outward, outside, external, exterior mean being or placed without something. Although in many cases interchangeable, they are more or less restricted in their applications and are therefore clearly distinguished in their implications. Outer usually retains its comparative force, then applying to what is farther out from something described as inner (the outer as distinguished from the inner court) (the outer layer of skin is called the epidermis) or is farther than another thing from the center (shed one's outer garments) (the outer covering of a butternut is removed before the nut is cracked) Outer is also applicable to what is definitely without as opposed to what is definitely within something, but in this sense the term rarely suggests spatial relations; thus, the outer man is the man as known in the flesh and as distinguished from the inner man, that is, the man as he really is in mind and soul; one's outer life is the part which is observable to one's fellows; the outer world is the world as known directly through the senses. Outward may be used of spatial relations; when it is so used it commonly implies motion or direction away from, or the reverse of, what is inward (given to outward display) (outward travel from New York City is very heavy over the weekends) (the outward curve of a convex lens) Like outer, the term is sometimes used of what is manifest to others in contrast with what is within and especially with what is spiritual or mental (all outward actions, every overt thing we do—Powys) (obstinate questionings of sense and outward things—Wordsworth) (give outward and objective form to ideas that bubble inwardly and have a fascinating lure in them—Mencken) Outside usually implies a position on or a reference to the outer parts or surface of a thing (an outside stateroom on a ship) (outside shutters) (the outside paint is looking shabby) But outside, in extended use, applies especially to a person or thing that is beyond implied borders, bounds, or limits; thus, an outside influence is one not emanating from the particular society, group, or community in mind; the outside world is the world beyond the scope or interest (as of a family group, community, or set) or the confines of a place (as an institution, a town, city, or a state); an outside broker is one who is not a member of an exchange; outside work is work in the open air in contrast with inside work under cover (as in an office, factory, or store) (if it had condemned, Old Chester would not have cared in the very least. It looked down upon the outside world—Deland) External and exterior are often used interchangeably without loss, for both come close in meaning to outside (external appearance of an object) (the exterior form of a body) But external may be preferred when location or situation beyond or away from the thing under consideration is implied (our desires and wills are directed to some object external to us—Alexander) (the slavery which would be imposed upon her by her external enemies and her internal traitors—Roosevelt) and exterior is often preferred when location or situation on the surface or on the outer limits of a thing is implied (the exterior slope of a fortification) (the exterior parts of the human body) (thou, whose exterior semblance doth belie thy Soul's immensity—Wordsworth) In addition, external sometimes comes close to superficial in implying mere appearance or semblance that has no relation or little relation to what the thing really is (but under this external appearance of ease she was covered with cold beads of sweat—Wharton) <beauty that is purely external> and exterior may, like outer and outward, apply to what shows or is made apparent <the exterior cold had stolen into the cars, forming lenses of ice on the inside surface of the windowpanes—Capote> <the absence of exterior demonstration of affection for my mother—Wecter>

Ana *extrinsic, extraneous, foreign, alien

Ant inner —Con inward, inside, internal, interior, intestine (see INNER) outfit n *equipment, apparatus, paraphernalia, tackle, machinery, gear, matériel outfit vb *furnish, equip, appoint, accouter, arm outlander *stranger, foreigner, alien, outsider, immigrant, émigré outlandish *strange, singular, unique, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, odd, queer, quaint, curious

Ana bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic, antic; alien, foreign, extraneous, *extrinsic outlast *outlive, survive

Ana endure, persist, abide, *continue: withstand, *resist outline n 1 Outline, contour, profile, skyline, silhouette mean the boundary lines which give form or shape to a body, a mass, or a figure. Outline refers to a line which marks or seems to mark the outer edge or limits of a thing <at night, the outline of the shore is traced in transparent silver by the moonlight and the flying foam—Stevenson> <looked at the big house. The dark outline against the dark sky made him hesitate—Caldwell> <in good years the outline of the cultivated area expands—P. E. James> Contour does not fix the attention on an edge or limit but on the outer lines, particularly the curving lines, of a thing's shape as indicative of its grace or lack of grace, its fullness or slenderness, its softness or harshness <the full and flowing contour of the neck—Shelley>  <the blurred contour of Rainbarrow obstructed the sky—Hardy> Specifically, contour applies to lines (contour lines) in a map (contour map) that indicate the details of elevation of a country or tract of land. Profile applies primarily to the representation or the appearance of something in outline, especially of a face in side view showing the contour of the head and emphasizing the line from forehead to under the chin <lips lovely in profile—a little too wide and hard . . . seen in front—Ruskin> Consequently, profile is often preferred when a varied and sharply defined outline as seen against a background is implied <out on the horizon you could see a tanker, small and neat in profile against the blue sea—Hemingway> although skyline may be chosen as more specific when the background is the sky <the skyline of New York City> <gracious towers and spires make up the loveliest man-made skyline in the world—Pollock> Silhouette in its primary sense applies to a likeness of someone or something made by or as if by tracing the outline of his or its shadow on dark material (as black paper), cutting this out, and mounting it against a contrasting background. In extended use silhouette, even more than outline or profile, eliminates all consideration of such details as color, quality, and expression and implies an outline seen in or as if in a shadow <from the distance at which we stood and because of the brightness of the sun behind them, we saw the two figures only in silhouette> <the silhouette made a blue-black stain on the opposite wall—Lowell> <with a little imagination, he could find . . . the face of a dead man in the silhouette of the mountains—Bemelmans>

Ana figure, *form, shape, conformation, configuration 2 sketch, diagram, delineation, draft, tracing, plot, blueprint (see under SKETCH vb) outline vb *sketch, diagram, delineate, draft, trace, plot, blueprint outlive, outlast, survive are comparable when they mean to remain in existence longer than another person or thing or after a given experience. Outlive carries a strong implication of a capacity for endurance and is especially appropriate when competition, struggle, or the surmounting of a difficulty is also connoted <not marble, nor the gilded monuments of princes, shall outlive this powerful rhyme—Shak.> <the world has outlived much, and will outlive a great deal more—J. R. Lowell> Outlast differs little from outlive but usually stresses greater length of duration rather than greater capacity for endurance and therefore may be employed when comparison is more important than a suggestion of superiority or when the fact of existing longer is more important than the length of time involved <customs that have long outlasted their usefulness—Inge> <the sweet sensations of returning health made me happy for a time; but such sensations seldom outlast convalescence—Hudson> Survive may be used as an intransitive as well as a transitive verb; in general it suggests merely a living or existing longer than another person or thing, or after some event (sometimes implied rather than expressed) which might bring about his or its end <the elder sister survived the younger> <he is unlikely to survive the operation> <one in a million of these childish talents survives puberty—Huxley> <they had at least survived the old year and were alive for the next—Irwin Shaw> <all called their host “Mr. President.” That much sense of the proprieties survived the reek of whiskey—S. H. Adams>

Ana endure, persist, abide, *continue: surpass, *exceed outlook n *prospect, anticipation, foretaste

Ana forecasting or forecast, predicting or prediction, prophesying or prophecy, presaging or presage (see corresponding verbs at FORETELL): possibility, probability, likelihood (see corresponding adjectives at PROBABLE) outrage vb 1 *abuse, misuse, mistreat, maltreat, ill-treat

Ana *wrong, persecute, oppress, aggrieve: corrupt, pervert, vitiate, deprave, *debase

2 *offend, affront, insult

Ana vex, *annoy, irk, bother: mortify, chagrin (see corresponding adjectives at ASHAMED) outrageous, monstrous, heinous, atrocious mean enormously or flagrantly bad or horrible. Something outrageous violates even the lowest standard of what is right or decent or exceeds one's power to suffer or tolerate <an outrageous practical joke> <an outrageous cartoon> <the thought had already occurred to him, and it seemed outrageous to hear it repeated in what was, after all, the mouth of a prostitute—Mailer> <had induced her to come to Camp Tamarack with lies, bald outrageous lies—Wouk> Something monstrous (see also MONSTROUS 1) is shockingly wrong, absurd, or horrible or is inconceivably fantastic, abnormal, or aberrant   <the very horror with which men spoke, centuries after . . . plainly indicates that such a wholesale massacre was exceptional, monstrous—Quiller-Couch> <what is disturbing me most is . . . the knowledge that I have made a monstrous fool of myself—Dahl> Something heinous is so flagrantly bad or so conspicuous for its enormity that it excites hatred or horror <treason has always been regarded as a heinous crime> <these animal passions are felt most vividly when the community is animated with anger against some heinous offense—Alexander>  Something atrocious excites condemnation for its savagery or barbarity

⟨atrocious cruelty⟩ ⟨atrocious acts which can only take place in a slave country—Darwin⟩ These words are frequently interchangeable, and all lend themselves to hyperbolic description of what is for the moment deprecated ⟨outrageous service in a restaurant⟩ ⟨awakened . . . by a monstrous hammering on his door—G. D. Brown⟩ ⟨time divorced from mechanical operations was treated as a heinous waste—Mumford⟩ ⟨atrocious weather⟩ outright adj Outright, out-and-out, unmitigated, arrant are comparable when they are used hyperbolically as meaning not limited or qualified. They are often used interchangeably as intensives, but there are clear differences in meaning. What is outright has gone to the extreme and can be made neither better nor worse or is past recall ⟨he is an outright fool⟩ ⟨you speak outright nonsense⟩ ⟨torture more unmerciful than outright killing⟩ What is out-and-out is completely as described at all times or in every part or from every point of view ⟨an out-and-out fraud⟩ ⟨an out-and-out villain⟩ ⟨an out-and-out blessing⟩ What is unmitigated is or seems to be so utterly what it is as to be beyond the possibility of being lessened, softened, or relieved ⟨an unmitigated evil⟩ ⟨unrequited affections are in youth unmitigated woes—L. P. Smith⟩ What is arrant is all that is implied by the term that follows (usually a term of abuse) ⟨an arrant coward⟩ ⟨an arrant hypocrite⟩ ⟨an arrant liar⟩ outside adj *outer, outward, external, exterior

Ana *flagrant, glaring, gross, rank: *excessive, inordinate, immoderate, extreme: flagitious, nefarious, iniquitous, *vicious

Ana *extrinsic, extraneous, alien, foreign

Ant inside —Con *inner, inward, internal, interior, intestine outsider *stranger, foreigner, alien, outlander, immigrant, émigré outstanding prominent, conspicuous, salient, signal, striking, arresting, remarkable, *noticeable

Ana *exceptional

Ant commonplace —Con *common, ordinary, familiar outstrip outdo, *exceed, surpass, transcend, excel outward *outer, outside, external, exterior

Ana extraneous, *extrinsic, alien, foreign

Ant inward —Con *inner, inside, internal, interior, intestine outwit *frustrate, thwart, foil, baffle, balk, circumvent

Ana defeat, overcome, surmount (see CONQUER): *prevent, preclude, obviate, avert: overreach, *cheat, defraud over *above

Ant beneath

overbearing supercilious, disdainful, lordly, arrogant, haughty, *proud, insolent

Ana domineering, *masterful, imperious: scorning or scornful, despising or despiseful, contemning (see corresponding verbs at DESPISE): autocratic, despotic, tyrannical, *absolute

Ant subservient

overcome surmount, overthrow, subjugate, rout, *conquer, vanquish, defeat, beat, lick, subdue

Ana capture, *catch: outstrip, outdo, *exceed: *suppress, repress overdue *tardy, behindhand, late

Ana delayed, retarded, detained, slowed, slackened (see DELAY vb): deferred, postponed (see DEFER) overflow *teem, swarm, abound overhang *bulge, jut, stick out, protuberate, protrude, project, beetle

Ana *threaten, menace: suspend, *hang, dangle overlay, superpose, superimpose, appliqué can all mean to add one thing to another by placing the former upon or over the latter. Overlay usually implies covering with another material or substance, sometimes thinly (as with a wash, glaze, or coat) ⟨plated silver is often a white metal overlaid with silver⟩ or sometimes thickly (as by encrusting, veneering, or plastering) ⟨a brick wall overlaid with stucco⟩ In extended use overlay usually implies accretions or additions that conceal or encumber the original thing or smother and stifle whatever there is of life in it ⟨the ancient world had its own complexities, but it was not, like ours, heavily overlaid with the debris of speculative systems—Buchan⟩ ⟨ages of fierceness have overlaid what is naturally kindly in the dispositions of ordinary men and women—Russell⟩ Superpose and superimpose are not always clearly distinguished, especially when they imply a putting of one thing on top of another, thereby extending the height of the original mass; thus, strata are layers of rock successively built up by sedimentary deposits, each layer being superimposed or superposed on the one previously formed. Superpose, however, is more often chosen when relative position only is indicated, and superimpose when the thing added rests upon or is supported by the original thing; thus, superposed columns do not necessarily have the columns of the lower row for their respective bases, but superimposed columns do; an overtone is strictly a superposed tone. Superpose is also the technical term when dealing with light rays or other energy waves that occupy the same position without destroying each other or losing their identities ⟨upon the large and general motion of the glacier, smaller motions are superposed—Tyndall⟩ ⟨originally they [two bright spots] were superposed on each other—Darrow⟩ Superimpose often, especially in extended use, carries the implications of imposition or the addition of something extraneous and unintegrated ⟨his symbolism is too often something superimposed—Bentley⟩ Appliqué basically implies an ornamenting with pieces, usually of contrasting material, that are cut or shaped and applied (as by sewing or pasting); the term is used primarily in reference to textile ornamentation ⟨appliqué a satin blouse with wool of the same color⟩ In extended use appliqué suggests overlaying with something obviously added and forming a pattern ⟨never taking his eyes off the pine trees, appliquéd against the blue water—Cather⟩ ⟨footnotes have been appliquéd to books that would have been better off without this factitious decoration—D. C. Smith⟩ overlook slight, forget, ignore, disregard, *neglect, omit overplus *excess, superfluity, surplus, surplusage overreach *cheat, cozen, defraud, swindle overrun *infest, beset oversight, supervision, surveillance all denote the function or duty of watching or guarding for the sake of proper control or direction. Oversight applies to the function or duty not only of one who is called an overseer or an inspector but of anyone whose duty it is to watch the progress of a piece of work so that no defects or imperfections may occur or to superintend the labors or efforts of a body of workers ⟨each foreman is charged with the oversight of the work done in his department⟩ ⟨his widow was to have the oversight of the portions left to the younger children—Scudder⟩ ⟨legislative oversight of administration is a familiar and well-grounded assumption of responsible government—Macmahon⟩ Supervision carries the strongest implication of authoritative powers, of responsibility, and of superintendence; it usually suggests more rigorous direction or closer management than oversight ⟨the architect had supervision of the construction of the building⟩ ⟨the majority plan advocated supervision of the processing of ores . . . that is, complete control of uranium and thorium—Current Biog.) Surveillance implies a close watch on persons suspected of being likely to commit misdeeds or offenses against the law or against morals or suffer untoward accidents (the police are maintaining a strict surveillance of the suspect) (keep the inmates of a lunatic asylum under surveillance) (I cannot drink a milk shake or put on a pair of shoes without their friendly but implacable surveillance—A. E. Stevenson) (they subjected her to a pride-breaking foreign surveillance, and refused her even the lip service of recognition as an equal—The Personalist)

Ana management, direction, controlling or control (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT): inspection, scrutiny, examination (see under SCRUTINIZE)

overspread vb *cover, envelop, wrap, shroud, veil

Ana *hide, conceal, screen: cloak, mask, *disguise, camouflage overstatement *exaggeration, hyperbole

Ant understatement overthrow vb 1 *overturn, subvert, upset, capsize

Ana *throw, cast, fling, hurl, toss

2 rout, surmount, overcome, vanquish, *conquer, defeat, beat, lick, subdue, subjugate, reduce overture n Overture, approach, advance, tender, bid are words of somewhat indefinite application covering a variety of acts or actions by which one person or party tries to gain the goodwill of another person or party. Overture implies an attempt to begin a relationship. It may designate a formal proposal intended to open negotiations (as for peace, for a marriage between persons of royal blood, or for a merger of corporations). It is, however, often applied to an act or speech that may be construed as a search for an opening (as for friendship, for reconciliation, or for cooperation) (she was not one of those backward and delicate ladies, who can die rather than make the first overture—Fielding) (“You are the new second officer, I believe.” Mr. Powell answered in the affirmative, wondering if this was a friendly overture—Conrad) Approach, often in the plural, may be used in place of overture when the latter is felt to be too formal (the two girls made timid approaches to each other) (the minister is always tempted to break through . . . with intimate approaches to a congregation which are off the record—Sperry) (females who are most often involved in tavern pickups and in street approaches—Kinsey et al) Advance, usually in the plural, may be applied to an attempt to gain love, friendship, or goodwill, whether it serve as an overture or as an effort to establish a closer relationship (she tried to make talk, but Hugh answered all her advances . . . briefly—Anderson) and it is the one of these terms that is freely used without qualification to suggest irregularity or impropriety in the overtures made (Frances withstood the advances of the King, but she accepted his gift—Sylvia Gray) (if an officer with a higher rank than my husband’s makes advances to me, do I have to submit if I want my husband to get promoted?—Kaderli) Tender retains its primary meaning of offer, but it does not necessarily imply specific acts or a formal proposal. Sometimes it suggests little more than a sign or token (“He hath, my lord, of late made many tenders of his affection to me.” “Affection! pooh! you speak like a green girl. . . . Do you believe his tenders, as you call them?”—Shak.) (honored him by the tender of some important appointment—J. D. Hicks) Bid adds to advance the implication of appeal or, sometimes, of invitation; it always requires qualification (a bid for sympathy) (a bid for patronage) Like the other words of this group, the specific nature of the act or action can be inferred only from the context (de Gaulle’s speech was generally considered a bid for the presidency—Ehr- mann) (the establishing of a whaling colony as their first bid to fortune on the South river—Amer. Guide Series: Del.)

Ana *proposal, proposition: offering or offer, proffering (see corresponding verbs at OFFER)

overturn, upset, capsize, overthrow, subvert are comparable because they carry a common basic meaning—to cause to fall, or, intransitively, to fall, from the normal or proper position. Otherwise they vary widely in their applications and implications. Overturn is usually the least explicit in its additional implications; sometimes it implies a turning upside down (the boat overturned and floated with its keel upwards) but more often it implies a turning on the side so that the thing affected lies flat on the ground (overturn a chair by hitting against it) (they overturned me in the dust, rubbed thistles into my hair, and left me—Masters) Sometimes, especially when the thing affected is a state, an institution, or something which has been built up or become established, the term also implies a breaking down and consequently a ruining or destroying (long-reverenced titles cast away as weeds; laws overturned—Wordsworth) (handed down a decision which overturned a century-old judicial rule—Walter Goodman) (a lever for prying apart and overturning the coalition—Straight) Upset is the familiar term and implies especially a loss of balance, sometimes physical, sometimes mental, often emotional (for this sense of upset see DISCOMPOSE) as the result of some external or internal cause or agency (no birds in last year’s nests—the winds have torn and upset the mossy structures in the bushes—Jefferies) (a European war lays its blight on whole peoples, deranges their life, upsets their standards of judgement—Montague) But upset more often than overturn is used to imply the abolition of something established or the demolishing of something built up (the general’s calculations were upset by the swift advance of the enemy) (we are bound to be very cautious in coming to the conclusion that the Fourteenth Amendment has upset what thus far has been established and accepted for a long time—Justice Holmes) Capsize is specifically applicable to the upsetting or overturning of a boat; in more general use it usually suggests a complete overturning and is sometimes employed in an extended sense to imply a turning, especially a sudden turning, upside down or topsy-turvy, not only physically, but mentally or morally (it may well have been the comedians who restored the theatre’s balance when the tragedians threatened to capsize it into absurdity—Bridges-Adams) Overthrow (see also CONQUER) carries a stronger implication of the exercise of force, violence, or strategy than any of the preceding terms; it often also implies consequent defeat, destruction, or ruin (trees overthrown by a storm) (seek to overthrow religion) (my plans were overthrown—Darwin) (traditional beliefs which science may overthrow—Cohen) Subvert implies an overturning or overthrowing of something held to be of intrinsic value (as a form of government, or morality, or religion) by undermining its supports or weakening its foundations; often it suggests the operation of insidious or corrupting influences (this doctrine would subvert the very foundation of all written constitutions—John Marshall) (a . . . question . . . whether more harm will be done to morality by weakening or subverting established usage than good—Alexander) (representative government . . . easily may be, and in England has been, used to subvert equality and fraternity—Brownell)

Ana invert, *reverse, transpose

OWN vb 1 possess, hold, *have, enjoy

Ana control, manage, direct, *conduct: *keep, retain

2 *acknowledge, avow, admit, confess

Ana concede, *grant, allow: *reveal, disclose, divulge Ant disown: repudiate oxygenate *aerate, ventilate, carbonate ozone *air, atmosphere, ether

P

pabulum *food, aliment, nutriment, nourishment, sustenance, pap pace n *speed, velocity, momentum, impetus, headway

pacific, peaceable, peaceful, irenic, pacifist, pacifistic are sometimes confused because they all involve the idea of affording or promoting peace. But pacific applies chiefly to persons or to utterances, acts, influences, or ideas that tend to make peace or to conciliate strife (they flung out a challenge which even the most pacific Quaker in Philadelphia had to heed—Charles & Mary Beard) (seek the settlement of disputes only by pacific means—R. H. Jackson) (the pacific policy of Walpole was regarded by them as a national humiliation—Plumb) Peaceable also applies to persons or to their actions or words, but it describes their character or quality as peace-loving, as disposed to avoid strife, or as inclined to keep peace, rather than their aims or tendencies (the villagers were a quiet, peaceable folk) (our king the good Simonides . . . deserves so to be called for his peaceable reign and good government—Shak.) (the Mayans were a traditionally gentle and peaceable people—Bracker) Peaceful applies especially to a life, a condition or state, a period or age, or a country or people in which peace prevails or there is no strife, but it may apply to whatever is indicative of peace, especially of mind, or provides an opportunity for such peace (and may at last my weary age find out the peaceful hermitage—Milton) (the peaceful countenance of the old clergyman) (thou shouldst have seemed a treasure-house divine of peaceful years—Wordsworth) (man has laid down his weapons and resumed a peaceful way of life—Bailey) (the peaceful comportment of the seals had quieted my alarm—London) Irenic, which applies primarily to peace in connection with religious controversy, may describe attitudes and measures likely to allay dispute (the political equivalent of the dogfight on the human level is not made more irenic by the capacity of the participants to verbalize their animosities—Murphy) (Pieper lived to see his synod adopt a very irenic attitude towards its former antagonists—Rohne) Pacifist and pacifistic apply chiefly to the views, arguments, writings, or attitudes of opponents of war or the use of military force for any purpose but they may also apply to the spirit or utterances of someone who conscientiously objects to wars or who would substitute arbitration for conflict in the settlement of any disputes (pacifistic antagonism to conscription) (Grotius' pacifistic attitude is founded on his understanding of the humanitarian and cosmopolitan aspects of natural law—Albert Salomon) (as many pacifist writers argue, international warfare has consequences for the lives of people, in terms of spiritual sickness and the brutalizing of attitudes—Garvin)

Ana *calm, placid, serene, tranquil: conciliating or conciliatory, propitiating or propitiatory, appeasing, pacifying or pacificatory (see corresponding verbs at PACIFY)
Ant bellicose —Con *belligerent, pugnacious, combative, quarrelsome, contentious pacifist, pacifistic *pacific, peaceable, peaceful, irenic pacify, appease, placate, mollify, propitiate, conciliate are comparable when they mean to quiet excited, aroused, or disturbed persons. Pacify implies a soothing or calming of anger, grievance, or agitation, or the quelling of insurrection especially by force (seeing his mounting rage, friends did all they could to pacify and restrain him) (second-grade troops, useful mainly to occupy parts of the country that have already been pacified—Crozier) Appease may indicate the quieting of agitation or insistent demand by the making of concessions (open in manner, easy of access, a little quick of temper but readily appeased—Buchan) (he is utterly and absolutely implacable; no prayers, no human sacrifices can ever for one moment appease his cold, malignant rage—L. P. Smith) and it may be used in reference to appetites, desires, and passions as well as persons and to imply a giving of quietening satisfaction (there is always the drive to excel. Work, literacy, food and shelter . . . are minimum requirements of civilization, but they will not appease this ambition—Edmund Wilson) (a frantic effort to appease mounting discontent at home—Willen) Placate is sometimes interchangeable with appease but may imply a more complete or lasting assuagement of bitter feeling (each and every new route projected was liable to drastic alteration to placate local opposition—O. S. Nock) (federal officials who try to placate witch-hunting Congressmen—New Republic) Mollify stresses softening of anger or abatement of hurt feelings by positive action (as flattery or concession) (the propagandist . . . must be able to mollify and perhaps even convert the hostile—Huxley) (mollified when they heard that the patio, with its famous cottonwood tree will be left intact—Green Peyton) Propitiate may refer to averting the anger or malevolence or winning the favor of a superior or of one possessing the power to injure greatly (propitiate this far-shooting Apollo—Grote) (Aunt Rosa, he argued, had the power to beat him with many stripes . . . it would be discreet in the future to propitiate Aunt Rosa—Kipling) (the unlimited power of trustees to abuse their trust unless they are abjectly propitiated—H. G. Wells) Conciliate may be used of situations in which an estrangement or dispute is settled by arbitration or compromise (policy of conciliating and amalgamating conquered nations—Replier) (instinctively friendly and wholly free from inflammatory rhetoric, he did much to conciliate more stubborn Northern sentiment concerning the South—Gaines)

Ana assuage, alleviate, allay, mitigate, *relieve: *moderate, qualify, temper

Ant anger

pack n *bundle, bunch, package, packet, bale, parcel pack vb Pack, crowd, cram, stuff, ram, tamp are comparable when they mean to fill tightly or cause to fill tightly something which holds a limited amount or presents a limited space. Pack, in its basic sense, implies a forming into packs or bundles for convenience in storing or transporting (oranges are packed in crates for shipment) (pack books in cartons before moving them) (in this factory huge quantities of meat are processed, packed, and shipped to all parts of the country) Additionally it may imply close, orderly arrangement in receptacles of determined size, and, as a corollary, compact and complete filling. In extended use it may suggest completeness of filling or, frequently, an excessive or uncomfortable filling, without any relation to the ideas of storing or transporting <the play packed the theater> <the crowd in the bus was packed in like sardines> <packs an extraordinary amount of information into a few pages—Times Lit. Sup.> Crowd (see also PRESS) implies the presence of great numbers of persons or things in proportion to the space, area, or time; the term often suggests numbers so great as to press upon or otherwise seriously inconvenience <the harbor was crowded with ships> <crowd more persons into a hall than it can safely hold> <in revolutions men live fast: the experience of years is crowded into hours—Macaulay> <the road . . . was now crowded with people who had come up the hill for their Sunday afternoon walk—Archibald Marshall> <his mind was crowded with the detail he observed—Nevil Shute> Cram carries a similar implication of pressing so as to bruise or squeeze, but the word usually also suggests a forcible and, sometimes, disorderly insertion into a receptacle or space of more than it can easily or comfortably or safely take <cram a trunk full of clothes> <their storehouses crammed with grain—Shak.> <crammed his head full of knowledge> <cram for an examination> <most of the newcomers arrive with only such means as can be crammed into a bundle or two—Hersey> Stuff implies the use of such a material as padding, wadding, or straw in expanding or distending <stuff a pillow with feathers> <stuff a mattress with straw> From this specific meaning comes the more general meaning of to fill so that a thing bulges or so that the filling protrudes <stuffed his purse with bills> <stuff a turkey with dressing> <I have stuffed too many of the facts of history and science into my intellectuals—L. P. Smith> <as many hot hors d'oeuvres as the greediest guest could stuff into himself—Wouk> Ram nearly always retains some notion of its basic implication of pounding and tamping <ram home the charge in a muzzle-loading firearm by means of a ramrod> but this implication is sometimes obscured or subordinated and that of stuffing or cramming as if by pounding is stressed <ram tobacco into his pipe> <I always ram my clothes into a box—Bury> <pronging great slices of meat onto his fork and ramming them into his mouth—Bruce Marshall> Tamp, which often comes close to ram in meaning, originally meant and still means to plug up a drill hole above a blasting charge with clay, earth, or similar material. In its extended use it implies a series of blows which press something into a confined space or under, over, or about another thing that needs to be supported <tamping the gravel back around the ties—Laird> <tamp tobacco into his pipe>

Ana *compact, consolidate: *press, squeeze, jam: compress, constrict, *contract package n packet, *bundle, bunch, bale, parcel, pack packet n package, pack, *bundle, bunch, bale, parcel pack compact, *contract, bargain, treaty, entente, convention, cartel, concordat pain n 1 Pain, ache, pang, throe, twinge, stitch are comparable when they mean a bodily sensation that causes acute discomfort or suffering. Pain may range in its application from a sensation that makes one uneasily aware of some bodily disturbance or injury to a sensation resulting from severe injuries or disease and of agonizing intensity; from a sensation that is purely local to one that affects the entire body  <chest pains> <his body was wracked with pain> More technically, pain denotes a usually unpleasant sensation that results from a noxious stimulus to skin or tissues and leads to avoiding reactions. An ache is a steady, dull, and often generalized pain that is frequently associated with some underlying disorder <the ache of an abscessed tooth> <backache that accompanies kidney disease> A pang is a sharp, sudden, and usually transitory pain of great intensity, especially one that recurs in spasms <pangs have taken hold upon me, as the pangs of a woman that travaileth—Isa 21:3> <attacking them [fleas] was a waste of time, and unless a particularly savage pang forced you into action, you just sat and let yourself be devoured—Stewart> A throe is a pang characteristic of a process (as of labor in childbirth). Because of its association with labor the term usually designates a violent and convulsive, as well as a recurrent pain <in the throes of violent retching> <the throes of a mortal and painful disorder—Scott> A twinge is a momentary shooting or darting pain, especially one causing muscular contraction or twitching; it is sometimes regarded as a premonitory symptom <shrugged off twinges and creakings like mine as something quite to be expected in their early fifties—E. M. Stern> <feel a twinge in the region of the heart> Stitch differs from twinge in suggesting something that runs through a part of a body (usually a muscle) like a piercing needle <ran until he got a stitch in the side>

All of these words except the last designate also mental suffering. Pain commonly suggests sorrow (as for something lost or unattainable) <my craving to hear from her was at times a gnawing pain—Kenneth Roberts> Ache usually implies suffering that must be endured or longed not likely to be appeased <there was an ache in his heart like the farewell to a dear woman—Steinbeck> <know the ache of loneliness> Pang suggests a sudden sharp access of a painful emotion <sharp pangs of envy> <pangs of remorse> <the next time I ran away just the same, and suffered the most ghastly pangs of fear—John Reed> <statements . . . made unhesitatingly, with no visible pangs of conscience—Sanders> Throe presupposes the existence of mental agony and designates one of the recurrent spasms that characterize the state of mind <fierce maternal passion . . . was now bowing her still lower, in the throes of a bitter renunciation—Wharton> Twinge suggests less poignancy than pang but often connotes compunction <twinges of conscience> <too painfully preoccupied to feel a twinge of self-reproach at this undeserved praise—George Eliot> <shot down his victims without shadow of provocation and who probably never felt a twinge of remorse—Ghent>

Ana agony, *distress, suffering, passion: anguish, *sorrow, grief, heartbreak

2 in plural form pains *effort, exertion, trouble

Ana labor, toil, travail, *work: industriousness or industry, diligence, sedulousness, assiduousness (see corresponding adjectives at busy)

pair n *couple, brace, yoke

palatable, appetizing, savory, spid, tasty, toothsome, flavorsome, relishing mean agreeable or pleasant to the taste. Palatable is not emphatic in its implication of pleasantness; therefore it seldom suggests deliciousness and often, on the other hand, implies little more than acceptability <provide palatable meals for her family> <the root, when properly cooked, was converted into a palatable and nutritious food—Prescott> The term is used frequently of things which are mentally digested <the rebuke was not palatable> <I'm afraid that my remarks have not been very palatable, but I can assure you that they were sincerely meant—Mackenzie> Appetizing implies a whetting of the appetite; it is applicable to the smell and appearance as well as to the taste of food <the appetizing odor of a roasting turkey>  In its extended use the word is applicable to things that stimulate a desire for more or an eagerness to go further (an appetizing introduction to a subject) (the journalist with a nose for appetizing front-page tidbits—Zirato) Savory, also, is applied to foods that have an agreeable odor as well as taste, but it conveys definite implications of piquancy; it is therefore applied to highly seasoned dishes as contrasted with sweet or bland dishes (a bland meat sometimes needs a savory sauce) (a savory stuffing for the turkey) In extended use savory may suggest a pleasantly stimulating and agreeable quality (engaging books . . . neither autobiography, nor fiction, nor essays, but a savory mixture of all three—N. Y. Times) but more often than not it is used in negative construction or with ironic implications (the conquest of the West . . . is not among the more savory chapters in American history—Agnew) Sapid is an uncommon and chiefly technical term that primarily applies to a substance able to stimulate taste receptors (assuming that the sapid substance . . . initiates the electrical depolarization of the taste cell—Beidler) In general use it may imply a marked taste or flavor (a sapid dish) or in extended use one that is distinctly keen or exhilarating (a sapid and antiseptic quality of bright intelligence—Ellis) Tasty implies a marked taste, but it suggests in addition an appetizing quality (a tasty morsel) (a tasty cheese) (many trees, like the cajú, which produce tasty fruits—P. E. James) (tasty ingredients for a good, breezy book—Barrett) Toothsome heightens the implication of agreeableness in palatable and may add the suggestion of tenderness or of daintiness (a toothsome dessert) (one of the most toothsome chicken dinners you'll ever munch—Gelston Hardy) Flavorsome usually suggests richness rather than sharpness of taste, and often implies fragrance as well as savor (flavorsome apricots) (incredibly flavorsome wild mushrooms from the forests—Davenport) Relishing stresses gusto in enjoyment (he found all this praise extremely relishing) (find ways in which the soldier's food could be made more relishing—Current Biog.)

Ana *delightful, delicious, delectable, luscious: piquant, *pungent, spicy

Ant unpalatable: distasteful palate *taste, relish, gusto, zest pale adj 1 Pale, pallid, ashen, ashy, wan, livid mean devoid of natural or healthy color as applied to a complexion or deficient in vividness or intensity of hue as applied to a specific color. Pale is the least rich of these words in implications and connotations; it merely implies relative nearness to white and deficiency in depth and brilliance of coloring (his face grew pale) (the sea is a pale green in this light) Pallid adds to pale the suggestions of deprivation, rather than absence, of color and of an abnormal condition (as weakness or faintness, or intense weariness); thus, one may be naturally pale but a person made pale by illness would usually be called pallid (his pallid face reveals the strain he has been under) (trembling limbs and pallid lips—Shelley) (its little smoke, in pallid moonshine, died—Keats) Ashen and ashy definitely suggest not only the pale gray color of ashes but often, also, extreme pallor (as of the skin in death). A thing described as ashen or ashy may therefore be said to be deadly or ghastly pale (the skies they were ashen and sober—Poe) (the ashen hue of age—Scott) (oft have I seen a timely-parted ghost, of ashy semblance—Shak.) (Mr. Cruncher, who was all in a tremble . . . with an ashy and solemn visage—Dickens) Wan suggests the blanching associated with an unhealthy condition or waning vitality; it usually therefore denotes a sickly paleness (the blasted stars looked wan—Milton) (her poor wan face with its wistful, pitiful little smile—Hewlett) Livid basically means leaden-hued; it is chiefly used of things, especially of human faces that under the influence of something that distorts them have lost their normal coloring and have assumed a dull grayish tinge (he grew livid with rage) (in the greenish glass her own face looked far off like the livid face of a drowned corpse at the bottom of a pool—Conrad) The word is also applied to various dull or dun colors when the hue is barely apparent (the livid red of the sun seen through a heavy fog) (the livid yellow of a stormy sky) (his trembling lips are livid blue—Scott)

Ana *ghastly, macabre: cadaverous, *haggard, worn

2 Pale, anemic, bloodless are comparable in their extended senses when they are applied to things and mean weak and thin in substance or in vital qualities, as though drained of blood. Pale stresses deficiency in qualities necessary to give a thing its true color or character. Sometimes it connotes lack of vigor, force, or energy (the French . . . shake in their fear and with pale policy seek to divert the English purposes—Shak.) (does pale little studies that are as innocuous as his earlier work was adventurous—Coates) but more often it implies inadequacy or failure to measure up to the requirements of a type or standard (her whole existence was too pale, too inadequate in some way—too unvital—Farrell) Anemic in its extended applications to things implies deficiency in the elements that make for vigor or richness, especially intellectual or spiritual vigor or richness (the African Negro has . . . joy of life, love of color, keen senses, beautiful voice, and ear for music—contributions that . . . might one day prove a tonic to an anemic and artless America—Zangwill) (not even a respectable vocabulary of indecency to draw upon in support of our anemic cussing—Whicher) Bloodless stresses the absence of qualities necessary to life or lifelikeness (as vitality, warmth, color, and human emotion) (now if I make this sound bloodless, I am exaggerating a bit—even an old habit is livened once in a while with color—Mailer) (books are good enough in their own way, but they are a mighty bloodless substitute for life—Stevenson)

Ana *insipid, wishy-washy, inane, jejune: *ineffective, ineffectual pall cloy, surfeit, *sate, sate, glut, gorge palliate, extenuate, gloze, gloss, whitewash, whiten are comparable when they mean to give a speciously fine appearance to what is base, evil, or erroneous. Palliate may stress the concealing or cloaking or the condoning of the enormity of a crime or offense (retracing thus his frolics ('tis a name that palliates deeds of folly and of shame)—Cowper) (we have not endeavored to conceal or even palliate his errors—Lockhart) (we cannot . . . explain away this deliberate act as due to the garrulity of age, or accept the other excuses with which his admirers have sought to palliate it—L. P. Smith) The word also is used especially in reference to other than moral evils in the sense of to disguise the true nature or extent of so as to soften the bad effects (minds which are keener and wills which are stronger than the average do not rest in "quiet desperation" palliated by illusion—Krutch) (resort to coercive force and suppression of civil liberties are readily palliated . . . when the cry is raised that "law and order" are threatened—Dewey) Extenuate (see also THIN) implies the aim to lessen (as by excuses or explanations) the seriousness or magnitude of some crime, offense, or guilt (when you shall these unlucky deeds relate, speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, nor set down aught in malice—Shak.) (he did not extenuate, he rather emphasized, the criminality of Catiline and his confederates—Froude) But the term is often used in the sense of to make excuses for (had never forgiven Cromwell the execution of the martyr Charles; and to extenuate the conduct of the great Roundhead captain, was to make Mrs. Doria despise and detest you—Meredith) <he permits himself . . . costly Havana cigars and an electric typewriter. There are circumstances that extenuate both indulgences—Kahn) Gloze and gloss often followed by over, imply an aim to veil by more or less light dissembling (as by specious comments or by flattering talk) the true harshness, unpleasantness, or disagreeableness of something; often, the words suggest a representation of what is actually disagreeable as more or less agreeable or as not distinctly unpleasant; gloze, however, is usually more derogatory than gloss which is a relatively neutral word <the explorer has succeeded in glossing over the hardships he endured> <not wish to gloss over the fragmentary state of our present knowledge—Eddington> <with the tongue of flattery glozing deeds which God and Truth condemn—Whittier> <we glozed our fraud by conducting their necessary war purely and cheaply—T. E. Lawrence> <believed in youth and did not gloze the unpleasant consequences of age—MacNeice> Whitewash, and less often whiten, imply an attempt to cover up (as a crime, a defect or fault, or a person's guilt) by some such means as a superficial investigation, or a perfunctory trial, or a special report that leads to a seeming acquittal or exoneration or that gives the person or persons accused an appearance of innocence or blamelessness  <by selecting the evidence any society may be relatively blackened, and any other society relatively whitened—Spencer> <his object in attempting to whitewash the evildoers was not so clear—Crofts>

Ana mitigate, alleviate, lighten (see RELIEVE): condone, *excuse: *moderate, qualify, temper: cloak, mask, *disguise, dissemble, camouflage

pallid *pale, ashen, ashy, wan, livid palpable 1 *perceptible, sensible, tangible, appreciable, ponderable

Ana *apparent, ostensible, seeming: believable, credible, colorable, *plausible

Ant insensible

2 plain, clear, *evident, apparent, manifest, patent, obvious, distinct

Ana *sure, certain, positive: *noticeable, remarkable, striking, arresting

Ant impalpable —Con *doubtful, dubious, questionable, problematic palpate vb *touch, feel, handle, paw palpate see under palpate at TOUCH vb

palpitate beat, throb, *pulsate, pulse

Ana vibrate, oscillate, fluctuate, *swing, sway palpitation beat, throb, pulsation, pulse (see under PULSATE vb)

Ana vibration, oscillation, fluctuation, swinging, swaying (see corresponding verbs at SWING)

palter *lie, prevaricate, equivocate, fib

Ana evade, elude, *escape: *trifle, dally paltry trifling, trivial, *petty, puny, measly, picayunish, picayune

Ana *contemptible, despicable, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby: abject, ignoble, *mean: *base, low, vile pamper *indulge, humor, spoil, baby, mollycoddle Ana gratify, tickle, regale, *please: fondle, pet, cosset, *caress, dandle

Ant chasten

pandect *compendium, syllabus, digest, survey, sketch, précis, aperçu pandemonium uproar, *din, hullabaloo, babel, hubbub, clamor, racket pander *cater, purvey

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana truckle, toady, *fawn, cringe: gratify, tickle, regale, *please panegyric tribute, eulogy, *encomium, citation

Ana commendation, applauding or applause, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMENT): acclaiming or acclaim, laudation, praising or praise, extolling or extollation (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE)

pang *pain, ache, throe, twinge, stitch

Ana agony, *distress, suffering: anguish, *sorrow, grief, heartache, heartbreak: torturing or torture, tormenting or torment (see AFFLICT) panic terror, horror, trepidation, consternation, dismay, alarm, fright, dread, *fear

Ana agitation, upsetting or upset, perturbation, disquieting or disquiet, discomposing or discomposure (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

Con *confidence, assurance, self-possession, aplomb: *equanimity, composure, sangfroid pant aspire, *aim

Ana thirst, hunger, *long, yearn, pine: crave, covet, *desire, wish, want pap *food, alimant, pabulum, nutriment, nourishment, sustenance paper n 1 Paper, instrument, document all mean a writing (often typed, sometimes printed) that is of value to its owner or to others who come after him as a source of information or proof of a right, contention, or claim. Paper is the most general term, applicable to such writing (as a letter, deed, certificate, or writ) filed away for future use or reference <state papers>  <it was not until I was forty that my father put into my hands a few old family papers which furnished clues to an investigation of my more remote ancestry—Ellis> Instrument is a legal term applicable to a paper (as a deed, a writ, a will, or a contract) that is made and executed according to the terms of the law, as concrete evidence of some legally defined action (as a transfer of property, the enforcement of a judgment, one's decisions as to who shall inherit one's property, or the terms of an agreement) <set up a confederacy based upon a written instrument—Nevins> Document (see also DOCUMENT 1) applies to a legal instrument or to an original or authentic copy of a letter, a record, or other paper that may be used as a source of information, evidence, or proof <her letters I sent back except those of the quarreling correspondence, and those, being documents, are placed in the hands of a third person—Byron> <the Declaration of Independence stands out as one of the vital documents of history—Canfield & Wilder> 2 article, *essay, theme, composition par n norm, *average, mean, median par adj mean, median, average (see under AVERAGE n) parable *allegory, myth, fable parade n 1 *display, array, pomp

Ana showiness, ostentatiousness or ostentation, pretentiousness (see corresponding adjectives at SHOWY)

2 *procession, cavalcade, cortege, motorcade parade vb flaunt, expose, display, exhibit, *show

Ana *reveal, disclose, divulge: *declare, proclaim, publish, advertise: vaunt, *boast, brag, gasconade

Con cloak, mask, *disguise, dissemble, camouflage paradox, antinomy, anomaly are comparable terms that involve the idea of expressing or revealing an inner or inherent contradiction and are therefore not always clearly distinguished. A paradox is primarily a statement or proposition which contains a contradiction yet which, absurd as it seems to be, may still be true and in accordance with the facts and common sense <the perfectly bred man is born, not bred, if the paradox may be permitted—Brownell) By extension paradox may apply to something which is known to exist, yet which when described or put in words seems incredible because it involves a logical contradiction (the old will perennially become new at the hand of genius. That is the paradox of art—Lowes) (the colonel . . . is a paradox—a well-known secret agent—Kobler) An antinomy, in philosophical use, is a contradiction between two laws, principles, or conclusions, both of which are held on good grounds or are correctly inferred from the same facts or premises; thus, the conclusions that every material thing can be explained by mechanical causes and that some material things cannot be explained unless a final cause is postulated, present an antinomy, but in the opinion of Kant both can be accepted as rules regulative of experience. In more general use the term is often applied to one thing that contradicts another thing and is irreconcilable with it (form and expression . . . should stand toward one another not as clashing antinomies but as reconciled opposites—Babbitt) or it may apply to a conflict (as of principles, beliefs, forces, tendencies, or aspirations) that is irresolvable in the light of present knowledge (a mind that is not naturally analytical, and conscious of the antinomies of existence—Amer. Speech) (every dogma is but one side of an inevitable antinomy—Cushing) (the antinomy between contented security and adventure for gain, between equalitarian justice and the justice of rewards—an antinomy whose resolution calls for a reasonable compromise and not a clear-cut choice—Aron) An anomaly is something that is contrary to what it should be. For example, it may be an exception or a contradiction to a rule; it may be a freak, a monster, a sport, or a contradiction to a type; it may be an anachronism or solecism, irreconcilable with its surroundings or conditions; it may be an action, a practice, or a mood, that is in effect a denial of what one believes or teaches (there is no greater anomaly in nature than a bird that cannot fly—Darwin) (the anomaly of a war fought to preserve freedom by a people enslaved by prejudice—Quentin Anderson) (the political world must keep pace with the scientific world. A security league, in an age of flight, is an anomaly—E. B. White) paragon n Paragon, apotheosis, nonpareil, nonesuch are comparable when they mean a person or thing of consummate quality or transcendent excellence in its kind. Paragon distinctively implies supremacy and incomparability (an angel! or, if not, an earthly paragon—Shak.) (Mill's book is a paragon of expository writing—Macy) (neither the violent demagogue his enemies thought, nor the paragon his friends esteemed him—Bonham) Apotheosis basically applies to a raising from an earthly to a divine or ideal status (Wagner believed that Beethoven's Seventh Symphony . . . was an apotheosis of the dance—Ellis) but it may be indistinguishable from paragon in denoting one that is the extreme and usually the highest of its kind (here all is spotless grace, ethereal delicacy . . . the very apotheosis of womanhood—Jameison) (in the Third Reich the nation-state found both its zenith and its nadir, its apotheosis and its Black Mass—Deutscher) Nonpareil and nonesuch, like paragon imply the absence of a rival or equal, but they sometimes impute uniqueness more strongly than excellence (thou art the best o' the cutthroats: yet he's good that did the like for Fleance: if thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil—Shak.) (it was the strapping leader, the nonpareil of newspaperdom—Swanberg) (a nonpareil at her dimly lit specialties, but . . . certainly no Fitzgerald—Hentoff) (the Eiffel Tower, the mighty nonesuch of the Paris exposition—Kobler) (for more than fifty years a political boss, a political nonesuch, and a general nuisance to the forces of political progress—New Yorker)

paragraph, verse, article, clause, plank, count are comparable when they denote one of the several and individually distinct statements of a discourse or instrument, each of which deals with a particular point or item. Paragraph primarily refers to a typographical division, usually indicated by beginning on a new line, and usually by indenting the first word, or by the use of ¶, but it also is applicable to a similar division in writing or typing. In rhetorical use the term usually implies a number of sentences which comprise a unit that coherently develops a topic or point, especially one of the subordinate topics or points of an essay or an argument. In more general use, brief, clear, or pointed statement of a single idea rather than its expansion and adequate exposition is stressed; the term is often used where statements follow in serial or numbered order and are neither developed individually nor logically related to each other (see paragraph 4 of the accompanying instructions) (the witty paragraphs of a popular columnist) Verse (see also VERSE 1) is applied specifically to one of the numbered paragraphs of the Bible, especially as printed in the Authorized and Douay versions (Isaiah, chapter v, verses 23-25) Article need not imply paragraph arrangement of each point or item, but it does imply that each is a distinct yet essential member of a whole. In its more common use it is applied to a statement that stands out distinctly, as, for example, one of the stipulations in a contract, or one of the doctrines in a creed, or one of the provisos of a statute; thus, the Thirty-nine Articles are the doctrines to which a clergyman of the Anglican Communion subscribes before being admitted to holy orders; the articles of the Apostles' Creed are not paragraphs or sentences, but brief phrases naming each of the dogmas professed by those Christians who hold this creed; the articles of an indenture, an agreement by which an apprentice is bound to a master, are the specific terms or conditions of that agreement. However, in some instruments, such as the Constitution of the United States of America, article designates one of the larger and more inclusive divisions, comprising many articles in the narrower sense. Therefore one usually speaks of a specific rule, regulation, specification, stipulation of that document, or of other constitutions, as a clause. Clause is also used more often than article in reference to a will, a deed, and a legislative bill, and with little difference in frequency in reference to such instruments as contracts and statutes (he added two clauses to his will before signing it) (strike out clause 5 of the agreement) Plank is applied to an article in a program as being something that those who accept that program implicitly agree to carry out if possible. It is chiefly used in designating one of the specific proposals or pledges in the platform of a political party (the speaker argued for a platform with planks that were both specific and feasible) Count is the legal designation for a particular allegation or charge in a declaration or indictment (try the indicted man on two counts)

parallel adj *like, alike, similar, analogous, comparable, akin, uniform, identical

Ana *same, identical, equal, equivalent: corresponding, correlative (see RECIPROCAL) parallel n 1 *comparison, contrast, antithesis, collation

Ana *likeness, similarity, resemblance, similitude

Con *dissimilarity, unlikeness, difference, divergence, divergency

2 Parallel, counterpart, analogue, correlate are comparable when they denote a person or thing that corresponds in essentials to another person or thing, or closely resembles the latter in the points under consideration. Parallel is especially appropriate when the two things compared are so like each other that their lack of divergence suggests two parallel lines; the term is often used in negative expressions <we shall seek in vain a parallel for this situation> <it is hard to find a parallel for this mode of procedure> <none but thyself can be thy parallel—Pope> Sometimes, especially when actual comparison is implied, the word suggests that the two things follow a similar course, order, or line of development <cultural parallels found in the two hemispheres—R. W. Murray> <many interesting parallels are drawn with the historical plays of Shakespeare—Times Lit. Sup.> Counterpart often suggests a complementary and sometimes an obverse relationship <the two halves of a globe are counterparts of each other> <not an elaboration of Romanticism, but rather a counterpart to it, a second flood of the same tide—Edmund Wilson> More commonly, however, the word implies a duplication, especially in another sphere, or age, or language <synthetic chemistry has produced many a drug or perfume that has no counterpart in nature> <he saw that there was no mood of the mind that had not its counterpart in the sensuous life—Wilde> <French big businessmen and reactionary politicians have the support of their counterparts in the U.S.—Gorrell> Analogue usually implies a more remote likeness than the preceding words and suggests comparison with something familiar and tangible for the sake of clarifying an explanation or enforcing an argument. Like counterpart, it often involves reference to something in another sphere, or order, or genus <the gill in fishes is an analogue of the lung in quadrupeds> <the deepest and simplest reports of man's trouble have always been told in animal analogues—Morley> <civilization is . . . the process by which primitive packs are transformed into an analogue, crude and mechanical, of the social insects' organic communities—Huxley> Correlate retains its primary implication of correspondence, but does not retain that of a complementary relationship. A thing which is a correlate of another is what corresponds to it from another point of view or in a different order of viewing <the scientist asks what is the physical correlate of the rainbow> <words are the mental correlates of direct experience—Weaver> <fear persisted, and with it persisted an animosity toward the sister. Undoubtedly this is the psychological correlate of the incest taboo—Dollard>

paralyze *daze, stun, bemuse, stupefy, benumb, petrify Ana *dismay, daunt, appall, horrify; disable, cripple, *weaken, enfeeble; astound, flabbergast (see SURPRISE); dumbfound, confound, nonplus (see PUZZLE)

paramount preponderant, preponderating, predominant, *dominant, sovereign

Ana *supreme, surpassing, preeminent, superlative: capital, foremost, principal, main, leading, *chief parapet rampart, breastwork, *bulwark, bastion paraphernalia apparatus, *equipment, machinery, outfit, tackle, gear, matériel paraphrase n metaphor, version, *translation parasite, sycophant, favorite, toady, lickspittle, bootlicker, hanger-on, leech, sponge, sponger all signify a person who is supported or sustained or seeks support or sustenance, usually physical but sometimes social or intellectual, from another without right or justification. Parasite applies primarily to a person who as a matter of policy is supported more or less by another and gives nothing in return, but it is often extended to anyone who clings to a person of wealth, power, or influence in order to derive personal advantage or who is useless and unnecessary to society <the ones who evade the earth and live upon the others in some way they have devised. They are the parasites, and they are the despised—Buck>  <as our present society disintegrates, this démodé figure will become clearer; the Bohemian, the outsider, the parasite, the rat—one of those figures which have at present no function either in a warring or peaceful world—Forster> <the poorer citizens were little more than parasites, fed with free state bread, amused by free state shows—Buchan> Sycophant applies to one who clings to a person of wealth, power, or influence and wins or tries to win his favor by fawning, flattery, or adulation  <sycophants who kept him from wholesome contact with reality, who played upon his overweening conceit and confirmed him in his persecutorial manias—Overstreet> Favorite applies to a close associate or intimate of a king or noble who is unduly favored by him, especially with power; it may suggest parasitism or sycophancy on the part of the one favored and often connotes the exerting of undue or improper influence <huge grants of land to court favorites—W. C. Ford> <reduced to the ranks every officer who had a good record and appointed scoundrelly favorites of his own in their places—Graves> <Pharaoh, his family and his favorites—J. E. M. White> Toady, often interchangeable with sycophant, stresses more the servility and snobbery of the social climber <he preens himself in the velvet coat, he spies out the land and sees that the Dowager is "the one"; he becomes the perfect toady—Stevie Smith> <this induced a sharp distaste for the flagrant political plunder, the obscene scramble for the loaves and fishes by the spoilsmen and their toadies—Sidney Warren> Lickspittle and bootlicker are interchangeable in common speech with sycophant and toady, implying, however, even stronger contemptibility <characterized those who disagreed as lickspittles and toadies of official whiggery—Asahel Bush>  <its principal characters were stupid and bemused commanders, or vicious bootlickers tainted with homosexuality—Sutton> Hanger-on applies to someone who is regarded, usually contemptuously, as adhering to or depending unduly on another especially for favors <there were the hangers-on who might be called domestics by inheritance—Ybarra>  <those rather hangers-on than friends, whom he treated with the cynical contempt that they deserved—Graves> Leech stresses the persistence of clinging to or bleeding another for one's own advantage <hatred for the freeloader or deadbeat. Yet, as a student of humanity, he tolerated these leeches—Maule & Cane> <leeches . . . hateful parasites feeding upon the blood of artists!—Robertson Davies> Sponge and sponger stress a parasitic laziness, dependence, and indifference to the discomforts caused and usually a certain pettiness and constant regard for opportunities to cadge <all social sponges; all satellites of the court; all beggars of the marketplace—Drummond>

Ana fawner, cringer, truckler (see corresponding verbs at FAWN)

parboil *boil, seethe, simmer, stew parcel n 1 *part, portion, piece, detail, member, division, section, segment, sector, fraction, fragment

2 *bundle, bunch, pack, package, packet, bale

3 *group, cluster, bunch, lot

Ana collection, assemblage (see under GATHER); *aggregate, aggregation, conglomerate, conglomeration parcel vb *apportion, portion, ration, prorate

Ana *allot, assign, allocate, apportion: *grant, accord, award parch *dry, desiccate, dehydrate, bake

Ana sear, scorch, char, *burn: shrivel, wizen, *wither pardon n Pardon, amnesty, absolution in their legal and ecclesiastical senses mean a remission of penalty or punishment. Pardon, which is the comprehensive term, is often ambiguous; it denotes a release not from guilt but from the penalty imposed for a transgression of secular or spiritual law. Thus in civil and military affairs a pardon usually implies a release from prison, or from the payment of a fine, or from a sentence of death, and permission to go scot free, though not acquitted, but the term may suggest as a cause either executive clemency or the undoing of a judicial wrong. When a pardon is extended to an entire class (as an insurgent group) or to an entire community, it is called an amnesty (a general amnesty and liberty of conscience were promised to parliament by Charles II in the Declaration of Breda (1660)) Amnesty often suggests not only that past offenses will go unpunished, but that they will be forgotten. When, in ecclesiastical use and especially in the use of the Roman Catholic Church, a pardon is extended for sins confessed and atoned for according to the laws of the Church, it is specifically called absolution when it implies that the eternal punishment for sin has been remitted in the sacrament of penance.

pardon vb forgive, remit, *excuse, condone

Ana *free, release, liberate: acquit, absolve, *exculpate

Ant punish —Con *penalize, fine, amerce: discipline, correct, chasten, castigate, chastise (see PUNISH) pardonable *venial

pare peel, *skin, decorticate, flay pariah *outcast, castaway, derelict, reprobate, untouchable parley treat, negotiate, *confer, commune, consult, advise Ana *discuss, debate, dispute, argue, agitate: converse, talk, *speak parochial *insular, provincial, local, small-town

Ana circumscribed, restricted, limited, confined (see LIMIT vb): narrow, narrow-minded, *illiberal, intolerant, hidebound, bigoted

Ant catholic —Con *universal, cosmopolitan, cosmic parody n travesty, *caricature, burlesque

Ana skit, squib, lampoon, *libel parody vb travesty, caricature, burlesque (see under CARICATURE n) paroxysm spasm, convulsion, *fit, attack, access, accession parry *dodge, shirk, sidestep, duck, fence, malinge

Ana ward, avert, *prevent, preclude: forestall, anticipate (see PREVENT): elude, evade, avoid, shun (see ESCAPE)

parsimonious niggardly, penurious, *stingy, close, close-fisted, tight, tightfisted, miserly, cheeseparating, penny-pinching

Ana avaricious, *covetous, grasping, greedy: *sparing, frugal: *mean, ignoble, sordid, abject

Ant prodigal —Con *profuse, lavish: *liberal, munificent, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, generous part n Part, portion, piece, detail, member, division, section, segment, sector, fraction, fragment, parcel are comparable when they mean something which is less than the whole but which actually is or is considered as if apart from the rest of the whole. Part is the most comprehensive of these terms; it may be used in place of any of the succeeding words in this group or even in place of such words as element, component, or constituent (see ELEMENT) (all are but parts of one stupendous whole—Pope) (he spent part of his life in China) (a large part of the estate went to the elder son) (the cup was broken into three parts) (the better part of valor is discretion—Shak.) (its basic assumption is that the social whole has greater worth and significance than its individual parts—Huxley) Portion, although it denotes a part of a whole, does not always presuppose a compact or integral whole; it may suggest a whole that comprises all of an existing or a possible stock or store without any connotation of its assemblage (he is a portion of the loveliness which once he made more lovely—Shelley) (she dreaded . . . taking from the small sum of peace they had in the world, adding to the portion of their unhappiness—Malamud) But portion (see also FATE) is preferred to part when there is the intent to imply determination of amount or quantity or assignment or allotment, especially of a share (divide a pie into six equal portions) (a portion of each day was given to this artistic labor—Hudson) (when the plant was set, a portion of water, nicely calculated as to quantity, ran down a pipe and was deposited at the plant roots—Anderson) Piece applies to a separate or detached part or portion of a whole; thus, a piece of bread is a part of a larger whole such as a loaf; a piece of cloth may be a length cut from a bolt, a smaller length left after the larger part of that piece has been used, or a bit that serves as a swatch or sample (break a stick of candy into pieces) (ask for a small piece of the cake) But piece so stresses the implication of independence that the term may come close to item and then is often applied to a thing that is relatively complete in itself, and has reference to a whole only as it presupposes a mass from which it was taken, a collection of similar or related things, especially as produced by one person, one machine, or one factory (the red-hot piece of iron upon the blacksmith's anvil) (each piece of furniture has been freshly polished) (a piece of poetry) (she had learned . . . that there really was more than one man in the world—the piece of knowledge that more than anything else divides women from girls—Wouk) Detail (see also ITEM) applies to a part chiefly when the presupposed whole is a plan or design, or represents the working out of a plan or design; in this sense the term is used largely in the arts of painting, sculpture, and architecture, and often denotes a small but important part or feature (reproduce a detail of a painting) (the sculptor's students were set to work, each modeling a detail of the Venus de Milo) (this blueprint shows the details of the façade) (she had her plan clearly in her head, with every detail as distinct as though the scheme had already been carried through—Gibbons) Member applies to a part that constitutes one of the units of which a body (as a human or animal body, a social or legislative body, or a constructed or manufactured body) is comprised; the term, though it usually implies close association with the body under consideration, also usually implies separability of the unit in thought or in fact (the legs, arms, and head are often specifically regarded as members of the human body) (the saddle seat is a distinctive member of a Windsor chair) (the flying buttress is an important architectural member of most of the great medieval Gothic cathedrals) (members of Congress) (the club has 500 members) (a lolling, impudent tongue—a truly unruly member—Banfield) (society is a joint-stock company, in which the members agree, for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater—Emerson) Division and section apply to a distinct, often a detached, part formed by or as if by cutting or dividing. The terms are often used interchangeably, but division is usually applied to larger parts than is section; thus, one would refer to the divisions of modern languages and of political sciences of a college but to the several sections into which a large class of students taking a course is divided (there are twenty sections of freshman English) Except in technical use, the terms carry no explicit suggestions as to size or extent; division, however, is more often used abstractly than section, which tends to be applied to a conspicuously distinct part (as of a writing, a people, a country, a territory, or a city) (it is improper to speak of these different parts of the chemical industry as divisions, for the solidarity of the whole does not permit splitting it—Morrison) (the only important grape-growing section of Pennsylvania—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) (the sports section of the newspaper) (entertained by all sections of the local community—Moir) Segment is often preferred to section for a part cut off by natural lines of cleavage or necessitated by the nature of the thing's construction or design (a segment of an orange) (a segment of a compound leaf) (invited to address a segment of the war college—Michener) (essential raw materials for a broad segment of American industry—Crops in Peace and War) In mathematical use segment is distinguished from sector in that segment refers to any part of a plane or solid figure cut off from the whole by a line or plane (a segment of a cylinder) (a segment of a circle is bounded by an arc and a chord) while sector refers to any part of a circle bounded by an arc and two radii (divide a circle into six sectors) In more general use sector applies to a section that roughly corresponds to a mathematical sector; thus, a sector assigned to a commander of a division in war has arbitrary bounds on sides and rear but a front that is as extensive as the range of its guns (consider the . . . problem as a whole and not in sectors—Vandenberg) Fraction and fragment both apply to a part that is disconnected from a whole, especially by breaking; but fraction, probably by its confusion with the arithmetical sense of that word, often suggests a negligible part (only a small fraction of mankind is capable of enthusiasm for language, for its own sake—Inge) (some little fraction . . . of your enjoyment of tragedy—Montague) and fragment applies to a random bit and especially to one of the pieces left after most of the whole has been eaten, used, worn away, or lost (they took up of the fragments . . . twelve baskets full—Mt 14:20) (only a fragment of the dramatic literature that once existed—Altick) (if the novel proves to be a novel and not a collage of extraordinary fragments—Mailer) Parcel (see also BUNDLE) is used chiefly in law with reference to land and in such idiomatic phrases as part and parcel; in all its uses it carries an underlying notion of a part having a firm and unbreakable connection with the whole to which it belongs (and I will die a hundred thousand deaths ere break the smallest parcel of this vow—Shak.) (a land parcel, insofar as it is a described area on the face of the earth, cannot be destroyed—Babcock)

Ant whole

part vb divide, *separate, sever, sunder, divorce

Ana *detach, disengage: apportion, *allot, allocate, assign: *tear, rend, cleave

Ant cleave (see STICK) —Con cling, *stick, adhere: *unite, combine, conjoin partake *share, participate

Ana *separate, part, divide: take, *receive, accept: *have, hold, own, possess, enjoy: *get, obtain, procure, acquire partiality prepossession, prejudice, bias, *predilection Ana approving or approval, endorsing or endorsement (see corresponding verbs at APPROVE)

Ant impartiality participate *share, partake

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana *separate, divide, part: take, *receive, accept: *have, hold, own, possess, enjoy particle 1 Particle, bit, mite, smidgen, whit, atom, iota, jot, tittle all mean a very small or insignificant piece or part. Particle is used in reference not only to substances which are actually divisible but to such things as a quality, a state, or a condition which are only theoretically so because they are intangible or ideal; usually it implies an amount within the range of visual or mental perception (a particle of matter) (he hasn't a particle of sense) (her face was . . . beaded with small particles of rain—Wolfe) (there is not a particle of truth in any of these statements—Ashley Montagu) Bit usually suggests a relatively minute or the least feasible amount, extent, or degree (own a bit of land) (he doesn't like it a bit) (he is a bit of a coward) (distinction on the basis of sex is the only bit of gender we have left—Laird) (little trifling useless bits of deceit—Black) (if one wished to indulge in a bit of sentimentality, one could say that the truths of science become obsolete . . . but that the truth of the arts is everlasting—Boas) Mite may stress either diminutiveness in size or minuteness in amount (a mite of a boy) (a mite of a diamond) (he hasn't a mite of suspicion) (only a mite of what it could have taught was seen and learned—Fitzsimmons) Smidgen may replace bit or mite (yearning . . . for a smidgen of Broadway glamour—New Yorker) but sometimes and especially in negative constructions it may go even farther in stressing minuteness or scarcity (ate squirrel and rabbit, broiled over hot coals, for there was not a smidgen of grease left—Atlantic) Whit is used chiefly in negative phrases in the sense of the least conceivable amount (it matters not a whit) (he hasn't a whit of knowledge of the subject) (the civilized man is not a whit different from the savage in this respect—Henry Miller) Atom (see also PARTICLE 2) implies an amount or a size beyond the possibility of further diminution (not an atom of dust escaped her scrutiny) (it hasn't an atom of seriousness about it—a mere footnote to history—Laski) Iota and jot both imply a minuteness suggestive of the character iota [ɪ], the smallest letter of the Greek alphabet, while tittle, used chiefly in the phrase jot or tittle, implies a minuteness suggestive of a small diacritical mark such as the dot over an i; the three are used interchangeably to mean the smallest or most minute detail or amount (he hasn't added a jot, an iota, or a tittle to our knowledge of the subject) Iota, however, sometimes denotes an insignificant amount, extent, or degree (of statesmanship he had not an iota—S. H. Adams) (he who adds a jot to such knowledge creates new mind—Shaw) (he meant not to lose one tittle of enjoyment—Churchill)

2 Particle, corpuscle, atom, molecule in technical physical or chemical use can mean a submicroscopic division of matter. Particle, the oldest and most general of these terms, is applied especially to any of certain minute entities which have more specific designations such as ion, molecule, atom, electron, proton, and alpha particle. Particle is often used to emphasize the idea of indivisibility, commonly suggesting the entities (as protons, neutrons, and electrons) of which all matter is believed to be composed. Corpuscle may be interchangeable with particle (they [alpha particles] are corpuscles endowed with charge, with mass, and with velocity—Darrow) but more often it is specifically equivalent to elementary particle and may be applied to energy quanta (as photons or phonons) when these are considered as particulate entities (let us assume that all lighted bodies emit particles of light, or corpuscles, which, falling on our eyes, create the sensation of light—Einstein & Infeld) According to the common modern concept, an atom is the smallest particle of an element that can exist either alone or in combination with smaller particles of the same or of a different element (an atom of hydrogen) Molecule denotes the smallest particle of an element or of a chemical combination (as a compound) that retains chemical identity with the substance in mass. Molecules are usually composed of two or more atoms, either of the same or of different elements (a molecule of water is composed of two atoms of hydrogen and one atom of oxygen)

parti-colored *variegated, motley, checkered, checked, pied, piebald, skewbald, dappled, freaked particular adj 1 *single, sole, separate, unique, lone, solitary

Ant general

2 individual, *special, specific, especial

Ant general, universal

3 particularized, detailed, itemized, *circumstantial, minute

Ana scrupulous, meticulous, *careful, punctilious

4 fussy, squeamish, *nice, dainty, fastidious, finicky, finicking, finical, persnickety, pernickety

Ana exacting, demanding, requiring (see DEMAND): strict, *rigid, rigorous particular n *item, detail

Ant universal: whole: aggregate particularized particular, detailed, itemized, *circumstantial, minute

Ana accurate, precise, exact, *correct

Ant generalized partisan *follower, adherent, disciple, sectary, henchman, satellite

Ana supporter, upholder, backer, champion (see corresponding verbs at SUPPORT): helper, aider or aid, assistant (see corresponding verbs at HELP) partner, copartner, colleague, ally, confederate all denote an associate but they differ markedly in connotation and are not freely interchangeable. Partner implies especially an associate in a business (partnership) or one of two associates (as in some games, in a dance, or in marriage) (in mind and character Mrs. Adams was a worthy partner throughout his career—W. C. Ford) Since partner alone implies association, the addition of co-, with its implication of association, in copartner sometimes adds little or nothing to partner; thus, one may refer equally to partners or copartners in crime. Copartner, however, can distinctively imply fellow partner (the authority of a partner to bind his copartners—Encyc. Brit.) or equality of share (a copartner in that sovereignty of the people—Spence) Colleague applies typically to an associate in office or in professional or academic relations (like their colleagues elsewhere, Illinois' lawmakers lack adequate facilities and staffs—Armbrister) Ally and confederate, though referable to persons, more frequently denote an associated state or government. Ally suggests an often temporary association in a common cause (as the prosecution of a war) or in affairs of policy or statecraft (it is not really the treaty that makes an ally of another nation—Hayes) Confederate (see also CONFEDERATE 2) implies an entering into a confederacy or confederation and usually suggests a closer or more permanent union for strength and solidarity.

Con antagonist, *opponent, adversary

Ant rival party 1 *company, band, troop, troupe

Ana clique, *set, coterie, circle: gathering, collection, assembly, assemblage, congregation (see under GATHER)

2 *combination, combine, bloc, faction, ring pasquinade lampoon, squib, skit, *libel pass vb Pass, pass away, elapse, expire mean to move or come to a termination or end. Pass and pass away imply gradual or gentle movement to another state or condition; they often imply a transition from life to death but they may suggest a transition from any one state or time or season to another (all that lives must die, passing through nature to eternity—Shak.) (when those conditions have passed away and history returns to normal—W. P. Webb) (but yet I know, where'er I go, that there has passed away a glory from the earth—Wordsworth) (the strangeness of his life passed, and he began to feel what this city was—Buck) Elapse suggests a movement that seems like the slipping and gliding away of something that moves silently or without notice; the word applies particularly to a period of time, either in reference only to itself or in reference to something that should have been accomplished within that time (became burdensome to him as time elapsed and political conditions changed—Malone) (all prophecies make sad reading when their term has elapsed—Krutch) (the period for the payment of the debt had now elapsed) Expire basically means to breathe one's last breath and hence to die; but it comprehends the extended senses as well as the ordinary sense of die, and is used in reference to many things that come to an end as if by death (the flame of the candle suddenly expired) (the society expired after a single meeting) (in the expiring, diffused twilight—Conrad) (suddenly their whispers expired—Bennett) It is often used with this underlying notion in reference to a period of time (as stated in a bond, a note, a promise, an agreement, a patent, or a lease) which has come to an end (your note, which was due on June 24, has now expired) (the two years of grace which the bank gave the city will soon expire) (when this copyright expires, it cannot be renewed, unless there is a new edition of the book) (Antony regarded the triumvirate as having expired on the last day of 33 B.C. and did not wish it renewed—Buchan)

Ana depart, leave, quit, *go, withdraw: end, terminate (see CLOSE) pass n passage, *way, route, course, artery pass n *junction, exigency, emergency, contingency, pinch, strait, crisis

Ana situation, condition, *state, posture: plight, *predicament, quandary passage 1 pass, *way, route, course, artery

2 Passage, passageway, corridor, hall, hallway, gallery, arcade, cloister, aisle, ambulatory designate a typically long narrow way connecting parts of a building or affording access to a particular room or section in it. Passage (see also WAY 1) and passageway are the comprehensive terms, usually interchangeable with any of the others. A corridor is a passageway flanked on one or both sides by rooms, apartments, compartments, or offices or leading from one part of a building to another. Hall can be applied to a corridor or to a room that serves as an entrance to a house, but hallway is used only of the former. A gallery is a corridor having a continuous row of windows; it may be a part of the building or form an enclosed veranda. An arcade is an arched and covered passageway, usually between rows of shops but, sometimes, between the front of a row of shops and the street or an open court. A cloister is a similar structure in a monastery or in a building imitating monastic architecture, but it runs along one or more sides of an open court or patio, and is arcaded or colonnaded on the outer side. An aisle is, basically, not a passageway but a part of a church or other building divided from the central part, or nave, by a row of columns or piers. The term is also applied to a passage flanked by rows of seats (as in an auditorium, a theater, a railway car, or a bus). An ambulatory is a passageway through which one may walk; it is specifically applied to the cloister of a monastery, and to the curved passageway between the choir of a church and the chapels of an apse.

3 *strait, sound, channel, narrows passageway *passage, corridor, hall, hallway, gallery, arcade, cloister, aisle, ambulatory pass away *pass, elapse, expire passing n *death, decease, demise passing adj *transient, transitory, ephemeral, momentary, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent, short-lived passion n 1 suffering, agony, dolor, *distress, misery

Ana *trial, tribulation, cross, visitation, affliction

2 *feeling, emotion, affection, sentiment

Ana *inspiration, frenzy: *ecstasy, rapture, transport 3 lust, appetite, *desire, urge

Ana craving, coveting (see DESIRE vb): longing, yearning, hungering or hunger, thirsting or thirst (see LONG vb): pining, aspiring, aiming (see AIM vb)

4 Passion, fervor, ardor, enthusiasm, zeal denote intense, high-wrought emotion. Passion implies an overwhelming or driving emotion; it may be either the most abstract or the most concrete of these terms. It may be used without implication of a specific emotion; thus, a poet without passion is a poet incapable of feeling or of displaying vehement, agitating, or soul-stirring emotion; to be in the grip of passion is to be swayed by violent emotion, but without a hint from the context the nature of the emotion remains unknown (Knipe also knew that passion was powerful, heady stuff, and must be prudently dispensed—Dahl) Passion (see also FEELING, DESIRE) may specifically designate intense erotic love, or often lust, or it may designate violent rage (she flew into a passion) (I am very sorry, good Horatio, that to Laertes I forgot myself . . . but, sure, the bravery of his grief did put me into a towering passion—Shak.) Fervor and ardor both imply the kindling of emotion to a high degree of heat, but fervor more often suggests a steady glow or burning and ardor a restless or leaping flame. Fervor is associated especially with matters (as emotions that express themselves in prayer, contemplation, or devotion) involving persistent warmth; ardor, with those (as emotions that express themselves in eager longings, or zealous efforts) that suggest the violence and sometimes the transitoriness or wavering of flames (the fervor of a nun) (the ardor of a missionary) (exhort with fervor) (dampened his ardor) (all prayed and hunted quail with equal fervor and died . . . at an advanced age—Stryon) (in the prints of Harunobu there is an intense sympathy with youth, with its shyness, its tremulous ardors—Binyon) Enthusiasm often comes very close to ardor, but it may differ in its emphasis on the rational grounds for the emotion, such as thoroughgoing admiration for a person or thing or conviction of the worthiness of a cause or end. Ardor may suggest aspiration without a clearly envisioned goal, but enthusiasm nearly always implies an objective, a cause, or an object of devotion; thus, a teacher may stimulate ardor in a pupil without necessarily directing the latter's emotion into a definite channel, but he stimulates enthusiasm only when he provides the pupil with something concrete to admire, to follow, or to fight for (he showed in this cause not only the enthusiasm of an idealist, but the sagacity of a practical leader—Inge) (they are both weary of politics today, still radicals out of habit, but without enthusiasm and without a cause—Mailer) Zeal retains from earlier senses a suggestion of a goading or driving passion expressed as great ardor or enthusiasm for a cause or end and coupled with energetic and unflagging activity in the service of the cause or in the pursuit of the end (with all the zeal which young and fiery converts feel—Byron) (it took the Franciscan movement about twenty years to lose the passion of its early zeal—Huxley) (worked in almost silent zeal and entire absorption—Buck)

Ana *ecstasy, rapture, transport: *anger, rage, fury, wrath: eroticism, amorousness (see corresponding adjectives at EROTIC)

passionate *impassioned, ardent, fervent, fervid, perfervid

Ana *intense, vehement, fierce, violent: impetuous, headlong, *precipitate, abrupt: excited, quickened, stimulated (see PROVOKE) passive *inactive, inert, idle, supine

Ana *impassive, phlegmatic, stolid, apathetic

Ant active —Con live, operative, dynamic (see ACTIVE) paste n *dough, batter pastoral *rural, rustic, bucolic pasture vb graze, *feed, nourish pat adj *seasonable, timely, well-timed, opportune

Ana apt, happy, felicitous, appropriate, fitting (see FIT adj): pertinent, apposite, apropos, applicable (see RELEVANT) patch vb *mend, repair, rebuild

Ana emend, remedy, redress, amend, *correct: fix, *adjust, regulate patent *evident, manifest, distinct, obvious, apparent, palpable, plain, clear

Ana *noticeable, conspicuous, salient, prominent: *flagrant, glaring, gross, rank

Ant latent —Con *imperceptible, insensible, impalpable: hidden, concealed, secreted (see HIDE vb)

pathetic poignant, affecting, *moving, touching, impressive

Ana *pitiful, piteous, pitiable: plaintive, *melancholy, doleful

Ant comical

pathological *unwholesome, morbid, sickly, diseased

pathos, poignancy, bathos are comparable when they denote the quality found in human situations, or especially in works of art or literature, which moves one to pity or sorrow. Pathos is the common term in critical and literary use; because of its early and long-continued association with aesthetics it often implies the arousing of emotions which give pleasure rather than pain and it suggests the detachment of an observer rather than personal involvement in the perturbing events or situations (pathos is the luxury of grief; and when it ceases to be other than a keen-edged pleasure it ceases to be pathos—Patmore) Often, also, pathos implies not so much an effect produced on the person who sees, hears, or reads, as the art, device, or trick employed (as by a writer, speaker, or artist) in seeking to produce such an effect (he passed without an effort from the most solemn appeal to the gayest rallery, from the keenest sarcasm to the tenderest pathos—J. R. Green) ("My poor children, what had I ever done to you that would drive you to such a step?" The touch of pathos was all that Jane needed to stiffen her—Mary Austin) Poignancy is sometimes preferred by literary and art critics to pathos because it carries no suggestion of artificiality and centers the attention on the genuineness of the thing's emotional quality and of the emotions it arouses; it also specifically implies a power to pierce the mind or heart so that the reader, hearer, or observer feels acutely as well as with aesthetic pleasure the emotion aroused whether it be pity or sorrow or another overwhelming emotion (the most famous of the women-poets of Japan, whose verse expresses with peculiar poignancy a sense of the glory of beauty and the pathos of it—Binyon) (felt the poignancy of the kakapo's plight and had somehow managed to slip in this intimation of pity for a fellow creature—Tilford) Bathos is often applied to a false or pretentious pathos and typically implies a maudlin sentimentality so detached from reality as to arouse disgusted contempt rather than the softer emotions that it is intended to elicit (the poet seeks to render soulfully the blubbing of a happy idiot, and falls into bathos—Ciardi) But bathos may also apply to a silly and artificially lugubrious reaction to something emotionally appealing that is akin to self-pity (the voice of God, even at second-hand, should do more than make us sniff moistly in self-indulgent bathos—Hatch)

patience, long-suffering, longanimity, forbearance, resignation can all mean the power to endure or a capacity for enduring without complaint something which is disagreeable or requires effort. Patience stresses calmness or composure, not only under suffering or under provocation, but in awaiting an outcome that seems unduly or inordinately delayed, or in performing a task that makes severe demands upon one's attention (upon the heat and flame of thy distemper sprinkle cool patience—Shak.) (he gathered . . . that he had been either a man of saintly patience, a masochist or a deaf-mute—Theodore Sturgeon) (bred to patience . . . she had cultivated and perfected a vast cowlike calm—Pynchon) Long-suffering and longanimity imply extraordinary patience under provocation or trial. The former sometimes also suggests undue meekness or submissiveness (it shows much long-suffering in you to put up with him, and keep him in your employ—Hardy) (the long-suffering type on whose bosom repentant tears always eventually fall—Warren) The latter term more often than the former names a virtue, and so is chiefly found in abstract use (in Isaac such simplicity, such longanimity in Jacob—Hooker) (the second window was to be devoted to longanimity, symbolized . . . by the passion-flower and the heavenly crown for long-suffering—Killackey) Forbearance (see also under FORBEARING) adds to long-suffering the implication of restraint in the expression of one's feelings or in exacting punishment or one's due; it therefore often suggests toleration, for the sake of peace, of something that merits censure or castigation (my lord Kew has acted with great forbearance and under the most brutal provocation—Thackeray) Resignation implies a submission to suffering or evil or an acceptance of it because it must be endured or cannot be escaped; it sometimes connotes patience arising from submission to what is believed to be the Divine Will, but often it implies a stoical or fatalistic rather than a religious attitude (resignation superadds to patience a submissive disposition . . . ; it acknowledges both the power and the right of a superior to afflict—Cogan) (a last-ditch fighter by nature . . . her philosophic resignation struck the girl as extremely suspicious—Wouk) (for a modern American or Englishman, waiting is a psychological torture. An Indian accepts the blank hours with resignation—Huxley)

Ana perseverance, persistence (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE): *fortitude, backbone, pluck, grit, sand, guts: *equanimity, composure

Ant impatience

patois *dialect, vernacular, lingo, jargon, cant, argot, slang patrician *gentleman, aristocrat patrimony *heritage, inheritance, birthright patron *sponsor, surety, guarantor, backer, angel

Ana supporter, upholder, champion (see corresponding verbs at SUPPORT): benefactor, contributor (compare benefaction, contribution, at DONATION): protector, defender (see corresponding verbs at DEFEND)

Ant client: protégé

patter vb chatter, prate, *chat, gab, prattle, babble, gabble, jabber, gibber pattern n 1 exemplar, example, *model, ideal, standard, beau ideal, mirror

Ana *paragon, apotheosis

2 *figure, design, motif, device

Ana *form, figure, shape, conformation, configuration paunch *abdomen, belly, stomach, gut

pause n Pause, recess, respite, lull, intermission are comparable when they mean a temporary cessation especially in action, in activity, or in movement. Pause, though it carries an implication of expected resumption, stresses the fact of stopping without indicating, in itself, the duration or the cause of the stop. The term is often applied to such a letup in utterance as that marked in printing by a period or a caesura or as that caused by an interruption, by hesitation, or by awaiting an answer, but it may quite as readily be applied to a temporary cessation of activity (as for play, for sleep, or for relaxation) (there was a short pause before he resumed speaking) (between the dark and the daylight . . . comes a pause in the day's occupations, that is known as the Children's Hour—Longfellow) (there is no pause in the invention of new and appalling weapons—Grenville Clark) Recess implies a temporary cessation of work; usually it applies to an interval granted (as to legislators or students) for the sake of relaxation or diversion (the smaller boys and girls are granted a recess of ten minutes each morning) (Parliament is now in recess) (the justices adjourned for their summer recess—N. Y. Times) Respite implies a time of relief (as from labor, suffering, or war) or of delay (as before sentencing or executing) (there will be no respite for such workers for the duration of the war) (a battle that seemed to be without respite and without end—Rölvaaag) (a body of people . . . thrown together for a week or so without the possibility of respite or escape—Lowe)

Lull implies a temporary cessation or marked decline of activity (as in the course of a storm, in business, or in military activity between two offensives) (after a lull the storm turned inland with increased fury) (running full tilt in most of its departments following a summer lull—Ericson) (there was a lull in the noises of insects as if they . . . were making a devotional pause—Crane) Intermission basically implies a break in continuity but comes close to lull in stressing one caused by a temporary cessation (as of an action, a process, or a proceeding). However, its application is usually quite different since it usually suggests a pause available for some new or special activity (as for rest or recuperation) (the habit of stern thrift, begun in 1870 and practiced without any intermission till . . . 1897—Bennett) (the attack recurred after a few days' intermission) (he often gives himself some intermission from such melancholy reflections—Burke) (several persons gathered around to talk during the intermission between the acts of a play)

Ana interruption, gap, interval, *break, interim: stopping or stop, ceasing or cessation (see corresponding verbs at STOP)

paw vb *touch, feel, palpate, handle pawn n hostage, *pledge, earnest, token pay vb Pay, compensate, remunerate, satisfy, reimburse, indemnify, repay, recompense are comparable when they mean to give money or an equivalent in return for something. Pay is the ordinary term when the giving or furnishing of money to discharge an obligation (as for services rendered or goods delivered) is implied (pays good wages to his gardener) (pay ten dollars for a hat) (taxes are what we pay for civilized society—Justice Holmes) (could once more meet his running expenses, and with pinching and scrimping, even pay off some outstanding bills—Malamud) When, in extended use, pay does not imply the actual giving of money, the term is often employed purely as a figure of speech (nothing can pay him for his pains) (the hard knowledge of the hipster that you pay for what you get is usually too bitter for the beatnik—Mailer) or it means merely to give as due or deserved (pay a compliment) or to give in the hope of a return in kind (pay attention to a young woman) Compensate is often preferred to pay when no legal obligation is implied or no payment for services is expected, because the term stresses a return, usually in money, that is regarded as an equivalent for a service given or for trouble taken or time spent (compensate a waiter for his cheerful willing service) (compensate a neighbor for taking care of one's pets during the summer) (an epoch in which the immense costs of a war could never be compensated by any economic gains that came from it—Lerner) In this sense (see also COMPENSATE 1) compensate often does not imply an obligation to another or the passing of money; it often suggests a counterbalancing (as of something unpleasant by something pleasant or of something lost by something gained) (the beauty of the view compensated for the labor of the climb) (compensate for his feelings of loneliness by assertions of superiority—Auden) Remunerate, like pay, usually implies the discharge of an obligation in money and, like compensate, usually suggests the giving of an equivalent for services rendered rather than for goods delivered (goods with which the Cayuá is remunerated for his work for Brazilians—J. B. Watson) but unlike both of these terms it often carries a suggestion, sometimes a mere hint, sometimes a distinct implication, of a reward (he promised to remunerate the searchers handsomely) (the king remunerated them both, the former with an addition of honor, the latter with an accession of estate—Fuller d. 1661) Both compensate and remunerate can replace pay when pay might seem offensive or indelicate (the party always remunerates its faithful workers) Satisfy (see also SATISFY 1 & 3) implies the payment of something that is asked, demanded, or required especially by the terms of the law or the decree of a court (satisfy a claim) (satisfy a judgment) (death duties had been paid and the demands of creditors satisfied—Gibbons) Reimburse implies a return for money that has been expended by oneself in hope of making a profit or by another (as one's agent or attorney) in doing one's business (the profits of his business did not reimburse him for the money he had invested in it) (reimbursed his lawyer for earlier expenditures) (a promise of reimbursing . . . what the people should give to the king—Bolingbroke) (only Pennsylvania, of all the states, reimbursed loyalists for confiscated property—Smelser & Kirwin) Indemnify implies promised or actual reimbursement for loss (as by fire), for injury (as by accident), or for damage (as by war or disaster) (the basic purpose for which insurance exists is to indemnify persons subject to loss when such loss occurs—Hedges) (the governments of Louis XVIII and Louis Philippe so far as practicable indemnified the citizens of foreign states for losses caused by . . . Napoleon—J. B. Moore) But indemnify may approach compensate and implies less a reimbursing than a counterbalancing (he flogged them with merciless severity; but he indemnified them by permitting them to sleep on watch, to reel drunk about the streets, to rob, beat, and insult the merchants and the laborers—Macaulay) Repay and recompense carry a weaker implication of giving or furnishing money than any of the preceding terms and a stronger implication of returning like for like; both therefore stress the demands of justice and usually the compulsion of an obligation. When the passing of money or of an equivalent is implied, repay may be preferred when there is a suggestion of giving something back that has been paid out to one (repay a loan) and recompense when compensation for voluntary services or for losses or injuries sustained is suggested and a due or adequate return is implied (recompense these people, and especially the priest, for their great kindness—Kipling) But repay and recompense sometimes imply reciprocation of something given, advanced, or inflicted. Repay usually implies little more than paying back in kind or amount (repay her scorn for scorn—Keats) (we never can repay your kindness) (Peacock's fidelity as a correspondent . . . was repaid by the magnificent series of letters from Shelley—Garnett) but it is sometimes used when the return is not what might be expected but is its diametrical opposite (repay love with hate) (repaying incredulity with faith—Browning) (these Indians enabled the Pilgrims to replenish their dwindling stores, a friendly act that was later repaid with treachery—Amer. Guide Series: Me.) Recompense often in this extended sense specifically implies a desire to make amends or to atone for a wrong that has been inflicted (in some part to recompense my rash but more unfortunate misdeed—Milton)

pay n *wage or wages, salary, stipend, fee, hire, emolument Ana *reparation, restitution, indemnity, redress, amends paying adj Paying, gainful, remunerative, lucrative, profitable share the meaning of bringing in a return in money. Paying often implies only such a return, but it may imply a satisfactory return for the labor or effort or expenditure involved (as in a venture, a business, or a trade) (a position as office boy was his first paying job) (oats proved a paying crop) (toolmaking is one of the better paying trades) (a paying investment) (important minerals found in paying quantities in Alabama include asbestos—Willingham) Gainful applies chiefly to an endeavor (as a business or a trade) that leads to a money return whether large or small, but it may apply to persons or their acts that are motivated by a desire for gain (gainful occupations) (the lawyer's profession is often preferred to government service as the more gainful career) (most girls choose to be gainful workers for at least a few years before marriage—Landis) (the hypocrisy that covers gainful exploitation by the pretext of a civilizing mission—Hobson) Remunerative suggests a rewarding of labor, effort, or expenditure and often implies a profit or recompense that exceeds what is usual or customary (it was a remunerative venture for all concerned) (some British farmers with land beside main lines of railways . . . find big boldly silhouetted advertisements to be the most remunerative of their crops—Montague) (the State has come nearer than usual to a useful and remunerative working partnership with the industry—Macmillan) Lucrative carries a stronger implication of large returns and applies to a business, trade, or profession or to an enterprise or undertaking that succeeds beyond one's hopes (he made a lucrative deal when he sold his house) (a lucrative speculation in cotton futures) (contributing to the town's prosperity and wealth was a lucrative smuggling trade—Amer. Guide Series: La.) (our rulers will best promote the improvement of the nation . . . by leaving capital to find its most lucrative course—P. M. Fraser) Profitable also is applied to what is rewarding, but it need not imply a money return (see BENEFICIAL); however it usually suggests such returns, not necessarily in a lucrative manner but in any degree that is consonant with one's wishes or hopes (he owns a profitable hardware business) (they hoped to make a profitable investment) (follow a profitable trade) (scientific research is the development of new, more profitable products and processes—K. S. Davis) (putting to profitable use his conviction that the atmosphere of the music should determine its . . . presentation—Kolodin) <he spoke unreservedly and plainly . . . at a time when it would have been profitable to have been, at least, noncommittal—Charles Graves> peace *truce, cease-fire, armistice peaceable *pacific, peaceful, pacifist, pacifistic, irenic Ana *amicable, friendly, neighborly: *amiable, complaisant: *calm, placid, serene, tranquil

Ant contentious: acrimonious —Con quarrelsome, bellicose, *belligerent: *martial, warlike peaceful 1 *calm, tranquil, serene, placid, halcyon

Ana *soft, gentle, mild: *still, stilly, quiet, silent, noiseless Ant turbulent

2 *pacific, peaceable, pacifist, pacifistic, irenic

Ana composed, collected, unruffled, *cool: equable, constant, *steady

Con disturbed, perturbed, disquieted, agitated, upset, discomposed (see DISCOMPOSE) peak 1 *mountain, mount, alp, volcano, mesa

2 *summit, pinnacle, climax, apex, acme, culmination, meridian, zenith, apogee peculiar 1 individual, *characteristic, distinctive

Ana *special, especial, particular, specific: idiosyncratic, eccentric (see corresponding nouns at ECCENTRICITY)
2 eccentric, odd, queer, *strange, singular, unique, quaint, outlandish, curious

Ana bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic: *abnormal, atypical, aberrant: unusual, uncustomary (see affirmative adjectives at USUAL) pecuniary *financial, monetary, fiscal pedantic, academic, scholastic, bookish are comparable as terms of derogation applied to thinkers, scholars, and learned men and their utterances. Pedantic often implies ostentatious display of knowledge, didacticism, and stodginess (his opinions were as pedantic as his life was abstemious—Froude) It may also connote undue attention to scholarly minutiae and small interest in significant issues (much pedantic mistaking of notions for realities, of symbols and abstractions for the data of immediate experience—Huxley) Academic rarely carries implications of disagreeable personal characteristics but it does stress abstractness, lack of practical experience and interests, and often the inability to consider a situation realistically (there is so much bad writing . . . because writing has been dominated by . . . the academic teachers and critics—Ellis) Scholastic is less fixed in its implications than the others, for sometimes the allusion is to philosophic Scholasticism and sometimes to modern education. As a rule it implies dryness, formalism, adherence to the letter, and sometimes subtlety (it is very able, but harsh and crabbed and intolerably scholastic—Laski) Bookish often suggests learning derived from books rather than from actualities (the Greeks had a name for such mixture of learning and folly, which might be applied to the bookish but poorly read of all ages—Adler) (the gestures of Mr. Lutyens's heroes are a trifle bookish, too seldom of the dusty streets—Times Lit. Sup.) and sometimes it implies a decided literary or rhetorical quality (bookish words) (bookish interests)

Ana *learned, erudite: *recondite, abstruse pedestrian adj *dull, humdrum, dreary, monotonous, stodgy

Ana commonplace, platitudinous, truisic (see corresponding nouns at COMMONPLACE): banal, jejune, inane, wishy-washy (see INSIPID): *irksome, wearisome, tiresome, boring pedigree *ancestry, lineage peek n peep, glimpse, glance, *look, sight, view peel vb *skin, decorticate, pare, flay peel n *skin, bark, rind, hide, pelt peep vb *chirp, chirrup, cheep, tweet, twitter, chitter peep n chirp, chirrup, cheep, tweet, twitter, chitter (see under CHIRP vb)

peep n glance, glimpse, peek, *look, sight, view

Ana peering or peer, gazing or gaze, staring or stare (see GAZE) peer vb *gaze, gape, stare, glare, gloat

Ana peep, glance, glimpse, look (see corresponding nouns at LOOK) peerless surpassing, preeminent, *supreme, superlative, transcendent, incomparable

Ana paramount, sovereign, *dominant, predominant: unmatched, unrivaled, unequaled (see affirmative verbs at MATCH)

peeve vb *irritate, exasperate, nettle, provoke, aggravate, rile

Ana vex, *annoy, irk, bother: chafe, fret, gall (see ABRABE)

peevis *irritable, fractious, snappish, waspish, petulant, pettish, huffy, fretful, querulous

Ana captious, carping, caviling, faultfinding, *critical pejorative *derogatory, depreciatory, depreciative, disparaging, slighting

Ana contemptuous, spiteful, scornful, disdainful (see corresponding nouns under DESPISE vb): decrying, belittling, minimizing (see DECRY)

Con praising, acclaiming, lauding, extolling (see PRAISE): exalting, magnifying, aggrandizing (see EXALT) pelagic *aquatic, marine, oceanic, thalassic, neritic, abyssal, lacustrine, fluvial, fluvialite pellucid *clear, transparent, translucent, lucid, diaphanous, limpid

Ana *pure, sheer: *bright, brilliant, luminous, radiant

Con *turbid, muddy, roily pelt n *skin, hide, rind, bark, peel pen vb *enclose, envelop, fence, coop, corral, cage, wall

Ana confine, circumscribe, restrict, *limit penalize, fine, amerce, mult mean to punish by depriving of something. Penalize usually presupposes a violation of laws or rules intended to maintain discipline or fair treatment for all; it implies exaction by an authority of a pecuniary penalty or a forfeiture of an advantage or, especially in games, the imposition of a handicap (penalize late taxpayers by adding interest to their unpaid taxes) (penalize a football team fifteen yards for holding) Fine and amerce are chiefly found in technical legal use in reference to court cases, but their implications in extended use are not materially different. They and their corresponding nouns fine and amercement are distinguishable in that fine implies that the amount exacted is, within certain limits, prescribed by the law, while amerce and amercement indicate that it has been left to the discretion of the judge (violators of the municipal parking ordinances may be fined from one to ten dollars) (the judge amerced the offender in the sum of fifty dollars) (millions of spirits for his fault amerced of heaven—Milton) Mult implies subjection to a superior power which can legally or illegally exact a penalty (usually in money) for a breach of discipline or for failure to comply with its edicts. Sometimes it merely implies a fine or amercement or a withholding of money due (nonconformists were mulcted for attendance at services of their own communion) Often the word suggests forcible imposition or exaction of a heavy or oppressive penalty (the colonizers mulcted the natives of their gold whenever the latter showed signs of resistance)

Ana *punish, discipline, correct, chasten penchant *leaning, propensity, proclivity, flair

Ana bent, turn, talent, knack, *gift: bias, prepossession, *predilection, prejudice pendant *flag, ensign, standard, banner, color, streamer, pennant, pennon, jack pendent *suspended, pendulous pendulate *swing, sway, oscillate, vibrate, fluctuate, waver, undulate pendulous *suspended, pendent penetrate 1 *enter, pierce, probe

Ana invade, entrench, encroach, *trespass: *perforate, puncture, bore, prick

2 pervade, impenetrate, interpenetrate, *permeate, impregnate, saturate

Ana insert, insinuate, interpolate, *introduce: *soak, saturate, drench, steep penetration insight, acumen, *discernment, discrimination, perception

Ana sharpness, keenness, acuteness (see corresponding adjectives at SHARP): shrewdness, astuteness, perspicaciousness or perspicacity, sagaciousness or sagacity (see corresponding adjectives at SHREWD) penitence, repentance, contrition, attrition, compunction, remorse denote sorrow or regret for sin or wrongdoing.

Penitence implies little more than such sorrow or regret (the outward signs of penitence) (all calls to penitence fall on deaf ears. Penitence implies admission of guilt and no one wishes to stand accused—Political Science Quarterly) (he showed his penitence in many ways) (the majority . . . took the attitude that no sin is beyond forgiveness if it is followed by true penitence—Latourette)

Repentance is richer in its implications, for it also implies a change of heart, an awareness of one's shortcomings morally or spiritually, or of the evil of one's actions or life as a whole (I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance—Lk 5:32) (God of his mercy give you patience to endure, and true repentance—Shak.) (there's no repentance in the grave—Watts) Contrition and attrition are both theological terms, and as such contrasted; only contrition is found in general use. Both imply deep sorrow for sin and the purpose of amendment, but in theological use contrition implies that one's sorrow arises out of love of God and a realization of one's failure to respond to his graces, and attrition that it arises from a lower motive, such as fear of hell or fear of the loss of heaven (O may Thy love and pity supply whatsoever has been wanting in the sufficiency of my contrition—Manual of Prayers) (sacramental grace to raise our sorrow from attrition to contrition—Manning) In general use contrition implies penitence that is manifest in signs of pain or grief (you must—whether you feel it or no—present an appearance of contrition—Meredith) (Sophia thought that, after such a sin, the least Amy could do was to show contrition—Bennett) Compunction and remorse both imply a painful sting of conscience, but compunction usually suggests a momentary reaction not only for something already done, but also for something being done or to be done, and remorse usually suggests prolonged and insistent self-reproach and often intense suffering for past wrongs and especially for those whose consequences cannot be escaped (a heartless scoundrel who had . . . abandoned her in her poverty forevermore, with no touch of compunction—Dickens) (would not have hurt a gnat unless his party . . . told him to do so, and then only with compunction—Sir Winston Churchill) (not one of them . . . was showing any trifling compunction at deserting the rebel cause when it was most in need—Kenneth Roberts) (remorse that makes one walk on thorns—Wilde) (spent in Paris a year marked by futile indiscretions and equally futile remorse—E. S. Bates) (O, that the vain remorse which must chastise crimes done, had but as loud a voice to warn, as its keen sting is mortal to avenge!—Shelley)

Ana regret, *sorrow, anguish: humiliation, humbling, degradation, debasement (see corresponding verbs at ABASE): *qualm, scruple

Con obdurateness or obduracy, inexorableness, adamant (see corresponding adjectives at INFLEXIBLE)

pen name *pseudonym, nom de plume, alias, nom de guerre, incognito

pennant *flag, ensign, standard, banner, color, streamer, pendant, pennon, jack

penniless *poor, indigent, needy, destitute, impecunious, poverty-stricken, necessitous

Ana impoverished, bankrupt, drained (see DEplete): penurious (see corresponding noun at POVERTY)

Con opulent, affluent, wealthy, *rich

pennon *flag, ensign, standard, banner, color, streamer, pennant, pendant, jack

penny-pinching *stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, miserly, cheeseparing

pensive *thoughtful, reflective, speculative, contemplative, meditative

Ana solemn, somber, *serious, earnest, sober, grave: musing, pondering, ruminating (see PONDER)

penumbra umbra, adumbration, umbrage, *shade, shadow

penurious parsimonious, niggardly, *stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, miserly, cheeseparing, penny-pinching

Ana avaricious, grasping, greedy, *covetous: *mercenary, venal: *mean, abject, sordid, ignoble

penury *poverty, indigence, want, destitution, privation

Ana *need, necessity, exigency: pinch, strait, pass, *juncture

Ant luxury

people n *race, nation

peppery fiery, gingery, *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, spunky

Ana impetuous, headlong, *precipitate, abrupt: *pungent, piquant, spicy, snappy

perceive discern, note, remark, notice, observe, contemplate, *see, behold, descry, espy, view, survey

Ana grasp, seize, *take: *apprehend, comprehend: *enter, penetrate, pierce, probe

percept sense-datum, sensum, *sensation, image

Ana *idea, concept, notion: recognition, acknowledgment (see corresponding verbs at ACKNOWLEDGE)

perceptible, sensible, palpable, tangible, appreciable, ponderable all mean capable of being apprehended through the senses or intellect as real and existent. Perceptible may be used inclusively to describe whatever comes within the range of one's senses and can be recognized in itself or by certain signs (<perceptible sounds> (the ship is barely perceptible on the horizon) (without argument, without any perceptible stages, the estrangement of almost a year was gone—Wouk) (something strange was in the air, perceptible to a little boy but utterly beyond his understanding—H. G. Wells) It may also be used with or without qualification (as by just, scarcely, or barely) to describe something that just passes a borderline (as that between invisibility and visibility or inaudibility and audibility) ( (there are perceptible differences between surprise and astonish) ( (her remark had no perceptible relevance to the topic of conversation) Sensible (see also MATERIAL, AWARE) may be used to describe whatever is clearly apprehended through the bodily senses or which impresses itself strongly on the mind through the medium of sensations (<a rich and thronging world of sen-

which must chastise crimes done, had but as loud a voice to warn, as its keen sting is mortal to avenge!—Shelley)

Ana regret, *sorrow, anguish: humiliation, humbling, degradation, debasement (see corresponding verbs at ABASE): *qualm, scruple

Con obdurateness or obduracy, inexorableness, adamant (see corresponding adjectives at INFLEXIBLE)

pen name *pseudonym, nom de plume, alias, nom de guerre, incognito

pennant *flag, ensign, standard, banner, color, streamer, pendant, pennon, jack

penniless *poor, indigent, needy, destitute, impecunious, poverty-stricken, necessitous

Ana impoverished, bankrupt, drained (see DEplete): penurious (see corresponding noun at POVERTY)

Con opulent, affluent, wealthy, *rich

pennon *flag, ensign, standard, banner, color, streamer, pennant, pendant, jack

penny-pinching *stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, miserly, cheeseparing

pensive *thoughtful, reflective, speculative, contemplative, meditative

Ana solemn, somber, *serious, earnest, sober, grave: musing, pondering, ruminating (see PONDER)

penumbra umbra, adumbration, umbrage, *shade, shadow

penurious parsimonious, niggardly, *stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, miserly, cheeseparing, penny-pinching

Ana avaricious, grasping, greedy, *covetous: *mercenary, venal: *mean, abject, sordid, ignoble

penury *poverty, indigence, want, destitution, privation

Ana *need, necessity, exigency: pinch, strait, pass, *juncture

Ant luxury

people n *race, nation

peppery fiery, gingery, *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, spunky

Ana impetuous, headlong, *precipitate, abrupt: *pungent, piquant, spicy, snappy

perceive discern, note, remark, notice, observe, contemplate, *see, behold, descry, espy, view, survey

Ana grasp, seize, *take: *apprehend, comprehend: *enter, penetrate, pierce, probe

percept sense-datum, sensum, *sensation, image

Ana *idea, concept, notion: recognition, acknowledgment (see corresponding verbs at ACKNOWLEDGE)

perceptible, sensible, palpable, tangible, appreciable, ponderable all mean capable of being apprehended through the senses or intellect as real and existent. Perceptible may be used inclusively to describe whatever comes within the range of one's senses and can be recognized in itself or by certain signs (<perceptible sounds> (the ship is barely perceptible on the horizon) (without argument, without any perceptible stages, the estrangement of almost a year was gone—Wouk) (something strange was in the air, perceptible to a little boy but utterly beyond his understanding—H. G. Wells) It may also be used with or without qualification (as by just, scarcely, or barely) to describe something that just passes a borderline (as that between invisibility and visibility or inaudibility and audibility) ( (there are perceptible differences between surprise and astonish) ( (her remark had no perceptible relevance to the topic of conversation) Sensible (see also MATERIAL, AWARE) may be used to describe whatever is clearly apprehended through the bodily senses or which impresses itself strongly on the mind through the medium of sensations (<a rich and thronging world of sen- sible things—Lowes) <our true ideas of sensible things do indeed copy them—James) In contrast with perceptible, however, sensible applies to what is more obvious, even sometimes to what is patent through its effects or signs; thus, a sensible change in tone is one which is immediately recognized; a sensible difference in a person's expression is one which is quickly detected <the direct, sensible influence of Protestantism has been to isolate and to individualize—Brownell) <every owner is entitled to have the water come on to him without sensible diminution as regards quantity and sensible alteration as regards quality—F. D. Smith & Barbara Wilcox) Both palpable and tangible in their primary senses may be used to describe anything which is perceptible through the sense of touch. Palpable, however, although it is used of what is felt by touching with the tips of the fingers <a palpable powder is one that feels gritty) <touch beauty as though it were a palpable thing—Maugham) <before the clouded night dropped its mysterious veil, it was the immensity of space made visible—almost palpable—Conrad) as often implies a sensation produced as a sensation sought and therefore may be applied to whatever evokes a response from tactile receptors in any part of the body <there is a palpable chill in the air) Tangible, on the other hand, is applied primarily to things which may be or are handled or grasped <if an infant is not provided with light tangible objects, he will play with a sunbeam or shadow) <idols are gods or divinities in tangible form) <a cloud, a pillar of fire, a tangible physical something—London) In their secondary senses these two words diverge widely. Palpable, in one of its most common meanings, implies a high degree of perceptibility (see under EVIDENT); in poetic use, especially when applied to an immaterial thing, it suggests an almost physical awareness of its existence or reality <what happiness to live when every hour brings palpable access of knowledge—Wordsworth) Tangible in its extended senses is applied to things that can be thought of as having real, independent, or objective existence whether they are apparent to the senses or not or whether they can be handled or not; thus, tangible ideas are those that can be grasped by the mind and made objects of thought; tangible advantages are those having a substantial character; tangible assets are those (as equipment and inventory) that can be appraised with reasonable accuracy as distinguished from those (as goodwill) that are intangible <the conquest of a territory meant a tangible advantage to the conqueror—Angell) Appreciable is applicable to whatever is large enough to be measured, weighed, valued, or otherwise estimated; thus, a perceptible change in the temperature may be so slight a change that it almost but not quite escapes notice; a palpable change in temperature may still be slight, but it is great enough to make it definitely felt; an appreciable change in temperature may also be slight, but its extent is determinable by reference to a thermometer <the current . . . generated is small but appreciable—Engel) <a satellite must be launched above the appreciable atmosphere—Newell) But appreciable may lose any clear notion of measurability and then often approaches considerable or significant in meaning <there had been an appreciable feeling of strain, and a corresponding rise in your sense of the obligation of meeting it—Mary Austin) <there was no appreciable craft tradition in astronomy before modern times—S. F. Mason) Ponderable is applicable to whatever can be weighed either physically or mentally <something ponderable from the outer world—something of which we can say that its weight is so-and-so—Jeans) The word tends, however, to be applied to what is appreciable in terms of weight or significance as distinguished from what is so intangible as to elude such determination <exert a ponderable influence upon the events of his time)

Ana *clear, lucid, perspicuous: *noticeable, conspicuous, signal: discerned or discernible, noted or notable, observed or observable (see corresponding verbs at SEE) Ant imperceptible perception penetration, insight, acumen, *discernment, discrimination

Ana appreciation, comprehension, understanding (see corresponding verbs at UNDERSTAND): sharpness, keenness, acuteness (see corresponding adjectives at SHARP)

perch vb *alight, light, land, roost percussion concussion, clash, shock, *impact, impingement, collision, jar, jolt

Ana striking, hitting, smiting (see STRIKE): vibration, oscillation, fluctuation (see corresponding verbs at SWING) perdurable durable, permanent, stable, *lasting, perpetual Ana enduring, abiding, persisting, continuing (see CONTINUE): *everlasting, endless, interminable

Ant fleeting peremptory imperative, imperious, *masterful, domineering

Ana decisive, *decided: positive, certain (see SURE): *dictatorial, dogmatic, oracular perennial perpetual, incessant, unremitting, constant, *continual, continuous

Ana *lasting, perpetual, perdurable, stable: *everlasting, unceasing perfect adj Perfect, whole, entire, intact are comparable when they mean not deficient, defective, or faulty in any particular. Perfect is the usual term to describe such a condition, for it may imply not only the presence of every part, every element, and every quality necessary to a thing in its finished or fully developed state, but the soundness, the proportionateness, and the excellence of each part, element, or quality <a perfect set of teeth) <a perfect diamond) <a physically perfect infant) <the memory of that night remained intact and perfect—Wylie) The term is also applicable where there is no more definite measure or test than correspondence to a very high standard of excellence <a perfect gentleman) <perfect coloring) <a perfect poem like Lycidas, a perfect fiction like Esmond, a perfect handling of a theory like Newman's Idea of a University—Pater) <he is the most perfect writer of my generation, he writes the best sentences word for word, rhythm upon rhythm—Mailer) or to an archetype, definition, or pattern <a perfect hexagon) <a perfect Greek temple) or to a conception that represents an ideal or personal vision of the highest possible of its kind <perfect virtue) The term is also used in the sense of utter or complete <he is a perfect fool) <that is perfect nonsense) Whole and entire (see also WHOLE 2) are somewhat elevated and often reminiscent of scriptural use. Whole usually implies a perfection, typically a moral or physical perfection, that can be sought and attained or that can be lost and regained; it usually suggests the attainment of or restoration to health, soundness, completeness (here, with one balm for many fevers found, whole of an ancient evil, I sleep sound—Housman) <one silver spider of machine, so intricate and whole as to appear rightly sufficient in itself—Terry Southern) <daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole—Mt 9:22) Entire usually implies a physical, intellectual, moral, or spiritual perfection that derives from the completeness, integrity, soundness, and often the freedom from admixture of the thing so described; more than whole, it suggests a perfection that is unimpaired or without sign of previous imperfection; thus, a collection is entire when no constituent item is missing; an entire horse is an adult uncastrated male <oh grant me, Phoebus, calm content, strength unimpaired, a mind entire—Conington) Intact usually implies the retention of the perfection of a thing in its finished or its natural or its original state; often it suggests its passage through some experience that might have destroyed its soundness, integrity, or wholeness (that high courage which enabled Fielding . . . to keep his manly benevolence and love of truth intact—Thackeray) (had seen many storms, and had reached middle age with some illusions intact—Michener) (I am . . . thankful that I was among the last persons to see the original Rheims intact. The cathedral . . . remains enshrined . . . in my memory forever—Ellis)

Ana *pure, absolute, simple, sheer: *consummate, finished, accomplished: *impeccable, flawless, faultless, errorless

Ant imperfect —Con *deficient, defective perfect vb *unfold, evolve, develop, elaborate

Ana complete, finish (see CLOSE) perfection virtue, merit, *excellence

Ant failing

perfidious fervid, *impassioned, passionate, ardent, fervent

Ana *intense, vehement, fierce, violent: heightened, enhanced, intensified (see INTENSIFY) perfidious *faithless, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous

Ana *mercenary, venal: disaffected, alienated, estranged (see ESTRANGE): deceitful, *dishonest: perjured, forsworn (see PERJURE)

perforate, puncture, punch, prick, bore, drill mean to pierce through so as to leave a hole. Perforate, although it can mean to pierce, is used mainly with reference to the action of a machine or instrument which makes usually small round holes in a line or pattern (as for ready tearing, for ornamentation, or for marking with a symbol, device, or name) (perforate a sheet of postage stamps) (perforate leather for the tips of shoes) (perforate laundry tabs) (a set of pins that perforates an entire sheet at one operation—Al Burns) Puncture suggests the intentional or accidental entrance of a sharp pointed instrument or thing into a tissue, substance, or material (puncture the arm with a hypodermic needle) (the tire was punctured by a sharp tack) (as the rush began, there flashed through my mind a picture of the ignominious fate which awaited me—punctured to death by umbrellas—Heiser) Since puncture is often associated with the sudden release of air from an inflated object (as a balloon or a pneumatic tire) the word frequently connotes the sudden deflation of something inflated, unduly pretentious, or pompous (puncture a scheme) (the effect of Mark Twain's humorous assault on the dignity of General Grant was to reduce him not to the human but to the common level, to puncture the reluctant reverence of the groundlings—Brooks) Punch is often interchangeable with perforate especially when the use of a mechanical device called a punch is implied (punch holes in a piece of brass) (railway conductors are instructed to punch the tickets presented them) (invented a system of dot-and-dash symbols which could be punched out on thick paper and read by touch at night—Time) Prick implies a piercing with something that has a sharp fine point and therefore suggests a very small hole or a superficial wound (prick oneself with a needle) (prick out a design on a piece of canvas) In extended use prick usually stresses either the sharp sting that accompanies the pricking of the skin (at the older man's laughter he felt his ready pride ruffle and prick—Buck) or the delicacy and clearness of a pattern or design (the design is pricked out, so to speak, by the rhymes—Loves) Both bore and drill imply the use of a mechanical means in making a hole. But bore stresses the removal of materials and therefore is employed when there is a suggestion of excavation by hand or machinery (bore a hole in the ground for a fence post) (bore a tunnel through a mountain) or of the use of a rotary tool (as an auger or gimlet) (bore holes in a plank) or of the use of a boring tool designed for the finishing of roughly made holes by enlarging them and by making them exact in size and true with relation to a specified center line (bore the barrel of a gun) Drill commonly implies the use of an instrument or machine equipped with a pointed or sharp rotating tool for boring holes in such hard substances as metal and stone (drill holes in a steel plate) (a dentist drills a tooth to remove decayed material and form a base for a filling) In their extended senses bore and drill (see also PRACTICE) carry differing connotations, bore suggesting the slow or continuous forcing of a passage through (bore one's way through a crowd) (the sound of an airplane bored ominously into the ears of the crowd—Woolf) and drill, the forced entrance of something through a succession of efforts or through persistence (is heavily and harshly written, and that is too bad, for the ideas are exciting if the reader can drill through to them—Mailer)

Ana *enter, penetrate, pierce, probe

perform vb Perform, execute, discharge, accomplish, achieve, effect, fulfill are comparable when they mean to carry out or into effect. Perform, sometimes merely a formal synonym for do, is more often used with reference to processes than to acts. One performs processes that are lengthy or exacting or ceremonial in character (perform a play) (perform a surgical operation) (perform the marriage service) (a solemn sacrifice, performed in state—Pope) One performs acts that are distinguished or striking (perform feats of skill) When the end rather than the means to the end is stressed, what is performed is, usually something undertaken or pledged (lobbyists perform a legitimate, even necessary, function—Armbrister) One executes what exists in design or intent by bringing it into being or by putting it into effect (the heads of departments are . . . political or confidential agents . . . merely to execute the will of the president—John Marshall) (the escape was planned meticulously and executed boldly—Edmond Taylor) Sometimes execute is used in place of perform of a process involving great skill or a highly exacting technique (few dancers can execute an adagio beautifully) One discharges duties or obligations when one goes through a required round of tasks (I had discharged my confidential duties as secretary . . . to the general satisfaction—De Quincey) Accomplish usually stresses the completion of a process rather than the means by which it is carried out. One accomplishes something begun or something which there is reason to expect (it took us twenty-three days to accomplish the return journey—Hudson) (this project was so vast and so quickly accomplished that it has no parallel—Stoumen) Sometimes accomplish implies the fruitfulness of effort or the value of the results obtained (because of his efforts things are accomplished—Anderson) (there's very little to be accomplished by telling men anything. You have to show them—Mary Austin) Achieve adds to accomplish the implication of conquered difficulties. One achieves a work, a task, or an enterprise that is of great importance and that makes unusual demands (as on one's energy, willpower, or resources) (the American public schools achieve . . . the task of transforming a heterogeneous selection of mankind into a homogeneous nation—Russell) Effect implies inherent force in the agent rather than such personal qualities as daring and perseverance. Also, it is often predicated of things as well as of persons (only two prisoners effected their escape) (taxation as an instrument for effecting a more equal distribution of income—Shaw) (a neurotic general overcome with work may believe he has the power to effect nothing—Mailer) Fulfill implies a full realization of what exists potentially, or hitherto in conception, or is implicit in the nature or the sense of responsibility of the agent (a law that fails to fulfill its intended end) (fulfill a promise) (a sense of the failure of life to fulfill its ultimate expectations—Rees) performer *actor, player, mummer, mime, mimic, thespian, impersonator, trouper perfume *fragrance, bouquet, redolence, incense

Ana *reach, gain, compass, achieve, attain; finish, complete, conclude (see CLOSE vb)

Ana odor, scent, aroma, *smell peril *danger, jeopardy, hazard, risk

Ana menacing or menace, threatening or threat (see THREATEN); exposure, subjection, openness, liability (see corresponding adjectives at LIABLE) perilous *dangerous, hazardous, risky, precarious

Ana desperate, forlorn, hopeless (see DESPONDENT); chancy, chance, haphazard, *random perimeter *circumference, periphery, circuit, compass period, epoch, era, age, aeon all denote a portion or division of time; epoch and era can also denote an event regarded as the beginning of a portion or division of time. Period is the generic term, designating an extent of time of any length for whatever purpose delimited (request a one-minute period of silence as a tribute to a dead person) (it began in 1915 in one of the darkest periods of the first world war—Pollock) (was returned for eight successive Congresses—a period of seventeen years—W. C. Ford) Epoch can denote the starting point of a new period, especially as marked by striking or remarkable changes or events (this is an epoch . . . the end and the beginning of an age—H. G. Wells) or it may apply to such a new period (a phenomenon of our own special epoch, a man who couldn't . . . be a writer in the only meaning of the term, but who can and probably will write a book—Purdy) (Dante's work . . . initiated a new epoch in literature—R. A. Hall) Era applies to a period characterized especially by some new order of things (a better intellectual era is dawning for the working men—Kingsley) (the Victorian era) (an era of singular crisis and upheaval—Aldridge) Age, usually interchangeable with but possibly more specific than era, is frequently used of a period dominated by some central figure or clearly marked feature (the age of Pericles) (the Bronze Age) (the French Revolution and its age—Arnold) Aeon applies to an immeasurably or indefinitely long period of time (aeons of primeval power have shaped that pillared bulk—Gibson) (during the three terrible hours . . . he had lived centuries of pain, aeon upon aeon of torture—Wilde) periodic *intermittent, recurrent, alternate

Ana *fitful, spasmodic, convulsive; sporadic, occasional (see INFREQUENT) periodical n *journal, magazine, newspaper, review, organ peripatetic *itinerant, ambulatory, ambulant, nomadic, vagrant periphery *circumference, perimeter, circuit, compass

Ana *limit, confine, bound, end periphrasis *verbiage, redundancy, tautology, pleonasm, circumlocution peristyle *colonnade, arcade, arcature, portico perjure, forswear are comparable when they mean to violate one's oath or, when used reflexively, to make a false swearer of oneself. In general use perjure is often employed less precisely than in law, where it is a technical term meaning to make a willfully false statement of fact or sometimes of an intention to do something, while under oath or under a solemn affirmation to tell the truth (the judge was convinced that the witness had perjured himself) In general use perjure often implies making a liar of oneself whether one is under oath or not (when a native begins perjury he perjures himself thoroughly. He does not boggle over details—Kipling) (he thanked her, with as much enthusiasm as he could muster without actually perjuring himself—Archibald Marshall) Forswear (see also ABJURE) often implies a violation of an oath, promise, or vow (he swore a thing to me on Monday night, which he forsook on Tuesday morning—Shak.) (thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths—Mt 5:33) but it may also suggest untruth or ill faith to something (as one's principles, one's beliefs, or the laws of one's country) as sacred as an oath (Shelley indignantly refused to "forswear his principles" by accepting "a proposal so insultingly hateful"—Arnold) Ana *deceive, delude, mislead, beguile; *lie, prevaricate permanent *lasting, perdurable, durable, stable, perpetual Ana perennial, constant, continuous, *continual Ant temporary; ad interim (of persons) permeate, pervade, penetrate, impenetrate, interpenetrate, impregnate, saturate can all mean to pass or cause to pass through every part of a thing. Permeate may be used in reference to either a material or an immaterial thing and implies diffusion through all the pores or interstices of some substance or entity (the rain has permeated the soil) (the air is permeated by the pungent scent of tobacco—Amer. Guide Series: N. C.) (in . . . the Elizabethan age, English society at large was accessible to ideas, was permeated by them—Arnold) (the sense of beauty had permeated the whole nation—Binyon) (the religious issue permeated every meeting I conducted—Michener) Pervade is a very close synonym of permeate, but it distinctively carries a heightened suggestion of diffusion throughout every part or parcel of the whole and it is more often used in reference to such matters as places, writings, and works of art than to purely material things (a deep and solemn harmony pervades the hollow vale from steep to steep—Wordsworth) (a principle which so entirely pervades the constitution . . . as to be incapable of being separated from it—John Marshall) (a kind of easy morality seems to pervade all levels of the state government—Armbrister) Penetrate (see also ENTER 1) may be preferred to permeate or pervade when there is the intent also to suggest the entrance of something that goes deeply or profoundly into the essence or nature of a thing, thereby giving it its characteristic quality or efficient force (a whole nation . . . penetrated with an enthusiasm for pure reason, and with an ardent zeal for making its prescriptions triumph—Arnold) (a letter penetrated with affection for the old plain edifice and its memories—Quiller-Couch) (a commanding significance, which penetrates the whole, informing and ordering everything—Leavis) Impenetrate is an intensive of penetrate implying a more thorough and often a diffusive penetration (power to isolate and impenetrate Poland—Gunther) (the church structure is backed up and impenetrated by the kinship structure—Vogt & O'Dea) Interpenetrate, too, may imply no more than thorough penetration or penetration into, within, or throughout (Westerners who interpenetrated the East in the nineteenth century—Davis) but distinctively it may imply a mutual penetration (the state and the economy interpenetrate; during slump, war, and boom, the tie-ins tend to become ever closer—Labor and Nation) (had both imagination and a stubborn will, curiously balancing and interpenetrating each other—Cather) Im-

pregnate often carries a stronger implication of the operation of a causative power (as a human agent) than any of the preceding terms; it also suggests a filling of every available part or portion of a whole so that the thing which enters or is entered is diffused throughout the entire substance, structure, work, or group (the water is impregnated with magnesia—Huxley) (any judge who has sat with juries knows that . . . they are extremely likely to be impregnated by the enviroing atmosphere—Justice Holmes) (a very notable poem impregnated with the pessimism of a time—Lovett) Saturate (see also SOAK) implies impregnation to the point where no more of the thing which enters can be taken up or absorbed; the term is often used in preference to permeate or pervade when what permeates or pervades is highly obvious, deeply ingrained, or overabundant (the smell, sweet and poignant beyond imagining, saturated the air—Wouk) (verse that is saturated with emotion—Lowes) (the air is saturated with golden light—Diamant)

Ana *infuse, imbue, ingrain: drench, steep, *soak, saturate: *inform, animate, inspire, fire

permission, leave, sufferance denote the sanction which enables one to do something that requires the consent of those in authority. Permission is the ordinary term except in some conventional phrases; it commonly implies the power or authority to grant or to refuse what is asked (have the owner's permission to hunt on his estate) ("The horses can go in our barn. I'm sure Mr. Forrester would have no objection." She spoke as if he had asked her permission—Cather) Leave differs very little from permission. It occurs chiefly in conventionally courteous phrases such as "by your leave," "to ask leave," and "give me leave," but it may be used elsewhere in place of permission (ask for leave to remove papers from a file) In military, naval, and some official use the term implies official permission to absent oneself from one's duties or from one's station for a fixed period of time, or the furlough or absence so permitted (granted a leave of thirty days) (after being absent without leave for a month, the soldier was arrested as a deserter) (at home on sick leave) Sufferance usually implies a neglect or refusal to forbid and therefore suggests either a tacit permission withdrawable on cause or, more often, merely allowing a person to be present or to do something (you are here only on sufferance and if you want to stay, you must listen without interrupting) (he comes among us on sufferance, like those concert singers whom mamma treats with so much politeness—Thackeray)

Ana authorization, commissioning or commission, licensing or license (see corresponding verbs at AUTHORIZE): letting, allowing (see LET): sanctioning, approval, endorsement (see corresponding verbs at APPROVE)

Ant prohibition

permit vb *let, allow, suffer, leave

Ana *authorize, license, commission: sanction, endorse, *approve

Ant prohibit, forbid permutation mutation, *change, vicissitude, alternation Ana moving or move, shifting or shift, removing or remove (see MOVE): transformation, conversion, metamorphosis (see under TRANSFORM) pernicious, baneful, noxious, deleterious, detrimental are comparable when they mean exceedingly harmful but they differ as to the kind and extent of the potential for harm. Something is either pernicious or baneful which is irreparably harmful but pernicious is more often applied to things that harm exceedingly or irreparably by evil or by insidious corrupting or enervating and baneful to those that poison or destroy (pernicious anemia) (a pernicious influence) (the effects of false and pernicious propaganda cannot be neutralized—Huxley) (pernicious social institutions which stifle the nobler impulses—Parrington) (the baneful notion that there is no such thing as a high, correct standard in intellectual matters—Arnold) (they were under as little personal restraint as was compatible with their protection from the baneful habit of swallowing one another—Bierce) (the full extent and degree of their baneful psychological influence is quite inadequately realized—Moberly) Something is noxious which is harmful especially to health of body or mind (a cold noxious wind—Haughton) (only when the educator shall have been educated, the air cleared of noxious fallacies . . . will the reign of Humbug come to an end—Grandgent) Deleterious is used chiefly of something which causes harm when taken into the body (as into the digestive or respiratory tract) and may suggest obscure or ill-understood effects (many drugs that seem so good in the first trials prove to have deleterious aftereffects—Heiser) (this gas was well known to be deleterious—John Phillips) Detrimental, like deleterious, generally suggests a much lower degree of harmfulness than the remaining terms; typically it imputes an impairing or hampering quality to the agent or an impaired or hampered condition to the one acted upon (a federal-scholarship program is a project worthy of our united support, provided it can be administered at the state level, free from political or other detrimental influences—L. M. Chamberlain) (they both ran down the theory as highly detrimental to the best interests of man—Peacock) (bismuth is considered to be a detrimental impurity in refined lead—Pasternack) (although too rich a diet is harmful to calves of both sexes, the detrimental effects are less marked in a bull calf than in a heifer—Farmer's Weekly)

Ana baleful, malign, *sinister, malefic, maleficent: *poisonous, venomous, toxic, pestilent, miasmatic: injurious, hurtful, harmful, mischievous (see corresponding nouns at INJURY)

Ant innocuous

pernickety persnickety, fastidious, finicky, finicking, finical, *nice, dainty, particular, fussy, squeamish

Ana exacting, demanding, requiring (see DEMAND): annoyed, vexed, irked (see ANNOY)

perpendicular *vertical, plumb

Ana *steep, abrupt, precipitous, sheer

Ant horizontal perpetrate *commit

Ana accomplish, achieve, effect (see PERFORM) perpetual 1 *lasting, permanent, perdurable, durable, stable

Ana *everlasting, endless, unceasing, interminable: eternal, sempiternal, *infinite

2 *continual, continuous, constant, incessant, unremitting, perennial

Ana enduring, persisting, abiding, continuing (see CONTINUE): set, settled, fixed, established (see SET vb)

Ant transitory, transient perplex *puzzle, mystify, bewilder, distract, nonplus, confound, dumbfound

Ana disturb, perturb, upset, *discompose: baffle, balk, thwart (see FRUSTRATE): astound, amaze, astonish, *surprise perquisite *right, prerogative, privilege, appanage, birthright persecute oppress, *wrong, aggrieve

Ana *worry, annoy, harass, hurray: torture, torment, rack (see AFFLICT): *bait, badger, hound, ride

Con *indulge, pamper, humor: favor, *oblige, accommodate: *support, uphold, champion, back persevere, persist are both used in reference to persons in the sense of to continue in a given course in the face of difficulty or opposition. Persevere nearly always implies an admirable quality; it suggests both refusal to be discouraged by failure, doubts, or difficulties, and a steadfast or dogged pursuit of an end or an undertaking (I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood—Shak.) (for, strength to persevere and to support, and energy to conquer and repel — these elements of virtue, that declare the native grandeur of the human soul—Wordsworth) (I do not intend to take that cowardly course, but, on the contrary, to stand to my post and persevere in accordance with my duty—Sir Winston Churchill) Persist (see also CONTINUE) may imply a virtue (this is the poetry within history, this is what causes mankind to persist beyond every defeat—J. S. Untermyer) but it more often suggests a disagreeable or annoying quality, for it stresses stubbornness or obstinacy more than courage or patience and frequently implies opposition to advice, remonstrance, disapproval, or one's own conscience (persist in working when ill) (it is hard to see how they can have persisted so long in inflicting useless misery—Russell)

Ana *continue, abide, endure, last

Con vary, *change, alter; waver, vacillate, falter, *hesitate persiflage *badinage, rillery

Ana bantering or banter, chaffing or chaff (see BANTER); ridiculing or ridicule, twitting, deriding or derision (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE) persist 1 *persevere

Ant desist —Con discontinue, cease, *stop, quit

2 *continue, last, endure, abide

Ant desist —Con *stop, cease, discontinue persnickety persnickety, fastidious, finicky, finicking, finical, *nice, dainty, particular, fussy, squeamish

Ana exacting, demanding, requiring (see DEMAND): annoyed, vexed, irked (see ANNOY)

person *entity, being, creature, individual personality character, individuality, temperament, *disposition, temper, complexion perspicacious *shrewd, sagacious, astute

Ana *sharp, keen, acute; penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER)

Ant dull

perspicuous *clear, lucid

Ana manifest, *evident, plain, distinct: *explicit, express, specific, definite Con *turbid, muddy; inflated, flatulent, tumid, turgid persuade *induce, prevail, get

Ana influence, *affect, touch, sway, impress: *move, drive, impel, actuate

Ant dissuade —Con *restrain, curb, check, inhibit: *hinder, impede, obstruct persuasion 1 conviction, belief, *opinion, view, sentiment

Ana *predilection, prepossession, bias, partiality, prejudice: tenet, dogma, *doctrine

2 *religion, denomination, sect, cult, communion, faith, creed, church pert *saucy, arch

Ana flippant, frivolous, volatile, light-minded (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS): *impertinent, intrusive; brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS)

Ant coy

pertain *bear, relate, appertain, belong, apply

Ana connect, *join, combine, associate pertinacious *obstinate, stubborn, dogged, mulish, stiff-necked, pigheaded, bullheaded

Ana tenacious, tough, stout, sturdy, *strong: persistent, persevering (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE):

resolute, steadfast, staunch (see FAITHFUL): headstrong, willful (see UNRULY) pertinent *relevant, germane, material, apposite, applicable, apropos

Ana fitting, apt, happy, felicitous (see FIT): pat, *seasonable, opportune, timely, well-timed

Ant impertinent: foreign perturb disturb, agitate, upset, *discompose, disquiet, fluster, flurry

Ana *annoy, vex, irk, bother: *confuse, muddle, addle: confound, nonplus, distract, bewilder, dumbfound (see PUZZLE vb)

pervade *permeate, penetrate, impenetrate, interpenetrate, impregnate, saturate

Ana *infuse, imbue, ingrain, leaven: *inform, animate, inspire, fire perverse *contrary, restive, balky, froward, wayward

Ana *unruly, ungovernable, recalcitrant, refractory: *obstinate, stubborn, mulish, pigheaded, stiff-necked: fractious, *irritable, peevish pervert vb deprave, corrupt, *debase, vitiate, debauch

Ana *abuse, misuse, ill-treat, maltreat, mistreat, outrage: contort, distort, warp (see DEFORM) perverted corrupted, depraved, debased, vitiated, debauched (see under DEBASE)

Ana distorted, contorted, warped (see DEFORM): abused, misused, outraged (see ABUSE)

pesimistic *cynical, misanthropic, misogynic

Ana gloomy, morose (see SULLEN): depressed, oppressed, weighed down (see DEPRESS)

Ant optimistic —Con sanguine, *confident, assured pester plague, tease, tantalize, *worry, annoy, harass, harry

Ana *bait, badger, hector, heckle, chivy: fret, gall, chafe (see ABRADE): perturb, disturb, agitate, upset, *discompose pestilential *poisonous, venomous, virulent, toxic, mephitic, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmatic

Ana *infectious, contagious, catching: noxious, *pernicious, baneful, deleterious pet vb *caress, fondle, cosset, cuddle, dandle

Ana *indulge, humor, pamper, mollycoddle, baby petite *small, little, diminutive, wee, tiny, teeny, weeny, minute, microscopic, miniature petition n *prayer, suit, plea, appeal petition vb pray, sue, plead, appeal (see under PRAYER)

petrify 1 *harden, solidify, indurate, cake

Ana deposit, precipitate (see corresponding nouns at DEPOSIT): *compact, consolidate

2 *daze, stun, bemuse, stupefy, benumb, paralyze

Ana terrify, alarm, *frighten, startle: appall, horrify, *dismay pettish *irritable, fractious, peevish, petulant, snappish, waspish, huffy, fretful, querulous petty, puny, trivial, trifling, paltry, measly, picayunish, picayune mean little and insignificant, often contemptibly so. Something is petty which by comparison with other things the same in kind but different in size, importance, gravity, or moment is among the smallest or least important (a petty interest) (a petty prince) (giants beside whom we seem petty—Sinclair Lewis) (Hunt does one harm by making fine things petty and beautiful things hateful—Keats)

The word often connotes small-mindedness (petty gossip) (explaining that only the petty vengeance of men who hated Roosevelt had produced the law that prohibited

. . . a third term—Michener) (divine inhabitants of a world apart, for whom nothing sordid, nothing petty, and nothing painful had any existence—Sackville-West)

Something is puny which is so small or slight as to seem impotent, feeble, or completely without vitality <none of your thin, puny, yellow, hectic figures, exhausted with abstinence and hard study—Smollett> <one no sooner grasps the bigness of the world's work than one's own effort seems puny and contemptible—J. R. Green> Something is trivial which seems petty and commonplace and scarcely worthy of special consideration or notice <that strange interest in trivial things that we try to develop when things of high import make us afraid—Wilde> <he regarded no task as too humble for him to undertake, nor so trivial that it was not worth his while to do it well—Huxley> The term is often applied to persons, minds, or activities which reveal engrossment in trivial affairs or a lack of serious or profound interests <she knew him for a philanderer, a trivial taster in love and life—Rose Macaulay> <the incessant hurry and trivial activity of daily life—Eliot> Something is trifling which is so small as to have little if any value or significance <our ordinary distinctions become so trifling, so impalpable—Hawthorne>  Something is paltry which is ridiculously or contemptibly small in comparison especially to what it should be  <our little ambitions, our paltry joys—Benson> <the paltry prize is hardly worth the cost—Byron> Something is measly which is contemptibly small (as in size or quantity) or petty  <snatch at a little measly advantage and miss the big one—Anderson> Something is picayunish or picayune which is insignificant in its possibilities or accomplishments or hopelessly narrow in outlook or interests   <the obvious futility, the picayune, question-begging character, of such ethical analyses—Asher Moore>

Ana *small, little, diminutive, minute

Ant important, momentous; gross petulant *irritable, fractious, peevish, pettish, snappish, waspish, huffy, fretful, querulous

Ana cross, cranky, touchy, testy (see IRASCIBLE); *impatient, restive, fidgety phantasm 1 *apparition, phantom, wraith, ghost, spirit, specter, shade, revenant

Ana *delusion, illusion, hallucination

2 *fancy, fantasy, phantasy, vision, dream, daydream, nightmare phantasy *fancy, fantasy, phantasm, vision, dream, daydream, nightmare phantom *apparition, phantasm, wraith, ghost, spirit, specter, shade, revenant

Ana counterfeit, deception, *imposture; *delusion, illusion, hallucination pharisaical hypocritical, sanctimonious, canting (see under HYPOCRISY) pharisaism *hypocrisy, sanctimony, cant pharmaceutical n *drug, medicinal, biologic, simple pharmacist *druggist, apothecary, chemist phase, aspect, side, facet, angle are comparable when they denote one of the possible ways in which an object of contemplation may be seen or may be presented. Phase may distinctly imply a change in the appearance of a thing without a change in the observer's point of view. From its original denotation as one of the four different shapes which the moon apparently assumes during its waxing and waning it often suggests a cyclical change in appearance <the wheel of the world swings through the same phases. . . . Summer passed and winter thereafter, and came and passed again—Kipling> In extended use it is often applied to an outward and passing manifestation of a stage in growth, development, or unfolding <the way children develop and the different phases they go through—Barclay> but it also may apply to one of two or more distinctive appearances or values of something with little or no suggestion of cyclical or temporal succession <the red fox occurs in several color phases, of which the silver phase has been found to breed true> <he was a shrewd, smooth political-financier, shady in both phases—S. H. Adams> <the two alternating forces or phases in the rhythm of the universe which Empedocles calls Love and Hate—Toynbee> Aspect sometimes implies a change in appearance without a shifting in point of view, but unlike phase it usually suggests a superficial change, especially one brought about by unpredictable circumstances <every time I look out of the window, the hills present a new aspect> More distinctively it implies a change in appearance that is traceable to a change in the observer's point of view <the one and only aspect of a rich and complex subject which I mean to treat—Lowe> <an entirely new aspect of the Everest massif filled our northwestern horizon—Shipton> <the two men lay whispering for hours, canvassing every aspect of Monck's situation—Upton Sinclair> Thus, one who proposes to treat the phases of the depression of the nineteen-thirties implies that he intends to consider its stages as they manifested themselves outwardly; one who proposes to treat all aspects of that depression implies that he intends to consider it from every possible point of view (as the political, the economic, and the sociological). Side, though often used interchangeably with phase and aspect, may retain implications derived from other of its senses and is used chiefly in reference to something that may be thought of as having two or more faces and therefore not fully apprehensible unless it or its observer shifts position <see life only on its pleasant side> <if you get on the wrong side of authority, you are executed or exiled—Edmund Wilson> <the history as a whole is deficient on the economic side—Allen Johnson> But side differs from phase and aspect in less regularly connoting appearance or referring to physical or intellectual vision <hear both sides of a dispute> <read all sides in a controversy> <on its theoretic and perceptive side, Morality touches Science; on its emotional side, poetic Art—George Eliot> <this kind of discussion went on all the time between the parents. They could take either side with ease—Wouk> Facet differs from side in implying a multiplicity of other faces similar to or like the one singled out for attention <noticed the different shades of green on the planes and facets of each clipped tree—Dahl> <the strength of the lyric lies in the complete statement of a single selected facet of experience—Day Lewis> Angle denotes an aspect which is observable from a point of view restricted in its scope <he knows only one angle of his subject> <it is necessary to consider all angles of the situation> <views these developments from a fresh angle—Dumas Malone>

Ana *state, condition, situation, posture; *appearance, look, semblance phenomenal *material, physical, corporeal, sensible, objective

Ana actual, *real

Ant noumenal phenomenon *wonder, marvel, prodigy, miracle

Ana abnormality (see corresponding adjective at ABNORMAL): anomaly, *paradox; singularity, peculiarity, uniqueness (see corresponding adjectives at STRANGE) philanthropic *charitable, benevolent, humane, humanitarian, eleemosynary, altruistic

Ana *liberal, munificent, bountiful, bounteous, open-handed, generous; lavish, *profuse, prodigal

Ant misanthropic philanthropy *charity

Ant misanthropy

philippic n *tirade, diatribe, jeremiad

Ana harangue, *speech, address, oration; condemnation, denunciation (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE) philistine n *obscurantist, barbarian phlegm 1 impassivity, stolidity, apathy, stoicism (see under IMPASSIVE)

Ana insensibility, insensitiveness, impassibility, anesthesia (see corresponding adjectives at INSENSIBLE)

2 *equanimity, composure, sangfroid

Ana imperturbability, nonchalance, coolness, collectedness (see corresponding adjectives at COOL): calmness or calm, tranquility, serenity (see corresponding adjectives at CALM) phlegmatic *impassive, stolid, apathetic, stoic

Ana *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof; cool, chilly, *cold, frigid; sluggish, *lethargic phony adj *counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, sham, pseudo, pinchbeck photograph n portrait, *image, effigy, statue, icon, mask phrase, idiom, expression, locution mean a group of words which, taken together, express a notion and may be used as a part of a sentence. Phrase may apply to a group of words which for one reason or another recurs frequently (as in the language of a people, the writings of an author or school of authors, or the speech of a person or a clique of persons). Sometimes the word means little more than this (<this phrase, a priori, is in common most grossly misunderstood—Southey) but more often it suggests a distinctive character, such as triteness (<to use the phrase of all who ever wrote upon the state of Europe, the political horizon is dark indeed—Cowper) or pithiness or pointedness (<I summed up all systems in a phrase—Wilde) <“You don’t understand a young philosopher,” said the Baronet. “A young philosopher’s an old fool!” returned Hippas, not thinking that his growl had begotten a phrase—Meredith) In the combinations “noun phrase” and “verb phrase” it suggests one of the principal parts of a sentence. Idiom (see also LANGUAGE 1) applies to a combination of word elements which is peculiar to the language in which it occurs either in its grammatical structure or in the meaning which is associated with it but which cannot be derived from it when the elements are interpreted literally; thus, “to keep house,” “to catch cold,” “to strike a bargain” are examples of idioms. Expression and locution are sometimes used in place of phrase when the idea of a way of expressing oneself is uppermost. Although both terms may be applied to phrases that are generally current, they are perhaps more typically applied to those that are idiosyncratic. Expression is particularly used when accompanied by a characterizing adjective or clause or phrase (<he is in the habit of using telling expressions) (<that is a very odd expression) (<an expression that has gone out of use) Locution is somewhat more bookish than expression and is therefore often preferred when the reference is to phrases that are peculiar to a language or a group as an idiom (<a pet locution of the author) (<Carlyle and Carlylese were to leave their traces. Even the style of Thoreau was to be tinged faintly here and there with the rhythms and locutions of a writer whom lesser minds could not resist—Brooks) phraseology, phrasing *language, vocabulary, diction, style physic n *remedy, cure, medicine, medicament, medication, specific physical 1 *bodily, corporeal, corporal, somatic

Ana fleshly, *carnal, sensual, animal

2 *material, corporeal, phenomenal, sensible, objective

Ana actual, *real, true: elemental, *elementary physiognomy *face, countenance, visage, mug, puss physique, build, habit, constitution all mean bodily makeup or structure or organization peculiar to an individual or to a group or kind of individuals. Physique applies to the structure, appearance, or strength of the body of an individual or of a race and may connote such qualities as capacity for endurance, stamina, or predisposition to disease (<a people of robust physique) (<a man of slight physique) Build, though often interchangeable with physique, may distinctively suggest not so much the makeup of a body as its conformation; it tends to call attention to such qualities as size, structure, and weight and rarely when used of man or an animal to health or the lack of it (<a horse of heavy build) (<a person of fleshy build but of feeble physique) Habit implies reference to the body as the outward evidence of natural or acquired characteristics that suggest the nature of one’s physical condition and capabilities; thus, a full habit suggests an appearance marked by stoutness, redness, and congestion of the visible blood vessels (<a youth of consumptive habit) (<old Mrs. Mingott’s . . . being, like many persons of active mind and dominating will, sedentary and corpulent in her habit—Wharton) Constitution applies to the makeup of the body, especially of an individual, as affected by the complex of mental or physical conditions which collectively determine its state (as of healthiness) and its powers (as of endurance and resistance) (<persons of sickly constitutions are given to worry) (<buy them horses to ride, if you want them to enjoy good health and sound constitutions—Jefferies) (<the key to her nature lay, I think, largely in her fragile constitution—Ellis)

Ana *body: *structure, framework, anatomy: *system, organism picayunish, picayune *petty, trivial, trifling, puny, paltry, measly pick vb *choose, select, elect, opt, cull, prefer, single

Ana *take, seize, grasp: determine, *decide, settle

Con reject, spurn, refuse, *decline picked *select, elect, exclusive pickle n *predicament, plight, dilemma, quandary, scrape, fix, jam pictorial *graphic, vivid, picturesque picture vb *represent, depict, portray, delineate, limn

Ana describe, *relate, narrate, recount: *sketch, outline picturesque vivid, *graphic, pictorial

Ana charming, attractive, alluring (see under ATTRACT): conspicuous, salient, striking, arresting (see NOTICEABLE) piece n *part, portion, detail, member, division, section, segment, sector, fraction, fragment, parcel pie, piebald adj *variegated, parti-colored, motley, checkered, checked, skewbald, dappled, freaked pier 1 *buttress, abutment

2 *wharf, dock, quay, slip, berth, jetty, levee pierce penetrate, probe, *enter

Ana *perforate, bore, drill, puncture: rend, *tear, cleave, split, rive pietistic sanctimonious, pious, *devout, religious

Ana reverencing or reverential, venerating, adoring, worshiping (see corresponding verbs at REVERE): fervid, perfervid, ardent, fervent (see IMPASSIONED): *sentimental, maudlin, romantic piety devotion, *fidelity, allegiance, fealty, loyalty

Ana obedience, docility (see corresponding adjectives at OBEDIENT): fervor, ardor, zeal, enthusiasm, *passion: *holiness, sanctity

Ant impiety

pigeonhole *assort, sort, classify

Ana systematize, methodize, organize, arrange, *order pigheaded *obstinate, stubborn, mulish, stiff-necked, bullheaded, dogged, pertinacious

Ana headstrong, willful, recalcitrant, refractory (see UNRULY): *contrary, perverse, froward pilaster *pillar, column pile n 1 heap, stack, mass, bank, shock, cock (see under HEAP vb)

2 *building, edifice, structure pile vb *heap, stack, mass, bank, shock, cock

Ana *gather, collect, assemble, congregate: *accumulate, amass, hoard pilfer *steal, filch, purloin, lift, pinch, snitch, swipe, cop

Ana seize, *take, grasp, grab, snatch: *catch, capture: *rob, rifle, loot, plunder pilgrimage *journey, voyage, tour, trip, jaunt, excursion, cruise, expedition pillage vb *ravage, devastate, waste, sack, despoil, spoliage

Ana plunder, loot, *rob, rifle: invade, encroach, *trespass: confiscate, *arrogate, appropriate, usurp pillar, column, pilaster denote a structure that rises high from a base or foundation, is slender in comparison with its width, and usually has a monolithic and decorative appearance. Pillar is the general term and applies to any such structure whether it stands alone (an obelisk is a kind of pillar) or is a supporting architectural member of a building or similar structure (the building was a spacious theater, half round on two main pillars vaulted high—Milton) In extended use pillar usually applies to something which stays or supports (the four pillars of government . . . religion, justice, counsel, treasure—Bacon) (the Classics have . . . lost their place as a pillar of the social and political system—T. S. Eliot) but when the application is to persons the term usually suggests the character of one who supports, though it may also imply leadership or prominence (he is a pillar of the church) (the middlemen . . . the pillars of society, the cornerstone of convention—Lewis & Maude) Column in architectural use primarily applies to a supporting pillar that is often cylindrical and free at every point except its bottom and top. The term commonly also implies three more or less elaborate parts, the base, by which it is attached to the floor, the shaft, often a fluted or channeled cylinder which rises high from the base, and the capital, the uppermost member which crowns the shaft and takes the weight or its share of the weight of what rests on it (a portico supported by a line of columns) But column is also applicable to a monument or memorial fashioned in the manner of an architectural column (the most conspicuous object in the whole churchyard, a broken column of white marble, on a pedestal—Mary Fitt) By extension the term is also applicable to something that suggests a column especially in shape (the wind sent columns of smoke into the tenement—N. Y. Times) or in use or structure (the spinal column) Sometimes the suggestion is remote and the term is applied to anything that is long and relatively narrow (the columns of a newspaper page) (a column of figures) (a column of infantry) Pilaster, though used with reference to a supporting member of a piece of furniture, is chiefly employed with reference to an architectural member which in function is a pier (see pier under BUTTRESS) but which in design and treatment resembles a column. In this latter sense pilaster implies engagement or attachment to a wall and suggests a rectangular rather than cylindrical form.

pilot vb steer, *guide, lead, engineer

Ana direct, manage, *conduct, control: *handle, manipulate pimple *abscess, boil, furuncle, carbuncle, pustule pinch vb *steal, pilfer, filch, purloin, lift, snitch, swipe, cop

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

pinch n *juncture, pass, exigency, emergency, contingency, strait, crisis

Ana *difficulty, hardship, rigor, vicissitude pinchbeck adj *counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, sham, pseudo, phony pinched *haggard, cadaverous, worn, careworn, wasted Ana gaunt, scrawny, skinny, angular, rawboned (see LEAN adj)

Con *strong, sturdy, stout, stalwart: robust, *healthy pinch hitter *substitute, supply, locum tenens, alternate, understudy, double, stand-in pine vb *long, yearn, hanker, hunger, thirst

Ana crave, covet, *desire: languish, enervate (see corresponding adjectives at LANGUID) pinnacle *summit, peak, apex, acme, climax, culmination, meridian, zenith, apogee pious *devout, religious, pietistic, sanctimonious

Ana *holy, sacred, divine, religious: worshiping, adoring, reverencing, venerating, revering (see REVERE): fervent, ardent, fervid (see IMPASSIONED)

Ant impious

piquant *pungent, poignant, racy, spicy, snappy

Ana *incisive, trenchant, cutting, biting, clear-cut

Ant bland —Con *insipid, flat, banal, jejune, inane pique n *offense, resentment, umbrage, dudgeon, huff

Ana annoyance, vexation, irking or irk (see corresponding verbs at ANNOY): irritation, exasperation, provocation (see corresponding verbs at IRRITATE)

pique vb 1 *provoke, excite, stimulate, quicken, galvanize

Ana *stir, rouse, arouse: prick, punch (see PERFORATE): kindle, ignite (see LIGHT vb)

2 *pride, plume, preen

pirate, freebooter, buccaneer, privateer, corsair basically mean one who sails in search of plunder. Pirate suggests a person or a ship or its crew that without a commission from an established civilized state cruises about in quest of ships to plunder. Since pirate in this sense is seldom used of contemporary life, the word has been extended to name one who wanders over a wide territory in search of plunder (a band of 400 desert pirates . . . raided the bazaar section and fled back across the river with their loot—Time) or one who infringes upon a right legally restricted to another (English books published by American pirates) (pirates of wavelengths in radio) or one known for predatory business practices (now my grandfather there who made the money . . . was a hard-boiled man of business. From your point of view he was a pirate—Edmund Wilson) Freebooter often suggests a maritime plunderer who pursues his occupation without the excuse that his country is at war and then differs from pirate only in its connotations of membership in a less closely organized band and of use of less violent methods (English freebooters who made life merry hell on the high seas for Spanish galleons waddling home from the Americas heavy-laden with gold—Dodge) In extended use freebooter is often applied to one who seizes rights, privileges, and property on a large scale without regard to the restraints of law or of order (many empire builders have been mere freebooters) (an era of comparably good feeling and incomparably good pickings. He took things easy, and his fellow freebooters took almost everything easily—Hodding Carter) Buccaneer, primarily applied to early French residents of Haiti, is more generally used of these people and others who preyed, sometimes with the tacit consent of their own governments, on Spanish ships and settlements in the New World (in the reign of Charles II, the buccaneers of the West Indian Islands were in the heyday of their romantic glory, as the unofficial maintainers of England's quarrels along the Spanish Main—Trevelyan)

The term is often extended to an unscrupulous adventurer (as in business or politics); in such use it need not be wholly disparaging but does regularly imply disregard of the rules observed by ordinary men (one of the great building enterprises of the famous buccaneer out of which he is reputed to have made many millions—Strunsky) (there still exist outright buccaneers, men who will steal anything that isn't tied down—Sat. Review) Privateer and corsair primarily apply to a ship privately owned but commissioned by its government (as in the 17th and 18th centuries) to prey upon other ships, usually those of an enemy, but in practice either term may designate a ship, its commander, or one of its crew. Corsair is applied chiefly to a ship, a commander, or a sailor of North African origin. Neither term has extensive extended use, but when so used they are quite distinct: privateer then applies to one doing in a private capacity what would normally be undertaken by a public official (illegal [wire] taps by law enforcers and privateers continued unprosecuted—Westin) but corsair attributes fury and rapacious cruelty to the one so-called (corsairs among the reptiles—Swinton) (had lately attacked, in corsair fashion, the Greek philosophers and had disembowelled Plato, Aristotle, and the rest of them, to his complete satisfaction—Norman Douglas) pirouette vb *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl pitch vb 1 hurl, fling, cast, *throw, toss, sling Ana heave, *lift, raise, hoist: *move, drive, impel 2 *plunge, dive Ana *fall, drop, sink: *descend: *jump, leap, spring piteous *pitiful, pitiable Ana imploring, supplicating, entreating, beseeching (see BEG): *melancholy, doleful, dolorous, plaintive pith *substance, purport, gist, burden, core Ana *center, nucleus, heart, focus: spirit, *soul pithy summary, compendious, *concise, terse, succinct, laconic Ana sententious, pregnant, meaningful, *expressive: *brief, short Con flutulent, *inflated, tumid, turgid: prolix, diffuse, *wordy, verbose pitiable 1 piteous, *pitiful Ana sad, depressed, dejected, melancholy (see corresponding nouns at SADNESS): forlorn, hopeless, despairing, desperate, *despondent 2 despicable, *contemptible, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby

Ana *miserable, wretched: deplorable, lamentable (see corresponding verbs at DEPLORE) pitiful, piteous, pitiable are comparable but not always interchangeable when they mean arousing or deserving pity or compassion. Pitiful applies especially to what actually excites pity or, sometimes, commiseration because it is felt to be deeply pathetic (their distress was pitiful) (a long line of pitiful refugees) (her face looked pale and extinguished. . . She struck Archer, of a sudden, as a pathetic and even pitiful figure—Wharton) But pitiful may apply to something meriting pity or commiseration less as pathetic than as contemptible, especially in its inadequacy (a pitiful attempt at housekeeping) (a pitiful wage scale) Piteous implies not so much an effect on the observer as a quality in the thing that excites pity; thus, a cry is piteous if it implores or demands attention or pity; it is pitiful only if it actually excites pity; one may scorn a piteous appeal, but it would be a contradiction in terms to scorn a pitiful appeal (Cashel cast a glance round, half piteous, half desperate, like a hunted animal—Shaw) Pitiable (see also CONTEMPTIBLE) may be preferred to pitiful when a contemptuous commiseration is implied, but contempt may be weakly or strongly connoted (that pitiable husk of a man who a hundred years ago was a familiar figure in its streets, a shadow of his former insolence and splendor—Lucas) (felt a tender pity . . . mixed with shame for having made her pitiable—Malamud) Ana touching, *moving, pathetic, affecting: *tender, compassionate, responsive, sympathetic Ant cruel

pittance *ration, allowance, dole pity *sympathy, compassion, commiseration, condolence, ruth, empathy Ana *sadness, melancholy, dejection, depression: *pathos, poignancy: *charity, mercy, clemency, lenity pivotal *central, focal Ana *essential, cardinal, vital: important, significant, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE): capital, principal, *chief placate vb *pacify, appease, mollify, propitiate, conciliate Ant enrage —Con *anger, infuriate, incense, madden: *stir, arouse, rouse: *provoke, excite, stimulate, pique place n Place, position, location, situation, site, spot, station are comparable when they mean the point or portion of space occupied by or chosen for a thing. Place, the most general of these terms, carries as its basic implication the idea of extension in space, though often with no clear connotation of how great or how small that extent is; in some use it comes very close to space in meaning (he passed the flaming bounds of Place and Time—Gray) but it more usually implies a limited, though not always clearly defined, extent of space (the place where we shall meet) (the place where they were born) (the cardplayers changed their places several times during the evening) Position is capable of abstract as well as concrete use and therefore may be employed whether the thing referred to is immaterial or material, ideal or actual, or invisible or visible; it usually also implies place in relation to something in particular (a point has definite position but no extent in space) (an instrument to find the position of an invisible target) (the 7th regiment took up its position on the left flank) (the blots of shade and flakes of light upon the countenances of the group changed shape and position endlessly—Hardy) (she dropped forks into their appointed positions with disdain—Bennett) Location is used in a concrete sense implying a fixed but not necessarily a clearly definite place for something or sometimes a person; it may refer to the place as found or as usable as well as to the place actually occupied by a thing (this is a most desirable location for your factory) (he knows the location of every house in the town built before 1800) (they visited Windsor. Mr. Beck said that if he had such a location he should always live there—Besant & Rice) Situation may differ from location in being more specific about the character of the surroundings (this is the best situation for the house, for the land is high and dry) (the situation of this camp was chosen with respect to its healthfulness and its nearness to the city) (not a place upon earth might be so happy as America. Her situation is remote from all the wrangling world—Paine) Site, though close to situation in many ways, carries a clearer reference to the land on which something specific (as a building, a group of buildings, or a town) is built (every ruined village on the road stands on the site of an ancient city—J. L. Stephens) (you may derive amusement from the historians when they . . . explain how Oxford and Cambridge . . . came to be chosen for sites—Quiller-Couch) (the site for the factory has been well selected) (the hill, with its view of the lake, affords excellent sites for summer cottages) Spot, only in an extended sense, implies a particular place, clearly defined in extent, which may be occupied or occupiable by a person or thing or may be the scene of an occurrence or activity; the word carries a stronger implication of restricted space than of its particular use (it is one of the pleasantest spots in the Adirondacks) (we have found just the spot for the picnic) (he said he wouldn't move from the spot) (the spot where the corpse was found) (there was one spot in Rome which was calm amid all tumults—Farrar) Station implies the place where a person or sometimes a thing stands or is set to stand; it usually carries an implication of accepted responsibility (as in performance of duty or participation in a game) (waiters at their stations in the dining room) (every vessel in the squadron has its station) (the crew went to their battle stations)

Ana *locality, vicinity, district: region, tract, *area, zone: *field, territory, province

placid *calm, tranquil, serene, peaceful, halcyon

Ana imperturbable, nonchalant, *cool, collected, composed: gentle, mild, lenient, smooth (see SOFT): *steady, equable, even, constant

Ant choleric (of persons): ruffled (of things) plague vb pester, tease, tantalize, harry, harass, *worry, annoy

Ana gall, fret, chafe (see ABRASE): *bait, badger, hector, hound, ride: torment, *afflict, try

Con *relieve, mitigate, lighten, assuage, alleviate plain adj 1 plane, flat, *level, even, smooth, flush

Ant solid

2 clear, distinct, obvious, *evident, manifest, patent, apparent, palpable

Ana *clear, lucid, perspicuous: *explicit, express, definite, specific, categorical

Ant abstruse

3 Plain, homely, simple, unpretentious are comparable when they mean devoid of whatever embellishes or makes for superficial beauty. Plain stresses lack of anything (as ornamentation, complexity, extraneous matter, or strongly marked characteristics) likely to attract attention (had no eccentricity even to take him out of the common run; he was just a good, dull, honest, plain man—Maugham) (a plain two-story frame house) Additionally it may suggest elegance (his brown stockings . . . were of a fine texture; his shoes and buckles, too, though plain, were trim—Dickens) or frugality (a plain skirt of serviceable gray flannel) or, with reference to personal appearance, lack of positive characteristics, and then contrasts with beautiful but without implying positive ugliness (was not a plain woman, and she might have been very pretty still—Glasgow) In reference to houses, furniture, food, and other elements of domesticity, homely sometimes suggests homey and may indicate comfortable informality without ostentation (his secluded wife ever smiling and cheerful, his little comfortable lodgings, snug meals, and homely evenings, had all the charms of novelty and secrecy—Thackeray) It may connote warmth and simplicity (a book-learned language, wholly remote from anything personal, native, or homely—Cather) With reference to appearance homely in American but not usually in British usage often falls between plain and ugly (she was certainly not bad-looking now and she could never have been so homely as she imagined—Edmund Wilson) Simple may occasionally differ slightly from plain in implying choice rather than compulsive circumstance (what was then called the simple life . . . is recognizable as the austere luxury of a very cultivated poet—Repllier) (a monk of Lindisfarne, so simple and lowly in temper that he traveled on foot on his long mission journeys—J. R. Green) Unpretentious, stressing lack of vanity or affectation, may praise a person but depreciate a possession (an unpretentious family doctor without the specialist's curt loftiness) (an unpretentious and battered old car)

Ana *ugly, ill-favored, unsightly, hideous; barren, *bare, bald: unembellished, unadorned, undecorated, unornamented, ungarnished (see corresponding affirmative verbs at ADORN)

Ant lovely

4 *frank, candid, open

Ana forthright, *straightforward, aboveboard: blunt, *bluff: *sincere, unfeigned plaintive dolorous, doleful, *melancholy, lugubrious, rueful

Ana pensive, reflective, meditative, *thoughtful: lamenting, deploring (see DEPLORE): *pitiful, piteous plait *weave, knit, crochet, braid, tat

plan n Plan, design, plot, scheme, project, as nouns, denote a proposed method of doing or making something or of achieving a given end, and as verbs, to devise such a method. Plan, in its widest sense, regularly implies mental formulation of the method (plan a trip to Europe) (make plans for the future of their children) (plans for an expansion of one's business) (she had her plan clearly in her head, with every detail . . . distinct—Gibbons) (it is a basic part of industrial technology that planned obsolescence should be built into every unit—Pohl) In a narrower sense, the terms may imply a graphic representation of such a method (as by a mechanical drawing, a chart, a sketch, or a layout) (an architect's set of plans) (plan a garden) (the basement of St. Katherine's Dock House is vast in extent and confusing in its plan—Conrad) Design (see also INTENTION) adds to plan an emphasis on intention (as artistic or divine intention) in the disposition of individual members or details, often thereby suggesting a definite pattern; since it is used frequently in reference to a completed work, it often implies reference to the degree in which order, harmony, or integrity have been achieved in spite of diversity in the parts, or in which there is the beauty that results from unity in variety (it . . . like most architecture erected since the Gothic age, was a compilation rather than a design—Hardy) (the most wonderful and delicate design composed entirely of flowers—Dahl) (knows how to design a part so that it develops and acquires momentum in performance—Atkinson) (a curious woman, whose dresses always looked as if they had been designed in a rage—Wilde) Plot (see also PLOT n 2; SKETCH vb) usually connotes a laying out in clearly distinguished and carefully proportioned sections or divisions, and attention to proper placing and due relation of the parts, and to scale. It is found chiefly in technical use, such as that of surveying, where it suggests a ground plan (plot a tract of land) or in literature, where it refers to a fundamental design which the action of a drama or narrative follows (there is plenty of action in this play, but no plot) (I cannot understand the sharp distinction some clever theorists make between story and plot. A plot is merely the pattern on which the story is arranged—Maugham) (in neatly plotted and tightly hedged domains of the corporate imperium, the freedom to adventure is gone—W. H. Hamilton) Scheme has nearly lost its early implication of a diagram except in some technical senses where it suggests tabulation more often than outline drawing (the rhyme scheme of a Shakespearean sonnet) Nevertheless, the word often suggests, more than plan does, system and careful choice or ordering of details (work out a scheme for the distribution of war refugees) (she seldom schemed, but when she did scheme, her plans showed . . . the comprehensive strategy of a general—Hardy) The terms often connote, singly or in combination, self-delusion, craftiness, or self-seeking on the part of the agent <he doesn't scheme and twist things about trying to get the best of someone else—Anderson>  Project comes close to scheme except in its connotations. Sometimes it suggests enterprise; sometimes, imaginative scope or vision; sometimes, mere extensiveness <sanguine schemes, ambitious projects, pleased me less—Wordsworth> <such were my projects for the city's good—Browning> <I projected, and drew up a plan for the union—Franklin> <although his health was rapidly failing, he projected a new book—Dinsmore>

Ana *intention, intent, purpose: *idea, conception, notion: *chart, map, graph: diagram, outline, sketch (see under SKETCH vb)

plan vb design, plot, scheme, project (see under PLAN n)

Ana propose, purpose, *intend: *sketch, outline, diagram, delineate plane adj plain, flat, *level, even, smooth, flush

Ant solid

plank *paragraph, verse, article, clause, count

plastic, pliable, pliant, ductile, malleable, adaptable are applied to things and to persons regarded as material susceptible of being modified in form or nature. Something plastic has the quality (as of wax, clay, or plaster) of being soft enough to be molded or to receive an impression yet capable of hardening into a final form  <the language at the period during which the Bible was being translated into English was in its most plastic stage—Lowes> <life is plastic: it will assume any shape you choose to put on it—Gogarty> Something pliable or pliant has the quality (as of willow twigs) of being supple enough to be easily bent or manipulated and therefore yielding without resistance. Pliable, in extended use, usually suggests the imposition of or submission to another's will <I flatter myself that I have some influence over her. She is pliable—Hardy> <I've always been a pliable sort of person, and I let the ladies guide me—Upton Sinclair> <he was criticized as being too pliable, too eager to please—Beverly Smith> Pliant, on the other hand, suggests flexibility rather than obedience <art which is alive and pliant in the hands of men—Quiller-Couch> <ready to be used or not used, picked up or cast aside . . . , pliant to fate like a reed to the wind—Goudge> Something ductile has the quality of a tensile metal (as copper) of being tenacious enough to be permanently drawn out or extended, or of water, of being made to flow through channels. In extended use ductile often approaches plastic and pliant but it may have distinctive connotations directly derived from its literal senses, such as quick responsiveness (as distinguished from submissiveness) to influences that would form, guide, or fashion <verse . . . is easier to write than prose . . . Mr. Shaw would have found his story still more ductile in the meter of Hiawatha—Quiller-Couch>  Sometimes fluidity within bounds is connoted <smooth, ductile, and even, his fancy must flow—Cowper> Something malleable is literally or figuratively capable of being beaten or pressed into shape, especially after being conditioned (as by heating) <tempers . . . rendered pliant and malleable in the fiery furnace of domestic tribulation—Irving> <finds a sort of malleable mind in front of him that he can play with as he will—Masefield> Something adaptable is capable of being modified or of modifying itself to suit other conditions, other needs, or other uses. As applied to persons the term implies sometimes a pliant, but more often an accommodating, disposition and a readiness to make one's habits, one's opinions, and one's wishes correspond to those of one's present society or environment <he was an adaptable person. He had yielded to Joyce's training in being quietly instead of noisily disagreeable—Sinclair Lewis> <anarchism has always been an elastic and adaptable faith, and looking round for a suitable machinery to replace state centralization—Connolly>

Ana flexible, supple, *elastic, resilient: tractable, amenable (see OBEDIENT)

Con rigid, *stiff, inflexible platitude *commonplace, truism, bromide, cliché

Ana banality, inanity, vapidity, insipidity (see corresponding adjectives at INSIPID); mawkishness, sentimentality (see corresponding adjectives at SENTIMENTAL) plaudits *applause, acclamation, acclaim

Ana cheering (see APPLAUD) plausible, credible, believable, colorable, specious are comparable when they mean capable of impressing the observer, auditor, or reader as truly or genuinely possessing the quality or character that is set forth or claimed. A thing or sometimes a person is plausible that is capable of winning acceptance, approval, or belief by its or his apparent possession of qualities which make it or him seem pleasing, genuine, or reasonable at first sight or hearing; the word need not definitely imply a false outside, or an intention to deceive, or a lack of soundness, but it usually connotes such a possibility, even though it also clearly suggests an ingratiating or mentally satisfying character  <the most plausible and persuasive confidence man of his day—S. H. Adams> <that is a perfectly intelligible position, and it is plausible to the last degree—Lowes> <he learns that what is wanted is not an interesting or plausible story, but exact facts—Notes and Queries on Anthropology> A thing or less often a person is credible that seems to be worthy of belief or of being credited, sometimes because of plausibility, but more often because of its or his support by known facts or by sound reasoning   <right reason makes that which they say appear credible—Hobbes>  A thing that is credible because it comes within the range of possibility or probability, or because it is in accordance with other facts that are known, is believable <his undergraduate characters . . . are all alive and believable. With his older characters he is less convincing—Havighurst>  <demand for . . . believable explanations—Fearing> A thing is colorable which at least on its face or outwardly seems true, just, or valid or which is capable to some extent of being sustained or justified <no colorable evidence has as yet been presented in support of this theory> <the Chinese were given . . . a colorable excuse for joining in the fight. The excuse, of course, was much more than colorable; it was morally and practically ideal—Purcell> A thing or, less often, a person is specious that is outwardly or apparently attractive, beautiful, valid, or sincere but that is inwardly or actually the reverse in character. Specious is the only one of these terms that clearly implies dissimulation or fraud or deceit or hypocrisy <specious picturesqueness> <specious piety>  <they sanctified the worse cause with the specious pretext of zeal for the furtherance of the best—Cowper> <effusions of fine sentiments about brotherly love that are only a specious mask for envy and hatred of riches and success—Babbitt)

Ana smooth, bland, politic, diplomatic, *suave: likely, *probable, possible: unctuous, *fulsome, slick, oily play n 1 sport, disport, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol (see under PLAY vb 1)

Ana enjoyment, delectation, *pleasure, delight: amusement, diversion, recreation, entertainment (see under AMUSE): *athletics, sports, games

Ant work

2 *fun, jest, sport, game

Ant earnest

3 *room, berth, elbowroom, leeway, margin, clearance play vb 1 Play, sport, disport, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol can all as verbs mean to engage in exercise or other activity as a pleasure or amusement, and as nouns mean exercise or activities engaged in for the sake of pleasure or amusement. Play, the most general of these terms, suggests an opposition to work; like its antithesis it usually implies activity and often vigorous activity of body or mind, but it emphasizes the absence of any end except that of amusement, diversion, recreation, or pure enjoyment (children play for hours at keeping house) (play chess) (play tennis) (no play is interesting to me unless it effects work, and no work is possible to me unless it possesses the amusement of play—Ellis) (they had been . . . transformed from a dejected, downcast, docile, uninterested people, who could not even play, into one which was healthy, alert—Heiser) (playing at one job and then another, too charged with impatience to plug at chores—Mailer) Sport and disport suggest a complete release not only from work but from seriousness; the terms imply indulgence in something which cheers, makes merry, or serves as a pastime (if all the year were playing holidays, to sport would be as tedious as as to work—Shak.) (sport that wrinkled Care derides—Milton) (see the children sport upon the shore—Wordsworth) (all the freedom and grace of healthy young animals, sporting in the shallows or playing in the warm sands—Beaglehole) (we make ourselves fools, to disport ourselves—Shak.) (a tiny fish disporting himself with me in the tub—Beebe) Frolic suggests more gaiety, more levity, and more spontaneity than any of the preceding terms; it often is used in reference to the lighthearted, joyous movements of children or young animals at play, but it also suggests the pastimes, antics, or pranks of those who have thrown off all care (I come to frolic with you, and to cheer your drooping souls—Ford & Dekker) (children were allowed to frolic around on these piles of material to their heart's content—Talbot) (their sedateness is as comical as their frolic—Meredith) Rollick, infrequent as a noun and used chiefly in the form rollicking, adds to frolic implications of exuberance in gaiety and of reveling and therefore is used especially in reference to youths or young adults (rollicking blades) (<"Q." appears as a rollicking humorist. . . . He rollicks, perhaps, a little too laboriously—Pall Mall Gazette) Romp suggests the boisterous care-free frolicking of children, of rough boys, and of tomboys; it usually connotes running or racing in play (first-to-sixth-graders . . . romp on the playground—Cabell Phillips) (I have been having a romp with my godson—Braddon) Gambol suggests the leaping and skipping characteristic of lambs and young children; it comes close to frolic, but carries a stronger suggestion of joy in movement (Gilda rose as limber as a 16-year-old, and gambolled the full length of the room—Purdy) (where be your gibes now? your gambols? your songs? your flashes of merriment . . .?—Shak.) (their pygmy king, and little fairy queen, in circling dances gambolled on the green—Pope)

Ana divert, entertain, recreate, *amuse: *trifle, toy, dally 2 *act, impersonate

Ana feign, simulate, counterfeit, *assume player *actor, performer, mummer, mime, mimic, thespian, impersonator, trouper playful, frolicsome, sportive, roguish, waggish, impish, mischievous mean given to play, jests, or tricks or indicative of such a disposition or mood. Playful stresses either lighthearted gaiety or merriment (playful children) (in a playful mood) (a confiding, playful little animal, whom one . . . trained to do tricks—Sackville-West) or a lack of seriousness or earnestness (his words were serious, but in his eyes there was a playful gleam) (his pen was more playful than caustic—Williams & Pollard) Frolicsome heightens the implications of playful; it carries a stronger suggestion of friskiness or prankishness or irresponsible merriment (as frolicsome as a bird upon a tree, or a breeze that makes merry with the leaves—Hawthorne) (frolicsome sailors returning from their cruises . . . paraded through the streets—Nevins & Commager) Sportive carries a stronger implication of jesting or of levity than either of the preceding words; the term sometimes implies merely excess of animal spirits, but it usually connotes a desire to evoke or provoke laughter (three generations of serious and of sportive writers wept and laughed over the venality of the senate—Macaulay) Roguish not only heightens the implications of sportive, but it suggests an engaging naughtiness or slyness (<"I don't think I shall want anything else when we've got a little garden; and I knew Aaron would dig it for us," she went on with roguish triumph—George Eliot) (not a pretty girl or a roguish buck in the lot—Cooke) Waggish suggests a less engaging sportiveness than roguish and one less delicate in its character; usually also the term carries a stronger suggestion of jocoseness or of jocularly (with all his overbearing roughness there was a strong dash of waggish good humor at bottom—Irving) Impish adds to roguish a hint of elfish, malicious mockery (teasing . . . with impish laughter half suppressed—Hardy) (he also displays impish ingenuity in picking his examples of error from the most dignified sources—Brit. Book News) Mischievous combines the implications of frolicsome and impish (took a secret and mischievous pleasure in the bewilderment of her attendants—Stafford) Although it may imply the doing of mischief (see mischief under INJURY 1) or the causing of an injury to others it commonly retains some suggestion of mingled playfulness and malice (the three mischievous, dark-eyed witches, who lounged in the stern of that comfortable old island gondola, . . . were a parcel of wicked hoydens, bent on mischief, who laughed in your face—Melville) (the little buried eyes still watching . . . in that mischievous, canny way, and . . . hatching out some further unpleasantness or scandal—Dahl) Often it suggests little more than thoughtless indifference to the possible effects of one's sports, tricks, or practical jokes (a garden ruined by mischievous boys) (she . . . was . . . waked by Meta, standing over her with a sponge, looking very mischievous—Yonge)

Ana gay, sprightly, *lively: *merry, blithe, jocund, jolly, jovial: mirthful, gleeful, hilarious (see corresponding nouns at MIRTH)

plea 1 *apology, apologia, excuse, pretext, alibi

Ana explanation, justification, rationalization (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN): defense, vindication (see corresponding verbs at MAINTAIN)

2 *prayer, suit, petition, appeal

Ana entreaty, supplication, imploring, beseeching, begging (see corresponding verbs at BEG) plead vb pray, sue, petition, appeal (see under PRAYER)

Ana entreat, implore, supplicate, beseech, *beg: intercede, mediate, intervene, *interpose

Con bestow, confer, present, *give: *grant, vouchsafe, accord pleasant, pleasing, agreeable, grateful, gratifying, welcome are comparable when they mean highly acceptable to or delighting the mind or the senses. Pleasant and pleasing are often indistinguishable; however, pleasant usually imputes a quality to the object to which it is applied, and pleasing suggests merely the effect of the object upon one (a pleasant garden) (she liked everything to be tidy and pleasant and comfortable about her—Gibbons) (a pleasing arrangement of colors) (the thought of gazing on life's Evening Star makes of ugly old age a pleasing prospect—L. P. Smith) Agreeable implies harmony with one's tastes or likings (an agreeable taste) (if I was obliged to define politeness, I should call it the art of making oneself agreeable—Smollett) (replied with an agreeable, cultured throaty intonation—F. M. Ford) Grateful carries the implications of both pleasing and agreeable; in addition it stresses the satisfaction or relief afforded the senses or, somewhat less often, the mind (they . . . lay down on the clean grass under the grateful shade of the tall cottonwoods—Cather) (only occasional voices from the road outside came to disturb the grateful sense of quiet and seclusion—Archibald Marshall) Gratifying is applied chiefly to what affords mental pleasure to the individual by satisfying his desires, hopes, conscience, or vanity (the reviews of his book were very gratifying) (the gratifying feeling that our duty has been done—Gilbert) (can satisfy their lust for power in a most gratifying way—Huxley) Welcome even more than pleasing stresses the pleasure or satisfaction given by the thing to which it is applied; it often suggests prior need or an answer to one's longings (the explorers found fresh fruit and vegetables a welcome addition to their diet) (the news was most welcome) (revivals offered welcome interludes in pioneer life—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.)

Ana charming, attractive, alluring (see under ATTRACT vb): *soft, gentle, mild, balmy, smooth

Ant unpleasant: distasteful; harsh

please vb Please, gratify, delight, rejoice, gladden, tickle, regale mean to make happy or to be a cause of happiness. Please usually implies an agreement with one's wishes, tastes, or aspirations and a happiness which ranges from mere content and the absence of grounds for displeasure to actual elation (the family was pleased with the daughter's marriage) (the aim of poetry is to please) (the suggestion did not please him) (he may apply himself . . . to feeding and protecting his family, but he no longer need strain to please—Edmund Wilson) (fangleless perceptions which will please the conservative power—Mailer) Gratify (compare gratifying under PLEASANT) suggests an even stronger measure of satisfaction than please and is normally positive in its implication of pleasure (it gratifies us to imagine that . . . we have reached a point on the road of progress beyond that vouchsafed to our benighted predecessors—Ellis) (it gratified him to have his wife wear jewels; it meant something to him—Cather) (he had a sense of humor in his peculiar quiet way, but he never gratified it by proofs of the obvious—Theodore Sturgeon) Delight stresses the emotional rather than the intellectual quality of the reaction, though the latter is often also implied; it suggests intense, lively pleasure that is not only keenly felt but usually vividly expressed in outward signs (O, flatter me; for love delights in praises—Shak.) (the girl was embarrassed and delighted by the effusive attention that followed—Hervey) (she was as delighted as if he had given her a Christmas present all wrapped in shining paper—MacInnes) Rejoice implies a happiness that exceeds bounds and reveals itself openly (as in smiles, in song, in festivities, or in enthusiastic effort) (rejoice, you men of Angiers, ring your bells—Shak.) (Hendrik worked, rejoicing in the strength that God had given him—Cloete) Gladden sometimes is indistinguishable from rejoice except in rarely suggesting excess of emotion and in being usually transitive (a small pleantry frankly uttered by a patron, gladdens the heart of the dependent—Irving) It often, however, connotes a raising of the spirits, or a cheering or consoling in depression or grief (the comrades of the dead girl assemble in the temple on certain days to gladden her spirit with songs and dances—Hearn) Tickle and regale involve the idea of delight, but they are often less dignified in their connotations. Tickle implies such pleasurable sensations as tingles and thrills or suggests an almost physical gratification (food that tickles the palate) Sometimes, with reference to physical tickling, it suggests provocation of laughter (the mimic court of justice in the orchard tickled him immensely—Deland) (the idea of himself as a parson tickles him: he looks down at the black sleeve on his arm, and then smiles slyly—Shaw) Regale connotes huge enjoyment or a feasting upon what gives pleasure (Mr. Sycamore was regaling himself with the discomfiture of Lady Charlotte—H. G. Wells) (would always regale them generously with madeira, sherry or whiskey, rich cake, and richer stories—Chapman-Huston)

Ana *satisfy, content: beguile, *while, wile

Ant displease: anger: vex pleasing *pleasant, agreeable, grateful, gratifying, welcome Ana winning (see GET); charming, attractive, alluring, enchanting (see under ATTRACT)

Ant displeasing: repellent

pleasure, delight, joy, delectation, enjoyment, fruition denote the agreeable emotion which accompanies the possession, acquisition, or expectation of something good or greatly desired. Pleasure so strongly implies a feeling of satisfaction or gratification that it sometimes carries no implication of visible happiness or actual gladness (faintly unpleasant pleasures being atoned for by the dull unalleviated pain of guilt—Styron) (he owned over forty pairs of boots, and he had the same pleasure in handling them that jewels give—Bemelmans) Often, however, the term suggests an excitement or exaltation of the senses or of the mind that implies positive happiness or gladness (when these wild ecstasies shall be matured into a sober pleasure—Wordsworth) (a great work of art always gives pleasure) (she didn't want to ride on the roller coaster . . . her ideas of pleasure were more sophisticated—Cheever) Delight carries a stronger implication of liveliness, intensity, or obviousness in the satisfaction or gratification induced than pleasure and often suggests a less stable or enduring emotion (what pleasure the possession of my money could have afforded him I am unable to say; but . . . as it did give him evident delight I was not sorry that I had parted with it so readily—Kipling) (the errors he made in pitch and in language would be so amusing that the geishas would giggle with delight—Mailer) (next to their wondrous delight in each other came their delighted wonder at earth itself—Theodore Sturgeon) Joy is often used in place of pleasure and still more often in place of delight. It is, however, especially appropriate when a deep-rooted, rapturous emotion is implied or when the happiness is so great as to be almost painful in its intensity (and all its aching joys are now no more, and all its dizzy raptures—Wordsworth)

⟨it expressed her happiness, relieved the pressure of her joy at being alive—Rose Macaulay⟩ ⟨glad to be free, proud too . . . of stepping this famous pavement, joy of a kind, cheap, tinselly, if you like, but all the same rapture, flushed their faces—Woolf⟩ Delectation and enjoyment differ in the main from the other words of this group in denoting the state of mind or the sensuous or emotional reactions of one who takes pleasure, delight, or joy in something. But delectation often carries a strong connotation of amusement, diversion, or entertainment that gives occasion for delight ⟨her oddities afforded him the utmost delectation⟩ ⟨a superb eclipse of the sun, providentially arranged for the delectation of the Eastern seaboard cities—F. L. Allen⟩ ⟨revived ancient, joyful customs for the delectation of islanders and visitors—Gruening⟩ Enjoyment, on the other hand, usually implies an attitude or a circumstance or a favorable response to a stimulus that tends to make one gratified or happy ⟨he gave himself up to the vigorous enjoyment of his pipe for a silent minute or two—Conrad⟩ ⟨that ruling, however, has not entirely dimmed lawmakers' enjoyment of a ripping good time—Armbrister⟩ ⟨just as backbiting and gossip could be a source of enjoyment, so could friendliness and the exchange of . . . compliments—Farrell⟩ Fruition has become increasingly rare in its earlier sense of pleasure in possession or of enjoyment in attainment ⟨the sweet fruition of an earthly crown—Marlowe⟩ ⟨in love we must deserve nothing, or the fine bloom of fruition is gone—Meredith⟩ In extended use realization or fulfillment is stressed, though there is still some suggestion of accompanying pleasure ⟨how mature one has to be before learning . . . that growth is more desirable than fruition—Lucas⟩

Ana *happiness, felicity, bliss: amusement, diversion, recreation, entertainment (see under AMUSE)

Ant displeasure: anger: vexation plebiscite *mandate, initiative, referendum pledge n Pledge, earnest, token, pawn, hostage are comparable when they denote something that is given or held as a sign of another's faith or intention to do what has been promised. Pledge, originally and still in some applications a technical legal term, applies in general to something handed over to another as a token ⟨bear her this jewel, pledge of my affection—Shak.⟩ or as security for the performance of an obligation or payment of a debt ⟨property of the debtor in the creditor's possession was held as a valid pledge—Harvard Law Review⟩ ⟨the pawnshop, where one waits nervously while the swarthy shrewd-eyed attendant squints contemptuously at the pledges one offers—Donn Byrne⟩ Earnest, basically the money or other thing of value given by a buyer to a seller to bind a bargain, in its extended sense applies to something which serves as a promise or assurance of more to come or which establishes a strong probability of it ⟨cutting off the heads of Empson and Dudley as an earnest of the great love he bare his people—Trevelyan⟩ ⟨it seemed to him a sort of earnest that Providence intended his rescue from worse consequences—George Eliot⟩ ⟨India must be granted her independence, as earnest to the subject peoples of the earth—Griswold⟩ Token (see also SIGN 1) applies to something given as a guaranty or proof of a person or thing's authority, authenticity, or good faith ⟨I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth—Gen 9:13⟩ ⟨from time to time said something . . . as a token of friendship—Stewart⟩ In specific concrete use token is applied to something which serves as a proof of an obligation, a right, a debt, or a payment; thus, a coinlike piece of metal sold by a transportation company for use as a ticket is usually called a token; coins or notes issued by some countries, states, or cities as currency at a nominal or face value above their real value but redeemable at their face value are collectively called tokens. Pawn retains in anthropological use an earlier broad equivalence to a security pledge and then applies to a person held in servitude pending settlement of a debt ⟨pnawns are debtors whose work serves as interest until the loan is repaid—Amer. Anthropologist⟩ In more general use pawn specifically refers to a personal chattel deposited as security for the money loaned on it by another, usually by a person called a pawnbroker whose business is the loaning of money on such security ⟨pledge and pawn were synonymous terms in the early common law. Modern usage tends to restrict the term pawn to the pledge of jewels and other personal chattels to pawnbrokers as security for small loans—Restatement of the Law of Security⟩ In extended use pawn often carries a suggestion of something held for a time and liable to redemption or withdrawal by the actual owner ⟨my life I never held but as a pawn to wage against thy enemies—Shak.⟩ ⟨I held what I inherited in thee, as pawn for that inheritance of freedom which thou hast sold—Shelley⟩ Hostage basically applies to a person handed over to another or kept by another as a guarantee of one's good or peaceable or submissive intentions or as a pledge until one's agreement or promise has been fulfilled ⟨hostages were taken in very large numbers from the civilian populations—Nazi Conspiracy and Aggression⟩ But sometimes the term is extended to other guarantees and pledges ⟨you know now your hostages: your uncle's word and my firm faith—Shak.⟩

Ana *guarantee, guaranty, security, surety, bond, bail

pledge vb *promise, engage, plight, covenant, contract

Ana bind, *tie: *commit, consign, confide, entrust

Ant abjure

plenary *full, complete, replete

Ant limited

plenteous *plentiful, ample, abundant, copious

Ana & Ant see those at PLENTIFUL

plentiful, plenteous, ample, abundant, copious denote in common more than adequate or sufficient yet not in excess. Something is plentiful or plenteous of which there is great or rich supply; plenteous is the more bookish term ⟨it is also a zone of plentiful food and therefore able to support an extensive fauna—Dowdeswell⟩ ⟨plenteous grace with Thee is found, grace to cleanse from ev'ry sin—Wesley⟩ Something is ample which is generously sufficient to satisfy a definite requirement ⟨ample apologies indeed for fifteen years of persecution—Macaulay⟩ ⟨their mother's fortune, though ample for her situation in life, could but ill supply the deficiency of his—Austen⟩ ⟨there would be an ample buffet available until the last guest left the premises—Lucius Beebe⟩ Something is abundant which is very plentiful or of which there is an unusually large supply ⟨his abundant vitality—Bennett⟩ ⟨the many small denominational colleges so abundant throughout the Middle West—G. P. Merrill⟩ Abundant sometimes implies profusion ⟨abundant beautiful bright tresses—Meredith⟩ ⟨we have lived in a broad and abundant land, and . . . we have made it flourish—Roosevelt⟩ Something is copious which is marked by great abundance; the term is especially applicable when emphasis is to be put on largeness of supply rather than fullness or richness. It is therefore not always interchangeable with the other words ⟨a copious supply of food⟩ ⟨there was a copious crop of potatoes this year⟩ ⟨copious eating and still more copious drinking—Huxley⟩ ⟨washed down with copious drafts of beer—Green Peyton⟩ In respect to language copious often implies profusion of words, richness of vocabulary, or fullness of information <declaimers of a copious vein—Berkeley> <French, English, or any other copious language—Hobbes> <be copious and distinct, and tell me a great deal of your mind—Johnson>

Ana fruitful, prolific (see FERTILE): sumptuous, opulent, *luxurious: *profuse, lavish, prodigal

Ant scanty, scant pleonasm *verbiage, redundancy, tautology, circumlocution, periphrasis pliable *plastic, pliant, ductile, malleable, adaptable

Ana lithe, limber, *supple: *elastic, resilient, springy, flexible: *compliant, acquiescent

Ant obstinate

pliant *plastic, pliable, ductile, malleable, adaptable

Ana see those at PLIABLE plight vb *promise, engage, pledge, covenant, contract plight n *predicament, dilemma, quandary, scrape, fix, jam, pickle

Ana situation, condition, *state, posture: *difficulty, rigor, hardship, vicissitude plot n 1 *plan, design, scheme, project

Ana *chart, map, graph

2 Plot, intrigue, machination, conspiracy, cabal are comparable when they mean a secret plan devised to entrap or ensnare others. Plot implies careful planning of details and usually an intent to accomplish an evil, mischievous, or treacherous end; the action may involve one or more devisers and a person, a group, a class, or a people as the victim <there is a plot against my life, my crown—Shak.> <the great Jesuit plot for the destruction of Protestant England—Crothers> <the conspirators roped into their scheme a whole network of the magnates. Nevers joined in the plot—Belloe> Intrigue implies more complicated scheming or maneuvering than plot and often the use of petty underhand methods in an atmosphere of duplicity; it more often implies an attempt to gain one's own ends through clandestine means (as in politics, in business, or in love) than (as plot frequently implies) an attempt to destroy, to betray, or to usurp power <Mr. Swift hath finely described that passion for intrigue, that love of secrecy, slander, and lying, which belongs to weak people, hangers-on of weak courts—Thackeray> <the party politicians forgot their good resolutions, and reverted to their familiar intrigues—H. G. Wells> <they had all stooped to folly and . . . here they were, alive, tanned, laughing, and like as not in some new intrigue with a waiter or a musician—Wouk> Machination, usually in the plural, imputes hostility or treachery to the makers; often, also, it suggests craftiness in devising or contriving annoyances, injuries, or evils. If these ideas are to be connoted, it may be applied to a plot, an intrigue, or any of the secret plans named by the words in this group <tortured by some black trouble of the soul, and given over to the machinations of his deadliest enemy—Hawthorne> <the devilish machinations of an enchanter masquerading as a pious hermit—Lowe> Conspiracy differs from plot chiefly in implying a combination of persons or groups as the devisers and agents and in being applied chiefly to a plot that involves treason or great treachery <these people he has been taking for granted are all part of an insidious conspiracy to undermine the world as he knows it—Edmund Wilson> <the conviction that World War I had been a crooked conspiracy of armament-manufacturers—A. J. P. Taylor> In technical legal use the word implies the doing of an unlawful act or the use of unlawful means in accomplishing a lawful end <monopoly . . . is conspiracy in restraint of trade, including under the term conspiracy all contracts and combinations entered into for the purpose of restraining trade—The Amer. Individual Enterprise System> <the company brought suit against the strike leaders, charging them with conspiracy to ruin the business—Amer. Guide Series: Conn.> Cabal applies usually to an intrigue in which a group combines to accomplish some end favorable to it but injurious or disastrous to the person or group, often, specifically, the government, affected <the cabal against Washington found supporters exclusively in the north—Bancroft> <the innate character of the cabal and its purposes roused resentments and antagonisms in Congress which compelled its adherents to abandon the move . . . and . . . the scheme collapsed—Fitzpatrick>

Ana contrivance, *device, contraption: maneuver, stratagem, *trick, ruse, artifice

3 sketch, outline, diagram, delineation, draft, tracing, blueprint (see under SKETCH vb)

plot vb 1 plan, design, scheme, project (see under PLAN n)

Ana fashion, fabricate, forge, form, shape, *make

2 *sketch, outline, diagram, delineate, draft, trace, blueprint

Ana create, *invent: chart, map, graph (see under CHART n)

ploy *trick, ruse, stratagem, maneuver, gambit, artifice, wile, feint pluck n *fortitude, grit, backbone, guts, sand

Ana *courage, spirit, mettle, resolution, tenacity: hardihood, audacity, *temerity plumb vb *fathom, sound plumb adj *vertical, perpendicular plume vb *pride, pique, preen

Ana *appreciate, value, prize plump *fleshy, stout, portly, rotund, chubby, fat, corpulent, obese

Ant cadaverous—Con *lean, spare, scrawny, skinny, lank, lanky: *haggard, pinched, wasted plunder vb *rob, rifle, loot, burglarize

Ana despoil, spoliage, sack, pillage, *ravage: *strip, denude, bare plunder n *spoil, booty, prize, loot, swag

Ana robbery, larceny, *theft plunge vb Plunge, dive, pitch are comparable when they mean to throw or cast oneself or to be thrown or cast forward or downward with force or impetuosity into or as if into deep water. Plunge carries a more obvious implication than the others of the force with which one throws oneself or is thrown, but it does not always suggest a penetration of deep water; it may imply entrance into any penetrable medium, especially one that suggests a being lost to view, or into a state or condition in which one is overwhelmed or immersed, or into a course which marks a deep descent, a complete change, or a distinct involvement <plunge bodily into the water after a forty-foot drop—Forester> <we are plunged once more into the war of nerves—Times Lit. Sup.> <he plunged into the crowd and was soon lost to view> <the singer drew breath and plunged into a new stanza—Henri> Dive, though it implies an action very similar to that indicated by plunge, usually suggests deliberation or, at least, consciousness of an aim, more skill in execution, and less heaviness and more grace; thus, "he dived into the sea" usually implies intent where "he plunged headlong into the sea" may suggest either intent, accident, or impulsion by some force <the gulls dive into the water for pieces of food> <an enormous water rat dived down from the bank—Powys> <"Clear out!" He raised his stick as he spoke. Katy shrieked, dived past him, and ran—Deland> <why not let a countable number of particles dive into it, and then weigh the tube?—Darrow> <she dove into the red pocket-book and, burrowing among the debris, came up at last with what she was after—Helen Howe> Pitch (see also THROW) is often used instead of plunge to imply a falling forward and downward usually without intent or design <he pitched headlong over the cliff> <he tripped on a root and pitched forward on his face> <my anxiety to own the ducks caused me to pitch into the water with all my clothes on—Wister> The term also is often used in reference to the alternate forward and backward plunging of a ship in a storm as distinguished from rolling or tossing from side to side <the passengers found the pitching of the ship more disquieting than the rolling> <the sea was rough and my heart pitched with the small motorboat—J. W. Brown>

Ana submerge, immerse, *dip: *throw, cast, fling, hurl: *push, thrust, shove, propel

plurality *majority plutocracy *oligarchy, aristocracy ply vb *handle, manipulate, wield, swing

Ana exercise, *practice, drill: operate, work, function (see ACT vb): manage, direct, control, *conduct pocket n *hole, hollow, cavity, void, vacuum poet, versifier, rhymer, rhymester, poetaster, bard, minstrel, troubadour denote a composer who uses metrical or rhythmical language as his medium. Poet is used in a generic sense and in several highly specific senses. In its generic sense it applies to any writer or maker of verse; in its specific senses it applies only to a composer of verse who in his composition exhibits qualities regarded as essential by the age or time or by the writer or speaker who uses the term. With all its variations in implications in these specific senses, poet usually stresses creative and expressive power as the prime essential, sometimes without clear reference to skill in constructing verses <every man, that writes in verse is not a Poet—Ben Jonson> <the Poet is chiefly distinguished from other men by a greater promptness to think and feel without immediate external excitement, and a greater power in expressing such thoughts and feelings—Wordsworth> Versifier may designate a composer who uses verse as his medium without reference to qualities thought of as essential to poetry. In contrast to poet, it implies the lack of such a quality or qualities  Rhymer and rhymester, once descriptive rather than depreciative, now tend to be even more definitely and consistently depreciatory than versifier in their implication of mediocrity or inferiority. Poetaster is a term of contempt applied to versifiers whose work is regarded as unimportant, trashy, or inane <there are always poetasters enough; but of great poets . . . there are never so many as not to leave room for . . . more—Julian Hawthorne> <indicative of the mistakes of poetasters and would-be poets rather than of real poets—Kilby> Bard basically applies to a tribal poet-singer (as among the ancient Celts) who composed verses praising heroes, chiefs, or warriors or recounting historical facts or traditions and who sang or recited them to the accompaniment of the harp or similar musical instrument. In extended use bard is a more or less romantic or florid synonym of poet used especially of one who writes impassioned, lyrical, or epic verse <compile in all the lyrical poetry of the last 150 years a list of half a dozen first-class or even second-class bards who wrote primarily to be sung—Quiller-Couch> Minstrel basically applies to a medieval public entertainer, often a strolling musician and mountebank, who sang songs (sometimes his own) to the accompaniment of a harp or other instrument and performed tricks; among its current extended applications is one in which it is close to bard in its implications, though it may place less emphasis on professional character and more on natural lyrical power <O black and unknown bards of long ago, how came your lips to touch the sacred fire? How, in your darkness, did you come to know the power and beauty of the minstrel's lyre?—J. W. Johnson> Troubadour applies historically to a type of poet-musician found chiefly in southern France and northern Italy, frequently a knightly amateur, who composed lyrics (often also the music) in the Provençal tongue, usually of an amatory character and characteristically in a complicated metrical pattern; in extended use, the word loses its suggestion of artifice and technical skill in versifying and is often employed in place of minstrel in its extended sense <known as a modern troubadour, for he wrote scores of verses for Irish folk tunes—Bridgman & Curtis> or it may specifically denote one who uses his skill in expression for the promotion of some cause <Mr. Bryan is one of the great troubadours . . . troubadouring is the thing he does best—E. G. Lowry> <I speak after my fancies, for I am a Troubadour, you know, and won the violet at Toulouse—Tennyson>

Ana *maker, creator, author: *writer, author, composer poetaster *poet, versifier, rhymer, rhymester, bard, minstrel, troubadour pogrom *massacre, slaughter, butchery, carnage poignancy *pathos, bathos poignant 1 *pungent, piquant, racy, spicy, snappy

Ana penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER): *sharp, keen, acute: *incisive, trenchant, cutting, biting, crisp Ant dull (reaction, sensation)

2 *moving, touching, pathetic, impressive, affecting

Ana exciting, stimulating, provoking (see PROVOKE): disturbing, agitating, perturbing (see DISCOMPOSE)

point vb *direct, aim, level, train, lay

Ana bend (see CURVE vb): *direct, address, devote: steer, pilot, engineer, *guide point of view, viewpoint, standpoint, angle, slant denote the position or attitude that determines which aspect of an object of contemplation is seen or presented. Point of view, viewpoint, and standpoint are often interchangeable, but point of view and viewpoint can suggest either a mental or a physical position and may permit the inference that there are other ways of looking at what is considered and therefore usually suggest lack of completeness in the vision, or one-sidedness in the views expressed or presented <great literature enables us to see with another man's eyes . . . but only when we abandon ourselves for the time to his point of view—Kilby> <the general shape of the galaxy and the point of view from which we are looking at it—B. J. Bok> <all will benefit from exposure to the fresh viewpoint which he presents—Harrison Brown> <describes his own method of photographing motor races, and gives hints on the choice of subjects and viewpoints—Kodak Abstract> Standpoint may have connotations which tend to distinguish it from point of view and viewpoint; it is more often restricted to the mental point of view <consider totalitarianism from the German standpoint> and it more often connotes than definitely implies a fixed way of looking justified by one's fundamental principles or one's stock of information and not necessarily resulting in a limited understanding <from the poet-writer's standpoint all this prevalent talk about a New Order is sheer waste of time—Forster> <my criticism of what seem to me one-sided views will be better understood if my general standpoint is known—Inge> Angle (see also PHASE) definitely implies one-sidedness or limitations in the scope of one's vision <every man of genius sees the world at a different angle from his fellows, and there is his tragedy. But it is usually a measurable angle—Ellis> <in the rhetorical speeches from Shakespeare which have been cited, we have . . . a new clue to the character, in noting the angle from which he views himself—T. S. Eliot) Slant stresses bias, but it may be bias derived from temperament, mental habits, or experience rather than from prejudice (periodicals, not normally pro-Democratic in editorial slant—Cater) (no one sees anything without some personal slant—S.R.L.)

Ana *position, stand, attitude poise vb *stabilize, steady, balance, ballast, trim

Ana *support, uphold, back

Con disturb, agitate, upset (see DISCOMPOSE): *overturn, overthrow, subvert poise n 1 *balance, equilibrium, equipoise, tension

Ana suspending or suspension, hanging (see corresponding verbs at HANG): *equanimity, composure

2 *tact, address, savoir faire

Ana self-possession, aplomb, assurance, *confidence: calmness, tranquillity, serenity (see corresponding adjectives at CALM): grace, dignity, *elegance poison n Poison, venom, virus, toxin, bane mean matter or a substance that when present in an organism or introduced into it produces an injurious or deadly effect. Poison is the most inclusive of these words and is applicable to any deadly or noxious substance whether introduced into or produced within the body of an organism (killed by a poison-barbed arrow) (carbon monoxide gas, when inhaled, is a deadly poison) (keeping poisons out of the reach of children) (many alkaloids are dangerous poisons)

In extended use poison applies to whatever is felt to have the destructive effect of a physical poison (fear uncontrolled is a poison that destroys all self-confidence)

Venom basically means a fluid containing a poison secreted by an animal (as a snake, scorpion, or bee) and injected into another animal during offensive or defensive action, usually by a bite or sting (man spurns the worm, but pauses ere he wake the slumbering venom of the folded snake—Byron)

The term is occasionally extended to a poisonous secretion of a plant and in more general extended use applies especially to states of mind or utterances that are felt to have the malign quality of an animal venom (their belief in venom and jealousy behind the war—Paxson)

(spouting angry venom about his neighbors) Virus (see also GERM), once equivalent to venom, retains this value only in extended use and then applies to something felt to have a corrupting quality that can poison the mind or spirit (the force of this virus of prejudice—V. S. Waters)

Toxin applies to a complex organic poison that is a product of the metabolic activities of a living organism, is extremely poisonous when introduced into the tissues but usually destroyed by the digestive juices, and is usually able to induce antibody formation (bacterial toxins, such as those of botulism and tetanus)

Bane may apply to any cause of ruin, destruction, or tribulation (his wife is the bane of his life) and in compounds denotes poison or something (as a plant) containing poison (ratsbane) (henbane contains a poison resembling belladonna) poisonous, venomous, virulent, toxic, mephitic, pestilent, pestilential, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmatic are comparable when they mean having the properties or the effects of poison (see POISON). Basically poisonous implies that the thing so described will be fatal or exceedingly harmful if introduced into a living organism in sufficient quantities (as by eating, drinking, or inhaling) (the most poisonous of mushrooms) (poisonous gases) ([aniline] is also poisonous but by proper chemical manipulation it becomes the parent of many beneficent medicines—Morrison)

In its extended use the term implies extreme noxiousness or perniciousness or power to corrode, rankle, or corrupt (you might condemn us as poisonous of your honor—

Shak.) (the sentence was pronounced . . . in a stifling poisonous atmosphere—Conrad) (secret spreading of poisonous propaganda—Roosevelt)

Venomous applies equally to an animal (as a snake, scorpion, or bee) whose bite or sting introduces a venom (see venom under POISON) into an organism and to the bites, stings, or wounds inflicted by venomous creatures (venomous insects) (a venomous snake bite) The term has much extended usage; in this it implies extreme malevolence or destructive malignancy (the most innocent intimacies would not have escaped misrepresentation from the venomous tongues of Roman society—Froude) (that many of you are frustrated in your ambitions, and undernourished in your pleasures, only makes you more venomous—Mailer)

Virulent implies the destructive or extremely deleterious properties of or as if of a strong poison; it is applied especially to infectious diseases of a particularly malignant or violent form or, somewhat less often, to notably venomous animals (poverty produces outbreaks of virulent infectious disease . . . sooner or later—Shaw) (one of the most virulent types of the pneumococcus) (those mosquitoes must have been particularly virulent—Farmer's Weekly)

In extended use the term applies to something particularly violent in its display of an offensive or noxious nature or quality (proceedings . . . dictated by virulent hatred—George Eliot) (the later stages of the campaign when the rumors became virulent—Michener)

Toxic sometimes implies the presence of properties or effects of a toxin (see toxin under POISON) (a toxic goiter) but more often implies only the character or the properties of a poison and therefore means little more than poisonous (the toxic principle of a drug) (toxic gases) (over 200,000 fish were killed by the toxic wastes of one industrial plant—Science) (a toxic drug) In its extended use toxic may imply insidious and destructive activity comparable to that of some toxins in the human organism (there are emotionally toxic situations at work in the environment as manifestly injurious . . . as physical toxins—McLean)

Mephitic is applicable to something so offensive to the sense of smell that it is or is believed to be actually poisonous (mephitic vapors rising from a swamp) (the mephitic air of a disused mine) (the mephitic verdure of the Malay peninsula—Stafford)

Pestilent and pestilential occasionally come close to poisonous in meaning, but they are chiefly used in the extended sense of exceedingly infectious or dangerous to the health, morals, or mental integrity, especially of the group as distinguished from the individual (still fervently espouse the pestilential proposition that the world needs to be saved in a hurry by their own brand of righteousness—Rolo) (a pestilent land where people died like flies—Maurice Carr) (grew impatient with such pestilent heresies—Parrington) (blow up the blind rage of the populace, with a continued blast of pestilential libels—Burke)

Miasmic, miasmatic, and miasmatic all imply a reference to miasma, or supposedly infectious or deadly emanations from swamps or jungles or from putrescent substances that float in the air (the steaming, rain-drenched, miasmatic, leech-filled Sumatran jungle—Rex Lardner) (the miasmatic northern and northeastern coast—Encyc. Americana) (the miasmatic air of the closed, unventilated room—C. M. Smith)

Of these words only miasmatic is common in extended use, where it often comes close to pestilential in implying a power to spread contamination or to poison the minds or souls of the multitude (a miasmatic little tale of degeneracy—W. T. Scott) (miasmatic fear of Communism . . . has permeated Houston—Houston Post)

Ana mortal, fatal, lethal, *deadly: *pernicious, baneful, noxious, deleterious, detrimental

poke vb Poke, prod, nudge, jog are comparable when they

Shak.) (the sentence was pronounced . . . in a stifling poisonous atmosphere—Conrad) (secret spreading of poisonous propaganda—Roosevelt)

Venomous applies equally to an animal (as a snake, scorpion, or bee) whose bite or sting introduces a venom (see venom under POISON) into an organism and to the bites, stings, or wounds inflicted by venomous creatures (venomous insects) (a venomous snake bite) The term has much extended usage; in this it implies extreme malevolence or destructive malignancy (the most innocent intimacies would not have escaped misrepresentation from the venomous tongues of Roman society—Froude) (that many of you are frustrated in your ambitions, and undernourished in your pleasures, only makes you more venomous—Mailer)

Virulent implies the destructive or extremely deleterious properties of or as if of a strong poison; it is applied especially to infectious diseases of a particularly malignant or violent form or, somewhat less often, to notably venomous animals (poverty produces outbreaks of virulent infectious disease . . . sooner or later—Shaw) (one of the most virulent types of the pneumococcus) (those mosquitoes must have been particularly virulent—Farmer's Weekly)

In extended use the term applies to something particularly violent in its display of an offensive or noxious nature or quality (proceedings . . . dictated by virulent hatred—George Eliot) (the later stages of the campaign when the rumors became virulent—Michener)

Toxic sometimes implies the presence of properties or effects of a toxin (see toxin under POISON) (a toxic goiter) but more often implies only the character or the properties of a poison and therefore means little more than poisonous (the toxic principle of a drug) (toxic gases) (over 200,000 fish were killed by the toxic wastes of one industrial plant—Science) (a toxic drug) In its extended use toxic may imply insidious and destructive activity comparable to that of some toxins in the human organism (there are emotionally toxic situations at work in the environment as manifestly injurious . . . as physical toxins—McLean)

Mephitic is applicable to something so offensive to the sense of smell that it is or is believed to be actually poisonous (mephitic vapors rising from a swamp) (the mephitic air of a disused mine) (the mephitic verdure of the Malay peninsula—Stafford)

Pestilent and pestilential occasionally come close to poisonous in meaning, but they are chiefly used in the extended sense of exceedingly infectious or dangerous to the health, morals, or mental integrity, especially of the group as distinguished from the individual (still fervently espouse the pestilential proposition that the world needs to be saved in a hurry by their own brand of righteousness—Rolo) (a pestilent land where people died like flies—Maurice Carr) (grew impatient with such pestilent heresies—Parrington) (blow up the blind rage of the populace, with a continued blast of pestilential libels—Burke)

Miasmic, miasmatic, and miasmatic all imply a reference to miasma, or supposedly infectious or deadly emanations from swamps or jungles or from putrescent substances that float in the air (the steaming, rain-drenched, miasmatic, leech-filled Sumatran jungle—Rex Lardner) (the miasmatic northern and northeastern coast—Encyc. Americana) (the miasmatic air of the closed, unventilated room—C. M. Smith)

Of these words only miasmatic is common in extended use, where it often comes close to pestilential in implying a power to spread contamination or to poison the minds or souls of the multitude (a miasmatic little tale of degeneracy—W. T. Scott) (miasmatic fear of Communism . . . has permeated Houston—Houston Post)

Ana mortal, fatal, lethal, *deadly: *pernicious, baneful, noxious, deleterious, detrimental

poke vb Poke, prod, nudge, jog are comparable when they

mean, as verbs, to thrust something into so as to stir up, urge on, or attract attention and, as nouns, the act or an instance of such thrusting. Poke implies primarily the use of a body part (as a finger or foot) or of some instrument or implement (as a stick, a rod, or a poker), but sometimes, especially in verbal use and in idiomatic phrases, it may imply the operation of something equally effective in stirring up or in rooting out <walked up and down and poked among the rocks—Masefield> <he poked the man in front of him to attract his attention> <poke up the fire in a stove> <he handed one to Lonnie, poking it at him until Lonnie's attention was drawn from the hogs—Caldwell> <poked his head round the corner—Sayers> <liked to poke his nose into another person's affairs> <give the fire a poke or two> Prod suggests the use of something sharp which can stab or prick or goad into action; it may be a physical thing (as a sharp pointed stick) <probed and prodded and palpated that tortured and self-tortured flesh—Styron> <the cattle needed to be prodded along> or it may be something less tangible but equally effective (as sharp words, a threat, or a taunt) (the excitement of trying . . . to prod them into action—J. R. Green) <prod lazy schoolboys> <give Willis a prod on the subject of church attendance—Mackenzie> Nudge suggests gentler action than the preceding terms; it may imply the use of an elbow in attracting attention especially under conditions when speech is impossible <he nudged the person sitting next to him to allow him to pass> <Squeers then nudged Mrs. Squeers to bring away the brandy bottle—Dickens> <give him a nudge or he will not see her> or it may imply a mere suggestion or hint <what was not trimmed from our pages by an editor's nudge was given away in the haggings of publisher and author—Mailer> or it may imply repeated gentle action (as in moving or shifting) <impudent little tugboats . . . nudged our ship out of its slip—J. W. Brown> Jog implies a thrust or, often, a touch on or as if on the elbow or arm that to some extent shakes one up   <almost any idea which jogs you out of your current abstractions may be better than nothing—Whitehead>

Ana *push, shove, thrust: *stir, arouse, rouse, awaken: *provoke, excite, stimulate, galvanize, quicken poke n prod, nudge, jog (see under POKE vb)

polite *civil, courteous, courtly, gallant, chivalrous

Ana *suave, urbane, diplomatic, politic: *thoughtful, considerate, attentive

Ant impolite

politic I *expedient, advisable

Ana practical, *practicable: *possible, feasible, practicable: *shrewd, astute, perspicacious, sagacious

2 diplomatic, bland, smooth, *suave, urbane

Ana unctuous, slick, oily, *fulsome: *wise, prudent, judicious politician, statesman, politico are comparable when they denote a person who is versed in or engaged in politics or in the science or art of government, though they are often regarded as contrasting rather than as interchangeable terms. Politician regularly implies a personal and professional interest and a party affiliation and stresses to varying degrees the resulting bias; it is likely to suggest ability to deal with masses of people so as to accomplish such desired ends as election to a political office whether of oneself, or of one's chosen candidate, or the passage of bills or the acceptance of measures one upholds, or the settlement of especially difficult problems to the satisfaction of one's constituency or of the country as a whole <a president . . . must be a good politician, adept at working with men, managing them, and inspiring their confidence—

Ogg & Ray> Sometimes politician is used with a strong suggestion of derogation or contempt to imply scheming, self-interest, artifice, or intrigue in accomplishing one's ends <made the better publicized pilfering of Washington politicians seem petty by comparison—Woodward> <known as a politician in the deprecatory sense of the word, with all its undertones of corruption and dirty deals and smoke-filled rooms—Rodell> Statesman implies elevation above party conflict and a mind able to view objectively the needs and problems of the state and its citizens and to concern itself with the long-term greatest good of the greatest number. The term, often in contrast to politician, is likely to stress both eminence and ableness <they were statesmen not politicians; they guided public opinion, but were little guided by it—Henry Adams> <the scornful may say that "a statesman is a dead politician," but it is more truly said that a statesman lives by his principles and a politician is ruled by his interest—H. D. Scott> <the statesman differs from the ordinary politician in that he is able to envisage and inspire support for policies that are in the long-run, best interests of the most people—Hallowell> Politico is virtually interchangeable with politician but perhaps more likely to stress concern with partisan political activity than with the actual business of government <his strength rests on the support of veteran politicos throughout the state—Shannon> <some sharp politicos still think the President won't run again—Wall Street Jour.> Like politician, it can be highly derogatory <Machiavelli's The Prince in which the individual politico is shown how to succeed by ignoring all moral, social, and religious restraints on his own action—Hight>

politico *politician, statesman poll vb *shear, clip, trim, prune, lop, snip, crop

Ana *cut, slash: sever, *separate pollute *contaminate, defile, taint, attain

Ana *debase, vitiate, corrupt, deprave, pervert: *abuse, outrage, mistreat: profane, desecrate, blaspheme (see corresponding nouns at PROFANATION)

pomp n *display, parade, array

Ana ceremony, ceremonial, liturgy, ritual, formality, *form: ostentatiousness or ostentation, showiness or show (see corresponding adjectives at SHOWY) ponder, meditate, muse, ruminare can mean to consider or examine something attentively, seriously, and with more or less deliberation. Ponder characteristically retains its original implication of weighing and usually suggests consideration of a problem from all angles or of a thing in all its relations in order that nothing important will escape one; unlike weigh in a related sense (see CONSIDER I) it does not usually suggest a balancing that leads to a conclusion <the great Sung master was wont . . . to . . . spend the day pondering the subjects of his brush by the side of running streams—Binyon> <was pondering over the best style in which to address the unknown and distant relatives—Gibbons> Meditate adds to ponder an implication of a definite directing or focusing of one's thought; in intransitive use, especially, it more often suggests an effort to understand the thing so considered in all its aspects, relations, or values than an effort to work out a definite problem <meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them—1 Tim 4:15> <I sat down . . . to give way to the melancholy reflections called up by the sight before me. I know not how long I meditated—Wilkie Collins> In transitive use meditate implies such deep consideration of a plan or project that it approaches intend or purpose in meaning <meanwhile, he was meditating a book on Shakespearian questions—H. J. Oliver> Muse comes close to meditate in implying focused attention but it suggests a less intellectual aim; often it implies absorption and a languid turning over of a topic as if in a dream, a fancy, or a remembrance (let him . . . read a certain passage of full poesy or distilled prose, and let him wander with it, and muse upon it . . . and dream upon it—Keats) <Cabot mused over the fact that the old bastard considered himself . . . one of the eminences of the great metropolis—Purdy> <still a pleasant mystery; enough to muse over on a dull afternoon—Davis> Ruminate implies a going over the same problem, the same subject, or the same object of meditation again and again; it may be used in place of any of these words, but it does not carry as strong a suggestion of weighing as ponder, of concentrated attention as meditate, or of absorption as muse, and it more often implies such processes as reasoning or speculation <I sit at home and ruminate on the qualities of certain little books like this one—little elixirs of perfection, full of subtlety and sadness—which I can read and read again—L. P. Smith> <forty years of ruminating on life, of glimpsing it in its simplest forms through microscopes—Kaempffert>

Ana weigh, *consider, contemplate: reflect, deliberate, speculate, *think, cogitate

ponderable appreciable, *perceptible, sensible, palpable, tangible

Ana important, significant, momentous, weighty, consequential (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

Con trivial, trifling, *petty, paltry ponderous cumbersome, cumbersome, *heavy, weighty, hefty

Ana *massive, massy, bulky, substantial: clumsy, *awkward, maladroit: *onerous, burdensome, oppressive, exacting pool n *monopoly, corner, syndicate, trust, cartel

poor adj 1 Poor, indigent, needy, destitute, penniless, impecunious, poverty-stricken, necessitous are comparable when they mean having less money or fewer possessions than are required to support a full life. Poor describes a person, a people, or an institution that comes under this description; it is the most general term of the group, applying not only to those who are in actual want or to those in straitened circumstances, but also to those who, as compared to other groups, live below the level of what is regarded as comfortable <despite the death of the breadwinner, his family was not left poor—Wecter> <it wasn't only that they were not rich . . . but that they were so poor that they couldn't afford things—Mary Austin> Between indigent and needy there is very little difference in meaning, both implying urgent and pressing want; both, but especially indigent, may be used to express the state of want to which those who are poor are reduced <the depression had left a number of them indigent, without state or federal relief—Green Peyton> <will make contributions to needy groups of all races and creeds—Current Biog.> <there are many needy persons in this town> <needy children are provided with hot luncheons, free of cost> Destitute goes further than any of these words in its implication of acute and dire need. It implies a lack of fundamental resources or a deprivation of basic necessities of life <the fire rendered several poor families absolutely destitute> <the death of a destitute widow from starvation—Maclaren-Ross> Penniless may imply a state of destitution or of indigence but it also may suggest an often temporary state of being without money; consequently, the term is susceptible of wider use than any of the others, sometimes connoting poverty or an approach to it and sometimes a mere transitory inconvenience <the bright but penniless youth whose climb to fame rivaled the most incredible of the Alger stories—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.> <returned from her shopping trip penniless but triumphant> Impecunious, though it carries practically the same basic suggestion as penniless, is not quite its equivalent; it may imply the deprivation of money but it more often suggests a habitual being without money and, sometimes, connotes also the habit of borrowing or of living upon one's friends <I was, as many young barristers are, an impecunious party—Gilbert> <this eager impecunious young man who had fared so richly in his poverty—Wharton> Poverty-stricken may be chosen as an especially vivid word suggesting the state of one who is extremely indigent or actually destitute; it often connotes the suffering caused by this condition  <the bulk of the pioneers was formed by poverty-stricken people who migrated from densely populated areas—J. F. Embree & W. L. Thomas> Necessitous comes close to needy in meaning but often carries a clearer connotation of insistent or persistent demands for relief <it holds out a shadow of present gain to a greedy and necessitous public—Burke> <according to sample surveys . . . six percent are only "moderately in need." The rest are immoderately necessitous—Liebling>

Ant rich —Con wealthy, affluent, opulent (see RICH) 2 *bad, wrong

Ana *deficient, defective: *petty, puny, trivial, trifling, paltry: *base, low, vile

Con *good, right: satisfying, fulfilling, meeting, answering (see SATISFY) poppycock *nonsense, twaddle, drivel, bunk, balderdash, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull popular *common, ordinary, familiar, vulgar

Ana general, *universal, generic, common: accepted, received, admitted (see RECEIVE): prevalent, *prevailing, current

Ant unpopular: esoteric port n *harbor, haven

port n presence, *bearing, deportment, demeanor, mien portal *door, gate, doorway, gateway, postern portend presage, augur, prognosticate, *foretell, predict, forecast, prophesy, forebode

Ana betoken, *indicate, bespeak, attest: signify, import, *mean, denote portent *foretoken, presage, prognostic, omen, augury

Ana presentiment, foreboding, misgiving, *apprehension: forewarning, warning, cautioning or caution (see WARN) portentous *ominous, unpropitious, inauspicious, fateful

Ana threatening, menacing (see THREATEN): prodigious, *monstrous: prophesying or prophetic, presaging, foreboding, predicting, foretelling (see corresponding verbs at FORETELL) portico *colonnade, arcade, arcature, peristyle portion n 1 *part, piece, detail, member, division, section, segment, sector, fraction, fragment, parcel

Ana quantity, amount (see SUM n): apportionment, rationing or ration (see corresponding verbs at APPORTION): allotment, assignment, allocation (see corresponding verbs at ALLOT)

2 *fate, destiny, lot, doom

Ana distribution, dispensation, division, dealing (see corresponding verbs at DISTRIBUTE): fortune, hap, *chance, luck portion vb *apportion, parcel, ration, prorate

Ana *allot, assign, allocate: *distribute, dispense, divide, deal portly *fleshy, stout, plump, rotund, chubby, fat, corpulent, obese

Ana burly, husky, brawny, *muscular portrait photograph, *image, effigy, statue, icon, mask portray *represent, depict, delineate, picture, limn

Ana image, photograph (see corresponding nouns at IMAGE): describe, *relate, narrate: reproduce, copy, duplicate (see corresponding nouns at REPRODUCTION)

pose vb *propose, propound

Ana *ask, question, query: *puzzle, confound: baffle (see FRUSTRATE) pose n 1 Pose, air, affectation, mannerism are comparable when they mean an adopted rather than a natural way of speaking and behaving. Pose implies an attitude deliberately assumed in order to impress others or to call attention to oneself; it may be applied to opinions, policies, declared beliefs, and preferences as well as to manners (his reticence is just a pose) (identified himself with the Great Commoner, and this seemed to me purely a pose, which verged upon demagoguery—Edmund Wilson) Air in its more general related use may come close to demeanor (compare demeanor under BEARING), but as compared with pose it, especially in the plural airs, definitely implies artificiality and the intent to give a false appearance, and usually also implies a vulgar pretense of breeding, of grandeur, or of superiority (the red-headed singer . . . dropped her patronizing air, offered her scotch from the bottle—Wouk) (there was no doubt at all that she had acquired insufferable airs—Stafford) Affectation usually designates a specific trick of speech or behavior of one who obviously puts on airs or whose trick impresses others as deliberately assumed and insincere (regarded carrying cigarettes in a case as an affectation—Richard Burke) (agitation for opera in English seems a particular affectation to those who have come to know the works in the original—Dale Warren) Mannerism designates an acquired peculiarity or eccentricity in speech or behavior; it seldom implies insincerity, but it nearly always connotes habit or potential habit. A mannerism consciously assumed becomes thereby also an affectation; what begins as an affectation may become an unconscious and habitual trick of behavior, and so a mannerism (he giggled, and she was surprised she had not noticed this mannerism in him before—Purdy) (those little mannerisms of hers . . . especially the way she has of pointing a finger at me to emphasize a phrase—Dahl)

2 *posture, attitude posit vb *presuppose, presume, assume, postulate, premise posit n presupposition, presumption, assumption, postulate, premise (see under PRESUPPOSE)

position 1 Position, stand, attitude denote a more or less fixed mental point of view or way of regarding something. Position and stand both imply reference to a question at issue or to a matter about which there is difference of opinion. Position, however, is often the milder term, since it, unlike stand, seldom connotes aggressiveness or defiance of a widely held or popular opinion (he was asked to make known his position on disarmament) (he took the stand that disarmament would not accomplish the ends its proponents had in view) (bases his position on a wide and shrewd scrutiny of man and his history—Alain Locke) (he . . . agreed thoroughly with my stand that no government or private organization could give health; people had to achieve it by their own efforts—Heiser) Attitude suggests a personal or, sometimes, a group or communal point of view, especially one that is colored by personal or party feeling, is influenced by one's environment or the fashion of the moment, and is, on the whole, more the product of temperament or of emotion than of thought or conviction (a humorous attitude to life) (the Greek attitude toward nature) (it was their attitude of acceptance . . . their complaisance about themselves and about their life—Wolfe) (their beliefs, attitudes, and prejudices were a crowd of inconsistencies—Farrell)

Ana *point of view, viewpoint, standpoint, angle, slant

2 *place, location, situation, site, spot, station positive 1 certain, *sure, cocksure

Ana *confident, assured, sanguine, sure: dogmatic, doctrinaire, oracular, *dictatorial

Ant doubtful

2 *affirmative

Ant negative —Con *neutral, indifferent: nugatory, *vain, idle, hollow: nullifying, annulling (see NULLIFY) possess own, enjoy, hold, *have

Ana control, manage, direct, *conduct: retain, *keep, reserve, withhold possessions, belongings, effects, means, resources, assets can mean all the items that taken together constitute a person's or group's property or wealth. Possessions, belongings, effects stress ownership; means, resources, assets emphasize value and especially pecuniary value of what is owned. Possessions may be applied to the aggregate of things owned, regardless of the individual worth or significance of each thing; thus, one may speak of the possessions of an indigent old woman or of the possessions of a Rothschild, the former referring to a few articles of furniture and clothing, the latter to extensive properties and enormous invested capital. Belongings is applied commonly to an individual's more intimate personal possessions (as clothes, household goods, and valuables) (left the house and took all his belongings with him) (my belongings were put away in the room—Frank Perry) Effects may be more inclusive than belongings, but usually less so than possessions. It is often applied to personal as distinguished from real property, especially when the reference is to the estate of a deceased person (he died leaving no effects of value) (all his effects were divided among his relatives before an administrator could be appointed) Sometimes it is applied to movable articles as distinguished from those that are stationary (a sale of household effects) (all his personal effects are in his one trunk) Means usually applies to all the money that is available, in the form of revenue from capital, income, or ready money, for expenditure (lived beyond his means) (a man of large means) When unqualified means frequently implies some degree of affluence (decked out with furs, gloves and a hat sewn with pearls—one of those middle-aged women of means—Cheever) Resources, on the other hand, is applied to all possessions that have actual or potential, but not necessarily money, value and that may be depended upon in case of need or of deficiency (a society which gives an increasing share of its resources to military purposes—Science) Sometimes the term comprehends all tangibles and intangibles possessed whether they are actually used or are merely available for use; thus, a statement of a company's resources is a statement that covers every item that may be regarded as a part of the company's wealth (the turn of the 20th century, when the financial resources of the well-to-do were matched by the national affluence—Lucius Beebe) Often the term refers specifically to possessions held in reserve for emergencies or to sources of supply as yet untapped; thus, the natural resources of a country include its unmined minerals, unfelled timber, water sources, and wild life. Assets both in law and in accounting implies an opposition to liabilities and therefore suggests the possibility of an inequality between the two and a difference between one's ostensible and one's actual wealth. When the term is used in reference to the settlement of the estate of a deceased person or to the legal administration of the property of an insolvent or bankrupt person or concern, the assets include all the possessions of marketable value which may be turned into money to provide for the payment of the liabilities (the assets of the estate were sufficient to cover all liabilities, including the decedent's debts and his legacies) When used in reference to general balance sheets of a company or corporation, the term comprehends all items which from one point of view can be called resources having book value. But assets is never exactly the same as resources, because the latter word does not, as assets does, imply a comparison with liabilities.

possible 1 Possible, practicable, feasible can mean capable of being realized. Possible is used to dispel doubt that something may or does occur or exist or may come to exist (the regime of religious toleration has become possible only because we have lost the primal intensity of religious conviction—Cohen) (although he still asserts that community of goods would be the ideal institution, he reluctantly abandons it as a basis for a possible state—Dickinson) Practicable refers to what may be readily effected, executed, practiced, used, or put into operation (trial by jury—an institution in which . . . we have the very abstract and essence of all practicable democratic government—Mallock) (the only practicable tactics to be pursued were those of the routine police procedure—S. S. Van Dine) Feasible may designate what is likely to work out or be put into effect successfully or what in a difficult situation seems the expedient least liable to fail (cheap iron and steel made it feasible to equip larger armies and navies than ever before—Mumford) (only the most simple types of utilization are feasible—Van Valkenburg & Huntington)

Ana practical, *practicable: *expedient, advisable 2 *probable, likely

Ana credible, believable, colorable, *plausible: potential, dormant, *latent posterior adj Posterior, rear, hind, hinder, after, back are comparable when they mean behind in order of arrangement in space. Posterior is the usual technical term for whatever is situated behind and is opposed to anterior (to an anatomical eye the posterior part of the skull is even more striking than the anterior—T. H. Huxley) Rear belongs especially to military usage, but has general application with reference to such things as structures and vehicles (the rear ranks of a column) (the rear wall of a house) Hind, opposed to front or fore, is used most commonly with reference to related parts and designates the member or pair which is in the rear (the hind wheels of a wagon) (the hind legs of a horse) It has sometimes more general application (had a boy-size pair of empty overalls blowing out of his hind pocket—Faulkner) Hinder is equivalent to hind or, in nontechnical use, to posterior (a long oval forward part and a taillike hinder portion—Coker) After is largely confined to nautical usage and applies to whatever is abaft the midship section, or in the rear part of a vessel, or relatively near to this part (the after cabin) (the after hatchway) Back applies to what is thought of as behind, remote from, or inferior or subsidiary to, the main or more important part (back stairs) (back door) (the near woodlands and back pastures afford good hunting—Amer. Guide Series: Tenn.) Ant anterior

posterity *offspring, young, progeny, issue, descendant Ant ancestry —Con lineage, pedigree (see ANCESTRY) postern gate, *door, gateway, doorway, portal postpone *defer, suspend, stay, intermit

Ana *delay, retard, slow, slacken postulant *novice, novitiate, probationer, neophyte, apprentice postulate vb *presuppose, presume, assume, premise, posit

Ana affirm, aver, predicate, *assert postulate n presupposition, presumption, assumption, premise, posit (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ana *principle, axiom, theorem, fundamental, law: theory, *hypothesis posture n 1 Posture, attitude, pose denote a position assumed by the body, or the disposition of the parts of the body with relation to one another. Posture applies to the relative arrangement of the different parts of the body. It may apply to a habitual or characteristic arrangement and then specifically means the way in which one holds oneself and refers to one's physical carriage or bearing (her posture is excellent) (pictures illustrating defects of posture) (examples of correct posture) (an urbane alertness about the face, the posture—Wouk) or it may apply to an arrangement determined with reference to the needs of the mood or the moment and then requires qualification (a sitting posture) (a kneeling posture) (the posture of supplication) (his whole figure had a prowling and half-crouching posture—Wolfe) or the assistance of the context to evoke a picture of how the parts of the body are disposed or to reveal the intention or end (there's a posture for a man to fight in! His weight isn't resting on his legs—Shaw) Attitude applies chiefly to a posture that is unconsciously expressive or is intentionally assumed, often as a result of a particular mood or state of mind (they slipped into the embassy . . . so wary, so frightened and in such attitudes of wrongdoing—Cheever) (uttering platitudes in stained-glass attitudes—Gilbert) Pose applies to an attitude or to a position of some part or parts of the body which is assumed for the sake of effect, or which, if unconscious, strikes the observer as effective or as affected (the pose of a model) (the lofty pose of her head expressed an habitual sense of her own consequence—Shaw) (his pose was easy and graceful. A superb self-confidence radiated from him—Gibbons)

Ana *bearing, deportment, mien

2 situation, *state, condition, mode, status

Ana *position, stand, attitude: readiness, quickness, promptness (see corresponding adjectives at QUICK) pot *bet, wager, stake, ante potent *powerful, puissant, forceful, forcible

Ana *vigorous, energetic, strenuous, lusty: *effective, efficacious, effectual: *strong, sturdy, tenacious

Ant impotent

potential dormant, *latent, quiescent, abeyant

Ant active, actual pother n flurry, fuss, ado, *stir, bustle

Ana *haste, hurry, speed, dispatch: agitation, upset, perturbation, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

Con coolness, collectedness, composure (see corresponding adjectives at COOL) pouch *bag, sack

pound vb *beat, pummel, buffet, baste, belabor, thrash

Ana *strike, hit, smite, slug: batter, mutilate (see MAIM) pour vb Pour, stream, gush, sluice are comparable when they mean to send forth or cause to send forth copiously. Pour usually suggests an abundant emission of what is sent forth (it never rains but it pours) (pour men and money into the Netherlands—Barr) (pour forth tributes) (letters poured in in answer to his inquiry) but it sometimes implies a coming in a course or stream, usually a continuous stream (as from a mouth, a spout, an orifice, or a wound) (crowds poured from every exit) (pour coffee from a pot) (ranges . . . pour rivers down to the coast—M. Barnard Eldershaw) Stream suggests a flow that is circumscribed (as by issuance through a course or from an opening) (tears streamed from her eyes) (light streamed through the open door) (hundreds of happy workers streaming in through the wide wrought iron gates—Dahl)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

though it also may connote abundance or continuousness in that flow (the guests streamed past, shaking hands, exchanging greetings—Styron) Gush implies a sudden and copious emission of or as if of something released from confinement; it often connotes a coming in a jet or in spurts (blood gushed from the wound) (he . . . suddenly gushed forth in streams of wondrous eloquence—Stephen) (beer began to gush . . . in a white cascade—Pynchon) Sluice implies the operation of something like a sluice for the regulation or control of the flow of water; therefore the verb sluice suggests a sending of water or liquid over a surface in an abundant stream (water so fresh . . . never sluiced parched throats before—Thackeray) (Mowgli, with the rain sluicing over his bare shoulders—Kipling) Ana emerge, *appear: flow, issue, proceed, *spring poverty, indigence, penury, want, destitution, privation all denote the state of one who is poor or without enough to live upon. Poverty, the most comprehensive of these terms, typically implies such deficiency of resources that one is deprived of many of the necessities and of all of the comforts of life (in Syria he feathered his nest so successfully that in two years he raised himself from poverty to opulence—Buchan) (complaining of his poverty as if it were a new invention and he its first victim—Malamud) Indigence, often opposed to affluence, does not suggest dire or absolute poverty, but it does imply reduced or straitened circumstances and therefore usually connotes the endurance of many hardships and the lack of comforts (reduced to indigence in his old age) (our newfound European indigence now makes us more materialistic than we used to pride ourselves on being—Times Lit. Sup.) Penury may or may not imply abject poverty, but it does suggest such a degree of need, especially of money, that one is cramped or oppressed by it (chill Penury repressed their noble rage—Gray) (she has to take anything she can get in the way of a husband rather than face penury—Shaw) But penury may imply the semblance of poverty that comes from miserliness or penuriousness (compare penurious under STINGY) (her relatives considered that the penury of her table discredited the Mingott name, which had always been associated with good living—Wharton) Want (see also LACK) and destitution both imply an extreme of poverty that leaves one without the basic necessities of life; both terms, but especially the latter, often imply starvation and homelessness or the urgent need of help (he is in great want) (here to the homeless child of want my door is open still—Goldsmith) (sinking stage by stage from indigence to squalor, from squalor to grimy destitution—Mumford) Privation, though implying a state that is comparable to the one suggested by indigence, does not, as the latter term does, necessarily suggest poverty; although it implies a condition of being without many of the comforts and sometimes of the necessities of existence or having only an insufficient supply of them, it may connote another cause of such a condition than a lack of money or of possessions of value (an explorer must undergo prolonged privations) (months of privation after the crop failure had left them ill-nourished)

Ana necessity, *need, exigency: strait, pass, pinch (see JUNCTURE)

Ant riches

poverty-stricken *poor, indigent, needy, destitute, penniless, impecunious, necessitous power n 1 Power, force, energy, strength, might, puissance mean the ability to exert effort for a purpose. Power is the most general of these terms and denotes an ability to act or be acted upon, to effect something, or to affect or be affected by something (the finest machine in the world is useless without a motor to give it power) (the mechanical power of the internal-combustion engine) (raise the productive power of the nation) (the sound of a great flood moving with majesty and power—Cather) (give an attorney the power to act for one) (in any link between past and present there was potent magic, some power to evoke allegiance—Hervey) (hateful to feel their power over me when I knew that they were nothing but fancies—Hudson) Force (see also FORCE 2) implies the exhibition or the exercise of power; the term usually carries with it a suggestion of actually overcoming resistance (as by setting a thing in motion or accelerating its motion or driving a person or thing in the desired direction); thus, one having the power to do something exerts force only when he actually does it (a wind gathers force) (accumulated force which drove them as if discharged from a crossbow—Jefferies) (a hard and rebellious element not to be conquered mainly by skill . . . but mainly by force—Ellis) (the perverse wish to flee . . . not from the laws and customs of the world but from its force and vitality—Cheever) Therefore force is often applied to a person or thing that exerts its power with marked efficacy or efficiency (they believed that the Church was the only force which could consolidate the nation—Inge) (art is but the expression of a harmony of life, a fine balance of all the forces of the human spirit—Binyon) Energy in general use and especially as applied to persons implies stored-up power releasing itself in work or craving such release (the prodigious energy put forth by industry in time of war—Morrison) (in spite of his small size and fragile build, the man was a dynamo of energy and could perform the labors of a Titan—Wolfe) (it was marvelous . . . that the energy of her spirit could carry through so triumphantly her frail nervous system—Ellis) Strength applies to the power that resides in a person or thing as a result of qualities or properties that enable him or it to exert force or to manifest energy or to resist pressure, strain, stress, or attack. Physically strength implies soundness (as of health or of construction or design) (the tensile strength of a rope) (I was not delicate, not physically; when it was a matter of strength I had as much as the next man—Mailer) while mentally and morally it may imply capacity for endurance or resolution or intrepidity (show strength in temptation) (Strength to surmount the horrors and humiliations of . . . defeat—O'Donovan) When applied to military forces it usually implies power manifest in such things as numbers, equipment, and resources (estimate the strength of the enemy) (a fleet incomparable in strength) Might and puissance are rather rhetorical or poetic words meaning operative or effective power or force. Might often suggests great or superhuman power; it is therefore appropriate when the reference is to supernatural beings or supranatural forces or to human power that is so strong that it cannot be gaisaid (protect us by thy might, Great God, our King—S. F. Smith) (let us have faith that right makes might—Lincoln) (the pride and might and vivid strength of things—Galsworthy) Puissance is often indistinguishable from might, but it can also connote an impressive display of power (we should advance ourselves to look with forehead bold and big enough upon the power and puissance of the King—Shak.) (the sapience and puissance of the American businessman in general—G. W. Johnson)

Ana *ability, capacity, capability: *gift, genius, talent, faculty; qualification, competence (see corresponding adjectives at ABLE)

Ant impotence

2 Power, faculty, function can all mean an ability of a living being to act or perform in a given way or a capacity for a particular kind of action or performance. Power, the comprehensive term of this group, may apply to a capacity for action or performance that does not or apparently does not call the mind into play (the power to digest food) (the power of reflex movement) but it more frequently applies to an ability or capacity that involves either mental activity or mental receptiveness (the power to think clearly) (the human mind is a fearful instrument . . . in its mysterious powers of resilience, self-protection, and self-healing—Wolfe) Faculty in general, as distinct from technical psychological or metaphysical use, is applicable to those powers which are the possession of every normal human being, though not always manifested in the first months of infancy or the earliest years of childhood (the faculty of hearing) (the faculty of speech) or it may apply to any one of the several specific powers of the mind (as will, memory, and reason) that are often felt as discrete and discoverable (the truth is that memory and imagination, the two most important human faculties, are scarcely cultivated at all—Grandgent) Sometimes faculty means no more than a distinguishable capacity of the functioning mind or soul (once a thing did become pertinent, he had an amazing faculty for absorbing it wholly—Terry Southern) (her faculty for moral perception had withdrawn into that dim neutrality—Hervey) (it is the one occasion when violent grief, disturbing his faculties, appears in his correspondence—Belloc) Function may denote an activity which can be more or less definitely associated with the brain or the central nervous system or a part of either (all mental activities, such as seeing, hearing, perceiving, conceiving, imagining, recalling, etc., are termed functions—Murchison) or it may apply to one (as digestion or respiration) in which the mental component is slight or obscure.

3 Power, authority, jurisdiction, control, command, sway, dominion are comparable when they mean the right or prerogative of determining, ruling, or governing or the exercise of that right or prerogative. Power even in this specific sense never loses its fundamental implication of ability, but in this case it is a capacity for rule that may derive from rank, office, or even character or personality (in an absolute monarchy the king has sole power) (it is a strange desire, to seek power, and to lose liberty; or to seek power over others, and to lose power over a man's self—Bacon) (for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever—Mt 6:13) Power when used with reference to a definite person or body or office commonly connotes divisibility or strict limitation (the trustees have power of appointment) (the charter gives the city power to tax sales) (he was given power of attorney to act for his brother) (it is not enough that a statute goes to the verge of constitutional power. We must be able to see clearly that it goes beyond that power—Justice Holmes) Authority is often used interchangeably with power; nevertheless, there can be an essential difference in meaning, since authority usually refers to power resident in or exercised by another than oneself; thus, one may have power, rather than authority, to determine one's own actions, but a parent or a master or a ruler has the authority, rather than the power, to determine the actions of those under him; children are obedient to authority rather than to power (they were both getting childish and needed care and yet they resented any loss of authority—Buck) (the object is to induce the child to lend of his own free will; so long as authority is required, the end aimed at has not been achieved—Russell) (authority in the religious sphere generally means absolute or infallible authority, such as Catholics ascribe to the Church—Inge) Power and authority, especially in the plural, often refer to the persons who have or hold power or authority as defined. Powers, however, usually occurs in the phrase "the powers that be" and is either somewhat more comprehensive or less explicit in its reference than "the authorities," which often means the persons who have authority in the special instance to direct, to decide, or to punish (he is always in instinctive opposition to the powers that be) (he threatened to report the offense to the authorities) Jurisdiction implies possession of legal or actual power to determine, to rule, or to govern within definitely assigned limits, and of the authority to so act in all matters coming within the sphere of that power (the principle of law is too well settled to be disputed, that a court can give no judgment for either party, where it has no jurisdiction—Taney) (this new and populous community must, for the present, the Kansas Bishop wrote, be accounted under Father Latour's jurisdiction—Cather) Control stresses possession of the authority to restrain or curb and its effective exercise, or of actual power to regulate or keep responsive to one's will not only persons but things; thus, a teacher who has lost control of his class has reached a point where the pupils no longer recognize his authority; a fire has gone beyond control when those who are fighting it have lost all power to check it (completely out of control, the woman had shrugged off her husband's embarrassed efforts to stop her—Wouk) (he was at last in triumphant control of his destiny—Wolfe) Command implies such control as makes one the master of men, and such authority that obedience to one's order or one's will either inevitably follows or is inexorably enforced; thus, one speaks of the officer in command, rather than in control, of a regiment; a person has command of a situation when he completely dominates it or has all persons or things involved in it under control (how, in one house, should many people, under two commands, hold amity?—Shak.) Command is also used in reference to things which one has mastered so thoroughly that one encounters no resistance or interference in using, recalling, or controlling them (his brush did its work with a steady and sure stroke that indicated command of his materials—Jefferies) (something beyond disorderly or careless thinking, something close to a complete loss of emotional command—Anthony West) Sway tends to be slightly rhetorical because its use in this sense was originally figurative and the word still carries a hint of its original implications of swinging or sweeping through an arc or circle; hence, when a word is desired that means power but also connotes extent or scope and such added matters as preponderant influence, compelling authority, or potency, sway is the appropriate choice (the British Empire extended its sway to every quarter of the earth) (primal spirits beneath his sway—Shelley) (the law of compensation rules supreme in art, as it holds sway in life—Lowe) Dominion imputes sovereignty to the power in question or supremacy to the authority in question (God of our fathers, known of old, Lord of our far-flung battle line, beneath whose awful Hand we hold dominion over palm and pine—Kipling) (foreign dominion in any shape would soon become hateful—Freeman)

Ana *right, privilege, prerogative, birthright: management, direction (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT): ascendancy, *supremacy

powerful, potent, puissant, forceful, forcible are comparable when they mean having or manifesting power to effect great or striking results. Powerful is applicable to something which stands out from the rest of its kind as exceeding the others in its display of strength or force or in its manifestation of energy; the word also usually implies

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

an effectiveness that has been proved rather than attributed (the most powerful ruler of his age) (a powerful fleet) (a powerful influence for good—Walcutt) (a powerful cathartic) Potent, though it implies powerfulness, is applicable chiefly to something which derives or seems to derive that character from some hidden or latent virtue or quality rather than from an observable or measurable power or force (he exercised a potent spell over her imagination) (how potent is this Oriental blood in Napoleon, in Goethe, in Heine, in Heine, Victor Hugo—J. R. Lowell) (illusions . . . no longer potent because they are no longer really believed—Krutch) Puissant, a bookish word, refers typically to persons, to military or naval forces, or to bodies politic and connotes more the outward attributes of power; it commonly suggests a great and abiding strength (most . . . mighty, and most puissant Caesar—Shak.) (one of the nation's most puissant labor leaders—Time) (methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep—Milton) The last two words of the group, though somewhat more restrained in their suggestion of power, nevertheless imply an ability to effect impressive results. Forceful stresses the possession or manifestation of force as a quality; it therefore suggests marked vigor or energy or strength regardless of whether it is being exercised or not. The word is applicable even to something which makes no display of effort or violence, provided it impresses its undoubted force on the observer (a forceful personality) (he relied more on a forceful clarity to convince his readers than on the brilliant and exciting ambiguities of propagandist eloquence—Huxley) (physically, he suggests at once a forceful spit-and-polish officer—Knight) Forcible, on the other hand, suggests the actual exertion of power or force; it often implies the use of physical violence in attaining one's ends (forcible disarmament and military occupation can only be temporary—Times Lit. Sup.) (take forcible possession of goods not paid for) (favor forcible measures in treating unruly prisoners) Sometimes it is used in place of forceful to add to that term implications of aggressiveness, militancy, or decided potency (win a chess game with a series of forcible moves) (more than thirty years have passed and I have seen no forcible young man of letters brave the metropolis—Yeats)

Ana *able, capable, competent: efficacious, effectual, *effective, efficient: *vigorous, energetic, strenuous Ant powerless: inefficacious

powerless, impotent both mean unable to effect one's purpose, intention, or end. Powerless denotes merely lack of power or efficacy which is often temporary or relative to a specific purpose or situation (he suddenly found himself powerless to move) (powerless as an infant—De Quincey) (I hope that the luxuries of this palatial mansion are powerless to corrupt your heart—Shaw) (that mood of hopeless apathy that comes over men powerless to help themselves—Nordhoff & Hall) Impotent (see also STERILE) implies not only powerlessness but positive weakness or, especially, complete ineffectiveness (an angry little spitfire sea continually . . . thrashes with impotent irascibility—Stevenson) (impotent aristocrats talking about the code of chivalry but unable to bring it to life—Time) (terrible and impotent rage—Wilde) Ana inert, *inactive, passive, supine: feeble, *weak, infirm, decrepit

Ant powerful: efficacious —Con *effective, efficient practicable 1 feasible, *possible

Ana operating or operable, working or workable, functioning (see corresponding verbs at ACT)

Ant impracticable

2 Practicable, practical are not close synonyms and not interchangeable, but they are sometimes confused when they imply a capacity for being used or turned to account. Practicable (see also POSSIBLE 1) applies chiefly to something immaterial (as a plan, project, scheme, or design) which has not been tested in practice or to something material (as a new machine, a new form of entertainment, or a new implement) which has not been proved successful in operation or use (aviation was his predominant interest. He was one of the first to consider aerial locomotion practicable—W. C. Langdon) (the lovely combs running down to the sea are infested with cars in the summer season wherever there is a practicable road—Brit. Book News) (a serviceable concept on which to base a practicable policy—Hobson) Practical applies not only to things both concrete and immaterial but also as practicable does not, to persons. The term in all of its senses stresses an opposition to what is theoretical, speculative, ideal, unrealistic, or imaginative and implies a relation to the actual life of man, his daily needs, or the conditions which must be met. When the term also implies a capacity for use, it emphasizes actual usefulness rather than highly probable or merely discovered usability; thus, a plan might be practicable in that it could be put into practice though not practical because inefficient, too costly, or superfluous; the modern low-slung high-speed automobile was practicable long before improved roads and fuels made it practical (those most practical machines of our modern life, the dynamo and the telephone—Ellis) Hence, practical may apply to whatever is such in kind, character, amount, or effect that it is definitely useful or serviceable in actual life (to make the gas turbine practical for the ordinary driver, controls would have to be simple and . . . fuel consumption . . . lowered—Modern Industry) (practical sciences, in which knowledge is pursued as a means to conduct rather than as an end in itself—Thilly) (he was eminently practical, seeking a sound, workable system adapted to the conditions of the people—Schafer) (in everything he undertook he demanded a utilitarian purpose and a practical result—Buchan)

practical *practicable practically *virtually, morally practice vb Practice, exercise, drill are comparable when they mean, as verbs, to perform or cause one to perform an act or series of acts repeatedly and, as nouns, such repeated activity or exertion. Practice fundamentally implies doing, especially doing habitually or regularly, often in contrast to thinking, believing, and professing or to theory and precept (practice what you preach) (the practice of one's religion) (practice a profession) (in theory every citizen votes, but in practice rarely more than half avail themselves of the privilege) (thinking piously of saints and others who practiced mortification—Cheever) Practice also implies a doing over and over again of certain acts for the sake of acquiring proficiency, dexterity, or skill or in the hope of attaining perfection (practice makes perfect) (practice on the piano each day) (rifle practice) (I am not normally a scheming person; I . . . have had no practice in it whatsoever—Dahl) Exercise fundamentally implies a keeping busy or a setting to work; it usually presupposes the possession of a power or of powers which can be developed or strengthened by activity, especially repeated activity, or can be manifested only in practice (give him plenty of opportunities to exercise his intelligence) (a wise father avoids the exercise of authority except when other means fail) (he had liberality, and he had the means of exercising it—Austen) (so long as a child is with adults, it has no occasion for the exercise of a number of important virtues, namely, those required by the strong in dealing with the weak—Russell <will can only be exercised in the presence of something which retards or resists it—Inge> Like practice, exercise may be used also to imply acts performed repeatedly for the sake of an ulterior end, but exercise refers especially to those directed to the attainment of health or vigor (as of body or mind) <Tom was being exercised like a raw recruit > <grow mentally dull through lack of physical exercise > <exercise is good for the muscles of mind and to keep it well in hand for work—J. R. Lowell > <poetry is in France an exercice, not an expression. It is to real French expression, to prose, what gymnastics and hygiene are to health—Brownell > Drill fundamentally connotes an intention to fix physical or mental habits as deeply as though they were bored in by the use of a drill; the term stresses repetition (as of military evolutions, of word pronunciations, or of grammatical rules) as a means of training and disciplining the body or mind or of forming correct habits <drill troops in marching and handling arms >  <this is a real danger in modern education, owing to the reaction against the old severe drill. The mental work involved in the drill was good; what was bad was the killing of intellectual interests—Russell >

Ana *perform, execute, fulfill: *follow, pursue: *repeat, iterate practice n 1 *habit, habitude, usage, custom, use, wont Ana procedure, *process, proceeding: *method, system, way, fashion, mode, manner

2 exercise, drill (see under PRACTICE vb)

Ana *use, utility, usefulness: usage, *form, convention, convenience: pursuit, calling, *work

Ant theory: precept

praise, laud, acclaim, extol, eulogize mean to express approbation or esteem. Praise often implies no more than warmly expressed commendation <what we admire we praise, and when we praise, advance it into notice—Cowper > When specifically referred to persons, it frequently suggests the judgment of a superior <praise a pupil for his diligence > <he's given you every encouragement. He's praised you to the skies—Wouk > However, it is also used in reference to God or a god or to a saint; then it implies glorification by such acts of homage as song or prayer <praise God from whom all blessings flow—Ken > Laud implies high, sometimes excessive, praise <history written by the conqueror, lauding to the skies the victories of its sublime troops—Americas > <both of the writers lauded highly . . . contemporaries who were certainly no better than middling performers in their several arts—Montague > Acclaim usually suggests enthusiastic and public expression of approval <he was acclaimed not only in his own country but throughout the civilized world—Heiser >  Extol retains its original implication of lifting up or raising and suggests praise that exalts or magnifies <extol the Lamb with loftiest song, ascend for him our cheerful strain—R. A. West > It is often used when a contrast between approbation or esteem and their opposites is enforced <an age must always decry itself and extol its forbears—Galsworthy > Eulogize, sometimes interchangeable with extol, may differ from it in implying formality both in the method and in the occasion; very frequently it suggests a set composition or oration (eulogy) suitable for a funeral or testimonial <he eulogized constitutional government as immeasurably superior to despotism—Lecky > <one of those rare days in June eulogized by poets—Barkins >

Ana *commend, applaud, compliment: *exalt, magnify, aggrandize

Ant blame —Con asperse, *malign, traduce, vilify, calumniate, defame, libel: disparage, *decry, detract, belittle: reprehend, reprobate, censure, denounce, *criticize prank n Prank, caper, antic, monkeyshine, dido mean a playful, often a mischievous, act or trick. Prank carries the strongest implication of devilry of all these words, though there is little suggestion of malice and primary emphasis upon the practical joke <the sons are wild and wanton sons, and perform all the pranks to be expected of them—T. S. Eliot > <when, with elfin delight, he perpetrates a successful practical joke—or when somebody makes him the butt of such a prank—J. A. Morris > Caper can suggest carefree frisking and bounding like a kid and is especially applicable to capricious or reckless escapades <relaxed acceptance of the most outlandish capers—Spectorsky > <it will be sad if his journalistic facility, his quirks and capers, obscure his excellence as a writer—A. C. Ward > Antic stresses the ludicrousness and grotesqueness of the movements, gestures, and postures rather than the spirit in which the acts or tricks are performed <the deliberately childish antics of comedians: the affected high voices, the giggles, the silly faces—Wouk > <the antics of a clown > Sometimes, however, it suggests showing off <watch the antics of boys climbing poles >  Monkeyshine may be applied to a caper or antic, but, especially in the plural, the term typically applies to behavior or a trick that attracts attention by its inappropriateness and often impropriety <scientists on the alert for any atomic monkeyshines—McCarten > <have been at this monkeyshine for a generation. Today a loaf of "bread" looks deceptively real—Philip Wylie > <students of political monkeyshines—Newsweek > Dido, also frequently used in the plural, applies to an absurd, foolish, or mischievous act and may come close to monkeyshine in suggesting obtrusive inappropriateness <this and ancillary didoes culminate in a whopper of an orgy—Perelman > <onetime mayor . . . whose unstatesmanlike didoes made a circus of municipal affairs—Time >

Ana frolic, gambol, rollick, sport, play (see under PLAY vb): levity, *lightness, frivolity: vagary, *caprice, freak, fancy, whim, whimsy, conceit

prate chatter, *chat, gab, patter, prattle, babble, gabble, jabber, gibber prattle chatter, patter, prate, gab, *chat, babble, gabble, jabber, gibber pray plead, petition, appeal, sue (see under PRAYER)

Ana supplicate, entreat, beseech, implore, *beg prayer, suit, plea, petition, appeal mean an earnest and usually a formal request for something and their corresponding intransitive verbs pray, sue, plead, petition, appeal mean to make such a request. Prayer and pray imply that the request is made to a person or body invested with authority or power or especially to God or a god; the words usually therefore connote humility in approach and often fervor in entreating <we pray for mercy; and that same prayer doth teach us all to render the deeds of mercy—Shak. > In religious use, where prayer and pray always imply an act of worship, they may or may not connote a request or petition. The implication of making a request is retained, however, in the specific legal use of these terms in a court of equity, where formally one prays for relief; the prayer in a bill in equity is the part that specifies the kind of relief sought. The words are also used in formal petitions or remonstrances to a legislative body. Suit and sue imply a deferential and formal solicitation sometimes for help or relief but often for a favor, a grace, or a kindness. Except in legal use (see SUIT n 2), in reference to the addressees of a man to the lady he hopes to marry, and in some idiomatic phrases such as “sue for peace,” the words are somewhat old-fashioned in flavor (his suit to the Muse . . . relies too much on exertions and capacities—The Nation) (she sued year after year . . . for acceptance by a society of dreary dowagers—E. K. Brown) Plea (see also APOLOGY) and plead often suggest a court of law, the status of a defendant or of an accused person, and formal statements in answer to a plaintiff’s allegations or the state’s charge. In general use both terms imply argument or urgent entreaty, of which self-justification, a desire for vindication or support, or strong partisanship is usually the motive (make a plea for forgiveness) (plead for a more tolerant attitude) (she pleaded the arguments, their tear-stained pleas—Malamud) (I plead frankly for the theistic hypothesis as involving fewer difficulties than any other—Inge) Petition and its verb petition imply a formal and specific request, often in writing, presented to the person or body that has power to grant it. The words carry little or no connotation of abject humility or of entreaty; rather, they suggest a right to make a request, as one of the sovereign people or as one who is confident that it will be judged on its merits (the flood of petitions from business interests begging relief from the political crisis—Woodward) (she neither petitioned for her right, nor claimed it—Meredith) Appeal, as noun and verb, basically implies a call for attention to and favorable consideration of one’s plea (an appeal for mercy) (an appeal to one’s family for help) Often it additionally connotes an insistence on being heard and hence a change of plea from an inferior to a superior power (as a higher court or a higher authority) or to an emotion in an attempt to evoke a favorable response or judgment (an appeal to the supreme court for a new trial) (to what sources of information do I appeal for guidance?—Cardozo) (Mantalinis and Dobbins who pursue women with appeals to their pity or jealousy or vanity—Shaw) Sometimes, used alone, either noun or verb implies a sympathetic or favorable response or a compelling quality (an appealing child) (the song has a human appeal)

Ana supplication, entreaty, beseeching, imploring, begging (see corresponding verbs at BEG): worship, adoration (see under REVERE)

preamble *introduction, prologue, prelude, preface, foreword, exordium precarious *dangerous, hazardous, perilous, risky

Ana *doubtful, dubious, questionable: distrustful, mistrustful (see corresponding verbs at DISTRUST): chance, chancy, haphazard, *random

Con *safe, secure: *steady, even, equable, constant precedence *priority

Ana leading or lead, guiding or guide (see GUIDE): antecedence, foregoing (see corresponding adjectives at PRECEDING) precedent adj *preceding, antecedent, foregoing, previous, prior, former, anterior preceding, antecedent, precedent, foregoing, previous, prior, former, anterior are comparable when they mean being before, especially in time or in order of arrangement. Preceding, opposed to succeeding and following, is restricted to time and place; it usually means immediately before (the preceding day) (the preceding clause) (events preceding the opening of the story) Antecedent, opposed to subsequent and consequent, usually implies order in time, but unlike preceding, it often suggests an indefinite intervening interval (events antecedent to the opening of the story) (Chaucer’s poems were written in a period antecedent to the Elizabethan Age) Very often, also, the word implies a causal or a logical, as well as a temporal, relation (to understand the success of modern dictators we must have a knowledge of antecedent conditions) (a conclusion is based on a chain of antecedent inferences) Precedent often applies to one thing which must precede another thing if the latter is to be valid or become effective; thus, a condition precedent in law is a condition that must be fulfilled before an estate can be vested in one or before a right accrues to one. Foregoing, opposed to following, applies almost exclusively to statements (the foregoing citations) (the foregoing argument) Previous and prior, opposed to subsequent, are often used almost interchangeably (his life previous to his marriage) (this will cancel all prior wills) But prior sometimes implies greater importance than previous; thus, a previous obligation suggests merely an obligation entered into earlier in point of time, whereas a prior obligation is one which surpasses the other in importance and must be fulfilled in advance of any other; a prior preferred stock is one whose claim to dividends or to a specified sum in liquidation comes before other preferred stocks of a company. Former, opposed to latter, even more definitely than prior, implies comparison; thus, there can be a former engagement only when there is also a later one; a previous or prior engagement may prevent one’s making a second. Anterior, opposed to posterior, also comparative in force, applies to position, usually in space, sometimes in order or time (the anterior lobe of the brain) (organization must presuppose life as anterior to it—Coleridge)

Ant following

precept rule, *law, canon, regulation, statute, ordinance

Ana *principle, fundamental, axiom: *doctrine, tenet, dogma: injunction, behest, bidding (see COMMAND n)

Ant practice: counsel precious *costly, expensive, dear, valuable, invaluable, priceless

Ana *choice, exquisite, recherché, rare: valued, prized, appreciated, cherished (see APPRECIATE) precipitate vb *speed, accelerate, quicken, hasten, hurry Ana drive, impel (see MOVE vb): *force, compel, coerce, constrain precipitate n *deposit, sediment, dregs, lees, grounds precipitate adj Precipitate, headlong, abrupt, impetuous, hasty, sudden as applied to persons or their acts or behavior denote characterized by excessive haste and unexpectedness. Precipitate especially stresses lack of due deliberation; sometimes it suggests prematureness and is therefore especially applicable to decisions or to actions based on decisions (she was resolved to lose nothing by neglect or delay, but also she meant to do nothing precipitate—H. G. Wells) Headlong throws the emphasis on rashness and lack of forethought; it is used to describe not only persons and their acts but the qualities exhibited by such persons or in such acts (headlong folly) (headlong haste) (the headlong torrent of her feelings scared her—Wouk) Abrupt when applied to actions suggests complete lack of warning or, sometimes, unceremoniousness (an abrupt departure) (the story came to an abrupt end) and when applied to manners or words, it usually implies curtness (an abrupt refusal) Impetuous implies violence or vehemence; as applied to persons, it often also suggests impulsiveness or, at times, extreme impatience (no necessity exists for any hurry, except in the brain of that impetuous boy—Meredith) (they had been impetuous and daring, making up their minds in a couple of flashes—Farrell) Hasty stresses quickness of response and often suggests thoughtlessness and hot temper rather than impulsiveness (often hasty in her judgment of strangers—Dahl) (too passionate and hasty to keep pace with the deliberate steps of his leader—Philip Marsh) Sudden is distinguishable from sudden meaning unexpected only by its added implications of extreme hastiness or impetuosity (given to sudden rages) (now and then an access of . . . sudden fury . . . would lay hold on a man or woman—Kipling)

Ana headstrong, willful, refractory (see UNRULY)

Ant deliberate —Con leisurely, *slow precipitous *steep, abrupt, sheer

Ana soaring, towering, rocketing, ascending, rising (see RISE) précis sketch, aperçu, survey, *compendium, syllabus, digest, pandect precise exact, accurate, *correct, nice, right

Ana definite, express, *explicit: strict, *rigid, rigorous, stringent

Ant loose —Con lax, slack (see LOOSE): *careless, heedless preciseness *precision precision, preciseness both denote the quality or character of what is precise. Precision denotes a quality that is sought for or is attained usually as a highly desirable thing. When used in reference to language it implies expression with such exactitude that neither more nor less than what applies to the thing under consideration is said (defining words with utmost care, they fashioned their statements of doctrine with meticulous precision—Dinsmore) (a vague term of abuse for any style that is . . . so evidently bad or second-rate that we do not recognize the necessity for greater precision in the phrases we apply to it—T. S. Eliot) When used in reference to the arts and sciences, the term usually implies such clearness of definition or such sharpness in distinction or in distinguishing that there is no confusion about outlines, boundaries, dividing lines, or movements (however we may disguise it by veiling words we do not and cannot carry out the distinction between legislative and executive action with mathematical precision—Justice Holmes) (acting, singing, and dancing seem to me the best methods of teaching aesthetic precision—Russell) Precision is also used in reference to an instrument, a machine, or a part of a machine that must be made with such exactness of measurements that an infinitesimal fraction of an inch would debar it from fulfilling its function (precision instruments) (tiny, Swiss-made replicas, they were precision machined and finely detailed, all scaled to perfection—Terry Southern) Preciseness is rarely interchangeable with precision, since it carries so strong an implication of severity or of strictness, or sometimes of overnicety in the observance of religious laws, the code of one's profession, or the proprieties as dictated by one's class or social equals that it is depreciative as often as it is laudatory (savoring of Puritanism and overstrict preciseness—Prynne) (the letter . . . had the preciseness of an imperial mandate—Meredith) (there was a certain amount of preciseness about the young man, and his approach to Texas was in the best striped-trousers tradition—T. D. Clark) preclude *prevent, obviate, avert, ward

Ana *hinder, obstruct, impede, block, bar: *stop, discontinue, quit, cease: *exclude, eliminate, shut out, debar precocious untimely, forward, *premature, advanced

Ana *immature, unmaturred, unripe

Ant backward

precursor *forerunner, harbinger, herald

Ana *sign, mark, token, symptom: antecedent, determinant, *cause, reason predicament, dilemma, quandary, plight, scrape, fix, jam, pickle can all denote a situation from which one does or can extricate himself only with difficulty. Predicament carries the implication that the situation constitutes a problem for those who are involved in it and may additionally imply lack of freedom to do what one wishes or finds essential for some reason, or it may imply deep perplexity as to ways out of the situation (advice . . . may be of such nature that it will be painful to reject and yet impossible to follow it; and in this predicament I conceive myself to be placed—Crabbe) (the predicament with which our civilization now finds itself confronted—the problem, namely, how to find healthy, happy leisure for all the working millions who are now being liberated by machines—L. P. Smith) Dilemma applies to a situation which constitutes a predicament from which one can escape only by a choice of equally unpleasant or unsatisfactory alternatives (faced with a dilemma: if they discard obsolete headings, the librarians may suffer; and if they do not discard them, the user may be penalized—Lawler) Quandary differs from dilemma chiefly in its stress on puzzlement or perplexity; in fact, this implication is often so emphasized that the suggestion of a dilemma or an unavoidable choice between alternatives is lost or obscured (he was in a quandary as to how he could keep his appointment) (all his quandaries terminated in the same catastrophe; a compromise—Disraeli) The remaining words all definitely imply a difficulty, often a very disagreeable situation. Plight suggests an unfortunate, trying, or unhappy situation (the plight in which the world finds itself today—Hobson) (the plight of the ten million forgotten men and women living at or below the destitution level—Crossman) Scrape applies to a specific difficulty in which one is involved through one's own fault; often it suggests a being in disgrace or disfavor (he escapes from trouble only to become idiotically conceited; and . . . plunges dementedly into a more ghastly scrape—Swinnerton) Fix and jam are somewhat casual terms that stress involvement and entanglement from which extrication is difficult (he will be in a fix if he doesn't settle his debts) (they get sick and it puts them in a jam and they end up under a pile of bills—Basso) Pickle applies to a particularly distressing or sorry plight (but when I was left ashore in Melbourne I was in a pretty pickle. I knew nobody, and I had no money—Shaw)

Ana *state, situation, condition, posture: pass, pinch, strait, emergency, exigency, *juncture predicate vb affirm, declare, profess, *assert, aver, protest, avouch, avow, warrant predict *foretell, forecast, prophesy, prognosticate, augur, presage, portend, forebode

Ana *foresee, foreknow, divine: *warn, forewarn, caution: surmise, *conjecture, guess predilection, partiality, prepossession, prejudice, bias are comparable when they mean an attitude of mind which predisposes one to make a certain choice or judgment or to take a certain view without full consideration or reflection. Predilection implies a strong liking that results from one's temperament, one's principles, or one's previous experience and that predisposes one to prefer certain kinds of things (as friends, books, foods, or methods) or to accept a thing without reference to any other test (a predilection for the strange and whimsical—Coleridge) (one or two authors of fiction for whom I have a predilection—Benson) Partiality implies a disposition to favor a particular person or thing because of some predilection or, more often, because of undue fondness or partisanship; it may connote unfairness (show partiality in appointments to office) (fond partiality for their own daughters' performance, and total indifference to any other person's—

Austen <I have a partiality for a man who isolates an issue and pleads to it, not all around the bush—Cozzens> Prepossession implies a fixed idea or conception in the light of which a new person, new idea, or new experience is judged <no approach opens on anything except from its own point of view and in terms of its own prepossessions—Blackmur> <the prepossessions of childhood and youth—Dugald Stewart>
Prejudice applies to a judgment made before evidence is available and typically to an unfavorable preconception marked by suspicion and antipathy <those who use their reason do not reach the same conclusions as those who obey their prejudices—Lippmann> <I do not think I speak only from my prejudices, although in justice I must admit that I approached Riesman's work with animus—Mailer>
Bias implies a lack of balance or distortion in one's judgment owing to the pull in a predictable or consistent direction of a predilection or a prepossession or of partiality or prejudice and a resulting inclination in favor of or against a person or thing <it is as well that you be able to allow for my personal bias—Shaw> <the most pernicious kind of bias consists in falsely supposing yourself to have none—Moberly>
Ana *leaning, propensity, proclivity, flair: bent, turn, knack, aptitude, *gift

Ant aversion

predispose dispose, *incline, bias

Ana influence, sway, *affect, touch, impress, strike predominant *dominant, paramount, preponderant, preponderating, sovereign

Ana controlling, directing, conducting, managing (see CONDUCT vb): *prevailing, prevalent: *chief, principal, leading, main, foremost

Con *subordinate, secondary, dependent, subject preeminent surpassing, transcendent, superlative, *supreme, peerless, incomparable

Ana *dominant, predominant, paramount: excelling or excellent, outdoing, outstripping (see corresponding verbs at EXCEED): *consummate, finished preempt *arrogate, usurp, appropriate, confiscate

Ana *take, seize, grasp, grab: *exclude, eliminate, shut out, debar preen plume, *pride, pique

Ana congratulate, *felicitate preface n *introduction, prologue, prelude, foreword, exordium, preamble prefatory *preliminary, introductory, preparatory

Ana preparing, fitting, readying (see PREPARE) prefer 1 *choose, select, elect, opt, pick, cull, single

Ana accept, *receive, admit, take: *approve, endorse, sanction: favor, *oblige, accommodate

2 *offer, proffer, tender, present preferable *better, superior preference selection, election, *choice, option, alternative

Ana *predilection, prepossession, partiality preferment *advancement, promotion, elevation

Ana advance, progress (see under ADVANCE vb 2): rising or rise, ascending or ascent (see corresponding verbs at RISE) pregnant meaningful, significant, *expressive, eloquent, sententious

Ana weighty, momentous, consequential, significant, important (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

prejudice n bias, partiality, prepossession, *predilection

Ana predisposition, disposition, inclination (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE): *leaning, penchant preliminary adj Preliminary, introductory, preparatory, prefatory describe something that serves to make ready the way for something else. Preliminary suggests reference to what must be done or made ready or acquired before entrance into some definitive state or activity becomes possible <the small amount of trouble involved in this preliminary measure will prove to be well worthwhile in avoiding middle—Dowdeswell>  <the ideal of cultivation cannot be appealed to as a standard without preliminary explanations and interpretations—Eliot> <the scientific spirit demands . . . a wish to find out the truth . . . There must be preliminary uncertainty, and subsequent decision according to the evidence—Russell> Introductory usually implies reference to the first steps in a process and therefore seldom applies to what is a prerequisite, as does preliminary, but rather to what sets an action, a work, or a process going <the introductory scene should present the situation to be developed> <an introductory sketch of equity courts and their jurisdiction—Wilkinson>

Preparatory comes close to preliminary in meaning, but it throws the emphasis upon matters that should be attended to in order to make a person or thing ready for what ensues or may ensue <take preparatory measures against a possible air raid>
Prefatory usually suggests not absolute need of preparation but a desire on the part of someone to prepare others (as for reading, for hearing, for action, or for understanding) <remarks prefatory to the customary toasts> <he introduces each of them with a really distinguished little group of prefatory passages—Bierstedt>

Ana *primary, primal: *elementary, elemental: basic, *fundamental prelude *introduction, prologue, preface, foreword, exordium, preamble premature, untimely, forward, advanced, precocious are comparable though rarely interchangeable when they mean unduly early in coming, happening, or developing.

Premature applies usually to something which takes place before its due or proper time   or comes into existence before it is fully grown or developed or ready for presentation   or to actions or persons that manifest overhaste or impatience <I have been a little premature, I perceive; I beg your pardon—Austen>
Untimely usually means little more than unseasonable but when it is applied to something which comes or occurs in advance of its due or proper time, it approaches very close to premature in meaning; the term, however, applies not so often to what begins a life or outward existence before its proper time as to what ends or destroys a life, a season, or a growing or developing thing before it has run its normal, natural, or allotted course <untimely falling of fruit from a tree> <the untimely death of the son and heir> <the untimely frosts that brought summer's beauty to an end> <whose harvest . . . perished by untimely blight—Brontë>
Forward applies chiefly to young living things or to growing crops, but also sometimes to seasons, that show signs of progress beyond those that are normal or usual for things of its kind at the time in question <an unusually forward spring>
Advanced tends to supplant forward when by comparison with other persons, other growing things, or other seasons of the same kind or class the one so described is notably ahead of the others <the most advanced children in the school> <conflict between the economic interests of the advanced and backward peoples—Hobson> Precocious basically implies an exceptional earliness in development (as in the germinating of seeds, the flowering of plants, the occurring of a process, or especially in the maturing of the mind) <inhibition of precocious germination of seeds—Chronica Botanica>  The term is also applied to qualities, conditions, or circumstances which properly belong to maturity but come or belong to one who is otherwise immature <his precocious dignities were hard for youth to support without arrogance—Buchan> <Shaw is dramatically precocious, and poetically less than immature—T. S. Eliot>

Ana *immature, unmaturing, unripe, unmellow: abortive, fruitless (see FUTURE): *precipitate, hasty, sudden, abrupt Ant matured

premeditated *deliberate, considered, advised, designed, studied

Ana intended, purposed, meant (see INTEND): *voluntary, intentional, willful

Ant unpremeditated: casual, accidental —Con *precipitate, abrupt, headlong, hasty, sudden premise n postulate, posit, presupposition, presumption, assumption (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ana ground, *reason: proposition, *proposal premise vb postulate, posit, *presuppose, presume, assume premium, prize, award, reward, meed, guerdon, bounty, bonus are comparable when they mean something which is bestowed upon a person as a recompense for cooperation, greater effort, superior merit, or supremacy in competition. Premium is applied usually to something extra or additional that serves as an incentive to buy, sell, loan, compete, or strive <the worker who does more . . . is rewarded by a premium, which is usually a percentage of the amount the additional work would cost—G. D. Halsey> <racking their brains last fall for a new premium that would intrigue . . . the breakfast-food public—Cerf> <ask a premium as well as interest for a loan> Prize is applied to something which is striven for or, sometimes, which may be won by chance; it is bestowed upon the winner in a contest or competition or in a lottery <bridge prizes>  <at last the Dodo said, "Everybody has won, and all must have prizes"—Lewis Carroll> In extended use prize commonly implies effort, struggle, and uncertainty in the seeking and often imputes value or worth to what is sought or competed for <let a man contend to the uttermost for his life's set prize, be it what it will!—Browning> <he had embarked early upon that desperate game of which the prize was a throne, and the forfeit, life—Replier> <the leading chairmanships are regarded as great prizes—Nevins> Award implies both a decision of judges and a bestowal of a prize or an honor; it is therefore often preferred to prize when the recipients have not been competitors in the strict sense but have in their work or performances fulfilled the conditions required by those who offer prizes <receive an award for civic service> <the urge to make the most of ourselves and to get awards varying with our success—J. T. Adams> Award is also applicable to the act of awarding a prize or to the decision in a particular competition <the judges may conceivably find themselves . . . unable to make an award—Barkham> Reward strongly involves the idea of recompense for something good or meritorious or ironically for something evil; it may be used in reference to a prize or premium only when that has been earned (as by effort or sacrifice); thus, a winner of a prize for the best novel of the year may feel that he has been given a reward for intense effort; a reward is offered for the return of a lost article <he scorned to take a reward for doing what in justice he ought to do—Steele> <it may come as a shock to the cynical that the mere embrace of wickedness is no guarantee of financial reward—Sat. Review> Meed and guerdon are close synonyms of reward, often employed without distinction, but the former tends to suggest a reward recognizing merit and proportioned to it, and the latter a prize or honor conferred as a reward <he must not float upon his watery bier unwept, and welter to the parching wind, without the meed of some melodious tear—Milton> <finds his guerdon in the consciousness of work done perfectly—Beerbohm> <verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed, should be the guerdon of a noble deed—Cowper> Bounty and bonus are applicable chiefly to a sum of money or its equivalent given as a premium or reward. Bounty is usually applied to a premium promised by a government or governmental agency as an inducement to some act (as enlistment in the army or navy, emigration to a distant colony, or destruction of noxious animals or pests) or as a subsidy to industry <the State pays a bounty for every wildcat killed> <generous bounties for enlistment were offered by federal, state, and local authorities—T. A. Bailey> Bonus, in contrast, is usually applied to something given over and above what is regularly received or due, either as a reward or encouragement or as a distribution of surplus  <the subsidies became only a bonus for inefficiency—T. W. Arnold> <bonus . . . includes extra payments for night work, hazardous work, regular attendance, and overtime, as well as any annual or regular allotment such as a Christmas bonus—Glossary of Currently-Used Wage Terms> <the reader is given a bonus of material not ordinarily found in meteorology texts—Science>

Ana *gift, present, gratuity, favor: enhancement, intensification, heightening (see corresponding verbs at INTENSIFY)

preoccupied *abstracted, absent, absentminded, distraught

Ana *intent, engrossed, absorbed: *forgetful, oblivious, unmindful preparatory *preliminary, introductory, prefatory

Ana fitting, preparing, qualifying, readying, conditioning (see PREPARE) prepare, fit, qualify, condition, ready are comparable when they mean to make someone or something ready. Prepare is the most inclusive of these terms; it implies a process, often a complicated process, involving a making ready, a getting ready, or a putting in readiness one or more persons or things <prepare ground for a crop> <prepare a corpse for burial> <prepare a person for bad news> <made a few notes for a paper I was preparing—Dahl> Fit is more limited in its scope than prepare: it suggests a making a person or thing fit for or suitable to a particular end or objective <accomplishments, fitting him to shine both in active and elegant life—Irving> <I had fitted myself to do everything, from sweeping out to writing the editorials—White> <the soldier's efforts to fit himself into the new world made possible by his sweat and blood—Wecter> Qualify (see also MODERATE) stresses the implication that a person's fitness for a duty, office, function, or status requires the fulfillment of some necessary conditions, such as taking certain courses of study or training, an examination, or an oath <do not let druggists prescribe for you; they are not qualified to treat syphilis—Fishbein> <his extensive knowledge of foreign languages specially qualified him for such service—A. P. Wills> Condition implies a getting into or a bringing to the condition that is proper or necessary for a person or, more often, a thing to satisfy a particular purpose or use <condition air by purification, humidification, and adjustment of temperature> <condition an athletic team by exercise and practice> <condition cattle for show or market> Ready emphasizes a putting a thing into order, especially for use, or a making ready a person for action <ready a bedroom for the use of a guest> <the whole town took part in helping to ready the outdoor theater—Marguerite Johnson > <the expedition readied itself during the summer—Handlin>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana *provide, supply, furnish; endow, endue, *dower; equip, outfit (see FURNISH): predispose, dispose, *incline preponderant, preponderating *dominant, predominant, paramount, sovereign

Ana *supreme, preeminent, transcendent, surpassing; outstanding, salient, signal (see NOTICEABLE)

prepossession partiality, prejudice, bias, *predilection

Ana bent, turn, knack, aptitude, *gift: *leaning, penchant: predisposition, inclination (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE) preposterous absurd, *foolish, silly

Ana *irrational, unreasonable: bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic prerequisite requisite, *requirement

Ana necessity, *need, exigency prerogative *right, privilege, perquisite, appanage, birth-right

Ana immunity, *exemption: *claim, title: *freedom, license, liberty presage n *foretoken, prognostic, omen, augury, portent

Ana *sign, symptom, mark, token: forewarning, warning (see WARN) presage vb augur, portend, forebode, prognosticate, *foretell, predict, forecast, prophesy

Ana *indicate, betoken, bespeak: signify, import, denote, *mean prescribe 1 *dictate, ordain, decree, impose

Ana order, *command, enjoin, bid: exact, *demand, require

2 Prescribe, assign, define mean to fix arbitrarily or authoritatively for the sake of order or of a clear understanding.

Prescribe stresses dictation, especially by one in command, and usually implies that the aim is to give explicit directions or clear guidance to those who accept one's authority or are bound to obey one's injunctions <the Constitution prescribes the conditions under which it may be amended> <the attending physician prescribes the medicines for his patient> <the fixed routine of prescribed duties—Wilde> <the code of behavior which the culture prescribes

for child training—Franz Alexander> Assign (see also ALLOT, ASCRIBE) usually has some suggestion of allotment or ascription; it implies arbitrary but not despotic determination for the sake of some practical end such as harmony in operation or functioning, the proper distribution of a number of things, or the settlement of a dispute by agreement <the city charter assigns the duties of each elected official and the limits of his authority> <the clause, assigning original jurisdiction to the supreme court—John Marshall> <impersonal words, such as those assigning latitude, longitude, and date—Russell> Define implies an intent to mark boundaries between things so as to prevent confusion, conflict, or overlapping <the issues here are not too well defined, but deliberation at this point may be fruitful in that respect—Terry Southern> <obscure symbolisms which define the relation of various age groups to each other—Sapir> <the Constitution of the United States prescribes the powers of the government, assigns the limits to each, and defines the functions of each branch>

Ana *set, settle, fix, establish: direct, enjoin, instruct, order, *command prescription *receipt, recipe presence *bearing, deportment, demeanor, mien, port

Ana personality, individuality (see DISPOSITION): aspect, *appearance, look present n *gift, gratuity, favor, boon, largess

Ana contribution, *donation, benefaction: grant, subvention (see APPROPRIATION) present vb 1 *give, bestow, confer, donate, afford

Ana *grant, award, accord

2 *offer, tender, proffer, prefer

Ana exhibit, display, parade, *show: advance, *adduce, allege, cite presentiment misgiving, foreboding, *apprehension

Ana *fear, dread, alarm, terror: foretaste, anticipation, *prospect: disquieting or disquietude, discomposing or discomposure, disturbance, perturbation (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE) presently, shortly, soon, directly are comparable when they mean after a little while or before long. Presently carries this as its chief meaning; it is a term of rather vague implication as to the time indicated <the doctor will be here presently> <he said he would tell them the full story presently> <I shall forget you presently, my dear, so make the most of this, your little day—Millyay> <I cannot attend to this at once but will do so presently> Shortly is often less vague as to the exact time indicated; it frequently retains one of its earlier implications of following quickly or with little delay <your father will be home shortly, for it is after five o'clock> <the ship will leave the wharf shortly, but perhaps you can catch it> <the two concluding volumes which will appear shortly—P. H. Douglas> <questions of vital importance came up for solution shortly after his appointment—Knott> Soon (see also EARLY) implies that the thing narrated or predicted happened or will happen without much loss of time; otherwise the term is indefinite and may suggest any length of time that seems short, depending on the nature of the matter involved <they will soon repent their anger> <the rout soon became general> <the doctor will see you very soon> <the plants soon took root> Directly often replaces its more basic sense of without delay by a value in which it is interchangeable with shortly and implies with little, or a minimum of, delay <I shall be back directly after sundown—Hichens> <I expect Rachel directly, as she said she should not stay a moment—Henning>

preserve vb *save, conserve

Ana *rescue, deliver, redeem, ransom: protect, guard, safeguard (see DEFEND) press n throng, crush, *crowd, mob, rout, horde

Ana *multitude, army, host, legion

press vb Press, bear, bear down, squeeze, crowd, jam mean to exert pressure upon something or someone continuously or for a length of time. They are not close synonyms because of added implications and connotations which often give them distinct or specific senses. Press fundamentally implies an effect involving a weighing upon or a steady pushing or thrusting and may suggest little more than this <press down the soil with his feet> <the crowd pressed against them> <press clothes with a hot iron> More often, however, the word is used in any of several extended senses in which it additionally implies such ideas as constraint or compulsion <he pressed the agitated girl into a seat—Hardy> or urgency in driving or in prosecuting <the work was pressed forward with the same feverish haste—Henry Adams> <you see, my people believe Gideon killed Hobart, and are determined to press the matter—Rose Macaulay> or importunity in urging <next morning, though they were pressed to stay, the lama insisted on departure—Kipling> <she pressed me to take some cream crackers also—Joyce> or, especially in the intransitive, a pushing or shoving to an objective (as in great numbers or with speedy movement) <he pressed on rapidly . . . towards what was evidently a signal light—Hardy> Bear (see also CARRY, BEAR 3) implies the exertion of weight or of pressure upon another person or thing

<the ceiling bears down upon the columns> <misfortune bore heavily upon him> Like press, the term has extended use; it and bear down may imply the achievement of any end consistent with the action of pressing down or heavily upon <Clan Alpine's best are backward borne—Scott> <his activity and zeal bore down all opposition—Macaulay> Squeeze usually implies the exertion of pressure on both sides or on all sides strongly enough and for a long enough time to accomplish a flattening, a crushing, a shaping, an emptying, or a compression <in washing silk stockings be sure to squeeze them, not wring them> <the child had squeezed the wax doll out of shape> Usually, however, the term carries an added implication that gives it an extended or specific meaning while often retaining its basic implication; sometimes it implies nothing more than an expression of affection <he squeezed his friend's hand> but at other times it implies such a different idea as extraction <squeeze the juice from a lemon> <approximates a laugh formed by . . . squeezing guttural sounds out of the throat—Pynchon> or eliciting with difficulty <we squeezed out of him an admission that he was leaving> or extortion <squeezing the people . . . of all the wealth that could be drained out of them—Froude> Squeeze is also susceptible to use even when there is no suggestion of exerting force on another but a clear suggestion of forcing someone, often oneself, or something into a space that is extremely small or is very circumscribed <squeeze through a half-opened window> <squeezes his hand into the hole and grasps the prize—Stevenson-Hamilton> Crowd (see also PACK) implies the exertion of pressure upon and usually suggests such a force as a number of persons or of things closely packed together <great numbers of the birds were crowded to death> <I hope not too many try to crowd in here at once. It isn't a very big room—Steinbeck> <never have more startling twists been crowded into the concluding scene of a melodrama—J. M. Brown> <the multitude of weeds crowded out the flowers> Sometimes crowd implies pressure exerted by one or more persons in pushing or shoving through a crowd <the speakers crowded their way through the throng to the platform> Jam in its most frequent meaning carries an implication of being wedged in so that pressure on all sides ensues and movement or escape is made impossible <the courts need not be jammed with negligence cases—S. H. Hofstadter> <just above McCauslin's, there is a rocky rapid, where logs jam in the spring—Thoreau> <traffic was completely jammed by the crowd—Current Biog.> Sometimes, however, the term implies not pressure upon all sides but (as in reference to a gun, an engine, or a machine) the presence of an obstacle or an obstruction or the displacement of a part which prevents operation <her propeller got foul of a rope, so that the shaft was jammed, and the engines could not be worked—Herschell>

Ana *push, thrust, propel, shove: drive, impel, *move: *pack, cram, stuff, ram

pressing adj Pressing, urgent, imperative, crying, importunate, insistent, exigent, instant are comparable when they mean demanding or claiming attention and especially immediate attention. Pressing often implies directly or indirectly the use of pressure by persons in calling for immediate attention to their wishes (managed to pay his most pressing debts) <without ever subordinating his high ideals to the pressing demands of popular opinion—Cohen> but it may also imply, without reference to personal agents, a claim to quick attention which cannot be denied <it was business of the most pressing importance which had brought them—Doyle> <it would be a great mistake for a government to concern themselves only with short-term problems, pressing as these are—Attlee>

Urgent is stronger than pressing and places greater stress upon the constraint or compulsion of attention (as by a vehement urging), and it also usually connotes the need of promptness (as in replying, considering, or relieving) <an urgent telegram> <the urgent needs of the war—Costain> <the more power the people are given the more urgent becomes the need for some rational and well-informed superpower to dominate them—Shaw> <[if human ingenuity fails in an urgent task, fate may take a hand—Buchan]> Imperative (see also MASTERFUL) stresses the obligatory nature of a task, need, or duty, but it also usually implies that immediate attention is essential <I feel it my imperative duty to warn you>  <military necessity makes it imperative that the bridge should be blown up—Peter Forster> Crying stresses the demand for attention but adds the implication of the extreme or shocking conspicuousness of the need <an organizer of genius in a day when order and discipline were the crying needs—Malone> <our crying need is for more blood donors> Importunate carries a strong implication of pertinacity in demanding or claiming attention; often therefore it is applied to persons or to their acts <an importunate beggar> <an importunate knocking at a door> <when people are importunate, and will not go away when asked, they had better come in—Shaw> but it is also much used in reference to impersonal matters (as problems or difficulties) which persistently and naggingly make claims upon one's full and immediate attention <the demands of the dance becoming . . . too importunate for a divided attention—Austen> <it is a work which ought to be studied by anyone to whom the relation of Church and State is an actual and importunate problem—T. S. Eliot> Like importunate, insistent basically implies a quality of persons, that of insisting or maintaining or asserting persistently <how continual and insistent is the cry for characters that can be worshiped—Galsworthy> <de Vaca was insistent, and Charles approached the table—Hergesheimer> and it too is often used in reference to a quality which enforces attention by its perseverance or compels it by obtruding itself upon one's consciousness <an insistent noise> <an insistent voice> <the insistent odor of fertilizer—Amer. Guide Series: Md.> <we who read poetry are ridden and haunted by no such insistent problem—Lowes> Exigent implies less a demand for immediate attention than one for action (as by way of giving assistance or settling problems); nevertheless the term comes very close to urgent or pressing in its emphasis on the exacting or the imperative nature of that demand <that exigent cry for help—Clarendon> <demands upon him had never been exigent before. He had selected a course of life which required only easy and congenial effort—S. H. Adams> Instant may come very close to urgent and like it often implies a temporal pressure; distinctively it may suggest perseverance or the need of perseverance <rejoicing in hope; patient in tribulation; continuing instant in prayer—Rom 12:12> <I thought there was not such instant haste—Scott> <the single-hearted force of him who sees the instant need—Buchan> <the need to study precision in writing has grown far more instant since men of science have abandoned the "universal language"—Quiller-Couch>

Ana immediate, *direct: demanding, claiming, requiring, exacting (see DEMAND): compelling, constraining, forcing, obliging (see FORCE)

pressure *stress, strain, tension prestige *influence, authority, weight, credit

Ana ascendancy, *supremacy: *power, sway, dominion: reputation, repute, honor, glory, *fame presume *presuppose, postulate, premise, posit, assume Ana surmise, *conjecture: deduce, *infer, judge, gather, conclude presumption presupposition, assumption, postulate, premise, posit (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ana view, *opinion, conviction, belief: conjecture, surmise (see under CONJECTURE vb)

presumptuous *confident, assured, sanguine, sure Ana self-confident, self-assured, self-possessed (see corresponding nouns at CONFIDENCE): presuming, assuming (see PRESUPPOSE): positive, cocksure, certain, *sure: arrogant, insolent, overbearing (see PROUD) presuppose, presume, assume, postulate, premise, posit are comparable when they mean to take something for granted or as true or existent especially as a basis for action or reasoning. Their corresponding nouns presupposition, presumption, assumption, postulate, premise, posit when they denote something that is taken for granted or is accepted as true or existent are distinguishable in general by the same implications and connotations as the verbs. Presuppose and presupposition, the most inclusive of these words, need not imply dubiousness about what is taken for granted. At the one extreme they may suggest nothing more than a hazy or imperfectly realized belief that something exists or is true or an uncritical acceptance of some hypothesis, in either case casting doubt on what is taken for granted   <it presupposes an opposition between the end of the individual and that of the State, such as was entirely foreign to the Greek conception—Dickinson> At the other extreme the terms may be used in reference to something that is taken for granted because it is the logically necessary antecedent of a thing known to be true or the truth of which is not presently in question <an effect presupposes a cause> <so deliberate a murder presupposes a motive> <belief in the supernatural presupposes a belief in natural law—Inge> Presume and presumption may imply conjecture <I presume they are now in London> but ordinarily they carry the implication that whatever is taken for granted is entitled to belief until it is disproved. Therefore one presumes only something for which there is justification in experience, or which has been shown to be sound in practice or in theory or which is the logical inference from such facts as are known <until a man or an organization has been condemned by due process of law he or it must be presumed innocent—Hutchins> <the fact that a custom is ancient and is still revered creates a presumption in its favor> <it cannot be presumed that any clause in the constitution is intended to be without effect—John Marshall> Assume and assumption stress the arbitrary acceptance as true of something which has not yet been proved or demonstrated or about which there is ground for a difference of opinion <some debaters weaken their case by assuming too much> <for the sake of argument let us assume that the accident occurred as is contended> <I know of nothing more false in science or more actively poisonous in politics . . . than the assumption that we belong as a race to the Teutonic family—Quiller-Couch> <I . . . assume that one purpose of the purchase was to suppress competition—Justice Holmes> <she was amazed and at a loss. She had assumed that Elfine's family would be overjoyed at their offspring's luck—Gibbons> Postulate, either as verb or noun, differs from assume or assumption in being more restricted in its application and more exact in its implications. One can assume or make an assumption at any point in a course of reasoning, but one postulates something or lays down a proposition as a postulate only as the groundwork for a single argument or for a chain of reasoning or for a system of thought. Postulate, therefore, has reference to one of the underlying assumptions, which are accepted as true but acknowledged as indemonstrable and without which thought or action or artistic representation is impossible because of the limitations of human knowledge or of human reason or of art <the ordinary man always postulates the reality of time and of space> <the dramatist postulates certain conventions which it is necessary for the audience to accept> <belief in the uniformity of nature, which is said to be a postulate of science—Russell> <the prevailing theological system is one which postulates the reality of guidance by a personal God—Huxley> <what I'm postulating in all this . . . is that the unconscious, you see, has an enormous teleological sense—Mailer> Premise is often used as though it were identical in meaning with postulate. Premise, the noun, in logic denotes a proposition, or one of the two propositions in a syllogism, from which an inference is drawn. In more general use it may refer to a proposition which is the starting point in an argument. But a premise is not a proposition that is frankly an assumption, as a postulate often is; it may have been previously demonstrated or it may be admitted as true or axiomatic, but it is always advanced as true and not as assumed <his listeners could not assent to his conclusion because they doubted the truth of his premises> <begin with a simple statement which is the premise for all that I have to say—F. C. James> Premise, the verb, means to lay down as a premise or to base on or introduce by a premise or other pertinent matter and usually refers to the broader rather than to the technical meaning of the noun <he premised his argument on a proposition which all but a few of his readers accept as true> <it was quickly evident that the decision was not premised upon any abhorrence of the test oath technique—New Republic> <these observations are premised solely for the purpose of rendering more intelligible those which apply more directly to the particular case under consideration—John Marshall> Posit, as noun and verb, comes close to postulate in implying the laying down of a proposition as a base for an argument, a line of reasoning, or a system of thought, but it may differ in suggesting subjective and arbitrary grounds rather than, as postulate regularly does, objective and rational grounds for selection of the proposition <if she needs salvation, she will posit a savior—Santayana> <he did not posit a world of wormless apples to set off the fruit he reported in such wonderful detail—Grattan> <materialism at that time posited the premise that character was the product of environment, and this was the basis for Zola's naturalism—Farrell> but even when it connotes actual falsity it remains very close to postulate <such posits or postulated entities are myths from the standpoint of the level below them, the phenomenalist level—Hofstadter> <kill or be killed, the sergeants cried, discriminating Die from Live, and spoke the truth. And also lied, posited false alternative—Gibson>

Ana surmise, *conjecture, guess: *infer, deduce, gather, judge

presupposition presumption, assumption, postulate, premise, posit (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ana surmise, conjecture, guess (see under CONJECTURE vb): inference, deduction, judgment (see under INFER): belief, conviction, *opinion, view pretend *assume, affect, simulate, feign, counterfeit, sham Ana *disguise, dissemble, cloak, mask, camouflage: *deceive, delude, mislead, beguile pretense 1 pretension, *claim, title Ana plea, pretext, excuse, *apology, apologia: *right, birthright, privilege

2 Pretense, pretension, make-believe are comparable though seldom interchangeable when they involve the idea of offering something false or deceptive as real or true. Pretense may denote false show in general, or the evidence of it <she is utterly devoid of pretense> <there is too much pretense in his piety> <the pretense that eludes the detection of others and that which deceives the pretender himself—Brownell> <confuse dignity with pomposity and pretense—Cerf> The term may apply also to an act that is performed, an appearance that is assumed, or a statement that is made in the hope that it will convince others of the truth or reality of something that is false or unreal <rushing away from the discussion on the transparent pretense of quieting the dog—Conrad> <my mother's affectionate pretense of his being the head of the family—Mary Austin> Pretension (see also CLAIM, AMBITION) is rarely used in place of pretense as a concrete act, appearance, or statement, but it is often used in the sense of false show or the evidence of it, with, however, somewhat differing implications. Where pretense in this general sense often implies hypocrisy or intentional deceit, pretension suggests rather an unwarranted assumption that one possesses certain desirable qualities or powers, and therefore more often implies overweening conceit or self-deception <his disdain of affectation and prudery was magnificent. He hated all pretension save his own pretension—Mencken> <this mannerism which has become so offensive . . . is Roslyn's social pretension. Perhaps I should say intellectual pretension. She entertains people as if she were conducting a salon—Mailer> <annoyed with . . . the pretensions of simplicity and homeliness in her parlor—Cheever> Make-believe applies usually to pretense or pretenses that arise not so much out of a desire to give others a false impression as out of a strong or vivid imagination (as that of children or poets who like to take what their fancies create as real or as true) <in children, the love of make-believe usually expresses itself in games> The term is occasionally used to denote the acceptance against one's better judgment of something manifestly unreal or untrue because of some power in the thing itself or in its accompaniments <tells us that the make-believe of the stage is a higher reality than life outside—Bentley>

Ana humbug, fake, sham, fraud, deceit, deception, *imposture: affectation, *pose, air, mannerism pretension 1 *claim, title, pretense

Ana *right, privilege, prerogative: assertion, affirmation, declaration, protestation (see corresponding verbs at ASSERT)

2 *pretense, make-believe

Ana *hypocrisy, sanctimony, cant: dissimulation, duplicity, guile, *deceit

3 *ambition, aspiration

Ana hoping or hope, expectation (see corresponding verbs at EXPECT): dream, vision, *fancy pretentious 1 *showy, ostentatious

Ana *gaudy, garish, flashy: *ornate, flamboyant, florid, baroque, rococo

Ant unpretentious

2 *ambitious, utopian

Ana aiming, aspiring, panting (see AIM vb): conspicuous, striking, arresting (see NOTICEABLE) preternatural *supernatural, supranatural, miraculous, superhuman

Ana unnatural, anomalous (see IRREGULAR): *abnormal, atypical: outstanding, remarkable, salient (see NOTICEABLE): *exceptional pretext excuse, plea, alibi, *apology, apologia

Ana ruse, *trick, maneuver, stratagem: *deception: justification, vindication, defending or defense (see corresponding verbs at MAINTAIN) pretty bonny, comely, fair, *beautiful, lovely, handsome, good-looking, beauteous, pulchritudinous

Ana charming, attractive, alluring (see under ATTRACT): dainty, delicate, exquisite (see CHOICE adj) prevail *induce, persuade, get

Ana *move, actuate, drive, impel: influence, *affect, impress, sway prevailing, prevalent, rife, current are comparable when they mean general (as in circulation, acceptance, or use) especially in a given place or at a given time. Prevailing applies especially to something which is predominant or which generally or commonly obtains at the time or in the place indicated or implied <the prevailing winds are westerly> <the prevailing opinion among booksellers> <their frankly barbarous outlook and prevailing grossness of expression—Bridges-Adams> Prevalent applies especially to something which is general or very common over a given area or at a given time. The term, however, does not suggest, as prevailing usually suggests, a predominance in frequency or in favor; rather, it connotes a frequency without necessarily implying that it is the most frequent; thus, the prevailing or usual wind in a region is from the southeast, but southwest winds may, nevertheless, be prevalent there; colds and grippe are prevalent in northern states during the winter; a widely prevalent pronunciation of a word may not necessarily be the prevailing pronunciation <so prevalent is urban blight that the nickname "Garden State" seems a macabre joke—Armbrister>

Rife adds to prevalent an implication such as the rapid spread of the thing so qualified, or a great increase in the number of its instances, or merely its commonness or abundance <rumor is already rife here as to Dr. Trefoil's successor—Trollope> <in a national political campaign, when issues are hotly contested and prejudices are rife—Mott> <was a considerable poet himself in days when poets were rife—Gogarty> Current applies especially to things (as language, philosophy, or fashion) that are constantly in process of change or development, or to things (as coins or diseases) that circulate constantly from one person or thing to another; hence, current so often describes what is widespread in its use, adoption, or acceptance at the time in question that it has come to imply the present if no other time is indicated; thus, current English is the English language of the present time; a current notion is one that is widely accepted at the moment; banknotes, postage stamps, or coins of the current series are those still being printed or minted for circulation or sale <current styles in hats> <current tendencies in fiction>  However, when the term applies to things (as periodicals) that come out in a series or in installments, current describes the one appearing during the present period (as the week or month) or the latest to appear <the current issue of a magazine> <the current installment of a new novel appearing serially in a periodical> But current is often used in the place of the other words of this group when the time or place is definitely indicated and merely the passing from one person to another is stressed <Shakespeare used the current language of his day—J. R. Lowell> <as current in her time, the Evangelical creed was simple—Ellis> <she had been given, at fourteen, the current version of her origin—Wharton>

Ana *dominant, predominant, preponderant: *common, ordinary, familiar: general, *universal prevalent *prevailing, rife, current

Ana *common, ordinary, familiar: pervading, impreg-nating, saturating (see PERMEATE): *usual, wonted, accustomed, customary prevaricate *lie, equivocate, palter, fib

Ana evade, elude, *escape: *misrepresent, falsify, belie, garble prevent 1 Prevent, anticipate, forestall can mean to be or get ahead of or to deal with beforehand, with reference especially to a thing's due time or to its actual occurrence or to the action of another. Prevent implies frustration (as of an intention or plan) or an averting (as of a threatened evil) or a rendering impossible (as by setting up an obstacle or obstacles) (the surest way to prevent aggression is to remain strong enough to overpower and defeat any who might attack—Lawrence) Sometimes the emphasis upon hindrance (see PREVENT 2) is so strong that other implications are nearly lost, but in the sense here considered advance provision or preparation against something possible or probable is clearly implied (medical science knows how to limit these evils and can do much to prevent their destructiveness—Eliot) (steps had therefore to be taken to prevent or impede these unseemly displays—Thornton) (who stands safest? tell me, is it he? . . . whose preventing care in peace provides fit arms against a war?—Pope) Anticipate (see also FORESEE) takes the place of prevent when merely getting ahead of another especially as a precursor or forerunner is implied (most of the great European thinkers of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries were in some measure inspired, influenced, or anticipated by Shaftesbury—Ellis) (a "Teacher of Righteousness" who seemed in some ways to anticipate Jesus—Edmund Wilson) Like prevent, anticipate sometimes suggests frustrating another in carrying out an intention or plan, but implies its prior performance or execution rather than interposition of obstacles to its performance (he would probably have died by the hand of the executioner, if the executioner had not been anticipated by the populace—Macaulay) (in October came Commodore T. A. C. Jones, palpitating lest Great Britain anticipate him in seizing California—H. I. Priestley) Distinctively, the word implies dealing with (as by using, paying, or acting) in advance of the due time or proper order but it often involves another implication which can be gathered only from the context; thus, one anticipates a payment on a loan by making a payment before it is due; one anticipates his salary by spending its equivalent before it is earned (anticipate some details in telling a story) Forestall, in what has become perhaps the less common meaning, carries over from its earliest sense so strong an implication of intercepting that it means merely to stop in its course (something you were not in the least prepared to face, something you hurried to forestall—Mary Austin) (forestalled by the watchful Jelks who fetched it for him—Dahl) But often the word loses most of its suggestion of intercepting and then implies beforehand action that serves to render a thing, and especially something inevitable, powerless to harm or merely useless (to forestall public opinion and guide its judgment—L. P. Smith) (posterity will still be explaining me, long after I am dead. Why, then, should I forestall their labors?—Rose Macaulay)

Ana *frustrate, thwart, foil, baffle, balk: *arrest, check, interrupt: avoid, shun, eschew, evade, *escape

2 Prevent, preclude, obviate, avert, ward are comparable when they mean to hinder or stop something that may occur or, in the case of prevent and preclude, to hinder or stop someone from doing something. Prevent usually implies the existence of something which serves as an insurmountable obstacle or an impediment (there is no law to prevent you from erecting a building on this spot)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

(the authority of his presence and the purposefulness of his manner at least prevent the role becoming a minor one—Bentley) (he prevents an innocent man going to the gallows—New Books) Preclude differs from prevent in stressing the existence of some situation or condition or the taking of anticipatory measures that effectually shuts out every possibility of a thing's occurring or of a person's doing something (he makes everything so clear that all misunderstanding is precluded) (death precluded him from completing his investigation) (the doctrine . . . was adopted, not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power—Brandeis) (the roar of the motor precluded further conversation—Gerald Beaumont) Obviate usually implies the use of intelligence or forethought; preclude also often implies these but sometimes it suggests the operation of chance. The chief distinction between these words when anticipatory measures are implied is that obviate usually connotes an attempt to forestall disagreeable eventualities by clearing away obstacles or by disposing of difficulties (the use of bills of exchange obviates the risk in transporting money from one country to another) (no care, no art, no organization of society, could obviate the inherent incompatibility of individual perfection with the course of nature—Dickinson) Avert and ward, the latter usually with off, differ from the other words of this group in implying prevention of an approaching or oncoming evil. They suggest therefore immediate and effective measures in the face of what threatens. Avert, however, suggests the use of active measures to force back the evil before it is actually encountered (avert a catastrophe by prompt action) (the satisfaction of averting war—J. R. Green) (it was very doubtful whether the consequences could be averted by sealing my lips—Shaw) Ward, on the other hand, implies a close encounter and the use of defensive measures (ward off an opponent's blow) in order to avoid the evil or to diminish its disastrous effects (ward off a chill with hot drinks) (a magic charm to ward off evil—Herskovits) (our nation has warded off all enemies—Eisenhower) Ana *hinder, impede, obstruct, block, bar, dam; debar, shut out (see EXCLUDE): prohibit, *forbid, interdict, inhibit

Ant permit

previous foregoing, prior, *preceding, antecedent, precedent, former, anterior

Ant subsequent: consequent prey n *victim, quarry

Ana *spoil, booty, prize

price n Price, charge, cost, expense can mean what is given or asked in payment for a thing or for its use, or for services. Price and charge in their ordinary nontechnical use commonly designate what is asked or demanded—in the case of price, especially for goods or commodities; in the case of charge, especially for services (what is the price of this book?) (the price of meat has risen greatly) (the market price of wheat) (the charge for haulage) (goods delivered free of charge within a radius of one hundred miles) (there is a small charge for registering a deed) In economics, however, price does not necessarily refer to a fixed sum of money asked by a seller, but to the quantity or number of units of one thing exchangeable in barter or sale for another thing (labor was the first price, the original purchase money that was paid for all things—Smith) Charge, especially in accounting, also applies to what is imposed on one as a financial burden (the fixed charges of a business include rentals, taxes, interest, and liens) Cost and expense in their ordinary nontechnical use apply to what is given or surrendered for something—cost often implying somewhat specifically the payment of the price asked and expense often designating the aggregate amount actually disbursed for something <they found the cost of the piano made too severe a drain on their resources> <the cost of provisions> <traveling expenses> <the heavy expense of a long illness> But cost sometimes replaces price with, however, a difference in connotation. Since cost applies to whatever must be given or sacrificed to obtain something, to produce something, or to attain some end whether it be money, labor, or lives or whether it is actually given or sacrificed, it, when replacing price, tends to suggest what will be taken or accepted from one in exchange rather than what the item is worth <the price of this article is below the cost of its manufacture> <victory will be won only at great cost of life> <he felt that the cost in effort was greater than he could afford> Expense also may denote expenditure especially but not only of money <fresh news is got only by enterprise and expense—Justice Holmes>  priceless invaluable, precious, *costly, expensive, dear, valuable

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana cherished, treasured, prized, valued (see APPRECIATE) prick vb 1 punch, puncture, *perforate, bore, drill

Ana *enter, pierce, probe, penetrate: *cut, slit, slash 2 *urge, egg, exhort, goad, spur, prod, sic

Ana stimulate, excite, pique, *provoke: *activate, actuate, motivate: compel, constrain, *force pride n Pride, vanity, vainglory are comparable when they mean the quality or the feeling of a person who is keenly or excessively aware of his own excellence or superiority. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are found in their corresponding adjectives proud, vain, vainglorious. Pride and proud may imply either justified or unjustified self-esteem, insofar as what one regards as a merit or a superiority is real or imagined, and insofar as the feeling manifests itself either in proper self-respect and distaste for what is beneath one's standards or in inordinate and arrogant conceit. In the “unjustified” interpretation, pride is a sin or vice and the antithesis of humility <those that walk in pride he is able to abase—Dan 4:37> <pride in the sense of concerning others less gifted than herself deserves the two lowest circles of a vulgar woman's Inferno—Holmes> <he had gone on for years deceiving himself—too proud, too self-conscious, maybe just too stupid to realize it—Styron> but in the “justified” interpretation, pride is a virtue or at least a highly pardonable, even commendable, feeling or quality that is the antithesis of shame and that spurs one to equal or better one's best or gives one rightful gratification <take pride in our work> <proud of his skill in fencing> <the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom—Lincoln> <she might grieve . . . but she was gallant, she was proud; she would not whine—Sackville-West> Vanity and vain imply an excessive desire to win the notice, approval, or praise of others; both connote an interest centered on oneself and often suggest a concentration on things of little or no importance relatively <had . . . not the gay, tail-spreading peacock vanity of his son—Carlyle> <he was conceited and vain, and he was endlessly trying to enjoy what he thought he appeared to be in the eyes of others—Farrell> <looked only at himself; he had nothing but a small and worthless mortification, which was only wounded vanity—Deland> Vainglory and vainglorious imply excessive pride which manifests itself in boastfulness and arrogant display of one's power, skill, or influence <vainglorious boasts—Irving> <American historians . . . with much of the vainglorious pedantry that Irving burlesqued—Brooks> <have blockaded their minds behind . . . walls of nationalistic egoism and vainglory, symptoms of collective paranoia—Yale Review>

Ana arrogance, haughtiness, superciliousness, disdainfulness or disdain, insolence (see corresponding adjectives at PROUD): complacency, smugness, griggishness (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT): self-esteem, self-love, egotism, egoism, *conceit

Ant humility: shame

pride vb Pride, plume, pique, preen are all reflexive verbs meaning to congratulate oneself because of something one is, has, or has done or achieved. Pride usually implies a taking credit to oneself on or upon something that rounds to one's honor or gives just cause for pride in oneself <he prides himself on his ancestry> <Mark prided himself upon maintaining outwardly a demeanor that showed not the least trace of overstrung nerves—Mackenzie> <he prided himself on his part in the new century, but he resisted the installation of a telephone—Frank> Plume adds to pride the implication of a display of vanity or of a more obvious exhibition of one's gratification; the term usually suggests less justification than does pride <the Viceroy plumed himself on the way in which he had instilled notions of reticence into his staff—Kipling> <Cicero plumed himself on flirting with disreputable actresses—Buchan> <authors who plume themselves on writing history with “popular appeal”—L. B. Wright> Pique (see also PROVOKE 1) differs from plume chiefly in carrying a hint of stirred-up pride or satisfaction; usually the cause of the pride is a special accomplishment <every Italian or Frenchman of any rank piques himself on speaking his own tongue correctly—Walpole> <“Pride,” observed Mary, who piqued herself upon the solidity of her reflections, “is a very common failing, I believe”—Austen> Preen is occasionally used in place of plume, sometimes with a slight suggestion of adorning oneself with one's virtues <he preened himself upon his sapience—Lowell> <men have admired, in theory, feminine virtue and preened themselves on the fear they aroused in the timid sex—Cunnington>

Ana *boast, brag, vaunt, crow, gasconade: congratulate, *felicitate priggish 1 smug, self-complacent, self-satisfied, *complacent

Ana righteous, ethical, *moral: conceited, egotistic, self-esteeming, self-loving (see corresponding nouns at CONCEIT)

2 prima*, prissy, prudish, puritanical, straitlaced, stuffy Ana see those at PRIGGISH 1

prim adj Prim, priggish, prissy, prudish, puritanical, straitlaced, stuffy mean excessively concerned with what one regards as proper or right. Prim and priggish (see also COMPLACENT) both imply an excessive and conscious fastidiousness in manners and morals that often more or less displeases an observer. Prim, however, often suggests stiffness and preciseness of manner as well as extreme decorousness, and priggish connotes a more or less offensive, but not necessarily conscious, assumption of moral superiority, so that they are rarely interchangeable. Further, prim is often applied to the dress, words, or actions of persons but priggish is seldom referred to anything but the person or to something that directly reveals his personality <in the reign of James I the conduct of ladies and gentlemen was not marked by the same prim propriety as in the reign of the highly respectable Victoria—Ellis> <Charlotte Lovell was meant to be an old maid . . . There was something prim about her in spite of her fiery hair—Wharton> <a widower, a man with a prim sour mouth and an expression of eternal disapproval

all over his face—Dahl) <there is . . . no moralizing of that offensively priggish kind which the instinct of boys teaches them to despise and mistrust—Pall Mall Gazette> <it was, as you warned me, very expensive. But I have no priggish objections to a little luxury—Ambler> Prissy, though sometimes very close to prim in meaning, is applied to a person who shows, or to a thing that manifests, an exaggerated sense of what is proper or precise; the term connotes sissiness but usually as a feminine concern for niceties of expression, of conduct, or of design and may imply a lack of forcefulness or virility <an outspoken candidate who offended the prissiest members of his party> <shock words may wear out their welcome just as readily as prissy ones—New Republic>  Prudish implies a modesty and decorousness so marked as to seem affected or overasserted; the term, however, seldom suggests pretense but rather an undue consciousness of propriety or fear of impropriety or an excessive sense of the importance of modesty and decorum  <tried to condemn her own attitude as old-fashioned, prudish. There was no such thing as an adulteress anymore, she told herself—Wouk> <had become so serious, so prudish almost, since she had given up balls and taken to visiting the poor—Wharton> Puritanical, often capitalized, may refer specifically to the religion of the Puritans especially as it showed itself in strict regulation of behavior, but in ordinary uncapitalized use it more often suggests only an excessive narrowness or illiberality in judgment (as of books, plays, or pictures), in regulation (as of manners and morals), or in narrowly determining the boundary between what is good and what is bad <the puritanical suspicion of beauty> <that Fielding in his hatred for humbug should have condemned purity as puritanical, is clearly lamentable—Stephen> <he held old-fashioned and rather puritanical views as to the vice of luxury and the sin of idleness—Woolf> <afraid that if it became known he might jeopardize his position in the rather puritanical community, he avoided consulting any of the Coltertown doctors—Elmer Rice> Straitlaced and stuffy are derogatory terms applicable to persons or things that are markedly puritanical or prudish; straitlaced refers more often to a person or his principles from a less subjective point of view than does stuffy, which is usually a term of contempt expressive of their effect upon the observer <“Stuffy, my lord; it’s an expression a good deal used in modern Society.” “What does it mean?” “Straitlaced, my lord”—Galsworthy>  <abiding by the rather involved, stuffy code of ethics—Riggs> <set himself incautiously to the business of assailing the straitlaced authorities of Boston—Parrington>

Ana precise, *correct, nice: *decorous, proper: *stiff, rigid, wooden primal primordial, primitive, pristine, primeval, *primary, prime

Ana *ultimate, absolute, categorical: original, fresh, *new primary, primal, primordial, primitive, pristine, primeval, prime mean first in some respect (as order, character, or importance). Something primary comes first in the order of development or of progression. Sometimes the term means little more than initial <the primary lesion of a disease> but sometimes it acquires the implications of fundamental, elemental, or elementary, and describes the part or element that is first (as in time or in importance) or one of such parts or elements in a complicated structure, substance, or system <the primary xylem tissue of a tree> <primary schools> <the raw material of music is sound. Sound is a primary, a “pure” medium It has no meaning except in a context—Day Lewis> and at other times it means original in the sense of not being derived <the primary colors> <the primary qualities of matter> <the primary cause> <basic research in the primary sciences such as physics and chemistry—Univ. of Fla. Bulletin> But primary may convey little or no suggestion of a time order and imply superiority in importance, thereby coming close to principal <the primary object of education> <the primary end of poetry> <all of us in the news business ought to remember that our primary responsibility is to the man who buys his newspaper, or turns on his radio, expecting . . . the whole truth—Davis> Primal applies to what is primary in the sense of initial, fundamental, or elemental <some who maintain that the regime of religious toleration has become possible only because we have lost the primal intensity of religious conviction—Cohen> <not philosophy, after all, not humanity, just sheer joyous power of song, is the primal thing in poetry—Beerbohm> or to what goes back to the origin or to the beginnings, especially of the human race <it hath the primal eldest curse upon’t, a brother’s murder—Shak.> <the Biblical vocabulary is compact of the primal stuff of our common humanity—Lowe> <ultimate issues, primal springs—Kipling> Primordial applies to what serves as the starting point in a course of development or growth or is the earliest in order or in formation. The term often suggests a rudimentary quality or state; thus, the primordial ooze is thought of as the substance out of which the earth was formed; a primordial cell is in biology the first and least specialized of a line of cells <primordial germ cells> <primordial man> <assuming that the sun, planets, and their satellites had all originated from a primordial mass of gas—S. F. Mason> Something primitive belongs to or is associated with an early stage, often but not necessarily a remote stage, in the development of something (as the human race). Often, when used in reference to art or manufacture, the term suggests lack of knowledge of such modern techniques or conventions as perspective in painting or modes in mensurable music or automation in industry <primitive potteries> <the symmetry of the body provides the archetype of primitive design in most religious art—Binyon> When used in reference to persons, their ways of living, or their instincts, emotions, or laws, it usually suggests either a connection with a very rudimentary civilization or a retention of a character or quality associated with such a civilization  <primitive laws to protect inheritance, to safeguard property—Rose Macaulay> <genuinely primitive traits that reveal themselves in the childhood of either the individual or the race—Babbitt> <he worked in the seed gardens, learned the primitive pharmacy of roots, barks, and herbs—Genzmer> Often, however, the term merely stresses an opposition to what is highly civilized or sophisticated and therefore unduly complicated, and may suggest naturalness or simplicity <life is very primitive here—which doesn’t mean that one is getting down to anything fundamental, but only going back to something immediate and simple—H. G. Wells> <the town band, a very primitive affair, brings up the rear, playing “Yankee Doodle”—Shaw> Pristine applies to something in its earliest and freshest and newest state <an image of the pristine earth—Wordsworth> <the qualities of pristine Christianity> <restored to its pristine freshness>  Primeval in its basic sense applies to something which belongs to or is characteristic of the first ages of the earth (for food you must still go to the earth and to the sea, as in primeval days—Jefferies) (drawings have a harsh, primeval definiteness, as though the world were in the throes of creation—Eric Newton) Often, however, the term merely suggests extreme antiquity or the absence of all signs of human trespass or influence (primeval ages) (behind the primeval curtain of trees and swamps the old tribal and pagan life went on—Cutforth) Prime in its basic sense comes very close to primordial and primitive in designating what is first in order of time (high heaven and earth ail from the prime foundation—Housman) but in its more common use it applies specifically to what is first in rank, degree, or dignity (makes his moral being his prime care—Wordsworth) (a matter of prime importance) or sometimes to what is merely choice or excellent of its kind (prime beef) (a prime claret)

Ana initiating or initial, beginning, commencing, starting (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN); elemental, *elementary: basic, *fundamental, radical: *chief, leading, principal

Con following, succeeding, ensuing (see FOLLOW); secondary, *subordinate prime adj *primary, primal, primordial, primitive, pristine, primeval

Ana *chief, leading, principal, main: *choice, exquisite, recherché prime mover *origin, source, provenance, provenience, inception, root primeval pristine, primitive, primordial, primal, *primary, prime

Ana aboriginal, *native, indigenous, autochthonous: original, *new primitive *primary, primal, primordial, pristine, primeval, prime

Ana *fundamental, basic, radical: elemental, *elementary: aboriginal, *native primordial 1 primeval, pristine, primitive, primal, *primary, prime

2 *initial, original princely *kingly, regal, royal, queenly, imperial Ana *luxurious, sumptuous, opulent: magnificent, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, *liberal principal adj *chief, main, leading, foremost, capital

Ana *dominant, predominant, paramount: vital, cardinal, fundamental, *essential: preeminent, *supreme, superlative principally mainly, chiefly, mostly, *largely, greatly, generally principle, axiom, fundamental, law, theorem are comparable when they denote a proposition or other formulation stating a fact or a generalization accepted as true and basic. Principle applies to a generalization that provides a basis for reasoning or a guide for conduct or procedure (the principle of free speech) (his remarkable grasp of principle in the remaining field, that of historical geography—Farrington) (the same hankering as their pious ancestors for a cozy universe, a closed system of certainties erected upon a single principle—Muller) (the principle was established that no officer or employee . . . was entitled to any classified information whatever unless it was necessary for the performance of his duties—Baxter) (I do not mean to assert this pedantically as an absolute rule, but as a principle guiding school authorities—Russell) Axiom can apply to a principle that is not open to dispute because self-evident and is usually one upon which a structure of reasoning is or may be erected (the axioms of Euclidean geometry) Perhaps more frequently the term implies a principle universally accepted or regarded as worthy of acceptance rather than one necessarily true (the journalistic axiom that there is nothing as dead as yesterday's newspaper—G. W. Johnson) (the superficial commonplaces which pass as axioms in our popular intellectual milieu—Cohen) Fundamental usually applies to a principle, but sometimes a fact, so essential to a philosophy, religion, science, or art that its rejection would destroy the intellectual structure resting upon it (the fundamentals of scientific research) (developed the arch and other fundamentals of architecture—R. W. Murray) (what they deemed the fundamentals of the Christian faith—Latourette) Law applies to a formulation stating an order or relation of phenomena which is regarded as always holding good (the conquest of nature's procreative forces, through the discovery of the laws of agriculture and animal husbandry—R. W. Murray) (the laws of the rain and of the seasons here are tropic laws—M. S. Douglas) (it is a law that no two electrons may occupy the same orbit—Eddington) Theorem applies to a proposition that admits of rational proof and, usually, is logically necessary to succeeding logical steps in a structure of reasoning (theoretical economics puts the patterns of uniformity in a coherent system [of which] the basic propositions are called assumptions or postulates, the derived propositions are called theorems—Lange) (the error that was to prove most durable of all, the theorem that only a very short land traverse would be found necessary from Missouri to Pacific waters—De Voto)

Ana basis, foundation, ground (see BASE): *law, rule, canon, precept: *form, usage, convention print n *impression, impress, imprint, stamp

Ana mark, token, *sign: *trace, vestige printing *edition, impression, reprinting, reissue prior previous, foregoing, precedent, anterior, former, antecedent, *preceding

Ana ahead, *before, forward

Con behind, *after priority, precedence can both mean the act, the fact, or, especially, the right of preceding another. When the reference is to the right, both terms usually imply an established or accepted code that determines which shall precede the other. Priority is the usual term in law and the sciences and chiefly concerns an order of time. When there is merely a question concerning the time relations of events, the term implies antecedence in occurrence (the courts established the priority of the wife's death in an accident) (the right to inherit a title is dependent mainly on priority of birth) (they disputed priority of invention of the regenerative electron-tube circuit—C. B. Fisher) When, however, the question concerns a number of things (as debts or cases) which cannot be taken care of or dealt with all at once and must be arranged in order of time, priority suggests a rule of arrangement that determines the order in which one goes before another (in payment of debts he must observe the rules of priority—Blackstone) (liens on a property take priority in bankruptcy settlements) (the "law of priority" in biological classification is the principle that the first published name of a genus or species has preference over any one subsequently published) (where roads cross one another without a sign on either, there is no absolute priority, but it is usual to give way to the vehicle on one's right—Joseph) Precedence, though frequent in general use, is, in the sense under consideration, primarily a term of formal etiquette; it then implies an established order (as in receiving, greeting, or seating) which gives preference to those who are superior in rank, dignity, or position (among ambassadors of equal rank, precedence is usually determined by order of seniority or length of service) <the order of precedence was very rigidly observed, for the visiting maids and valets enjoyed the same hierarchy as their mistresses and masters—Sackville-West> In more general use the term often suggests a prior place, chance, or seat accorded to one, often because of age, sex, social position, or as a mere courtesy <no one lost anything by granting precedence to a man so flawlessly urbane—Repplier> <to give organizations precedence over persons is to subordinate ends to means—Huxley>

Ana ordering or order, arrangement (see corresponding verbs at ORDER); ascendancy, *supremacy; preeminence, transcendence (see corresponding adjectives at SUPREME)

prory *cloister, monastery, nunnery, convent, abbey prismatic, iridescent, opalescent, opaline are comparable when they mean marked by or displaying a variety of colors. Prismatic implies an exhibition of the colors of the spectrum (as when a ray of light is refracted by a prism) or of a rainbow. In its nontechnical and extended use it merely suggests a brilliant or striking variety of colors <Jeremy Taylor's style is prismatic. It unfolds the colors of the rainbow—Hazlitt> <have you ever observed a hummingbird moving about in an aerial dance among the flowers—a living prismatic gem that changes its color with every change of position?—Hudson> Iridescent implies a rainbowlike play of shifting, merging colors such as is exhibited by a soap bubble, by mother of pearl, and by the plumage of some birds <the whole texture of his mind, though its substance seem plain and grave, shows itself at every turn iridescent with poetic feeling like shot silk—J. R. Lowell> <something iridescent, like the shining of wet sand—Repplier> Opalescent and the less frequent opaline imply both the soft milky quality and the iridescence of an opal <Titian hardly ever paints sunshine, but a certain opalescent twilight which has as much of human emotion as of imitative truth in it—Ruskin> <the opaline light which comes through these lateral bays, and makes a sort of veil . . . under the lofty vaulting—Henry Adams> prisoner, captive both denote one who is deprived of his liberty. Prisoner is the general term, applicable to anyone so deprived, but it is frequently used in a more specific sense, and applied to one who is confined to a prison or held under guard <prisoners of war> <take one prisoner> <the prisoners in the penitentiary> Captive implies seizure by force (as in war, conquest, or brigandage); it also often implies bondage or slavery rather than imprisonment, and sometimes suggests capture for ransom <he hath brought many captives home to Rome, whose ransoms did the general coffers fill—Shak.>

prissy *prim, priggish, prudish, puritanical, straitlaced, stuffy

Ana womanish, effeminate, ladylike, *female: finicky, fastidious, *nice, squeamish; scrupulous, punctilious, meticulous, *careful pristine primeval, primordial, primitive, primal, *primary, prime

Ana original, fresh, *new privateer *pirate, freebooter, buccaneer, corsair privation 1 *lack, want, dearth, absence, defect

Ana negation, nullification, annulling, abrogation (see corresponding verbs at NULLIFY)

2 *poverty, want, destitution, indigence, penury

Ana depletion, draining, exhaustion, impoverishment (see corresponding verbs at DEplete): *need, necessity, exigency; pinch, strait (see JUNCTURE) privilege *right, prerogative, birthright, perquisite, appanage

Ana concession, *allowance: favor, boon (see GIFT):

*claim, title

prize n *premium, award, reward, meed, guerdon, bounty, bonus

Ana recompensing or recompense, compensation (see corresponding verbs at PAY): winning or winnings (see GET)

Ant forfeit

prize vb value, treasure, cherish, *appreciate

Ana esteem, respect, admire, regard (see under REGARD n): *estimate, evaluate, assess, assay, rate prize n *spoil, booty, plunder, loot, swag

probable, possible, likely are comparable when they mean not now certain but such as may be, or may become, true, real, or actual. Something probable has so much evidence in its support or seems so reasonable that it commends itself to the mind as worthy of belief, though not to be accepted as a certainty; thus, the most probable conclusion from evidence at hand is the one which the weight of evidence supports even though it does not provide proof; the probable thief is the one at whom so much of the evidence points as to give grounds for a presumption that he is guilty; the "probable life" of a person, in the language of actuaries, is the period during which one half the persons of a given age at a given time will remain alive according to mortality tables <the probable cause of a fire> <the probable expenses of a trip> <far from being a madman's dream . . . Burr's chance of success was uncomfortably probable—Hervey Allen> <it is not probable that any enemy would . . . attack us by landing troops in the United States—Roosevelt> Something possible is within the powers of performance, attainment, or conception of an agent or agency, especially a human agent <it is possible to cross the Atlantic in an airplane> <knowledge possible only to God> or which is within the widest limits of a person's ability or a thing's capacity as determined by nature, necessity, or circumstances <it is not possible to carry more than a thousand gallons of gasoline in this airplane> <communication with the stars may never be possible> <the number of possible amusements is small until the child has learned to grasp objects that it sees—Russell> or which, though not probable, may happen by chance or is dependent on a contingency <his election is possible, but not probable> <it is possible that she will come this way> <I think that "so near as to obstruct" means so near as actually to obstruct—and not merely near enough to threaten a possible obstruction—Justice Holmes> Something likely (see also APT 2) is to all appearances as alleged, suggested, or required; in contrast with probable, likely does not as often or as definitely suggest grounds sufficient to warrant a presumption of truth, but in contrast with possible, it usually implies many more chances in favor of its being true or coming about; thus, the probable murderer is the suspect whose guilt is nearly but not completely established by the evidence; a possible murderer is merely one against whom suspicion is directed for some reason, or one known to have had opportunity; the likely murderer is the one among the possible murderers who, especially from a more or less superficial point of view, has had the strongest motive and the best opportunity, or toward whom the circumstantial evidence most distinctly points as the murderer <no likely heir to the bachelor millionaire's estate has been mentioned> <the likely outcome of the war changes from month to month> <if there is failure in one quarter, no matter which, it is a likely sign of failure in the other—Blackmur> Likely is also often used in the sense of promising because of appearances or ability to win favor   and sometimes in that of suitable because of apparent fitness or adaptation to some end <watching for a likely place to picnic> <chose the eastern part of the island as the more likely district for discovery of prehistoric remains—Clodd> Ana credible, believable, colorable, *plausible: reasonable, *rational

Ant certain: improbable probationer *novice, novitiate, apprentice, postulant, neophyte probe n investigation, *inquiry, inquisition, inquest, research probe vb pierce, penetrate, *enter

Ana examine, inspect, *scrutinize: *prove, try, test probity *honesty, honor, integrity

Ana uprightness, justness, conscientiousness, scrupulousness (see corresponding adjectives at UPRIGHT): *truth, veracity: rectitude, *goodness, virtue problem *mystery, enigma, riddle, puzzle, conundrum Ana perplexity, mystification, bewilderment, distraction (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE): *predicament, dilemma, plight, quandary

Ant solution

problematic *doubtful, dubious, questionable

Ana ambiguous, equivocal, *obscure, vague, cryptic, enigmatic: uncertain, suspicious, mistrustful (see corresponding nouns at UNCERTAINTY)

procedure *process, proceeding

Ana ordering or order, arrangement (see corresponding verbs at ORDER): *method, system, manner, way: conducting or conduct, management (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT) proceed issue, emanate, stem, flow, derive, *spring, arise, rise, originate

Ana *follow, succeed, ensue: *come, arrive proceeding n *process, procedure

Ana *action, act, deed: *affair, business, concern: operation, functioning, working (see corresponding verbs at ACT) process, procedure, proceeding denote the series of actions, operations, or motions involved in the accomplishment of an end. Process is particularly appropriate when progress from a definite beginning to a definite end is implied and something is thereby made, produced, or changed from one thing into another; the term usually suggests a division of the entire sequence of events into steps or stages <describe the process of making sugar from sugarcane> <the process of digestion> <perfect knowledge is no mere intellectual process—Inge> <I have always liked the process of commuting; every phase of the little journey is a pleasure to me—Dahl> The idiomatic phrase “in process” means in the course of being made, produced, built, constructed, evolved, or attained <for men in practical life perfection is something far off and still in process of achievement—James> Procedure stresses the method followed or the routine to be followed, whether in carrying through an industrial, a chemical, a mental, or other process, or in doing some specific thing (as conducting a meeting, a trial, a conference, or a business, or performing an experiment or an operation, or prosecuting an investigation or a search) <study the rudiments of parliamentary procedure> <knows laboratory procedure thoroughly> <correct legal procedure> <you know what a stickler she is for procedure—“red tape” I called it to her—Terry Southern> <this Byzantine court, which is trying to adapt its procedure to the ideals of its Western education—Edmund Wilson> Proceeding, a much less definite term than the others of this group, applies not only to the sequence of events, actions, or operations directed toward the attainment of an end, but also to any one of such events, acts, or operations. The term throws more stress on the individual or collective items than on their closely knit relation to each other or on the final end which they have in view, and often the term means little more than an instance, sometimes a course, of conduct or behavior <the law . . . stepped in to prevent a proceeding which it regarded as petty treason to the commonwealth—Froude> <record the proceedings of a meeting of a society> <the precise habits, the incredible proceedings of human insects—L. P. Smith> <legislative proceedings frequently veer off into areas of somewhat less than momentous significance—Armbrister>

Ana progress, advance (see under ADVANCE vb): conducting or conduct, management, controlling or control, direction (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT): performance, execution, accomplishment, fulfillment (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM) procession, parade, cortege, cavalcade, motorcade mean a body (as of persons and vehicles) moving along in order. Procession stresses the orderly arrangement and smooth procedure; often it suggests formality, solemnity, and pomp  <and all the priests and friars in my realm shall in procession sing her endless praise—Shak.> <and delegate Dead from each past age and race, viewless to man, in large procession pace—Lanier> Parade is used of a usually large and formal procession. The term also implies marching in a more or less military fashion to the accompaniment of a band and often suggests other evidences of pomp and display (see also DISPLAY) <the Fourth of July program includes a parade and fireworks> <the annual parades of both organizations . . . open-air festivals, with colorful banners, drum and fife bands—Mogey> <there was a parade in honor of the successful candidate for governor> Cortege, sometimes used in the meaning of a retinue or train, usually means a procession of mourners at a funeral; it can refer either to those who follow the casket on foot or to those who follow in vehicles <declared that the cortege of the dead emperor must set forth on the journey homeward—Buck> Cavalcade throws the emphasis upon the moving of men on horseback or in vehicles; often it applies specifically to a dignitary and his retinue <the king's cavalcade through the gates of the city the day before his coronation—Walpole> and only indirectly does it suggest the appeal of a spectacle or spectacular procession. Motorcade may replace cavalcade when the intent is to stress mechanized as distinguished from equine power; otherwise the two terms are similar in values <with a motorcade of more than 2,000 vehicles, New York yesterday celebrated its traffic safety record for the first quarter—N. Y. American> <more than 300 floats will form a brilliant motorcade to the fairgrounds—Brooklyn Daily Eagle> <the three heads of state motored to Arlington Cemetery. It was raw and windy as the motorcade entered the cemetery—Time>

Ana *succession, sequence, train: pomp, array (see DISPLAY)

proclaim *declare, announce, publish, advertise, promulgate, broadcast

Ana *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge, tell: voice, utter, vent, ventilate (see EXPRESS vb): *inform, apprise proclamation declaration, announcement, publication, advertisement, promulgation, broadcasting (see under DECLARE) proclivity propensity, *leaning, penchant, flair

Ana knack, aptitude, *gift, bent, turn: inclination, disposition, predisposition (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE): *predilection, prepossession, prejudice, bias procrastinate *delay, lag, dawdle, loiter

Ana *defer, suspend, stay, postpone: protract, prolong (see EXTEND)

Ant hasten, hurry

procreate *generate, engender, beget, get, sire, breed, propagate, reproduce procure *get, obtain, secure, acquire, gain, win

Ana *negotiate, arrange, concert: *reach, compass, gain, achieve, attain prod vb 1 *poke, nudge, jog

Ana prick, punch, bore (see PERFORATE): goad, spur (see corresponding nouns at MOTIVE): pierce, penetrate (see ENTER)

2 *urge, egg, exhort, goad, spur, prick, sic

Ana *incite, instigate: stimulate, excite, pique, *provoke prod n poke, nudge, jog (see under POKE vb)

Ana *stimulus, stimulant, incitement, impetus prodigal adj *profuse, lavish, exuberant, luxuriant, lush

Ana extravagant, exorbitant, immoderate, *excessive: abundant, *plentiful, plenteous, ample, copious: *supererogatory, uncalled-for, gratuitous

Ant parsimonious: frugal —Con niggardly, penurious, *stingy: economical, *sparing, thrifty prodigal n *spendthrift, profligate, waster, wastrel

Ana spender, expender, disburser (see corresponding verbs at SPEND) prodigious *monstrous, tremendous, stupendous, monumental

Ana enormous, immense, *huge, vast, gigantic, mammoth, colossal: amazing, astounding, flabbergasting (see SURPRISE)

prodigy *wonder, marvel, miracle, phenomenon

Ana abnormality (see corresponding adjective at ABNORMAL): monstrosity (see corresponding adjective at MONSTROUS): anomaly, *paradox produce vb *bear, yield, turn out

Ana *generate, breed, propagate: *make, form, shape, fabricate, manufacture: create, *invent produce n *product, production product 1 *work, production, opus, artifact

Ana forming or form, fabrication, manufacturing or manufacture (see corresponding verbs at MAKE): article, object, *thing

2 Product, production, produce are comparable when they denote something produced or brought into being by a process or operation, especially one involving labor or effort. Product is the most general of these terms, applicable to anything produced by generation, growth, labor, or thought or by any industrial, chemical, mental, or other process or by the operation of causes in no way controllable by man (the literary products of the Age of Reason) (soot is usually the product of the imperfect combustion of fuel) (even the simplest poem is the product of much . . . work—Highet) (he is a product of his party machine, in which he has had his whole existence—Edmund Wilson) Production, in the sense of the thing produced, is generally restricted in its application to human products involving intellectual or artistic labor, and it is the usual term in theatrical and motion-picture use. A work of sculpture, a philosophical or historical treatise, or a theatrical representation of a play may be described as a production (the greatest production of Hamlet that this country has been privileged to see and hear) (the finest productions of Praxiteles or Zeuxis—Froude) (Wagner believed Parsifal the climactic production of his career) But production is also used in a collective sense to denote all the things, often of a specified or implied kind, manufactured or grown to satisfy human wants (an increase of steel production is anticipated) (this chart shows the relationship between pork production and pork prices—Sat. Review) Produce is ordinarily a collective noun applied to natural and especially agricultural as distinguished from industrial products (the meager produce of the land—Cowper) (able to exist for a fortnight in the western Mediterranean where less sea produce was forthcoming—N. B. Marshall) (the produce that is likely to result from the mating of one individual with another—Wynmalen) Sometimes the term is applied specifically to vegetables and fruits (stripping the country of hogs and cattle, produce and flour—Mason) and sometimes it is applied to products of human and especially human intellectual effort (nine-tenths of modern science is . . . the produce of men whom their contemporaries thought dreamers—Bagehot)

production 1 *work, product, opus, artifact

Ana execution, fulfillment, performance (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM): *effort, exertion

2 *product, produce

profanation, desecration, sacrilege, blasphemy can all mean a violation or a misuse of something regarded as sacred. Profanation applies to an irreverent outrage shocking to those who cherish and hold sacred the thing mistreated; although it may suggest base callousness, it often applies to vulgar intrusion or insensitive irreverence (as of vandals) (these sages attribute the calamity to a profanation of the sacred grove—Frazier) Desecration applies especially to any action whereby sacred character is impaired or lost; often it indicates loss of that character through defilement, often malicious or malign and culpable (desecration of the cathedrals by the invading barbarians) (the last priest, feeling there was no work to be done in such a dreary outpost, burned the chapel in 1706 to prevent its desecration—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) Sacrilege may refer technically to reception or administration of a religious sacrament by one unworthy; it refers commonly to any outrageous profanation (the execution was not followed by any sacrilege to the church or defiling of holy vessels—Cather) (above all things they dread any contact with the spirits of the dead. Only a sorcerer would dare to commit such a sacrilege, an offense punishable with death—Frazier) Blasphemy (see also BLASPHEMY 1; compare blasphemous under IMPIOUS) may refer to any strong irreverence, often one involving or suggesting reviling, defying, mocking, or otherwise treating with indignity something sacred (he cooperated with me in sending the pious elders to unspeakable corners of hell; we arranged a wordless language of blasphemy and signaled to each other across the laps of the godly—Brace)

Ana defilement, pollution, contamination (see corresponding verbs at CONTAMINATE); debasement, vitiation, corruption, perversion (see corresponding verbs at DEBASE); violation, transgression, trespass (see BREACH) profane adj 1 Profane, secular, lay, temporal mean not dedicated or set apart for religious ends or uses. Profane specifically implies an opposition to sacred (see HOLY); in this sense it is purely descriptive and not derogatory; thus, profane history is history dealing with nations or peoples rather than with biblical events or characters; profane literature comprises all literature except the Scriptures, other sacred writings, and sometimes writings having a definite religious end or use; profane love applies to human love as between man and woman, as distinguished from the love of man for God and of God for man (the profane poet is by instinct a naturalist. He loves landscape, he loves love, he loves the humor and pathos of earthly existence—Santayana) The term also is used to imply an opposition to holy, religious, spiritual (I have observed that profane men living in ships, like the holy men gathered together in monasteries, develop traits of profound resemblance—Conrad) Secular usually implies a relation to the world as distinguished from the church or religion or the religious life; it may come close to profane <secular music> <the secular drama> or it may be opposed to regular in the sense of governed by a monastic rule; thus, a secular priest is a priest who does not belong to a religious order; a regular priest is one who does. The term is most often opposed to religious in the sense of belonging to or serving the ends of a religion or church, then coming close to civil or public <secular schools> <secular journals> <the secular authority> <there are peoples in the world who have no secular dances, only religious dances—Ellis> <believing that no creed, religious or secular, can be justified except on the basis of reason and evidence—Times Lit. Sup.> Lay is applied to persons, or sometimes to their activities, interests, or duties, that do not belong to the clergy and particularly the regularly ordained clergy; it therefore usually implies an opposition to clerical or ecclesiastical <laymen and laywomen of the parish>  <lay sermon> <lay delegates to a diocesan convention> In religious orders the term is applied to a class of religious who are occupied chiefly with domestic and manual work as distinguished from those who are occupied with liturgical observances, teaching, and study <the lay brothers in a monastery> Lay is often extended to other than the clerical profession (compare lay analyst under NEUROLOGIST) in the sense of nonprofessional or of not having a professional source or character; thus, a lay opinion on a question of law is merely an opinion delivered by one who is neither a lawyer nor a judge <the doctrine of scienter . . . in the lay mind has been converted into the popular half truth that a dog is entitled to his first bite—Field-Fisher> Temporal implies an opposition to spiritual (in the sense of being concerned not with material or mundane but with immaterial and eternal ends) and is applied chiefly to sovereigns, rulers, or dignitaries having political authority or civil power; thus, lords temporal are those members of the British House of Lords who are not bishops or archbishops (these latter being called lords spiritual) <the Papacy had no temporal power between 1870, the year of the fall of the Papal State, and 1929, the year of the establishment of Vatican City> <persuading the Church to forego its claim to temporal authority and confine its attention to spiritual benefactions—Littlefield>

Ana worldly, mundane, *earthly, terrestrial Ant sacred —Con *holy, divine, religious, spiritual 2 *impious, blasphemous, sacrilegious Ana foul, filthy, *dirty, nasty: ungodly, godless, *irreligious: iniquitous, nefarious, villainous, *vicious profanity *blasphemy, cursing, swearing Ana imprecation, *curse, malediction: execration, objurcation, damning (see corresponding verbs at EXECRATE) profess *assert, declare, affirm, aver, protest, avouch, avow, predicate, warrant Ana allege, *adduce, advance profession art, handicraft, craft, *trade proffer *offer, tender, present, prefer Ana propose, design, *intend: confer, bestow, present, *give proficient, adept, skilled, skillful, expert, masterly are comparable when they mean having the knowledge and experience necessary to success in a given line especially of work or endeavor. When applied to things rather than persons, all these terms carry the implication that the quality of the person has been attributed to the thing. Proficient implies training and practice as the source of competency beyond the average <proficient in the art of self-defense—Shaw> <Jane began to type. It bored her, but she was fairly proficient at it—Rose Macaulay> Adept implies proficiency but stresses aptitude and often cleverness <adept at legerdemain> <so adept at the lovely polishing of every grave and lucent phrase—Gibbons> Skilled, often interchangeable with proficient, may distinctively suggest mastery of the details of a trade or handicraft or of the technique of an art or profession. In modern industrial use skilled simply connotes that one has met a standard set up by employers for a special type of work or job <skilled labor> <the skilled trades> <by long practice, he was skilled in the arts of teaching—Gibbon> <professors, students, and skilled employees make a varied assault upon the mysteries of marine biology—Parshley> Skillful implies adeptness coupled with dexterity in execution or performance   <in little danger with a skillful hand at the helm—Nordhoff & Hall> <the solution achieved by a skillful minority in face of a hostile majority—Parrington> Expert applies to one who has attained extraordinary proficiency or is exceptionally adept <an expert accountant> <an expert bridge player> <expert knowledge of engines> <neither of them was expert in the roping of cattle—Mary Austin> <explaining at length, but with an expert lucidity, some basic point of law—Edmund Wilson> Masterly, applied more often to the thing executed or the quality displayed than to the person who executes or displays, is close to expert in its implication of proficiency and adeptness, but it commonly adds a suggestion of confident control <he compressed into the masterly introductory essays . . . his entire theory of the progress of the United States—Bidwell> <his masterly dissimulation—Motley> <how masterly is he in all the points of his profession—Trollope>

Con reject, spurn, refuse, *decline

Ana efficient, effectual, *effective: capable, *able, competent, qualified: finished, accomplished, *consummate: practiced, drilled, exercised (see PRACTICE vb)
Con *awkward, clumsy, maladroit, inept, gauche: *ignorant, untaught profile *outline, contour, silhouette, skyline profit n *use, service, advantage, account, avail Ana reward, award, meed, guerdon (see PREMIUM): gaining or gain, winning (see GET) profit vb *benefit, avail Ana *get, gain, win: *advance, progress profitable 1 *beneficial, advantageous Ana *favorable, auspicious, propitious: *expedient, advisable, politic Ant unprofitable —Con detrimental, deleterious (see PERNICIOUS): harming or harmful, injurious, hurting or hurtful (see corresponding verbs at INJURE)

2 *paying, gainful, remunerative, lucrative Ana fruitful (see FERTILE): compensating, recompensing, repaying (see PAY): valuable, precious (see COSTLY)

profligate adj dissolute, reprobate, *abandoned Ana debauched, corrupted, depraved, debased, perverted (see under DEBASE): degenerate, corrupt, *vicious: *loose, relaxed, slack, lax profligate n *spendthrift, prodigal, wastrel, waster Ana debauchee, pervert, corrupter (see corresponding verbs at DEBASE): libertine, lecher (see corresponding adjectives at LICENTIOUS)

profound *deep, abysmal Ana penetrating, probing, piercing (see ENTER): scrutinizing, inspecting, examining (see SCRUTINIZE) Ant shallow

profuse; lavish, prodigal, luxuriant, lush, exuberant carry as their basic meaning giving out or given out in great abundance. What is profuse seems to pour or be poured forth in abundance, without restraint, or in a stream <pro-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

fuse apologies) <profuse sweating> <poorest thy full heart in profuse strains of unpremeditated art—Shelley>  What is lavish is so exceedingly profuse as to suggest, positively, munificence or extravagance or, negatively, the absence of all stint or moderation <lavish gifts>  <lavish expenditures> <the lavish attentions of his mother—Meredith> <our lavish use of a bountiful supply of crude oil—Morrison> What is prodigal gives or is given so lavishly and so recklessly as to suggest waste or the ultimate exhaustion of resources <chary of praise and prodigal of counsel—Stevenson> <the prodigal expenditures of the recent war—M. W. Childs> <he had been prodigal with his money and she probably imagined that he was still in funds—Cliff Farrell> What is luxuriant produces or is produced in great and rich abundance; the term usually connotes not only profusion but gorgeousness or splendor in what is produced <her luxuriant hair> <the luxuriant imagination of Milton> <this damp and mild climate makes possible the most luxuriant forest growth—Forde> <rich and luxuriant beauty; a beauty that shone with deep and vivid tints—Hawthorne> What is lush is not only luxuriant but has reached the peak of its perfection; the term distinctively connotes richness, fullness of development, or luxuriousness <how lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!—Shak.> <the lush . . . full-blown landscape of the south through which they had set out that morning—Jan Struther> <the fabulous period of the Nineties, that lush, plush, glittering era with all its sentimentality and opulence and ostentation—S. H. Hay> What is exuberant produces or is produced so abundantly or luxuriantly as to suggest exceedingly great vigor, vitality, or creative power; the term applies chiefly to persons or their words, emotions, or qualities that display a vigor or vitality that is almost rampant <an exuberant fancy> <the exuberant genius of Shakespeare> <to restrain my too exuberant gesture—Mary Austin> <exuberant energy> <actually, in the present context, all our exuberant post-Sputnik talk is irrelevant and even nonsensical—Huxley> Ana copious, abundant (see PLENTIFUL): *excessive, immoderate, extravagant: *liberal, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, munificent, generous

Ant spare, scanty, scant —Con *meager, skimpy, scrimpy, exiguous, sparse progenitor *ancestor, forefather, forebear

Ant progeny

progeny *offsprings, young, issue, descendant, posterity

Ant progenitor

prognosis *diagnosis

prognostic *foretoken, presage, omen, augury, portent

Ana indication, betokening, bespeaking (see corresponding verbs at INDICATE): symptom, *sign, mark, token prognosticate *foretell, predict, forecast, prophesy, augur, presage, portend, forebode

Ana *indicate, betoken, bespeak: *foresee, foreknow, apprehend, divine, anticipate program, schedule, timetable, agenda denote a formulated plan listing things to be done or to take place, especially in their time order. Program is the term of widest application. It may refer to a mental plan or to one that is written or printed; it may be applied not only to a plan for a meeting, an entertainment, or a service but to one made by an individual in ordering his own day or his own future or to one made by a group that has certain ends in view and proposes their orderly achievement <what is your program for today?> <the program of a concert> <theater programs> <the Five-Year Plan was the name given the industrialization program of the Soviet Union> Schedule

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

and timetable stress the importance of the time element and imply a plan of procedure which establishes not only the chronological order of events or steps but also their time limits <the schedule for a college year>  <the timetable life of a New York University student—N. Y. Times> <the timetable for expansion of Soviet power and influence in Asia has been seriously upset—Mosely> Schedule is sometimes used, but timetable distinctly more often, for a tabulated list of regularly recurring events (as arrivals and departures of trains or buses)  (it was in October 1839 that George Bradshaw issued the first timetable to show all trains then running in this country—O. S. Nock) Agenda is applied chiefly to a schedule of the order of business for a meeting.

progress n 1 advance (see under ADVANCE vb 2)

Ana improvement, betterment (see corresponding verbs at IMPROVE): headway, impetus (see SPEED n)

2 Progress, progression are not always clearly distinguished, although they can be more or less sharply differentiated. Both denote movement forward. Progress (see also progress n under ADVANCE vb 2) usually applies to a movement considered as a whole, stressing such aspects as the distance covered, the change or changes taking place, and the amount of improvement made <we made little progress that day> <note the extent of his progress during the past year> <delightful never-ending progress to perfection—Hazlitt> <the history of educational progress> <the rapid progress of a disease> Progression (see also SUCCESSION) commonly applies to a movement in itself or in its detail, often implying a continuous series of steps, degrees, or stages toward an objective but sometimes implying little more than a moving on more or less continuously <mode of progression> <that slow progression of things, which naturally makes elegance and refinement the last effect of opulence and power—Reynolds> <every generation . . . adds . . . its own discoveries in a progression to which there seems no limit—Peacock> progress vb *advance

Ana *move, drive, impel: further, forward, promote, *advance: develop, *mature

Ant retrogress

progression 1 *succession, series, sequence, chain, train, string

2 *progress progressive *liberal, advanced, radical

Ant reactionary prohibit *forbid, inhibit, enjoin, interdict, ban

Ana *prevent, preclude, obviate: debar, shut out, *exclude: *hinder, impede, obstruct: *restrain, curb, check

Ant permit —Con *let, allow, suffer: tolerate, endure, *bear project n scheme, design, plot, *plan

Ana sketch, delineation, draft, outline, diagram (see under SKETCH vb): *device, contrivance project vb 1 scheme, design, plot, plan (see under PLAN n)

Ana propose, purpose, *intend: *sketch, outline, diagram, delineate

2 *bulge, jut, stick out, protuberate, protrude, overhang, beetle

Ana *extend, prolong, lengthen: swell, distend, *expand projection, protrusion, protuberance, bulge all denote something which extends beyond a level or a normal outer surface. Projection is applicable to anything that juts out, especially at a sharp angle <buttresses are projections which serve to support a wall or a building at a point of great strain or pressure> <machinery set in motion to keep a level smooth . . . feels the least projection, and tries to flatten it out—Hearn) <the appendix is a small fingerlike projection from the large bowel—Fishbein> Protrusion applies to something which is thrust out or which pushes out so that it seems an excrescence or deformity  <the fantastic gables, pinnacles, and protrusions which intercepted the light—Samuel Lucas> A protuberance swells or pushes out, often in rounded rather than angular form <warty protuberances on a potato> <balconies, bay windows and protuberances which make their fronts look like bemedaled chests—Hauser> A bulge is a protuberance or expansion of a surface caused usually by pressure from within or below  <there is a slight bulge in the soil before the first stalk of a plant appears> prolific fruitful, *fertile, fecund

Ana teeming, swarming, abounding (see TEEM): generating, breeding, propagating, reproducing or reproductive (see corresponding verbs at GENERATE)

Ant barren, unfruitful prolificacy fruitfulness, fertility, fecundity (see under FERTILE)

Ant barrenness, unfruitfulness prolix *wordy, verbose, diffuse, redundant

Ana tedious, *irksome, tiresome, wearisome: prolonged, protracted (see EXTEND): pleonastic, circumlocutory, redundant, tautological (see corresponding nouns at VERBIAGE)

prologue *introduction, prelude, preface, foreword, exordium, preamble prolong protract, *extend, lengthen, elongate

Ana *continue, last, persist, endure: *increase, augment, enlarge: *expand, amplify

Ant curtail —Con *shorten, abridge, abbreviate, retrace prominent remarkable, conspicuous, salient, outstanding, signal, *noticeable, striking, arresting

Ana *chief, leading, main, principal: important, significant (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE) promiscuous heterogeneous, motley, *miscellaneous

Ana mixed, mingled, blended, merged (see MIX): *random, haphazard, desultory, casual: *indiscriminate, wholesale, sweeping: *licentious, lewd, wanton, lascivious Con discriminating, perceiving, discerning (see corresponding nouns at DISCERNMENT): discreet, prudent, forethoughtful (see under PRUDENCE)

promise vb Promise, engage, pledge, plight, covenant, contract are comparable when they mean to give one's word that one will act in a specified way (as by doing, making, giving, or accepting) in respect to something stipulated. Promise implies a giving assurance either orally or in writing but it suggests no further grounds for expectation of the fulfillment of what is promised <he is a man of his word, what he promises he performs> <he promised that he would pay his bill> <promised to do painting, trimming and repairing with all possible expertness—Riker> <promised to reexamine all loyalty cases cleared by the Democrats—Ginzburg> <she has promised herself a trip to Bermuda> Engage implies a more binding agreement or more definite commitment than promise. Typically it is used in formal or consequential situations, sometimes specifically implying an agreement to marry and sometimes an agreement to accept as an employee. It ordinarily implies a promise regarded as binding and to be relied on and especially one concerning conduct over a period of time <to Him whose truth and faithfulness engage the waiting soul to bless—Walford> <study material about Gen. Grant, whose biography he had engaged to prepare—Caffey> <the United States . . . engaged to exclude peddlers from their country—Foreman> <an engaged couple> Pledge (compare PLEDGE n), aside from uses in connection with drives and charities <pledged a dollar a week to the church building fund>, may imply the giving of a promise by some act or words that suggest the giving of a solemn assurance or the provision of a formal guarantee <pledged their loyalty to their sovereign> <pledge themselves to maintain and uphold the right of the master—Taney> <Austria swarmed with excited and angry men pledged to destroy the Church—Belloc> Plight implies a solemn promising <if for America it is too violent a wrench to plight its fate with Europe's, even . . . to prevent war—Peffer> and persists chiefly in a few stereotyped phrases such as "plight one's troth." Covenant implies at least two parties to the promise, each making a solemn agreement with the other  <covenanted to defeat the present conspiracy to set up a Home Rule Parliament in Ireland—Rose Macaulay> Contract (see also CONTRACT vb 3, INCUR) implies the entry into a solemn and usually legally binding agreement (see CONTRACT n) <contract for a large loan> <the company has contracted to supply the schools of the state with textbooks> <the good wife realizes that in becoming a wife she contracts to forget self and put her husband's happiness above her own—D. F. Miller>

Ana agree, consent, *assent, accede: assure, *ensure, insure promote forward, further, *advance

Ana *help, aid, assist: *speed, quicken, hasten, hurry Ant impede —Con *hinder, obstruct, block, bar promotion 1 *advancement, preferment, elevation

Ana *progress, progression: exaltation, magnifying, aggrandizement (see corresponding verbs at EXALT)

Ant demotion —Con degradation, humiliation, debasement (see corresponding verbs at ABASE)

2 *publicity, ballyhoo, propaganda

Ana advertisement, promulgation, broadcasting (see corresponding verbs at DECLARE) prompt adj *quick, ready, apt

Ana alert, wide-awake, vigilant, *watchful: expeditious, speedy, swift (see FAST): trained, disciplined (see TEACH): *eager, keen, avid

Con remiss, lax, slack (see NEGLIGENT): dilatory, *slow promulgate proclaim, announce, *declare, publish, advertise, broadcast

Ana *reveal, disclose, divulge, discover: profess, affirm, aver, avow, avouch (see ASSERT): *communicate, impart promulgation proclamation, declaration, announcement, publication, advertisement, broadcasting (see under DECLARE) prone 1 subject, exposed, open, *liable, susceptible, sensitive

Ana inclined, predisposed, disposed (see INCLINE vb): addicted, habituated, accustomed (see HABITUATE)

2 Prone, supine, prostrate, recumbent, couchant, dormant are comparable when they mean lying upon a surface (as the ground or a floor). Prone implies a position with the face, chest, or abdomen lying on or turned toward the supporting surface <if we ourselves lie prone upon the floor we can exemplify the characteristic relationship, for our internal cavity is nearest to the floor, above it is our backbone—Swinton> <Her Majesty, prone but queenly, stretched out on the deck . . . to try her hand at target shooting—Time> Supine applies to a position with the back against a supporting surface, the face upward, and may suggest lethargy, abjectness, or inertness ⟨lying supine in the bottom of the canoe and staring upward at the immaculate azure of the sky—Wylie⟩ ⟨jaded people lolling supine in carriages—Shaw⟩ Prostrate basically applies to full-length proneness as in submission, fear, or helplessness; the term also may apply to a horizontal position either prone or supine that is typically brought about by a fall or weakness or shock ⟨prostrate in homage, on her face, silent—Bottomley⟩ ⟨lying prostrate on my chest, I took a long draft of clear cold water—Hudson⟩ ⟨stood over the bloody and prostrate form—Nordhoff & Hall⟩ Recumbent may apply to lying down in any position of comfortable repose ⟨if the patient is greatly weakened or prostrated, he must be kept reasonably warm, recumbent—Fishbein⟩ ⟨recumbent upon the brown pine-droppings—Meredith⟩ Couchant and dormant, mainly technical heraldic terms in the senses here involved, apply to a prone body position, the former suggesting that the head is raised as if in watchfulness, the latter that it is lowered in sleep.

Ana flat, *level: groveling, wallowing, weltering (see WALLOW): crawl, *creep

Ant erect pronounce *articulate, enunciate proof 1 ground, *reason, argument

Ana demonstration, trial, test (see under PROVE): corroboration, confirmation, substantiation, verification (see corresponding verbs at CONFIRM)

2 demonstration, test, trial (see under PROVE)

Ant disproof

prop vb *support, sustain, bolster, buttress, brace

Ana uphold, back (see SUPPORT): hoist, heave, boost, *lift propaganda *publicity, ballyhoo, promotion

Ana propagation, engendering, generating (see corresponding verbs at GENERATE): spread, stretch (see EXPANSE): inculcation, instillment, implanting (see corresponding verbs at IMPLANT)

propagate 1 *generate, engender, breed, beget, procreate, sire, reproduce

Ana *increase, multiply, augment: *continue, persist: *extend, lengthen, prolong

2 *spread, circulate, disseminate, diffuse, radiate

Ana *scatter, disperse, dissipate: *distribute, dispense: *teach, instruct, educate: *communicate, impart: inculcate, instill, *implant propel *push, shove, thrust

Ana *move, drive, impel: *force, compel, constrain, oblige propensity *leaning, proclivity, penchant, flair

Ana *predilection, prejudice, bias, prepossession: *gift, aptitude, bent, turn, knack: predisposition, disposition, inclination (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE)

Ant antipathy

proper 1 meet, appropriate, fitting, apt, happy, felicitous, *fit, suitable

Ana congruous, congenial, compatible, *consonant: *correct, nice, right: *due, rightful, condign

Ant improper —Con wrong, *false

2 seemly, *decorous, decent, nice

Ana formal, conventional, ceremonious, *ceremonial property *quality, character, attribute, accident

Ana peculiarity, individuality, characteristic (see corresponding adjectives at CHARACTERISTIC) prophecy *revelation, vision, apocalypse

Ana communication, impartation (see corresponding verbs at COMMUNICATE): *inspiration prophecy predict, forecast, *foretell, prognosticate, augur, presage, portend, forebode

Ana *foresee, foreknow, divine, apprehend, anticipate

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

propinquity *proximity

Ana closeness, nearness (see corresponding adjectives at CLOSE): relatedness or relationship, kindredness or kindred (see corresponding adjectives at RELATED)

propitiate *pacify, appease, placate, mollify, conciliate

Ana reconcile, conform, adjust, *adapt: *satisfy, content: intercede, mediate (see INTERPOSE) propitious auspicious, *favorable, benign

Ana benignant, *kind, kindly: fortunate, *lucky, providential, happy

Ant unpropitious: adverse —Con *sinister, malefic, maleficent, malign, baleful: *ominous, inauspicious, portentous, fateful proportion *symmetry, balance, harmony proportional, proportionate, commensurate, commensurable are often used without marked distinction because all mean being duly proportioned to something else. Proportional and proportionate both imply due proportions either to a related thing or things, or of things that are related (as by belonging to the same set, series, design, or construction, or by being the effect of a cause or the response to a stimulus). Proportional is the more usual term when a constant and often mathematically precise ratio between corresponding aspects (as size, amount, number, or length) of related things is under consideration; thus, a proportional tax is one assessed as a constant percentage of the value (as of income or realty) being taxed; a proportional wage is a fixed percentage (as of gross sales or profits) ⟨the circumferences of all circles are proportional to the lengths of their radii⟩ ⟨a detailed plan for proportional . . . disarmament to be achieved by stages—Grenville Clark⟩ Proportional may be used, but proportionate is more often used, when the term is intended to imply the adjustment and sometimes the deliberate adjustment of one thing that bears a reciprocal relationship to another thing, so that both are in keeping with each other or not out of keeping with what is just, fair, due, or reasonable ⟨the punishment should be proportionate to the crime⟩ ⟨ponderous bodies forced into velocity move with violence proportionate to their weight—Johnson⟩ ⟨most state taxes produce a yield proportionate only to general economic growth—Armbrister⟩ ⟨they rushed into freedom and enjoyment . . . with an energy proportional to their previous restraint—Dickinson⟩ Commensurate and commensurable differ from the preceding words chiefly in carrying a stronger implication of equality between related things each of which has a value (as of measure, degree, or intensity) that is intimately related to that of the other ⟨the meagerness of the result was commensurate with the crudity of the methods—Buchan⟩ ⟨the two punishments must be perfectly commensurable—Bentham⟩ Sometimes both terms, but especially commensurable, differ from the other words in implying a common scale of values by which outwardly different things can be shown to be equal or proportionate in some significant way ⟨if two magnitudes can both be expressed in whole numbers in terms of a common unit, they are commensurable—W. G. Shute et al⟩ ⟨all civilization[s] . . . are commensurable, and . . . are but ramifications (if not historically, at least phenomenologically) of the one idea of civilization—Schrecker⟩ ⟨the measure of a rancher's ability to take care of livestock while not on public land . . . is referred to as his commensurability and the property so used is his commensurate property—Appraisal Terminology & Handbook⟩ Ana corresponding, correlative, *reciprocal: relative, contingent, *dependent proportionate *proportional, commensurate, commensurable

Ana corresponding, correlative, *reciprocal

Ant disproportionate proposal, proposition denote something which is proposed to another for consideration. Proposal usually carries a clear suggestion of the act of proposing; thus, one receives a proposal, or entertains a proposal, or listens to a proposal. It also commonly implies an offer (as of oneself as a husband, or of a sum of money in return for the transferring of a piece of property) (a proposal of marriage) (he offered to sweep the floor of the gymnasium then and there. This proposal convinced the Skenes—Shaw) (the steel industry refused to make any wage proposals until it obtained federal clearance for higher steel prices—Current History) But it may imply the suggestion of a scheme, a plan, or a project which may be accepted or rejected at the will of the one to whom it is proposed (every proposal for a grant, a subsidy, a loan, is being examined more carefully and less enthusiastically than at any previous time—Harsch) (this proposal was distinctly treasonable, but Burr probably never seriously intended to carry it out—Cox) Proposition applies primarily to a usually affirmative statement that is propounded for discussion, argument, proof, or disproof (demonstrate the truth of a proposition) (at first sight the proposition seemed absurd) (the fanatical and ordered mobs . . . proved, if the proposition needed proof, that in a time of crisis men will act from passion—MacLeish) (it is a proposition too plain to be contested, that the constitution controls any legislative act repugnant to it—John Marshall) The term is also applicable to an implied or expressed principle that is or may be questioned or is regarded from the point of view of its truth or its falsity (who still fervently espouse the pestilential proposition that the world needs to be saved in a hurry by their own brand of righteousness—Rolo) Proposition has been and to a restricted extent still is used instead of proposal in the sense of a proposal made formally that some course of action be followed, some policy be adopted, or some honor granted (we hold it essential to our success . . . that the proposition of Sir George Clerk should be adopted—Wilberforce) (parking meters for Bakersfield again will be a proposition on the June 3 ballot—Los Angeles Examiner) Proposition may replace proposal in implying an act of proposing (if you wish to buy this land, make me a proposition) but in such use it and especially the corresponding verb propose may carry a hint of irregularity or impropriety that proposal lacks; thus, one offers a proposal of marriage but a proposition of less formal sexual relation (propositioned him to work for the Soviets after his return to the United States—Expose of Soviet Espionage)

propose 1 purpose, *intend, mean, design

Ana *aim, aspire: plan, plot, scheme, project (see under PLAN n)

2 Propose, propound, pose can all mean to set before the mind for consideration. Propose (see also INTEND) fundamentally implies an invitation to consider, discuss, settle, or agree on some question or some proposition clearly stated (in the last chapter I proposed the hypothesis that a pure poetry exists—Day Lewis) (someone proposed that he had really done it the night before by moonlight—Stafford) or an offering for consideration or acceptance of someone as a candidate or aspirant or of something by way of a suggestion (he proposed Mr. Smith for secretary of the club) (propose marriage) (with a swarm of fantastic reforms being every day suggested . . . perhaps we may propose one as fantastic as any other—Sullivan) Propound implies the stating of a question or proposition for discussion; it usually suggests neither personal bias nor an attempt to prove or disprove on the part of the one setting it forth or in the manner of setting it forth. The term is therefore often used when the writer or speaker wishes to convey no implications of how the one propounding would answer the question or deal with the proposition (the query is propounded whether the privilege should be accorded to a physician of putting a patient painlessly out of the world when there is incurable disease—Cardozo) (propound the thesis that the great artist is an unconscious artist—T. S. Eliot) (if we may judge from his . . . facility in the propounding of theories—Huxley) Pose often equals propound, except that it frequently implies that no attempt will be or can be made to seek an immediate answer (the problems posed by this situation in the control of cancer and diseases of the heart are receiving the most serious study—Morrison) (I shall try at least to pose basic issues that underlie all our political problems—Frankfurter)

Ana state (see RELATE): *offer, tender, present proposition *proposal

propound *propose, pose

Ana *ask, question, query: state (see RELATE) propriety *decorum, decency, etiquette, dignity

Ana grace, *elegance, dignity: *form, usage, convention, civency prorate *apportion, portion, parcel, ration prosaic, prosy, matter-of-fact all denote having a plain, practical, unimaginative, unemotional character or quality.

Prosaic implies an opposition to poetic in the extended sense of that word. Although the term suggests the quality of prose, it seldom refers to literary prose as such but rather to the ordinary language of men in communicating their wants, their ideas, or their experiences, or in rendering intelligible what is difficult to understand or make clear; hence, prosaic usually implies a commonplace, unexciting quality, and the absence of everything that would stimulate feeling or awaken great interest (to make verse speak the language of prose, without being prosaic . . . is one of the most arduous tasks a poet can undertake—Cowper) (a certain irreverent exuberance which prompts him never to choose a prosaic example for his concrete illustrations—Times Lit. Sup.) (the eighteenth century, from the religious point of view, is a period of rather cold and prosaic common sense—Inge) (a record of mediocrities, of the airless prosaic world of a small college town—E. K. Brown) Prosy, on the other hand, suggests a relation to prose, the verb, rather than to prose, the noun, and heightens the implication in the verb of turning what is poetry or interesting prose into dull plain prose (as by paraphrasing or by translating). Consequently, prosy stresses extreme dullness or tediousness and usually implies a tendency to talk or write at length in a boring or uninviting manner (made me wish that he would be long-winded and prosy instead of twitching me from one thing to another—Sassoon) (all prosy dull society sinners, who chatter and bleat and bore—Gilbert) Matter-of-fact stresses a lack of interest in the imaginative, speculative, visionary, romantic or ideal; sometimes it connotes accuracy in detail, but often it suggests concern only for the obvious and a neglect of the deeper or spiritual reality or an absence of emotional quality (a matter-of-fact account of his experience) (a matter-of-fact historian) (faced with this matter-of-fact skepticism you are driven into pure metaphysics—Shaw) (Lilly, who was matter-of-fact and in whom introspection, poetry or contemplation had no place—Ethel Wilson)

Ana practical, *practicable: boring, tedious, *irksome proscribe *sentence, condemn, damn, doom proselyte *convert prospect, outlook, anticipation, foretaste are comparable when they mean an advance realization of something to come, especially of something foreseen or expected. Prospect and outlook both imply a conjuring up of a picture or mental vision of what the future, usually the near future, holds in store. Prospect is chiefly applied to particular events or situations, especially to those of interest to one as an individual and evocative of an emotional response (<the prospect of a quick, easy conquest of Greece . . . proved too big a temptation for the strutting Fascist Caesar to resist—Shirer) <Coverly felt a dim rumble of homosexual lust . . . Then the lash of his conscience crashed down . . . at the prospect of joining this pale-eyed company—Cheever) <he had just received a box of new books . . . and had preferred the prospect of a quiet Sunday at home—Wharton) Outlook suggests an attempt to forecast the future from the point of view of an intellectual (as an economist or a philosopher) or from that of a practical man (as a politician or businessman) who is concerned not only with immediate but remote possibilities, and who demands accuracy in detail and soundness in conclusions (<the outlook for business has been declared favorable) <the outlook, domestic and international, was still what those who think in terms of color call black—Rose Macaulay) <in Pennsylvania the outlook is equally gloomy. Today the state has a surplus. But . . . that surplus will evaporate soon—Armbrister) Anticipation usually implies a prospect or outlook, but in addition it involves the implication of advance suffering or enjoyment of what is envisioned (<Lord Beaconsfield once said that the worst evil one has to endure is the anticipation of the calamities that do not happen—Benson) <the young Bishop lay down in Benito's deep feather bed, thinking how different was this night from his anticipation of it—Cather) Foretaste also implies advance experience or prior enjoyment or suffering, but it does not necessarily connote, as does anticipation, a mental as distinguished from an actual experience. It implies sufficient experience to give one a hint of what is to come, but the experience, or taste, may be actual enjoyment or suffering or a fleeting but poignant anticipation of it (<for whatever wrong she had done, she would pay through a thousand tortured days. Already the foretaste of them was upon her—Hervey) <giving me amid the fretful dwellings of mankind a foretaste . . . of the calm that Nature breathes among the hills and groves—Wordsworth)

Ana hope, expectation (see corresponding verbs at EXPECT); foreseeing or foresight, foreknowing or foreknowledge, divining or divination (see corresponding verbs at FORESEE)

prosper *succeed, thrive, flourish

Ana *increase, augment, multiply: *bear, yield, produce, turn out prostrate *prone, supine, recumbent, couchant, dormant Ana flat, *level: abject (see MEAN) prosy *prosaic, matter-of-fact

Ana *insipid, jejune, banal, inane: *irksome, boring, tedious protean *changeable, changeful, variable, mutable protect shield, guard, safeguard, *defend

Ana *save, preserve, conserve: *ensure, insure, assure: shelter, *harbor protest vb 1 avouch, avow, profess, affirm, aver, *assert, declare, predicate, warrant

2 *object, remonstrate, expostulate, kick

Ana oppose, *resist, combat, fight: *demur, scruple, balk Ant agree (sense 1)

protract prolong, *extend, lengthen, elongate

Ana *delay, retard, slow, slacken: *defer, suspend, stay, postpone

Ant curtail —Con *shorten, abridge, abbreviate protrude *bulge, jut, stick out, protuberate, project, overhang, beetle

Ana obtrude (see INTRUDE): *extend, prolong: swell, distend, *expand protrusion *projection, protuberance, bulge protuberance *projection, protrusion, bulge protuberate *bulge, jut, stick out, protrude, project, overhang, beetle

Ana swell, distend, *expand proud 1 Proud, arrogant, haughty, lordly, insolent, overbearing, supercilious, disdainful can mean in common filled with or showing a sense of one's superiority and scorn for what one regards as in some way inferior.

Proud (see also proud under PRIDE n) usually connotes a lofty or imposing manner, attitude, or appearance that may be interpreted as dignified, elevated, spirited, imperious, satisfied, contemptuous, or inordinately conceited according to the circumstances (<oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud? Like a swift-flitting meteor, a fast-flying cloud . . . he passeth from life to his rest in the grave—William Knox) <she's a stuck-up proud girl, and she hasn't a proper decency—Buck) <a dictator convinced that destiny lies in his own hands is bound to be proud, ruthless and ultimately destructive—Billy Graham) Arrogant implies a disposition to claim for oneself, often domineeringly or aggressively, more consideration or importance than is warranted or justly due (<the Junker developed into a rude, domineering, arrogant type of man, without cultivation or culture—Shirer) <in holidays the atmosphere of home is apt to be dominated by the young people. Consequently they tend to become arrogant and hard—Russell)

Haughty implies a strong consciousness of exalted birth, station, or character, and a more or less obvious scorn of those who are regarded as beneath one (<pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall—Prov 16:18) <his walk, his haughty, indifferent manner spoke his scorn for the two . . . men who accompanied him—Hervey) The last four words of this group are more specific than the preceding terms and refer more to the ways in which arrogance or haughtiness is exhibited than to the temperament or attitude. Lordly usually suggests pomposity, strutting, or an arrogant display of power or magnificence (<a lordly indifference to making money by his writings—Stephen) <a lordly foreman in a shoe factory—a man who, in distributing the envelopes, had the manner of a prince doling out favors to a servile group of petitioners—Dreiser)

Insolent implies both haughtiness and extreme contemptuousness; it carries a stronger implication than the preceding words of a will to insult or affront the person so treated (<she could not determine whether the silent contempt of the gentlemen, or the insolent smiles of the ladies, were more intolerable—Austen) <vile food, vile beyond belief, slapped down before their sunken faces by insolent waiters—K. A. Porter) Overbearing suggests a bullying or tyrannical disposition, or intolerable insolence (<an overbearing employer) <back country militiamen whose rough overbearing manners sorely tried the Indians' patience—Amer. Guide Series: Tenn.)

Supercilious stresses such superficial aspects of haughtiness as a lofty patronizing manner intended to repel advances. It refers to one's behavior to others rather than to one's conceit of oneself, though the latter is always implied; often it suggests not only scorn but also incivility (<they have no blood these people. Their voices, their supercilious eyes that look you up and down—Galsworthy) <supercilious and haughty they [camels] turn this way and that, like the dowagers of very aristocratic families at a plebeian evening party—Huxley) Disdainful implies a more passionate scorn for what is beneath one than does supercilious; it as often as not suggests justifiable pride or justifiable scorn (very elegant in velvet and broadcloth, with delicately cut, disdainful features,—one had only to see him cross the room . . . to feel the electric quality under his cold reserve—Cather) (a democracy smugly disdainful of new ideas would be a sick democracy—Eisenhower)

Ana contemptuous, scornful, disdainful (see corresponding nouns under DESPISE): pretentious, ostentatious (see SHOWY): imperious, domineering, *masterful Ant humble: ashamed

2 vain, vainglorious (see under PRIDE n)

Ana exalted, magnified, aggrandized (see EXALT): self-satisfied, *complacent, smug: contented, satisfied (see under SATISFY)

Ant ashamed: humble

prove 1 Prove, try, test, demonstrate are comparable when they mean to establish a given or an implied contention or reach a convincing conclusion by such appropriate means as evidence, argument, or experiment. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are evident in their corresponding nouns proof, trial, test, demonstration when they denote the process or the means by which a contention is established or a convincing conclusion is reached. Prove and proof (see also INDICATE, REASON n 1) are the most widely useful of these terms, employable not only in reference to contentions and conclusions, but also in reference to persons or things whose quality (as of strength, genuineness, or fitness) is in question. When used in reference to contentions or to conclusions reached by study, they imply that evidence sufficient in amount and sufficiently reliable in its character has been adduced to bring conviction of the truth of the contentions or conclusions and to make other contentions or other conclusions untenable (this proposition may or may not be true; at present there is certainly no evidence sufficient to prove it true—Russell) (the legislation of the different colonies furnishes positive and indisputable proof of this fact—Taney) But prove and proof when used in reference to persons or things about which there is doubt in some particular imply the settlement of this doubt or the establishing of certainty of his or its quality by subjecting the thing to an experiment or by giving the person a chance to manifest his quality in experience, or by such means as assaying, verifying, or checking (we want to realize our spontaneity and prove our powers, for the joy of it—Justice Holmes) (prove a cannon) (proved his courage in action) (put a man's loyalty to the proof) (the proof of the pudding is in the eating) Try and trial (see also ATTEMPT vb, TRIAL 2) carry implications from their earliest senses of to separate, or the separation of, the good from the bad in a person or thing, and therefore stress not the conclusion reached but the process by which the guilt or innocence of a person is definitely proved, or a thing's genuineness or falsity, its worth or worthlessness, or its degree of strength or validity is definitely established (try a person for theft) (a boy does not like to be called a fool, and is usually ready to try the question with his fists—Meredith) (some other apparently inaccessible peak on which to try their ardor and endurance—Mais) (the new employee is on trial) (a brief trial of the plan would convince the people of its futility—Ogg & Ray) Test, both as a verb and as a noun, implies a putting to decisive proof by means of experiment, use, experience, or comparison with a high standard, or through subjection to a thorough examination or trial for the sake of such proof or a determination of the facts (experience is the surest standard by which to test the real tendency of the existing constitution—Wash- ington) (the first time he made a helmet, he tested its capacity for resisting blows, and battered it out of shape; next time he did not test it but "deemed" it to be a very good helmet—Russell) (one test of a writer's value lies in the series of illusions and superstitions which surround his work—Geismar) Demonstrate and demonstration (see also SHOW vb 1) imply the conclusive proof of a contention or the reaching of a conclusion about which there can be no doubt. In such use, prove and demonstrate and their corresponding nouns are not distinguishable except that in demonstrate the emphasis is upon the resulting certainty or formality of method ([Lyell] first imagined, and then demonstrated, that the geologic agencies are not explosive and cataclysmal, but steady and patient—Eliot)

Ana corroborate, verify, substantiate, *confirm: *justify, warrant

Ant disprove

2 *indicate, betoken, attest, bespeak, argue

Ana evidence, manifest, evince, *show, demonstrate provenance, provenience *origin, source, inception, root, prime mover

Ana beginning, commencement, starting (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN) provender *food, fodder, forage, feed, victuals, viands, provisions, comestibles proverb maxim, adage, motto, *saying, saw, epigram, aphorism, apothegm provide, supply, furnish mean to give or to get what is desired by or needed for someone or something. The words are often used interchangeably without seeming loss (provide what is needed for an army) (supply daily rations of food) (furnish enough men for the expedition) but sometimes one of them rather than either of the others may be selected because of the implications or connotations that it stresses. Provide may suggest foresight and stress the idea of making adequate preparation for something by stocking or equipping; the agent of the action in such cases is usually personal (provide for the common defense—U. S. Constitution) (through the long painful days of inaction his wife sought by every possible means to provide him with occupation—Current Biog.) (federal old-age and survivors insurance provides retirements benefits to workers—Collier's Yr. Bk.) Supply may stress the idea of replacing, of making up what is needed, or of satisfying a deficiency (cards . . . and the polished die, the yawning chasm of indolence supply—Cowper) (unable to supply the public demand) (an age which supplied the lack of moral habits by a system of moral attitudes and poses—T. S. Eliot) (the book would be incomplete without some such discussion as I have tried to supply—Inge) Furnish (see also FURNISH) may emphasize the idea of fitting something or someone with whatever is necessary or, sometimes, normal or desirable (as for use, occupancy, service, or emergencies) (a small salary out of which she had to furnish her own wardrobe—Current Biog.) (the . . . tail of this bird . . . is furnished with proper quills—Winchell) (the southeast trade winds and the tropical foliage furnish alleviating coolness—Chippendale)

Ana *prepare, fit, ready: equip, outfit, arm (see FURNISH): purvey, *cater provided *if providence *prudence, foresight, forethought, discretion Ana *care, solicitude, concern: thoughtfulness, consideration (see corresponding adjectives at THOUGHTFUL): frugality, thriftiness, economy (see corresponding adjectives at SPARING)

Ant improvidence provident prudent, foresighted, forethoughtful, discreet

(see under PRUDENCE)

Ana careful, solicitous, concerned (see under CARE n): *thoughtful, considerate: *sparing, economical, frugal, thrifty

Ant improvident

providential *lucky, fortunate, happy

Ana benign, auspicious, propitious, *favorable: benignant, kindly, *kind providing see under provided at IF province 1 *field, domain, sphere, territory, bailiwick

Ana *limit, confine, bound, end

2 *function, office, duty

Ana *work, calling, pursuit, business: *task, duty, job provincial *insular, parochial, local, small-town

Ana circumscribed, confined, limited, restricted (see LIMIT vb): narrow, narrow-minded, *illiberal, intolerant, hidebound, bigoted

Ant catholic —Con cosmic, cosmopolitan, *universal: *liberal, progressive provision 1 *condition, stipulation, terms, proviso, reservation, strings

Ana clause, article, *paragraph: prerequisite, requisite, *requirement

2 in plural form provisions *food, feed, victuals, viands, comestibles, provender, fodder, forage provisional 1 Provisional, tentative are comparable when they mean not final or definitive. Something provisional is adopted only for the time being and will be discarded when the final or definitive form is established or when the need which called it into being no longer exists. Provisional, therefore, is used to describe something made or devised while its permanent successor is in process of formation or construction (a provisional government) (these provisional assemblies would decide the conditions under which elections should be held—Cronyn) or when circumstances prevent introduction of a corresponding definitive or permanent thing; thus, a provisional order of a government agency is one subject to review and revision by the legislative branch; a provisional license or certificate (as of a driver or a teacher) is one destined to be replaced by a permanent license or certificate if the holder maintains certain standards or meets certain additional qualifications. Something tentative is of the nature of a trial or experiment or serves as a test of a thing's practicability or feasibility (the awakening of the modern world to consciousness, and its first tentative, then fuller, then rapturous expression of it—J. R. Lowell) (it would be folly to treat the first tentative results as final—Jeans) (Maria was entranced with this reverent gesture, and her tentative approval of her cousin settled into awed respect—Hervey)

Ana *temporary; conditional, *dependent, contingent

Ant definitive

2 *temporary, ad interim, acting, supply proviso *condition, stipulation, terms, provision, reservation, strings

Ana clause, article, *paragraph: limitation, restriction (see corresponding verbs at LIMIT): contingency, exigency (see JUNCTURE) provoke 1 Provoke, excite, stimulate, pique, quicken, galvanize can all mean to rouse one into doing or feeling something or to call something into existence by so rousing a person. Provoke stresses a power in the agent or agency sufficient to produce such an effect, but it is often the least explicit of these terms as to the nature or character of that power and may imply nothing more than the effecting of the stated result (it is not in . . . the emotions provoked by particular events in his life, that the poet is in any way remarkable or interesting—T. S. Eliot) (inoculate you with that disease . . . in order to provoke you to resist it as the mud provokes the cat to wash itself—Shaw) (his candor provoked a storm of controversy—Times Lit. Sup.) Excite carries so strong an implication of a rousing that stirs up, moves profoundly, or serves as a challenge to one's powers that the term is often used merely in the sense of to rouse in any of these ways (the ideas which excited my own generation—Æ) (a city beautiful enough to delight the romantic, picturesque enough to excite the jaded—Cassidy) Often, however, excite adds to these implications those found in provoke, and thereby becomes a more explicit or richer word than the latter by suggesting the powerful or stirring nature of the agent or agency and the degree or intensity of the activity stirred up (the curiosity excited by his long absence burst forth in . . . very direct questions—Austen) (the ruler's rivals, driven to outrage or excited to great envy, can topple governments built on stilts—Flora Lewis) Stimulate suggests a provoking or exciting by or more often as if by a prick, a spur, or a goad; sometimes therefore it connotes a rousing out of lethargy, indifference, inaction, or inactivity, or a bringing forth into play something that is latent, dormant, or quiescent (the stupidity of the opposition stimulated him, and made him resolute—Mencken) (I have always believed that it is better to stimulate than to correct, to fortify rather than to punish—Benson) Often stimulate specifically implies excitement or reexcitement of interest, especially of an intellectual interest (some subjects, which are remarkably stimulating to the mind of the pupil, are neglected, because they are not well adapted for examinations—Inge) (it's stimulating to be outside the law. It makes you look sharp, it simplifies the day's job—Wouk) Pique, a term of more restricted application, suggests provocation or stimulation by or as if by something that pricks or irritates (a show of secrecy always piques her curiosity) (piqued . . . by what he considered to be a premature disclosure of the plan—Armbrister) Quicken implies a stimulation of life, vigor, energy, or activity with consequent beneficial results (the mistress which I serve quickens what's dead—Shak.) (with his feeling for history *quicken*ed and sharpened, he was to find another stimulus to follow up this interest of his boyhood—Brooks) Galvanize suggests a highly artificial stimulating or quickening, especially of something old, or stiff, or dying (he seemed a mere automaton, galvanized into moving and speaking—Hardy) (galvanize the government into vehemence and extraordinary preparation—Sir Winston Churchill)

Ana arouse, rouse, *stir: *thrill, electrify, entuse: *incite, instigate, foment

2 *irritate, exasperate, nettle, aggravate, rile, peeve Ana affront, *offend, insult, outrage: *anger, incense, madden: agitate, upset, perturb (see DISCOMPOSE)

Ant gratify prowess *heroism, valor, gallantry

Ana bravery, boldness, audacity, intrepidity (see corresponding adjectives at BRAVE): *courage, mettle, spirit: strength, might, puissance, *power prowl vb *wander, stray, roam, ramble, rove, range, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander proximity, propinquity are often used almost interchangeably to denote nearness. Proximity, however, commonly implies simple and often temporary nearness in space; it may be used with reference to either persons or things found in the same vicinity or neighborhood (for centuries and centuries their nests have been placed in the closest proximity to man—Jefferies) (his office geographically was just down the corridor from George's, a proximity which Harry had insisted on—Auchincloss) (affected much as he might have been by the proximity of a large dog of doubtful temper—Shaw) Propinquity may imply proximity, but it then usually distinctively suggests closeness, sometimes even contact (<we read a book because it happens to be near us and it looks inviting. It is a case where propinquity is everything—Crothers) <they are jammed into such propinquity with one another in their new suburbia—Whyte) But it is more often used as proximity is not, to imply nearness in relationship <here I disclaim all my paternal care, propinquity, and property of blood—Shak.) or closeness in association, in age, or in tastes <environment and propinquity make for a desire to graduate from marihuana to opiates—Maurer & Vogel) or even closeness in time <events occurring in close propinquity to each other> <thereby was declared the propinquity of their desolations, and that their tranquility was of no longer duration than those soon decaying fruits of summer—Browne)

Ana nearness, closeness (see corresponding adjectives at CLOSE): adjacency, contiguousness, juxtaposition (see corresponding adjectives at ADJACENT) proxy deputy, attorney, *agent, factor prudence, providence, foresight, forethought, discretion are comparable when they denote a quality that enables a person to choose the wise and sensible course, especially in managing his practical affairs. The same differences in implications and connotations are apparent in the corresponding adjectives prudent, provident, foresighted, forethoughtful, discreet. Prudence and prudent (see also WISE), the most comprehensive of these words, imply both that one does not act rashly or unadvisedly and that one has foreseen the probable consequences of one's act. Consequently the terms usually imply habitual caution and circumspection (that type of person who is conservative from prudence but revolutionary in his dreams—T. S. Eliot) <prudence is a virtue that reviews all of the values at stake and then assigns to each its proper weight—JAMA) <had judged it more prudent to hide than to fight—Heiser) Providence and provident imply thought for the future, especially with reference to its difficulties and its needs and, usually, the provision in advance of what will then be required <the intellectual providence to acquire . . . vast stores of dry information—Bagehot) <a provident, rather thoughtful people, who made their livelihood secure by raising crops and fowl—Cather) Foresight and foresighted stress a power, usually the result of a highly developed intelligence, of seeing what is likely to happen and of being prepared for it <the more we study the making of the primate, the more we shall be impressed with the grasp and foresight of its founder—Buchan) <incapable of the foresighted control and adjustment of action which are the essence of all the higher forms of behavior—McDougall) Forethought and the less frequent forethoughtful suggest due consideration of contingencies <in choosing the Yankee dialect, I did not act without forethought—J. R. Lowell) <every newcomer, be he never so forethoughtful, finds himself lacking tools—Bell) Discretion and discreet stress qualities (as good judgment, caution, and self-control) which make for prudence or compel prudent action; they often imply the power to restrain oneself when one is tempted to be temerarious, passionate, incensed, or loquacious <encountered an eagerness to talk and a candor of expression among officials that . . . has heavily taxed my discretion—A. E. Stevenson) <I dare say he will be a discreeter man all his life, for the foolishness of his first choice—Austen) Ana caution, circumspection, calculation (see under CAUTIOUS): expediency, advisableness (see corresponding adjectives at EXPEDIENT): frugality, thriftiness or thrift (see corresponding adjectives at SPARING) prudent 1 judicious, sensible, sane, *wise, sage, sapient Ana *intelligent, brilliant, bright, smart, alert: *shrewd, perspicacious, sagacious, astute: disciplined, schooled (see TEACH)

Ant distance

2 provident, foresighted, forethoughtful, discreet (see under PRUDENCE)

Ana *cautious, circumspect, calculating, wary: politic, *expedient, advisable: economical, frugal, thrifty, *sparing

3 Prudent, prudential are sometimes confused in use. Prudent applies to persons or their acts or utterances and implies such qualities of mind or character as caution, circumspection, and thrift (see prudent under PRUDENCE), or as wisdom in practical affairs (see WISE)    <people who are both dissolute and prudent. They want to have their fun, and they want to keep their position—Sackville-West) Prudential, on the other hand, applies not to individuals but either to habits, motives, policies, or considerations which are dictated or prescribed by prudence, forethought, business sense, or practical wisdom <in a prudential light it is certainly a very good match for her—Austen) <from obvious prudential considerations the Pacific has been principally sailed over in known tracts—Melville) or to committees, groups, or associations having charge of practical affairs such as expenditures or exercising discretionary or advisory powers in regard to these  <the prudential committee of a Congregational church> Ana politic, *expedient, advisable: advising, counseling (see corresponding verbs under ADVICE)

prudential *prudent

prudish *prim, priggish, prissy, puritanical, straitlaced, stuffy

Ana *rigid, strict: stern, *severe, austere: formal, conventional, solemn (see CEREMONIAL)

prune vb trim, lop, *shear, poll, clip, snip, crop

Ana enhance, heighten (see INTENSIFY): eliminate, *exclude prying *curious, inquisitive, snoop, nosy

Ana meddlesome, officious, *impertinent, intrusive, obtrusive pseudo *counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, sham, pinch-beck, phony

Ana *false, wrong: *misleading, deceptive, delusive, delusory pseudonym, alias, nom de guerre, pen name, nom de plume, incognito all denote a name other than one's true or legal name. Pseudonym usually implies assumption of a fictitious name as an accepted practice of writers, prizefighters, actors, and entertainers; it does not suggest a discreditable motive for one's attempt to conceal one's identity. Alias, in legal use, covers not only assumed names, but those ascribed by others; thus, a boy's true name may be John Potter but he is better known by the alias John Rhoads (Rhoads being his stepfather's name). In more general use alias is associated regularly with offenders against the law and usually connotes an attempt to free oneself by a change of name from the onus of a criminal record. Nom de guerre is a pseudonym assumed by one who seeks anonymity or freedom of scope typically as an adventurer, a critic, or a controversialist; pen name or nom de plume is the pseudonym of a writer. Incognito can denote a name or character adopted especially by a person of rank or eminence from a desire to remain unrecognized or as a polite fiction by which the honors due his rank or eminence may be avoided <the Prince of Wales often traveled under the incognito of Baron Chester) psyche *mind, intellect, soul, brain, intelligence, wit psychiatrist *neurologist, alienist, psychopathologist, psychotherapist, psychoanalyst psychic *mental, intellectual, intelligent, cerebral psychoanalyst *neurologist, psychiatrist, alienist, psychopathologist, psychotherapist psychopathologist *neurologist, psychiatrist, alienist, psychotherapist, psychoanalyst psychosis *insanity, lunacy, mania, dementia psychotherapist *neurologist, psychiatrist, alienist, psychopathologist, psychoanalyst puberty, pubescence *youth, adolescence public n *following, clientele, audience publication declaration, announcement, advertisement, proclamation, promulgation, broadcasting (see under DECLARE) publicity, ballyhoo, promotion, propaganda are comparable when they mean either a systematic effort to mold public opinion in respect to something or the means or the matter used in such an effort. Each implies a specialized form of advertising. Publicity is used especially in reference to the activities of and the information disseminated by a person or persons in the employ of individuals, corporations, organizations, associations, or institutions that seek advertising through more or less indirect means in order to attract attention to themselves, their products, or their objectives or that wish to provide a source of authoritative information on matters concerning themselves that are of interest to the public; thus, the work of a theatrical press agent and of a public relations counsel is publicity; in the first case, for an actor or producer seeking favorable notices in the press; in the second, for a corporation or institution that seeks to control the kind of information regarding itself that is published (some of his carefully planned speeches, always made in the presence of the right listener, are perfect of their kind—their kind being advertisement, or, as we say now, publicity—Lucas) (the object of all commercial publicity is to persuade someone to exchange his money for what the advertiser has for sale—H. H. Smith) Ballyhoo is indiscriminately applied to any kind of advertising, publicity, or promotion which the speaker or writer regards as noisy, sensational, insincere, misleading, or unduly obtrusive (the candidate's preconvention campaign was attended with too much ballyhoo) (every face powder must claim a "scientific" uniqueness, and by this ballyhoo millions are impressed—Benedict) Promotion is specifically applied to the systematic efforts of a business organization to gain advance publicity for something new (as a venture, a product, a motion picture, or an issue of bonds) in order to ensure its favorable reception by the public when it is launched ($50,000 was appropriated for the promotion of the company's new line of soups) (attractive promotions of spring clothing helped to allay the usual post-Easter drop in retail volume—Dun's Review) Propaganda is applied to the concerted or systematic effort of a group that tries to convert others or to hold others to its way of thinking, and to the means employed and the matter circulated. The term has chiefly derogatory, but occasionally underogatory use. In derogatory use it frequently implies publicity sought through objectionable, usually underhand, methods or for a cause that cannot work in the open, and with the intent to win over the gullible or the unwary (attempt to undermine the people's faith in democracy by communist propaganda) (he must acquire an armed following of his own, by lavish expenditure and adroit propaganda—Buchan) In nonderogatory use propaganda often implies the ends of convincing a prejudiced or ignorant public and of inducing it to accept something it is disposed to reject. Even in this use the word usually suggests indirect methods (gradually the terror it [a leper colony] caused was lost through our educational propaganda—Heiser)

Ana advertisement, publication, announcement, promulgation, broadcasting (see under DECLARE) publish *declare, announce, advertise, proclaim, promulgate, broadcast

Ana divulge, disclose, *reveal, discover: *communicate, impart: vent, ventilate, utter, broach, *express puerile *youthful, juvenile, boyish, virgin, virginal, maiden Ana *immature, unmaturred, unripe: raw, callow, green, *rude

Ant adult —Con virile (see MALE) puff n *criticism, critique, review, blurb pugnacious combative, *belligerent, bellicose, quarrelsome, contentious

Ana *aggressive, militant, assertive, self-assertive, pushing, pushy

Ant pacific

puissance might, strength, *power, force, energy puissant *powerful, potent, forceful, forcible

Ant impuissant

pulchritudinous beauteous, good-looking, comely, bonny, pretty, handsome, fair, lovely, *beautiful pull vb Pull, draw, drag, haul, hale, tug, tow mean to cause to move in the direction determined by the person or thing that exerts force. Pull, the general term, is often accompanied by an adverb or adverbial phrase to indicate the direction (two locomotives pull the heavy train up the grade) (pull a person toward one) (pull down goods from a shelf) (pull out a drawer) (he felt pulled this way and that way by duty and by ambition) Draw usually implies a pulling forward or toward the person or thing that exerts the force; commonly it implies a steadier and smoother and often gentler motion than pull (draw a chair to the fireside) (the coach was drawn by six horses) (draw a sled over the snow) (draw the curtains) (draw lots from an urn) In extended use draw often specifically implies a result dependent on a drawing by lot (draw a prize) (draw a jury) or by extracting (draw a tooth) or by an inferring (draw a conclusion) or by attracting (the parasol drew him like a magnet—Wharton) (the drawing power of a play) or a bringing forth or eliciting from a source of supply (draw money from the bank) (a . . . being from whom we draw power and refreshment—Day Lewis) Drag implies a pulling slowly and heavily after the agent or thing exerting force over the ground or a surface; it usually suggests active or passive resistance (the horses dragged the overturned carriage half a mile) (the ship dragged her moorings in the storm) (drag the laden net to the shore) (drag logs to the river) (the attempt which is now being made to drag Anglicanism away from its history and traditions—Inge) Haul implies a forcible pulling, sometimes a dragging (when the hawser fell into the water, there was no means of hauling the boat to shore) (haul down the sails) (that dangling figure was hauled up forty feet above the fountain—Dickens) (began to kiss all the girls, young and old, until his wife . . . hauled him aside and calmed him down—Styron) Haul may imply transportation of heavy materials in a vehicle or conveyance (wagons hauling loads of wood) (trucks hauling gravel) (trains that haul coal from the mines) Hale may occasionally replace haul in the sense of pulling forcibly (the rope that haled the buckets from the well—Tennyson) but more often it is used of the constraining, compelling, or dragging of a reluctant person (natives, haled long distances to court as liquor witnesses—Colby | Tug implies a strenuous, usually spasmodic pulling, but it may or may not suggest actual movement <the child tugged at his father's hand> <tugged at the chains with the aid of two husky comrades—Costain> <the Old Inhabitant chuckled and tugged at his little goatee—Brandt> | Tow implies pulling or drawing (as by a rope or chain) something which is not using or is unable to use its own power <tow a ship into its berth> <tow a wrecked automobile to a garage>

pulsate, pulse, beat, throb, palpitate can mean to manifest a rhythmical movement such as or similar to the one which occurs in the circulatory system when blood is forced along by alternate contractions and relaxations of the ventricles of the heart. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are to be found in the nouns pulsation, pulse, beat, throb, palpitation when they are used of this rhythmical movement or of one distinct step in it. Pulsate and pulsation carry few specific or distinguishing connotations, but they usually imply regularity, continuity, and vigor in the rhythm whether it is apparent in movements or in sounds <when the heart no longer pulsates, death occurs> <great effort pulsating from the heart of this small island—Sir Winston Churchill> <the pulsations of its engine had died away—Bennett> <long heavy pulsation of airplanes passing over—Thirkell> | Pulse, the verb, carries a strong implication of impelled movement; in distinction from pulsate it may also connote a lively succession of spurts, waves, or gushes; thus, the arteries pulsate as the blood pulses through them. The term is more common in general and literary than in technical use. It sometimes takes as its subject what flows or moves in this fashion (as the blood) and at other times what evidences the rhythmical movement (as the heart or blood vessels) <the pulsing waters of the sea> <through the tensed veins on his forehead the blood could be seen to pulse in nervous, staccato bounds—Donn Byrne> <Eustacia . . . set inwardly pulsing by his words—Hardy> <they move and breathe in an environment that pulses and glows—Mencken> | Pulse, the noun, is chiefly a technical term; even its extended use is affected by or dependent on the term's meaning in physiology. In this sense, pulse usually denotes the number of pulsations of the arteries in a minute as observed commonly by feeling the radial artery of the wrist  <feel a patient's pulse> <an intermittent pulse> <in his eardrums hammers his heavy pulse—Lowell> | In extended use pulse, when it does not take the place of pulsation is usually a metaphoric extension of the technical use <Rome was the heart and pulse of the empire . . . and on its well-being hung the future of the civilized world—Buchan> <one felt the pulse of the village in the pub—Mais> | Beat, both verb and noun, is the ordinary non-technical word often used in place of pulsate and pulsation and sometimes in place of pulse. It stresses rhythmical recurrence of sounds more often than rhythmical and continuous alternation in movement <he could hear the beat of his heart> <his breathing was hard and . . . the blood beat in his ears and eyes—Robertson Davies>  | It is the more usual designation for something (as the tick of a clock, a stroke on a drum, and the accented syllable in verse or note in music) that strikes the ear at regular intervals <the beat of a bird's wing against a windowpane> <the beating of tom-toms> | Both the noun and verb throb imply vigorous and often violent or painful pulsation <throb of drum and timbal's rattle—Housman> <the throbbing of an abscessed tooth> | Either is especially appropriate when there is the intent to imply excitement, or emotional stress <the love which fills the letter, which throbs and burns in it—H. O. Taylor> <here is a captain, let him tell the tale; your hearts will throb and weep to hear him speak—Shak.> <the throb of their activity is felt throughout the whole body politic—R. M. Dawson> | Palpitate and palpitation imply rapid, often abnormally rapid and fluttering, pulsation. In medical use the terms commonly imply overexertion, violent emotion, or a diseased condition; in extended use, however, the words more often imply a rapid vibration, quivering, or shaking, without any connotation of something amiss <then, delicate and palpitating as a silver reed, she stood up in the soft light of the morning—Hewlett> <though the book palpitates with l'amour, nothing like simple ordinary human love is to be seen anywhere—Barrett>

Ana vibrate, fluctuate, waver, oscillate (see SWING): quiver, shudder, quaver, tremble (see SHAKE)

pulsation pulse, beat, throb, palpitation (see under PULSATE) pulse n pulsation, beat, throb, palpitation (see under PULSATE)

Ana *rhythm, cadence, meter: vibration, fluctuation (see corresponding verbs at SWING) pulse vb *pulsate, beat, throb, palpitate

Ana *move, drive, impel: vibrate, fluctuate, oscillate (see SWING) pummel vb *beat, pound, buffet, baste, belabor, thrash

Ana *strike, hit, smite, slug, punch punch vb 1 *strike, hit, smite, slug, slog, swat, clout, slap, box, cuff

Ana *beat, pound, pummel, baste, belabor

2 *perforate, puncture, prick, bore, drill

Ana pierce, penetrate, probe, *enter punch n *vigor, vim, spirit, dash, esprit, verve, élan, drive punctilious punctual, meticulous, scrupulous, *careful

Ana particular, fussy, squeamish, fastidious, *nice: formal, conventional, ceremonious, *ceremonial punctual punctilious, meticulous, scrupulous, *careful

Ana *quick, prompt, ready: precise, *correct, nice, right puncture vb *perforate, punch, prick, bore, drill

Ana pierce, penetrate (see ENTER): deflate, shrink (see CONTRACT vb)

pungent, piquant, poignant, racy, spicy, snappy are comparable when they mean characterized by sharpness, zest, and a piercing or gripping quality. Pungent applies especially to a sharp, piercing, stinging, biting, or penetrating quality, primarily of odors; it may suggest power to excite or stimulate keen interest or telling force and cogency <her perfume, a sweet pungent odor . . . evocative and compelling—Styron> <the pungent reek of a strong cigar—Doyle> <his pungent pen played its part in rousing the nation to its later struggle with the Crown—J. R. Green> <the mob needs concrete goals and the pungent thrill of hate in order to give vent to its destructive impulses—Cohen> | Piquant may indicate an interesting or appetizing tartness, sharpness, or pungency that stimulates or a zestful, arch, provocative, challenging, or exciting quality that is individual or peculiar  <piquant with the tart-sweet taste of green apples and sugar—Spitzer> <piquant touch of innocent malice in his narration—Coulton> <those piquant incongruities, which are the chief material of wit—Montague> | Poignant (see also MOVING) may describe what is sharply or piercingly effective upon the senses or stirring to one's inmost consciousness or deepest emotions <the air of romantic poverty which Rosalie found so tragically poignant—Wylie> <with poignant finality, as a lover might put away a rose from a lost romance—Turnbull> <a vague but poignant sense of discouragement that the sacrifices of the war had not been justified by its results spread over the country—Handlin) Racy may suggest verve, dash, tang, or vitality manifested with lively free heartiness (writes a racy, sometimes almost lusty prose, entirely suited to describing a group of down-to-earth hard-living people—Sherberg) (a rare and racy sense of humor—Maugham) Sometimes the term may carry the additional hint of passing beyond the bounds of propriety or good taste (considered too racy for the ladies and was read aloud only at a stag meeting—Newsweek) (if men yawn . . . the singers will sweep into an especially racy and obscene offering—Julian Dana) Spicy describes what is seasoned or made redolent of spice; in extended uses it may suggest the piquant, smart, spirited, sensational, or scandalous (flair for a spicy zestful vernacular in dialogue—Rees) (spicy tales of the type which usually appear in paper-bound copies, in which bishops are forced to visit nudist camps in their underwear—Robertson Davies) Snappy suggests briskness, animation, dash, wit, or risqué quality (spoken in a snappy, matter-of-fact way—Lindsay) (the renditions, if not especially lovely, were at all times spirited, neat, and snappy—Virgil Thomson) (taken one look at . . . a campus publication, decided that the contents are too snappy, and expelled the editor—N. Y. Times)

Ana *incisive, trenchant, biting, cutting; penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER); exciting, stimulating, provoking or provocative (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE)

Ant bland

punish, chastise, castigate, chasten, discipline, correct mean to inflict pain, loss, or suffering upon a person for his sin, crime, or fault. Punish implies imposing a penalty for violation of law, disobedience of authority, or intentional wrongdoing (if ye will not . . . hearken unto me, then I will punish you—Lev 26:18) (American society punishes the ex-Communist who voluntarily repents about as severely as it does the one caught Red-handed—Bliven b. 1889) Chastise may suggest the infliction of corporal punishment and sometimes implies an acting in anger, but more often with a view to reformation or amendment (my father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions—I Kings 12:11) Sometimes chastise implies verbal censure or denunciation (moral and intellectual weaklings that she felt herself appointed to chastise—Tennessee Williams) and then comes close to castigate which usually implies severe and often public lashing by tongue or pen rather than by whip or rod, and so suggests painful censure or bitter rebuke (not even the ablest critic can castigate an artless generation into repentance and creative vigor—Barnouw) Chasten usually implies subjection to affliction or trial with the aim not so much of punishment as of a testing whereby one may emerge humbled and purified or strengthened (for whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth . . . If ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons—Heb 12:6-7) (such bliss, he tells himself, cannot last forever; fortune must balance it now and then with a chastening blow—Durant) Discipline (see also TEACH) implies punishment, chastisement, or sometimes chastening, with the intent to subjugate, subdue, or bring under one's control (the duty of parents to discipline their children) (a thorn in the side of those in authority, his position . . . made it impossible to ignore or effectively to discipline him—Fish) Correct implies punishment having for its aim the amendment or reformation of the offender (his faults lie open to the laws; let them, not you, correct him—Shak.) (must moreover know how to correct without wounding—Barzun)

Ana *penalize, fine, amerce, mulct; *imprison, incarcerate, immure; *avenge, revenge

Ant excuse: pardon —Con *exculpate, acquit, exonerate, absolve, vindicate puny *petty, trivial, trifling, paltry, measly, picayunish, picayune

Ana feeble, *weak, frail, infirm; *small, little, diminutive: slight, tenuous (see THIN adj) purblind *blind, sightless purchase vb *buy

Ana gain, win, *get, obtain, procure, secure pure 1 Pure, absolute, simple, sheer denote free from everything that is foreign to the true nature or the essential character of the thing specified. Pure distinctively suggests freedom from intermixture. When applied to concrete things, it usually implies lack of contamination, adulteration, or pollution (pure water) (a pure breed) When applied to an abstraction or to a concrete example of an abstraction, it implies the absence of everything that would obscure the thing in its essence or in its ideal character (pure poetry) (an institute devoted to pure physics, as distinct from applied physics—Endeavour) (as there is a constant mingling of Hebrew and Aramaic passages, the Aramaic is not pure—Barton) Absolute implies freedom from relation to or dependence on anything else; it is applied chiefly to abstractions (as space, time, and magnitude) viewed independently of experience and considered in their ultimate ideal character; thus, absolute space, as used in physics, is space conceived of as apart from the things which occupy it, and which limit or determine the ordinary person's notion of it. Because of such use, absolute often comes close to real, as opposed to apparent. Absolute music, in theory, is music that depends solely on such distinctive properties of that art as tone, harmony, and rhythm to produce its effects, and avoids, in contrast to program music, all suggestion or characterization of external things. Absolute is applied to substances less often than is pure, but both are applied to alcohol: pure alcohol is free from other matter except for a modicum of water; absolute alcohol is both pure and completely dehydrated. Simple stresses singleness of character and is distinguished from what is compound or complex. It can connote homogeneity and incapacity for analysis or further reduction (an element is a simple substance) (quality and relation are simple notions) (was now confronted by simple beauty, pure and undeniable—Gibbons) (too-elaborate deference paid them by the neighbors embarrassed them and caused them to clothe their wealth in muted, simple gray—Styron) Simple, as applied to abstractions or conceptions, often suggests artificial freedom from complexity, and sometimes also unreality or untruth, when the simplicity is attained by eliminating essential factors (the world to which your philosophy professor introduces you is simple . . . The contradictions of real life are absent from it—James) Sheer, more than any of these words, tends to lose its significance and to become a mere intensive (sheer nonsense) However, it can distinctively imply such a dissociation from everything else that the pure and essential character of the quality (as a trait, virtue, or power) to which it is applied is clearly displayed (the "Ancient Mariner" . . . is a work of sheer imagination—Loves) (he was part sheer technician, part delighted child when he could demonstrate his sound system—Theodore Sturgeon)

Ana elemental, *elementary; *clear, transparent, lucid, limpid; genuine, *authentic

Ant contaminated, polluted: adulterated (of foods, metals); applied (of science)

2 *chaste, modest, decent

Ana *clean, cleanly; virtuous, *moral, ethical Ant impure: immoral purge vb *rid, clear, unburden, disabuse Ana cleanse, *clean: eliminate, *exclude, debar, shut out, rule out: *eject, oust, dismiss, expel: expunge, *erase, efface, delete puritanical *prim, priggish, prissy, prudish, straitlaced, stuffy Ana *rigid, rigorous, strict: *plain, simple, homely, unpretentious: *illiberal, narrow, narrow-minded, hidebound, intolerant, bigoted purloin *steal, pilfer, filch, lift, pinch, snitch, swipe, cop Ana abstract, *detach: *rob, plunder, rifle, loot, burglarize purport n *substance, gist, burden, core, pith Ana significance, import, *meaning, signification: tenor, *tendency, drift, trend purported *supposed, supposititious, suppositious, reputed, putative, conjectural, hypothetical purpose n *intention, intent, design, aim, end, object, objective, goal Ana *ambition, aspiration: proposition, *proposal: *plan, project, scheme purpose vb propose, design, *intend, mean Ana meditate, *ponder: weigh, *consider, contemplate: plan, plot, scheme, project (see under PLAN n): determine, *decide pursue *follow, chase, trail, tag, tail Ana *persevere, persist: *practice, exercise: persecute, oppress (see WRONG vb): hound, ride, *bait, badger Con flee, fly, *escape: avoid, evade, elude, shun (see ESCAPE) pursuit calling, occupation, employment, *work, business purvey *cater, pander Ana *furnish, equip, outfit purview *range, gamut, reach, radius, compass, sweep, scope, orbit, horizon, ken push vb Push, shove, thrust, propel mean to use force upon a thing so as to make it move ahead or aside. Push implies the application of force by a body (as a person) already in contact with the body to be moved onward, aside, or out of the way <push a wheelbarrow along the road> <push a door open> <push a man over a cliff> <an extra locomotive was needed at the rear to push the long train up the grade> <push the excited children into another room> Shove often differs from push in carrying a stronger implication of the exercise of muscular strength and of forcing something along a surface <the boys shoved the furniture up against the walls> <I picked him up trying to shove in the front door. There wouldn't been any door in a minute—Hellman> Often, when muscular exertion is not strongly implied, haste or roughness or rudeness in pushing is suggested <shoved the paper into his pocket> <shove the articles on the desk into a box> <shove a person out of one's way> <I can't say that I took the drink. It got shoved into my hand—Warren> Thrust differs from push in carrying a weaker implication of steadiness or continuousness in the application of force and a stronger suggestion of rapidity in the movement effected or of violence in the force that is used; often the use of actual physical force is not clearly implied <Abraham . . . thrust the old man out of his tent—Taylor> <thrust her hands in her coat pockets in a coquettish pose—Wouk> Often, also, it implies the sudden and forcible pushing (as of a weapon, implement, or instrument) so that it enters into the thing aimed at <thrust a spear into an opponent's breast> <thrusting their money into a stranger's hand—Wolfe> Propel implies a driving forward or onward by a force or power that imparts motion. In some use it implies pressure exerted from outside or behind, usually by some power that is not human <the flow of air which propels the slow-sailing clouds—Lowes> <she walked—as if she were being propelled from the outside, by a force that she neither knew nor could control—Tate> Additionally, it is the usual term when the use of a mechanical aid or of an actuating power (as steam or electrical power) is implied <ships propelled by steam>  <automobiles are usually propelled by internal-combustion engines>

In extended uses push implies a pressing or urging forward (as with insistence, with vigor, or with impetuosity) so that one's end may be gained, one's work may be completed, or one's goal be reached <push the nation into war> <push a theory to an extreme> <he directed a year-long probe . . . then pushed through sweeping reforms—Armbrister> Shove often suggests obtrusiveness or intrusiveness or lack of finesse in attaining an end or making a way for oneself or another <shove oneself into society> <shoving the boring tiring jobs off onto other people—Ann Bridge> Thrust implies a forcing upon others of something that is not wanted, desired, or sought for <some have greatness thrust upon 'em—Shak.> <Amy had a grievance . . . because Sophia had recently thrust upon her a fresh method of cooking green vegetables—Bennett> Propel is sometimes used in place of impel when a strong inner urge or appetite is implied as pushing one on, especially toward what one desires <anxiety is not the only force that propels us, but it is surely one of the most potent—Binger>

Ana *move, drive, impel: *force, compel, constrain, oblige

pushing, pushy *aggressive, militant, assertive, self-assertive

Ana *vigorous, energetic, strenuous: officious, intrusive, obtrusive (see IMPERTINENT): self-confident, confident, self-assured, assured (see corresponding nouns at CONFIDENCE)

puss n *face, countenance, visage, physiognomy, mug pustule *abscess, boil, furuncle, carbuncle, pimple putative *supposed, supposititious, suppositious, reputed, purported, conjectural, hypothetical

Ana alleged, advanced (see ADDUCE): assumed, pretended, simulated (see ASSUME) putrefy rot, decompose, *decay, spoil, disintegrate, crumble

Ana corrupt, vitiate, deprave, *debase: deliquesce (see LIQUEFY) putrid fetid, noisome, stinking, *malodorous, rank, rancid, fusty, musty

Ana decomposed, decayed, rotten, putrefied (see DECAY): corrupted, vitiated (see under DEBASE) putsch *rebellion, revolution, uprising, revolt, insurrection, mutiny, coup put up *reside, live, dwell, sojourn, lodge, stay, stop puzzle vb Puzzle, perplex, mystify, bewilder, distract, non-plus, confound, dumbfound are comparable when they mean to disturb and baffle mentally or throw into mental confusion. The first three words express various mental reactions to what is intricate, complicated, or involved. Puzzle implies such complication or intricacy that the mind finds it exceedingly, often distressingly, difficult to understand or to solve  <there was much that impressed, puzzled and troubled a foreign observer about the new Germany—Shirer> Perplex adds to puzzle the implications of worry and uncertainty, especially about reaching a decision on a course of action or the right solution of a personal problem <Southerners . . . were terribly perplexed and torn when the conceptions on which they had been living began to be broken down—Edmund Wilson) To mystify is to perplex, sometimes by playing upon one's credulity, but more often by concealing important facts or factors or by obscuring issues (when she was weary of mystifying foreign statesmen, she turned to find fresh sport in mystifying her own ministers—J. R. Green) (once prescriptions were written almost altogether in Latin. This was not done to mystify the patient—Fishbein) Bewilder often implies perplexity, but it stresses a confused state of mind that makes clear thinking and complete comprehension practically impossible (bewildered by contradictory statements and orders) (do not run to the Socialists or the Capitalists, or to your favorite newspaper, to make up your mind for you: they will only unsettle and bewilder you—Shaw) Distract implies strong agitation arising from divergent or conflicting considerations or interests (she seemed nervous and distracted, kept glancing over her shoulder, and crushing her handkerchief up in her hands—Cather) (conscious of . . . a current of unsaid speeches, which would distract her feelings and perhaps confuse a little her thoughts—Gibbons) The last three words imply less mental disturbance and distress than some of the preceding terms, but they heighten the implication of bafflement and mental confusion. Nonplus implies blankness of mind or utter inability to find anything worth saying or doing (the problem which nonplusses the wisest heads on this planet, has become quite a familiar companion of mine. What is reality?—L. P. Smith) (she was utterly nonplussed by the pair of them . . . What on earth were they?—Gouge) Confound (see also MISTAKE) implies mental confusion, but it stresses the implication either of mental paralysis or of profound astonishment (so spake the son of God; and Satan stood a while as mute, confounded—Milton) (language to him is a means of communication . . . He does not wish to dazzle or confound his friends, but only to make himself understood—Crothers) (this sorrow . . . seemed to have confounded him beyond all hope—Styron) Dumbfound tends to replace confound in casual and oral use (I cannot wriggle out of it; I am dumbfounded—Darwin) (he captured the public and dumbfounded the critics—Macy) Sometimes dumbfound so strongly implies astonishment that it is used in place of astound (I was dumbfounded to hear him say that I was on a quixotic enterprise—William Lawrence)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana amaze, astound, flabbergast (see SURPRISE): *confuse, muddle, addle: *embarrass, disconcert, discomfit puzzle n *mystery, problem, enigma, riddle, conundrum pygmy *dwarf, midget, manikin, homunculus, runt

Q

quack n *impostor, faker, mountebank, charlatan

Ana pretender, simulator, counterfeiter, shammer (see corresponding verbs at ASSUME): *deceit, duplicity, dissimulation, cunning, guile quail vb *recoil, shrink, flinch, wince, blench

Ana cower, cringe (see FAWN): falter, waver, vacillate, *hesitate: quake, quaver, tremble, shudder (see SHAKE) quaint *strange, odd, queer, outlandish, curious, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, singular, unique

Ana *fantastic, bizarre, grotesque: droll, funny, *laughable: archaic, antiquated, antique (see OLD) quake vb *shake, tremble, totter, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither

Ana quail, shrink, *recoil: vibrate, fluctuate, waver (see SWING): falter, vacillate, *hesitate qualified competent, capable, *able

Ana trained, instructed, disciplined (see TEACH): examined, quizzed, catechized (see ASK): tested, tried, proved (see PROVE)

Ant unqualified qualify 1 *moderate, temper

Ana modify, vary, alter, *change: *adapt, adjust, conform, accommodate, reconcile

2 *characterize, distinguish, mark

Ana *ascribe, impute, attribute, assign: predicate (see ASSERT)

3 *prepare, fit, condition, ready

Ana empower, *enable: endow, endue (see DOWER): train, instruct, *teach quality 1 Quality, property, character, attribute, accident all denote one of the intelligible marks or indications by means of which a thing may be identified or its constitution be understood. Quality is the term of widest application and may designate any such mark, material or immaterial, individual or generic (distinguishing qualities of iron are tensile strength and corrosiveness) (there was only one quality in a woman that appealed to him—charm—Galsworthy) (the persistent contemporariness that is a quality of all good art—Huxley) (her self-conscious . . . awkwardness lent her a dangerous amateur quality—Salinger) A property is a quality that is proper to a species or type; it therefore belongs to a thing by virtue of that thing's true or essential nature (the eye has this strange property: it rests only in beauty—Woolf) (rhythm is a property of words—Rickword) (Sir Joseph Thomson . . . pointed out that weight is only an "apparently" invariable property of matter—Ellis) A character is a peculiar or distinctive quality more often of a class than of an individual. The term is used especially in scientific and philosophical writing with reference to the properties which distinguish an isolable subgroup (as a species) within a larger group (as a genus) (wheat and oats share the properties of cereal grasses but have specific characters that clearly differentiate them) (haunynite and noselite show characters like sodalite, but they differ from it in containing the radical SO₄ in the place of chlorine—Pirsson) An attribute is a quality that is ascribed to a thing. The term may imply a lack of definite knowledge of the thing in question; thus, one can speak of the attributes of God, meaning the qualities men ascribe to him (to endow her with all the attributes of a mythological paragon upon Olympus—Wylie) (historical personages become invested with romantic attributes—Wright) More often attribute denotes a quality that, though ascribed, is felt as an essential concomitant which must belong to a thing by reason of its nature (mercy is . . . an attribute to God himself—Shak.) (this Confederation had none of the attributes of sovereignty in legislative, executive, or judicial power—Taney) An accident basically is a nonessential trait; in philosophical use, however, the term often means one of the qualities by which a thing manifests itself and implies, therefore, a contrast with the substance—or the real, but unapparent, nature—of the thing <waves [on a Japanese artist's screen] such as these, divested of all accident of appearance, in their naked impetus of movement and recoil—Binyon> In more general use accident usually implies fortuitousness or lack of intrinsic value <rhyme is . . . an accident rather than an essential of verse—Lowes> <certainly many mystics have been ascetic. But that has been the accident of their philosophy, and not the essence of their religion—Ellis>

Ana predication, affirmation (see corresponding verbs at ASSERT): peculiarity, individuality, characteristic (see corresponding adjectives at CHARACTERISTIC)

2 Quality, stature, caliber are often interchangeable as indicating, when used without modifiers, distinctive merit or superiority. Quality implies a complex of qualities (see QUALITY 1) and is therefore always singular in use. The term usually implies a high order of excellence, virtue, strength of character, or worth <splendid writing, of course, but to no purpose . . . It's not quality we look for in a novel, but mileage—Purdy> <they're all made by machinery now. The quality may be inferior, but that doesn't matter. It's the cost of production that counts—Dahl> <this little Tania had quality; she carried her scars without a whimper—Bambrick> Stature implies that the one considered has reached or is in process of reaching the height or greatness possible to one of his kind <probing in the realms of life and matter have seemed to diminish man's stature and to belittle his dignity—Marquand> <every piece of work you do adds something to your stature, increases the power and maturity of your experience—Wolfe> Caliber suggests extent or range especially of one's mind or powers; it may connote unusual but measurable range, scope, or breadth of ability or intellect but often depends on qualification to supply a standard of reference or comparison or to indicate the direction of deviation from the norm  <the milieu of her youth where the size of the engagement ring determines the caliber of the bridegroom—Geismar> <is at his relaxed best because he is accompanied by musicians of the first caliber—John Hammond> <pundits of big and little caliber—Craig Thompson>

Ana *excellence, virtue: value, *worth

qualm, scruple, compunction, demur can all denote a feeling of doubt or hesitation as to the rightness or wisdom of something one is doing or is about to do. Qualm implies an uneasy, often a sickening, sensation that one is not following the dictates of his conscience or of his better judgment <have no qualms at all in committing adultery—Book-of-the-Month Club News> <how few little girls can squash insects and kill rabbits without a qualm—Rose Macaulay> <we go on spreading culture as if it were peanut butter . . . but we feel qualms about the result—Barzun> Scruple denotes mental disturbance occasioned by doubt of the rightness, the propriety, the fairness, or, sometimes, the outcome of an act; it often implies a principle as the source of the disturbance, and it may imply an overnice conscience or an extremely delicate sense of honor <she has no scruples about carrying away any of my books> <began to have scruples, to feel obligations, to find that veracity and honor were . . . compelling principles—Shaw> <he has not pretended an apprehension which he does not feel, but has candidly disclosed his conscientious scruples—Meltzer> Compunction (see also PENITENCE) implies a usually transitory prick or sting of conscience that warns a person that what he is about to do or is doing is wrong, unfair, unjust, or improper; it may additionally suggest a degree of concern for a potential victim <showed no compunction in planning devilish engines of military destruction—Ellis> <he has to be taught . . . to feel compunction when he has wantonly caused tears—Russell> Demur stresses hesitation to such an extent that it carries a stronger implication of delay than any of the other terms; it usually suggests, however, a delay caused by objections or irresolution rather than by an awakened conscience or by a scruple or compunction <he doubts with a persistence of demur and question that might well have surprised Descartes himself—Times Lit. Sup.> <with some misgivings but without demur his committee accepted the decision—Time>

Ana misgiving, *apprehension, foreboding, presentiment: doubt, mistrust, suspicion, *uncertainty

quandary *predicament, dilemma, plight, scrape, fix, jam, pickle

Ana *junction, pass, exigency, emergency, contingency, crisis: *difficulty, hardship, vicissitude: puzzling or puzzle, mystification, perplexity, bewilderment (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE) quantity amount, *sum, aggregate, total, whole, number quarrel n Quarrel, wrangle, altercation, squabble, bickering, spat, tiff are comparable when they mean a dispute marked by anger or discord on both sides. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are found in their corresponding verbs, quarrel, wrangle, altercate, squabble, bicker, spat, tiff. Quarrel usually implies heated verbal contention, but it stresses strained or severed relations which may persist even after verbal strife has ceased <patch up a quarrel> <she hated any kind of quarrel . . . she shuddered at raised voices and quailed before looks of hate—Stafford> <the middle class had taken over the reins. It quarreled with James I, beheaded Charles I—Barr> Wrangle implies undignified and often futile disputation with noisy insistence on each person's opinion  <makes them wrangle interminably about petty details—Laski> Altercation and the rare verb altercate imply fighting with words as the chief weapons, though blows may also be connoted <I have an extreme aversion to public altercation on philosophic points—Franklin> <Lydia, foreseeing an altercation, and alarmed by the threatening aspect of the man, attempted to hurry away—Shaw> <it becomes us not . . . to altercate on the localities of the battle—Lytton> Squabble stresses childish and unseemly wrangling over a petty matter; it does not necessarily imply anger or bitter feeling <they had always squabbled . . . but their scenes, with the shouting, the insults, the threats, and the flare-ups of mutual revulsion had gradually increased—Farrell>  Bickering and bicker imply constant and petulant verbal sparring or interchanges of cutting remarks; they suggest an irritable mood or mutual antagonism <the tearing worries of political snarls, of strife between capital and labor, of factional bickering—Sulzberger> <though men may bicker with the things they love, they would not make them laughable in all eyes, not while they loved them—Tennyson> Spat also implies an insignificant cause but, unlike squabble and bicker, it suggests an angry outburst and a quick ending without hard feelings <it wasn't a fight, really—more of a spat than anything else—Heggen>  Tiff differs from spat chiefly in implying a disagreement that manifests itself in ill humor or temporarily hurt feelings <at the trial circumstantial evidence piled up against him, including his earlier tiff . . . which was offered as a motive—Hilton>

⟨he retired after tiffing with Hitler—Hal Boyle⟩

Ana *brawl, broil, fracas, melee, row, rumpus, scrap: contention, dissension, conflict, difference, variance, strife, *discord quarrel vb wrangle, altercate, squabble, bicker, spat, tiff (see under QUARREL n)

Ana *contend, fight, battle, war: dispute, agitate, argue, *discuss

Con *agree, concur, coincide quarrelsome pugnaeous, combative, bellicose, *belligerent, contentious

Ana antagonistic, *adverse, counter: hostile, inimical, antipathetic, rancorous (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY) quarry *victim, prey quash 1 *annul, abrogate, void, vacate

2 *crush, quell, extinguish, suppress, quench

Ana *destroy: *ruin, wreck: *suppress, repress quaver vb *shake, tremble, shudder, quake, totter, quiver, shiver, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither

Ana falter, waver, vacillate, *hesitate: vibrate, fluctuate, sway (see SWING) quay *wharf, dock, pier, slip, berth, jetty, levee queenly regal, royal, *kingly, imperial, princely queer adj *strange, odd, erratic, eccentric, peculiar, quaint, outlandish, curious

Ana dubious, *doubtful, questionable: droll, funny, *laughable: bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic quell *crush, extinguish, suppress, quench, quash

Ana *destroy: wreck, *ruin: subdue, subjugate, overcome, vanquish, *conquer

Ant foment

quench *crush, quell, extinguish, suppress, quash

Ana repress, *suppress: end, terminate (see CLOSE) querulous fretful, petulant, pettish, huffy, *irritable, peevish, fractious, snappish, waspish

Ana crying, weeping, wailing, whimpering, blubbering (see CRY vb): touchy, cranky, cross (see IRASCIBLE): lamenting, deploring, bemoaning (see DEPLORE) query vb *ask, question, interrogate, inquire, examine, quiz, catechize quest *adventure, enterprise

Ana exploit, *feat, achievement question vb *ask, interrogate, query, inquire, examine, quiz, catechize

Ant answer—Con reply, respond (see ANSWER vb) questionable *doubtful, dubious, problematic

Ana uncertain, suspicious (see corresponding nouns at UNCERTAINTY): *obscure, vague, equivocal

Ant authoritative: unquestioned quick 1 fleet, swift, rapid, *fast, speedy, expeditious, hasty

Ana brisk, nimble, *agile: abrupt, impetuous, *precipitate, headlong

2 Quick, prompt, ready, apt are comparable when they apply to persons, their mental operations, their acts, and their words and mean having or manifesting the ability to respond without delay or hesitation. Quick stresses

instancy of response to such an extent that it usually connotes native rather than acquired power (⟨quick eyes⟩ ⟨quick in perception⟩) (⟨examined the hall and the men who passed, with the same quick, sharp cunning—O'Flaherty⟩)

Very often the word suggests marked capacity for learning or for absorbing what is taught (even as a child she had had a quick mind, a gift of mimicry, an excellent memory—Wouk⟩)

Prompt also implies instancy of response, but it may or may not imply native quickness. Often it carries a suggestion of preparation (as by training or discipline) that fits one for quick response when the occasion demands

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

it (⟨prompt service⟩) (⟨prompt eloquence⟩) (⟨prompt insight into the workings of complex apparatus—F. H. Garrison⟩)

Sometimes the word carries so strong an implication of willingness or eagerness that a lack of normal inhibitions is also suggested (⟨they press so eagerly to savor the purity, the heroism, that matches their prompt imaginings—Hackett⟩)

Ready, like prompt, implies previous training or a strong predisposition as well as instancy of response, but it more often characterizes the person or his powers than his performance or his expression of thought or feeling. It therefore often implies, as prompt does not, skill, facility, fluency, or ease in attainment (⟨reading maketh a full man, conference a ready man—Bacon⟩)

⟨he was not a ready speaker, and so . . . had written out what he had to say—Scudder⟩ The word is often applied to the bodily organ or to the instrument one uses in manifesting skill or fluency (⟨he has a ready tongue⟩) (⟨a pair of ready hands⟩)

Apt (see also FIT; APT 2) does not throw the emphasis on the quickness of the response, though that is involved in its meaning, but on the possession of qualities (as a high degree of intelligence, a particular talent or gift, or a strong bent) which make for such quickness. It is therefore especially appropriate when the person in mind responds quickly only to particular stimuli or shows a capacity for a definite kind of work (⟨she is apt at drawing but not at arithmetic⟩) (⟨supple, sinew-corded, apt at arms—Tennyson⟩) (⟨apt as he was in attack or report . . . [he] was readier still to give mercy—Maxwell Anderson⟩)

Ana *intelligent, clever, smart, quick-witted: deft, adroit, *dexterous: *sharp, acute, keen

Ant sluggish

quicken vb 1 Quicken, animate, enliven, vivify can mean to make alive or lively, but the words diverge more or less widely in their implications. Quicken stresses either the renewal of life, especially of suspended life or growth, or the rousing of what is inert into fullness of activity. Sometimes the rekindled life is physical but more often it is spiritual, intellectual, or imaginative (⟨it is the Spirit that quickeneth . . . the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life—Jn 6:63⟩) (⟨its characters never quicken with the life one feels lurks somewhere within them—Jerome Stone⟩)

Animate (compare animated under LIVING and LIVELY) emphasizes the imparting of vitality or of motion and activity or the giving of liveliness or of the appearance of life to something previously deficient in or lacking such a quality (⟨that which animates all great art—spiritual ferment—Clive Bell⟩) (⟨vendors and shoppers . . . animate its lanes—W. R. Moore⟩)

Enliven suggests a stimulating influence that kindles, exalts, or brightens; it therefore presupposes dullness, depression, or torpidity, in the thing affected (⟨the sun . . . was wonderfully warm and enlivening—D. H. Lawrence⟩) (⟨but soon the feel of the paint on the canvas begins to enliven his mind; and the mind thus quickened conceives a livelier curiosity about the creature before him—Montague⟩)

Vivify sometimes, like quicken, implies the renewal of life and at other times, like animate, implies the giving of the appearance of life. In each case it usually also suggests a freshening or energizing effect and implies vitality more often than activity or motion (⟨in . . . the Elizabethan age, English society at large was accessible to ideas, was permeated by them, was vivified by them—Arnold⟩) (⟨the room was dead. The essence that had vivified it was gone—O. Henry⟩) (⟨that Promethean fire, which animates the canvas and vivifies the marble—Reynolds⟩)

Ana activate, *vitalize, energize: rouse, arouse, *stir

Ant deaden

2 excite, stimulate, *provoke, pique, galvanize

Ana *activate, actuate, motivate: spur, goad, induce (see corresponding nouns at MOTIVE): *incite, foment Ant arrest

3 hasten, hurry, *speed, accelerate, precipitate

Ant slacken

quick-witted clever, bright, smart, *intelligent, alert, knowing, brilliant

Ana ready, prompt, *quick, apt: *sharp, keen, acute: *witty, humorous, facetious quiescent *latent, dormant, potential, abeyant

Ana quiet, *still, silent: inert, *inactive, passive, supine quiet adj silent, noiseless, *still, stilly

Ana *calm, serene, placid, tranquil, peaceful

Ant unquiet —Con *rough, harsh: disturbed, agitated, upset, disquieted, perturbed (see DISCOMPOSE): *vociferous, clamorous, boisterous, blatant, strident quiet, quieten vb *calm, compose, still, lull, soothe, settle, tranquilize

Ana allay, alleviate, assuage, *relieve: abate, lessen, *decrease

Ant disquiet: arouse, rouse —Con *stir, awaken, rally: excite, stimulate, *provoke, quicken quip *joke, jest, jape, witticism, wisecrack, crack, gag quit 1 acquit, comport, deport, demean, conduct, *behave

Ana & Con see those at ACQUIT

2 *go, leave, depart, withdraw, retire

Ana forsake, desert, *abandon: *relinquish, surrender, resign: *escape, flee, fly, abscond

3 *stop, cease, discontinue, desist quiver vb *shake, shiver, shudder, quaver, totter, tremble, quake, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither

Ana *pulsate, pulse, beat, throb, palpitate: flutter, flicker, flitter (see FLIT) quixotic chimerical, fantastic, visionary, fanciful, *imaginary

Ana *sentimental, romantic: utopian, *ambitious: ideal, transcendental, *abstract quiz vb *ask, question, interrogate, examine, catechize, query, inquire quote, cite, repeat are not close synonyms, though all mean to speak or write again something already said or written by another. Quote usually implies a use of another's words, commonly with faithful exactness or an attempt at it, for some special effect like adornment, illustration, close examination (I will quote a passage which is unfamiliar enough to be regarded with fresh attention —T. S. Eliot) But sometimes quote is applied to a more general referral to someone as the author or source of information without implication of precise reproduction of an original statement (don't quote me as your authority) (in one sense we are quoting all the time. To whistle Tin Pan Alley's latest inanity is to quote. . . . To transmit the tired gag of a television comic is to quote—Fadiman) Cite is likely to stress the idea of adducing, bringing forward, or mentioning for a particular reason, like substantiation or proof, with or without the idea of uttering another's words (the critic cited in the opening of this chapter—Leavis) (asked a senator if he could cite a single piece of legislation enacted solely for the benefit of the public—Armbrister) Repeat stresses the fact of a saying or writing over again of someone else's words often with no reference to the source (repeat a rumor) Typically it carries none of the implication of formal or dignified reasons for the procedure that attaches to quote and cite (unrealistic to go on repeating phrases about the connection of industry with personal independence—Dewey)

Ana *adduce, allege, advance quotidian *daily, diurnal, circadian

R

rabid *furious, frantic, frenzied, wild, frenetic, delirious Ana maddened, enraged, infuriated, incensed, angered (see ANGER vb): violent, compulsive (see corresponding nouns at FORCE): *insane, crazed, crazy, demented, deranged race 1 Race, nation, people, even though in technical use they are commonly differentiated, are often used popularly and interchangeably to designate one of a number of great divisions of mankind, each made up of an aggregate of persons who are thought of, or think of themselves, as comprising a distinct unit. In technical discriminations, all more or less controversial and often lending themselves to great popular misunderstanding or misuse, race is anthropological and ethnological in force, usually implying a distinct physical type with certain unchanging characteristics (as a particular color of skin or shape of skull) (the Caucasian race) (the Mongolian race) Sometimes, and more controversially, other presumed common factors are chosen, as place of origin (the Nordic race) or common root language (the Aryan race) In popular use race can apply to any more or less clearly defined group thought of as a unit usually because of a common or presumed common past (the Anglo-Saxon race) (the Celtic race) (the Hebrew race) Nation, primarily political in force, usually designates the citizenry as a whole of a sovereign state and implies a certain homogeneity because of common laws, institutions, customs, or loyalty (the British nation) (the French nation) (the house must have been built before this country was a nation—Tate) (what is a nation? A group of human beings recognizing a common history and a common culture, yearning for a common destiny, assuming common habits, and generally attached to a specific piece of the earth's surface—David Bernstein) Sometimes it is opposed to state (a state is accidental; it can be made or unmade; but a nation is something real which can be neither made nor destroyed—J. R. Green) and often not clearly distinguishable from race in comprising any large group crossing national boundaries and with something significantly in common (the children of the world are one nation; the very old, another—Jan Struther) (for the two nations that inhabit the earth, the rich and the poor—Sitwell) (the Gypsy nation) People, sometimes interchangeable with nation though stressing a cultural or social rather than a national unity, can apply to a body of persons, as a whole or as individuals, who show a consciousness of solidarity or common characteristics suggesting a common culture or common interests or ideals and a sense of kinship (the Mexican people—Prewett) (the British and American peoples—Sir Winston Churchill) (we, the people of the United States—U. S. Constitution) (we, the peoples of the United Nations—U. N. Charter) (a new government, which, for certain purposes, would make the people of the several states one people —Taney)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

2 *variety, subspecies, breed, cultivar, strain, clone, stock rack vb torment, torture, try, *afflict

Ana persecute, oppress (see WRONG vb): harry, harass, *worry, annoy racket *din, uproar, pandemonium, hullabaloo, babel, hubbub, clamor racking *excruciating, agonizing

Ana torturing, tormenting (see AFFLICT): *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite, violent: *fierce, ferocious, barbarous, savage, cruel, inhuman racy *pungent, piquant, poignant, spicy, snappy

Ana exciting, stimulating, quickening, provoking or provocative (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE): *spirited, mettlesome, fiery, gingery, peppery

Con *insipid, flat, jejune, banal, inane radiant brilliant, *bright, luminous, lustrous, effulgent, refulgent, beaming, lambent, lucent, incandescent

Ana *splendid, resplendent, glorious, sublime: sparkling, glittering, gleaming, flashing, scintillating (see FLASH vb)

radiate *spread, circulate, disseminate, diffuse, propagate Ana *distribute, dispense: disperse, *scatter, dissipate: diverge (see SWERVE) radical adj 1 *fundamental, basic, basal, underlying Ana cardinal, *essential, vital: *inherent, intrinsic, constitutional

Ant superficial

2 advanced, progressive, *liberal radius *range, gamut, reach, compass, sweep, scope, orbit, horizon, ken, purview rag vb *banter, chaff, kid, rib, josh, jolly rage n 1 *anger, ire, fury, indignation, wrath

Ana *acrimony, asperity, acerbity: frenzy, *mania, hysteria: agitation, upset, perturbation (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

2 *fashion, style, mode, vogue, craze, cry, dernier cri, fad

Ana *caprice, freak, conceit, vagary, crotchet, whim, fancy raid n *invasion, incursion, inroad

Ana *attack, assault, onslaught, onset rail vb revile, vituperate, rate, berate, upbraid, *scold, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig

Ana censure, denounce, condemn, reprobate, reprehend, *criticize: reprimand, rebuke, *reprove, reproach railery *badinage, persiflage

Ana bantering or banter, chaffing or chaff (see BANTER): sport, *fun, game, jest, play: satire, sarcasm, irony (see WIT)

raiment apparel, attire, *clothes, clothing, dress raise vb 1 *lift, elevate, hoist, heave, rear, boost

Ana *rise, ascend, mount, soar: *exalt, magnify, aggrandize: *advance, promote, forward, further

2 *build, construct, erect, frame, rear

Ant raze

rally vb *stir, rouse, arouse, awaken, waken

Ana excite, stimulate, quicken, *provoke: fire (see LIGHT vb): *renew, restore, refresh rally vb *ridicule, deride, mock, taunt, twit

Ana *scoff, jeer, gibe, flout: tease, tantalize, *worry, harass, harry ram vb *pack, crowd, cram, stuff, tamp

Ana *press, squeeze, jam: *compact, concentrate, consolidate: compress (see CONTRACT) ramble vb *wander, stray, roam, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander rampant *rank

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana luxuriant, lush, exuberant, *profuse, lavish: immoderate, *excessive, inordinate

Con *moderate, temperate: restrained, curbed, checked (see RESTRAIN) rampart *bulwark, breastwork, parapet, bastion rancid *malodorous, stinking, fetid, rank, noisome, putrid, fusty, musty

Ana decomposed, decayed, spoiled (see DECAY): *offensive, loathsome, repulsive rancor antagonism, animosity, animus, antipathy, *enmity, hostility

Ana hate, hatred, detestation, abhorrence, abomination (see under HATE vb): spite, *malice, malevolence, malignity, malignancy, spleen, grudge

random, haphazard, chance, chancy, casual, desultory, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky are comparable when they mean having a cause or a character that is determined by accident rather than by design or by method. What is random comes, goes, occurs, or is done or made without a fixed or clearly defined aim, purpose, or evidence of method or system or direction; the term implies an absence of guidance by a governing mind, eye, or objective (  <my choice was as random as blindman's buff—Burns> <the tail end of the conference was becoming frayed and random—Rand> <the clerks become tired and bored and start making random mistakes—Martin Gardner> What is haphazard is done, made, arranged, used, or said without concern or without sufficient concern for its fitness, its effectiveness, or its possible ill effects, and is more or less at the mercy of chance or whim or of natural or logical necessity ( <the disorder . . . the haphazard scattering of stray socks, shirts and collars, old shoes, and unpressed trousers—Wolfe> <not . . . a collection of haphazard schemes, but rather the orderly component parts of a connected and logical whole—Roosevelt> What is described as chance comes or happens to one or is done or made by one without prearrangement or preawareness or without preparation; the term is applicable not only to things but to persons with whom one comes into contact more or less by accident (  <found it increasingly difficult to welcome chance visitors with his usual affability—Graves> What is chancy involves uncertainty and risk because its results, actions, responses, or condition cannot be predicted; the term applies more often to situations and things than to persons (  <despite recent advances in geophysics, oil drilling is still a chancy business—Kane> What is casual (see also ACCIDENTAL) leaves or seems to leave things to chance, and works, acts, comes, or goes haphazardly or by chance, or without method or deliberation or indication of intent or purpose; the term often also suggests offhandedness ( <his treatment of his friends is casual> or lightness or spontaneity <she was constantly referring to dear friends . . . in a casual and familiar way—Ellis> or lack of definiteness in terms of intention <their policy was opportunist at home and casual abroad—Spectator> <the casual allusion, the chance reference to her—Henry Adams> What is desultory is not governed by method or system but jumps or skips erratically from one thing to another; the term may imply additionally such consequences as irregular or inconsistent performance or lack of continuity or plan or persistence <make reading have a purpose instead of being desultory—Russell> <its growth from 1900 to 1950 had been desultory—Michener> <a dragged-out ordeal of worry, aimless wandering, and desultory shopping—Wouk) What is hit-or-miss is so haphazard in its character or operation as to be or appear so wholly lacking in plan, aim, system, or care that one is indifferent as to how it turns out or as to what pattern or arrangement it makes (<hit-or-miss patchwork) (<a hit-or-miss policy was pursued by the Department of Justice—Ripley) (<his . . . training had given him a profound prejudice against inexact work, experimental work, hit-or-miss work—Forester) A person is happy-go-lucky who leaves everything to chance or who accepts with happiness or easy indifference whatever comes; a thing is happy-go-lucky that is governed by such a disposition (<a radical pragmatist on the other hand is a happy-go-lucky . . . sort of creature—James) (<a funny little happy-go-lucky native-managed railway—Kipling) Ana fortuitous, *accidental, casual: vagrant, vagabond, truant (see corresponding nouns at VAGABOND)

range n 1 *habitat, biotype, station

2 Range, gamut, reach, radius, compass, sweep, scope, orbit, horizon, ken, purview can denote the extent that lies within the powers of something to cover, grasp, control, or traverse. Range is the general term indicating the extent of one's perception or the extent of powers, capacities, or possibilities (<safe, well out of the range of the pursuers) (<a beautiful voice with a wide range between the high and the low tones—Ellis) (<a creative writer can do his best only with what lies within the range and character of his deepest sympathies—Cather) (<the whole range of Greek political life—Dickinson) Gamut suggests a graduated series running from one possible extreme to another (<types of light each occupying its particular place in that far-reaching roster or gamut which is called the spectrum—Darrow) Reach suggests an extent of perception, knowledge, ability, or activity attained to or experienced by or as if by stretching out (<moving step by step toward the widest generalizations within his reach—L. J. Henderson) (<out of reach of the first invading forces) (<nothing like sustained reasoning was beyond his reach—Stephen) Radius suggests a usually circular area (as of activity) implied by a known or determined center (<the town's history has been the history of coal; within a radius of five miles are 12 large mines—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Compass implies an extent, sometimes more limited than that suggested by range, of perception, knowledge, or activity; it is likely to connote a bounding circumference (<the powers expressly granted to the government . . . are to be contracted . . . into the narrowest possible compass—John Marshall) (<here we get in very small compass . . . as many different reminders of the continuity of the country . . . as you will find anywhere—Mais) Sweep suggests extent, often circular or arc-shaped, of motion or activity, which latter notion it more strongly suggests than the preceding terms (<the boldness and sweep of Webster's original scheme appear plainly—Malone) (<in the sweep of their universal robbery, they showed at least no discrimination between native and foreign victims—Osbert Sitwell) Scope is applicable to an area of activity, an area predetermined and limited, but an area of free choice within the set limits (<its scope was widened by the legislature to include other departments—Amer. Guide Series: Texas) (<the infinite scope for personal initiative in business—Shaw) Orbit suggests a range of activity or influence, often circumscribed and bounded, within which forces work toward accustoming, integrating, or absorbing (<communities . . . outside the orbit of modernity—Lippmann) (<the war as a gigantic cosmic drama, embracing every quarter of the globe and the whole orbit of man's life—Buchan) Horizon suggests an area, perhaps arc-shaped or semicircular, of knowledge, interest, perception; it may suggest the new or the potential or envisioned (<science has provided a new frontier with unlimited horizons—Compton) (<possibilities he hadn't known were upon its horizon—Mary Austin) Ken tends to apply to personal or individual range of perception or cognizance (<they seemed trivial at the time they came into his ken—White) (<the bulk of his known reading, until the great Italians swam into his ken, was French—Lowes) Purview may indicate either range of perception or knowledge or range of authority or competence (<the inclusion of dependent areas within the purview of Point Four—Rupert Emerson) (<the problem of ethnic variation falls very definitely within the purview of the student of the social life of man—Ashley Murtagu)

Ana extent, area (see SIZE): *field, domain, province, sphere, territory: spread, stretch, *expansive, amplitude

range vb 1 *line, line up, align, array

Ana arrange, *order, marshal: *assort, sort, classify: *incline, dispose, predispose, bias

2 *wander, rove, ramble, roam, stray, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander rank adj 1 Rank, rampant mean growing or increasing at an immoderate rate. Rank applies primarily to vegetation and implies vigorous, luxuriant, and often unchecked or excessive growth (<behold, seven ears of corn came up upon one stalk, rank and good—Gen 41:5) (<its garden was . . . rank, too thickly crowded with trees and bushes and plants—West) The term is common in metaphoric extension (<weed your better judgments of all opinion that grows rank in them—Shak.) Rampant is more widely applicable than rank; it implies rapid, often unrestrained or wild, spreading and is frequently applicable not only to what literally grows but to what extends or increases by contagion or diffusion (<it grieved him to see ignorance and impiety so rampant—Fuller d. 1661) (<that curiosity which is so rampant, as a rule, in an Indian village—Kipling) (<rumor ran rampant . . . the other day—Breit)

Ana *coarse, gross, vulgar: exuberant, *profuse, lavish, luxuriant

2 fusty, musty, rancid, *malodorous, stinking, fetid, noisome, putrid

Ana dank, humid (see WET): *offensive, loathsome, repulsive: decomposed, decayed, spoiled (see DECAY)

Ant balmy

3 *flagrant, glaring, gross

Ana conspicuous, outstanding, *noticeable: foul, filthy, squalid, nasty (see DIRTY): *outrageous, heinous, atrocious, monstrous rank n *line, row, file, echelon, tier rank vb *class, grade, rate, graduate, gradate

Ana *order, arrange: classify, *assort, sort: divide, *separate ransack search, hunt, rummage, *seek, scour, comb, ferret out

Ana investigate (see corresponding noun at INQUIRY): penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER): examine, inspect, *scrutinize ransom vb *rescue, deliver, redeem, reclaim, save

Ana *free, release, liberate, emancipate, manumit: *expiate, atone rant n *bombast, fustian, rodomontade, rhapsody

Ana inflatedness or inflation, turgidity, tumidity, flatulence (see corresponding adjectives at INFLATED)

rap n tap, knock, thump, thud (see under TAP vb)

Ana beating, pummeling, pounding (see BEAT vb)

rap vb *tap, knock, thump, thud

Ana smite, *strike: pummel, *beat rapacious ravening, ravenous, gluttonous, *voracious

Ana ferocious, *fierce; greedy, grasping, *covetous rapacity greed, *cupidity, avarice

Ana covetousness, avariciousness, greediness, graspingness (see corresponding adjectives at COVETOUS); exaction, demanding or demand, claiming or claim (see corresponding verbs at DEMAND) rapid adj *fast, swift, fleet, quick, speedy, hasty, expeditious

Ana brisk, nimble, *agile: hurried, quickened (see SPEED vb)

Ant deliberate: leisurely rapscallion *villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rascal, rogue, scamp, miscreant

Ana *vagabond, vagrant, tramp, hobo, bum rapt absorbed, engrossed, *intent

Ana ecstatic, transported, rapturous (see corresponding nouns at ECSTASY): enchanted, captivated, fascinated (see ATTRACT)

Con *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, uninterested, disinterested rapture *ecstasy, transport

Ana bliss, beatitude, blessedness, felicity, *happiness rare 1 tenuous, slight, *thin, slender, slim

2 delicate, dainty, exquisite, *choice, elegant, recherché Ana excelling or excellent, transcending or transcendent, surpassing (see corresponding verbs at EXCEED): superlative, *supreme, incomparable

3 scarce, *infrequent, uncommon, occasional, sporadic

Ana *exceptional: singular, unique, curious, *strange

Con *usual, customary, wonted, accustomed, habitual: *common, ordinary, familiar rarefy *thin, attenuate, extenuate, dilute

Ana diminish, reduce, lessen, *decrease: *expand, distend, inflate rascal *villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rogue, scamp, rapscallion, miscreant rash daring, daredevil, reckless, foolhardy, *adventurous, venturesome

Ana *precipitate, abrupt, impetuous, sudden, hasty: desperate, forlorn (see DESPONDENT)

Ant calculating —Con *cautious, circumspect, wary, chary rasp vb *scrape, scratch, grate, grind

Ana *abrade, excoriate, chafe, fret: *irritate, exasperate, aggravate: *annoy, vex, irk, bother rate vb berate, upbraid, *scold, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig, rail, revile, vituperate

Ana *reprove, reproach, rebuke, reprimand, admonish, chide: censure, condemn, denounce, reprehend, reprobate, *criticize rate vb 1 value, evaluate, appraise, *estimate, assess, assay

Ana *calculate, compute, reckon, estimate: *decide, determine, settle

2 *class, grade, rank, graduate, gradate

Ana *order, arrange, systematize, methodize: *assort, sort, classify ratify, confirm are comparable when they mean to make something legally valid or operative. Both terms presuppose previous action by a person or body with power of appointing, of legislating, or of framing such a document as a constitution, a treaty, or a contract, and imply reference therefore only to the act of the person or body endowed with the power to accept or to veto the appointment, bill, or document. The terms are occasionally interchanged without loss, but ratify usually carries a stronger implication of approval than confirm and is therefore used by preference when the acceptance of something (as a constitution, a treaty, or a course of action) that has been framed or proposed by a committee or a small body is put up to a larger body (as a society, legislature, or nation) for a vote that testifies to its approval (the men who had written and signed the Constitution became the leaders of the fight to ratify it—Smelser & Kirwin) Confirm, on the other hand, stresses the giving of formal or decisive assent as necessary to a thing's validity; it applies specifically to appointments made by an executive (as a president or governor) that according to the constitution of a nation or state require the consent of a body (as a senate, a legislature, or a council) before they are definitely settled and made legally valid (the other executive function of the Senate, that of confirming nominations submitted by the president—Bryce) (the Senate's powers to ratify treaties and confirm appointments of ambassadors—Diamond & Pflieger)

Ana *authorize, accredit, license, commission: sanction, *approve, endorse: validate, authenticate (see CONFIRM) ratiocination *inference

Ant intuition ratiocinative inferential (see under INFERENCE)

Ant intuitive

ration n Ration, allowance, dole, pittance denote the amount of food, supplies, or money allotted to an individual. Ration implies apportionment and, often, equal sharing. Specifically it is applied in military and naval use to the daily supply of provisions given each man, and in stockbreeding to the daily or periodical supply of food for each animal. In these uses it generally implies dietary variety and restricted amounts of each food. When used of a particular food or commodity (as meat or gasoline) it implies a shortage in the supply and a limitation on the amount allowed each person. Allowance, though often interchangeable with ration, is wider in its range of application. Both imply restriction in amount, but allowance stresses granting rather than sharing and is applicable to money and many other things besides food or commodities (a daily allowance of tobacco for the old pensioners) (a schoolboy's weekly allowance) (the court determines an heir's allowance during his minority) Dole tends to imply a grudging division and needy or sometimes grasping recipients (cold charity's unwelcome dole—Shelley) (no rich man's largess may suffice his soul, nor are the plundered scored by a dole—E. V. Cooke) In current, chiefly British, use dole is applied to a payment to unemployed workers, whether in the form of relief or insurance, by the national government. Pittance is likely to suggest, or even stress, scantiness or meagerness. It is applicable to a ration, an allowance, a dole, or a wage, the context usually making the reference clear (and gained, by spinning hemp, a pittance for herself—Wordsworth) (in England, such a dowry would be a pittance, while elsewhere it is a fortune—Byron)

Ana apportionment, portioning or portion (see corresponding verbs at APPORTION): sharing or share, participation, partaking (see corresponding verbs at SHARE)

ration vb *apportion, portion, prorate, parcel

Ana divide, *distribute, dispense, deal, dole: *share, partake, participate rational, reasonable may be applied to men, their acts, utterances, or policies in the senses of having or manifesting the power to reason, or of being in accordance with what reason dictates as right, wise, or sensible. Rational usually implies a latent or active power to make inferences from the facts and to draw from such inferences conclusions that enable one to understand the world about him and to relate such knowledge to the attainment of personal and common ends; often, in this use, rational is opposed to emotional or animal (we are rational; but we are animal too—Cowper) <the rational, the intelligent, the orderly processes of behavior—Mumford> (to cure this habit of mind, it is necessary . . . to replace fear by rational prevision of misfortune—Russell) When the term is applied to policies, projects, systems, or to something conceived or formulated, rational is preferred when justification on grounds that are satisfactory to the reason is specifically implied (the advantages of a rational orthography—Grandgent) <let's just entertain the notion as a rational hypothesis which may or may not be true—Mailer> Reasonable usually carries a much weaker implication than rational of the power to reason in general, or of guidance by conclusions drawn by the reasoning powers; typically it applies to actions, decisions, choices, or proposals that avoid obvious mistakes and that are practical, sensible, just, or fair <if that belief, whether right or wrong, may be held by a reasonable man, it seems to me that it may be enforced by law—Justice Holmes> <asking me some reasonable if openly ignorant questions about the nature of the bullfight—Mailer> <the formation of reasonable habits, of method, of punctuality . . . makes enormously for the happiness and convenience of every one about us—Benson>

Ant irrational: animal (of nature): demented (of state of mind): absurd (of actions, behavior) rationalize *explain, account, justify rattle faze, *embarrass, discomfit, disconcert, abash

Ana *confuse, muddle, addle: agitate, upset, perturb, disturb, fluster, flurry (see DISCOMPOSE): bewilder, distract, perplex (see PUZZLE vb)

raucous *loud, stentorian, earsplitting, hoarse, strident, stertorous

Ana *rough, harsh: gruff, brusque (see BLUFF)

ravage, devastate, waste, sack, pillage, despoil, spoliare are comparable when they mean to lay waste or bare by acts of violence (as plundering or destroying). Ravage implies violent, severe, and often cumulative destruction accomplished typically by depredations, invasions, raids, storms, or floods <four major disasters had ravaged the country—Leakey> <the psychic disease which ravaged Europe as mercilessly as the Spanish influenza—Day Lewis> <an Indian hunt was never a slaughter. They ravaged neither the rivers nor the forest—Cather> Devastate stresses the ruin and desolation which follow upon ravaging; it suggests eradication of buildings, of forests, and of crops by or as if by demolition or burning <behind him were the ruins of a city, shattered, devastated, crumbled piles of concrete and stone that glowed—Styron>  <had devastated the neighboring county to get timber—Ellis> Waste may be a close synonym for devastate but it tends to suggest a less complete destruction or desolation, produced more gradually or less violently <he fell suddenly on the Nervii with four legions, seized their cattle, wasted their country—Froude> <the broad gray summit is barren and desolate-looking . . . wasted by ages of gnawing storms—Muir> Sack basically suggests the acts of a victorious army entering a town that has been captured and stripping it of all its possessions of value by looting or destruction <we sacked the city after nine months' siege—Heywood> <the retreating Federals sacked and burned as they went—Amer. Guide Series: La.> The term may be extended to other than military activity but consistently retains the notion of stripping of valuables and usually of destruction  <men . . . who'll sack a railroad or lay siege to a corporation with the idea they're ordained to grab the other fellow's property—Everybody's Mag.>

Pillage stresses ruthless plundering such as is characteristic of an invading or victorious army, but it carries a weaker implication of devastation than sack <he pillaged many Spanish towns, and took rich prizes—Fuller d.1661> <the houses, first pillaged, were then fired—Prescott> In nonmilitary use pillage still implies ruthlessness but it carries a stronger implication of appropriation to oneself of something that belongs to another (as by fleecing, plagiarizing, or robbing) <humbugged by their doctors, pillaged by their tradesmen—Shaw> <libraries pillaged to supply grocers with paper—Schultz> Despoil, like sack, implies a stripping of valuables <the English buccaneers . . . fell upon their cities and despoiled them—Haskin> but it does not so often refer to a violent ransacking for booty; it more often suggests a pillaging, sometimes under a guise of legality, or a heedless or inadvertent destruction <magnificent stands of pine . . . despoiled by naval-stores operators and loggers—Amer. Guide Series: Fla.>  <the despoiling of the English monasteries in the 16th century> <despoiled of innocence, of faith, of bliss—Milton> Spoliate is chiefly a legal term; in its meaning it comes close to despoil and is particularly applicable to destruction inflicted on a neutral, a noncombatant, or a victim of piracy <from the ages, from the barbarians, the land has been burnt and spoliated—Richard Llewellyn> or, in more general use, when the gaining of spoils by means of exactions, graft, or various venal practices is suggested <the Tweed Ring was charged with spoliating the people of New York City>

Ana *destroy, demolish, raze: plunder, loot, *rob:

*ruin, wreck: invade, *trespass, encroach ravening rapacious, ravenous, gluttonous, *voracious

Ana greedy, acquisitive, grasping, *covetous ravenous ravening, rapacious, *voracious, gluttonous

Ana grasping, greedy, acquisitive, *covetous: *fierce, ferocious ravish *transport, enrapture, entrance

Ana rejoice, delight, regale (see PLEASE) raw crude, callow, green, *rude, rough, uncouth

Ana *elementary, elemental: *ignorant, untaught, untutored: *immature, unmaturred, unripe

Con practiced, exercised, drilled (see PRACTICE vb): seasoned, hardened (see HARDEN): *mature, matured, ripe, adult, grown-up rawboned gaunt, angular, *lean, lank, lanky, spare, scrawny, skinny ray, beam are comparable when they denote a shaft of light. This conception of light as a shaft is fixed in our language but is not always in keeping with modern scientific views of the nature of light. Ray suggests emanation from a center or point in the manner of the spokes of a wheel; its typical application is to one of the apparently thin lines of light that seem to extend from a radiant body (as the sun or a candle) or that are flashed from a reflective surface (as of steel or a mirror glittering in the sun) <the more numerous the facets of a diamond the more numerous the rays of light it reflects> Beam implies not a line but a long bar; it suggests therefore a bar made up of a bundle of rays of light; thus, a beam of white light is split by a prism into rays of light of the various colors of the spectrum <the beam of an automobile headlight>  <where a sunbeam enters, every particle of dust becomes visible—Ruskin> <how far that little candle throws his beams!—Shak.> A small beam is sometimes called a ray

raze demolish, *destroy

Ana efface, obliterate (see ERASE): eradicate, extirpate (see EXTERMINATE): *ruin, wreck: *abolish, extinguish, annihilate

reach vb Reach, gain, compass, achieve, attain can mean to arrive at a point by effort or work. Reach is the most general term, being capable of reference to whatever can be arrived at by exertion of any degree and applicable to such diverse matters as a point in space, in time, or in a development, or as a destination, a goal, or a position of eminence (they reached the city that night) (after a long discussion they reached an understanding) In extended use reach may be predicated even of inanimate things (the hour hand has reached two) (the depression has reached bottom) Gain usually implies a struggle to reach a contemplated or desired destination or goal (gained the confidence of the mountain people by his . . . sympathetic approach—Persons) (I had gained the frontier and slept safe that night—Browning) Compass implies efforts to get around difficulties or to transcend limitations; it often connotes skill or craft in management (a writer who is attempting a higher strain of elevation or pathos than his powers can compass—Montague) (if you can compass it, do cure the younger girls of running after the officers—Austen) Achieve can stress the skill or the endurance as well as the efforts involved in reaching an end (some are born great, some achieve greatness—Shak.) (no government or private organization could give health; people had to achieve it—Heiser) Often it implies accomplishment of something that is in itself a feat or triumph (a complete moral unity such as England achieved—Belloc) Attain connotes more strongly than any of the others the spur of aspiration or ambition (his constant efforts to attain his ends) It is therefore especially referable to ends beyond the vision, the scope, or the powers of most men (this indispensable condition of the safety and civilization of the world is, indeed, very difficult to attain—Hobson) (a fine balance of all the forces of the human spirit such as but once or twice has been attained in the world's history—Binyon)

Ana effect, fulfill, execute, accomplish, *perform: *get, obtain, procure, secure reach n *range, gamut, radius, compass, sweep, scope, orbit, horizon, ken, purview

Ana extent, area, magnitude (see SIZE): spread, stretch, *expand: capacity, capability, *ability react operate, work, function, *act, behave readiness, ease, facility, dexterity are comparable when they mean the power of doing something without evidence of effort, or the quality of work that manifests such effortlessness. Readiness lays stress on the quickness or promptitude with which something is done (his readiness in repartee) (a happy readiness of conversation—Austen) Ease, which is probably more often used of the quality than of the power, suggests not only a lack of all signs of strain or care but an absence of signs of hesitation or uncertainty, with resulting evenness in performance and, especially in spoken or written discourse, fluency, directness, grace, and simplicity in expression (true ease in writing comes from art, not chance—Pope) (ease and strength, effort and weakness, go together—Shaw) (Constance was surprised at the ease which he displayed in the conduct of practical affairs—Bennett) Facility is sometimes used in a derogatory sense nearly equivalent to shallowness (his facility in language has been fatal only too often to his logic and philosophy—J. C. Van Dyke) More frequently this feeling is lost and facility may be interchangeable with ease, though it tends more often than ease to express the power, proceeding from practice and use, of performing an act or dispatching a task with lightness and address (by the use of a few English words and the dramatic facility to express complex thoughts in pantomime, she was quite capable of carrying on extended conversations—Mailer) (I loathed algebra at first, although afterwards I had some facility in it—Russell) Dexterity implies both readiness and facility, but it carries a stronger implication than any of the preceding words of previous training or practice and of proficiency or skill (his amazing dexterity in argument) (absorbed in his own dexterity and in the proposition of trying to deceive a fish with a bird's feather and a bit of hair—Cheever)

Ana quickness, promptness, aptness (see corresponding adjectives at QUICK): alacrity, *celerity, legerity: fluency, eloquence, volubility (see corresponding adjectives at VOCAL)

Con *effort, exertion, pains, trouble ready adj *quick, prompt, apt

Ana expert, adept, skilled, skillful, *proficient, masterly: *active, live, dynamic ready vb *prepare, fit, qualify, condition

real, actual, true, and their derivative nouns reality, actuality, truth are often interchangeable in general, as distinct from technical philosophical or critical, language without marked loss when they mean correspondent to or what is correspondent to all the facts known and knowable; thus, one may say the real, or the actual, or the true state of affairs in the foregoing sense without evident and inherent difference in meaning. The terms are also often used interchangeably, but with distinct loss in clearness and precision, when their common implication is merely that of having or constituting substantial objective existence. Real, in this more inclusive sense, implies genuineness, or correspondence between what the thing appears or pretends to be and what it is (this is a real diamond) (the British sovereign has little real power) (he has a real interest in art) (to know the difference between real and sham enjoyment—Shaw) Actual emphasizes occurrence or manifest existence often in contrast with possible or theoretical or expected occurrence or existence; it is applied to what has emerged into the sphere of action or fact and is inapplicable to abstractions (actual events) (give me an actual instance of the workings of this law) (the actual tests of the new airplane are yet to be made) (sculpture and painting are not . . . capable of actual movement, but they suggest movement—Binyon) (I'm no judge of the feelings of actual or prospective parents—Rose Macaulay) (the possible way—I am far from asserting it was the actual way—in which our legendary Socrates arose—Ellis) True implies conformity either to what is real or to what is actual. If the former is intended, the term presupposes a standard, a pattern, a model, a technical definition, or a type by which what is true is determined (a true Christian) (the ladybug is not a true bug, but a beetle) (the whale is not a true fish, but a mammal) (in the seventh and eighth centuries there were no true kings of England—Malone) (the true refinement . . . that in art . . . comes only from strength—Wilde) When true stresses conformity to what is actual, it presupposes the test of correspondence to what exists in nature or to all the facts known and knowable (true sidereal time) (run true to type) (a true story) (the true version of a story) (fiction is truer than history, because it goes beyond the evidence—Forster)

Ana being, existing or existent, subsisting or subsistent (see corresponding verbs at BE): *certain, necessary, inevitable

Ant unreal: apparent (sense 2): imaginary realize I Realize, actualize, embody, incarnate, material- ize, externalize, objectify, hypostatize, reify are the chief words in English meaning to give concrete or objective existence to something that has existed as an abstraction or a conception or a possibility. They are seldom freely interchangeable, because their implications vary widely and their applications are largely determined by idiom. Realize commonly implies emergence into the sphere of actual things (as of something that has been a dream, an ideal, a hope, or a plan) (the project was never realized owing to a lack of funds) (he did not realize his ambition until he was past middle life) The implication of attainment, of achievement, or of fulfillment is at times so strong in realize as to obscure or subordinate this fundamental idea of coming into existence (to achieve a beautiful relation to another human being is to realize a part of perfection—Binyon) (however evolution . . . is effected, a divine purpose is being realized in it—Inge) Actualize, though sometimes used interchangeably with realize, is found chiefly in philosophical or technical writings with the implication of emergence (as of something that has existed only in potentiality) either into fullness or perfection of existence (powers of the mind never actualized) or into act or action (potential energy becomes kinetic energy when it is actualized by motion) Embody and incarnate sometimes imply investment with an outward or visible form of something abstract (as a principle, an idea, a trait, or a quality) (the poet cannot embody his conceptions so vividly and completely as the painter—Binyon) (Dickens incarnated hypocrisy in his Uriah Heep) Materialize stresses emergence into the sphere of what is perceptible or tangible and usually presupposes prior vagueness, haziness, or elusiveness (I had the glimmering of an idea, and endeavored to materialize it in words—Hawthorne) Externalize and objectify emphasize the projection of what is subjective (as a thought, an emotion, or a desire) so that it takes form apart from the mind. Externalize often suggests a conscious or unconscious urge for expression or relief (madness has produced . . . valuable art . . . ; the artist attempts to rid himself of his abnormality . . . by externalizing it into the work of art—Day Lewis) Objectify is more likely to suggest a conscious attempt to overcome the limitations of subjectivity and sometimes to contemplate one's own mental processes (art has always attempted to express, to objectify the dynamic processes of our inner life—Robert Humphrey) Hypostatize and reify occur chiefly in philosophical and technical writing. They imply conversion by the mind of something that is a concept or abstraction into a thing that has real and objective even if not tangible existence (our ingrained habit of hypostatizing impressions, of seeing things and not sense-data—Langer) (it is people, real flesh and blood human beings—not a reified entity called "culture"—who do things—L. A. White)

Ana effect, fulfill, execute, accomplish, achieve, *perform

2 *think, conceive, imagine, fancy, envisage, envision Ana *understand, comprehend, appreciate reap, glean, gather, garner, harvest are comparable when they mean to do the work or a given part of the work of collecting ripened crops. Reap applies to the cutting down and usually collecting of ripened grain; in extension, it may suggest a return or requital (reap early wheat for market) (the lucky artisan producing something they could use would reap a fortune—Billington) Glean basically applies to the stripping of a field or vine that has already been gone over once but may be extended to any picking up of valuable bits from here and there and especially to a gathering of what has been left or missed (glean in the fields after the reapers have gone) (assembled a multitude of facts gleaned from many and varied sources—Amer. Guide Series: Wash.) (she had gleaned all the information the library contained—Robertson Davies) (data gleaned from the questionnaire—Terry) Gather, the most general of these terms, applies to the collecting or bringing together of the produce of the farm, plantation, or garden; in extension, it can apply to any similar amassing or accumulating (the fruit is gathered in late July and August—Amer. Guide Series: Tenn.) (workers who gathered rubber—P. E. James) (she had traveled by safari to gather her material—Current Biog.) (the multitude of pitfalls in the gathering, writing, and processing of the news—Mott) (mail is gathered and distributed by electrically operated conveyors—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.) Garner implies the storing of produce (as grain); in extension, it can apply to a laying away of a store (more harvest than one man can garner—Buck) (a skilled picker may garner 100 quarts—Amer. Guide Series: Ark.) (wisdom garnered through the years—Hambly) (these short pieces garnered from a magazine catering to the masculine taste—Lisle Bell) Harvest, the general term, may imply any or all of these processes or be extended in meaning to apply to any gathering together or husbanding (the harvesting of cranberries—Garside) (the harvesting of shellfish—Amer. Guide Series: Conn.) (busy harvesting your crop of furs—Nat'l Fur News) (he had sown pain and harvested regret—Samuel)

Ana collect, assemble (see GATHER) rear vb 1 *build, construct, erect, frame, raise

2 raise, *lift, elevate, hoist, heave, boost

Ana *rise, ascend, mount, soar: *nurture, nurture, foster: breed, propagate (see GENERATE) rear adj *posterior, after, back, hind, hinder

Ant front

reason n 1 Reason, ground, argument, proof are comparable when they mean a point or series of points offered or capable of being offered in support of something questioned or disputed. Reason usually implies the need of justification, either to oneself or another, of some practice, action, opinion, or belief; it is usually personal in its reference; thus, a father asks the reason for his son's disobedience; a person gives the reasons for his preference. Reason is often applied to a motive, consideration, or inducement which one offers in explanation or defense (so convenient it is to be a "reasonable creature," since it enables one to find or make a reason for everything one has in mind to do—Franklin) Ground is often used in place of reason because it too implies the intent to justify or defend. When, however, the emphasis is on evidence, data, facts, or logical reasoning rather than on motives or considerations, ground is the acceptable word; thus, the reasons for a belief may explain why it is held, but the grounds for it give evidence of the validity of that belief; a scientist presents the grounds for his conclusion. Ground also suggests more solid support in fact and therefore greater cogency and objectivity than reason; thus, one may speak of frivolous or of trumped-up reasons but not grounds (the future as we see it offers no grounds for easy optimism—Current Biog.) (grounds for divorce) Argument stresses the intent to convince another or to bring him into agreement with one's view or position. It can imply the use of evidence and reasoning in the making and stating of a point in support of one's contention (the debaters came well provided with arguments) (a party organ, providing usable facts and arguments, in terse paragraphs—Boatfield) but often it suggests reasoning without reference to fact (one of the commonest of all evasions; the argument which is not an argument but an appeal to the emotions—Woolf) Proof in much of its use (see proof under PROVE) emphasizes not an intent but an effect: that of conclusive demonstration; therefore, a proof is a piece of evidence (as a fact or a document) or of testimony (as of a witness or expert) or an argument that evokes a feeling of certainty in those who are to be convinced (these arguments [for the existence of God] are sometimes called proofs, though they are not demonstrations; they are, however, closely inwoven with the texture of rational experience—Inge) (Euclid, the author of the Elements, who gave irrefutable proofs of the looser demonstrations of his predecessors—Farrington) Ana explanation, justification, rationalization (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN)

2 *cause, determinant, antecedent, occasion

Ana *motive, incentive, inducement, impulse: basis, foundation, ground (see BASE n)

3 Reason, understanding, intuition can all denote that power of the intellect by which man arrives at truth or knowledge. Reason centers attention on the faculty for order, sense, and rationality in thought, inference, and conclusion about perceptions (the maintenance of reason—the establishment of criteria, by which ideas are tested empirically and in logic—Dorothy Thompson) (reason is logic; its principle is consistency; it requires that conclusions shall contain nothing not already given in their premises—Kallen) Understanding may sometimes widen the scope of reason to include both most thought processes leading to comprehension and also the resultant state of knowledge (understanding is the entire power of perceiving and conceiving, exclusive of the sensibility; the power of dealing with the impressions of sense, and composing them into wholes—Coleridge) (philosophy is said to begin in wonder and end in understanding—Dewey) Intuition (see under intuitive at INSTINCTIVE) stresses quick knowledge or comprehension without orderly reason, thought, or cogitation (all this . . . I saw, not discursively, or by effort, or by succession, but by one flash of horrid simultaneous intuition—De Quincey) (do we not really trust these faint lights of intuition, because they are lights, more than reason, which is often too slow a councillor—Æ) Used in connection with 19th century literary and philosophic notions, understanding often suggests the cold analytical order usually associated with reason and reason in turn suggests the spontaneity of intuition (the understanding was the faculty that observed, inferred, argued, drew conclusions . . . the cold, external, practical notion of life. . . . The reason was the faculty of intuition, warm, perceptive, immediate, that represented the mind of young New England—Brooks)

Ana *mind, intellect, intelligence, brain: ratiocination, *inference reason vb reflect, *think, deliberate, speculate, cogitate

Ana *infer, deduce, conclude, judge, gather reasonable *rational

Ana sensible, sane, prudent, judicious, *wise: *fair, equitable, just Ant unreasonable rebate *deduction, abatement, discount rebel n Rebel, insurgent, iconoclast are comparable when they denote one who rises up against constituted authority or the established order. Rebel carries the strongest implication of a refusal to obey or to accept dictation and of actual, often armed, resistance to what one opposes; the term does not necessarily imply antagonism to a government but is comprehensive enough to cover one who defies a generally accepted authority (as of a law, a tradition, or a custom) (all their friends were protesters and rebels and seceders—H. G. Wells) (one is a rebel or one conforms, one is a frontiersman in the Wild West of American night life, or else a Square cell, trapped in the totalitarian tissues of American society—Mailer) Insurgent applies chiefly to a rebel who rises in revolt but who is not regarded by the authorities as having the status of an enemy or belligerent; thus, rebels in a colony or dependency of an empire may, from the imperial point of view, be designated as insurgents, even though they call themselves rebels (at the beginning of the war Lincoln held the idea that the Southerners were insurgents and that those captured in arms should be punished as traitors—Muzzev) In a more extended use insurgent applies to a rebel (as in a political party, a church, or a group of artists or writers) who rises in revolt not so much in an attempt to destroy the organization or institution or its laws or conventions as in the hope of effecting changes or reforms believed to be necessary (the progressives, who favored giving the voters more control over the nation's political and economic life, were called insurgents—Canfield & Wilder) (the free verse movement was led by a group of insurgents) Iconoclast, historically applicable to one of a party of insurgents in the Eastern Church in the 8th and 9th centuries who opposed the use of images, is applied in an extended sense to a person who, especially in the capacity of a reformer, violently attacks an established belief, custom, tradition, or institution (I have become a reformer, and, like all reformers, an iconoclast. . . . I shatter creeds and demolish idols—Shaw) (the blundering crudity of the tough-minded iconoclast—Garvin)

Ana *opponent, antagonist, adversary: assailant, attacker (see corresponding verbs at ATTACK)

rebellion, revolution, uprising, revolt, insurrection, mutiny, putsch, coup can all denote a war or an armed outbreak against a government or against powers in authority. Rebellion implies open, organized, and formidable armed resistance to constituted authority or to the government in power; the term is usually applied after the event to an instance of such resistance as has failed to overthrow the powers that be (Jack Straw's Rebellion) (the Jacobite rebellions of 1715 and 1745) Revolution applies to a rebellion that has been successful to the extent that the old government is overthrown and a new one substituted (the French Revolution) (the American Revolution) The term, however, does not invariably imply a war or a warlike outbreak (effected a bloodless revolution by a coup d'état) The words are often applied to the same event according to the point of view of the user or sometimes according to the time in which it is used; thus, the American Civil War of 1861-1865 was called the "War of the Rebellion" by Northerners, not only during its progress but for a long time after; a revolution is often called a rebellion by the overthrown government or its supporters until bitterness has faded (the English Civil War (1642-1652) was, after the Restoration (1660), and still sometimes is, called the Great Rebellion) Uprising is a somewhat general term applicable to an act of violence that indicates a popular desire to defy or overthrow the government; it is often used in reference to a small and ineffective movement that flares up suddenly and violently among an insurgent class or section of the people but it is applicable also to the first signs of a general or widespread rebellion (there was fear of uprisings in different parts of the country) (whenever the whole nation should join together in one sudden and vigorous uprising—Freeman) Revolt and insurrection apply to an armed uprising which does not attain the extent of a rebellion, either because it is quickly put down or is immediately effective. Revolt, however, carries a stronger suggestion of a refusal to accept conditions or continue in allegiance than does insurrection, which often suggests such a seditious act as an attempt to seize the governing power or to gain control for one's party (the Reformation . . . was no sudden revolt, but the culmination of a long agitation for national independence in religious matters—Inge) (Baltazar's tyranny grew little by little, and the Acoma people were sometimes at the point of revolt—Cather) (insurrections of base people are more furious in their beginnings—Bacon) (excess of obedience is . . . as bad as insurrection—Meredith) Mutiny applies chiefly to an insurrection against military or especially maritime or naval authority (the ship's master feared mutiny long before it occurred) (the mutiny of a regiment made the situation desperate for the invaders) Putsch may apply to a small popular uprising or demonstration, or a planned attempt to seize power (the Munich beer hall Putsch of Hitler's supporters in 1923) Coup, in full coup d'état, applies to a sudden overthrowing of a government by other than normal constitutional means; typically it implies careful planning on the part of a comparatively small opposition that usually has such backing from the military forces as insures the success of its effort, often without the need for bloodshed (General Naguib's coup, peaceful only because of the lack of resistance on the part of the faltering king . . . well illustrates the old definition of a dictator—one who receives a bankrupt country—Atyeo) (it's not in our usual tradition of coups d'état at all. Normally, nobody is killed in a coup d'état. A certain amount of firing, yes, but over the heads of the crowds, just to show people they are serious—Rama Rau) (Czechoslovakia was absorbed by a coup under the direct threat of nearby Russian military force—Isaacs)

Ana *sedition, treason: resistance, opposition, combating, withstanding (see corresponding verbs at RESIST)

rebellious *insubordinate, mutinous, seditious, factious, contumacious

Ana recalcitrant, refractory, intractable, *unruly, ungovernable: estranged, alienated, disaffected (see ESTRANGE)

Ant acquiescent, resigned: submissive rebound, reverberate, recoil, resile, repercuss are comparable when they mean to spring back to an original position or shape. Rebound basically implies a springing back after a collision or impact (the ball readily rebounds when thrown against a wall) In extended use the term implies a springing back from one extreme to another or from an abnormal condition to one that is normal (literature is rebouncing again from the scientific-classical pole to the poetic-romantic one—Edmund Wilson) Reverberate is used chiefly of rays or waves, most typically of sound waves, which are forced back in the manner of an echo or series of echoes or are repelled or reflected from side to side or from one surface to another (the evening gun thundered from the fortress, and was reverberated from the heights—Hawthorne) but it may be extended to other matters giving a similar effect (presents even simple subjects with a perceptiveness that makes them reverberate in the mind—Babette Deutsch) Recoil (see also RECOIL 1) often implies a springing back after being stretched, strained, or depressed (a spring recoiling after pressure has been removed) or a sudden or violent backward movement (a gun recoils when it is fired) Sometimes it carries the suggestion of a return to the source or point of origin in the manner of a boomerang (that evidence missed the mark at which it was aimed, and recoiled on him from whom it proceeded—Macaulay) But recoil often implies a springing back in the sense of being forced back by or as if by a blow; it then may connote a retreat, a receding, or a reeling (ten paces huge he back recoiled—Milton) (as deep recoiling surges foam below—Burns) (commentators recoiled from the spectacle as if it were too loathsome for remark—S. L. A. Marshall) Resile, much less common than its corresponding adjective resilient, like recoil may imply a springing back (as of an elastic body) into the original state or position, but in practice it is largely restricted to an essentially legal use in which it implies a withdrawing from something to which one has previously committed oneself (the suggestion which he had brought . . . meant that India was seeking to resile from its solemn international commitments—Pakistan Affairs) Repercuss, also much less common than its corresponding noun repercussion and adjective repercussive, is a close synonym of reverberate and rebound, for it implies the return of something moving ahead with great force or, in extended use, set in motion or operation, back to or toward the starting point. However it distinctively suggests repulsion upon impact and a return with undiminished force, or sometimes even greater force, and often, when persons are involved, with a marked effect upon the ones who initiated the action (the waves dashed against the rocks and repercussed with a great roar) (sickness produces an abnormally sensitive emotional state . . . and in many cases the emotional state repercusses . . . on the organic disease—Peabody)

Ana bound, *skip, ricochet rebuild *mend, repair, patch

Ana *renew, restore, renovate, refresh rebuke *reprove, reprimand, admonish, reproach, chide

Ana rate, upbraid, *scold, berate: *criticize, reprehend, reprobate rebut *disprove, refute, confute, controvert recalcitrant refractory, intractable, headstrong, willful, *unruly, ungovernable

Ana rebellious, *insubordinate, factious, contumacious: *obstinate, stubborn: resisting, opposing, withstanding (see RESIST)

Ant amenable (sense 2) recall vb 1 recollect, *remember, remind, reminisce, bethink, mind

Ana evoke, elicit, extract, *educate: *stir, rouse, arouse, waken, awaken

2 *revoke, reverse, repeal, rescind

Ana *annul, abrogate, void: retract, *abjure, recant recant retract, *abjure, renounce, forswear

Ana withdraw, remove recede, retreat, retrograde, retract, back can all mean to move or seem to move in a direction that is exactly the opposite of ahead or forward. Recede stresses marked and usually gradually increasing distance from a given point, line, or position, but it implies movement on the part of what recedes only when a fixed point of view is indicated or understood (the tide is receding) (until the flood waters recede) (while I stood gazing, both the children gradually grew fainter to my view, receding, and still receding—Lamb) When the point of view is that of a traveler or the distance is in time rather than in space, the receding thing is stationary and the point of view changes. In such a case either a gradual disappearance (as from view or consciousness) or a change in perspective is implied (he stood at the ship's stern watching the shore recede from view) (past events as they recede appear in truer proportions—L. P. Smith) (the possibility of certain ultimate solutions has rather receded than approached as the years went by—Krutch) When used of persons and their ideas or attitudes, recede suggests departure from a fixed idea, or determined attitude, or a definite stand (he was far too self-willed to recede from a position, especially as it would involve humiliation—Hardy) Retreat implies withdrawal from a point or position reached, usually because of uncertainty, or of imminent defeat or danger, or in obedience to orders (after the failure of the first attack, the army retreated) (he had retreated inside himself, as into a dense thicket—Hervey) (they frequently approached this theme, and always retreated from it—Meredith) Retrograde implies movement contrary to what is expected, normal, or natural; thus, a planet retrogrades when it moves or seems to move from east to west, or in a direction opposite to that of the usual planetary course. The verb is also used to imply the reverse of progress in the course of development (as of an institution, a species, or an individual) (some races have been stationary, or even have retrograded—Lubbock) (in his Latin and Greek he was retrograding—Meredith) (we have no control over the process by which the arts or sciences advance or retrograde—Whitehead) Occasionally it is used to imply a going backward in time or an inversion of the chronological order (our narrative retrogrades to a period shortly previous to the incidents last mentioned—Scott) Retract suggests a drawing backward or inward from a forward or exposed position, often in reference to those parts of an organism which can be thrust forward or drawn backward (a cat retracting its claws) (throwing out and retracting their left fists like pawing horses—Shaw) Back applies to any retrograde motion and is often qualified by an adverb (as up, out, or down) (back an automobile) (the water in a drain backs up when a pipe cannot carry it off) (back out of a room) (a wind backs when it shifts to a counterclockwise direction) Often when followed by out or down it implies a receding from a stand or attitude, or a retreating from a promise or an engagement (he will never back down once his word is given) (he is trying to back out now that he sees how much work the project entails) (the opposition forced the governor to back down and to recall his recommendations) Ana withdraw, retire, depart (see GO): *rebound, recoil Ant proceed: advance (sense 2)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

receipt n 1 *reception

2 Receipt, recipe, prescription are comparable when they mean a formula or set of directions for the compounding of ingredients especially in cookery and medicine. Receipt is often employed as a designation of a formula for making a homemade medicine (she has an excellent receipt for a cough syrup) Though also often used in reference to cookery formulas, the term in this sense is commonly felt as old-fashioned or dialectal and is being gradually displaced by recipe. Recipe is perhaps the most general of these terms since it can apply not only to a formula or set of instructions for making or doing something but to a method or procedure for attaining some end (recipes are used in making steel, and each ingredient is measured to a fraction of one percent—Hot-Metal Magic) (reading good books . . . is the recipe for those who would learn to read—Adler) In application to medicinal formulas recipe may come close to receipt or it may suggest an old-fashioned empirical remedy as distinct from a modern pharmaceutical product (some of his recipes are printed in pharmacopoeias of today—Norman Douglas) In cookery recipe is the usual and standard English term for a set of directions for preparing a made dish (a family recipe for plum pudding) The usual term for a physician's direction to a pharmacist for the compounding or dispensing of a medicine is prescription. That term is also applied to a medicine which is compounded or dispensed according to such a direction (his doctor gave him three prescriptions) (he is still taking the prescription for bronchitis) receive, accept, admit, take can all mean to permit to come into one's possession, presence, group, mind, or substance. They are seldom interchangeable except within a narrow range and, even then, rarely without modification of the thought expressed. Receive very often implies nothing more than what has been stated in the common definition; it may be predicated of persons or of things (he did not receive the news gladly) (the barrel receives excess rain water) In general receive implies passiveness in the receiver even when the subject is a person and his response is indicated in the context (an infant merely receives impressions, for he does not understand them) (soft wax receives the impression of anything that touches it) Only when it implies welcoming or recognition does receive connote activity in the receiver (after some delay, the king received the ambassador) (the social leaders refused to receive the newcomers) (the indifference and hostility with which his earlier work was received—Day Lewis) Accept adds to receive an implication of some measure of mental consent, even of approval; thus, a person may be received but not necessarily accepted in society; an idea may be received but not accepted by the mind; one may receive without necessarily accepting an apology. Frequently accept suggests tacit acquiescence rather than active assent or approval. Sometimes it connotes an uncritical attitude (the man who . . . accepted simply, as a matter of course, the tradition—Dickinson) Sometimes it implies a surrender to the inevitable (it is the business of the sensitive artist in life to accept his own nature as it is, not to try to force it into another shape—Huxley) Admit is synonymous with receive only when the agent (the one that lets in) is the one that receives rather than introduces (the king admitted the ambassador to his presence) (the heart admits fluid through these apertures) Admit, in this restricted sense, is distinguishable from receive by slight syntactical differences but chiefly by its strong implications of permission, allowance, or sufferance; thus, a judge admits evidence only after its admissibility has been questioned and he has allowed its entrance. The situation remains the same when the subject is impersonal (the archway was wide enough to admit ten men abreast) Admit, in contrast with accept, often adds the implication of concession; thus, one who admits the truth of a contention accepts it more or less unwillingly; one can accept a proposition without question, but one admits it only after he has questioned it. Take is a synonym of receive only when it suggests no reaching out on one's own part or of one's own initiative to get hold of something (see also TAKE 1) or when it suggests an offering, presenting, conferring, or inflicting by another; it then implies merely a letting something be put into one's hands, mind, possession, or control (this gift was meant for you: take it or leave it as you please) (he takes whatever fortune sends him) (the British showed that they can take the German bombing) (what was it that made men follow Oliver Cromwell and take at his hands that which they would not receive from any of his contemporaries?—Crothers) (you don't have to take anything from him, or to stand his bad manners—Cather) Ana *enter, penetrate: seize, *take, grasp recent *modern, late

Ana fresh, *new, new-fashioned reception, receipt both mean a receiving, but they are not often interchangeable, their use being dependent upon accepted idiom. Reception is the more appropriate term when what is received is a person, especially a caller, a visitor, or a guest; the term may then apply to the act, fashion, or manner of receiving (she gave all her friends a warm reception) or the manner of being received (much pleased with the reception she had—Pepys) or a ceremonious receiving or entertaining (invite one's circle of friends to a reception) (hold a reception for the out-of-town delegates and their wives) or an admission or entrance (as into a place, a society, or a company) (the house is ready for the reception of its new tenants) (call attention to the reception of several new members into the society) When what is received is a thing, reception is employed when to the idea of receiving is added the idea of admitting into or as if into a space or enclosure (the tower is large enough for the reception of several bells) or of apprehension (as by a sense, the senses, or the mind) (their minds are not ready for the reception of such ideas) (the proposal met a favorable reception) (television reception was poor during the storm) Receipt (see also RECEIPT 2) stresses the simple fact of receiving and is the customary term when what is received is a thing (as money, goods, or a letter) given or sent by another and delivered into one's custody or possession (acknowledge the receipt of goods ordered) (I am awaiting the receipt of a letter before making my decision) Receipt is also applied to a signed paper or document testifying to the receiving of money due or of goods delivered.

recess n *pause, respite, lull, intermission

Ana withdrawal, retirement (see corresponding verbs at GO): *break, interruption, interval, gap: relaxation, leisure, *rest

recherché elegant, *choice, exquisite, delicate, dainty, rare Ana fresh, original, *new, novel: *select, exclusive, picked

Ant banal

recipe *receipt, prescription reciprocal 1 Reciprocal, mutual, common mean shared, experienced, or shown by each of the persons or things concerned. Reciprocal has for its distinctive implication the return in due measure by each of two sides of whatever is offered, given, or manifested by the other. Usually therefore it implies not only a quid pro quo but an equivalence in value, though not necessarily in kind, on each side (as of love, hate, understanding, courtesies, concessions, or duties) (the connection between law and political theory has not been one-sided; it has been completely reciprocal—Cairns) (the reciprocal feelings of man and woman towards each other—T. S. Eliot) Mutual is often used in place of reciprocal when the idea of return or interchange is suggested and that of sharing equally or jointly is stressed (mutual affection) (mutual enthusiasm) But mutual is applicable, as reciprocal is not, to two persons who entertain reciprocal feelings toward each other (mutual friends) (mutual foes) When there is little or no suggestion of a reciprocal relation (as between thoughts or feelings) and the emphasis is upon the fact that the two persons or things involved entertain the same feelings towards each other, perform the same actions, or suffer the same results, mutual is more appropriate than reciprocal (their eyes held and the air was eloquent of mutual suspicion—Hervey) (even Shelley sometimes mingles poetry and propaganda to their mutual disaster—Lowes) Both reciprocal and mutual are sometimes used when more than two persons, classes, or things are involved (mutual recriminations, long suppressed, broke out between the Fuehrer's captains—Shirer) but when there is no implication of reciprocity, common is the more usual term; thus, one says "we (two, three, or more persons) are mutual friends," meaning that all are friends each of the other but "they have common friends," meaning that each has friends who also are friends of the others; the members of a group may have a common purpose. Common (see also COMMON 3; UNIVERSAL 2) implies joint participation or possession by two or more persons, and differs from mutual in not being restricted as to the number involved and in not carrying a suggestion of a reciprocal relation or of an equivalence of feeling, performance, or effort (make common cause against an enemy) (their common fund of intellectual interests and curiosities made their talks exhilarating—Wharton) (death and other incidents of our common fate—Cohen)

Ana shared, participated, partaken (see SHARE): interchanged, exchanged (see EXCHANGE): balancing, compensating, counterpoising (see COMPENSATE)

2 Reciprocal, corresponding, correlative, complementary, complemental, convertible are not close synonyms, although in some instances they are interchangeable, and all are comparable in meaning like, equivalent, or similarly related to each other (as in kind, quality, or value). Reciprocal (see also RECIPROCAL 1) implies that the likeness or equivalence of two things or of one thing to another rests on the fact of their being returns or its being a return in kind, value, or quality for what one side has given to the other (reciprocal courtesies) (a treaty providing for reciprocal trade privileges) (each flexor muscle which contracts has its reciprocal extensor muscle which operates in the reverse direction—Wier) (public and private systems engage in reciprocal services—Lepawsky) Corresponding implies a likeness or equivalence proceeding from the fact that one answers to the other or conforms to it so that they are fitted to each other, or proportionate to or commensurate with each other, or in perfect accord with each other (corresponding sides of similar triangles are in proportion—G. F. Wilder) (the light, with its corresponding shadow—Kitson) (all rights carry with them corresponding responsibilities—Paepke) Correlative implies a close relationship rather than a likeness and is applicable chiefly to two things, or one of two things, which cannot exist independently of each other either because one logically implies the other (husband and wife, father and child, are correlative terms) or one cannot exist without the other (the "right" of the worker to demand work on reasonable terms, and the correlative obligation of the organized community to provide it—Hobson) In more casual use correlative may imply nothing more than so close a correspondence or relation between two or sometimes more things that they come naturally, necessarily, or logically together (two correlative rules: first, that no one shall be allowed to undertake important work without having acquired the necessary skill; secondly, that this skill shall be taught to the ablest of those who desire it—Russell) (disorder in any one of nature's correlative hierarchies—physical, political, psychological—automatically produces disorder in the others—Bingham) Complementary also implies a close relationship rather than a likeness; the term carries a strong suggestion that one thing is so necessary to another or to others that without it an entire or perfect whole is not possible (it is important to recognize that these two uses of the surplus are complementary and not competitive—Hobson) (the corpuscular and undulatory concepts of light must be regarded as complementary rather than antithetical—Jeans) Complemental has essentially the same meaning, differing only in applying usually to a quantitative completing (revelation is regarded by many theologians as complemental to reason) Convertible implies so strong a likeness that the things, though not identical, are virtually interchangeable (the law, and the opinion of the judge, are not always con- vertible terms, or one and the same thing—Blackstone) <truth and beauty have never been recognized as identical, and . . . to employ their names as convertible terms would lead to no end of confusion—Quiller-Couch>

Ana equivalent, identical, *same: related, associated, linked, united (see JOIN) reciprocate, retaliate, requite, return can mean to give back usually in kind or in quantity. Reciprocate may imply a mutual, equivalent, or roughly equivalent, exchange or a paying back of what one has received. The connotations of alternating movements and of correspondence between what is interchanged are usually stressed <he touched his friend's glass lightly and reciprocated the former toast—Joyce> <he . . . is peevish and sensitive when his advances are not reciprocated—Shaw> <I hope in a few days to reciprocate for your verses by sending you a few remarks suggested by reading . . . Gény—Justice Holmes> Retaliate denotes chiefly a paying back of an injury and usually implies return in exact kind, often vengefully <terrorist violence erupts . . . troops retaliate quickly—N. Y. Times> <schoolmates quick to recognize a victim who would never retaliate—Gorer> <though at first he considers the possibility . . . of retaliating on those who have injured him—Krutch> Requite can imply simply a paying back, usually reciprocally, but additionally it can imply a paying back according to what one construes as the merits of the case and then need not imply satisfaction to both parties concerned <his servility was requited with cold contempt—Macaulay> <Drake . . . had requited the wrongs inflicted by the Inquisition on English seamen—J. R. Green> <requited their hospitality by robbing them of much of their supplies—Amer. Guide Series: Me.>

Return (see also RETURN vb) does not emphasize the idea of interchanging so strong in reciprocate but rather that of paying back whatever has been given, usually in kind but sometimes by way of contrast <return a visit> <return a blow> <return good for evil> <he returns my envy with pity—Steele> <devotion that it was not in her nature to return—Naomi Lewis>

Ana interchange, *exchange: repay, compensate, recompense (see PAY)

recite rehearse, recount, *relate, narrate, describe, state, report

Ana enumerate, tell, *count, number: detail, itemize, particularize (see corresponding adjectives at CIRCUMSTANTIAL) reckless daring, daredevil, rash, foolhardy, venturesome, *adventurous

Ana *precipitate, sudden, hasty, headlong, impetuous, abrupt: desperate, hopeless (see DESPONDENT)

Ant calculating —Con *cautious, circumspect, wary, chary

reckon vb 1 *calculate, compute, estimate

Ana enumerate, *count, number: figure, total, *add, sum, cast, foot

2 *consider, regard, account, deem

Ana *think, conceive, imagine, envision: *conjecture, surmise, guess

3 count, bank, *rely, trust, depend reclaim save, ransom, redeem, deliver, *rescue

Ana *renew, restore, renovate: reform, rectify, remedy, *correct, amend

Ant abandon —Con desert, forsake (see ABANDON) recluse, hermit, eremite, anchorite, cenobite all designate a person who lives apart from the world usually in order to devote himself to prayer, contemplation, and penance. Recluse and hermit are also applied to persons who avoid intercourse with men for other than religious motives, but even in such extended use they retain their original distinguishing implications, for recluse stresses retirement from the world and the life of the world into seclusion but not necessarily into physical isolation and hermit, a solitary life lived apart from men and usually in a place or under conditions where there is little likelihood of intrusion. Recluse is the broader term; it may be applied to a hermit or to a religious who lives in a cloistered community. Hermit is often applied to a member of one of the very few religious orders (as the Carthusians) whose members dwell alone and meet other members of the community only in church and in the refectory on Sundays. Eremit, archaic as a variant of hermit, is sometimes chosen to unequivocally designate a solitary who is under a religious vow. Anchorite and cenobite are contrasted terms for the two leading types of recluses in the Eastern and in the Western Church. Anchorite designates the type known as hermit or eremite; cenobite, the type that dwells in a community, especially a strictly cloistered community of monks or nuns.

recognition, identification, assimilation, apperception are comparable when they designate a form of cognition which relates a perception of something new to knowledge already acquired. Recognition implies that the thing now perceived (as by seeing, hearing, or smelling) has been previously perceived, if not in itself then in another instance of the same kind, and that the mind is aware that the two things are identical or of the same kind. Identification implies not only recognition, but such previous knowledge as permits one to recognize the thing as an individual member of a class of things. Assimilation implies that the mind responds to new facts, new ideas, or new experiences by interpreting them in the light of what is already known, thereby making them also an integral part of one's body of knowledge. Apperception differs from assimilation in implying that the mind responds to new facts, ideas, or situations when and only when it can relate them to what is already known.

recognize *acknowledge

Ana accept, admit, *receive: notice, note, observe, remark (see SEE) recoil vb 1 Recoil, shrink, flinch, wince, blench, quail can all mean to draw back from something, usually through fear, faintheartedness, or disgust. Recoil more than any of the succeeding terms suggests the physical signs of such drawing back or the sensations that accompany it. The term may imply a start or a sudden movement away <had so great a dread of snakes that he instinctively recoiled at the sight of one—Costain> <she makes a gesture as if to touch him. He recoils impatiently—Shaw> but often the term suggests an inner or not outwardly apparent shaking or stirring that affects one mentally more than physically <she was principally aware of the sentiment of fear. She recoiled from the future—Bennett> <the tendency to recoil from the expression of repressed feelings, such as hate—Garvin> Shrink implies an instinctive recoil (as from something painful or unpleasant or horrible); it often implies cowardice, but it may imply extreme sensitiveness or scrupulousness <guilt and misery shrink, by a natural instinct, from public notice—De Quincey> <she shrank from the words which would have expressed their mutual consciousness, as she would have shrunk from flakes of fire—George Eliot> <he might have shrunk from defending himself at the expense of a frightened, unhappy girl—Rose Macaulay> Flinch implies a failure in resolution or an inability to overcome one's desire to avoid or evade something that is painful, difficult, or abhorrent <he looked his fate in the face without flinching—Burroughs> <she read and took notes incessantly, mastering facts with painful laboriousness, but never flinching from her self-imposed task—Hardy) <the process of purgation is always perilous, though it is . . . still more perilous to flinch from making the attempt—Toynbee) Flinch is sometimes used but wince more often when by some involuntary, often slight, physical movement (as starting or recoiling) one manifests pain, fear, disgust, or acute sensitiveness <cannot bear the slightest touch without flinching—Smollett) <his horse stands wincing at the flies, giving sharp shivers of his skin—Hunt) <old Lady Kew's tongue was a dreadful thong which made numbers of people wince—Thackeray) <Mr. Warburton wincing when he heard so young a man call him by nickname—Purdy) Blench may be indistinguishable from flinch; it often, however, carries a stronger suggestion of faint-heartedness or of signs of fear <this painful, heroic task he undertook, and never blenched from its fulfillment—Jeffrey) <though his death seemed near he did not blench—Masefield) To quail is to shrink coweringly, as from something which strikes terror <the most formidable woman I have ever known . . . eminent men invariably quailed before her—Russell) <I am never known to quail at the fury of a gale—Gilbert)

Ana waver, falter, *hesitate: shy, balk, stick, stickle (see DEMUR)

Ant confront: defy

2 *rebound, reverberate, resile, reперсuss

Ana retreat, *recede, back, retract: *return, revert recollect *remember, recall, remind, reminisce, bethink, mind

Ana *stir, rouse, arouse, rally, waken, awaken recollection *memory, remembrance, reminiscence, mind, souvenir recommend *commend, compliment, applaud

Ana *approve, endorse, sanction: *praise, extol, acclaim recommendation testimonial, *credential, character, reference

Ana approval, endorsement (see corresponding verbs at APPROVE): commendation (see corresponding verb at COMMEND) recompense vb reimburse, indemnify, repay, satisfy, remunerate, compensate, *pay

Ana award, accord, vouchsafe, *grant: balance, offset, *compensate reconcile conform, accommodate, adjust, *adapt

Ana harmonize, accord, square, *agree: *correct, rectify, amend, revise recondite, abstruse, occult, esoteric can all mean being beyond the power of the average intelligence to grasp or understand. Recondite stresses difficulty resulting from the profundity of the subject matter or its remoteness from ordinary human interest. It often, especially as applied to persons, implies scholarly research carried beyond the bounds of apparent usefulness <the recondite and occult in human nature alike attract the insurgent temper—Lowes) <profound and scholarly, but often recondite to the point of obscurity—Woodring) Abstruse suggests extreme complexity or abstractness in the material as well as its remoteness from the ordinary range of human experience or interest <the vast army of illiterate or semiliterate people who distrust the learned world, especially the abstruse world of science—Meyer) <the last quartets and piano sonatas of Beethoven, which are some of the most abstruse music ever written—Whitehead) Occult basically implies secret, mysterious knowledge purporting to be attainable only through special and often supernatural or magical agencies and not through ordinary channels of human reason (the occult sciences) <whether it be from natural predisposition or from some occult influence of the time—J. R. Lowell) But often the word is used with much weakened force to mean little more than mysterious <the sense of occult rivalry in suitorship was so much superadded to the palpable rivalry of their business lives—Hardy) <juries selected by some occult procedure satisfactory to the judges—Amer. Guide Series: Nev.) Esoteric basically implies knowledge guarded by, and imparted only to, members of a cult or inner circle of initiates <the esoteric sects, which guard a mystery known only to the initiated—Sperry) but it is extended in general use to describe knowledge in the possession only of adepts, students, and specialists <as far as the general public was concerned the museum was an esoteric, occult place in which a mystic language was spoken—Saarinен)

Ana scholarly, erudite, *learned: *pedantic, scholastic, academic record vb Record, register, list, enroll, catalog can mean to commit to writing for the sake of immediate or future use. Record usually implies as its purpose the making of an exact or official entry or statement which gives evidence of the facts involved; the act serves as an aid or a check to memory or as a means of supplying details unlikely to be remembered indefinitely <record the proceedings of a meeting> <record the events of each day in a diary> <record a deed in the county clerk's office> <in all recorded history, nothing like this has happened before> Register usually implies accurate entry into a formal record of facts or particulars of a certain kind which require or deserve recording <required by law to register all births> <all purchases are registered in our books> Sometimes register carries a further or a slightly different implication; thus, one registers a letter by payment of a special fee and obtaining a receipt to ensure its safe delivery by requiring a record of each person who handles it; a thermometer registers the temperature when the mercury expands or contracts to a certain mark in degrees. List implies an entering in a list (as of names, figures, needs, or events) <list the achievements of an athlete> <list alphabetically the books you have read> <list the survivors of an accident> <list the food needed for the party> <list your expenses carefully> Enroll may add to list the notion of setting apart those entered in a distinctive category (as members of a body or adherents of a person or cause) and therefore may connote a winning over, an enlisting, or an admission to membership <interested persons are invited to enroll themselves as members of the society> <those who are . . . tempted to enroll themselves as soldiers—Malthus) <as he goes on, he . . . enrolls a following—Montague) Enroll is sometimes also used of things in the sense of record, but in its more usual extended sense, it also includes the connotation of honoring <enroll your triumphs o'er the seas and land—Pope) Catalog commonly implies an enumeration of all items making up a class or group, usually with descriptive or defining details <catalog the books in a library> <the porcelains in the collection needed to be cataloged> <allowing time to catalog the items to be sold at auction> Catalog may also imply assignment of an item to its proper place in a list or sometimes in a category <the book has not yet been cataloged>

Ana *enter, admit, introduce record n *document, monument, archive recount recite, *relate, rehearse, narrate, describe, state, report

Ana enumerate, *count, number, tell: detail, itemize, particularize (see corresponding adjectives at CIRCUMSTANTIAL) recoup vb recruit, retrieve, regain, *recover

Ana *compensate, balance, offset, counterpoise recover 1 Recover, regain, retrieve, recoup, recruit can mean to get back something that has been let go or lost.

Recover, the most comprehensive of these terms, may imply a finding or obtaining something material or immaterial that has been lost (<recover a lost watch> <recovered his health> <recover peace of mind> <recovered his balance> or a getting of something in reparation or compensation (<recover damages in a lawsuit>). Regain, though often used interchangeably with recover, carries a stronger implication of winning back or getting once more into one's possession something of which one has been deprived (<regain a fortress> <regain a person's good will> <regained his sight> <regained freedom>). Regain also may imply, as recover seldom implies, success in reaching again a place or point at which one has been before (in his efforts to regain his hotel—Meredith) <the trench allowed the performers, after being thrust down into perdition, to regain the greenroom unobserved—Quiller-Couch> Retrieve implies a recovering or regaining after assiduous effort or search (<desperate efforts to retrieve lost territory> <it now seemed impossible to retrieve the foreign trade lost by war> <his desire to retrieve his military reputation—Belloc> <marveling at the silent untiring activity with which her popularity had been retrieved—Wharton> But retrieve sometimes takes for its object such words as loss, error, failure, or disaster, then implying not recovery but a setting right or a making what is bad good, or a reparation by making up for what was wrong or unsuccessful <life is not long enough to retrieve so many mistakes> <one false step is ne'er retrieved—Gray> <he is to retrieve his father's failure, to recover the lost gentility of a family that had once been proud—Brooks> Recoup, basically a legal term implying a rightful deduction by a defendant of part of a claim awarded to a successful plaintiff in a lawsuit, can in its general and extended use imply recovery or retrieval, usually in equivalent rather than identical form, of something lost (<able to recoup his gambling losses by more careful play> <Elizabeth had lost her venture; but if she was bold, she might recoup herself at Philip's cost—Froude>). Recruit fundamentally implies growth through fresh additions; in military use it can imply an increase in numbers through drafting and enlisting or a filling of vacancies in a force resulting from casualties (<it was his custom to recruit his army with conquered people—Newton>). In more general use it may imply a regaining of what has been lost (as vigor through illness, or money through extravagance or heavy expenditures) by fresh additions or replenishment of the supply (<recruiting his strength with a good plain dinner—Dickens> <[the middle class] is continually recruited from the capitalist families—Shaw>).

Ana redeem, reclaim (see RESCUE): *compensate, offset, balance

2 *improve, recuperate, convalesce, gain Ana restore, refresh, rejuvenate, *renew: revive, resuscitate, revivify (see RESTORE) recrue n *renegade, apostate, turncoat, backslider Ana treacherousness or treachery, perfidiousness or perfidy, traitorosity (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS) recreate *amuse, divert, entertain Ana *renew, restore, refresh, rejuvenate: enliven, *quicken, animate recreation amusement, diversion, entertainment (see under AMUSE)

Ana relaxation, repose, ease (see REST): play, sport, frolic, rollick (see under PLAY vb): *mirth, jollity, hilarity recrudescence *return, revert, recur

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana *renew, renovate, refurbish

Con *suppress, repress: *stop, cease, discontinue recrudescence return, reversion, recurrence (see under RETURN vb)

Ana renewal, restoration, refreshment, renovation (see corresponding verbs at RENEW)

Con suppression, repression (see corresponding verbs at SUPPRESS) recruit vb *recover, regain, retrieve, recoup

Ana *renew, restore, renovate, refresh: repair, *mend, rebuild rectify *correct, emend, amend, reform, revise, remedy, redress

Ana *improve, better, help, ameliorate: *mend, repair, rebuild: *adjust, regulate, fix rectitude virtue, *goodness, morality

Ana integrity, probity, *honesty, honor: righteousness, nobility (see corresponding adjectives at MORAL): uprightness, justness, conscientiousness, scrupulousness (see corresponding adjectives at UPRIGHT) recumbent *prone, supine, prostrate, couchant, dormant Ant upright, erect recuperate *improve, recover, convalesce, gain

Ana invigorate, *strengthen, fortify, energize recur *return, revert, recrudescence

Ana *repeat, iterate, reiterate recurrence return, reversion, recrudescence (see under RETURN vb)

Ana relapse (see under LAPSE vb): repeating or repetition, iteration (see corresponding verbs at REPEAT) recurrent *intermittent, periodic, alternate

Ana rhythmic, metrical (see corresponding nouns at RHYTHM): returning, reverting, recrudescing (see RETURN): *fitful, spasmodic redact *edit, compile, revise, rewrite, adapt redeem deliver, *rescue, ransom, save, reclaim

Ana *free, liberate, release, emancipate, manumit: restore, *renew, renovate: *recover, regain redolence *fragrance, perfume, incense, bouquet

Ana odor, aroma, *smell: balminess, aromaticness or aromaticity (see corresponding adjectives at ODOROUS)

redolent aromatic, balmy, fragrant, *odorless

Ana *pungent, poignant, piquant, racy, spicy: penetrating, piercing (see ENTER) redress vb emend, remedy, amend, *correct, rectify, reform, revise

Ana *relieve, lighten, alleviate, assuage, mitigate, allay: repair, *mend redress n *reparation, amends, restitution, indemnity

Ana compensation, offsetting, balancing (see corresponding verbs at COMPENSATE): *retaliation, reprisal, vengeance, retribution reduce 1 *decrease, lessen, diminish, abate, dwindle

Ana *shorten, abridge, abbreviate, curtail, retrench: *contract, shrink, condense

Con *increase, augment, enlarge, multiply: *extend, lengthen, elongate, prolong, protract: *expand, swell, amplify

2 *conquer, vanquish, defeat, subjugate, beat, overcome, lick, subdue, surmount, overthrow, rout

Ana *weaken, cripple, disable, undermine, enfeeble: humble, humiliate, degrade, debase (see ABASE)

3 *degrade, demote, declass, disrate

Ana humble, humiliate, debase (see ABASE) redundancy *verbiage, tautology, pleonasm, circumlocution, periphrasis

Ana wordiness, verbosity, prolixity, diffuseness (see corresponding adjectives at WORDY): inflatedness or inflation, turgidity, tumidity, flatulence (see corresponding adjectives at INFLATED): *bombast, rant, fustian redundant *wordy, verbose, prolix, diffuse

Ana *superfluous, surplus, supernumerary, extra, spare: repeating or repetitious, iterating, reiterating (see corresponding verbs at REPEAT)

Ant concise —Con terse, succinct, laconic, pithy, summary (see CONCISE): compact, *close reef n *shoal, bank, bar reel vb Reel, whirl, stagger, totter are comparable when they mean to move or seem to move uncertainly or uncontrollably (as in weakness, in giddiness, or in intoxication). Reel usually implies a turning round and round, or a sensation of so turning or being turned (for, while the dagger gleamed on high, reeled soul and sense, reeled brain and eye—Scott) (in these lengthened vigils his brain often reeled—Hawthorne) But it may also imply a being thrown off balance (as an army that recoils before a mighty attack, a ship that has lost its equilibrium, or a person affected by exhaustion, a wound, faintness, or intoxication) (giddy and restless, let them reel like stubble from the wind—Milton) (when Church and State were reeling to their foundations—Stanley) (he . . . placed his open palm gently against the breast of Lucian, who instantly reeled back as if the piston rod of a steam engine had touched him—Shaw) Whirl (see also TURN) is often used like reel, especially when referred to the head or to the brain (the dim brain whirls dizzy with delight—Shelley) but it more frequently implies swiftness or impetuosity of movement often by someone or something being carried along blindly or furiously (in popular commotions, each man is whirled along with the herd—Lytton) Stagger stresses uncertainty or uncontrollability of movement, typically of a person walking while weak, giddy, intoxicated, or heavily burdened, but sometimes of whatever meets with difficulty or with adverse conditions; thus, a boat that labors, a mind that is perplexed, confused, or bewildered, and a faith, opinion, or purpose that meets heavy opposition can all be said to stagger (a porter half my size who . . . staggered through the shallow water under what must have been an almost overwhelming weight—Heiser) (at whose immensity even soaring fancy staggered—Shelley) Totter (see also SHAKE) implies not only weakness or unsteadiness as a cause of uncertain movement but often also suggests an approaching complete collapse (from the day of Cressy feudalism tottered slowly but surely to its grave—J. R. Green) ([the waning moon] like a dying lady, lean and pale, who totters forth, wrapt in a gauzy veil—Shelley)

Ana *turn, spin, revolve, rotate: sway, waver, *swing: wobble, teeter, quiver (see SHAKE) refer 1 assign, credit, accredit, *ascribe, attribute, impute, charge

Ana associate, relate, connect (see JOIN): *direct, aim, point, lay

2 *resort, apply, go, turn

Ana consult, *confer, commune, advise: address, *direct

3 Refer, allude, advert are comparable when they mean to mention something so as to call or direct attention to it. Refer, when unqualified, usually suggests intentional introduction and distinct mention (a day or two later she referred to the matter again—Mary Austin) (we may here again refer, in support of this proposition, to the plain and unequivocal language of the laws—Taney) but often it is so qualified as to add the idea of judging to that of mentioning (inclined at times to give a subjective interpretation to mathematical-physical theories and to refer to them as fictions—Cohen) Allude, though often close to refer in the latter's more general sense, distinctively implies indirect reference (as by a hint, a suggestive phrase, a roundabout or covert method of expression, or a figure of speech); it may suggest mere casual interest, modesty, timidity, or reticence in the one who alludes (fruit . . . gives him that intestinal condition I alluded to—Stafford) (the traveling facilities alluded to . . . would date the story as between 1842 and 1844—O. S. Nock) Sometimes, however, it connotes bias or ill will (proposals, which were never called proposals, but always alluded to slightly as innovations—Mackenzie) Advert, which basically means to turn the mind or attention to something (see ADVERT 1), is sometimes interchangeable with refer but in such use it may distinctively imply a slight or glancing reference interpolated in a text or utterance (regards as truly religious certain elevated ethical attitudes and cosmologies that Freud, when he adverted to them at all, regarded as too highbrow to be given the name of religion—Riesman) (letters from Franklin to his wife's grandmother . . . in which he adverted to having had to do with her education—Justice Holmes)

Ana *introduce, insert, interpolate: *quote, cite referee n umpire, arbiter, *judge, arbitrator reference testimonial, recommendation, character, *credential referendum initiative, *mandate, plebiscite refinement *culture, cultivation, breeding

Ana suavity, urbanity (see corresponding adjectives at SUAVE): courtesy, politeness, civility (see corresponding adjectives at CIVIL): *elegance, grace, dignity

Ant vulgarity reflect *think, cogitate, reason, speculate, deliberate

Ana *consider, contemplate, study, weigh: *ponder, muse, meditate, ruminate reflection *animadversion, stricture, aspersion

Ana imputing or imputation, ascribing or ascription (see corresponding verbs at ASCRIBE): criticizing or criticism, reprehending or reprehension, blaming or blame (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE): *attack, assault, onslaught, onset: disparagement, derogation, depreciation (see corresponding verbs at DECRY) reflective *thoughtful, contemplative, meditative, pensive, speculative

Ana thinking, reasoning, deliberating, cogitating (see THINK): analytical, *logical, subtle reform vb *correct, rectify, emend, amend, remedy, revise Ana *mend, repair, rebuild: better, *improve, help, ameliorate reform n *reformation reformation, reform can both denote a making better or a giving of a new and improved form or character and are sometimes interchangeable without loss (the reformation of a criminal) (the reform of society) Reformation is the more usual term as a designation of a movement that has brought about many revolutionary amendments or improvements, especially in morals or religious practices (the Protestant Reformation) It is also appropriate when the idea of making over so as to eradicate defects is stressed (not directed to the reformation of what was ill—Belloc) (never came reformation in a flood, with such a heady currence, scouring faults—Shak.) (it is the moral basis of this reformation that I wish to lay—Hobson) Reform, on the other hand, is more usual as a designation of an attempt to remove abuses, correct corrupt practices, or to make changes for the better (hostile to all persons advocating reform) (Boeotia, choose reform or civil war!—Shelley) (a wave of municipal reform had passed over it—Ellis) Reform also applies, as reformation does not, to a particular or specific amendment, whether achieved or proposed, as a measure of reform (initiate sweeping reforms in the government)  refractory recalcitrant, intractable, ungovernable, *unruly, headstrong, willful

Ana *contrary, perverse, froward, wayward: *insubordinate, rebellious, contumacious

Ant malleable: amenable (sense 2) refrain, abstain, forbear are comparable when they mean to keep or withhold oneself voluntarily from something to which one is moved by desire or impulse. Refrain is especially suitable when the checking of a momentary inclination is implied <refrain from laughter> At times, to refrain from an action implies merely its nonperformance <no tolerable parent could refrain from praising a child when it first walks—Russell> Abstain is more emphatic than refrain, because it usually stresses deliberate renunciation or self-denial on principle and often implies permanency of intent <early Christians . . . abstained from the responsibilities of office—Acton> <I have . . . abstained from the use of many expressions, in themselves proper and beautiful, but which have been foolishly repeated by bad poets—Wordsworth> It is used especially in reference to those natural appetites and passions whose control or renunciation are a part of self-discipline <from this personal blow stemmed, I believe, an act of renunciation, his decision to abstain from meat—Shirer> Forbear usually implies self-restraint rather than self-denial, be it from patience, charity, or clemency, or from discretion, or from stoicism <he was so poison-mean that the marsh mosquitoes forbore to bite him—S. H. Adams> <wherever he has not the power to do or forbear any act according to the determination or thought of the mind, he is not free—Thilly> But often forbear is but vaguely distinguishable from refrain <I cannot forbear quoting what seems to me applicable here—Justice Holmes>

Ana check, *arrest, interrupt: *restrain, curb, inhibit refresh *renew, restore, rejuvenate, renovate, refurbish

Ana enliven, *quicken, animate, vivify: recruit, *recover, regain: recreate, *amuse, divert

Ant jade, addle

refuge asylum, sanctuary, *shelter, cover, retreat

Ana safety, security (see corresponding adjectives at SAFE): stronghold, citadel, *fort, fortress: *harbor, haven, port refulgent effulgent, luminous, radiant, lustrous, *bright, brilliant, beaming, lambent, lucent, incandescent refurbish renovate, *renew, refresh, restore, rejuvenate refuse vb *decline, reject, repudiate, spurn

Ana *deny, gainsay: balk, baffle, *frustrate, thwart, foil: debar, *exclude, shut out refuse n Refuse, waste, rubbish, trash, debris, garbage, offal can all mean matter that is regarded as worthless and fit only for throwing away. Refuse, ordinarily the most comprehensive term of the group, stresses the rejection of the matter, or its uselessness from the point of view of the owner (as a manufacturer, processor, builder, or housekeeper) and usually implies its being cast aside or thrown away. The term includes anything covered by this description without regard to whether another will find use for it  <heaps of refuse left by the former tenant> <arrangements made by the city to collect refuse>  Waste may also be a comprehensive term approaching refuse in meaning, but it typically applies to material that is unused by its producer but can or could be useful in other ways or in other circumstances or to other people <wiped his hands on a wad of cotton waste> Rubbish is likely to mean an accumulation of useless material and worn-out, broken-down, used up, worthless things <throw it in the rubbish barrel> <her closets heaped with rubbish> Trash stresses material of no account (as something worn-out or exhausted of what was good in it or parts discarded in shaping, trimming, or clipping). In general use trash is often employed in place of rubbish as a name for waste materials requiring disposition, but both terms in this sense usually exclude refuse that is animal or vegetable matter. Debris usually applies to what remains from the breaking up, the disintegration, or the destruction of something (as a building, a wall, or a tree); the term usually suggests a loose accumulation of detritus or broken fragments  <the sandstone cliffs . . . are battered down and their debris carried out to sea—Geikie> <after the air raid nothing was left of the building but a pile of rubble and debris> Garbage chiefly applies to organic refuse (as from a kitchen, a store, or a market) including waste of animal or vegetable origin or animal or vegetable matter that is or is regarded as unfit for human food. Offal may refer to something (as chips of wood or pieces of leather) cut off in dressing or fitting for use, but the term is usually applied specifically to the parts of a butchered animal that are removed in dressing the carcass, that consist chiefly of viscera (as liver, kidneys, and heart) and of trimmings (as tail, hooves, blood, and head meat), and that include edible meats and raw materials for processing as well as refuse. But offal may also be applied to carrion and other worthless or distasteful refuse and tends then and in extended use to stress offensiveness or disagreeableness.

All these terms except waste also have extended use; refuse refers usually to something left after the available supply has been thoroughly picked over and therefore implies the worst, the meanest, or the least desirable of the lot <the refuse of society> Rubbish may be applied to something (as inferior merchandise or a ridiculous or nonsensical idea, argument, or discussion) that in its worthlessness suggests a heap of trash <much of the goods in bargain sales is mere rubbish> <most of the stuff talked about Nordics and Aryans is simply rubbish—Huxley> Trash retains its implication of relative worthlessness <who steals my purse steals trash—Shak.> <most of these paintings are trash, but there are two or three good things> Debris may be applied to something immaterial or intangible that remains as evidence of what the original thing once was <those eastern lands which were the debris of Alexander's empire—Buchan> Garbage also may be applied to something that in comparison with other things of the same sort may be described as filthy or foul <she flew with voracious appetite to sate herself on the garbage of any circulating library—Porter> Offal ordinarily applies to persons considered as the lowest or meanest of refuse or as offscourings <wretches . . . whom everybody now believes to have been . . . the offal of gaols and brothels—Macaulay>

refute confute, rebut, *disprove, controvert

Ana contradict, impugn, traverse, negative, contravene (see DENY) regain *recover, recruit, recoup, retrieve

Ana gain, *reach, compass, attain, achieve: redeem, reclaim, save (see RESCUE): restore, *renew regal royal, *kingly, queenly, imperial, princely

Ana majestic, imposing, stately, magnificent, august (see GRAND): *splendid, resplendent, glorious, sublime regale tickle, gratify, delight, *please, rejoice, gladden Ant vex regard n Regard, respect, esteem, admiration, and their corresponding verbs (regard, respect, esteem, admire) are comparable when they mean a feeling, or to have a feeling, for someone or something which involves recognition of that person's or thing's worth and some degree of liking. Regard is the most colorless as well as the most formal of these words (please give him my regards) It usually requires qualification to reinforce and orient its meaning (held in slight regard by his neighbors) (she learned to hope that it [the past] . . . might not cost her Henry's entire regard—Austen) (Steve had not been highly regarded in his hometown—Anderson) Respect usually implies careful evaluation or estimation of the worth of a person or thing and of the measure of recognition which is due him or it (he respected their views even though he could not agree with them) (he held their opinions in slight respect) (one wants to produce in the child the same respect for the garden that restrains the grown-ups from picking wantonly—Russell) Often respect implies such a show of deference or veneration as is proper from a junior or an inferior (the respect, amounting almost to worship, he sometimes saw in the eyes of the people—Anderson) Sometimes it suggests observance of what is proper or fitting (show respect for the dead) (respected the wishes of his parents) and sometimes it suggests recognition of something as sacred or inviolable (respect a person's privacy) (have respect for the rights of others) Esteem adds to respect the implications of a high valuation with a consequent prizing and of warmth of feeling or attachment (what things there are most abject in regard and dear in use! What things again most dear in the esteem and poor in worth!—Shak.) (in the Renaissance, no Latin author was more highly esteemed than Seneca—T. S. Eliot) Admiration and admire, like esteem, imply a recognition of superiority, but they usually connote more enthusiastic appreciation, and sometimes suggest genuine affection (Miss Welwood, I have long felt the deepest esteem for you, and your present courageous attitude in this distressing financial crisis has added admiration to esteem—Deland) Sometimes the words stress the personal attractiveness of the object of admiration, and weaken the implication of esteem (what sight . . . is sadder than the sight of a lady we admire admiring a nauseating picture?—L. P. Smith)

Ana deference, *honor, homage, reverence: appreciation, cherishing, prizing, valuing (see corresponding verbs at APPRECIATE)

Ant despise —Con contempt, scorn, disdain (see under DESPISE) regard vb 1 respect, esteem, admire (see under REGARD n)

Ana *appreciate, cherish, value, prize, treasure

Ant despise —Con contemn, scorn, disdain (see DESPISE): reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE vb)

2 *consider, account, reckon, deem

Ana rate, *estimate, value, assess, assay regarding *about, concerning, respecting region *area, tract, zone, belt

Ana *locality, vicinity, district, neighborhood: section, sector, division, *part: *field, territory, province register n *list, table, catalog, schedule, roll, roster, inventory register vb *record, list, enroll, catalog

Ana *enter, admit: insert, *introduce: fix, establish, *set: preserve, conserve, *save regressive retrogressive, retrograde, *backward

Ant progressive regret n *sorrow, grief, heartache, heartbreak, anguish, woe

Ana compunction, remorse, *penitence, repentance, contrition: *qualm, scruple, demur regular adj 1 Regular, normal, typical, natural can all mean being of the sort or kind that is expected as usual, ordinary, or average. A person or, more often, a thing is regular, as opposed to irregular, that conforms to what is the prescribed rule or standard or the established pattern for its kind (a regular verb) (a regular meeting of a society) A person or a thing is normal, as opposed to abnormal or exceptional, that does not deviate in any marked way from what has been discovered or established as the norm (see norm under AVERAGE n) for one of its kind. In contrast with regular, normal carries a stronger implication of conformity within prescribed limits or under given conditions and therefore sometimes admits a wide range of difference among the things that may be described as normal for a class or kind (normal winter weather) (a perfectly normal child physically as well as mentally) (his pulse is normal for a person of his age) (her intensity . . . would leave no emotion on a normal plane—D. H. Lawrence) When applied to persons, normal often specifically connotes mental balance or sanity (his actions are not those of a normal person) but it may connote merely an approach to the average in mentality, implying the exclusion of those below or above this average (the twins, since they had gone to Oxford, never admitted that they cared for any books that normal people cared for—Rose Macaulay) A person or thing is typical, as opposed to individual, that markedly exhibits the characters or characteristics identifying the type, class, species, or group to which he or it belongs, often to the exclusion or the obscuring of any that differentiate him or it individually (a typical example of Browning's style) (I would suggest that the most typical, as it is probably the oldest of the arts, is the Dance—Binyon) (peculiar to himself, not typical of Greek ideas—Dickinson) (a typical English country town with wide High Street, narrow Market Street, picturesque Market Square—Mackenzie) A person or thing is natural (see also NATURAL 2) that acts, behaves, or operates in accordance with the nature or essence of his or its kind or constitution; the term also applies to what is normal in or suitable to one because of such nature or constitution (the father is the natural protector of his children) (the natural love of a mother) (flesh is the natural food of a dog) (he died from natural causes)

Ana *usual, habitual, customary: *common, ordinary, familiar

Ant irregular

2 *orderly, methodical, systematic, regular

Ana fixed, set, settled (see SET): constant, even, equable, *steady, uniform

Ant irregular

regulate *adjust, fix

Ana *order, arrange, organize, systematize, methodize: temper, *moderate: *correct, rectify regulation rule, *law, precept, statute, ordinance, canon

Ana instruction, direction, bidding (see corresponding verbs at COMMAND): deciding or decision, determination, ruling (see corresponding verbs at DECIDE) regurgitate *belch, burp, vomit, disgorge, spew, throw up rehearse *relate, narrate, describe, recite, recount, state, report

Ana *repeat, iterate, reiterate: detail, itemize, particularize (see corresponding adjectives at CIRCUMSTANTIAL)

reify *realize, actualize, embody, incarnate, materialize, externalize, objectify, hypostatize reimburse indemnify, repay, recompense, compensate, remunerate, satisfy, *pay

Ana recoup, *recover: *compensate, balance, offset reinforce *strengthen, invigorate, fortify, energize

Ana *increase, augment, multiply, enlarge: *support, sustain, prop, bolster, buttress reissue n *edition, impression, reprinting, printing reiterate *repeat, iterate, ingeminate reject vb repudiate, spurn, refuse, *decline Ana *discard, cast, shed: oust, expel, dismiss, *eject: *exclude, debar, shut out, eliminate Ant accept: choose, select rejoice delight, gladden, *please, gratify, tickle, regale Ant grieve: aggrieve: bewail rejoin *answer, respond, reply, retort Con question, interrogate, *ask, inquire, query, catechize, examine rejoinder answer, response, reply, retort (see under ANSWER vb 1) Ana returning or return, reverting or reversion (see under RETURN vb): *retaliation, reprisal rejuvenate *renew, restore, refresh, renovate, refurbish relapse n lapse, backsliding (see under LAPSE vb) Ana *reversion, atavism, throwback: degeneration, decline, declension, decadence, *deterioration relapse vb *lapse, backslide Ana revert, *return: degenerate, decline, deteriorate (see corresponding nouns at DETERIORATION) relate vb 1 Relate, rehearse, recite, recount, narrate, describe, state, report are comparable when they mean to tell orally or in writing the details or circumstances necessary to others' understanding or knowledge of a real or imagined situation or combination of events. Relate implies the giving of a usually detailed or orderly account of something one has witnessed or experienced <related the story of his life> <then Father Junipero and his companion related fully their adventure—Cather> Rehearse usually suggests a repetition; it may imply a summary of what is known <let us rehearse the few facts known of the inconspicuous life of Thomas Traherne—Quiller-Couch> or a second or third or oft-repeated telling <designed to fool the easily fooled . . . it rehearsed all the lies with which we are now familiar—Shirer> or a going over and over something in one's mind, or with another person, or in privacy before relating or sometimes performing or presenting it to others or to an audience <Mr. Hynes hesitated a little longer . . . He seemed to be rehearsing the piece in his mind—Joyce> <felt certain . . . that his smile was as he had rehearsed it, polished and genially satanic—Hervey> Recite and the more common recount imply greater particularity of detail than the preceding terms; in fact, the implication of enumeration or of mention of each particular is so strong that both verbs usually take a plural object; thus, one relates an experience, but he recites or recounts his experiences <recite the events of the day> <as with all mysteries, it cannot be rationally explained, merely recounted—Shirer> Narrate suggests the employment of devices characteristic of the literary narrative such as plot, creation of suspense, and movement toward a climax <what verse can sing, what prose narrate the butcher deeds of bloody Fate—Burns> <the discovery of Madeira is narrated with all the exaggerations of romance—Southey> Describe usually implies emphasis upon details that give the hearers or readers a clear picture or that give not only a visual representation but one that appeals to the other senses <bitter sea and glowing light, bright clear air, dry as dry,—that describes the place—Jefferies> <described her . . . as "a dear little thing. Rather brainy, but quite a nice little thing"—Gibbons> State stresses particularity, clearness, and definiteness of detail, and suggests the aim of presenting material (as facts, ideas, or feelings) in their naked truth so that they will be distinctly understood or fixed in others' minds <Dryden's words . . . are precise, they state immensely, but their suggestiveness is often nothing—T. S. Eliot> <one should know what one thinks and what one means, and be able to state it in clear terms—Rose Macaulay> Report implies a recounting and narrating, often after investigation, for the information of others <report the progress on defense projects to the cabinet> <he was assigned to report the murder trial for the local newspaper> <in his letters Thaddeus reported approaching an island in an outrigger one evening—Cheever>

Ana tell, *reveal, disclose, divulge: detail, itemize, particularize (see corresponding adjectives at CIRCUMSTANTIAL)

2 associate, link, connect, *join, conjoin, combine, unite Ana attach, *fasten, fix: refer, assign, credit, impute, *ascribe

Con disengage, *detach, abstract: divorce, sever, sunder, *separate

3 *bear, pertain, appertain, belong, apply related, cognate, kindred, allied, affiliated can all mean connected by or as if by close family ties. Related, when referred to persons, usually implies consanguinity, but sometimes implies connection by marriage <the royal families in Europe are nearly all related to each other> When applied to things, related suggests an often close connection, the particular nature of which is to be gathered from the context <related species> <related events> <related activities> <every part of an organism is related to the other parts> <body and soul are contrasted, but related, concepts> Cognate differs from related chiefly in being referable only to things that are generically alike or that can be shown to have a common ancestor or source or to be derived from the same root or stock <cognate races> <cognate languages> <cognate words in various languages, such as pater, Vater, father> <physics and chemistry are cognate sciences> Kindred, in its primary sense, stresses blood relationship <kindred members of a community> In its more common extended sense, it implies such likenesses as common interests, tastes, aims, or qualities that might be characteristic of a family. When the reference is to persons, congeniality is usually connoted <he would never be popular . . . but he might appeal to a little circle of kindred minds—Joyce> When applied to things, a more obvious connection or a closer likeness is implied than in related <kindred qualities in two otherwise alien tongues [Hebrew and English]—Lowes> Allied more often implies connection by union than by origin, and especially by marriage or by voluntary association. It often connotes a more remote family connection than related <the Raycie blood was . . . still to be traced in various allied families: Kents, Huzzards, Cosbys—Wharton> In its extended use it usually stresses relation based on the possession of common characters, qualities, aims, or effects which lead either to union or to inclusion in the same class or category <allied physical types> <allied societies> <allied diseases> Affiliated also stresses connection by union, but it may imply a dependent relation such as that of a child to a parent. Sometimes it implies the adoption of the weaker by the stronger  Sometimes it connotes a loose union in which the affiliating units retain their independence, but derive support or strength from the main, central, or parent body, or cooperate in its work <Monte Cassino and affiliated monasteries> <the CIO and its affiliated unions>

Ana associated, connected (see JOIN): *reciprocal, corresponding, correlative, convertible, complementary: akin, identical, alike, analogous (see LIKE): *relevant, germane, pertinent relative *dependent, contingent, conditional

Ant absolute relaxation *rest, repose, leisure, ease, comfort

Ana amusement, diversion, recreation (see under AMUSE vb): relieving or relief, assuagement, alleviation, mitigation (see corresponding verbs at RELIEVE) relaxed *loose, slack, lax

Ana mitigated, lightened, alleviated, assuaged, relieved (see RELIEVE): flexuous, sinuous (see WINDING): *soft, mild, gentle, lenient

Ant stiff —Con strict, *rigid, rigorous, stringent: *severe, stern, austere, ascetic release vb *free, liberate, emancipate, manumit, deliver, discharge, enfranchise

Ana *detach, disengage: *exculpate, exonerate, acquit: surrender, resign, yield, *relinquish

Ant detain (as a prisoner): check (as thoughts, feelings): oblige relegate vb *commit, entrust, confide, consign

Ana refer, assign, credit, accredit, charge (see ASCRIBE) relent *yield, submit, capitulate, succumb, defer, bow, cave

Ana acquiesce (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLIANT): forbear, *refrain, abstain: *abate, subside, wane, ebb relentless unrelenting, merciless, implacable, *grim

Ana inexorable, obdurate, adamant, *inflexible: strict, stringent, *rigid, rigorous: *ferce, ferocious, cruel, inhuman

Con *soft, lenient, mild, gentle: *tender, compassionate: yielding, submitting or submissive (see corresponding verbs at YIELD)

relevant, germane, material, pertinent, apposite, applicable, apropos are comparable when they mean having a relation to or a bearing upon the matter in hand or the present circumstances. Something relevant has a traceable connection, especially logical connection, with the thing under consideration and has significance in some degree for those who are engaged in such consideration (the judge decided that the evidence was relevant and therefore admissible) (great books are universally relevant and always contemporary; that is, they deal with the common problems of thought and action that confront men in every age and every clime—Adler) Something germane is so closely related (as in spirit, tone, or quality) to the subject, the matter, the occasion, or the issue that the fitness or appropriateness of their association is beyond question (enliven his lecture by introducing amusing anecdotes germane to his subject) (an interesting point but not germane to the issue) (the passionate cravings which are germane to the hermit life—H. O. Taylor) Something material is so closely related to the matter in hand that it cannot be dispensed with without having an evident and especially a harmful effect (the motion is supported by an affidavit showing that the evidence is material—B. F. Tucker) (certain passages material to his understanding the rest of this important narrative—Scott) Something pertinent is so decisively or significantly relevant that it touches the real point at issue or contributes materially to the understanding of what is under discussion or to the solution of what is in question (once a thing did become pertinent, he had an amazing faculty for absorbing it wholly—Terry Southern) (it is more pertinent to observe that it seems to me that logically and rationally a man cannot be said to be more than once in jeopardy in the same cause, however often he may be tried—Justice Holmes) Something apposite is relevant and germane to such a degree that it strikes one both by its pertinency and by its felicitousness (an apposite illustration) (apposite quotations. . . came easily to his pen to grace the pellucid flow of his English—Partridge) (whatever she did, she made her circumstances appear singularly apposite and becoming—Sackville-West) Something applicable may be brought to bear upon or be used fittingly in reference to a particular case, instance, or problem (the word tool is applicable to a plow only when used in a general sense) (the principle is not applicable to the case in question) (although . . . I do not get much help from general propositions in a case of this sort, I cannot forbear quoting what seems to me applicable here—Justice Holmes) Something apropos is both appropriate and opportune (a person who is not aware of an undercurrent of feeling may make remarks that are far from apropos) (we . . . find a new pleasure in the hackneyed words. They are really not quite apropos—Julian Huxley) Sometimes it can suggest relevancy rather than appropriateness or opportuneness (he is not witty but Frenchly apropos—Flanner)

Ana *related, cognate, allied: fitting, appropriate, proper (see FIT): important, significant, weighty (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

Ant extraneous —Con alien, foreign, *extrinsic reliable, dependable, trustworthy, trusty, tried can be applied to persons, their utterances, views, methods, or instruments to mean having or manifesting qualities which merit confidence or trust. Reliable describes what one can count upon not to fail in doing what is expected (she is a very reliable servant) (one of the most reliable of our employees) (a reliable washing machine) or to give or tell the exact truth (a reliable work of reference) (reliable testimony) Dependable is very close to reliable; it may suggest steadiness or trustworthiness in time of need or in an emergency (ask a friend to recommend a dependable physician) (he is the most dependable of our friends) (a dependable source of information) Dependable is also used merely as a descriptive term implying a character that is predictable or that is the antithesis of what is fickle or capricious (Laura wasn't pretty, but . . . healthy-looking and dependable—Mary Austin) A person or occasionally a thing is trustworthy that merits or has earned one's complete confidence in his or its soundness, integrity, veracity, discretion, or reliability (a trustworthy confidant) (a trustworthy witness) (a trustworthy wife) (the most trustworthy comment on the text of the Gospels and the Epistles is to be found in the practice of the primitive Christians—Macaulay) Trusty applies to a person or thing that has been found by experience to be reliable and trustworthy (a trusty guide) (a trusty servant) or that has been found never to have failed one in need or in an emergency or that has been found dependable whenever needed (his trusty sword—Spenser) (he wrapped the trusty garment about him—Cather) Tried also stresses proved reliability, dependability, trustworthiness, or trustiness (a tried and true friend) (a tried remedy) (a tried soldier) (his tried expedients—Bagehot)

Ana *safe, secure: *infallible, inerrable, inerrant, unerring: cogent, *valid, sound, convincing, compelling, telling

Ant dubious —Con *doubtful, problematic, questionable reliance *trust, confidence, dependence, faith

Ana credence, credit, *belief, faith: assurance, conviction, certitude, *certainty relieve, alleviate, lighten, assuage, mitigate, allay are comparable when they mean to make something tolerable or less grievous. Though they are often used interchangeably, they are clearly distinguishable. Relieve implies

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

a lifting of enough of a burden to make it definitely enduring or temporarily forgotten (drugs that relieve pain) (taking steps to control the fire and relieve the suffering it entailed—Milner) Occasionally relieve, when used in the passive, implies a release from anxiety or fear (they were greatly relieved when her letter came) Sometimes it suggests a break in monotony or in routine (I've had some trouble to get them together to relieve the dullness of your incarceration—Meredith) Alleviate stresses the temporary or partial nature of the relief and usually implies a contrast with cure and remedy (oil of cloves will alleviate a toothache) (to help alleviate New York's chronic traffic problem—Current Biog.) Lighten implies reduction in the weight of what oppresses or depresses; it often connotes a cheering or refreshing influence (his interest in his work lightened his labors) (that blessed mood . . . in which the heavy and the weary weight of all this unintelligible world is lightened—Wordsworth) Assuage suggests the moderation of violent emotion by influences that soften or mollify or sometimes sweeten (the good gods assuage thy wrath—Shak.) (the life-giving zephyrs that assuage the torment of the summer heat—Cloete) Mitigate also suggests moderation in the force, violence, or intensity of something painful; it does not, as assuage does, imply something endured but something inflicting or likely to inflict pain (mitigate the barbarity of the criminal law—Inge) (group friction and conflict are generally mitigated when people realize their common interests—Cohen) Allay, though it seldom implies complete release from what distresses or disquiets, does suggest an effective calming or quieting (the report allayed their fears) (his suspicions were allayed) (these . . . words . . . allayed agitation; they composed, and consequently must make her happier—Austen) Ana *comfort, console, solace; *moderate, qualify, temper; diminish, reduce, lessen, *decrease Ant intensify; embarrass; alarm religion, denomination, sect, cult, communion, faith, creed, persuasion, church can all denote a system of religious belief and worship or the body of persons who accept such a system. Religion, the usual uncolored term, may apply to a system (as Christianity or Buddhism) which represents the beliefs and worship of all those who accept a given revelation or to one (as Anglicanism) which represents the beliefs and practiced worship of a specific body of those who accept the same revelation (the religion of the Arabs) (the religion of the Scribes and Pharisees) Denomination basically applies to a body of people holding common and distinctive religious beliefs and called by a particular name so as to distinguish them from a more inclusive body (Methodists form one denomination of Protestants) (the leading Christian denominations) Sect is applied to a group cut off from a larger body or, more specifically, from an established or a parent church through discontent with some matter of doctrine or observance; thus, one speaks of the Christian religion as comprising all who accept the New Testament as divine revelation, but of the various sects into which the seventeenth-century and eighteenth-century Protestant denominations were divided. Cult though widely varied in use is typically applied to a sometimes nontheistic system of beliefs and ritual or to its adherents. It is likely to suggest a great or excessive devotion and a fervent observance by a usually small group of what appear bizarre or spurious or strangely foreign and unseemly rites to persons who follow other beliefs (ever since the close of the Punic War foreigners had been thronging to Rome, bringing with them their foreign cults—Buchan) (the romantic error has been . . . in short, to turn the nature cult into a religion)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

—Babbitt) Communion stresses not difference from others but union in essentials (as of religious belief and discipline); the term can apply not only to a large body (the Roman Catholic communion) but to one comprising several smaller bodies or organizations (as national churches) which exhibit such union (the Anglican communion includes all who are united with the Church of England in matters of faith and order) or to small sects and cults isolated by their special beliefs or practices. Faith and creed apply to a system of belief and worship that is clearly formulated and definitely accepted (men of all faiths were present) (creeds are often a cause of division) Persuasion may suggest the conviction produced by evangelism and exhortation; it is frequently equivalent to faith or denomination. Church usually has implications that closely relate it to denomination. Distinctively it suggests a clearly defined character, both as a system of beliefs or as a body of persons, and often carries a stronger connotation of organization than denomination carries; it may imply specifically Christian as contrasted with non-Christian worship (to what church does he belong?) (some churches that forbade dancing now countenance it)

religious adj 1 *devout, pious, pietistic, sanctimonious Ana *faithful, staunch, steadfast, true; virtuous, righteous, noble, *moral, ethical; *upright, just, honorable, honest Ant irreligious —Con ungodly, godless (see IRRELIGIOUS)

2 spiritual, *holy, sacred, divine, blessed Ant secular (of schools, journals, authorities); profane (of music, drama)

religious n Religious, monk, friar, nun all mean a member of a religious order whose members are bound by the monastic vows of poverty, chastity, and obedience and who lead to a greater or lesser extent a cloistered life. Religious is the comprehensive term applicable either to a man or a woman; it implies a living apart from the world either in a cloistered community formed of members of the same order or as a hermit (see RECLUSE) under the governance of the superior of an order. Monk in general use may designate a male religious; in precise technical use the term applies to a member of a religious order for men (as the Benedictine or Cistercian order) whose members live an ascetic life in a cloistered community, and devote themselves mainly to contemplation and prayer and liturgical observances, and to some assigned and usually scholarly, artistic, or scientific employment. Friar applies to a member of a mendicant order under whose original regulations neither personal nor community tenure of property was allowed and whose members lived by alms and wandered from place to place preaching the Gospel and administering the sacraments or to a member of an order patterned after them, whether he lives as a mendicant or in a cloistered community and whether he serves as a pastor, a curate, a missionary, a preacher, or a teacher. Nun applies only to a female religious; since there are no terms to distinguish nuns according to the severity of their discipline, the rigor of their cloistered life, and the nature of their duties, the word is generally applied to any member of a religious order of women who devote themselves to prayer, contemplation, and work, and may wear a habit.

relinquish, yield, leave, resign, surrender, cede, abandon, waive are comparable when they mean to let go from one's control or possession or to give up completely. Relinquish in itself seldom carries any added implication, but it often acquires color from the words with which it is associated or from the character of the thing given up (disinclined to relinquish his command) (relinquished his grasp only after a struggle) <he had let something go . . . : something very precious, that he could not consciously have relinquished—Cather> Yield adds to relinquish the implication of concession or compliance; in some collocations it does not even suggest finality—a prevailing but not always necessary implication in the words of this group—but rather, a giving way as a favor, or as a sign of weakness, or as an indulgence <yield not thy neck to fortune's yoke, but let thy dauntless mind still ride in triumph over all mischance—Shak.> Leave is often used in place of relinquish but distinctively it can imply a forsaking <we have left all, and have followed thee—Mk 10:28> <he has left me . . . quitted me! abandoned me!—Bennett> Like relinquish it can be strongly colored by context and may convey such dissimilar notions as a giving up or letting go that constitutes sacrifice <the opium eater who cannot leave his drug—Wolfe> or neglect <by all ye leave or do, the silent, sullen peoples shall weight your Gods and you—Kipling> or concession <the constitution leaves them [the States] this right in the confidence that they will not abuse it—John Marshall> or even imposition upon others <she leaves most of the work to her sister> Resign emphasizes voluntary or deliberate sacrifice without struggle; it usually connotes either renunciation or acceptance of the inevitable <the ambition which incites a man to seize power seldom allows him to resign it—Times Lit. Sup.> <in her face . . . was that same strange mingling of resigned despair and almost eager appeal—Galsworthy> Surrender distinctively implies the existence of external compulsion or demand; it commonly suggests submission after a struggle or after resistance or show of resistance <when they saw all that was sacred to them laid waste, the Navaho . . . did not surrender; they simply ceased to fight—Cather> At times the implication of resistance is blurred and that of conscious sacrifice, as for a greater advantage, is heightened <surrender rights to a portion of an estate> Cede is narrower in its application than surrender; as a rule it suggests juridical pressure as expressed in a court decision, the findings of arbitrators, or the terms of a treaty, though it may suggest previous negotiation, and is used in reference to the transfer of lands, territory, or rights <the territory ceded by France, under the name of Louisiana—Taney> Abandon (see also ABANDON 1) stresses finality and completeness in relinquishment, especially of intangible things (as hopes, opinions, methods, or schemes) <no, no; you stick to your prejudices, or at any rate don't abandon them on my account—Mackenzie> Waive, like yield, need not imply finality and often suggests a concession, but unlike yield and the other terms of this group, it seldom implies the compulsion of force or necessity. Its main implication is a refusal to insist on something (as a right, a claim, one's preference, one's immunity, or obedience to a rule, law, or convention) usually for the sake of courtesy, simplicity, or concentration on what is relatively more important <waive extradition proceedings> <waive a jury trial> <he waived his right to be heard in his own defense> <he waived the ceremony of introduction—Burney> <if art can enthral him, he is willing to waive all question of logic or rationality—Babbitt>

Ana *abdicate, renounce, resign: *abandon, desert, forsake: *forgo, forbear, abnegate, sacrifice: *discard, shed, cast

Ant keep relish n 1 savor, tang, flavor, *taste, smack 2 *taste, palate, gusto, zest

Ana liking, loving, enjoying, relishing (see LIKE): *predilection, partiality, prepossession, prejudice, bias: propensity, *leaning, flair, penchant relish vb fancy, dote, enjoy, *like, love

Ana appreciate, *understand, comprehend: *approve, endorse, sanction relishing *palatable, appetizing, savory, sapid, tasty, toothsome, flavorsome

Ana pleasing, gratifying, delighting, rejoicing, tickling, regaling (see PLEASE)

Con flat, *insipid, jejune, banal, inane reluctant *disinclined, indisposed, hesitant, loath, averse Ana *cautious, circumspect, chary, wary, calculating: *antipathetic, unsympathetic

Con inclined, disposed, predisposed (see INCLINE vb): *eager, avid, keen rely, trust, depend, count, reckon, bank can all mean to have or place full confidence. One relies on or upon someone or something that one believes will never fail in giving or doing what one wishes or expects. Rely usually connotes a judgment based on previous experience and, in the case of persons, actual association <he relies on his father to help him out of trouble> <he never relies on the opinions of others>  <bitter experience soon taught him that lordly patrons are fickle and their favor not to be relied on—Huxley> <he is entitled to one or two men whose personal loyalty he can rely upon—Michener> One trusts, or trusts in or to, when one is completely assured or wholly confident that another will not fail one in need. Trust stresses unquestioning faith which need not be based on actual experience <take short views, hope for the best, and trust in God—Sydney Smith> <because he trusted his own individual strength, he was hostile to planning—Commager> One depends on or upon someone or something when one, with or without previous experience, rests confidently on him or it for support or assistance. Depend may connote a lack of self-sufficiency or even weakness; it often implies so strong a belief or so confident an assumption that the hoped-for support or assistance is forthcoming that no provision for the contrary is made <his diffidence had prevented his depending on his own judgment . . . but his reliance on mine made everything easy—Austen> <the captain of the ship at sea is a remote, inaccessible creature . . . depending on nobody—Conrad> <the man never cared; he was always getting himself into crusades, or feuds, or love, or debt, and depended on the woman to get him out—Henry Adams> One counts or reckons on something when one takes it into one's calculations as certain or assured; the words often imply even more confidence in expectation than depend and may carry even more than the latter's frequent suggestion of possible distress or disaster if one's expectations are not fulfilled <they told me I was going to get a pension. I counted on it. And now they take it away—Upson> <Christian souls who counted on the slaves for their bread and butter—Brooks> <the Oriental writer reckons largely on the intellectual cooperation of his reader—Cheyne> But these terms are often weakened in use to the point that they mean little more than expect <the Soviet economic administration . . . reckons on good rather than poor crops—Van Valkenburg & Huntington> <he had not counted on having to pay for a room—Irwin Shaw> One banks on something or someone in which one's confidence is as strong as it would be in a bank to which one would entrust one's money; hence, the term is appropriate when one wishes to express near absolute certainty without any of the other implications inherent in depend, count, and reckon <the kind of people you could bank on in a tight place—J. D. Adams> <you can bank on his honesty> <had reliable sources of information, and you could bank on what he said>

Ana confide, entrust, *commit: hope, *expect, look, await remain *stay, wait, abide, tarry, linger

Ant depart

remainder, residue, residuum, remains, leavings, rest, balance, remnant can all mean what is left after the subtraction or removal of a part. Remainder is the technical term for the result in the arithmetical process of subtraction (subtract 8 from 10 and the remainder is 2) It is otherwise a comprehensive term for things that remain after the others of a collection, assemblage, or stock have been taken away, used up, or accounted for, or for any persons that remain after the others of the group have departed (he spent the remainder of his life in seclusion) (it took a week to eat up the remainder of their Thanksgiving feast) (the remainder of the exploring party turned homeward) Residue and residuum are often interchanged with remainder, but they usually imply whatever may be left of a former whole, often a previously intact whole, after it has been subjected to some process which depletes or diminishes it but does not annihilate it. Both terms, but especially residue, have acquired specific meanings; thus, a testator, after making certain bequests and providing for the payment of all his debts and charges, usually leaves the residue of his estate to a legatee, or to legatees, of his choice; water after evaporation often leaves a residue of mineral material; the residue of something destroyed by burning is called ash or ashes. Residuum is frequently used in place of residue, especially when evaporation or combustion is implied, and it may be preferred to residue when what is left after a process, whether physical or chemical or mental, is such that it cannot be ignored or left out of account or may have value as a product or significance as a result (the residuum of the process by which sugar is extracted from cane is called molasses) (there is always a residuum of air in the lungs after the most forcible expiration possible) (one might say that every fine story must leave in the mind of the sensitive reader an intangible residuum of pleasure—Cather) Remains is chiefly used of what is left after death, decay, decline, disintegration, or consumption; the term is specifically applied to a corpse, to the unpublished works of a dead author, and to the ruins of an ancient civilization (they buried Keats's remains in the Protestant cemetery in Rome) (appointed executor of a friend's literary remains) (the remains of Pompeii) (the remains of a meal) Leavings usually implies that the valuable or useful parts or things have been culled out and used up or taken away or that what is left has been rejected or discarded (how like the leavings of some vast overturned scrap basket—Brooks) Rest is seldom distinguishable from remainder (except in the latter's technical arithmetical sense), and the two are commonly used interchangeably without loss. However it may be preferred to remainder when it means simply the persons or things not previously referred to or mentioned (as in an enumeration or list) and carries no implication of subtraction, deduction, or depletion (England, as well as the rest of Europe, awaited the effect of the ultimatum with anxiety) (only two stories in this book are interesting and the rest are uniformly dull) Balance is sometimes used in the simple sense of remainder or rest (answers will be given in the balance of this chapter—R. W. Murray) But balance is more often found in technical and especially commercial use; thus, in reference to a banking account, balance usually is applied only to the amount left after withdrawals and other charges have been deducted from the deposits and accumulated interest; in a mercantile charge account, balance is usually applied to the amount owed after credits have been deducted from the debits (a balance in the bank is a sum of money to the depositor's credit) (a balance of a bill is an amount still owed by the debtor) (a balance in hand is an amount left when all assets are reckoned after all liabilities have been discharged) Remnant and its plural remnants are applied to a remainder that is small in size or numbers or that represents only an insignificant part or piece left from a former whole (the remnant of a once powerful army) (a sale of remnants of cloth) (living in Santa Fe on the remnants of the family fortune—Mary Austin) (sleeping bits of woodlands—remnants of the great forests in which Tom had worked as a boy—Anderson)

remains leavings, residue, *remainder, residuum, rest, balance, remnant

remark vb 1 notice, note, observe, perceive, discern, *see, behold, descry, espy, view, survey, contemplate 2 Remark, comment, commentate, animadvert are comparable when they mean to make observations or to pass judgment but they diverge in their implications regarding the motive and the nature of these observations and judgments. Remark usually implies little more than a desire to call attention to something (a bore remarks upon everything he sees) (a metropolitan newspaper remarked that no one today hopes for progress—Bierstedt) Comment stresses interpretation (as by bringing out what is not apparent or by adding details that help to clarify) (the dramatic reader frequently interrupted his performance to comment upon a scene) (neither could be induced to make an oral report on his country or to comment during general discussions—Boesen) Occasionally the word carries some hint of the unfavorable interpretation that is often a feature of the related noun (we cannot help commenting on a certain meanness of culture—T. S. Eliot) Commentate is sometimes used as a substitute for comment to suggest a purely expository or interpretative intent (commentating upon and collating of the works of former times—H. E. Cushman) (emerged from routine commentating to dramatic . . . reporting and interpreting—Life) but the verb is less frequently used than its agent noun, commentator (radio commentators on the news of the day) Animadvert (compare ANIMADVERSION) implies a remarking or commenting on something that may be based on careful judgment (I went to an old-fashioned school. All those who wish to animadvert on education ought to be able to begin that way—Calisher) but this basic implication is often obscured by an emphasis on passing an adverse judgment (we talked of gaming, and animadverted on it with severity—Boswell) remark n Remark, observation, comment, commentary, note, obiter dictum can all denote a brief expression intended to enlighten, clarify, or express an opinion. A remark is a more or less casual expression in speech or writing of an opinion or judgment (as of something seen in passing, something read for the first time, or something to which one's attention has been called); the term usually carries no implication of a final or considered judgment (comments I have to make . . . on the man . . . Brief remarks, absolutely not exhaustive—Mailer) (had a genius for remembering the most telltale gestures as well as the most self-revelatory remarks . . . of his master—Krutch) Observation may suggest a reasoned judgment based on more or less careful scrutiny of the evidence (he apparently was impressed by my observation that disease had made it largely impossible for Indians to smile—Heiser) (intimate letters . . . even when containing valuable critical observations, should not be published in the same volume as achieved works—Wyndham Lewis)

Comment applies to a remark or an observation made in criticism, in interpretation, or in elucidation of something <felt . . . that her own conduct must be carefully regulated so as not to give rise to a breath of adverse comment—Gibbons> <puts in from time to time some critical comment that often extraordinarily clears up any subject one is talking round—Rose Macaulay> Commentary may be used in place of comment for an annotation or gloss of a passage or text. More often, however, it is employed as a collective noun, designating a series of annotations or glosses provided for the elucidation of a text or literary work <the translation is good, but . . . its usefulness could have been . . . enhanced by a commentary—Brit. Book News> Even more often the word is used of a running sequence of oral comments (as on a sports event or the news) made on radio or television or sometimes accompanying a film projection <we have the commentary, which takes its shape from the day's news, giving us a chronicle with pauses for explanation, interpretation, or speculation—Milton Crane> Note applies chiefly to a written or printed comment or gloss on a particular point (as the historical origin of an idea, the exact meaning of a term, or the source of the writer's information) made either by the reader of an article or book on the margin of a page or by the author or editor to be printed at the bottom of the page (then called a footnote) or, with other comments or glosses, in an appendix <the author . . . was advised . . . to subjoin some few explanatory notes—Gray> Note is also applicable to a brief statement jotted down (as one of the minutes of a meeting, a memorandum of a point developed or to be developed in a speech, or of a point made by a speaker or lecturer) <I've . . . jotted down a few revealing notes on the bride as I knew her—Salinger> Obiter dictum is applied in law to an incidental opinion delivered by a judge on a matter bearing upon but not material to the case being tried, and therefore having no binding force. In general use it is usually applied to a remark or observation made more or less on the spur of the moment and not intended to be taken as a final opinion or definitive statement <their tendency to wander off into obiter dicta on the iniquities of music publishers—New Yorker> <his obiter dicta were echoed from pulpits—S. H. Adams> remarkable *noticeable, prominent, outstanding, conspicuous, salient, signal, striking, arresting Ana *exceptional: important, significant, weighty, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE); singular, unique, peculiar, *strange remedial restorative, *curative, sanative, corrective Ana healing, curing (see CURE vb)

remedy n Remedy, cure, medicine, medicament, medication, specific, physic are comparable when they mean something prescribed or used for the treatment of disease. Remedy applies to a substance or treatment that is known or regarded as effective in bringing about recovery or restoration of health or the normal functioning of the body <patent medicines and cold remedies>  <much has been written on the subject of fear and many inspirational and emotional remedies have been suggested—Reilly> <psychoanalysis as a remedy for mental ills> Cure, more positive than remedy in implying complete recovery or restoration of health, is a common term to designate anything advocated as being or thought to be conducive to complete recovery <the climate was advertised during the eighties as a cure for tuberculosis—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.> <reaching into the medicine cabinet for a cure for the baby—Reilly> <all current surgical intervention in mental disease is not proposed as a cure—Collier's Yr. Bk.> Medicine is the ordinary term for a substance or preparation taken internally in treating a disturbance of the normal functions of the body <most medicines are alleviative in their action and not definitely curative—Morrison> <the witch doctor is there to give them some magic medicine to drink—Frazer> Medicament and medication are general terms used especially by doctors and pharmacists for all medicinal substances and preparations whether taken internally or applied externally <doctors admit that they can do more for their patients now that they do not have to worry about the size of their bills and the cost of medicaments—New Statesman> <made the rounds of her five patients with a medicament of her own—a quart of Grandfather's best bonded bourbon—Maxwell> Sometimes, however, medicament is applied specifically to a medicinal substance or compound that is the active ingredient of a remedy <different medicaments may be added for specific types of ulcers: sulfanilamide for streptococci, ethyl aminobenzoate for painful ulcers—Science News Letter> and medication, to a compounded remedy containing one or more medicaments together with adjuvants (as flavoring agents and vehicles) <ordinary cold cream or any similar medication—Fishbein> Specific is applied to something, usually a drug, known to be effective in curing a specific disease <various rheumatism specifics containing cinchophen, found to have notably injurious effects on the liver—Encyc. Americana> Physic is an old-fashioned equivalent of medicine <his first revolt against authority took the form of refusing physic when he was ill—Replier> but in modern use it has specialized to become synonymous with purgative or cathartic.

remedy vb 1 *cure, heal 2 *correct, rectify, emend, amend, redress, reform, revise Ana *relieve, assuage, alleviate, lighten, mitigate: restore, *renew, refresh Con *intensify, aggravate, heighten remember, recollect, recall, remind, reminisce, bethink, mind all carry as their basic meaning to put an image or idea from the past into the mind. Remember usually implies a putting oneself in mind of something. The term carries so strong an implication of keeping in one's memory that it often implies no conscious effort or willing <he remembers every detail of that occurrence as though it happened yesterday> <the average reader of the newspaper or short story reads to forget, not to remember—Eliot> <years—so many of them that no one remembered the exact number—Roark Bradford> Recollect implies a gathering of what has been scattered; it is distinguished from remember in presupposing a letting go from rather than a retaining in one's memory and therefore implies a bringing back, sometimes with effort, to one's own mind what has not been in it for an appreciable period of time <she tried to recollect some instance of goodness, some distinguished trait of integrity or benevolence, that might rescue him from the attacks of Mr. Darcy—Austen> <beasts and babies remember, that is, recognize: man alone recollects—Coleridge> <certain phrases . . . which I have often found myself recollecting from a distant past—Lucas> When used reflexively, recollect usually implies a remembrance of something (as one's manners or intention) one has forgotten (as from eagerness, excitement, anger, or haste) <Catherine, recollecting herself, grew ashamed of her eagerness—Austen> <he pointed a foot; recollected himself; took it back—Sackville-West> Recall often comes close to recollect in implying volition or an effort to bring back what has been forgotten, but it differs from recollect in suggesting a summons rather than a process of thought; often, also, it connotes a telling of what is brought back <let me recall a case within my own recent experience—Mencken) <I will permit my memory to recall the vision of you, by all my dreams attended—Millay> But recall may imply, as recollect does not, an agent or an agency other than oneself, and in such use suggests the awakening or evocation of a memory (forty years later Mr. Wilson recalled this circumstance to my memory—Replier) <that tree always awakened pleasant memories, recalling a garden in the south of France where he used to visit young cousins—Cather> Remind implies the evocation of something forgotten, or not at the time in one's mind, by some compelling power or agent. Often also it strongly implies a jogging of one's memory. Usually the agent or agency is someone or something external that causes one to remember <he reminded me of my promise> <this incident reminded him of another and similar one> <he reminded himself that he had made an appointment for eight o'clock> <he found it necessary to keep on reminding himself that the time was short and the work must be finished according to schedule> Reminisce can imply the process of recollecting or of recalling something <how do people remember anything? How do they reminisce?—Lang> but often it suggests a nostalgic dredging up and retelling of events and circumstances of one's past life <well, anyhow, we old fellows can reminisce—Garland> <he cut me short to reminisce of his schoolmates—Hervey Allen> Bethink, a commonly reflexive verb little used today, can distinctively imply recollection or recalling after reflection or a reminding oneself by thinking back <I have bethought me of another fault—Shak.> <to be-think themselves how little they may owe to their own merit—Helps> Mind (see also TEND) in the sense of remember is sometimes chosen to convey a dialectal feeling of simplicity or quaintness <I mind him coming down the street—Tennyson> <the lads you leave will mind you till Ludlow tower shall fall—Housman> <I can mind her well as a nursing mother—a comely woman in her day—Quiller-Couch>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ant forget —Con ignore, disregard, *neglect, overlook remembrance 1 *memory, recollection, reminiscence, mind, souvenir

Ant forgetfulness

2 Remembrance, remembrancer, reminder, memorial, memento, token, keepsake, souvenir denote something that serves to keep a person or thing in mind. Remembrance and the less common remembrancer are applied to an object which causes one to call back to mind someone or something, especially someone dead or far away or an event or occurrence of the past, often the distant past <I desire your acceptance of a ring, a small remembrance of my father—Swift> <every article she possessed . . . is separately bequeathed as an affectionate remembrance—Ellis> <the apricot scent of the gorse, which was ever afterwards to be the remembrancer of their love—Kaye-Smith> Reminder suggests something (as a memorandum) that keeps one from forgetting; the term need not suggest a wish to remember <occasional sawmills, reminders of the once-active lumber industry—Amer. Guide Series: Me.> Memorial suggests a wish or desire to preserve the memory of something (as a person or event) and therefore applies to a reminder (as a building, a monument, an endowment, or an observance) that is of a kind fitted to endure <the Lincoln Memorial in Washington> <the memorials of the rule of the Pharaohs are still engraved on the rocks of Libya—Newman> <it was the white man's way to assert himself in any landscape . . . to leave some mark or memorial of his sojourn—Cather> The remaining words more consistently suggest a personal association between the thing intended as a remembrance or reminder and the person, experience, or place to be remembered. Memento typically applies to something small or trivial kept to satisfy a desire to renew the remembrance of some past interest; often the word suggests that the thing itself has no longer any value <the drawer was filled with mementos of her girlhood—dance programs, love letters, a glove> Token often refers to something treasured as a memento, but it usually denotes a gift presented to one as a sign of affection, esteem, or regret at parting  <I leave in every house some little token, a rosary or a religious picture—Cather> Keepsake represents the attitude of the receiver rather than of the giver; otherwise it differs little in general use from token and memento <perhaps the strongest keepsake is a slice of her . . . wedding cake—Green Peyton> But keepsake may apply specifically to a giftbook, often one made up for a particular group or occasion or as a specimen of fine printing. Souvenir (see also MEMORY) usually implies a material reminder not necessarily given nor received that remains or is kept as a memento (as of a place visited or of an experience worthy of remembrance) <pockmarks in the masonry . . . are souvenirs of the bomb that exploded there—John Brooks>

Ana *gift, present, favor

remembrancer *remembrance, reminder, memorial, memento, token, keepsake, souvenir remind *remember, recollect, recall, reminisce, bethink, mind

Ana *suggest, intimate, hint, imply reminder *remembrance, remembrancer, memorial, memento, token, keepsake, souvenir

Ana memorandum (see LETTER): intimation, hint, suggestion (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST) reminisce *remember, recollect, recall, remind, bethink, mind reminiscence *memory, remembrance, recollection, mind, souvenir remiss lax, slack, neglectful, *negligent

Ana *careless, heedless, thoughtless: *forgetful, oblivious, unmindful: indolent, slothful, faineant, *lazy

Ant scrupulous remit 1 pardon, forgive, *excuse, condone

Ana *exculpate, exonerate, acquit, vindicate, absolve 2 forward, transmit, route, ship, *send, dispatch remnant *remainder, residue, residuum, remains, leavings, rest, balance

Ana *part, piece, fragment, segment, section: vestige, *trace remonstrate expostulate, *object, protest, kick

Ana oppose, combat, *resist, withstand, fight: *criticize, denounce, reprobate remorse *penitence, repentance, contrition, attrition, compunction

Ana regret, *sorrow, grief: *qualm, scruple, compunction, demur remote *distant, far, faraway, far-off, removed

Ant close

remove vb *move, shift, transfer

Ana convey, *carry, bear, transport, transmit: eradicate, extirpate, uproot (see EXTERMINATE) removed remote, far-off, faraway, far, *distant remunerate *pay, compensate, satisfy, reimburse, indemnify, repay, recompense

Ana award, accord, vouchsafe, *grant remunerative *paying, gainful, lucrative, profitable

Ana handsome, bountiful, munificent, *liberal: lavish, prodigal, *profuse rend vb split, cleave, rive, rip, *tear

Ana *separate, divide, sever, sunder rendezvous tryst, *engagement, appointment, assignation, date renegade, apostate, turncoat, recreant, backslider are strongly derogatory terms denoting a person who forsakes his faith or party, a cause, or an allegiance, and aligns himself with another. Renegade, originally applied to a Christian who became a Mohammedan, came to mean one who completely denies all he has been brought up to believe by going over to the enemy or the opposition (<venom the renegade can summon up against his former beliefs and associates—New Yorker) Apostate stresses the giving up, either voluntarily or under compulsion, of something (as one's religious beliefs or political or intellectual principles) one has formerly professed and the acceptance of others which are usually, by implication, of a less exalted character. Apostate therefore usually connotes surrender, but it need not, as renegade often does, imply treachery or hostility to what is forsaken (<that incomparable apostate from intelligence—Laski) <prepared to welcome back even the apostate, if he shows repentance and remorse—Bienenstok) Turncoat, a contemptuous designation, differs from renegade and apostate chiefly in its implications that profession of faith or allegiance is regarded lightly and that convenience or profit rather than conviction motivates the change (<an American who went abroad and stayed, without an official excuse . . . was regarded as a turncoat—Brooks) Recreant, like apostate, implies a retreat from a stand one has taken, but it stresses cowardice and meanspiritedness, and usually connotes treachery to the party or cause once supported (<all such recreants as either refused to sail with the colonists or having sailed with them should afterwards desert—Frazier) Backslider, in contrast to the other terms, usually implies a previous conversion and a reversion to the old indifference or the old beliefs; thus, a convert who goes back to his earlier state morally or to his earlier religious affiliation is regarded as a backslider by one adherent to the position he held as a convert.

Ana *rebel, insurgent, iconoclast: deserter, forsaker, abandoner (see corresponding verbs at ABANDON); *heretic, schismatic renew, restore, refresh, renovate, refurbish, rejuvenate are comparable when they mean to give a person or thing that has become old, worn, or exhausted the qualities or appearance of what is fresh or new or young. Renew is so inclusive a term that it may imply a making something new to replace the old that has died, decayed, or disintegrated (<each spring the trees renew their foliage) <I think I will be extravagant enough to renew my entire wardrobe—Shaw) or a remarking so that it seems like new of a thing which has depleted its vitality or force or has lost its freshness (<they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength—Isa 40:31) <to renew and rebuild civilization, and save the world from suicide—T.S. Eliot) or a making a fresh start (<renewed his efforts) <renewed his offer of assistance) Restore (see also RESTORE 2) definitely implies a return to an original state or to a prime condition typically after depletion, exhaustion, or illness (<restored his vigor) <restored his good humor) <a long rest restored him to health) or after being marred, injured, or wrecked (as by passage of time, use, accident, or assault in war) (<Rheims Cathedral was restored after World War I) <an attempt to restore a picture) or after the loss of a vital or essential quality or character (<I quench thee, thou flaming minister, I can again thy former light restore, should I repent me—Shak.) Refresh often implies the supplying of something necessary to restore lost strength, animation, or power (<sleep refreshes both body and mind) (<a cool, refreshing drink) or to make up for what has been lost through forgetfulness or disuse (<he made it his business to see Dr. Lavendar, and be refreshed as to facts—Deland) Equally often the term implies the imparting of freshness to something by or as if by cooling, wetting, or allaying thirst; it then usually connotes an enlivening, invigorating, or exhilarating effect (<the springs . . . under the earth . . . break forth to refresh and gladden the life of flowers and the life of man—Binyon) <it refreshes me to find a woman so charmingly direct—Bromfield) Renovate and refurbish differ from the preceding terms chiefly in being referred almost exclusively to material things and as a consequence in not having the poetic connotations so often found in renew, restore, and refresh. Renovate is often used in place of renew when cleansing, repairing, or rebuilding is implied (<renovate an old colonial house) <drawn into a sequence of violent episodes that cause him to renovate his attitudes toward life and death—Martin Levin) while refurbish implies the restoration of newness or freshness by or as if by scouring or polishing and suggests here little more than a freshening up of the appearance or the external aspects of a thing (<refurbish an old table by sandpapering and waxing it) and therefore occasionally is used in depreciation (<hoped to reform national conduct . . . by reforming our vocabulary But it does seem a good bit to achieve with nothing more tangible than a refurbished vocabulary—Laird) <the refurbishing of trite thoughts is the sole accomplishment of many would-be poets) Rejuvenate implies a restoration of youthful vigor, powers, appearance, or activities; sometimes it merely suggests a giving a youthful aspect to something old (<he . . . had the air of an old bachelor trying to rejuvenate himself—Irving) <outworn themes may be rejuvenated by taking on contemporary garb—Lowes)

Ant adherent

Ana *mend, repair, rebuild: reform, revise, rectify, *correct

Con exhaust, *deplete, drain, impoverish, bankrupt renounce 1 *abdicate, resign

Ana sacrifice, abnegate, *forgo, forbear, eschew

Ant arrogate: covet (sense 2) —Con usurp, preempt, appropriate (see ARROGATE)

2 *abjure, forswear, recant, retract

Ana reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE vb): *forgo, forbear, eschew

Ant confess: claim renovate refurbish, rejuvenate, *renew, restore, refresh

Ana *mend, repair, patch: *clean, cleanse renown *fame, honor, glory, celebrity, reputation, repute, notoriety, éclat

Ana prestige, authority, *influence, weight, credit

Con contempt, despite, disdain, scorn (see under DE-SPISE): disrepute, *disgrace, dishonor, obloquy renowned *famous, famed, celebrated, eminent, illustrious

Ana praised, acclaimed, lauded, extolled (see PRAISE): outstanding, signal, prominent (see NOTICEABLE) rent vb *hire, let, lease, charter rent n *breach, break, split, schism, rupture, rift

Ana separation, severance, division (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE): tearing or tear, cleaving or cleavage (see corresponding verbs at TEAR): interruption, gap, hiatus (see BREAK) renunciation, abnegation, self-abnegation, self-denial can all mean voluntary surrender or putting aside of something desired or desirable. Renunciation (see also under renounce at ABDICATE) commonly connotes personal sacrifice for a higher end (as the good of others, or moral discipline, or the attainment of the highest good) <she had learnt the lesson of renunciation, and was as familiar with the wreck of each day's wishes as with the diurnal setting of the sun—Hardy> Historically abnegation is scarcely distinguishable from self-abnegation, although the trend is toward preference for the latter or its equivalent abnegation of self. Both words more often denote a quality of character than an act, and both imply a high degree of unselfishness or a capacity for putting aside all personal interests or desires <individuals who are willing to abandon the pleasures of the world for lepers are rare, but, when found, usually exhibit complete abnegation of self—Heiser> <his self-abnegation prevented him from taking credit for the victory—Fitzpatrick> Self-denial, unlike abnegation, is usually applied to an act or a practice. Though it means denial of oneself or forbearance from gratifying one's own desires, it does not necessarily connote nobility in the act, its motive, or its end and is therefore applicable to a larger range of instances than either abnegation or renunciation <her still face, with the mouth closed tight from suffering and disillusion and self-denial—D. H. Lawrence>

Ana sacrificing or sacrifice, forgoing, forbearing, eschewing (see FORGO)

repair vb *mend, patch, rebuild

Ana remedy, redress, amend, emend, rectify, *correct; *renew, renovate, refurbish, restore reparation, redress, amends, restitution, indemnity are comparable when they mean a return for something lost or suffered, usually through the fault of another. Reparation implies an attempt to restore things to their normal or sound condition. It is chiefly applied to recompense for material losses or damages or reimbursement for repairs <war reparations> <seek reparation from the state for flood damages>, but it is applied also to atonement for an offense, especially one incurring injury to others <educated . . . at royal expense as reparation for the death of his father—Nixon> <I am sensible of the scandal I have given by my loose writings, and make what reparation I am able—Dryden> Redress heightens the implications of a grievance and therefore connotes compensation or satisfaction, or even, at times, retaliation or vengeance <victims of the swindle sought redress in the courts> <redress is always to be had against oppression, by punishing the immediate agents—Johnson> <the civil law by which contracts are enforced, and redress given for slanders and injuries—Shaw> <particular grievances call not only for redress, but also for the formulation of universally valid reasons why they should be redressed—Huxley> Amends is as strong as redress in its suggestion of due satisfaction but weaker in its implication of a grievance. It often implies a correction or restoration of a just balance <if I did take the kingdom from your sons, to make amends, I'll give it to your daughter—Shak.> <love, freedom, comrades, surely make amends for all these thorns through which we walk to death—Masefield> Restitution implies the restoration in kind or in value of what has been unlawfully taken  <expressing willingness to offer restitution to those Jews who had been robbed . . . by the Third Reich—Hirsch> Indemnity is the specific term for money given (as by an insurance company) in reparation for losses (as from fire, accident, illness, or disaster) or for payments made by a defeated country for losses caused by war <an attempt to make palatable to the country what . . . amounts to imposing a war indemnity upon it—Schumpeter> Ana expiation, atonement (see under EXPIATE): compensation, remuneration, recompensing or recompense (see corresponding verbs at PAY)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

repartee *wit, humor, irony, sarcasm, satire

Ana retort, rejoinder, response (see under ANSWER vb):

*badinage, persiflage, rallery repay *pay, compensate, remunerate, recompense, satisfy, reimburse, indemnify

Ana balance, offset, *compensate: accord, award (see GRANT vb) repeal vb *revoke, reverse, rescind, recall

Ana abrogate, *annul, void: cancel, expunge (see ERASE) repeat vb 1 Repeat, iterate, reiterate, ingeminate can all mean to say again. Repeat, the word in ordinary use, may apply to what is said or uttered or done again, whether once or many or an indefinite number of times <repeat a command> <the teacher repeated her question not once but three times> <wondered what would have happened if he had repeated his earlier tantrum—Purdy> <repeat an attempt to swim the river> <repeat a step in a process> <wish to repeat a pleasant experience> Repeat sometimes implies a change in the speaker or doer <please do not repeat what I have told you> <the teacher asked the children to repeat the verses after her> <>falsehoods and half-truths . . . uncritically repeated from writer to writer—Altick> Iterate usually implies one repetition after another, especially of something that is said <the bird in the dusk iterating, iterating, his one phrase—Aiken> There is very little difference between iterate and reiterate, except that iterate occasionally refers to a second saying or uttering or sometimes doing and reiterate carries an even more emphatic implication of manifold repetitions; consequently the two words are often used together when insistency is implied <scientific research iterates and reiterates one moral . . . the greatness of little things—Sat. Review (London)> When only one term is desired to make this point, reiterate is especially appropriate <over and over again, in a somber, bullfrog voice, he reiterates his favorite theme—Armbrister> Ingeminate, a somewhat uncommon term, implies reiteration for special emphasis or impressiveness. It therefore seldom implies indefinite repetition but rather duplication or triplication for the sake of the effect produced <that peace-loving habit of mind . . . which made so many nations, in the years before 1939, ingeminate "Peace" when there was no peace—Ernest Barker> <"He was the tramp," he ingeminated. "He was the tramp."—Buchan> Ana *return, recur, revert, recrudescence: rehearse, recite, recount, *relate

2 *quote, cite repellent *repugnant, abhorrent, distasteful, obnoxious, invidious

Ana *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting

Ant attractive: pleasing —Con alluring, charming, captivating, bewitching (see under ATTRACT): enticing, seductive, tempting, luring (see corresponding verbs at LURE) repentance *penitence, contrition, attrition, remorse, compunction

Ana regret, *sorrow, grief

Con complacency, self-complacency, self-satisfaction (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT)

repercuss reverberate, recoil, *rebound, resile replace, displace, supplant, supersede are rarely interchangeable terms, but they can carry the same basic meaning—to put a person or thing out of his or its place or into the place of another. Replace implies supplying a substitute for what has been lost, destroyed, used up, worn out, or dismissed  <replace a servant> <constant flow of conversation from dawn till dark . . . only to be replaced by a night shift of resounding snores—Theodore Sturgeon) or it may imply a preferring of one of two or more things that could satisfy a need (nor would I admit that the human actor can be replaced by a marionette—T. S. Eliot) and sometimes it implies a putting back into a proper or assigned place (replace a book on a shelf) (the guard soon replaced his blunderbuss in his arm-chest—Dickens) Displace implies a dislodging, ousting, or putting or crowding out followed by a replacing. This dual implication of putting out of place and of replacing is the chief distinction of displace in contrast with replace (the weight of water displaced by a floating body is equal to that of the displacing body) However one of these ideas is sometimes stressed more than the other so that the emphasis is either on ousting (American democracy was the response to challenge of Europeans displaced to a continental wilderness and cut loose from many ancient ties—Dorothy Thompson) or on replacing (as he became more conscious of the bar accounts, of the kitchen expenses, the benevolence was displaced by calculation—Gorer) Supplant basically implies a dispossessing or ousting by craft, fraud, or treachery and a taking or usurping of the place, possessions, or privileges of the one dispossessed or ousted (you three from Milan did supplant good Prospero—Shak.) (the pretty young wife finds herself in the humiliating position of having been supplanted by a brisk, unlovely woman—Bulleit) (eager to succeed Louis and even to supplant him—Belloc) But supplant sometimes implies an uprooting and replacing rather than a dispossessing and usurping; in such cases trickery or treachery is no longer implied (his tutor tried to supplant his fears by arousing his sense of curiosity) (don't claim that the Divine revelation has been supplanted . . . but that it has been amplified—Mackenzie) (the architect, to serve the vogue, uptilts greenhouses thirty stories high on stilts, supplanting walls of stone with sheets of glass—Hillyer) Supersede implies a causing of another to be set aside, abandoned, or rejected as inferior, no longer of use or value, or obsolete (the old-fashioned fishing luggers with their varicolored sails have been superseded by motorboats—Amer. Guide Series: La.) (that is the worst of erudition—that the next scholar sucks the few drops of honey that you have accumulated, sets right your blunders, and you are superseded—Benson)

Ana restore, *renew: *change, alter: *recover, regain, recoup, retrieve replete *full, complete, plenary

Ana abundant, *plentiful: sated, satiated, surfeited (see SATIATE) replica facsimile, *reproduction, duplicate, copy, carbon copy, transcript reply vb *answer, respond, rejoin, retort

Con *ask, question, interrogate, query, inquire, catechize, examine: *accuse, charge, impeach, indict: salute, greet, *address reply n answer, response, rejoinder, retort (see under ANSWER vb 1)

Ana acknowledgment, recognition (see corresponding verbs at ACKNOWLEDGE)

Con asking, requesting or request, solicitation (see corresponding verbs at ASK): accusation, charging or charge (see corresponding verbs at ACCUSE): *argument, dispute: *greeting, salute report n 1 Report, rumor, gossip, hearsay are comparable when they mean common talk or an instance of it that spreads rapidly. Report is the most general and least explicit of these terms; it need not imply an authentic basis for the common talk, but it often suggests some ground for the belief unless specifically qualified (as by false, untrue, or wild) (my brother Jaques he keeps at school and report speaks goldenly of his profit—Shak.) (denies the common report that he ghosted the whole document—Bliven b.1889) (spread a false report) Rumor applies to a report that flies about, often gains in detail as it spreads, but lacks both an evident source and clear-cut evidence of its truth (almost every newspaper issue brought rumors of reduction in their salaries—Heiser) (we make our blunders . . . as rumor has it that you make your own—Cardozo) Gossip applies to idle talk, chiefly about personal affairs and behavior, that is the source of or means of propagating rumors or reports, and is sometimes used in the sense of a rumor or report (neighborhood gossip) (my presence killed the gossip on her tongue—Barrie) (gossip about the party leader and his beautiful blond niece was inevitable—Shirer) (this girl's . . . intimate gossip about well-known people—Wouk) Hearsay carries a strong implication of the means by which a report or rumor comes to one, that is, by hearing rather than by seeing or knowing directly (the qualifications and doubts that distinguish critical science from hearsay knowledge—Cohen) It is sometimes extended to a report or rumor based upon such hearsay (the hearsays bandied about by the medievalists—Behrman)

Ana talking or talk, conversing or conversation, speaking or speech (see corresponding verbs at SPEAK): chatting, chattering or chatter, prating (see CHAT): *news, tidings, intelligence, advice

2 *account, story, chronicle, version

3 dispatch, message, note, *letter, epistle, missive, memorandum report vb *relate, narrate, describe, state, recite, recount, rehearse

Ana *communicate, impart: *reveal, disclose, discover, tell, divulge repose n *rest, relaxation, leisure, ease, comfort

Ana calmness, tranquility, serenity, placidity, peacefulness (see corresponding adjectives at CALM): refreshment, restoration, renewal (see corresponding verbs at RENEW)

Con *work, labor, toil, grind, drudgery: *stress, strain: agitation, perturbation, discomposure (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

reprehend *criticize, censure, reprobate, condemn, denounce, blame

Ana *reprove, rebuke, reprimand, admonish, reproach, chide: *scold, upbraid, berate, rate represent, depict, portray, delineate, picture, limn can mean to present an image or lifelike imitation of (as in art).

Represent implies a placing before the mind as if real or as if living through the medium of one of the arts (as painting, sculpture, or literature); the term may imply either a presentation of reality or of imagined reality or a treatment of an abstraction or a spiritual being in terms of real things (the painting represents a spring scene) (the Holy Ghost is represented as a dove in the Pentecostal window) (there are several classic procedures for representing visual images by means of music—Virgil Thomson) (paintings . . . to produce a specific aesthetic sensation rather than merely to represent nature—Current Biog.) Depict, primarily meaning to represent in terms of painting, may stress the implication of graphic, vivid representation more than the form of art employed; it is applied to such arts as literature or drawing which suggest color and detail in some other way than by pigments (painters are sometimes accused of calling upon their imagination when they are really depicting fact—Jefferies) (a novelist noted especially for his skill in depicting character) (drama may be achieved by action as well as by speech. Action can tell a story . . . and depict every kind of human emotion, without the aid of a word—Justice Holmes) Portray suggests the making of a detailed representation of individual persons, or of specific characters, emotions, or qualities (as by drawing, engraving, painting, acting, or describing) (in literature are portrayed all human passions, desires, and aspirations —Eliot) (a star who unquestionably conveyed to audiences the very essence of the character he was portraying —J. F. Wharton) Delineate (see also SKETCH) basically implies representation by an art (as engraving or drawing) that uses lines to gain its effects, but, like portray, it is often used to stress care for accuracy of detail and fullness of outline (his brush did its work with a steady and sure stroke that indicated command of his materials. He could delineate whatever he elected with technical skill—Jefferies) Picture less than any of these terms implies the employment of a particular art; it emphasizes the ability to realize a thing in a pictorial or vivid way and may either imply graphic description (those villages Mark Twain . . . has pictured for us—Brooks) or sensible representation in any form (her emotions are all pictured in her face) or, sometimes with “to oneself,” mere imaginative power (the girl was in his mind a lot . . . he had always had a good imagination. He pictured her as she came down the stairs in the morning—Malamud) (they tried, in their sympathetic grief, to picture to themselves all that she had been through in her life—Bennett) Limn is used chiefly as an equivalent of depict or delineate, often implying the art of painting vividly and with color (since not every ancestral likeness had been limned by the brush of a maestro, dignity . . . sometimes seemed merely bovine —Warren) (had too much taste to bare all these grubby secret details, but she limned a general picture for him —Stafford)

Ana exhibit, display, *show; *suggest, hint; *sketch, outline, draft, delineate: describe, narrate, *relate representative n *delegate, deputy repress *suppress

Ana *restrain, curb, check, inhibit: subdue, overcome (see CONQUER) reprimand vb *reprove, rebuke, reproach, admonish, chide

Ana upbraid, rate, berate, *scold: censure, denounce, blame, reprehend, reprobate, *criticize reprinting *edition, impression, printing, reissue reprisal *retaliation, retribution, revenge, vengeance reproach vb chide, admonish, *reprove, rebuke, reprimand

Ana *criticize, reprehend, censure, reprobate: *warn, forewarn, caution: counsel, advise (see under ADVICE)

reprobate vb censure, reprehend, *criticize, blame, condemn, denounce

Ana *decry, derogate, detract, depreciate, disparage: reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE vb): reprimand, rebuke, *reprove reprobate adj *abandoned, profligate, dissolute

Ana *vicious, iniquitous, corrupt, degenerate: *blame-worthy, guilty, culpable

Ant elect (in theology) —Con righteous, virtuous, *moral, ethical reprobate n *outcast, castaway, derelict, pariah, untouchable

Ana sinner, offender (see corresponding nouns at OFFENSE): transgressor, trespasser (see corresponding nouns at BREACH): *villain, scoundrel, blackguard reproduce propagate, *generate, engender, breed, beget, get, sire, procreate

Ana produce, *bear, yield: multiply (see INCREASE) reproduction, duplicate, copy, carbon copy, facsimile, replica, transcript are comparable when they mean one thing which closely or essentially resembles something that has already been made, produced, or written. Reproduction may imply identity in material or substance, in size, and in quality, or it may imply differences, provided that the imitation gives a fairly true likeness of the original; thus, a reproduction of an Elizabethan theater may be on a very small scale; a reproduction of a Sheraton chair may be in cherry rather than in the mahogany of the original (the present director, on tour in Western Canada, discovered the need for reproductions of Canadian pictures—Report on Nat'l Development (Ottawa)) (the late works look finer in reproduction than they do in the original—Kitson) A duplicate is a double of something else; the word may be used of something that exactly corresponds to or is the counterpart of any object whatsoever (a duplicate of a bill of sale) (this postage stamp is a duplicate of one in my collection) (make out a receipt in duplicate) (plans a movie of the salvage operations, and will sail a duplicate vessel on the course taken—Current Biog.) A copy is a reproduction of something else, often without the exact correspondence which belongs to a duplicate; however copy, rather than duplicate (which logically implies that there is but a single reproduction), is applicable to any one of a number of things printed from the same type format, struck off from the same die, or made in the same mold (a thousand copies of a magazine) (production costs of popular records vary, of course, but a sales figure of sixty thousand copies is the . . . break-even point—Robert Rice) (modern copies of sixteenth-century chess sets—New Yorker) (mimeographed copies of a letter) Carbon copy stresses the idea of exactness found in duplicate (the full moon rising like an immense red carbon copy of the earth seen from a distance—Peggy Bennett) (the civilians . . . seem well-content to let our foreign policy be a carbon copy of the strategy worked out by the military—Atlantic) A facsimile is a close but usually not exact reproduction; the term may imply differences (as in scale) but it implies as close an imitating in details and material as possible or feasible (the heavy chandeliers were loaded with flattened brass balls, magnified facsimiles of which crowned the uprights of the . . . massively-framed chairs —Shaw) (a screen cast . . . presses hard for emotional impact. What results is less a facsimile than a parody of the original—Hatch) (looking for an intellectual equal, or at least the facsimile of an intellectual equal—Mailer) Replica applies specifically to an exact reproduction of a statue, a painting, or a building made by or under the direction of the same artist, architect, or artisan; thus, one does not speak accurately of a modern replica of the Winged Victory, but of a modern reproduction; one may speak of the confusing tendency of some Renaissance artists to make replicas of their paintings. However the word is often used merely to emphasize very close likeness (collection of miniature sports cars. Tiny, Swiss-made replicas, they were precision machined and finely detailed, all scaled to perfection—Terry Southern) Transcript applies only to a written, typed, or printed copy made directly from an original or from shorthand notes (a stenographer's transcript of a letter) (ask for a transcript of a will) reprove, rebuke, reprimand, admonish, reproach, chide can all mean to criticize adversely, especially in order to warn of or to correct a fault. To reprove is to blame or censure, often kindly or without harshness and usually in the hope of correcting the fault (his voice sounded so bright and cheerful . . . that she could not find it in her heart to reprove him—Rölvaa) Rebuke implies sharp or stern reproof (he could not evade the persistent conviction that she was the Church speaking, rebuking him—Hervey) Reprimand suggests reproof that is formal, and often public or official (a word . . . which the Duke of Wellington, or Admiral Stopford, would use in reprimanding an officer—Macaulay) Admonish stresses the implication of warning or counsel (count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother—2 Thess 3:15) (a highly sensitive dog, and cannot bear reproof. Perhaps this is because he is not admonished sufficiently at home—Littell) Reproach and chide imply dissatisfaction or displeasure; reproach usually connotes criticism or faultfinding; chide implies mild reproof or a slight scolding (if he came home late, and she reproached him, he frowned and turned on her in an overbearing way—D. H. Lawrence) (it is not fitting for men of dignity to threaten and reproach because women have had a falling out—Shirley Jackson) (the gentle irony with which he chides the overzealousness of modern critics—Joseph Frank) Ana *criticize, reprehend, censure, reprobate: chasten, correct, discipline, *punish repudiate 1 spurn, reject, refuse, *decline Ana renounce, *abjure: *forgo, forbear, eschew, sacrifice Ant adopt —Con *acknowledge, own, admit, avow, confess: embrace, espouse (see ADOPT) 2 *disclaim, disavow, disown, disallow Ana *abandon, desert, forsake: *discard, cast Ant own —Con *acknowledge, admit, avow, confess: *grant, concede, allow repugnant 1 Repugnant, repellent, abhorrent, distasteful, obnoxious, invidious are comparable when they mean so alien or unlikable as to arouse antagonism and aversion. Repugnant is applied to something so incompatible with one's ideas, principles, or tastes as to stir up resistance and loathing (soon the pressures of male eyes, eyes expressing sex . . . became repugnant to her—Peggy Bennett) (the nonlegal methods of the magistrates in dispensing judgment, so repugnant to the spirit of the common law—Parrington) Repellent usually implies a forbidding or unlovely character in something that causes one to back away from it (the mediocre was repellent to them; cant and sentiment made them sick—Rose Macaulay) (what he does say is that hanging is barbarous and sickening, that electrocution and the gas chamber are no less brutal and repellent—Rovere) Abhorrent (see also HATEFUL) is applied to something that is incapable of association or existence with something else, and it often implies profound antagonism (dictatorial methods abhorrent to American ways of thinking—Forum) Distasteful is applied to something that one instinctively shrinks from not because it in itself is necessarily unlikable but because it is contrary to one's particular taste or inclination (even the partition of the world into the animate and the inanimate is distasteful to science, which dislikes any lines that cannot be crossed—Inge) (she finds it distasteful to think of using the personal belongings of . . . previous occupants—Kenneth Roberts) Obnoxious is applied to what is so highly objectionable, usually on personal grounds, that one cannot endure the sight or presence of it or him with equanimity (the nation had sulked itself into a state of tacit rebellion against the obnoxious Volstead Law—S. H. Adams) (an opportunity to . . . make himself generally obnoxious—Simeon Ford) Invidious is applied to something that cannot be used (as a word) or made (as a distinction) or undertaken (as a task or project) without arousing or creating ill will, envy, or resentment (the invidious word usury—Hume) (what I would urge, therefore, is that no invidious distinction should be made between the Old Learning and the New—J. R. Lowell) (undertake the invidious task of deciding what is to be approved and what is to be condemned—Daniel Jones) Ana foreign, alien, extraneous, *extrinsic: uncongenial, incompatible, incongruous, *inconsonant: *antipathetic, averse, unsympathetic Ant congenial

 2 repulsive, revolting, *offensive, loathsome Ana odious, *hateful, abominable, detestable: foul, nasty (see DIRTY): vile, *base, low repulsive repugnant, revolting, *offensive, loathsome Ana repellent, *repugnant, abhorrent, obnoxious Ant alluring, captivating reputation repute, *fame, renown, honor, glory, celebrity, éclat, notoriety Ana credit, weight, *influence, authority, prestige repute n reputation, *fame, renown, celebrity, notoriety, éclat, honor, glory Ant disrepute reputed *supposed, supposititious, suppositious, putative, purported, conjectural, hypothetical Ana assumed, presumed (see PRESUPPOSE) request vb *ask, solicit Ana *beg, entreat, beseech, implore, supplicate, importune: appeal, petition, sue, pray (see under PRAYER) require 1 exact, claim, *demand Ana *prescribe, assign, define: warrant, *justify 2 *lack, want, need requirement, quisite, prerequisite can all mean something that is regarded as necessary to the success or perfection of a thing. Although requirement, the more general term, may be employed in place of quisite, it is the customary term when the idea to be conveyed is of something more or less arbitrarily demanded or expected, especially by those who lay down conditions (as for admission to college, for enlistment in the army or navy, for membership in a church, or for entrance into a course) (college entrance requirements) (a list of requirements for all campers) (action was instituted . . . to compel the school board to revoke the oath requirement—Clinton) Quisite is the customary term when the stress is on the idea of something that is indispensable to the end in view, or is necessitated by a thing's nature or essence or is otherwise essential and not arbitrarily demanded (the first quisite of literary or artistic activity, is that it shall be interesting—T. S. Eliot) (the quisites of our present social economy are capital and labor) (intellectual freedom . . . is the prime quisite for a free people—Science) Prerequisite differs from quisite only in a stress on the time when something becomes indispensable; it applies specifically to things which must be known, or accomplished, or acquired as preliminaries (as to the study of a subject, the doing of a kind of work, or the attainment of an end) (answered the questions put to him by the Senators as a prerequisite to his confirmation—Current Biog.) (he possesses the prerequisite of an original poet—a percipience unifying, exact and exhilarating—Day Lewis) quisite adj *needful, necessary, indispensable, essential Ana compelled or compulsory, constrained, obliged or obligatory (see corresponding verbs at FORCE): fundamental, *essential, cardinal, vital quisite n *requirement, prerequisite requite *reciprocate, retaliate, return Ana repay, recompense, compensate (see PAY): *satisfy, content: revenge (see AVENGE) rescind *revoke, reverse, repeal, recall Ana cancel, expunge, *erase: abrogate, *annul, void rescue vb Rescue, deliver, redeem, ransom, reclaim, save are comparable when they mean to free a person or thing from confinement, danger of death or destruction, or a serious evil. One rescues a person who is in imminent danger (as of death, of capture, or of assault) by prompt or vigorous action <we are beset with thieves; rescue thy mistress—Shak.> <rescue the crew of a sinking ship> <rescue the perishing, care for the dying, snatch them in pity from sin and the grave—Crosby> Less often one rescues a thing that is in danger of destruction, or that has been forcibly seized, by freeing it from danger or from its captors <diamonds that I rescued from the tarn—Tennyson>  One delivers a person by setting him free from something (as prison, confinement, suffering, temptation, or embarrassment) <lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil—Mt 6:13> <to deliver mankind from the paralyzing grip of determinism—Inge> <the population of Russia had only just been delivered, nominally at least, from serfdom—Ellis> One redeems a person from bondage, from captivity, or from suffering the consequences of his sin or crime, or a thing from pawn or from neglect, deterioration, or decay by making some commensurate expenditure (as of money, of effort, or of time) <let me redeem my brothers both from death—Shak.>  <labeled for eighty years, redeeming them to Christianity—Norman Douglas> One ransoms a person who has been captured, enslaved, or kidnapped by paying the amount that is demanded by his captor or owner <he was back in Quebec with a number of Iroquois captives whom he had ransomed—Wynne> Ransom is often employed in place of redeem in religious use, especially in reference to Christ as the Redeemer, when the emphasis is on the price he paid in accepting crucifixion <his brethren, ransomed with his own dear life—Milton> One reclaims what has become debased, wild, savage, waste, or desert by bringing it back to its former state of usefulness. Specifically one reclaims a person who has wandered from rectitude or has become a sinner, a reprobate, or a degenerate when one reforms him or restores him to moral, decent ways of life <I fear he is not to be reclaimed; there is scarcely a hope that anything in his character or fortunes is repairable now—Dickens> or one reclaims a thing that has been abandoned or neglected when one works with it so that it becomes productive or finds a new use or is made to give up what is still usable in it <reclaim long-abandoned farms> <filled in valleys, diverted creeks and reclaimed swamps—G. R. Gilbert> <reclaim discarded wool> One saves (see also SAVE 2) a person when one rescues, delivers, redeems, ransoms, or reclaims him and enables him not only to be free from the evil that involves or threatens but to continue in existence, to enjoy security or happiness, or to be of future use or service <his life was saved by an operation> <the lifeguard saved him from drowning> <the book he had written himself, the Navigator, had saved countless lives—Brooks>

Ana *free, release, liberate, emancipate, manumit: preserve, conserve (see SAVE): *extricate, disentangle, disembarass research investigation, *inquiry, inquisition, inquest, probe resemblance *likeness, similarity, similitude, analogy, affinity

Ana correspondence, agreement, harmonizing or harmony, conformity (see corresponding verbs at AGREE): *comparison, parallel

Ant difference: distinction resentment *offense, umbrage, pique, dudgeon, huff

Ana rancor, animus, animosity, antipathy, antagonism (see ENMITY): ill will, spite, *malice, malignity, malignancy reservation *condition, stipulation, terms, provision, proviso, strings

Ana limitation, restriction, circumscription (see corresponding verbs at LIMIT): exception (see corresponding adjective at EXCEPTIONAL) reserve vb *keep, keep back, keep out, hold, hold back, retain, withhold, detain

Ana *save, preserve, conserve: appropriate, preempt, confiscate, *arrogate reserved *silent, reticent, uncommunicative, taciturn, secretive, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped Ana aloof, detached, uninterested, disinterested (see INDIFFERENT): *shy, diffident, modest, bashful: formal, ceremonious, conventional (see CEREMONIAL)

Ant affable: expansive; blatant reside, live, dwell, sojourn, lodge, stay, put up, stop can all mean to abide in a particular place as one's habitation or domicile. Reside and live express this idea, often without further implications. Usually, however, when the term is intended to suggest the fixed, settled, or legal abode of a person or group such as a family, reside is the more appropriate word; when the idea to be emphasized is the spending of one's time in a given place and the carrying on of the normal activities of one's way of life, live is more explicit <the senator resides in San Francisco but he lives for the better part of the year in Washington> When the reference is not to persons but to things, reside is the term to be used when the thing referred to is a quality, an element, or a condition <the power of decision resides in the electorate> <his peculiar merit as a critic . . . resided in the combination of this personal gusto and curiosity—T. S. Eliot> <when we have in our minds the idea of art as imitation, we are prone to think of beauty as residing in particular objects, particular colors—Binyon> When the thing is something concrete and the idea of making one's abode or home is suggested, live may be used <they say that sherry ought to live for a while in an old brandy-cask, so as to contract a certain convincing quality from the cask's genial timbers—Montague> Dwell is a close synonym of these words <more people than he could count (and yet, he thought, less than had dwelled in his own town)—Forester> but it is more frequently found in elevated language <she dwelt among the untrodden ways beside the springs of Dove—Wordsworth> In extended use dwelt carries a stronger implication of abiding (as in thought or in spirit) <the bad poet dwells partly in a world of objects and partly in a world of words, and he never can get them to fit—T. S. Eliot> <these men had dwelt so long in that weariness they called success—R. H. Newman> Sojourn differs from the preceding terms in usually implying a temporary habitation or abode or a more or less uncertain place or way of living <for what purpose, it may be asked, was the world created, and immortal spirits sent to sojourn in it—Inge> Lodge (see also HARBOR) also implies an abode for a time or for the time being; it typically also implies having restricted accommodations (as in a hotel or rooming house) often without meals <he lodges at the Y.M.C.A. when he is in town>  Stay is the term commonly used in language in place of sojourn and often of lodge <he is staying at Miami Beach for the winter> <whenever he was in Paris he stayed at that hotel> Put up is also a common equivalent for lodge and usually suggests the status of a guest either in a hotel or in a private home (two seasons ago I put up at a farmhouse—T. H. White) (where does he put up when he is in Chicago?) Stop, which is often used in the sense of stay (he is stopping at the largest hotel in the city) often specifically implies the breaking of a trip or journey by a short stay (where shall we stop for the night?)

Ana remain, abide (see STAY): *continue, endure residence *habitation, dwelling, abode, domicile, home, house resident n *inhabitant, denizen, citizen residue residuum, remains, leavings, *remainder, rest, balance, remnant residuuum residue, *remainder, remains, leavings, rest, balance, remnant resign 1 yield, surrender, leave, abandon, *relinquish, cede, waive

Ana *forgo, eschew, sacrifice, forbear, abnegate: *abjure, renounce, forswear

2 *abdicate, renounce resignation 1 compliance, acquiescence (see under COMPLIANT)

Ana submitting or submission, yielding, deferring or deference (see corresponding verbs at YIELD): meekness, modesty, humbleness or humility, lowliness (see corresponding adjectives at HUMBLE)

2 *patience, long-suffering, longanimity, forbearance

Ana endurance, toleration, suffering or sufferance (see corresponding verbs at BEAR): *fortitude, backbone, pluck resigned *compliant, acquiescent

Ana submissive, subdued (see TAME): reconciled, adjusted, adapted, accommodated, conformed (see ADAPT)

Ant rebellious

resile recoil, *rebound, reverberate, repercuss resilient 1 *elastic, springy, flexible, supple

Ana recoiling, resiling, rebounding (see REBOUND): recovering, regaining, retrieving (see RECOVER)

Con rigid, *stiff, inflexible, tense

2 *elastic, expansive, buoyant, volatile, effervescent Ana responsive, sympathetic (see TENDER): *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome resist, withstand, contest, oppose, fight, combat, conflict, antagonize are comparable when they mean to set one person or thing against another in a hostile or competing way, and they may be roughly distinguished according to the degree to which one of the things or forces takes the initiative against the other. Resist and withstand suggest generally that the initiative lies wholly with the person or force competed against. Resist implies an overt recognition of a hostile or threatening force and a positive effort to counteract it, repel it, or ward it off (the very region which had resisted and finally destroyed the Roman Empire—Malone) (it is hard to resist the thought that metaphor is one of the most important heuristic devices—R. M. Weaver) (resist the pressure of political orthodoxy) Withstand may suggest a more passive yet often successful resistance in which if nothing is gained, at least nothing is lost (most plants cannot withstand frost) (built to withstand work and worry—Yoder) (having withstood the pressure of her parents—Rose Macaulay) Contest and oppose suggest a more positive action against a threatening or objectionable force. Contest often stresses the raising of the issue or the bringing into open question of the matter over which there is conflict (the board's power to inspect private welfare agencies was later contested and restricted—Amer. Guide Series: N. Y.) (it is impossible to contest your principle—Meredith)

Ant flaccid

(attempt to reconcile contesting parties) Oppose, perhaps the most general of the terms, can indicate almost any degree of protesting attitude from mild objection to positive belligerence, and can suggest any action from a mere contrastive setting of one thing against another to open violence against an opposing force, although in all instances positive action is implied (the chronic objector, who opposes every popular measure—Crothers) (he had been much opposed by women, crossed, balked, wronged, misled—Hackett) (the only man in public life who dared oppose wholesale executions of the Sioux captives—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.) (human art, as opposed to mere tools and mechanical contrivances—Clodd) Fight and combat suggest strong action. Fight puts the initiative clearly in the hands of the subject of the verb and stresses the forthrightness or belligerence of the action (my father was a servant of the people who fought Boston's biggest and crookedest politician fiercely—Cummings) (the steel companies . . . fought the strike with every weapon at their disposal—Amer. Guide Series: Ind.) (had to open his mouth wide and fight for breath—Caldwell) Combat more often suggests a resisting than an initiating action, though it says nothing about the success of the resistance (combat aggression) (Jefferson believed . . . that error of opinion may be tolerated so long as truth is free to combat it—Davis) (attempts to combat discriminatory practices were . . . evident—Collier's Yr. Bk.) (Russell combats the philosophers who denied the possibility of a three-dimensional non-Euclidean space—Kline) Conflict and antagonize do not fit easily into the scale. Conflict indicates merely the fact of competition, friction, or hostility between two forces (two logical principles often conflict) (there was the smell of tar and ropes and sawdust to conflict with that of unsalt water faintly tinged with decaying vegetation—Archibald Marshall) (where his feeling conflicted with the facts, his vision flickered—Lippmann) (if the conflicting, indigenous elements in Korea and in Viet Nam were left to fight it out among themselves, which would prevail . . .?—Toynbee) Antagonize has lost in general use the idea of placing oneself in opposition or in the position of an antagonist, a sense which persists in technical usage (a new synthetic steroid . . . that antagonized the renal excretory effects of aldosterone—Science) In current general use the term carries only the idea of arousing antagonism or making antagonistic (it was inexpedient to antagonize these people—Cather) (they resented his extreme militancy . . . he even antagonized a few of his fellow workers—Warner)

Ana assail, *attack, assault: impugn, gainsay, contravene (see DENY): thwart, baffle, balk, foil, *frustrate

Ant submit: abide resolute steadfast, staunch, *faithful, true, loyal

Ana determined, decided, resolved (see DECIDE): intrepid, valiant, *brave, courageous: stubborn, *obstinate, pertinacious resolution 1 analysis, dissection, breakdown (see under ANALYZE)

Ana separation, division (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE): elucidation, interpretation, expounding or exposition, explaining or explanation (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN)

2 mettle, spirit, tenacity, *courage

Ana pluck, grit, *fortitude, backbone, guts resolve 1 *analyze, dissect, break down

Ana *separate, part, divide: reduce, diminish (see DECREASE): melt, fuse (see LIQUEFY)

Ant blend

2 determine, *decide, settle, rule

Ana purpose, propose, design, *intend, mean: plan, scheme, project (see under PLAN n)

3 *solve, unfold, unravel, decipher

Ana dispel, dissipate, disperse (see SCATTER): clear, *rid, purge, disabuse resonant, sonorous, ringing, resounding, vibrant, orotund are applied to the sounds or tones of speech and music and mean conspicuously full and rich. Resonant implies intensification or enrichment of tone by sympathetic vibration (as by the soundboard and body of a violin or by columns of air above and below the vocal cords in the larynx). It applies especially to musical tones (the tones produced by this piano are very resonant) (heard the beating of the small drums—a hollow, resonant sound—Nordhoff & Hall) but in more general use it is applicable to a sound (as of speech or a bird note) that seems more than naturally full and rich (his deep resonant voice that makes even a line from a financial statement have the ringing, rhythmic tones of a Yeats quotation—Saarinén) Sonorous implies a quality of tone or speech suggesting the reverberant sound elicited by striking some metals (as copper or brass) or some kinds of glass; it may apply to a voice that is high and clear or, more often, to one that is deep and rich, but loudness and fullness are usually clearly implied (a herald chosen for his sonorous voice—Frazer) (the deep, sonorous voice of the red-bearded Duke, which boomed out like a dinner gong—Doyle) As applied to language or utterance as distinct from voice sonorous may suggest depth and richness (its earnestness and patience, and its utter lack of synthetic drama, give many of its pages the sonorous sureness of pure philosophy—Marquand) but is more likely to suggest an obscuring or the absence of real meaning by lush verbiage or florid presentation (detains thought within pompous and sonorous generalities wherein controversy is as inevitable as it is incapable of solution—Dewey) (adept at distilling from the sonorous official speeches the three or four words that contain the meaning the speechmakers sought to conceal—New Yorker) Ringing usually implies a sound made by or as if by a bell; the word suggests a vigorous, stirring quality (her beautiful, ringing, honest voice, the expression of her whole personality—Ellis) (a perfect ecstasy of song—clear, ringing, copious—Burroughs) Resounding applies not only to vocal or instrumental sounds but to any sound that seems to reecho or to awaken echoes. It usually implies the increase of sound by something that throws it back (the sound of a great underground river, flowing through a resounding cavern—Cather) but it may imply a loudness and fullness of sound that seem to call forth echoes (put into circulation many resounding phrases which rang from the hustings—Krock) (closed the door behind him with a resounding bang—Brennan) Vibrant, when used of sounds or tones, suggests vibration but not necessarily resonance; rather it implies qualities of life, vigor, or strong feeling (the speaker paused a moment, his low vibrant tones faltering into silence—Zangwill) (it concentrates in one vibrant poem the despairs and the hopes of millennia—Edmund Wilson) Orotund usually describes an acquired or an affected quality of speech. It implies fullness, roundness, and dignity of utterance which may be regarded either objectively or contemptuously (it is rather the exquisite craftsmanship of France than the surging and orotund utterances of Leaves of Grass that has given to free verse . . . its most distinctive qualities—Lowes) (the voice was like no voice ever heard before—orotund, massive, absolute, like the sound of thunder—Styron)

Ana *full, replete: *rich, opulent: intensified, enhanced, heightened (see INTENSIFY) resort n *resource, expedient, shift, makeshift, stopgap, substitute, surrogate

Ana see those at RESOURCE 2 resort vb Resort, refer, apply, go, turn are comparable when they mean to betake oneself or to have recourse when in need of help or relief. Resort often implies that one has encountered difficulties or has tried ineffectually to surmount them; when it carries the latter implication, it often also connotes an approach to desperation (he found he could not get relief, unless he resorted to the courts) (most powers conceivably may be exercised beyond the limits allowed by the law . . . But we do not on that account resort to the blunt expedient of taking away the power—Justice Holmes) Refer usually suggests a need of authentic information and recourse to someone or something that will supply such information (every time he comes across a new word he refers to the dictionary) (most men refer to their own watches when someone reports the time) Apply suggests having direct recourse (as in person or by letter) to one having the power to grant a request or petition (apply to a hospital for aid) (apply to the court for relief) (determined, that if he persisted in considering her repeated refusals as flattering encouragement, to apply to her father, whose negative might be uttered in such a manner as must be decisive—Austen) Go and turn are more general but often more picturesque or dramatic terms than the words previously considered, for they directly suggest action or movement (the president decided to go to the people with his plan for reorganization) (there was no one to whom she could go for sympathy) (she had taken fright at our behavior and turned to the captain pitifully—Conrad)

Ana *direct, address, devote: *use, employ, utilize resounding *resonant, sonorous, ringing, vibrant, orotund Ana *loud, stentorian, earsplitting: intensified, heightened (see INTENSIFY) resource 1 in plural form resources assets, belongings, effects, *possessions, means

2 Resource, resort, expedient, shift, makeshift, stopgap, substitute, surrogate can all denote something to which one turns for help or assistance in difficulty or need when the usual means, instrument, or source of supply fails one, is not at hand, or is unknown to one. Resource applies to an action, activity, person, method, device, or contrivance upon which one falls back when in need of support, assistance, or diversion (he has exhausted every resource he can think of) (I must e'en hasten to matters of fact, which is the comfortable resource of dull people—Shenstone) (I am doomed to be the victim of eternal disappointments; and I have no resource but a pistol—Peacock) (with all the resources of her slovenliness, she was cunningly protecting herself against him by inducing him to believe she was a slut—Callaghan) Resort is less often used than resource except when qualified by last or in the phrase "to have resort to" (have resort to a fortune-teller) (thus the income tax became a . . . last resort—Shaw) (for many plankters transparency of body is a chief resort for concealment—Coker) (courts are the ultimate resorts for vindicating the Bill of Rights—Frankfurter) Expedient applies to a means, device, or contrivance which serves in place of what is usual or ordinary, or sometimes as a means, a device, or a contrivance to accomplish a difficult end easily or without waste of time (everything is brought about . . . through the medium of the author's reflections, which is the clumsiest of all expedients—Scott) (is not this a desperate expedient, a last refuge likely to appeal only to the leaders of a lost cause?—Krutch) A shift is commonly a tentative or temporary and often imperfect expedient; the term when applied to plans or stratagems typically implies evasiveness or trickery (the dear delicious shifts I used to be put to, to gain half a minute's conversation with this fellow!—Sheridan) (not amused by her shifts and her shameful deceit—Tinker) Makeshift is even more derogatory than shift for it implies substitution of the inferior for the superior and often it imputes carelessness, indifference, or laziness to the one who chooses or makes use of it (his ingenuity had been sharpened by all the recent necessity to employ makeshifts—Forester) (three or four rooms . . . have been kept nearly habitable by makeshifts of patchings—Pierce) Stopgap applies to a person or thing that momentarily or temporarily supplies an urgent need or fills a gap, hole, or vacancy (both vigilantes and mass meeting were looked upon as temporary stopgaps, to be disbanded as soon as governmental machinery was provided—Billington) Substitute (see also SUBSTITUTE 2) does not carry as strong a suggestion of an emergency or exigency as the preceding terms do; the word is applicable to something one chooses, accepts, or prefers, whether rightly or wrongly, rationally or irrationally, in place of the usual or original thing, or which has been invented or devised to take its place or to do its work (a substitute for milk . . . could be manufactured from the soya bean—Heiser) (daydreams, in adult life, are recognized as more or less pathological, and as a substitute for efforts in the sphere of reality—Russell) (this mock king who held office for eight days every year was a substitute for the king himself—Frazier) Surrogate is a somewhat learned word for a substitute (slang is . . . a facile surrogate for thought—Lowes) It is frequently applied to people whether as literal replacements or as replacement figures in psychological or sociological analyses (college presidents or their surrogates appealed for a revival of idealism—Adler) (to primitive men the cranes were . . . the surrogates of the resurgent sun-god—E. A. Armstrong) (the relationship to the mother surrogate retains the qualities . . . of the little boy's attachment to his mother—Scientific American)

Ana *device, contrivance, contraption: invention, creation (see corresponding verbs at INVENT): *method, manner, way, fashion, mode, system

respect n *regard, esteem, admiration

Ana *reverence, awe, fear: *honor, homage, deference: veneration, reverence, worship, adoration (see under REVERE)

Ant contempt respect vb regard, esteem, admire (see under REGARD n)

Ana reverence, *revere, venerate: value, prize, cherish, *appreciate

Ant abuse: misuse respecting concerning, regarding, *about respectively *each, apiece, severally, individually respite *pause, recess, lull, intermission

Ana leisure, ease, *rest: interruption, interval, *break resplendent *splendid, gorgeous, glorious, sublime, superb Ana effulgent, refugent, radiant, brilliant, *bright: blazing, glowing, flaming (see BLAZE vb)

respond *answer, reply, rejoin, retort

Ana react, behave, *act

Con stimulate, excite, quicken (see PROVOKE) response answer, reply, rejoinder, retort (see under ANSWER vb 1) responsible, answerable, accountable, amenable, liable can all mean subject to an authority which may exact redress in case of default. Responsible, answerable, and accountable are very close, all meaning capable of being called upon to answer or to make amends to someone for something. Although often used interchangeably they are capable of distinction based on their typical applications. One is responsible for the performance of a task or duty, or the fulfillment of an obligation, or the execution of a trust, or the administration of an office to the person or body that imposes the task, duty, or trust or delegates the power (the governor is responsible to the electorate for the administration of the laws) Sometimes the to phrase or the for phrase is suppressed but still implied (the salesmen are responsible to the manager and the manager is responsible to the owner) (a teacher is responsible for the conduct of pupils in the classroom) (the ideally free individual is responsible only to himself—Henry Adams) (while held responsible for the bank's operations, the president has powers considered largely nominal—Current Biog.) Sometimes when both phrases are suppressed, responsible implies manifest ability to fulfill one's obligations especially by reason of developed powers of judgment and sense of moral obligation (his record shows that he is a responsible person) One is answerable to someone for something who, because of a moral or legal obligation or because of the acceptance of such an obligation for another, may be called upon to pay the penalty for a violation of the law or a neglect of duty; the term usually indicates or implies the existence of a judge or tribunal (men in business, who are answerable with their fortunes for the consequences of their opinions—Hazlitt) (there was something ineradicably corrupt inside her for which her father was not answerable—E. K. Brown) (the minister who is answerable to Parliament for the affairs of the BBC—Beachcroft) One is accountable to someone for something who because of something entrusted to him is bound to be called upon to render an account of how that trust has been executed. Accountable is much more positive than responsible or answerable in its suggestion of retributive justice in case of default (if the physicist discovers new sources of energy that may be readily released for destructive purposes, he should not be held accountable for their use—Gauss) (the Russian leaders . . . are not accountable to their people—The Reporter) Amenable and liable especially stress subjection and suggest the contingency rather than the probability or certainty of being called to account. One is amenable, usually to something, whose acts are subject to the control or the censure of a higher authority and who, therefore, is not self-governing or absolute in power (is it to be contended that the heads of departments are not amenable to the laws of their country?—John Marshall) (scholar and teacher alike ranked as clerks . . . amenable only to the rule of the bishop—J. R. Green) One is liable that by the terms of the law may be made answerable in case of default (a surety is liable for the debts of his principal) (the present United States . . . took nothing by succession from the Confederation . . . was not liable for any of its obligations—Taney) Liable does not, however, always imply answerability. It may imply mere contingent obligation (every citizen is liable for jury duty) (he is only 39, and liable for military service under the new act—Shaw)

Ana subject, open, exposed (see LIABLE): *reliable, dependable, trustworthy responsive 1 *sentient, sensitive, impressible, impressionable, susceptible

Ana answering, responding, replying (see ANSWER vb): reacting, acting, behaving (see ACT vb)

Ant impassive

2 sympathetic, warm, warmhearted, compassionate, *tender

Ana gentle, mild, lenient (see SOFT): sensible, conscious, alive, awake, *aware: sensitive, susceptible, prone (see LIABLE) rest n Rest, repose, relaxation, leisure, ease, comfort are comparable when they mean freedom from toil or strain. Rest, the most general term, implies withdrawal from all labor or exertion and suggests an opposition to the term work; it does not in itself explicitly imply a particular way of spending one's time, but it does suggest as an aim or as a result the overcoming of physical or mental weariness <there the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest—Job 3:17> <night came, and with it but little rest—Hardy> <there was rest now, not disquietude, in the knowledge—Glasgow> Repose implies freedom from motion or movement and suggests not only physical quiet (as in sleeping or slumbering) but also mental quiet and freedom from anything that disturbs, annoys, agitates, or confuses. Typically the term suggests tranquillity or peace or the refreshment that comes from complete quiet or rest <heavily passed the night. Sleep, or repose that deserved the name of sleep, was out of the question—Austen> <eighteen years of commotion had made the majority of the people ready to buy repose at any price—Macaulay> <walls . . . that shut out the world and gave repose to the spirit—Cather> Relaxation may imply rest that comes from diversion or recreation but it usually stresses either a releasing of the tension that keeps muscles taut and fit for work or the mind keyed up to the processes of clear and prolonged thinking, or a physical and mental slackening that finally induces repose <those who wish relaxation from analysis . . . the tired scientist, and the fagged philologist and the weary man of business—Babbitt> <now and then came relaxation and lassitude, but never release. The war towered over him like a vigilant teacher—H. G. Wells> <found relaxation in her unobtrusive company—Shirer> Leisure implies exemption from the labor imposed upon one by a trade or profession or by duties; it may apply to the hours in which one is not engaged in one's daily work, or to the period in which one is on vacation, or to the entire time of a person who is not compelled to earn his living <have little leisure for reading> <he looked forward to the prospect of a full month of leisure> <those who lead lives of leisure> Leisure, therefore, stresses freedom from compulsion, or routine, or continuous work; it usually suggests not freedom from activity but the freedom to determine one's activities <labor is doing what we must; leisure is doing what we like; rest is doing nothing whilst our bodies and minds are recovering from their fatigue—Shaw> Ease (see also READINESS) stresses exemption from toil, but it also implies a freedom from whatever worries or disturbs and from what demands physical or mental activity. In contrast to leisure it implies rest and repose; in addition it suggests either complete relaxation of mind and body or a state of mind that finds no attraction in work or activity <all day I sit in idleness, while to and fro about me thy serene, grave servants go; and I am weary of my lonely ease—Millay> But ease may also imply absence of strain, especially mental or nervous strain, rather than freedom from toil <not only devoted, but resourceful and intelligent, one who would be at his ease with all sorts of men—Cather> Comfort differs from the other words of this group in carrying little if any suggestion of freedom from toil; it applies rather to a state of mind induced by relief from all that strains or inconveniences or causes pain, disquiet, or discontent. Positively it suggests perfect well-being and a feeling of quiet enjoyment or content <he had bought for himself out of all the wealth streaming through his fingers neither adulation nor love, neither splendor nor comfort—Conrad> <this sudden calm and the sense of comfort that it brought created a more genial atmosphere over the whole ship—Dahl> <spent every dollar he earned on the comfort of his family—Wouk> Ana intermitting or intermission, suspending or suspension, deferring (see corresponding verbs at DEFER): stillness, quietness or quiet, silentness or silence (see corresponding adjectives at STILL): calmness or calm, tranquillity, serenity (see corresponding adjectives at CALM)

rest vb *base, found, ground, bottom, stay

Ana *depend, hang, hinge: *rely, depend, count rest n *remainder, residue, residuum, remains, leavings, balance, remnant

Ana *excess, superfluity, surplus, surplusage, overplus restful *comfortable, cozy, snug, easy

Ana *soft, gentle, mild, lenient: *still, quiet, silent: placid, peaceful, *calm, serene, tranquil restitution amends, redress, *reparation, indemnity

Ana repayment, recompense, reimbursement (see corresponding verbs at PAY) restive 1 *contrary, perverse, balky, froward, wayward

Ana intractable, *unruly, ungovernable, refractory: *obstinate, stubborn, mulish, stiff-necked, pigheaded

2 restless, *impatient, nervous, unquiet, uneasy, fidgety, jumpy, jittery

Ana see those at RESTLESS restless restive, *impatient, nervous, unquiet, uneasy, fidgety, jumpy, jittery

Ana *fitful, spasmodic: *inconstant, capricious, unstable, fickle: agitated, disquieted, perturbed, discomposed (see DISCOMPOSE) restorative adj *curative, remedial, corrective, sanative

Ana stimulating, quickening (see PROVOKE) restore 1 *renew, refresh, rejuvenate, renovate, refurbish

Ana save, reclaim, redeem, *rescue: reform, revise, amend (see CORRECT vb): *recover, regain, retrieve, recoup, recruit

2 Restore, revive, revivify, resuscitate can all mean to regain or cause to regain signs of life and vigor. Restore (see also RENEW) implies a return to consciousness, to health, or to vigor often through the use of remedies or of treatments <it took many months to restore him to health> <gave her aromatic spirits of ammonia to restore her to consciousness> Revive, when used in reference to a person, implies recovery from a deathlike state (as stupor or a faint or shock); it carries a stronger suggestion of apparent death in the victim and a less positive suggestion of restored health and vigor than does restore <slowly revived from the effects of shock> <revived her by throwing water on her face> But the term is often applied to spirits or to feelings that are depressed, to plants that seem withering, to states, arts, industries, or fashions that are not flourishing and implies a return to a prior state (as of animation, freshness, or activity) <the flowers have been revived by the shower> <ambitious hopes which had seemed to be extinguished, had revived in his bosom—Macaulay> Revivify differs from revive in suggesting an adding of new life and in not carrying so strong a suggestion of prior loss or depletion of vital power; hence, it is applicable to normal persons or to their powers  <cessation in his lovemaking had revived her love—Hardy> The term is also applicable to something that tends to become exhausted of interest through long usage or familiarity and then suggests a freshening or a vitalizing from a new source <being a true poet, he was able . . . to revivify them [old, much-used words] as poetic agents—Day Lewis> <tradition is dead; our task is to revivify life that has passed away—Buchan> Resuscitate implies commonly a restoration to consciousness, but in comparison with revive it usually also implies a condition that is serious and that requires arduous efforts to correct or relieve (uncertain of success in resuscitating the boy they had taken from the water) Especially in extended use it can suggest a bringing again to a quick or vital state of someone or something in which life appears to be extinct (resuscitate an old interest) (it was Delia's turn to be silent. The past was too overwhelmingly resuscitated in Charlotte's words—Wharton)

Ana *cure, heal, remedy: arouse, rouse, rally, *stir
restrain, curb, check, bridle, inhibit are comparable when they mean to hold a person or thing back from doing something or from going too far in doing something. Restrain, the most comprehensive of these terms, may imply the intent either to prevent entirely or to keep under control or within bounds, but it usually suggests the operation of some force, authority, or motive that is sufficiently strong or compelling as to achieve the desired end (to produce in the child the same respect for the garden that restrains the grown-ups from picking wantonly—Russell) (her voice is not usually one of her assets . . . the whines, the snarls and the sneers of a poor childhood are restrained with difficulty—Mailer) Curb can imply either a sharp, drastic method of bringing under control (attempts to curb lynching by legislation—F. W. Coker) or a guiding or controlling influence that tends to restrain or moderate something or to restrict a person's freedom of action (the sober scientific method does not stimulate the imagination; it curbs it—Crothers) (it was necessary to set up devices for curbing the swindles of the speculators—Edmund Wilson) (the feudal nobility was curbed here—Coulton)
Check (see also ARREST 1) often implies the use of a method suggestive of a checkrein which holds up a horse's head and prevents him from getting the bit between his teeth (Father Latour checked his impetuous vicar—Cather) but it may carry implications derived from other senses of the noun such as those of delaying or impeding motion or progress (the ship, hauled up so close as to check her way—Conrad) (a spot where her footsteps were no longer checked by a hedgerow—George Eliot) or of attacking or defeating some force or influence (the ambition of churchmen . . . disciplined and checked by the broader interests of the Church—Henry Adams) (check for a time the inward sweeping waves of melancholy—Bromfield)
Bridle (see also STRUT) carries a strong implication of bringing or keeping under one's control (as by subduing, moderating, or holding in); it is used chiefly in respect to strong or vehement emotions or desires (bridle his wrath) (potential violence of feeling is bridled by good form—N. Y. Herald Tribune Book Rev.) (strong in censuring and bridling the wicked—H. O. Taylor) (bridled his curiosity) (he could no longer bridle his passion)
Inhibit (see also FORBID) is a synonym of these terms in a predominantly psychological sense in which it implies the repression or suppression of certain emotions, desires, or thoughts by a curbing influence (as one's conscience or religious principles or the social conventions of one's class) (a people long inhibited by the prevailing taboos—Ellery)

Ana *arrest, check, interrupt: abstain, *refrain, forbear: *hinder, impede, obstruct, block

Ant impel: incite: activate: abandon (oneself) restraint constraint, compulsion, *force, coercion, duress, violence

Ana curbing, checking, inhibiting (see RESTRAIN): hindering, impeding, obstructing, blocking (see HINDER)

Ant incitement: liberty restrict *limit, circumscribe, confine

Ana bind, *tie: *contract, shrink: *restrain, curb, check Con *extend, lengthen: *expand, amplify, swell: enlarge, *increase result consequence, *effect, upshot, aftereffect, aftermath, sequel, issue, outcome, event

Ana concluding or conclusion, ending or end, closing or close, termination (see corresponding verbs at CLOSE): *product, production

Con *origin, source, root: *cause, determinant, antecedent resuscitate vb *restore, revive, revivify

Ana reanimate (see base word at QUICKEN): rekindle (see base word at LIGHT vb)

retain *keep, keep back, keep out, detain, withhold, reserve, hold, hold back

Ana *have, hold, own, possess, enjoy: *save, preserve, conserve

Con *discard, shed, cast: *relinquish, surrender, abandon, yield: *abdicate, resign: *abjure, renounce, forswear, recant, retract retaliate *reciprocate, requite, return

Ana revenge, *avenge: repay, recompense, compensate (see PAY) retaliation, reprisal, revenge, vengeance, retribution can all mean both the act of inflicting or the intent to inflict injury in return for injury, and the injury so inflicted. Retaliation implies a return of like for like, commonly a return of evil for evil (so astonished by a blow as to lose the opportunity for retaliation) (he is never satisfied until he inflicts a retaliation for every injury, real or fancied) (sanguinary retaliation on the part of a rejected office-seeker—Swanberg) (could catch us flat-footed, could destroy our air fleet and its bases, and . . . there would then be no retaliation at all—Vannevar Bush) Reprisal applies specifically to an act of retaliation indulged in for the sake of gaining redress of a grievance or of compelling an enemy or antagonist to cease unlawful acts. The term in legal use usually implies the seizure of property by force either as a means of getting compensation for one's own injuries or of inflicting punishment; when used in reference to nations, it need not imply an act of war (declared an embargo in reprisal for the seizing of ships) (reprisals are illegal if they are not preceded by a request to remedy the alleged wrong—Cases & Materials on International Law) (American correspondents, too, sometimes work in danger of personal reprisals other than expulsion—Mott)

Revenge usually carries a strong implication of vindictiveness or sometimes of justifiable anger that is lacking in retaliation; the term more often applies to the desire or intent to inflict injury or to the gratification of that desire than to the actual infliction of injury (he had his revenge) (t'is sweet to love; but when with scorn we meet, revenge supplies the loss with joys as great—Granville) (she went through agonies of jealousy and remorse, and fantasies of revenge, which amazed her with their violence—Wouk)
Vengeance may imply the avenging of a wrong done to oneself or another by measures that punish the offender so that he suffers in the same degree as his victim, but the term is also applicable to an act committed in gratification of one's revenge (vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink—Rom 12:19-20) (there was a time in my imprisonment, when my desire for vengeance was unbearable—Dickens) (the burning of a rick is an act of vengeance, and a plowman out of employ is a vengeful animal—Meredith) Retribution also applies chiefly to a punishment inflicted in return for a wrong done. Distinctively it stresses the operation of strict justice, and is especially appropriate when merited punishment is administered, not by the victim, but by a higher power or impersonal chance (his coat pockets . . . a mess of broken eggs, studded with coins and miscellaneous objects. This mishap was retribution for robbing nests—C. L. Barrett) (to be left alone and face to face with my own crime, had been just retribution—Longfellow)

Ana punishment, disciplining or discipline, correcting or correction (see corresponding verbs at PUNISH): recompensing or recompense, indemnification, repayment (see corresponding verbs at PAY) retard *delay, slow, slacken, detain

Ana reduce, lessen, *decrease: *arrest, check, interrupt: clog, fetter, *hamper: balk, baffle (see FRUSTRATE)

Ant accelerate: advance, further reticent *silent, reserved, uncommunicative, taciturn, secretive, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped Ana restrained, inhibited, curbed, checked (see RESTRAIN): discreet, prudent (see under PRUDENCE)

Ant frank —Con candid, open, plain (see FRANK) retire withdraw, *go, leave, depart, quit

Ana *recede, retreat: recoil, *rebound, resilie: *relinquish, yield, surrender, abandon retort vb rejoin, reply, *answer, respond retort n rejoinder, answer, reply, response (see under ANSWER vb 1)

Ana *retaliation, reprisal, revenge: repartee (see WIT) retract 1 retrograde, back, *recede, retreat

Ant protract

2 recant, *abjure, renounce, forswear

Ana eliminate, *exclude, suspend, rule out retreat n *shelter, cover, refuge, asylum, sanctuary

Ana *harbor, haven, port: safety, security (see corresponding adjectives at SAFE): seclusion, *solitude retreat vb *recede, retrograde, back, retract

Ana withdraw, retire, depart, *go: *recoil, shrink, quail retrench curtail, abridge, *shorten, abbreviate

Ana *decrease, lessen, reduce, diminish retribution reprisal, vengeance, revenge, *retaliation

Ana *reparation, redress, amends, restitution: visitation, tribulation, *trial, affliction

Con *mercy, clemency, lenity, grace: forgiveness, pardoning or pardon, remitting or remission (see corresponding verbs at EXCUSE) retrieve *recover, regain, recoup, recruit

Ana amend, remedy, redress, reform (see CORRECT vb): repair, *mend, rebuild

Ant lose

retrograde adj *backward, retrogressive, regressive

Ana reversed, inverted (see REVERSE vb): relapsing, lapsing, backsliding (see LAPSE vb)

retrograde vb *recede, retreat, back, retract

Ana *return, revert: *reverse, invert: relapse, *lapse, backslide retrogressive regressive, retrograde, *backward

Ana reversing, inverting (see REVERSE vb): receding, retreating, retrograding (see RECEDE)

Ant progressive —Con advancing, furthering, forwarding (see ADVANCE vb): improving, bettering (see IMPROVE) return vb 1 Return, revert, recur, recrudescence are comparable when they mean to go or come back (as to a person or to a place or condition). The same distinctions in implications and connotations are evident in their corresponding nouns return, reversion, recurrence, recrudescence. Return is the ordinary term of this group; it usually implies either a going back to a starting place or a source (they returned as wolves return to cover, satisfied with the slaughter that they had done—Kipling) (the sickness of a child caused their sudden return) or it may imply, especially in the case of the noun, a coming back to a former or proper place or condition (now shall the kingdom return to the house of David—1 Kings 12:26) (look forward to the return of spring) (he was greeted with enthusiasm on his return home) (he returns here tomorrow) (sorry to hear you had a return of your rheumatism—Whitman)

Revert and reversion (see also REVERSION 2) most frequently imply a going back to a previous, often a lower, state or condition (the conception of a lordly splendid destiny for the human race, to which we are false when we revert to wars and other atavistic follies—Russell) (in the last hours of his life he reverted to the young man he had been in the gutter days in Vienna—Shirer) (the reversion to barbarism in political trials and punishments—Cobban) Both terms, however, are often used when a return after an interruption is implied (as to a previous owner, to a previous topic, or to a previous decision) (when the lease expires, the property reverts to the lessor) (thought that he would not pass between these two, then he decided that he would hurry up and do so, then he reverted to his former decision—H. G. Wells) (on reversion to private trading in aluminum in this country—Financial Times) Recur and recurrence imply a return, or sometimes repeated returns at more or less regular intervals, of something that has previously happened, that has previously affected a person or thing, that has previously been in one's mind, or that has been previously known or experienced (the idea kept recurring, and growing stronger each time it came back—Cloete) (they came back to her as a dream recurs—Bennett) (a melancholy tempered by recurrences of faith and resignation and simple joy—Joyce) (incessant recurrence without variety breeds tedium; the overiterated becomes the monotonous—Lowe) Recrudescence and the more frequent recrudescence imply a return to life or activity; usually the terms imply a breaking out again of something that has been repressed, suppressed, or kept under control (the general influence . . . which is liable every now and then to recrudescence in his absence—Gurney) (the recrudescence of an epidemic of influenza)

Ana *advert, revert: *turn, rotate, revolve: restore, *renew: *recover, regain: reverberate, repercuss, *rebound

2 *reciprocate, retaliate, requite

Ana repay, recompense, compensate (see PAY): *give, bestow return n reversion, recurrence, recrudescence (see under RETURN vb)

reveal, discover, disclose, divulge, tell, betray can all mean to make known what has been or should be concealed or is intended to be kept concealed. Reveal implies a setting forth or exhibition by or as if by lifting a curtain that veils or obscures. It can apply to supernatural or inspired revelation of truths beyond or above the range of ordinary human sight or reason (sacred laws . . . unto him revealed in vision—Spenser) (in laws divine, deduced by reason, or to faith revealed—Wordsworth) (the artist, the man of genius, raises this veil and reveals Nature to us—Ellis) (he must feel as a man what he reveals as a poet—Day Lewis) or to simple disclosure (as of information or a secret) (a foreboding crept into him that if he said nothing now, he would someday soon have a dirtier past to reveal—Malamud) or it may carry no suggestions of an intentional communication but imply rather an affording of signs or other evidence from which the truth may be inferred (the paradox of both distrusting and burdening government reveals the lack of a conscious philosophy of politics—Frankfurter) (England, where the speech of a self-made man and of a . . . university graduate will almost always reveal the differences in their formal education—Joseph) Discover (see also DISCOVER 2, INVENT) implies an exposing to view by or as if by uncovering; the term usually suggests that the thing discovered has been hidden from sight or perception but is not, as often in the case of reveal, in itself beyond the range of human vision or comprehension (go draw aside the curtains and discover the several caskets to this noble prince—Shak.) (it is a test which we may apply to all figure-painters—a test which will often discover the secret of unsatisfactory design—Binyon) Disclose is more often used in this sense than discover (a black dress which disclosed all she decently could of her shoulders and bosom—Wouk) (the stress of passion often discloses an aspect of the personality completely ignored till then by its closest intimates—Conrad) More often disclose implies the making known of something that has not been announced or has previously been kept secret (the court refused to disclose its decision before the proper time) (the confessions of St. Austin and Rousseau disclose the secrets of the human heart—Gibbon) (the Bishop did not disclose his objective, and the Vicar asked no questions—Cather) Divulge differs little from disclose in this latter sense except in often carrying a suggestion of impropriety or of a breach of confidence (his voice became secretive and confidential, the voice of a man divulging fabulous professional secrets—Dahl) (he knew of the conspiracy and did not divulge it—Belloc) or in implying a more public disclosure (it seemed to me an occasion to divulge my real ideas and hopes for the Commonwealth—L. P. Smith) Tell (see also COUNT 1) may come very close to divulge in the sense of making known something which should be kept a secret (gentlemen never tell) but more often it implies the giving of necessary or helpful information, especially on request or demand (tell me the news) (why didst thou not tell me that she was thy wife?—Gen 12:18) (she never told her love—Shak.) Betray (see also DECEIVE) often implies a divulging of a secret, but it carries either a stronger and more obvious suggestion of a breach of faith (had . . . written no letters that would betray the conspiracy he had entered into—Anderson) or of a disclosure (as through signs or appearances) against one's will (life moves on, through whatever deserts, and one must compose oneself to meet it, never betraying one's soul—Rose Macaulay) (the stamp of desire on his face had betrayed him once and he did not want to be betrayed by disappointment or anger—Cheever)

Ana impart, *communicate: *suggest, adumbrate, shadow: *declare, announce, publish Ant conceal

revelation, vision, apocalypse, prophecy are comparable when they mean disclosure or something disclosed by or as if by divine or preternatural means. Revelation is often specifically applied to the religious ideas transmitted by writers of books regarded as sacred or divinely inspired, especially the Bible; by extension it has come to mean a body of knowledge distinguishable from that attained by the ordinary human processes of observation, experiment, and reason (t'is revelation satisfies all doubts, explains all mysteries, except her own—Cowper) (revelation differs from natural knowledge, he says, not by being more divine or more certain than natural knowledge, but by being conveyed in a different way—Arnold) Vision implies, as revelation does not, a seeing of something not corporeally present; often, especially in mystical and poetic language, it suggests a profound intuition of something not comprehensible to the ordinary or unaided reason and often implies the operation of some agent

(as the Holy Spirit) or the gift or accession of some inexplicable power (as genius or poetic rapture) not attributable to all men. Vision, however, unlike revelation, does not necessarily imply that what is seen or realized is true or of value to oneself or others (and some had visions, as they stood on chairs, and sang of Jacob, and the golden stairs—Lindsay) (the ecstasy of imaginative vision, the sudden insight into the nature of things, are also experiences not confined to the religious—Edmund Wilson) (an age in which men still saw visions . . . seeing visions . . . was once a more significant, interesting, and disciplined kind of dreaming—T. S. Eliot) Apocalypse in religious use denotes a type of sacred book (of which the Book of Revelation is an example) which presents a vision of the future in which the enemies of Israel or of Christianity are defeated and God's justice and righteousness prevail. In its general application apocalypse usually denotes a vision of the future, when all the mysteries of life shall be explained and good shall magnificently triumph over evil. The noun and still more its adjective apocalyptic often carry one or more connotations as various as those of a spectacular splendor or magnitude suggestive of the Book of Revelation or of wild and extravagant dreams of the visionary or passionate reformer (the apocalyptic imagination of Michelangelo—N. Y. Times) (this allegedly universal religion is challenged today by another secular religion with an alternative apocalypse of history—Niebuhr) (the writers of political apocalypse and other forms of science fiction . . . have dealt in absolutes—Davis) Prophecy has become rare in its original meaning except in learned use and in some religious use. Its occasional connotation of the prediction of future events has been emphasized to such an extent that its historical implications have almost been lost, with the result that the word in older writings is often misinterpreted. Prophecy in this narrow sense implies a commission to speak for another, especially and commonly for God or a god. It therefore further implies that the prophet has been the recipient of divine communications or revelations or that he has been granted a vision or visions (though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge . . . and have not charity, I am nothing—1 Cor 13:2) (prophecy is not prediction, it is not a forecasting of events. Rather, it is the vision which apprehends things present in the light of their eternal issues—Seaver)

Ant adumbration
revenant *apparition, phantasm, phantom, wraith, ghost, spirit, specter, shade revenge vb *avenge Ana recompense, repay (see PAY): vindicate, defend, justify (see MAINTAIN) revenge n vengeance, *retaliation, retribution, reprisal Ana *reparation, redress, amends: recompensing or recompense, repayment (see corresponding verbs at PAY) revengeful *vindictive, vengeful Ana implacable, relentless, unrelenting, merciless, *grim: inexorable, obdurate, adamant, *inflexible reverberate repercut, *rebound, recoil, resile Ana *return, revert, recur revere, reverence, venerate, worship, adore can all mean to regard with profound respect and honor. All imply a recognition of the exalted character of what is so respected and honored, but they can differ in regard to their objects and to the feelings and acts which they connote. Their differences in implication extend to their corresponding nouns, reverence (for both verbs revere and reverence), eneration, worship, and adoration. One reveres with tenderness and deference not only persons or institutions entitled to respect and honor but also their accomplishments or attributes or things associated with or symbolic of such persons or institutions (that makes her loved at home, reversed abroad—Burns) <revered for the wisdom of his counsels and the nobility of his character—Collier> <islands and cities which he reversed as the cradle of civilization—Buchan> <towards Johnson . . . his [Boswell's] feeling was not sycophancy, which is the lowest, but reverence, which is the highest of human feelings—Carlyle> One reverences things more often than persons, especially things (as laws and customs) which have an intrinsic claim to respect or are commonly regarded as inviolable <we reverence tradition, but we will not be fettered by it—Inge> <sincerity and simplicity! if I could only say how I reverence them—Benson> <pledged to reverence the name of God—Steck> One reveres persons as well as things that are regarded as holy, sacred, or sacrosanct because of character, associations, or age <revere saints and heroes> <for Socrates he had an almost religious reveration—Nicholls> In a narrow sense one worships only a divine being, God, a god, or a thing deified, when one pays homage by word or ceremonial <churches are buildings in which God is worshipped> <pagans worship idols, the sun, and the stars> In wider use worship implies a kind of veneration that involves the offering of homage or the attribution of an especially exalted character, whether the object is a divine being or not <there is a difference between admiring a poet and worshipping at a shrine—Replier> <in his calm, unexcited way, he worships success—Rose Macaulay> Adore (see also ADORE 2) is often used for worship in application to divinity; worship, however, usually suggests the group approach, and adore the personal approach, to deity. Adore therefore commonly implies love and the performance of individual acts of worship that express unquestioning love and honor (as by obeisance, prostration, and prayer) <[the devil] said to him: all these will I give thee, if falling down thou wilt adore me—Mt 4:9> <quiet as a nun breathless with adoration—Wordsworth> In more general application adore implies an extremely great and usually unquestioning love <his staff adored him, his men worshipped him—White>

Ana esteem, respect, regard, admire (see under REGARD n): cherish, prize, value, treasure, *appreciate

Ant flout

reverence n 1 *honor, homage, deference, obeisance

Ana piety, devotion, fealty, loyalty, *fidelity: esteem, respect, *regard, admiration

2 veneration, worship, adoration (see under REVERE)

Ana fervor, ardor, zeal, *passion: devoutness, pioussness, religiousness (see corresponding adjectives at DEVOUT)

3 Reverence, awe, fear are comparable when they denote the emotion inspired by something which arouses one's deep respect or veneration. Reverence distinctively implies a recognition of the sacredness or inviolability of the person or thing which stimulates the emotion  <Riche-lieu's reverence for the throne was constant—Belloc> <I feel a reverence for this place. Wherever humanity has made that hardest of all starts and lifted itself out of mere brutality, is a sacred spot—Cather> Awe, in all of its shades of meaning, fundamentally implies a sense of being overwhelmed or overcome by great superiority or impressiveness, typically manifested by an inability to speak in its presence or to come near to it. Otherwise, it may suggest any of such widely different reactions as adoration, profound reverence, wonder, terror, submissiveness, or abashment <stood in awe of his teachers> <my heart standeth in awe of thy word—Ps 119:161> <make me as the poorest vassal is that doth with awe and terror kneel—Shak.> <he is a great man of the city, without fear, but with the most abject awe of the aristocracy—T. S. Eliot> Fear (see also FEAR 1) occurs, in the sense here considered, chiefly in religious use <the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom—Ps 111:10> In this sense and as referred chiefly to the Supreme Being as its cause, it implies awed recognition of his power and majesty and, usually, reverence for his law <and calm with fear of God's divinity—Wordsworth> reverence vb venerate, worship, adore, *revere

Ana love, enjoy (see LIKE): esteem, respect, regard, admire (see under REGARD n)

reverse vb 1 Reverse, transpose, invert can all mean to change to the contrary or opposite side or position.

Reverse is the most general of these terms, implying a change to the opposite not only in side or position but also in direction, order, sequence, relation, or bearing; thus, to reverse a coin is to turn it upside down; to reverse a process is to follow the opposite order of sequence; to reverse a judgment is to change a previous judgment to another that is contrary to it; to reverse a garment or part of a garment is to turn it inside out; to reverse the direction of a locomotive is to make it go backward instead of forward <having his shield reversed—Scott> <half were put on a diet of unpolished rice; half on polished. The latter group came down with beriberi. Then the diets were reversed—Heiser>

Transpose implies a change in position, usually by reversing the order of two or more units (as letters or words) or by an exchange of position <the printer was instructed to transpose the letters sr in the word set as vesre> <if the term b in the equation $a + b = c$ is transposed, the result obtained is $a = c - b$ > But transpose often, especially in grammar or anatomy, implies merely a change in the natural order or position <he frequently transposes words for the sake of effect>  Invert implies a change from one side to another chiefly by turning upside down but occasionally, especially in surgery, by turning inside out or outside in <invert a tumbler> <invert a comma> <invert the uterus> <the photograph of the pond showed the inverted images of the trees on its bank> In its secondary senses it approaches reverse but applies within narrower limits <invert the order of words in a sentence> <invert the relation of cause and effect> <the custom . . . to invert now and then the order of the class so as to make the highest and lowest boys change places—Thomas Moore>

Ana *overturn, upset, capsize

2 *revoke, repeal, rescind, recall

Ana upset, *overturn: retract, recant, *abjure, forswear: abrogate, *annul reverse n *converse, obverse

Ana back, rear, posterior (see corresponding adjectives at POSTERIOR): opposite, contrary (see under OPPOSITE adj)

reversion 1 return, recurrence, recrudescence (see under RETURN vb)

2 Reversion, atavism, throwback are comparable when they mean return to an ancestral type or an instance of such return. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are evident in the adjectival forms reversionary and atavistic. Reversion and reversionary are the technical terms in the biological sciences for the reappearance of an ancestral character or characters in an individual, or for an organism or individual that manifests such a character <we could not have told, whether these characters in our domestic breeds were reversions or only analogous variations—Darwin> <similar mutations are paired together; divergent or reversionary individuals are eliminated—J. A. Thomson> Atavism and atavistic are widely used both in general and in technical English. Their implication is of an apparent reversion to a remote rather than to an immediate ancestral type through the reappearance of remote, even primitive, characters after a long period of latency. Often, in general use, this connotation of primitiveness carries with it a suggestion of barbarism or even degeneration (a magnificent atavism, a man so purely primitive—London) (those who had made England what it was had done so by sticking where they were, regardless of their own atavistic instincts, which might have led them back to France or Denmark—Brooks) Throwback is preferred to reversion or atavism by those who seek a picturesque or less technical word. It is chiefly applied to the concrete instance and is often extended to other than living things (the racial laws which excluded the Jews from the German community seemed . . . a shocking throwback to primitive times—Shirer) (an aristocrat of the old line, a throwback to another century—White)

Ana relapse, lapse, backsliding (see under LAPSE vb)

reversionary atavistic (see under REVERSION) revert 1 *return, recur, recrudescence

Ana *recede, retreat, retrograde, back: *lapse, relapse, backslide

2 *advert

Ana *return, recur review n 1 *criticism, critique, blurb, puff

2 *journal, periodical, magazine, organ, newspaper revile vituperate, rail, berate, rate, upbraid, *scold, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig

Ana vilify, calumniate, *malign, traduce, defame, asperse, slander, libel: *execrate, objurgate, curse

Ant laud —Con *praise, extol, eulogize, acclaim revise 1 *correct, rectify, emend, remedy, redress, amend, reform

Ana *improve, better, ameliorate: *change, alter, modify

2 *edit, compile, redact, rewrite, adapt

Ana amend, emend, *correct, rectify: *improve, better revive *restore, revivify, resuscitate

Ana *recover, recruit, regain: recuperate, *improve, gain: refresh, rejuvenate, *renew revivify *restore, revive, resuscitate

Ana reanimate (see base word at QUICKEN): *vitalize, activate, energize: galvanize, quicken, stimulate (see PROVOKE) revoke, reverse, repeal, rescind, recall are close synonyms when they mean to abrogate by undoing something previously done, especially in legal context. Revoke implies a calling back, annulling, abrogating; thus, a testator may revoke his will and make a new one; a benefactor may revoke a gift to an institution; a license board may revoke a license (the court revoked its sentence of death) (the Edict of Nantes was revoked by King Louis XIV) Reverse (see also REVERSE) usually implies the action of a higher court in overthrowing a law, a decree, or a decision previously made; it commonly suggests that the earlier law, decree, or decision has been disputed and that the case is now settled by this annulment, unless there is still a higher court to which an appeal may be carried. Reverse is, however, still occasionally used in the broader sense of revoke, with an implication of upsetting, when it applies to actions, decisions, or judgments of a personal or official but not judicial nature (the teacher reversed his judgment of the boy when he heard the full story) (the umpire reversed his decision after conferring with his colleague) Repeal applies to a law or statute which is revoked by authority, usually by the authority of the body that made it, but sometimes by the executive power or by the vote of the suffrage (the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States was repealed when the Twenty-first Amendment was passed) (Parliament has repealed several of the statutes made against nonconformists) Rescind implies the exercise of the proper authority in abolishing or making void. It may suggest exercise of legal, judicial, or legislative authority, or it may suggest the exercise of the summary authority of a sovereign, dictator, master, or parent (the council of ten had . . . power over the senate and other magistrates, rescinding their decisions—Hallam) (the monks petitioned, and the vote was rescinded—Freeman) In legal use rescind as applied to a contract means that it is voided and is as though it never had been. Recall (see also REMEMBER) is not a technical term though used sometimes of legal or judicial acts. It is capable of wider use than any of the other of these terms and can on occasion replace any of the others (recall a bid in bridge) (one cannot recall a sentence to death, if it has been carried out) (they recalled the hasty decree—Gibbon)

Ana *annul, abrogate, void: cancel, expunge, *erase: invalidate, *nullify revolt n revolution, uprising, insurrection, *rebellion, mutiny, putsch, coup

Ana insubordination, seditiousness or sedition, factiousness, contumaciousness or contumacy (see corresponding adjectives at INSUBORDINATE) revolving *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, repugnant Ana *horrible, horrid, horrific: repellent, distasteful, obnoxious, abhorrent (see REPUGNANT): odious, *hateful, abominable revolution *rebellion, uprising, revolt, insurrection, mutiny, putsch, coup

Ana overthrowing or overthrow, subverting or subversion, upsetting or upset, overturning or overturn (see corresponding verbs at OVERTURN): change, modification, alteration (see under CHANGE vb)

revolve *turn, rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl, pirouette

Ana *swing, sway, oscillate, vibrate reward n *premium, prize, award, meed, guerdon, bounty, bonus rewrite vb *edit, compile, revise, redact, adapt rhapsody *bombast, rant, fustian, rodomontade rhetorical, grandiloquent, magniloquent, aureate, flowery, euphuistic, bombastic are comparable when they mean emphasizing style often at the expense of thought. Rhetorical describes a style, discourse, passage, phrase, or word which, however skillfully constructed or chosen and however effective, impresses the reader or hearer as not natural or effortless, but the result of conscious endeavor to produce an effect (Burke catches your eye by rhetorical inversions—Quiller-Couch) (an essay on friendship, high-flown, rhetorical—Canby) Grandiloquent implies excess (as of elevation or color) and applies to an exaggerated, high-flown, and often pompous manner or style especially in language (the grandiloquent advertisement speaks at multitudes of people, and leaves them unmoved—Kleppner) (a great stone building like the grandiloquent boast of weak men—Greene) Magniloquent is not always distinguishable from grandiloquent, but it more often suggests boastfulness or extravagance than a high-flown eloquence (the magniloquent utterances of the drunken Falstaff) (continues his comic oration . . . bent on the choice of magniloquent phrase—E. K. Brown) Aureate implies excessive embellishment of style by strained figures of speech and rhetorical flourishes, strange or high-sounding words, and foreign phrases; in ordinary language and in reference to writings which have no pretensions to literature the same quality is described by flowery (the aureate prose of the Eliza bethans) <the flowery style of her letters> Euphuistic describes specifically a highly rhetorical and aureate style of the reign of Elizabeth I; in extended use it more often suggests extreme artificiality and a straining after effects that distract attention from the thought, rather than the affectation of elegance and the excessive use of alliteration, antithesis, and similes that characterized the original euphuism and are implied in euphuistic when used in its strict historical sense <in Love's Labour's Lost Shakespeare burlesqued many euphuistic affectations of language of his own time> <the bizarre quips and turns in which the . . . euphuistic writers delighted—Miles> Bombastic implies inflation or grandiosity of style. It suggests verbosity and grandiloquence rather than a straining for rhetorical effects  <Rubens' love for big canvases and mighty subjects led him over the boundary from the eloquent into the bombastic—Coates>

Ana eloquent, articulate, *vocal, fluent, voluble, glib; florid, *ornate, flamboyant: *inflated, turgid, tumid, flatulent

rhymer, rhymester *poet, versifier, poetaster, bard, minstrel, troubadour rhythm, meter, cadence can all mean the more or less regular rise and fall in intensity of sounds that one associates chiefly with poetry and music. Rhythm, which of these three terms is the most inclusive and the widest in its range of application, implies movement and flow as well as an agreeable succession of rising and falling sounds; it need not suggest regular alternation of these sounds, but it fundamentally implies the recurrence at fairly regular intervals of the accented or prolonged syllable in poetry or of the heavy beat or the accented note in music, so that no matter how many unaccented or unstressed syllables or notes lie between these, the continuing up and down movement is strongly apparent to the senses. Consequently rhythm is used not only in reference to speech sounds and musical tones ordered with relation to stress and time, but also to dancing, games, and various natural phenomena where a comparable pulsing movement is apparent, and even to the arts of design, where fluctuations in line or pattern suggest a pulsing movement <the wavering, lovely rhythms of the sea—Rose Macaulay> <every one learned music, dancing, and song. Therefore it is natural for them to regard rhythm and grace in all the actions of life—Ellis> <lost their talent in the deadening rhythms of war, its boredom, its concussion, and . . . its injustice—Mailer> Meter implies the reduction of rhythm to system and measure. Poetry that has meter has a definite rhythmical pattern which determines the typical foot or sometimes the arrangement of feet in each line and either the number of feet in every line or, if a stanzaic pattern is implied, in each verse of a stanza <the revolt against meter in poetry in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries> <the only strict antithesis to prose is meter—Wordsworth> In music meter implies the division of the rhythm into measures, all of which are uniform in number of beats or time units, and each of which begins with the accented tone. Cadence is the least clearly fixed in meaning of these words. The term has often been used as though it were equal to rhythm, or sometimes to meter, especially when the reference is to poetry <golden cadence of poesy—Shak.> <wit will shine through the harsh cadence of a rugged line—Dryden> <poetry can never again become a popular art until the poet gives himself wholly to "the cadence of consenting feet"—Read> Cadence often stresses the rise and fall of sound or the rhythm as heard, whether in prose or in poetry, and as influenced by tone or modulation, choice of words, and association of sound and feeling <great music like that of Prospero's speech in The Tempest or the cadence of Cleopatra's "Give me my robe"—Alexander> <I could hear the cadence of his voice and that was all, nothing but the measured rise and fall of syllables—Marquand> <the singsong cadence which jarred on her the more because she was still trying to free her own speech of it—Wouk> rib vb *banter, chaff, kid, rag, josh, jolly ribald obscene, gross, *coarse, vulgar

Ana *offensive, loathsome: indecent, indelicate (see INDECOROUS); lewd, lascivious, wanton (see LICENTIOUS); scurrilous, opprobrious (see ABUSIVE) ribbon fillet, band, *strip, stripe

rich, wealthy, affluent, opulent are applied both to persons and to things. The last three are close synonyms of rich, the general term, but they are more explicit in their implications and more limited in their range of application. One is rich that possesses more than enough to gratify normal desires and needs. Rich, therefore, may describe anyone or anything above what is felt as average or normal in possessions. When used of persons, without qualification, it implies the possession of money or of property, especially income-producing property   In its extended use one may be rich in friends, in talents, or in interests; a soil may be rich in nitrogen; a poem may be rich in meaning, a career in promise, a flower in fragrance. Also, something is rich which is above the line dividing the cheap from the costly or precious or dividing the stinted in elements or ingredients from the bountifully supplied     One is wealthy that possesses money, income-producing property, or intrinsically valuable things in great abundance. Wealthy is rarer than rich in extended use and usually connotes material possessions. It also more often than rich implies a way of living in keeping with one's income and a commanding position in the community, state, or world <power is in the hands of the wealthy> <the wealthy nations of Europe> <she was indeed rich, according to the standards of the Square; nay, wealthy!—Bennett> One is affluent that is prosperous and therefore continually increasing one's material possessions <men . . . obviously affluent by their excellent clothes and careful grooming—MacInnes> Affluent, though often used to describe persons, groups, or nations, is more often applied to their circumstances or to their state; thus, a rich man is in affluent circumstances if his income is increasing or, at least, not decreasing; one is reduced from an affluent position but not from riches or wealth, for only affluent implies increase and therefore suggests decrease as its opposite. One is opulent that is ostensibly and ostentatiously rich; thus, a person in affluent circumstances may or may not maintain an opulent establishment, for affluent suggests the inflow of money and opulent lavish expenditure. Hence opulent usually qualifies things that are luxurious, prodigal, expensively splendid, or sumptuous <opulent decorations> <opulent entertainment> When applied to persons opulent usually qualifies a specific term which harmonizes with it in implications <an opulent aristocracy> Occasionally opulent does not connote display but inexhaustible richness <the opulent genius of Shakespeare>

Ant poor —Con destitute, indigent, penurious (see corresponding nouns at POVERTY) ricochet vb *skip, bound, hop, curvet, lope, lollop rid, clear, unburden, disabuse, purge are comparable when they mean to set a person or thing free of something that encumbers. Rid is a rather general term but is likely to refer to concrete or specific matters which are burdensome or pestiferous <England had in the meantime ridded herself of the Stuarts, worried along under the Hanoverians—Replier>  Clear is likely to be used to refer to tangible matters which obstruct progress, clutter an area, or block vision <wars which . . . enabled the United States first to clear its own territory of foreign troops—Bemis> <rose from the food she had barely tasted and began to clear the table—Glasgow> and may be used also in relation to ideas that hinder progress <of service to his fellow Methodists in clearing away obstructions to modern thinking—H. K. Rowe> Unburden typically implies a freeing of oneself from something taxing or something distressing the mind or spirit, in the latter situation often by confessing, revealing, or frankly discussing <insisted that he unburden himself of most of the weighty chores that go with the job of majority leader—Time> <conquers his own submissiveness and unburdens himself, before his domineering wife, of all the accumulated resentment and dislike of years—S. M. Fitzgerald> Disabuse is appropriately chosen to refer to freeing the mind from an erroneous notion or an attitude or feeling making clear straightforward thought difficult <if men are now sufficiently enlightened to disabuse themselves of artifice, hypocrisy, and superstition—Adams> <neither familiarity with the history and institutions of Old World nations nor contact with them during two wars disabused the average American of his feeling of superiority—Commager> Purge may refer to cleansing out or purification from whatever is impure or alien or extrinsic <purged of all its unorthodox views—Shaw> <the room had never quite been purged of the bad taste of preceding generations—Edmund Wilson> In political matters it may suggest ruthless elimination <the dictator has purged academic faculties of every savant suspected of being opposed to his regime—H. M. Jones>

Ana *free, release, liberate: *exterminate, extirpate, eradicate, uproot: *abolish, extinguish riddle n puzzle, conundrum, enigma, problem, *mystery ride vb 1 Ride, drive as verbs (transitive and intransitive) and as nouns may both involve the idea of moving in or being carried along in a vehicle or conveyance or upon the back of something. The basic meaning of ride is a being borne along in or upon something; when this idea is uppermost, it makes little difference who or what controls the animal, the vehicle, or mechanism by which one is borne along; thus, one rides or rides on a horse, a bicycle, or a motorcycle when, mounted upon it, one controls its operation or movements, but a woman seated on a pillion behind the saddle may also be said to ride the horse, and a person in the rear seat of a tandem bicycle may be said to ride the bicycle, but a person in a sidecar of a motorcycle rides in the sidecar (not rides the motorcycle). Sometimes ride, the transitive verb, is preferred when the management of the horse and vehicle is also implied, and ride, the intransitive verb, when merely the being mounted upon a moving horse or vehicle is suggested <when he rides his horse his small daughter usually rides on it with him> The basic meaning of drive (see MOVE 1) is a causing to move along; the term therefore primarily refers to the action of an agent that controls the movement of a vehicle whether it is drawn by an animal or self-propelled <drove a four-horse brewery wagon> <it is usually wise to have your child taught to drive by a professional> There is usually a further distinction between ride and drive when movement in a vehicle or conveyance is implied. Ride usually suggests movement in a vehicle (as a train, a bus, or a stranger's automobile) which is not in any sense under one's control <it is a long train ride from New York to

Chicago> <he said he preferred riding in a bus to riding in a train> <will you give me a ride to the next town?> Drive often suggests movement in a horse-drawn or motor vehicle the course of which is in some way or in some degree under one's control, whether one is the actual driver or one (as an employer, patron, or guest) whose wishes the actual driver observes <take a drive along the shore of the lake> <we are going for a short drive>

2 *bait, badger, heckle, hector, chivy, hound

Ana *worry, annoy, harass, harry: persecute, oppress (see WRONG vb): torment, torture (see AFFLICT) ride n drive (see UNDER ride vb)

Ana *journey, tour, trip, excursion, expedition ridicule vb Ridicule, deride, mock, taunt, twit, rally are comparable when they mean to make a person or thing the object of laughter. Ridicule implies deliberate and often malicious belittling of the person or thing ridiculed <the old State religion which Augustine attacks, ridiculing the innumerable Roman godlings whose names he perhaps found in Varro—Inge> <the man who wants to preserve his personal identity is ridiculed as an eccentric—Harris> Deride implies a bitter or contemptuous spirit <he took his revenge on the fate that had made him sad by fiercely deriding everything—Huxley> <sardonic wisecracks in which supposedly lofty ideals are mercilessly derided—Times Lit. Sup.> Mock stresses scornful derision and usually implies words or gestures or sometimes acts expressive of one's defiance or contempt <nowhere can men be entirely happy while human nature is still being mocked and tortured on other parts of the globe—Kennan> When used in reference to things, mock often implies a setting at naught that suggests scorn or derision   Taunt implies both mockery and reproach; it often connotes jeering insults <taunted in fun or in earnest with the foibles and shortcomings of their fathers—de Laguna> <he . . . took no part in the revivals and usually teased and taunted those who did—J. M. Hunt> Twit may come close to taunt and imply a mocking or cruel casting something up to someone <the absence of ideas with which Matthew Arnold twits them—Inge>  but twit, like rally, may imply no more than good-natured raillery or friendly ridicule <the paper delights in twitting new laws—Newsweek>

Ana *scoff, flout, jeer, gibe: caricature, burlesque, travesty (see under CARICATURE n)

ridiculous *laughable, risible, ludicrous, droll, funny, comic, comical, farcical

Ana absurd, preposterous, *foolish, silly: amusing, diverting, entertaining (see AMUSE): *fantastic, grotesque, bizarre, antic rife *prevailing, prevalent, current

Ana abundant, *plentiful, copious, ample: *common, ordinary, familiar rifle vb plunder, *rob, loot, burglarize

Ana despoil, spoilate, *ravage, pillage, sack, devastate: *steal, pilfer, purloin, filch rift n *breach, break, split, schism, rent, rupture

Ana *crack, cleft, fissure: gap, interval, hiatus, interruption (see BREAK): separation, division (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE) right adj 1 *good

Ant wrong

2 *correct, accurate, exact, precise, nice

Ana fitting, proper, meet (see FIT): *decorous, decent, seemly

Ant wrong

right n Right, prerogative, privilege, perquisite, appanage, birthright can all mean something to which a person has a just or legal claim. They differ in their implications both of the nature of the thing claimed and of the grounds of the claim. Right, the most inclusive term, may designate something (as a power, a condition of existence, or a possession) to which one is entitled by nature, by the principles of morality, by grant, by the laws of the land, or by purchase (the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness) (rights in a patent) (we do not lose our right to condemn either measures or men because the country is at war—Justice Holmes) (every person has a right to a certain amount of room in the world, and should not be made to feel wicked in standing up for what is due to him—Russell) Prerogative denotes a right which belongs to an actual or a legal person by virtue of status (as in sex, rank, office, or character) and which thereby gives precedence, superiority, or an advantage over others (the fundamental fact is that eminent domain is a prerogative of the State—Justice Holmes) (endurance and stamina in the last analysis are prerogatives of the male—Gerald Beaumont) Privilege applies to a special right either granted as a favor or concession or belonging to one as a prerogative; privilege often implies an advantage over others (equal rights for all, special privileges for none—Jefferson) (a propertied class struggling for its privileges which it honestly deems to be its rights—White) (what men prize most is a privilege, even if it be that of chief mourner at a funeral—J. R. Lowell) Perquisite signifies something, usually money or a thing of monetary value, to which one is entitled, especially by custom, as an addition to one's regular revenue, salary, or wages (fees that constitute the perquisites of an office) (a domestic servant often regards her mistress's cast-off clothing as her perquisite) (the petty graft and favoritism which are normal perquisites of machine rule—Green Peyton) Appanage is often used as if it meant merely an adjunct or appurtenance (whose literary work had become a mere appanage of his domestic life—Brooks) but more precisely it can denote something to which one has a claim through custom, through tradition, or through natural necessity (the religious supremacy became a kind of appanage to the civil sovereignty—Milman) (beauty, which is the natural appanage of happiness—Patmore) (their acquired prestige as a token of power and dignity made gloves an appanage of the ruling classes—Anny Latour) Birthright, which basically applies to the property or possessions belonging to one by right of inheritance (see HERITAGE), has acquired extended use in which it differs from right only in being restricted to a right to which one is entitled by some reason connected with one's nativity (as by being a man, a native-born citizen, or a descendant of a particular family line) (we sell our birthright whenever we sell our liberty for any price of gold or honor—Whipple) (the poetic imagination that was his Elizabethan birthright—Parrington)

Ana *claim, title: *freedom, license, liberty righteous virtuous, noble, *moral, ethical Ana *upright, honest, just, honorable

Ant iniquitous —Con *vicious, nefarious, flagitious, corrupt: profligate, dissolute, reprobate, *abandoned rightful *due, condign

Ana *fair, equitable, just, impartial: *lawful, legal, legitimate rigid 1 *stiff, inflexible, tense, stark, wooden

Ana *firm, hard, solid: compact, *close: tough, tenacious, *strong

Ant elastic —Con resilient, flexible, supple, springy (see ELASTIC)

2 Rigid, rigorous, strict, stringent are often used interchangeably in the sense of extremely severe and stern, especially when applied to laws or imposed conditions or to the persons who enforce them. There are, however, differences in implications and in range of application. Basically rigid and rigorous imply extreme stiffness or utter lack of elasticity or flexibility, while strict and stringent imply tightness so extreme as to permit no looseness, laxity, or latitude. These implications are preserved in their extended uses. Rigid (see also STIFF) in extended use is applied less often to persons than to their acts or to the conditions the persons make for themselves or others; it usually suggests uncompromising inflexibility (rigid laws) (rigid discipline) (a rigid system, faithfully administered, would be better than a slatternly compromise—Benson) Rigorous is applied to persons, to their acts, to their way of life, and to the natural or artificial conditions under which they live. It commonly implies imposed severities or hardships; thus, a rigid rule admits of no change or compromise, but a rigorous rule imposes exacting or harsh conditions; a rigorous enforcement of a law makes the people feel its rigors; a rigid enforcement of a law admits of no relaxations in anyone's favor; one can speak of a rigorous winter, a rigorous disciplinarian, the rigorous life of an explorer or a monk. Strict is applied chiefly to persons or their acts and denotes showing or demanding undeviating conformity to rules, standards, conditions, or requirements; thus, a strict rule demands obedience; a strict teacher may impose rigorous discipline and adhere to a rigid system of grading; a strict watch admits no relaxing of vigilance, and strict silence no freedom to speak; a strict construction of a law is one confined to the letter of that law (the strictest obligations of intellectual honesty—Inge) (strict justice, either on earth or in heaven, was the last thing that society cared to face—Henry Adams) Stringent is to strict as rigorous is to rigid, in that it usually emphasizes the effect or effects rather than the presence of a quality in an agent or his act. Both stringent and rigorous connote imposition, but stringent suggests impositions that limit, curb, or sometimes coerce; thus, a stringent rule narrows one's freedom or range of activities; a stringent interpretation of the constitution may either be narrower or more restrictive in its effects than the letter of the constitution warrants; poverty may be described as stringent when it narrows one's opportunities to satisfy one's aspirations; necessity may be called stringent when it forces one to live within bounds or forces one into distasteful acts (he endeavors by the most stringent regulations to prevent the growth of inequalities of wealth—Dickinson) (colleges with the most stringent admissions requirements—Fredriksen) (with energy sufficiently great to burst the bounds of the most stringent confinement—Rogow)

Ana *inflexible, inexorable, obdurate, adamant, adamantine: stern, *severe, austere

Ant lax

rigor *difficulty, hardship, vicissitude

Ana austerity, severity, sternness (see corresponding adjectives at SEVERE): harshness, roughness (see corresponding adjectives at ROUGH): *trial, tribulation, visitation, affliction

Ant amenity rigorous *rigid, strict, stringent

Ana *stiff, rigid, inflexible: stern, austere, ascetic, *severe: exacting, *onerous, burdensome, oppressive

Con *easy, facile, light, smooth, effortless rim brim, brink, *border, margin, verge, edge rind *skin, bark, peel, hide, pelt ring n *combination, combine, party, bloc, faction ring vb *surround, environ, encircle, circle, encompass, compass, hem, gird, girdle Ana confine, circumscribe, *limit, restrict: *enclose, corral, wall ringing adj *resonant, sonorous, resounding, vibrant, orotund rip vb *tear, rend, split, cleave, rive ripe *mature, matured, mellow, adult, grown-up Ana *seasonable, timely, well-timed: *consummate, finished, accomplished Ant green: unripe —Con raw, *rude, crude, callow: *immature, unmaturing, unmellow ripen *mature, develop, age Ana *improve, better: enhance, heighten, *intensify: season (see HARDEN) rise vb 1 *spring, arise, originate, derive, flow, issue, emanate, proceed, stem Ana *appear, emerge, loom Ant abate (sense 3) —Con ebb, subside, wane (see ABATE)

 2 Rise, arise, ascend, mount, soar, tower, rocket, levitate, surge are comparable when they mean to move or come up from a lower to a higher level. Rise is the comprehensive term interchangeable with all the others, but often at a sacrifice of explicitness or picturesqueness. Rise is idiomatic, and therefore the preferred word, when used: (1) in reference to persons or sometimes animals that get up from a recumbent position (as in bed or after a fall) or from a sitting or kneeling position <rise every morning at six> <the injured horse was unable to rise> <the audience rose when the national anthem was sung> or (2) in reference to things that give the impression of coming up into view <the sun rises at 5:30> or to an object that seems to lift itself up <the hills rise in the distance> or (3) in reference to fluid (as water) under the influence of some natural force that sends it upward <the river rises regularly each spring> <the mercury is rising> or to any natural phenomenon indicated by such rising of water or other fluid <the tide rises early tonight> <the temperature is rising> The word may be used more widely than these instances indicate, but in these and in closely related extensions and metaphoric applications rise is specifically necessary <for the first two weeks, or three . . . the work rose about him like a tide—Mary Austin> <now he felt his mother counting the week's money, and her wrath rising—D. H. Lawrence> <felt the color rising in her face—Sedgwick> Arise (see also SPRING) is narrower in its range of application than rise and in most uses is felt to be rhetorical or poetic excepting perhaps the senses of to get up in the morning after a night's sleep or to rise from the grave <arise, arise; awake the snoring citizens with the bell —Shak.> <the temple rends, the rocks burst, the dead arise—Steele> Ascend and mount (see also ASCEND 2) carry a stronger suggestion of continuous or progressive upward movement and of climbing than rise and may therefore be used in distinction from the latter word; thus, the sun rises at dawn, but it ascends from dawn to noon; smoke rises from a fire and ascends to the treetops; a lark rises from the ground and mounts to the skies; a scientist's hopes rise at the first indication of his success and mount as one experiment after another turns out as expected <the third day he rose again from the dead, he ascended into heaven—Apostles' Creed: Book of Common Prayer> Soar even in metaphoric use suggests the straight upward flight of a bird that mounts on rising currents without flapping of wings; it therefore usually connotes continuous, often swift, ascent into high altitudes especially intellectually, spiritually, or aesthetically <[the skylark] singing still dost soar, and soaring ever singest—Shelley> <up from the eastern sea soars the delightful day—Housman> <young soaring imaginations—John Reed> <the soaring melody of the rondo in the Waldstein sonata is Beethoven's . . . transfiguration of the air of a ribald folk song—Lowes> Tower is used more often in reference to things that attain conspicuous height through growth or thrusting upward, or building than in reference to things that actually move upward; it also frequently connotes extension to a height beyond that of such comparable neighboring objects as buildings, trees, mountains, or, when eminence is suggested, persons <the Empire State Building towers above New York City> <full thirty foot she towered from waterline to rail—Kipling> <[this towering but erratic genius . . . combined in his tempestuous character so many of the best and the worst qualities—Shirer> When the word does imply movement upward, it usually evokes a picture of something shooting up so as to suggest a tower or steeple <the nimble flames towered, nodded, and swooped through the surrounding air—Hardy> Rocket suggests the inordinately swift ascent of a projectile; it is used chiefly with reference to things that rise with extraordinary rapidity or wildly and uncontrollably (as under the impetus of events) <prices have rocketed sky-high—Kent> <cock pheasants rocket from the misty spinneys—Glover> <Indian pride was reawakened; Indian hopes rocketed—J. M. Brown> Levitate implies a rising or floating in or as if in air that suggests the intervention of antigravity; the term connotes actual or induced lightness or buoyancy and ease of movement  <we are levitated between acceptance and disbelief—O'Faolain> <[dwellings . . . levitated by his imagination into new structural creations—Flanner> The word is sometimes specifically associated with supernatural and especially spiritualistic practices <the levitation of a table at a séance> and with illusory risings <it is asserted that a man or a woman levitated to the ceiling, floated about there, and finally sailed out by the window—T. H. Huxley> Surge suggests the upward heaving or spurning of waves. It is used often with up, in reference to emotions and thoughts that rise powerfully from the depths of subconsciousness  <[things half-guessed, obscurely felt, surged up from unsuspected depths in her—Wharton> Quite as often, usually with an adverb of direction, it suggests a rolling movement comparable to that of oncoming waves <the troops surged forward> <[traffic surging past]>

Ana climb, *ascend, mount, scale: *increase, enlarge, augment: *lift, raise, elevate Ant decline: set (as the sun) rise n *beginning, genesis, initiation

Ana *origin, source, inception, root, provenance, provenience: derivation, origination (see corresponding verbs at SPRING)

Ant fall

risible droll, funny, *laughable, ludicrous, ridiculous, comic, comical, farcical

Ana amusing, diverting, entertaining (see AMUSE) risk n hazard, *danger, peril, jeopardy

Ana *chance, fortune, luck, accident: exposedness or exposure, liableness or liability, openness (see corresponding adjectives at LIABLE)

Con safety, security (see corresponding adjectives at SAFE): *exemption, immunity risk vb *venture, hazard, chance, jeopardize, endanger, imperil

Ana dare, brave, beard, *face, defy: confront, encounter, *meet risky precarious, hazardous, *dangerous, perilous

Ana *adventurous, venturesome: chancy, *random, hap-hazard, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky rite ritual, liturgy, ceremonial, ceremony, *form, formality ritual rite, liturgy, ceremonial, ceremony, *form, formality rival vb 1 Rival, compete, vie, emulate can all mean to strive to equal or surpass another or his achievements. Rival (see also MATCH) usually suggests an attempt to outdo each other (a work . . . which contending sects have rivalled each other in approving—Heber) Compete and vie, usually with the opponent explicitly stated after with and the objective after for, may sometimes omit direct reference to one or both of these (a modified apple syrup to compete in the . . . market of syrups for infant feeding—Crops in Peace and War) Compete stresses a struggle for an objective (as position, favor, profit, or a prize); unlike rival, it need not suggest a conscious attempt to outdo another but may imply a quite impersonal striving (athletes competing in track sports) (colleges compete with each other, promotionally, for public favor—Hoff) (the buyer does not compete with the seller. He bargains with him; he competes with other buyers—C. E. Griffin) Vie carries less suggestion of arduous struggle to hold one's own or to excel than compete, but it may suggest more conscious awareness of the opponent (the calypso singers who . . . vie with one another in duels of lyrical improvisation—The Lamp) It sometimes suggests the excitement of contest that is a game rather than a combat (the boys vied with each other in showing off) (they vied with each other in enlivening their cups by lamenting the depravity of this degenerate age—Peacock) Emulate implies a conscious effort to equal or surpass someone or something by imitation or by using him or it as a model (a simplicity emulated without success by numerous modern poets—T. S. Eliot) (these young . . . heroes, reared on the immense empty western plains, seek to emulate an eastern sophistication—Geismar) (emulated the proverbial and sagacious rat; he got off in time—S. H. Adams)

Ana strive, struggle, try, *attempt: *contend, fight

2 *match, equal, approach, touch rive vb cleave, split, rend, *tear, rip

Ana sever, sunder, divide, *separate: *cut, hew, chop rivet vb *secure, anchor, moor

Ana *fasten, attach, affix, fix: *join, unite, connect, link roam *wander, stray, ramble, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander roar vb Roar, bellow, bluster, bawl, vociferate, clamor, howl, ululate are comparable when they mean to make a very loud and often a continuous or protracted noise. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are to be found in their nouns, all of which are identical in spelling with the corresponding verbs except vociferation and ululation. Roar implies such a heavy, hoarse, and prolonged sound as is made by the booming sea, by thunder that reverberates, by a lion, or by persons when they lose control (as in rage or in boisterous merriment) (far away guns roar—Woolf) (the harsh north wind . . . roared in the piazzas—Osbert Sitwell) (it's the same to her, whether we coo like turtledoves or roar like twenty lions—Meredith) (his anecdotes sent the audience into roars of laughter) Bellow suggests the loud, hollow crying of a bull; by extension, it applies to sound that seems to reverberate loudly from a cavity or to come insistently from a distance (bellowing with hoarse merriment—Kenneth Roberts) (the bellow of crocodiles—Forester) Bluster suggests not only the violence or turbulence of a windstorm but the lashing quality of its blasts (when autumn blusters and the orchard rocks—Browning) It is applicable not only to violent weather but also to something (as loud boastful swaggering or empty but noisy threats or protests) that suggests such weather. The term in extended use often carries a connotation of useless or futile effort (do their work without bluster or ostentation—Walker) (she expressed her opinion gently but firmly, while he blustered for a time and then gave in—Anderson) Bawl is sometimes interchangeable with bellow, but typically it suggests less depth and resonance and more persistence (cattle bawling for water) As applied to human utterance, bawl is more or less derogatory (despite all political bawls and bellows about . . . prices—Time) Even when applied specifically to unrestrained weeping and wailing it tends to call up an unsympathetic image of dishevelment and disorder (collapsed in an armchair in the lobby and bawled . . . uncontrollably—Kahn) Vociferate and vociferation, like bawl, imply loud and urgent human utterance, but they are far less derogatory, if derogatory at all, more adapted to writing than to speech, and more likely to suggest a reason (as rage or excitement), a call for help, or a protest, than mere temperament (an atmosphere of shrieks and moans; prayers vociferated like blasphemies—Conrad) (the perpetual vociferation of inflammatory opinion—Sampson) Clamor implies, usually, loud noises in confusion; it may suggest a mingling of voices or sounds. The term can apply to loud sounds, whatever their source. As applied to human utterances, it commonly gains the suggestion of vehemence (as in insisting, urging, or protesting) (half-starved men and women clamoring for food—Kenneth Roberts) (Europe has begun to clamor for political disciplinarians to save her—Shaw) (clamored their piteous prayer incessantly—Longfellow) Howl often stresses such loudness and mournfulness as is characteristic of the protracted cry of dogs and wolves; it may be used not only of animals but also of persons or things that make doleful or agonized and often prolonged sounds (a legion of foul fiends . . . howled in my ears—Milton) (howls of mingled rage and pain) (the howling of the wind on a stormy night) Especially when used of human utterance, howl may suggest not only the quality of the sound but the unrestrained character of the utterance or of its underlying emotion (he . . . chortled at their errors, howled at their inconsistencies—Martin Gardner) (howled at a brother for his low-down ways, his prowling, guzzling, sneak-thief days—Lindsay) (from faint doubt to uneasy suspicion, from the stirring of resentment to the howl of outraged protest—Lewis & Maude) Ululate and ululation are less common and more literary than howl, from which they differ chiefly in carrying less suggestion of unrestrained emotion and a stronger implication of wailing, often giving a hint of the peculiar rhythm of the sounds (ululating coyotes) (an ululating baritone mushy with pumped-up pity—E. B. White) (who uttered in public or in private such high-pitched notes of ululation—Swinburne)

Ana reverberate, repercuss, *rebound: yell, *shout: bay, *bark, growl, yelp

rob vb Rob, plunder, rifle, loot, burglarize are comparable when they mean to take unlawfully possessions of a person or from a place. All in this basic use imply both an owner of and value inherent in the thing taken. In its basic and legal use rob implies the taking of personal property or valuables from another or from a place in a felonious manner (as by the exercise of violence, by intimidation, or by trickery or fraud) (rob a bank) (rob a man of his savings by selling him worthless securities) In extended use rob implies deprivation by unjust means or by powers beyond one's control <rob a person of his good name> <the high winds robbed the trees of their fruit>  Plunder implies a despoliation by force (as by armies in war or organized gangs and bandits); it often suggests robbery on an extensive scale or a ravaging or pillaging of a territory <travelers through the remote sections of the country were in constant danger of being plundered> <plunder a warehouse> <plundering wrecked ships . . . was a well-established business in many places on our shores—Shaw> Sometimes it is extended to wasting or destroying that suggests a pillaging <the reduction of soil erosion and plundering of the soil—Farmer's Weekly> <big business which serves the great metropolis, or plunders it—Upton Sinclair> Rifle, like plunder, usually implies a despoliation of possessions or valuables, but it distinctively stresses a breaking into and ransacking and therefore usually takes as its object a place, building, treasury, or receptacle <rifle a strongbox> <rifle a palace> <rifle a man's pockets> But the word may also be used when ransacking for the sake of finding something is the chief implication <awakened . . . to find him rifling through her desk in a desperate search for writing materials—Brand Blanshard> Loot differs from plunder chiefly in its suggestion of circumstances which explain the despoliation or make it exceedingly reprehensible; it sometimes implies defiance of all laws governing civilized conduct <loot the bodies of those killed in a wreck> or desperation <if we left them to starve they would begin by breaking our windows and end by looting our shops and burning our houses—Shaw> or utter venality <pressing indelicate questions about . . . the looting of the forest and mineral reserves—G. W. Johnson> but it quite commonly refers to pillaging by undisciplined soldiers or by mobs <soldiers looted the town after it was captured> Burglarize implies an act of breaking and entering by night in order to steal; usually, however, it carries, as burglary in law does not necessarily carry, an implication that one's purpose has been accomplished <the house was burglarized while its occupants were asleep>

Ana *steal, pilfer, purloin, filch, lift: defraud, swindle, *cheat: despoil, pillage, sack, *ravage robber thief, burglar (see under THEFT) robbery larceny, *theft, burglary robe vb *clothe, attire, dress, apparel, array robust *healthy, sound, wholesome, hale, well

Ana *strong, sturdy, stout, stalwart: athletic, husky, *muscular, sinewy: *vigorous, energetic, lusty

Ant frail, feeble rock vb *shake, agitate, convulse

Ana *swing, sway, undulate, oscillate: totter, quake, tremble (see SHAKE) rocket vb *rise, arise, ascend, mount, soar, tower, levitate, surge rococo adj *ornate, baroque, flamboyant, florid rodomontade *bombast, rhapsody, rant, fustian

Ana boasting, bragging, vaunting (see BOAST vb): vain-glory, vanity, *pride: magniloquence, grandiloquence (see corresponding adjectives at RHETORICAL) rogue *villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rascal, scamp, rascalion, miscreant

Ana *vagabond, vagrant, tramp, hobo, bum: malefactor, culprit, delinquent (see CRIMINAL) roughish *playful, frolicsome, sportive, waggish, impish, mischievous roily *turbid, muddy roll n *list, *table, catalog, schedule, register, roster, inventory rollick vb frolic, disport, sport, *play, romp, gambol rollick n frolic, disport, sport, play, romp, gambol (see under PLAY vb)

romantic adj *sentimental, mawkish, maudlin, soppy, mushy, slushy

Ana fanciful, *imaginary, quixotic, fantastic, visionary: invented, created (see INVENT): picturesque, pictorial, vivid, *graphic romp n frolic, rollick, gambol, disport, sport, play (see under PLAY vb)

romp vb frolic, rollick, gambol, disport, sport, *play room n 1 Room, chamber, apartment all denote space in a building enclosed or set apart by a partition. Room is the word in ordinary use. Chamber is somewhat elevated; it is used chiefly of a private room, especially of a bedroom on an upper floor <high in her chamber up a tower to the east—Tennyson> <he . . . hardly ever slept two nights successively in one chamber—Southey> Apartment is decreasingly frequent in the sense of a single room <her morning room was an airy apartment on the first floor—Braddon>

2 Room, berth, play, elbowroom, leeway, margin, clearance can all mean enough space or scope for free movement.

Room, the general term, often means sufficient or ample space for doing something (as working, growing or developing, sitting, passing, or entering or leaving) <space is room . . . and room is roominess, a chance to be, live and move—Dewey> But the word may also mean an occasion, an opportunity, or an opening that admits or permits something <there is room for hope> <believing Mexico's behavior left no room for peaceful settlement—Billington> <in search of a wider naturalism which will find room for life, mind, and spirit within the scheme of nature—Inge>

Berth, basically a nautical term meaning maneuvering space for a ship, in more general use denotes a space kept between one and some source of potential danger <an orderly place to which outlaws and criminals gave wide berth—Holbrook> Play (see also PLAY, FUN) can specifically imply freedom of movement and action especially with reference to two or more things which must work together in close relation or without interference or conflict <some play must be allowed to the joints if the machine is to work—Justice Holmes> <the free play of passion and thought . . . were crushed out of existence under this stern and rigid rule—Dickinson>

Elbowroom does not greatly differ from room except that it is somewhat more forceful and definitely implies freedom from interference or constraint as well as space for movement or for action <which would give him more elbowroom to act against France—Chesterfield> Leeway, basically a nautical term meaning the drift to leeward especially of a sailing vessel, in its closest extended sense means a falling off from the line of progress and therefore may connote something (as a shortage) to be made up <Africa has been late in its emergence into modern civilization and it has still considerable leeway to make up—Simnett> More frequently, however, leeway tends to mean room or margin for freedom of action <educational programs . . . must allow leeway for interests which can develop into avocations—Sat. Review> <the president was given wide leeway in deciding what constituted a threat to public safety—C. E. Black & K. D. White> <he asked his creditors to allow him a little leeway>

Margin (see also BORDER) implies an amount (as of time, money, or material) additionally allowed or made available so as to provide for contingencies or emergencies which cannot be foreseen <the King, in his instructions, left a wide margin of discretion to the generals—Froude> <an enormous margin of luxury . . . against which we can draw for our vital needs—Lippmann> Clearance stresses lack of obstruction.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Typically it implies a carefully calculated amount of space between two physical objects such as the water level and the underside of a bridge, or a roadway and the underside of a viaduct above it, or a shaft and the hole into which it is fitted easily but not loosely (the railway tunnel has just sufficient clearance to permit passage of the new freight cars) Sometimes it may apply to intangible obstructions and then stress removal (as by the satisfying of legal or official requirements) rather than planned avoidance (security clearance of those with access to secret atomic information—Palfrey) roost vb perch, *alight, light, land root n *origin, source, inception, provenance, provenience, prime mover

Ana beginning, commencing or commencement, starting or start (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN): foundation, basis, ground (see BASE)

root vb *applaud, cheer roseate *hopeful, optimistic, rose-colored rose-colored *hopeful, optimistic, roseate roster *list, table, catalog, schedule, register, roll, inventory rot vb *decay, decompose, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate, crumble

Ana corrupt, vitiate, *debase: taint, *contaminate, pollute, defile rot n *nonsense, twaddle, drivel, bunk, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, bull rotate 1 *turn, revolve, gyrate, circle, spin, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl, pirouette

2 Rotate, alternate can both mean to succeed or cause to succeed each other in turn. Rotate may be used in reference to two or more persons or things; it implies indefinite repetition of the order of succession. Thus, persons rotate in jobs or offices when they periodically interchange their jobs or offices according, usually, to a predetermined scheme; one rotates crops who grows different things on the same land in successive seasons in an order calculated to maintain soil fertility or to enrich exhausted soil. Alternate differs from rotate in being referable only to two persons or things; though it also implies repetition of the order, it does not convey so strong a suggestion of continuity (alternate workers on an exhausting job) (alternate hot and cold applications in the treatment of a bruise) (the weather alternated between blinding sandstorms and brilliant sunlight—Cather)

Ana interchange, *exchange, bandy: succeed, *follow, ensue rotter *cad, bounder

rotund plump, chubby, portly, stout, *fleshy, fat, corpulent, obese

Ant angular —Con *lean, spare, lank, lanky, gaunt, rawboned, skinny, scrawny rough adj 1 Rough, harsh, uneven, rugged, scabrous are comparable when they mean not having a smooth or even surface, exterior, or texture. Rough, the usual and comprehensive word, basically applies to whatever may be said to have a surface or an exterior which to the sense of touch or to the sight is not smooth but is covered with perceptible inequalities (as points, bristles, projections, or ridges) (rough ground) (a rough block of stone) (the rough skin of chapped hands) (a rough tweed) (a rough, unshaved face) Often when applied to materials and substances employed in the arts and in manufacturing, rough means lacking a final finish (as of polishing, smoothing, or dressing) (a rough diamond) (rough steel) (rough lumber) By extension the term applies also to things which impress another than the tactile sense or one's nerves or feelings as lacking in smoothness and evenness (rough words) (rough winds) (rough sounds) (he has had a rough time) (see also RUDE). Harsh suggests a more definitely disagreeable sensation or impression than rough; when applied to what is felt with the hand, it implies a surface or texture that is distinctly unpleasant to the tactile sense (a harsh fabric) (harsh sand) or when applied to something heard, it suggests a rasping, grating quality (harsh voices) (harsh din broke the fair music—Milton) and when applied to something seen, tasted, or smelled, it suggests a character or quality that is offensive or repellent to a sensitive person (a harsh liquor) (harsh features) (a harsh combination of colors) Unlike rough, harsh in its extended senses seldom implies lack of polish or refinement, but rather it suggests a nature that is unfeeling, cruel, and indifferent to the pain it inflicts (a harsh critic) (a harsh parent) or when applied to things, effectiveness in promoting discomforts or in imposing rigors (a harsh rebuke) (a harsh climate) (a harsh sentence) Uneven applies either to surfaces or to lines and suggests a lack of uniformity in height through all the points of the surface (an uneven road) (an uneven floor) or a lack of straightness and the presence of curves or angles (an uneven edge) (an uneven hem) In extended use it implies a lack of uniformity especially in excellence or agreeableness in all the parts (as of a life, a performance, or a work of art) (the artist's brushwork in this painting is uneven) (the trio's playing of the sonata was uneven) Rugged, more often applied to persons so strong and healthy or machines so strongly made that they can survive great stress and strain, is not uncommonly employed in the sense of rough; in such use it applies chiefly to surfaces broken by ridges, prominences, gorges, and gullies that can offer serious difficulty to the traveler or worker (a rugged road up a mountain) or which (as in the case of faces or countenances) are gaunt, seamed, or heavy-featured and suggest strength or maturity (any resemblance between you, with your rugged strong face and your coal-black hair, and this young Adonis—Wilde) (his face had already lost its youthful chubbiness, and was becoming somewhat like William's—rough-featured, almost rugged—D. H. Lawrence) Rugged is also applicable to writing which has not been made smooth, flowing, and agreeable to the ear, sometimes, but not necessarily, through lack of care or skill (the most rugged-seeming of prose dialogue, the kind . . . that people sometimes praise as "simply a page torn from the book of life"—Montague)

Scabrous applies basically to a surface that is rough to the touch though not necessarily uneven; in this sense it is a generic term including such species as scaly, scurfy, scabby, thorny, prickly, knobby, and knotty when applied to surfaces (a scabrous leaf) (a scabrous hide) In extended use scabrous applies chiefly to subject matter or to writings and works of art having subject matter that is prickly or thorny, or difficult to treat, often because it is offensive to the tastes or morals of the community (what writer . . . has spoken more acutely on the somewhat scabrous, but none the less important subject of feminine "temperament"?—Huxley)

Ana hard, solid, *firm: *coarse, gross: *rank, rampant Ant smooth

2 *rude, crude, uncouth, raw, callow, green

Ana brusque, crusty, gruff, curt, blunt, *bluff: ungracious, uncivil, discourteous, impolite (see RUDE): *indecorous, unseemly, indecent, indelicate

Ant gentle roundabout *indirect, circuitous

Ana sinuous, *winding, tortuous, flexuous rouse arouse, *stir, awaken, rally, waken

Ana enliven, *quicken, animate, vivify: stimulate, excite, *provoke: *incite, foment, instigate roustabout *worker, workman, workingman, laborer, mechanic, artisan, operative, hand, craftsman, handi-craftsman rout n *crowd, throng, press, crush, mob, horde rout vb *conquer, vanquish, defeat, subdue, subjagate, reduce, overcome, surmount, overthrow, beat, lick route n *way, course, passage, pass, artery route vb forward, transmit, remit, ship, *send, dispatch rove *wander, stray, roam, ramble, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander row n *line, rank, file, echelon, tier

Ana series, sequence, *succession, train row n *brawl, broil, fracas, melee, rumpus, scrap

Ana fight, affray, fray, combat, conflict, *contest: altercation, wrangle, *quarrel, squabble royal regal, *kingly, queenly, imperial, princely

Ana *splendid, resplendent, glorious, superb: august, majestic, stately, imposing (see GRAND) rubbish n *refuse, waste, trash, debris, garbage, offal rube bumpkin, hick, yokel, clodhopper, clown, lout, *boor, churl rude 1 Rude, rough, crude, raw, callow, green, uncouth mean deficient in the qualities that make for finish or for perfection in development or in use. Rude, as applied to men and their minds, suggests a comparatively low state of culture or a dearth of learning more often than savagery or barbarism, although it may suggest the latter (like a rude and savage man of Ind—Shak.) (a rude, domineering, arrogant type of man, without cultivation or culture—Shirer) As applied to the things which men make or do, rude suggests the makers' ignorance of technique or of proper materials, their inexperience or inexperience or a deficiency of materials (rude attempts at verse) (rude implements) (rude workmanship) (a rude hut) (our father Adam sat under the Tree and scratched with a stick in the mold; and the first rude sketch that the world had seen was joy to his mighty heart—Kipling) Rough (see also ROUGH 1) usually suggests more harshness or violence than rude and a more culpable ignorance or inexperience. As applied to men and their manners, the term usually implies the absence of signs not only of polish and refinement but of gentleness, politeness, and often even civility. It does not, however, necessarily imply boldness, insolence, boorishness, or other unpleasant qualities (a plain, rough, honest man, and wise, tho' not learned—Addison) (Phil was rough and frank . . . she had brought herself up in a hard school—Sackville-West) (use rough language) As applied to men's works and products, rough suggests less lack of expertness or deficiency of materials than offhandedness, haste, or indifference to technique; it is typically applied to things which are not carefully made because they suffice for the purpose or are not yet finished, being in an early stage of a process or development (make a first rough draft of a speech) (a rough guess) (the style of the work lost its polish, became rough—Mailer) Crude may be applied to men and their acts, words, or products, but it gets its fundamental implications from its historically earlier application to things which have not been touched by man (as in processing, refining, or treating) and are as yet in their natural state or in an undeveloped state (crude petroleum) (crude rubber) Consequently when applied to men or their acts, words, or products, crude implies the far remove of what is so described from what is perfected, highly developed, or fully civilized (crude colors) (crude methods) (a crude philosophy) (the guests . . . made a decorous beeline for the champagne. There was whisky and gin, too,

. . . for cruder palates—Styron) Raw, which in the earliest of its present senses describes the condition of uncooked food, is often further applied to natural products which are gathered, mined, or otherwise removed from their native places but are not yet processed or are in the earliest stage of manufacture or processing; thus, raw silk names the fiber from the cocoons of the silkworm as it is drawn from them and reeled; raw hides are stripped from the carcasses of animals but are not yet tanned or dressed; raw milk is as yet unpasteurized; the raw materials from which the miller produces flour are various cereal grains (the raw material of music is sound—Day Lewis) As applied to men, their minds, or their product, raw, more than crude, suggests the elementariness of the untried and the inexperienced (raw recruits) (compared with her, he felt vague and raw, incapable of coming to terms with life—Sackville-West) (over and over again he had seen her take some raw youth, twist him, turn him, wake him up; set him going—Woolf) Callow is nearly always applied to youths or to those who retain the signs of immaturity in manhood; it usually suggests naïveté, simplicity, lack of sophistication, but not so strikingly as does crude, and its suggestions of inexperience or present unfitness are not so strong as those of raw (souls and wits which have never got beyond the callow and boarding-school stage—Arnold) (an embarrassingly callow master of ceremonies—New Yorker) (in its callow days, modern science used to amuse itself by frightening the rest of us with its bogies—Gauss) Green derives most of its connotations from green as applied to fruit and implying unripeness and unfitness for use. The term often comes close to raw when applied to persons and their abilities because it suggests inexperience and lack of necessary training (employ green hands in a factory) Often, however, it additionally connotes simplicity or gullibility (he had not . . . allowed his young green jealousy to show itself in words or pique—Buck) (wasn't so green as to expect suspicious characters to look suspicious—Chesterton) But green is also used of products or sometimes of the raw materials of manufacture or processing which are not yet fully seasoned or cured (green liquors) (green pelts) Uncouth retains from other senses a strong implication of strangeness (outlandish meant in the beginning only what doesn't belong to our own land, and uncouth was simply "unknown"—Lowe) and is appropriately applied to what seems strange in comparison to what is felt as normal or finished or excellent, whether because crude and clumsy especially in appearance (though living in as refined a home as could be found in that part of the world, Breckinridge found conditions rough and uncouth—Coulter) (armored catfish . . . —uncouth creatures, with outrageously long feelers and tentacles, misplaced fins, and mostly ensconced in bony armor—Beebe) or because lacking in polish and grace (the inherent courtesy and tenderness of the untutored and uncouth human being—Harrison Smith) (artists who were rude and uncouth, yet possessed a high degree of technical skill and strong powers of imagination—Eliot) or because deficient in cultivation and refinement (people who are, though kind, still uncouth or inconsiderate; . . . uncouthness and inconsiderateness, are, however tolerable, nowhere agreeable qualities in a positive sense—Brownell) (they were unaccustomed, painfully uncouth in the simplest social intercourse, suffering, and yet insolent in their superiority—D. H. Lawrence) Ana boorish, churlish, clownish, loutish (see under BOOR); rustic, *rural, bucolic: barbarous, savage, *barbarian: primitive, *primary, primeval

2 Rude, ill-mannered, impolite, discourteous, uncivil, ungracious can all mean not observant of the manners or forms required by good breeding. Rude suggests lack of delicacy or consideration for the feelings of others; it does not necessarily suggest lack of breeding, for it is applicable to persons of all stations or conditions. It usually stresses impudence, insolence, or a generally insulting manner (a rude answer) (demanding an explanation of the rude familiarity with which Jim had treated him—Anderson) Ill-mannered is a more general and less explicit term, and it seldom carries a suggestion of an intent to offend or insult such as rude usually carries; it is therefore applicable to a person, act, or utterance that shows ignorance of, indifference to, or a disregard of the proprieties (the tone . . . seems to me as gratuitously ill-mannered as the sentence itself is foolish—Corke) Impolite, discourteous, and uncivil, as the negatives of polite, courteous, civil (for all three, see CIVIL), imply merely the reverse of the care in observing the proprieties of good or formal society that is suggested by polite (scientists may form schools of thought, but these can never become cults because there is always some impolite maverick pointing to some new unassimilated fact—La Barre) or of the considerate, dignified politeness that is suggested by courteous, thereby implying something like rudeness (the clergyman was much humiliated by the discourteous reply to his appeal) or of the modicum of good manners that is suggested by civil, thereby implying an utter disregard of the decent consideration expected in social intercourse among civilized persons (no profanity, Señor. We want nothing from you but to get away from your uncivil tongue—Cather) Ungracious (compare GRACIOUS) stresses the lack of kindness or courtesy resulting from awkwardness, callowness, surliness, or irritation (an ungracious refusal) (an ungracious answer) (these criticisms of a book that is a labor of love and piety may seem ungracious—Cohen)

Ana brusque, curt, gruff, crusty (see BLUFF): *impertinent, intrusive, meddlesome: surly, crabbed (see SULLEN) Ant civil: urbane

rueful dolorous, doleful, lugubrious, plaintive, *melancholy Ana depressed, weighed down, oppressed (see DEPRESS): piteous, *pitiful: despairing, *despondent, hopeless rugged *rough, scabrous, harsh, uneven Ana robust, *healthy: burly, brawny, husky, *muscular: *rank, rampant: arduous, *hard, difficult ruin n Ruin, havoc, devastation, destruction are comparable when they mean the bringing about of disaster or what is left by a disaster. They are general terms which do not definitely indicate the cause or the effect yet suggest the kind of force operating to produce the kind of disaster involved. Ruin implies generally a falling or tumbling down and is applicable to anything that through decay, corruption, neglect, or loss is unable to maintain its wholeness or soundness and so gives way or falls apart; this idea underlies all of the many uses of the word (the old castle has fallen to ruin) (this carelessness . . . was to be his ruin—M. A. Hamilton) (cases of hopeless ruin . . . in which the body has first been ruined through neglect or vice—Eliot) (the possessive instinct . . . when pushed too far becomes the cause of the ruin of . . . society—Ellis) Havoc suggests an agent that pillages, despoils, or ravages and brings confusion and disorder with it (appalled by the havoc and loss of life caused by the earthquake—Crowley) (he was now the blockaded . . . for Agrippa had worked havoc with his sea communications—Buchan) (hookworms live a long, long time in the small intestine, creating havoc all the while—Heiser) Devastation basically implies a laying waste, usually of a widespread territory (as by war or a natural catastrophe) (the terrible devastation wrought by the great tidal wave which followed the earthquake at Lima—T. H. Huxley) but it also is applicable to something (as disease) that overwhelms the individual or his property or resources like a natural catastrophe (those [letters] . . . make clear the devastation in her health that was soon to be revealed—Ellis) Destruction implies an unbuilding or pulling down or apart, but, since it is used alike of material and of immaterial things, it may suggest not only demolition but a killing, an undoing, or an annihilation; also, although it often connotes a conscious attempt to pull down, it as often suggests rather an inevitableness or an irony in the effect produced (an unjust society wreaks cruel if subtle imprisonments and destructions of personal energy—Mailer) (the destruction of a man's edifice [lifework] by his own instruments of construction—Belloc)

Ant fragile

Ana disintegration, crumbling (see corresponding verbs at DECAY)

ruin vb Ruin, wreck, dilapidate can all mean to subject a person or more often a thing to forces that are destructive of soundness, worth, or usefulness. Ruin usually suggests a bringing to an end the structural or mental integrity, the value, beauty, or the well-being of something or of someone through such destructive agencies as weather, age, or neglect, through partial destruction by fire, flood, or collision, or through loss of something vital to happiness or success (as one's fortune, one's good name, or one's chastity) (the storm has ruined the garden) (the firm's reputation was ruined by rumors) (there was in all of them [persons] something ruined, lost or broken—some precious and irreplaceable quality which had gone out of them and which they never could get back again—Wolfe) Wreck implies a ruining by or as if by crashing or being shattered. Basically it is used in reference to a ship, a train, a vehicle, or an airplane (the ship was wrecked on the rocky coast) In its extended sense wreck is often used in place of ruin when there is an intent to imply injury, often to something intangible such as one's career, one's credit, or one's prospects, past all hope of repair or of reconstruction (his health was wrecked by dissipation) (their plans were wrecked by the unexpected change in weather) When the pulling down of a building is implied, wreck is often preferred to demolish or destroy because it does not necessarily carry the suggestion implicit in those words of the uselessness of that which is left. Dilapidate historically implies ruin especially of a building, or of developed property, or of one's fortune or financial resources through neglect or through wastefulness; the term in such use carries, as the other terms do not, a strong implication of culpability (men bent . . . upon intriguing for places at court, for salaries, and for fragment after fragment of the Royal fortune which they were dilapidating—Belloc) (the church . . . was . . . shamefully suffered to dilapidate by deliberate robbery and frigid indifference—Johnson) In more general use dilapidate implies a shabby, run-down, and often tumbledown condition and is used chiefly in the past-participial form as an adjective (negotiating the dilapidated and purlblind vehicle over the curving roads—Cheever) (an aged man, traveling alone, and wearing the dilapidated look of a retired missionary—Glasgow)

Ana *destroy, demolish, raze: *deface, disfigure: *maim, mutilate, mangle rule n *law, regulation, precept, statute, ordinance, canon Ana order, mandate, dictate, *command: *principle, axiom, fundamental: etiquette, *decorum, propriety rule vb 1 *govern

Ana *guide, lead: manage, direct, control, *conduct 2 *decide, determine, settle, resolve

Ana conclude, judge, gather, deduce, *infer rule out eliminate, debar, *exclude, shut out, suspend, disbar, blackball

Ana bar, block (see HINDER): *prevent, preclude, obviate ruminate muse, meditate, *ponder

Ana *consider, weigh, excogitate: reflect, deliberate, speculate, cogitate, *think rummage comb, ransack, search, hunt, *seek, scour, ferret out

Ana examine, inspect, *scrutinize rumor n *report, gossip, hearsay rumpus *brawl, broil, fracas, melee, row, scrap runt *dwarf, pygmy, midget, manikin, homunculus rupture n *breach, break, split, schism, rent, rift

Ana separation, division, parting, severance, divorce (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE): estrangement, alienation (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE) rural, rustic, pastoral, bucolic are comparable when they mean of or characteristic of the country as distinguished from city life. Rural is the most comprehensive term; in its widest meaning it implies open country whether uninhabited or sparsely settled; more narrowly it suggests agricultural pursuits or simple community life. In distinction from rustic, however, rural suggests the pleasant aspects of country life; rustic commonly implies a contrast with the refinements of the city or the town and often connotes rudeness or lack of polish (he had no taste for rural loveliness, green fields and vineyards . . . but he would often have his tongue in his cheek at the simplicity of rustic dupes—Stevenson) Pastoral and bucolic derive some or most of their connotations from the literary treatment of rural life. Pastoral, when it does not refer directly to the life of shepherds, suggests either green pastures and grazing sheep or a life primitive in its simplicity or idyllic in its peace and apartness from the world (to pastoral dales, thin-set with modest farms—Wordsworth) (no more shall . . . Peace pipe on her pastoral hillock a languid note—Tennyson) Bucolic, a curiously dichotomous word, may be a close synonym of pastoral in stressing the charm of rural environment and life (there is here a bucolic atmosphere of peculiar beauty and inspiration—Sacheverell Sitwell) or may come close to rustic in emphasizing the crudity and lack of refinement of rural life or people (to give up all the city's life . . . for the bucolic tedium of a Pennsylvania farm—he couldn't do it—Wolfe)

ruse n *trick, stratagem, maneuver, gambit, ploy, artifice, wile, feint

Ana chicane, trickery, *deception: expedient, shift, makeshift, *resource, resort rush, dash, tear, shoot, charge can all mean to move or cause to move forward with speed. Rush suggests either impetuosity or intense hurry on account of some exigency, and often carelessness about the concomitant effects of the precipitate action (rush for a train) (rush a research paper into print) (a flying rout of suns and galaxies, rushing away from the solar system—Forster) (business rushed forward into the glittering years—Amer. Guide Series: Ind.) Dash is likely to suggest running or moving at a wild unrestrained top speed (gyroscopically controlled trains that can make 150 miles an hour . . . and dash across an abyss on a steel cable—Kaempfert) (dashed on like a spurred blood horse in a race—Byron) Tear in this sense may suggest extreme swiftness with impetus, violence, and abandon (then he tore out of the study—Turnbull) (disheveled atoms tear along at 100 miles a second—Kaempfert) Shoot may imply the-precipitate headlong rushing or darting of something impelled, as though discharged from a gun (leaped to one side and out of reach of those wicked horns. The bull shot past—Gipson) (the Bridal Veil shoots free from the upper edge of the cliff by the velocity the stream has acquired—Muir) (shooting out in their motorcars on errands of mystery—Woolf) Charge is likely to suggest a rapid, violent onslaught gathering forceful momentum calculated to overpower (down we swept and charged and overthrew—Tennyson) (one morning he charged—he was a very burly man—into Rossetti's studio—Osbert Sitwell)

Ana *speed, hurry, hasten: dart, *fly, scud rustic *rural, pastoral, bucolic ruth n commiseration, compassion, pity, condolence, *sympathy, empathy

Ana *mercy, grace, charity, clemency, lenity: forbearance, tolerance, indulgence (see under FORBEARING)

S

sack n *bag, pouch

sack vb *dismiss, discharge, cashier, drop, fire, bounce sack vb pillage, despoil, spoliage, *ravage, devastate, waste Ana plunder, *rob, loot, rifle: *destroy, demolish, raze: *strip, bare, denude sacred 1 *holy, divine, blessed, spiritual, religious

Ana dedicated, consecrated, hallowed (see DEVOTE): cherished, treasured, valued (see APPRECIATE)

Ant profane —Con secular, lay, temporal (see PROFANE)

2 Sacred, sacrosanct, inviolate, inviolable can all mean having such a character as to be protected by law, custom, tradition, or human respect against breach, intrusion, defilement, or profanation. Sacred (see also HOLY) implies either a setting apart for a special and often exclusive use or end (among civilized peoples, property is regarded as sacred to its owner) (a fund sacred to charity) (the den was sacred to the father of the family) or a special character or quality which makes the person or thing held sacred an object of almost religious veneration or reverence ([Louis XIII] saw that the things which happened increasingly strengthened the Royal Office which was sacred to him—Belloc) (‘Grief of two years’ standing is only a bad habit.’ Alice started, outraged. Her mother’s grief was sacred to her—Shaw) Sacrosanct, which in technical religious use implies the utmost of holiness or sacredness, in its more general use may retain this implication (the strikers . . . respected the sacrosanct character of the mails, and were willing to undertake their delivery to the pier—Heiser) but often tends to suggest an imputed rather than a genuinely possessed character justifying freedom from attack or violation; its emphasis in such use is usually somewhat ironical and occasionally slightly derisive (etymology is after all not sacrosanct—Darrow) (she rebuffed explanations . . . they intruded on her privacy, that closely guarded preserve—as sacrosanct as her bureau drawers—Mary McCarthy) Inviolable and inviolable apply to things (as laws, principles, treaties, agreements, institutions, persons, places, or objects) that for one reason or another are secure from breach, infringement, attack, intrusion, or injury; the terms differ from each other chiefly in that inviolable suggests the fact of not having been violated while inviolable implies a character which does not permit or which distinctly forbids violation; thus, one holds a vow inviolable but keeps his vow inviolable <what seemed inviolable barriers are burst asunder in a trice—Meredith) <the Navahos . . . believed that their old gods dwelt in the fastnesses of that canyon . . . an inviolable place—Cather)

Ana protected, shielded, defended, guarded (see DEFEND): revered, revered, venerated (see REVERE)

sacrifice vb abnegate, forbear, *forgo, eschew

Ana renounce, *abdicate: surrender, yield, resign, *relinquish sacrilege desecration, *profanation, blasphemy

Ana defilement, pollution (see corresponding verbs at CONTAMINATE): violation, transgression, trespass, *breach: sin, crime, scandal, *offense

sacrilegious blasphemous, *impious, profane

Ana polluting, defiling (see CONTAMINATE): profaning, desecrating (see corresponding nouns at PROFANATION) sacrosanct inviolate, inviolable, *sacred

Ana respected, regarded, esteemed (see corresponding verbs under REGARD n): revered, venerated, revered (see REVERE) saddle vb *burden, encumber, cumber, weigh, weight, load, lade, tax, charge sadness, depression, melancholy, melancholia, dejection, gloom, blues, dumps are comparable when they mean a state of mind when one is unhappy or low-spirited or an attack of low spirits. Sadness is the general term; apart from the context it carries no explicit suggestions of the cause of the low spirits or of the extent to which one is deprived of cheerfulness <a feeling of sadness and longing that is not akin to pain—Longfellow) <we feel his underlying sadness . . . but Rome may have felt more strongly than we do his hopefulness and pride—Buchan) <the leafless trees left her with unearned sadness. She mourned the long age before spring and feared loneliness in winter—Malamud) Depression applies chiefly to a mood in which one feels let down, discouraged, and devoid of vigor or to a state of mind, usually outwardly manifested by brooding, in which one is listless, despondent, or sullen; the term usually implies a precipitating or predisposing cause which may be external but is as often inherent in the nature of the affected individual <as for his look, it was a natural cheerfulness, striving against depression from without, and not quite succeeding—Hardy) <Tina's love was a stormy affair, with continual ups and downs of rapture and depression—Wharton) <a defeat would bring me closer to a general depression, a fog bank of dissatisfaction with myself—Mailer) Melancholy often applies to a not unpleasant or displeasing mood or a mental state characterized by sadness, pensiveness, and deep but not depressing or heavy seriousness <lend our hearts and spirits wholly to the influence of mild-minded melancholy—Tennyson) <the lively, curious mind, the wit, the gaiety of spirit tinged with a tender melancholy—Hudson) <fate did not bring her dreamed-of-love. Instead, it gave her cause for melancholy, disappointment, and disillusionment—Farrell) <in spite of her civic zeal, she had a taste for melancholy—for the smell of orange rinds and wood smoke—Cheever) Melancholia may denote a disordered mental state characterized by a settled deep depression <the excited phase is called mania and

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

its counterpart is known as melancholia The latter phase is marked by mournful and self-accusatory ideas and a countenance disfigured by despair—Ellery) Dejection suggests especially the mood of one who is downcast, discouraged, or dispirited; the term differs from depression chiefly in its suggestion of an external cause and in its more frequent application to a mood than to a prolonged state of mind <it was the last of the regiment's stay in Meryton, and all the young ladies in the neighborhood were drooping apace. The dejection was almost universal—Austen) <full of the dejection of a nice child whose toy has been snatched from its hand—Tracy) Gloom applies either to the effect produced by melancholy, depression, dejection, or extreme sadness on the person afflicted or to the atmosphere which a person of low spirits or a depressing event creates; the term carries a suggestion of darkness and dullness and it further connotes lack of all that enlivens or cheers <the leaden gloom of one who has lost all that can make life interesting, or even tolerable—Hardy) <the idea that I am being studied fills me, after the first outburst of laughter, with a deepening gloom—Huxley) Blues and dumps are familiar, expressive terms for an attack of low spirits. Blues may suggest an acute attack of depression or melancholy which afflicts one almost as if an illness <a fit of the blues) <I believe that the attack of intense blues which caught me in that moment would have taken weeks to shake off—Ingamells) while dumps, usually in the phrase in the dumps, is more likely to suggest a deep sullen persistent dejection of spirits <doleful dumps the mind oppress—Shak.) <where someone else would have been in the dolefullest dumps . . . this young fellow took it out in joking—Overstreet)

Ana *sorrow, grief, anguish, woe: despondency, despair, hopelessness, forlornness (see under DESPONDENT)

Ant gladness

safe, secure can both mean free from danger or apprehension of danger. Safe may imply that one has passed through dangers or has run some risk (as of injury or of being lost) without incurring harm or damage <arrived home safe and sound after their long journey) or it can apply to persons or possessions whose situation or position involves neither risk nor exposure to destruction or loss <let the great world rage! We will stay here safe in the quiet dwellings—Shelley) <build shelters where the people might go to be safe from falling bombs) <he felt that his money was safe when it was in a bank) <sat in a niche of the tower where her somewhat faded beauty was safe from the sun—Bemelmans) or to things (as highways, bridges, or vehicles, or as policies, actions, or courses) which are so constructed or designed that they expose one to few or no risks <a safe harbor) <a safe fire escape) <a safe investment) <'tis never safe to despise an enemy—Defoe) or to a cautious procedure which keeps one out of danger or free from the risk of making an error or blunder <it is safer to generalize about institutions than individuals—Levin) Secure in a few idiomatic phrases implies freedom from anxiety or apprehension of danger <most people like to feel secure) In more general use secure tends to stress freedom from anxiety not as merely a subjective state but as a frame of mind induced by grounds that are or appear to be good and sufficient. Sometimes the grounds are intellectual and imply sufficient evidence to establish the certainty of something that has been doubted <send the author off to other publishers, secure in his belief that only an ugly moneyed attitude separates his work from the public—Frugé) Sometimes the grounds are material, such as the existence of sufficient money, the possession or definite expectation of property, or a definite means of livelihood which enables one to live or make a venture without fear, or the provision of safeguards or protective devices which make a thing safe to use or follow (the offer of a partnership by making his future secure also made his marriage possible) (now that the foundations were in good repair they regarded the bridge as secure) (a provident, rather thoughtful people, who made their livelihood secure by raising crops and fowl—Cather) (an independent, stubborn man who knew what he wanted, a man who was firmly rooted, established, secure against calamity and want—Wolfe) Often the term suggests not only a freedom from fear of danger but a position, condition, or situation free from all hazards (has made a secure place for himself in the history of English poetry) (university graduates who had been unable to find suitable jobs or any secure place in normal society—Shirer)

Ana protected, guarded, shielded (see DEFEND): *reliable, dependable, tried

Ant dangerous —Con precarious, hazardous, risky, perilous (see DANGEROUS) safeguard vb guard, shield, protect, *defend

Ana conserve, preserve, *save: secure, insure, *ensure, assure sag vb *droop, wilt, flag

Ana sink, slump, subside, *fall, drop: *hang, dangle, suspend saga *myth, legend

sagacious perspicacious, astute, *shrewd

Ana *sharp, keen, acute: penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER): *wise, judicious, sage, sapient sage adj *wise, sapient, judicious, prudent, sensible, sane

Ana *intelligent, knowing, brilliant: *learned, erudite: sagacious, perspicacious (see SHREWD) sail vb float, skim, scud, shoot, dart, *fly sailor *mariner, seaman, tar, gob, bluejacket salary *wage or wages, stipend, pay, hire, emolument, fee salient conspicuous, outstanding, signal, striking, arresting, prominent, remarkable, *noticeable

Ana significant, important, weighty (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE): impressive, *moving: obtrusive, intrusive (see IMPERTINENT)

salubrious *healthful, healthy, wholesome, salutary, hygienic, sanitary

Ana *beneficial, advantageous: benign, *favorable salutary wholesome, *healthful, healthy, salubrious, hygienic, sanitary

Ana *beneficial, advantageous, profitable

Ant deleterious: evil salutation *greeting, salute salute vb *address, greet, hail, accost salute n *greeting, salutation same, selfsame, very, identical, identic, equivalent, equal, tantamount can mean either not different from the other or others or not differing from each other. Same may imply, and selfsame invariably implies, that the things under consideration are in reality one and not two or three different things (this is the selfsame book that John once owned) (they go to the same summer resort year after year) (voted out of power . . . by the selfsame people who had put them into office in the first place—Fairless) (perhaps the selfsame owl that used to fly overhead—Eve Langley) But same may also be applied to things actually distinct but with no appreciable difference in quality, kind, appearance, amount, or significance (saw Wheeler riding in state in the great Dewey parade . . . in 1898, wearing the same uniform that Miles and Merritt wore—Long) (would be looked upon as one of the afterguard, and would eat the same rations as the captain—Chippendale) Very, like selfsame, implies complete absence of difference and therefore oneness in the things under consideration (you are the very man I have been anxious to see) (that is the very thing that I was saying—Shelley) (here in this very town there was once a café—McCullers) Identical (see also LIKE) implies either selfsameness (I found it at the identical spot where I left it) (the authors of the anonymous Waverley and of the popular Lady of the Lake were found to be identical) or absolute agreement in all details (as of quality, shape, and appearance) (since the sculptures are identical one must be a replica of the other) (no two leaves from the same tree are identical) (twins that are identical develop from a single fertilized egg) (a thousand identical gaunt gray houses—Roueché) (the same measures . . . may flow from distinct powers; but this does not prove that the powers themselves are identical—John Marshall) Identic occurs chiefly in diplomatic or governmental use and like identical implies absolute agreement in all details (the Allies sent identic answers to the ultimatum) (identic notes utilized by the powers in making joint representation to a government—Stuart) Equivalent is used of things that amount to the same thing or are freely interchangeable in some respect (as worth, force, significance, or import) (some heirs received their legacies in cash, some in real estate of equivalent value) (in economics, the equivalent of a beautifully composed work of art is the smoothly running factory in which the workers are perfectly adjusted to the machines—Huxley) Equal implies complete correspondence (as in number, amount, magnitude, or value) and therefore equivalence but not selfsameness (equal salaries) (equal quantities) (equal merit) (divide in equal shares) (the General . . . greeted Mrs. Churchill in English, and spoke it throughout the meal. To make things equal, I spoke French—Sir Winston Churchill) Tantamount, otherwise identical with equivalent, is restricted in application to one of a pair of usually immaterial things that are in effect equivalent the one to the other (as in value, significance, or effect) (such a movement . . . would be tantamount to a confession of failure—Trollope) (refusal to prolong the truce . . . would be tantamount to a threat—Current Biog.)

Ana alike, *like, akin, parallel, uniform

Ant different

sample n specimen, example, *instance, case, illustration

Ana piece, *part, portion, segment, fragment sanative remedial, *curative, restorative, corrective

Ana salutary, hygienic, sanitary, *healthful: healing, curing, remedying (see CURE vb) sanctimonious 1 pietistic, religious, *devout, pious

Ana see those at SANCTIMONIOUS 2

2 hypocritical, pharisaical, canting (see under HYPOCRISY)

Ana affected, feigned, simulated, counterfeited, assumed, pretended (see ASSUME): perfervid, fervid, ardent, fervent (see IMPASSIONED)

sanctimony *hypocrisy, pharisaism, cant

Ana pretending or pretense, simulation, feigning, counterfeiting, affecting or affectation (see corresponding verbs at ASSUME): enthusiasm, zealotry, fanaticism (see nouns at ENTHUSIAST) sanction vb *approve, endorse, accredit, certify

Ana *authorize, license, commission: confirm, *ratify: *enforce, implement

Ant interdict sanctity *holiness

sanctuary refuge, asylum, *shelter, cover, retreat

Ana safety, security (see corresponding adjectives at SAFE): protection, shielding or shield, guarding or guard

(see corresponding verbs at DEFEND) sand n *fortitude, grit, backbone, pluck, guts

Ana *courage, mettle, spirit, resolution, tenacity sane *wise, judicious, prudent, sensible, sage, sapient

Ana *rational, reasonable: right, *good: sound, cogent, convincing, compelling (see VALID)

Ant insane

sangroid phlegm, composure, *equanimity

Ana indifference, unconcernedness or unconcern, aloofness, detachment (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT): self-possession, aplomb, self-assurance, assurance, self-confidence, *confidence sanguinary *bloody, sanguine, sanguineous, gory sanguine 1 also sanguineous *bloody, sanguinary, gory

Ant bloodless

2 assured, *confident, sure, presumptuous

Ana *hopeful, optimistic: positive, certain, *sure

Ant afraid

sanitary *healthful, hygienic, salutary, salubrious, healthy, wholesome

Ana curing or curative, healing, remedying (see corresponding verbs at CURE): *effective, efficacious, effectual Ant noxious sanitize disinfect, *sterilize, fumigate sap vb undermine, enfeeble, *weaken, debilitate, cripple, disable

Ana drain, *deplete, exhaust, impoverish: *ruin, wreck: *destroy sapid *palatable, appetizing, savory, tasty, toothsome, flavorful, relishing

Ant insipid —Con vapid, flat, inane, jejune (see INSIPID): bland, *soft, mild sapient sage, *wise, judicious, prudent, sensible, sane

Ana *learned, erudite, scholarly: sagacious, perspicacious (see SHREWED) sarcasm satire, irony, *wit, humor, repartee

Ana incisiveness, trenchancy, bitingness, cuttingness (see corresponding adjectives at INCISIVE): mockery, taunting, derision (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE) sarcastic, satiric, ironic, sardonic can mean having or manifesting bitterness and power to cut or sting. A person, a mood, a remark, or an expression is sarcastic when he or it manifests an intent to inflict pain by deriding, taunting, or making ridiculous <sarcastic comments on an actor's performance> (the atmosphere is less chilly and sarcastic, more warm and compassionate—Orville Prescott) <she was accepted . . . as one of them. The sarcastic nickname she had been tagged with, "Sweetness and Light," fell into disuse—Wouk> A person or his utterance, expression, or spirit is satiric when he or it manifests the intent to censure someone or something by holding him or it up for ridicule and reprobation <hers was the rarest of satiric gifts. She . . . could ridicule without wounding—S.R.L.> <all this comedy was filled with bitter satiric strokes against a certain young lady—Thackeray> Not only a person or an utterance, mood, or expression but also a situation or an event may be described as ironic when he or it manifests the power to evoke amused but often startled or unpleasant reflection on the difference between what is said and what is intended or between what happens and what was aimed at or what was expected <how his [Fielding's] ironic lightning plays around a rogue and all his ways!—Dobson> <how exquisitely ironic is the entertainment we can derive from our disillusion—L. P. Smith> <it is an ironic likelihood that had he written less he would be held in higher esteem—D. S. Davis> A person or more often a person's smile, expression, or words may be described as sardonic when he or it manifests scorn, mockery, and derision <an eccentric, gangling man, whose sardonic wit somewhat compensated for his shallow mind—Shirer> <got a sardonic twist to his mouth, the way of a man who feels that the breaks are against him—Mary Austin> <came to the funeral, full of calm, sardonic glee, and without being asked—Bennett> Ana biting, cutting, trenchant, *incisive: *caustic, scathing, mordant

sardonic ironic, satiric, *sarcastic

Ana *bitter, acrid: deriding or derisive, mocking, taunting, ridiculing (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE): *sinister, malign sate vb *satiare, surfeit, cloy, pall, glut, gorge

Ana *satisfy, content: *indulge, pamper, humor: gratify, regale (see PLEASE) satellite *follower, adherent, henchman, partisan, disciple, secretary

Ana sycophant, *parasite, favorite, toady, lickspittle, bootlicker, hanger-on: devotee, votary, *addict satiare, sate, surfeit, clay, pall, glut, gorge are comparable when they mean to fill or become filled to the point of repletion. Although both satiare and sate can imply no more than a complete satisfying, both terms more often imply an overfilling or an overfeeding so that there is no longer a pleasure in what once pleased or seemed desirable <the ordinary Roman . . . satiated alike with the fervors of the democrats and the rigidity of the conservatives—Buchan> <I wondered even then if a few common words of explanation, a few sober words of promise, would not have satisfied the crowd, already sated with eloquence—Replier> <so overwhelmed by information . . . that curiosity becomes sated, discrimination dulled—W. R. Parker> Surfeit distinctly implies a feeding or supplying to excess with consequent nausea or disgust <surfeited herself with candy> <surfeit a person with flattery> <readers surfeited with the . . . wild overstatements and wild understatement of public dispute—Montague> <if music be the food of love, play on; give me excess of it, that, surfeiting, the appetite may sicken, and so die—Shak.> Cloy stresses the resulting disgust or boredom more than the surfeit which induces them <and thus, with sinning clayed, has died each Murgatroyd—Gilbert> <poetic wit itself is a rarity . . . Large indiscriminate doses of it tend to clay—Horace Gregory> Pall differs from clay only in its greater emphasis upon the loss of all power in something with which one is surfeited to challenge one's interest or attention or to whet one's appetite; the term therefore refers rather to things that tend to satiare than to the persons whose appetites or desires have been sated by such things <there anguish does not sting; nor pleasure pall—Keats> <common sense does pall on a husband sometimes—Deland> <at that point the scene begins to pall and the senses dull. Defeat . . . can be as monotonous as tropical rain—S. L. A. Marshall> Glut, like surfeit, implies excess in feeding or supplying but it stresses the consequent overloading rather than the extinction of appetite or desire; often it also suggests the stimulation of a greed that knows no limits except those imposed upon it by physical necessity <its hunger was already all but glutted, and its purpose seemed to be, mainly, to kill—C. G. D. Roberts> Glut may be used also in reference to impersonal things, implying merely an overloading, and carrying no suggestion of greed or satiation <banks glutted with unpaid commercial paper—Lehrman> Gorge usually implies the stimulation of greed but it distinctively suggests a glutting to the point almost of choking or bursting; the term therefore often implies the frustration rather than the satisfying of that greed <gorge oneself with chocolate> <Dick fell upon eggs and bacon and gorged till he could gorge no more—Kipling) <heaven can gorge us with our own desires—Defoe>

Ana *satisfy, content: pamper, humor, *indulge: gratify, regale (see PLEASE) satiny silky, silken, velvety, glossy, *sleek, slick satire irony, *wit, humor, sarcasm, repartee

Ana rairily, persiflage, *badinage: lampoon, pasquinade, *libel, skit: ridiculing or ridicule, deriding or derision, taunting (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE)

satiric ironic, sardonic, *sarcastic

Ana *pungent, piquant, poignant: ridiculing, deriding or derisive, taunting, mocking (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE): mordant, *caustic, scathing satisfied content (see under SATISFY)

Ana gratified, gladdened, pleased (see PLEASE): appeased, pacified (see PACIFY) satisfy 1 Satisfy, content can both mean to appease desires or longings. The same distinctions in implications are also found in their corresponding adjectives satisfied and content or contented. Satisfy implies full appeasement not only of a person's desires or longings but also of his needs or requirements <walks that satisfy a wish for exercise> <he was always ready to satisfy every one of her desires> <the bosses are able to maintain the required tension in their followers and at the same time can satisfy their lust for power in a most gratifying way—Huxley> <Flora was satisfied. She had done what she had hoped to do—Gibbons> Content implies appeasement to the point where one is not disquieted or disturbed by a desire for what he does not have, even though every wish is not fully gratified <he was content with the world, not because he thought reality good . . . but because he possessed immense imaginative resources with which to evade it—Paulding> <when I was at home, I was in a better place: but travelers must be content—Shak.> <my own garden must content me this year—Quiller-Couch>

Ana gratify, gladden, *please: appease, *pacify: *satisfate, sate

Ant tantalize

2 recompense, compensate, remunerate, repay, *pay, reimburse, indemnify

Ana balance, *compensate, offset

3 Satisfy, fulfill, meet, answer all can mean to measure up to a condition, a need, a claim, a hope, or a requirement. They are seldom interchangeable, however, without loss of precision or expressiveness or without violation of idiom. Satisfy, with this meaning (compare SATISFY 1), is used chiefly in reference to things or to persons considered impersonally which are submitted to a test (as a condition, a requirement, or a hypothesis) and found to be such in constitution or makeup as not to fall short <there is one condition that a lyric ought to satisfy; it ought to pass the test of being read aloud—Binyon> <he will satisfy Newman's famous definition of a gentleman as one who never inflicts pain—Montague> Fulfill usually connotes more than adequacy or richness and fullness of measure; also what is fulfilled is not determined by something calculable but usually by something indefinite or immeasurable (as expectations, hopes, desires, or needs)  <the trip fulfilled all the claims made for it> <the objective of our country . . . is to achieve human decency to meet human needs and to fulfill human hopes—A. E. Stevenson> Meet implies exact agreement with the test or measure and therefore usually connotes mathematical equivalence; thus, "the new machine meets expectations" is slightly more tempered praise than "the new machine fulfills expectations" <we must expand the concept of conservation to meet the imperious problems of the new age—Kennedy>

<the grocer could once more meet his running expenses—Malamud> Answer usually implies even more moderation in praise than meet; while it does not quite imply dissatisfaction it seldom connotes complete content <this knife will answer the purpose> <his school grades answered his parents' expectations> <she could ask herself now . . . if any other reasonably attractive man would have answered as well in his place—Glasgow> Ana *prove, test, try, demonstrate: verify, substantiate, corroborate, *confirm: *match, equal, rival, approach, touch

saturate 1 *soak, steep, impregnate, drench, sop, waterlog

Ana *dip, immerse, submerge: *absorb, imbibe, assimilate

2 impregnate, impenetrate, interpenetrate, penetrate, *permeate, pervade

Ana *infuse, imbue, ingrain, inoculate: penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER) saturnine dour, gloomy, *sullen, glum, morose, surly, sulky, crabbed

Ana grave, *serious, solemn, somber, staid: taciturn, reserved, uncommunicative, *silent

Ant genial: mercurial

saucy, pert, arch are comparable when they mean flippant and bold rather than serious and respectful in one's manner or attitude. Saucy is rarely strongly derogatory though it implies some degree of lack of proper respect   Usually it also implies piquancy and levity with a hint of smartness or of amusing effrontery  Sometimes it is applied also to birds and small animals on similar grounds <some saucy puppies on their hind legs—Ruskin> <the mistle thrush is very bold and saucy, and has been known to fly in the face of persons who have disturbed the sitting bird—Burroughs> Pert implies a saucy freedom that may suggest presumption or affectation rather than insolence   In some contexts the word carries additional implications (as of cleverness or sprightliness) found in its other senses  Arch usually implies roguish or coquettish audacity or mischievous mockery sometimes carried to the point that it seems forced or awkward <simpering expressions and arch posturing—Osbert Lancaster> <Elizabeth . . . turned to him with an arch smile, and said—"You mean to frighten me, Mr. Darcy, by coming in all this state to hear me?"—Austen>

Ana flippant, frivolous, volatile, light-minded (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS): intrusive, obtrusive, meddlesome, *impertinent: brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS): piquant, snappy (see PUNGENT)

saunter, stroll, amble can all mean to walk slowly and more or less aimlessly, especially in the open air. Saunter suggests a leisurely pace and an idle and carefree mind <sauntering about the streets, loitering in a coffeehouse—Fielding> <he had stepped out into the street well ahead of the man sauntering toward the doorway—MacInnes> Stroll differs from saunter chiefly in its implications of an objective (as sight-seeing or exercise) pursued without haste and sometimes with wandering from one place to another <then we strolled for half the day through stately theaters—Tennyson> <the notables of the town . . . stroll past with the dignity of Roman senators—Huxley> Amble occasionally conveys the same implications as saunter or sometimes stroll, but it more often suggests merely an easy, effortless gait comparable to that of an ambling horse <you were just ambling around that party, eating, drinking, carefree as a bird—Wouk> savage adj 1 *fierce, ferocious, barbarous, inhuman, cruel, fell, truculent

Ana implacable, relentless, unrelenting, merciless, *grim: rapacious, *voracious, ravenous

Con gentle, mild, lenient (see SOFT): humane, benevolent, *charitable

2 barbaric, *barbarian, barbarous

Ana primitive, primeval (see PRIMARY): *rough, harsh: untaught, untutored, *ignorant

Con *tame, submissive, subdued: civilized, cultured (see corresponding nouns at CIVILIZATION)

save vb 1 deliver, redeem, *rescue, ransom, reclaim

Ana *free, release, liberate, emancipate: *defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard: *recover, retrieve, recoup, recruit

Ant lose: waste: damn (in theology)

2 Save, preserve, conserve can mean to keep free or secure from injury, decay, destruction, or loss. Save may imply measures taken to protect something from danger of loss, injury, or destruction <they had her in a Sunday-go-to-meeting dress . . . never washed or worn, just saved—Wely> <saved his papers in a vault> <he wavered around an atomistic explanation of the world, yet held fast to the Biblical Creation, to save his orthodoxy—H. O. Taylor> but, more often, it suggests rescue or delivery from a dangerous situation (see under RESCUE). Preserve stresses the idea of resistance to destructive agencies and hence implies the use of means to keep something in existence or intact <old records are preserved by protecting them from light and moisture> <preserve food for winter use> <constitutions are intended to preserve practical and substantial rights, not to maintain theories—Justice Holmes> <there's nothing like routine and regularity for preserving one's peace of mind—Dahl> Conserve, on the other hand, suggests keeping sound and unimpaired and implies the use of means to prevent unnecessary or excessive change, loss, or depletion  <our constitutional rights can be conserved only by an intelligent electorate> <the air is recirculated within the cabin in order to conserve heat—Armstrong> <sipped his coffee, made from his carefully conserved supply brought with him from England—Bambrick>

Ana *have, hold, own, possess, enjoy: *keep, retain, reserve

Ant spend: consume

savoir faire poise, *tact, address

Ana grace, dignity, *elegance: ease, *readiness, dexterity, facility: self-possession, self-assurance, aplomb, *confidence

Con awkwardness, clumsiness, ineptness, maladroitness, gaucherie (see corresponding adjectives at AWKWARD)

savor n *taste, flavor, tang, relish, smack

Ana *quality, property, character, attribute: peculiarity, individuality, characteristic, distinctiveness (see corresponding adjectives at CHARACTERISTIC): *impression, impress, print, stamp savory *palatable, appetizing, sapid, tasty, toothsome, flavorsome, relishing

Ant bland (to taste): acrid (in taste and smell) saw n *saying, adage, proverb, maxim, motto, epigram, aphorism, apothegm say vb Say, utter, tell, state are comparable when they mean to put into words. Say often means merely to articulate or pronounce <say the words after me> <the baby has not yet learned to say "mama" or "daddy"> or is used in reporting something voiced <he said over the telephone that he would be late in coming home> <"I am going now," he said> Say may also imply the fact of putting in speech or in writing without necessarily suggesting the actual wording <you must learn to say what you mean> <he meant what he said> <do as I say and everything will be all right> Utter (see also EXPRESS) stresses the act of putting into speech or spoken words, often with reference only to the use of the voice and with no indication of motive or impulse in speaking <she sat still, not uttering a single word> <just as the actor uttered his first speech> <he formed this speech with his lips many times before he could utter it—Dickens> Tell (see also COUNT, REVEAL) carries no clear implication of whether what is said is put into speech or writing, for the stress is upon imparting an idea or thought and not upon the method used. Consequently tell may suggest a putting into spoken or written words, or it may connote an equally clear or forcible means of impressing an idea upon the mind of a person or of revealing a condition or a sequence of events <I am telling you the truth> <the rocks tell the story of past ages> State (see also RELATE) is often used in place of say when the added implication of clearness and definiteness is necessary <perhaps I had better take this opportunity of stating he need have no expectations from me; all my money will go in public bequests—Deland> <one should know what one thinks and what one means, and be able to state it in clear terms—Rose Macaulay>

Ana pronounce, *articulate, enunciate: *express, voice, broach: *speak, talk: *declare, announce, proclaim: note, observe (see SEE): comment, animadvert, *remark: *explain, expound: cite, *quote, repeat: *assert, affirm, aver, avow, protest

saying, saw, adage, proverb, maxim, motto, epigram, aphorism, apothegm can all denote a sententious expression of a general truth. A saying is a brief current or habitual expression that may be anonymous, traditional, or attributable to a specific source <the saying is true, "The empty vessel makes the greatest sound"—Shak.> A saw is an oft-repeated and usually traditional or old saying <full of wise saws and modern instances—Shak.> <the old saw that ignorance is bliss—M. W. Childs> An adage is a saying given credit by long use and general acceptance <if there is verity in wine, according to the old adage—Thackeray> <there's an adage to the effect that a good horse eventually comes back to his best form—Audax Minor> A proverb is an adage couched, usually, in homely and vividly concrete or figurative phrase <accused (in the phrase of a homely proverb) of being "penny-wise and pound-foolish"—Spectator> <we hear, that we may speak. The Arabian proverb says, "A fig tree, looking on a fig tree, becometh fruitful"—Emerson> A maxim offers a general truth, fundamental principle, or rule of conduct often in the form of a proverb <the difference between principles as universal laws, and maxims of conduct as prudential rules—Robinson> <we have reversed the wise maxim of Theodore Roosevelt: "Speak softly and carry a big stick"—Warburg> A motto is usually a maxim or moral aphorism adopted by a person, a society, or an institution as a guiding principle or as a statement of an aim or ideal <William of Wykeham's old motto that "Manners makyth Man"—Quiller-Couch> <he adopted the maxim, "Napoleon is always right," in addition to his private motto of "I will work harder"—George Orwell> The last three terms, epigram, aphorism, and apothegm, commonly imply known authorship and a conscious literary quality. An epigram gets its effectiveness from its terseness and a witty turn of phrase; it characteristically presents a paradox or a cleverly pointed antithesis <what is an epigram? A dwarfish whole, its body brevity, and wit its soul—Coleridge) An aphorism is a pithy epigram that requires some thought (when Mark Twain utters such characteristic aphorisms as "Heaven for climate, hell for society"—Brooks) An apothegm is a sharply pointed and often startling aphorism such as Johnson's remark, "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

scabrous *rough, harsh, uneven, rugged

Ant glabrous: smooth scale vb climb, mount, *ascend scamp *villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rascal, rogue, rapsallion, miscreant

Ana malefactor, culprit, delinquent, *criminal scamper vb *scuttle, scurry, skedaddle, sprint

Ana *speed, hurry, hasten: *rush, dash, shoot scan *scrutinize, examine, inspect, audit

Ana *consider, study, contemplate: observe, survey, remark, notice (see SEE) scandal n 1 *offense, sin, vice, crime

Ana indignity, insult, *affront: offending or offense, outraging or outrage (see corresponding verbs at OFFEND): wrong, grievance, injury, *injustice

2 *detraction, calumny, slander, backbiting

Ana gossiping or gossip, tattling (see corresponding verbs at GOSSIP): maligning, defaming or defamation, traducing (see corresponding verbs at MALIGN) scanning scrutiny, examination, inspection, audit (see under SCRUTINIZE)

Ana study, application, *attention, concentration: *oversight, supervision, surveillance: analysis, dissection (see under ANALYZE) scant scanty, skimpy, scrimpy, *meager, exiguous, spare, sparse

Ana *deficient, defective: scarce, rare, *infrequent

Ant plentiful: profuse scanty scant, skimpy, scrimpy, *meager, exiguous, spare, sparse

Ana *deficient

Ant ample, plentiful: profuse scarce rare, uncommon, *infrequent, occasional, sporadic Ana *deficient: curtailed, abridged, shortened (see SHORTEN)

Ant abundant

scare vb alarm, *frighten, fright, terrify, terrorize, startle, affray, affright

Ana daunt, appall, *dismay: *intimidate, cow, browbeat: astound, amaze, flabbergast, astonish, *surprise

Ant entice scathing *caustic, mordant, acrid

Ant scorching, searing, burning (see BURN): *fierce, ferocious, truculent, savage: *incisive, biting, cutting, trenchant scatter 1 Scatter, disperse, dissipate, dispel can mean to cause a group, mass, or assemblage to separate or break up. Scatter may imply the use or operation of force which drives the persons or things in different directions (the hurricane scattered the ships of the fleet) (the heavy assault scattered the troops) (the wind scattered the leaves) (but the whip—in fancy he cracked it aloft and sent his adversaries scattering—Hervey) On the other hand, scatter may imply little more than throwing or casting so that the things thrown will fall by or as if by chance (scatter pennies) (scatter seeds) Disperse usually implies a wider separation of the units than scatter and a complete breaking up of the mass or assemblage (the rain quickly dispersed the crowd) (in a few years, the Bureau was dismembered, its staff dispersed—Heiser) (a sea where all the ships in the world might be so dispersed as that none should see another—Cowper)

Dissipate suggests definitely the idea of complete disintegration or dissolution (as by evaporation, crumbling, squandering, or blowing away) and consequent vanishing (the sun dissipates the mist) (dissipated her energy in futile efforts) (from the far-off wooded hills the haze . . . had not yet dissipated—D. H. Lawrence) (had a small patrimony . . . that he dissipated before he left college—Meredith) Dispel carries less suggestion of separation of units or particles than any of these words but it stresses a driving away as if by scattering of something that clouds, confuses, or bothers (the rising sun dispelled the darkness) (a blind man whose darkness no street lamp can dispel—Shaw) (truth and frankness dispel difficulties—Russell) (if there were any lingering doubts in his mind they were dispelled by an incident which occurred . . . on February 17—Shirer)

Ana *throw, cast, fling, toss: *distribute, dispense, divide: *discard, shed, cast

Con *accumulate, amass, hoard: collect, *gather, assemble: *compact, concentrate

2 *strew, straw, broadcast, sow

Ana *spread, disseminate: *sprinkle, besprinkle scent n *smell, odor, aroma

Ana emanation, issuing or issue (see corresponding verbs at SPRING) schedule n 1 *list, table, catalog, register, roll, roster, inventory

2 *program, timetable, agenda scheme n 1 *plan, design, plot, project

Ana *proposal, proposition: arrangement, ordering (see corresponding verbs at ORDER): *device, contrivance: expedient, shift, makeshift (see RESOURCE)

2 *system, network, complex, organism, economy

Ana organization, arrangement, ordering (see corresponding verbs at ORDER): whole, total, *sum scheme vb plan, design, plot, project (see under PLAN n)

Ana propose, purpose, *intend: *aim, aspire: manipulate, *handle, swing, wield schism split, rupture, *breach, break, rent, rift Ana division, separation, severance (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE): estrangement, alienation (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE): *discord, dissension schismatic n *heretic, sectarian, dissenter, nonconformist scholarly *learned, erudite

Ana academic, scholastic, *pedantic: abstruse, *recondite: accurate, exact, precise (see CORRECT) scholarship learning, erudition, *knowledge, science, information, lore scholastic academic, *pedantic, bookish

Ana *conversant, versed: *dry, arid: formal, conventional (see CEREMONIAL) school vb discipline, train, *teach, instruct, educate

Ana *practice, exercise, drill: *guide, lead: *conduct, control, direct, manage science 1 *knowledge, learning, erudition, scholarship, information, lore

2 *art

scintillate *flash, gleam, glance, glint, sparkle, glitter, glisten, coruscate, twinkle scoff, jeer, gibe, f leer, gird, sneer, flout can all mean to show one's scorn or contempt in derision or mockery. Scoff stresses insolence, irreverence, lack of respect, or incredulity as the motives for one's derision or mockery (it is an easy thing to scoff at any art or recreation; a little wit mixed with ill nature, confidence, and malice, will do it—Walton) (fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray—Goldsmith) (in jesting mood his comrades heard his tale, and scoffed at it—Lowell) Jeer carries a stronger implication of loud derisive laughter than scoff; it usually connotes a coarser and more vulgar or, at least, a less keenly critical attitude than scoff (how does it come that men . . . walk in its streets and jeer and speak their hate—Keesing) (unsuccessful experiments had been jeered down with an I-told-you-so that rang from coast to coast—Dos Passos) (inclined to jeer at those slightly older than himself who show any tendency to abandon the—to him—rational preoccupations of childhood—Krutch) Gibe stresses taunting, often in derisive sarcasm, sometimes in good-natured raillery (you . . . with taunts did gibe my missive out of audience—Shak.) (after one of her visitations you gibed each other good-naturedly over the extent to which you found yourself shifted from the firm ground of reasoned conclusion—Mary Austin) (generosity of spirit which had prevented him from gibing at individuals for characteristics beyond their control—Gwethalyn Graham) Fleer throws the emphasis upon derisive grins, grimaces, and laughs rather than on utterances (look like two old maids of honor got into a circle of fleeing girls and boys—Gray) (he listened with a fleeing mouth to his father's long dogmatic grace before meat—Hergesheimer) Gird implies an attack marked by scoffing, gibing, or jeering (the subprior was bidden to sing . . . the "Elegy of the Rose"; the author girding cheerily at the clerkly man's assumed ignorance of such compositions—Pater) (it worked off steam and got its comedy largely by girding at the great ones of the past—Times Lit. Sup.) Sneer carries the strongest implication of cynicism and ill-natured contempt of any of these terms; it often suggests the use of irony or satire the real purport of which is indicated by an insultingly contemptuous facial expression, tone of voice, or manner of phrasing (it has become . . . fashionable to sneer at economics and emphasize "the human dilemma"—Mailer) (people are nowadays so cynical—they sneer at everything that makes life worth living—L. P. Smith) Flout may imply any of the actions suggested by the preceding terms, but it carries a heightened implication not only of disdain and contempt but of refusal to heed or of a denial of a thing's truth or power (that bids him flout the law he makes, that bids him make the law he flouts—Kipling) (no form of Christianity which flouts science is in the true line of progress—Inge) (for the past eight years they had watched an administration purposely flout the intellectual life—Michener)

Ana *ridicule, deride, mock, taunt: scorn, disdain, scout, contemn, *despise scold n shrew, vixen, termagant, *virago, amazon scold vb Scold, upbraid, rate, berate, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig, rail, revile, vituperate can all mean to reprove, reproach, or censure angrily, harshly, and more or less abusively. Scold, the term most common in ordinary use, usually implies a rebuking in a mood of irritation or ill temper, with or without sufficient justification (his father scolded him for staying out late) (our great authors have scolded the nation more than they praised it. Often their scolding has been . . . wholly justified, but often too it has been eccentric or ill-informed—Malcolm Cowley) Upbraid stresses reproaching or censuring on more definite grounds than scold does and usually suggests justification or justifiable anger (the judge upbraided the parents for the delinquency of their children) (I think he'd meant to upbraid me for sneaking off, but he didn't—Cather) (he had so often upbraided her for her superficiality—Sackville-West) Rate and the more common berate usually imply more or less prolonged, angry, and sometimes abusive scolding either in censuring or in reprimanding (the voice continued violently rating me—Hudson) (hearing Ed Hall berate a farmer who doubted the practicability of the machine—Anderson) Fairly close synonyms of rate and berate are the expressive tongue-lash which stresses the punitive effect on the person berated (tongue-lashed them in a way that could be heard blocks off—Fast) (suffer from a fifteen-minute tongue-lashing) and the crude terms jaw, bawl, usually with out, chew out, and wig (chiefly British), which emphasize the noisy prolonged ranting which usually attends a berating (I have been jawed for letting you go—Marryat) (you'll get bawled out when you pull a boner—Mathewson) (some niggling Quartermaster lieutenant chewed them out because they were a few hundred cases short—Liebling) (a subordinate . . . who presumably had been severely wigged by his chief—The Times) Rail carries a more definite implication of either abusive or scoffing language than rate or berate (enemies . . . rail at him for crimes he is not guilty of—Junius) (the couples railed at the chant and the frown of the witchmen lean, and laughed them down—Lindsay) Revile carries a much stronger implication of abusive, scurrilous language than rail does but little, if any, suggestion of scoffing; it often also implies deliberate vilification (the words humiliated her, the tone reviled her . . . they were the clashes of naked hate—Farrell) (her tenants, who have to earn the money she spends abroad . . . revile her as a fugitive and an absentee—Shaw) Vituperate implies more violence in the censure and in the method of attack than does revile, but otherwise they are close synonyms (he vituperated from the pulpit the vices of the court—Froude) (the last image that crossed his mind was Sir James with his angry face and his trembling hands vituperating him—Archibald Marshall)

Ana reprehend, reprobate, censure, blame, *criticize: reproach, reprimand, *reprove, rebuke, admonish, chide: *execrate, objurgate scoop vb *dip, bail, ladle, spoon, dish scope *range, gamut, reach, radius, compass, sweep, orbit, horizon, ken, purview

Ana *expanse, amplitude, spread, stretch: *field, domain, sphere, territory, province: extent, area, *size scorch vb *burn, char, sear, singe

Ana *wither, shrivel scorn n disdain, contempt, despite (see under DESPISE)

Ana superciliousness, insolence, disdainfulness (see corresponding adjectives at PROUD): scoffing, flouting, jeering, gibing (see SCOFF): deriding or derision, ridiculing or ridicule, taunting, mocking or mockery (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE)

scorn vb disdain, scout, *despise, contemn

Ana repudiate, spurn, reject (see DECLINE vb): flout, *scoff, jeer, gibe: deride, mock, taunt, *ridicule

Scotch, Scottish, Scots can all apply to what constitutes, belongs to, or derives from Scotland or its people. Scotch is most widely used outside Scotland, especially in the spoken language (the entire Scotch people) (the inconvenience of having nothing in England like the Scotch one-pound note—Todd) (a schism in the Scotch Church—Justice Holmes) (the overwhelming proportion being English, Scotch, or Irish in descent—Carnegie Mag.) (a Scotch painter) (not all the Scottish names that survive today are truly Scotch in origin—Mencken) Scottish has a more literary, less casual flavor and use (the zest, courage, and good humor of the nineteenth-century Scottish author are infectious—Bloom) (she left for Edinburgh the following year to assume the Scottish crown—Bruun & Commager) (the Scottish Universities—Winant) (Scottish literature) Scots is used in the same way as Scottish (the names of Scots and English ship-owners—Conrad) (a Scots writer—H. M. Jones) except that Scots is sometimes preferred in reference to law and in historical references to money (a pound Scots) In Scotland itself Scottish and Scots are often preferred to Scotch (a delegation of Scottish editors—The Scotsman) (Scottish cricket—The Scotsman) (the Scots community in New York—The Scotsman) (new Scots air link—The Scotsman) but Scotch also is used (the signs confirmed my recollection that the Scotch Scots are not ashamed of the word Scotch and do not go about protesting that Scottish and Scots are preferable forms—Liebling) especially with regard to the products of Scotland (wool jersey . . . and Scotch tweeds are favorite fabrics—Women's Wear Daily)

Scottish, Scots adj *Scotch

scoundrel *villain, blackguard, knave, rascal, rogue, scamp, rapscallion, miscreant

Ana *criminal, felon, malefactor, culprit scour vb *seek, search, hunt, ransack, rummage, comb, ferret out

Ana investigate (see corresponding noun at INQUIRY); *scrutinize, inspect, examine: range, roam, rove, *wander scout vb scorn, *despise, contemn, disdain

Ana flout, *scoff, sneer, jeer: deride, taunt, mock, *ridicule scowl vb *frown, glower, lower, gloom

Ana glare, stare, *gaze scrap vb *discard, junk, cast, shed, molt, slough scrap n *brawl, broil, fracas, melee, row, rumpus

Ana *quarrel, altercation, squabble, wrangle: fight, fray, combat (see CONTEST)

scrape vb Scrape, scratch, grate, rasp, grind are comparable when they mean to apply friction to something by rubbing it with or against a thing that is harsh, rough, or sharp. Scrape usually implies the removal of something from a surface with an edged instrument; the term then commonly suggests a purpose (as erasing, smoothing, or freeing from dirt, paint, skin, or peel). Additionally the term commonly implies the making of a distinctive and often unpleasant sound (<scrape the dishes before washing) (<scrape potatoes) (<scrape off paint) (a twinge that scraped upon the very parchment of his soul as a lead pencil upon a slate—Powys) (<chairs were scraped along the floor—Anderson) Scratch differs from scrape in its common implication of less purposiveness in the agent and of definite damage to the thing that is scratched; it usually also suggests the use of a pointed rather than an edged instrument which gouges a line or furrow in a surface and seldom stresses the noise produced (a substance hard enough to scratch glass) (<scratched by the thorns of a rose) (<scratch a mosquito bite) (<this pen scratches) (<his wooden plow scarcely more than scratched the surface of the earth—A. R. Williams) Grate usually stresses the harsh sound or the sensation of harshness made by rubbing something with or against a rough indented or cutting surface (as of a file); the term implies removal of material from a body in particles, and in itself as distinct from context suggests nothing about the aims or effects (as abrasion, wearing or rubbing away, or pulverization) (<grate nutmeg) (<grate cheese) Often grate implies little more than a harsh or creaking sound made by friction (a key grated in the lock) (till grates her keel upon the shallow sand—Byron) In extended use the term tends to be used in reference to things that irritate, exasperate, or harass with the implication that their effect is like the harsh sound or the sensation of harshness characteristic of a physical grating (an unctuous heartiness . . . which grated upon David's ear—Turnbull) Rasp usually implies a harsher or rougher and more disagreeable effect than either scrape or grate. It may suggest the use of or as if of a rough instrument (as a coarse file called a rasp) or of something equally effective or as trying to the nerves (thin a stick by rasping) (these rocks are known to have their angles rasped off, and to be fluted and scarred by the ice—Tyndall) (her hard, metallic voice had rasped the invalid's nerves—Carey) (when you laid a tight hold on your fiddlestick . . . you could do nothing but rasp—Shaw) Grind implies a sharpening of the edge or point of a tool or weapon or the smoothing of a surface (as of glass) by friction; in both uses the sound made in the act of grinding is often stressed (I have ground the axe myself; do you but strike the blow—Shak.) (<grind lenses for eyeglasses) In extended use the word often implies a wearing down by friction and also often suggests a particularly harsh or rough method of gaining one's ends or of making one's way (laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law—Goldsmith) (we went aground—grinding, grinding, till the ship trembled in every timber—Martineau)

Ana *erase, efface, delete: remove (see MOVE); *rid, clear: *abrade, chafe, excoriate scrape n *predicament, dilemma, quandary, plight, fix, jam, pickle

Ana *difficulty, vicissitude: perplexity, bewilderment, distraction (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE); embarrassment, discomfiture (see corresponding verbs at EMBARRASS) scratch vb *scrape, grate, rasp, grind

Ana *tear, rend: *injure, damage, mar, impair, hurt: *deface, disfigure scrawny *skinny, lank, lanky, lean, spare, gaunt, rawboned, angular

Ana *thin, slim, slender: *meager, exiguous

Ant brawny: fleshy: obese scream vb shriek, screech, yell, *shout, squeal, holler, whoop

Ana pierce, penetrate (see ENTER): vent, utter, voice, *express, air scream n shriek, screech, yell, shout, squeal, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

screech vb scream, shriek, yell, *shout, squeal, holler, whoop screech n scream, shriek, yell, shout, squeal, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

screen vb *hide, conceal, secrete, cache, bury, ensconce

Ana *defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard: *disguise, dissemble, cloak, mask, camouflage scrumpy *meager, scanty, scant, skimpy, exiguous, spare, sparse

Ana *thin, slight, slender, slim: niggardly, *stingy, penurious, parsimonious scruple n demur, *qualm, compunction

Ana *hesitation, hesitancy: doubt, *uncertainty, suspicion, mistrust: misgiving, *apprehension scruple vb *demur, balk, jib, shy, boggle, stickle, stick, strain

Ana *hesitate, waver, falter, vacillate: *object, protest scrupulous 1 meticulous, punctilious, punctual, *careful Ana fastidious, particular, finicky, fussy (see NICE): exact, accurate, precise (see CORRECT)

Ant remiss

2 conscientious, *upright, honest, just, honorable

Ana *moral, ethical, righteous, virtuous, noble: *rigid, rigorous, strict

Ant unscrupulous scrutinize, scan, inspect, examine, audit can all mean to look at or over critically and searchingly. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are observable in their corresponding nouns scrutiny, scanning, inspection, examination, and audit. Scrutinize and scrutiny imply close observation and attention to minute detail (scores of plain-dress detectives closely scrutinized the bidden guests as they arrived—Lucius Beebe) (living among the absurd magpie scrutinies of wife, children, colleagues, patients . . . most analysts are obliged to be more proper than proper—Mailer) Scan and scanning are usually employed in reference to something that is surveyed from point to point; the terms may imply careful observation or study but sometimes imply the opposite and suggest a cursory glancing from one point to another; thus, to scan the newspaper each morning may admit of either interpretation. Only a context can make the implication clear (the more one scans the later pages of Mark Twain's history the more one is forced to the conclusion that there was something gravely amiss with his inner life—Brooks) (scanned, with raised brows, yesterday's Jewish paper that he had already thoroughly read—Malamaud) (a quick scanning of the items will help you—S. L. Payne) Inspect and inspection in general use often imply little more than a careful observation (he had perched himself upon the edge of the desk . . . and was absorbed in an unabashed inspection of her—Hervey) but in legal, military, governmental, and industrial use they imply a searching scrutiny for possible errors, defects, flaws, or shortcomings (every length of cloth is inspected before it leaves the factory) (the troops prepared for the daily inspection) (this report will not pass inspection) (freshly picked grapes are inspected and cleansed before delivery—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Examine (see also ASK 1) and examination imply a close scrutiny or investigation to determine the facts about a thing or the real nature, character, or condition of a thing or to test a thing's quality, validity, truth, or functioning (the critic refused to give an opinion before he had examined the painting closely) (the doctor sent him to the hospital for a thorough examination) (they examined the house from cellar to attic before deciding to purchase it) (could it be the intention of those who gave this power, to say that . . . a case arising under the constitution should be decided without examining the instrument under which it arises?—John Marshall) (he began to . . . examine the speeches of its leaders, study its organization, reflect on its psychology and political techniques—Shirer) (examination of the bedroom has convinced me that it was possible for them to have escaped . . . as they said they did—Prewett) Audit, as verb or noun, implies a searching examination of accounts in order to determine their correctness (an annual audit of the tax books) (each bank is audited annually by a certified public accountant—Safety for Your Savings) In its extended sense audit often carries a suggestion of a final accounting (the general day of account and audit to be made at the throne of God—Udall) (when it comes to the audit before high heaven—Lowes)

Ana *consider, study, contemplate, weigh: *analyze, resolve, dissect: penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER) scrutiny examination, scanning, inspection, audit (see under SCRUTINIZE)

Ana investigation, research, probe, *inquiry, inquisition: surveying or survey, observing or observation, viewing or view (see corresponding verbs at SEE)

scud skim, shoot, sail, *fly, dart, float scuffle vb *wrestle, tussle, grapple

Ana fight, *contend: clash, conflict, collide, *bump sculpture, sculpt, sculp *carve, chisel, engrave, incise, etch

Ana shape, fashion, form (see MAKE): depict, portray, *represent scum *foam, froth, spume, lather, suds, yeast scurrility *abuse, billingsgate, invective, vituperation, obloquy

Ana vilifying or vilification, maligning, traducing, calumination (see corresponding verbs at MALIGN): reviling, berating, upbraiding, rating, scolding (see SCOLD) scurrilous *abusive, opprobrious, vituperative, contumelious

Ana ribald, obscene, gross, *coarse, vulgar: insulting, outraging, offending or offensive (see corresponding verbs at OFFEND): foul, filthy, *dirty

scurry vb *scuttle, scamper, skedaddle, sprint

Ana *rush, dash, shoot, tear, charge: dart, *fly, scud: hurry, *speed, hasten scurvy adj *contemptible, despicable, pitiable, sorry, cheap, beggarly, shabby

Ana *base, low, vile: *mean, abject scuttle vb Scuttle, scurry, scamper, skedaddle, sprint are comparable when they mean to move briskly by or as if by running. Scuttle, scurry, and scamper all imply a rapid erratic progress of or as if of a small active animal but each may carry quite distinctive suggestions. Scuttle tends to suggest an irregular, precipitous, and seemingly awkward gait (as of a spider or crab) in which speed often appears to be attained with effort (landladies scuttling sideways like crabs in their crustacean silk gowns—Sitwell) (a flock of sparrows scuttled like brown leaves over the pavement—Glasgow) (a little motorcar so small that it scuttled up the road, shot around, and stopped . . . with the abruptness of a wound-up toy—Wolfe) Scurry more often conveys the impression of a neat briskness (as of a mouse or squirrel) and often of abrupt changes in direction or speed (sent him scurrying down a zigzag, crisscross, confused trail—Hervey) ([the squirrel] changed his mind. For no apparent reason he whisked about, scurried across the ground to the big elm, ran straight up the tall trunk, and disappeared—C. G. D. Roberts) (his still restless and curious intelligence went scurrying back through the past, savoring the quality of his experience, sniffing at souvenirs of his fights and his triumphs—James Gray) Scamper suggests nimbleness in movement and typically applies to playful gamboling (as of children or young animals) (tiny chipmunks no bigger than half-grown rats scampered fearlessly about—S. E. White) (lamb scampering after their mothers) but it may stress urgency and then imply such motives as fear or need of shelter (he could let his harried mind and spirit scamper in thought to this quiet male refuge and there find solace—Ferber) (the resulting roar . . . sent several persons under the marquee scampering into the store for safety—N. Y. Times) Skedaddle typically applies to human movement and distinctively implies a hasty departing for cause, sometimes even a panic flight (the children around our place all own hideouts where they skedaddle whenever that old ogre, Work, rears his ugly head—Perkins) (the claim's played out, the partnership's played out, and the sooner we skedaddle out of this the better—Harte) Sprint implies movement at top speed and typically suggests an output of energy that can only briefly be maintained; it is particularly appropriate when the notion to be conveyed is one of an urgent effort of speed to attain an immediate end (the commuter has no time to read the editorials as he sprints alternately from train to ferry and from ferry to train—Amer. Guide Series: N. J.) (hoping to get a shot at a rabbit sprinting back cover from far out in the field—T. H. White) (the . . . Brens at once began to blaze away and under their cover the rest of the patrol sprinted back about fifty yards—Majdalany)

Ana shoot, tear, dash, *rush, charge: *fly, scud: hurry,

*speed, hasten

seaman *mariner, sailor, tar, gob, bluejacket sear vb *burn, scorch, char, singe search vb *seek, scour, hunt, comb, ransack, rummage, ferret out

Ana investigate (see corresponding noun at INQUIRY); inspect, examine, *scrutinize: penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER) season vb *harden, acclimatize, acclimate

Ana *habituate, accustom, inure: train, school, discipline (see TEACH): *practice, exercise, drill seasonable, timely, well-timed, opportune, pat can mean occurring or coming with peculiar appropriateness as to moment or present situation. What is seasonable is perfectly suited to the season or time of year <seasonable menus for hot August days <seasonable weather> or, by extension, fits in perfectly with the needs of the moment or the character of the occasion <his caution was . . . seasonable, and his advice . . . good—Defoe> <weaves a seasonable garland of legend and fact from the flora of Christmas—London Calling> What is timely is not only seasonable but comes or occurs at such a moment as to be of genuine value or service  <to me alone there came a thought of grief: a timely utterance gave that thought relief—Wordsworth> <valuable objects may be saved from the flames by timely aid—Dickens> What is well-timed is so timely as to suggest the appearance or the actual exercise of care, forethought, or design <their well-timed and rapid charge decided the conflict—Gibbon> <the instruments needed to make their movements precise and well-timed were necessarily reduced to uniformity too—Mumford> What is opportune fits directly into a given concurrence of circumstances or comes as if by accident in the nick of time and works to the advantage of those concerned <the moment was not opportune for an uprising> <as if this was an encounter which was something more than convenient, something really opportune—West> <the literary scene was too full of chaotic and short-lived movements to make the launching of a large work opportune—Barzun> What is pat is perfectly adapted to the situation or the moment  or comes or occurs at the very moment it is needed  <had assuredly the air of a miracle, of something dreamed in a dream, of something pathetically and impossibly appropriate—pat, as they say—Bennett>

Ana apropos, apposite, pertinent, *relevant: appropriate, happy, felicitous, apt (see FIT): welcome, grateful, gratifying (see PLEASANT)

Ant unseasonable

seclude *isolate, segregate, insulate, sequester

Ana *enclose, envelop, fence, pen, cage, wall: confine, circumscribe, *limit, restrict seclusion *solitude, isolation, alienation

Ana retirement, withdrawal (see corresponding verbs at GO): separation, parting, severing or severance (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE)

Con *intercourse, communication, commerce, dealings, communion second n *instant, moment, minute, flash, jiffy, twinkling, split second secondary adj *subordinate, dependent, subject, tributary, collateral

Ana *auxiliary, accessory, subservient, subsidiary, contributory: incidental, *accidental, adventitious

Ant primary second-rate mediocre, middling, *medium, moderate, average, fair, indifferent secret adj Secret, covert, stealthy, furtive, clandestine, surreptitious, underhand, underhanded are comparable when they mean done, carried on, operated, or accomplished so as not to attract attention or observation. Secret, the most general of these terms and the widest in its range of application, implies a hiding or concealing or a being hidden or concealed <virtues are the hidden beauties of a soul, the secret graces which cannot be discovered by a mortal eye—Spectator> <she seized a lamp . . . and hurried towards the secret passage—Walpole> <for eighteen years a secret and an unaccused prisoner in the Bastille—Dickens>  Covert applies to something that is done as it were under cover, and is not open or avowed <he would find out the facts, the good and the bad, and set them down without any covert attack or special pleading—MacInnes> <his covert alliance against the House of Austria—Belloc> Stealthy usually suggests an intent to elude, to spy upon, or to gain one's ends without attracting attention; it is frequently a term either of derogation or of censure, connoting deliberateness and quietness in deceiving, entrapping, or deceiving <murder . . . with his stealthy pace . . . towards his design moves like a ghost—Shak.>  <he came sidling up the driveway with a stealthy, soft-treading gait, making no noise at all—Dahl> Furtive agrees with stealthy in suggesting an intent to escape observation but it carries clearer suggestions of cautiousness, watchfulness, or slyness, and is used to describe not only movements and acts but also faces, features, or expressions which reveal these or similar characteristics <the man in black, after a furtive glance, did not look me in the face—Borrow> <small furtive eyes—George Eliot> <it would be possible for them, by breaking the law discreetly, to get all they want without discomfort; but . . . they . . . refuse to be the furtive evaders of a rule—Huxley> <the furtive sex fumbling that all boys her own age considered natural and in fact obligatory—Wouk> Clandestine implies concealment (as in working out a plan) and usually an evil or illicit end; it commonly suggests stealthy or furtive methods or a fear that others may know what is occurring <clandestine meetings of the lovers>  <the past when even the girls in the Library of Congress—even the archivists—could be booked for a clandestine weekend at Virginia Beach—Cheever> <Germany's clandestine rearmament under the auspices of the Reichswehr—Shirer> Surreptitious applies not only to stealthy and furtive actions but also to emotions or desires and to concrete things which are concealed for fear of their discovery usually because they involve violation of a right, a law, a custom, or a standard (as of conduct or propriety) <there he kept his surreptitious quids of tobacco, his pipe, and his small hoards—M. E. Freeman> <over the paling of the garden we might obtain an oblique and surreptitious view—Henry James> <cherish a surreptitious liking for romantic love stories> <the surreptitious removal of his stock by a merchant about to be forced into bankruptcy> Underhand and underhanded consistently carry an implication of fraud, deceit, or unfairness, in addition to that of secrecy in dealings or surreptitiousness in methods <he had suspected his agent of some underhand dealings—Austen> <it seemed deceitful and underhand to try such a thing—Pritchett> <he did not look quite like a professional gambler, but something smooth and twinkling in his countenance suggested an underhanded mode of life—Cather>

Ana *mysterious, inscrutable, arcane: puzzling, perplexing, mystifying (see PUZZLE vb): hidden, concealed, secreted, screened (see HIDE) secrete *hide, conceal, screen, cache, bury, ensconce Ana dissemble, cloak, mask, *disguise, camouflage secretive close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped, *silent, uncommunicative, taciturn, reticent, reserved Ana *cautious, circumspect, wary: restrained, inhibited (see RESTRAIN)

Con *talkative, loquacious, garrulous, voluble, glib: candid, open, plain, *frank sect *religion, denomination, cult, communion, faith, creed, persuasion, church sectary 1 adherent, *follower, disciple, partisan, henchman, satellite

Ana devotee, votary, *addict

2 also sectarian *heretic, schismatic, dissenter, non-conformist

Ana *enthusiast, zealot, fanatic, bigot section n sector, segment, division, *part, portion, piece, detail, member, fraction, fragment, parcel

Ana district, *locality, vicinity: region, tract, *area, zone, belt: *field, sphere, territory sector segment, section, division, *part, portion, piece, detail, member, fraction, fragment, parcel secular temporal, lay, *profane

Ana worldly, mundane, *earthly, earthy, terrestrial

Ant religious (as schools, journals, authorities): sacred (as music, drama): regular (as priests)

secure adj *safe

Ana *firm, solid: protected, shielded, guarded, safeguarded, defended (see DEFEND): certain, positive, *sure: impregnable, unassailable, invulnerable, *invincible Ant precarious, dangerous secure vb 1 Secure, anchor, moor, rivet can all in extended use mean to fasten or fix firmly or immovably. They are, however, not often interchangeable because of implications derived from their primary senses. One secures something that may get lost, may escape, or may permit invasion or intrusion if allowed to remain loose or to work loose; the word usually implies care or protection as the end of the action (secure doors and windows before retiring to keep out intruders) (replace the nut, and tighten it down to secure the capacitor to the panel—J. A. Stanley) (getting intelligence which . . . will secure your own countrymen against brutality and outrages—Kenneth Roberts) One anchors or moors something unstable or subject to tugging or pulling by external forces or influences to another thing strong enough to hold it down or in place or powerful enough to counterbalance or counteract the opposing forces (most classrooms had benches and desks lined up in rows and anchored to the floor—Mumford) (anchor the cables of a suspension bridge to towers at either end) (moored to the rock on two sides, the cabin stood firm—Tyndall) But moor, which in its primary sense implies a making fast between two anchors or two or more lines or cables, may in extended use suggest greater steadiness or an even balancing of forces that make for stability (her reticent childhood sweetheart—whose idea of the good life is anchored to his dream of a French version of an American drugstore—N. Y. Times Book Rev.) (some of the tiny cone-shaped hats are attached to chenille snoods . . . which moor them on firmly—P. J. Reynolds) (said a network executive proudly: "While they're with us they [actors on contract] 'll be moored to television—they can't do any Broadway plays or movies."—Time) One rivets one thing to another when one joins things normally or actually separate from each other as closely together as though a rivet had been driven through them (fear riveted him to his chair) (why should

I write this down, that's riveted, screwed to my memory—Shak.) (the head of the state, in whose name he insisted that all his victories were won, to rivet the loyalty of the army to the civil administration—Buchan) (stood riveted to the earth . . . in the fascination of that dreaded gaze—Le Fanu)

Ana establish, *set, settle, fix: *fasten, attach, affix 2 *ensure, insure, assure

Ana protect, *defend, safeguard, guard, shield: preserve, conserve, *save: guarantee, guaranty (see corresponding nouns at GUARANTEE); warrant, *justify 3 procure, obtain, *get, acquire, gain, win

Ana seize, *take, grasp: *reach, attain, achieve, gain: *have, hold, own, possess security surety, guaranty, *guarantee, bond, bail

Ana *pledge, earnest, token sedate grave, staid, earnest, sober, *serious, solemn, somber

Ana placid, *calm, serene, tranquil: collected, composed, imperturbable (see COOL): *decorous, seemly, proper Ant flighty

sediment n *deposit, precipitate, dregs, lees, grounds sedition, treason are comparable when they mean an offense against a state to which or a sovereign to whom one owes allegiance. Sedition applies to conduct that is not manifested in an overt act but that incites commotion and resistance to lawful authority without in itself amounting to insurrection (sedition is . . . a matter of expressing opinions, not of committing acts—The Reporter) Treason applies to conduct that is manifested by an overt act or acts, is variously defined by various governments and at various times but typically has for its aim the violent overthrow of the government, the death of the sovereign, or betrayal to or aid and comfort of the enemy (one cannot commit treason simply by talking or conspiring against the government; he must actually do something, and there must be witnesses—Ogg & Ray) (sedition has come to be applied to practices which tend to disturb internal public tranquility by deed, word, or writing but which do not amount to treason and are not accompanied by or conducive to open violence—Chafee) (sedition . . . is traitorous behavior that falls short of treason because it does not actively levy war against the United States or give aid to an enemy of the United States. It stirs up resistance to law or encourages conduct that may become treason—Smelser & Kirwin)

Ana *rebellion, revolt, revolution, uprising, insurrection, mutiny, putsch, coup: disaffection, alienation, estrangement (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE)

Con *fidelity, allegiance, loyalty, fealty seditious mutinous, rebellious, factious, *insubordinate, contumacious

Ana traitorous, treacherous, perfidious, disloyal, *faithless: disaffected, alienated (see ESTRANGE) seduce tempt, entice, inveigle, *lure, decoy

Ana mislead, beguile, delude, *deceive: corrupt, debauch, deprave, pervert, *debase: bewitch, captivate, allure (see ATTRACT)

sedulous assiduous, diligent, industrious, *busy

Ana persevering, persistent (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE): untiring, unwearied, *indefatigable, tireless see vb 1 See, behold, descry, espy, view, survey, contemplate, observe, notice, remark, note, perceive, discern can all mean to take cognizance of something by physical or sometimes mental vision. See, the most general of these terms, may be used to imply little more than the use of the organs of vision (he cannot see the crowd for he is blind) but more commonly it implies a recognition or appreciation of what is before one's eyes <they can see a great deal in Paris, but nothing in an English meadow—Jefferies> <if the policeman saw him at all, he probably observed him with misgiving—Wolfe> <(the . . . look of one who has seen all, borne all, known all—Styron)> The term may imply the exercise of other powers than the sense of sight, including a vivid imagination <I can see her plainly now, as she looked forty years ago> <"Methinks I see my father." "Where, my lord?" "In my mind's eye, Horatio"—Shak.> or mental insight <he was the only one who saw the truth> or powers of inference <though he appeared calm, I could see he was inwardly agitated> Behold carries a stronger implication of a definite ocular impression and of distinct recognition than see; it also suggests looking at what is seen <we have sailed many weeks, we have sailed many days, (seven days to the week I allow), but a Snark, on the which we might lovingly gaze, we have never beheld till now—Lewis Carroll>  Descry and espy imply a seeing in spite of difficulties (as distance, darkness, or partial concealment). Descry often suggests an effort to discover or a looking out for someone or something <the grass was high in the meadow, and there was no descrying her—George Eliot> <Sir Austin ascended to the roof . . . and descried him hastening to the boathouse by the riverside—Meredith> but espy usually implies skill in detection (as of what is small, or not clearly within the range of vision, or is trying to escape detection) <the seamen espied a rock within half a cable's length of the ship—Swift> <flowers we espy beside the torrent growing; flowers that peep forth from many a cleft and think—Wordsworth> View and survey, on the contrary, imply the seeing of what is spread before one or what one can examine steadily or in detail. Both terms as often imply mental consideration as a physical seeing or looking over. View usually implies or requires a statement of a particular way of looking at a thing or a particular purpose in considering it <view the panorama with delight> <viewed a piece of property that he thought of buying> <view a painting from various angles> <view the industry of the country, and see how it is affected by inequality of income—Shaw> <the effort is an interesting one if you view it in terms of the techniques of political symbolism—Lerner> Survey more often implies a detailed scrutiny or inspection by the eyes or the mind so that one has a picture or idea of something as a whole <the captain surveyed him from cap to waistcoat and from waistcoat to leggings for a few moments—Hardy> <he surveyed the room from the weathered blue jealousies to the frayed rush mats, from the inevitable spiders on the ceiling to the ants . . . over the floor—Hervey>  Contemplate (see also CONSIDER 1) implies little more than a fixing of the eyes upon something, sometimes in abstraction, but more often in enjoyment or in reference to some end in view <he had a way of looking her over from beneath lowered lids, while he affected to be examining a glove-button or contemplating the tip of his shining boot—Wharton> Observe and notice both imply a heeding and not passing over; they commonly imply seeing but may suggest the use of another sense <he observed every detail in the arrangement> <did you notice the man who just passed us?> <he noticed a peculiar odor> Especially in scientific use observe may carry a stronger implication of directed attention <in order to get fresh light on this subject, I have observed

my own children carefully—Russell> <keeping an ear pricked to observe the movements of the Viceroy and his group—Woolf> <(things which are always about us . . . are the easiest to observe with accuracy—Grandgent)> Notice often implies some definite reaction to what is seen or sometimes heard, felt, or sensed such as making a mental note of it or a remark about it or, if what is noticed is a person, recognizing him by a salute or a greeting <by Mrs. Hurst and Miss Bingley they were noticed only by a curtsey—Austen> <she didn't notice. She drove single-minded and unaware there was anyone next to her—Pynchon> Remark (see also REMARK) and note carry an even stronger implication than notice of registering mentally one's impression. But remark is more likely to suggest a judging or criticizing of what is noticed  <I could not help remarking the position of her left arm—Quiller-Couch> and note to suggest a recording, sometimes by a mental note, but sometimes in writing or in speech  <he carried a map and noted every stream and every hill that we passed> Perceive carries a stronger implication of the use of the mind in observation than any of the preceding terms. The word basically implies apprehension or obtaining knowledge of a thing, not only through the sense of sight but through any of the senses. It is often used in place of see in the simple sense of that word, but since it always implies distinct recognition of what is seen, the words are sometimes used in contrast, especially by psychologists <an infant sees objects long before it is able to perceive them as definite persons or things> <when he drew nearer he perceived it to be a spring van, ordinary in shape, but singular in color—Hardy> In its richer meaning perceive suggests not only dependence on other senses than that of sight but also usually keen mental vision or special insight and penetration <disgusted with every person who could not perceive . . . these obvious truths—Bennett> <his lightning dashes from image to image, so quick that we are unable at first to perceive the points of contact—Day Lewis> Discern, like descry, often implies little more than a making out of something by means of the eyes <at length he discerned, a long distance in front of him, a moving spot, which appeared to be a vehicle—Hardy> <sometimes we discern the city afar off—Benson> In its more distinctive use the term usually implies the powers of deeply perceiving and of distinguishing or discriminating what the senses perceive <ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?—Mt 16:3> <his grave eyes steadily discerned the good in men—Masefield> <he tried quickly to think of something else, lest with her uncanny intuition she discern the cloud of death in his mind—Buck>

Ana *scrutinize, scan, examine, inspect: pierce, penetrate, probe (see ENTER): *consider, study, contemplate
2 See, look, watch can all mean to perceive something by means of the eyes. See (see also SEE 1) stresses the reception of visual impressions <he is now able to see clearly> <have the power of seeing> Look stresses the directing of the eyes to something or the fixing of the eyes on something in order to see it <if you will only look, you will be able to see what I am doing> <he refused to look in the mirror the nurse gave him> Watch (see also TEND) implies a following of something with one's eyes, so as to observe every movement, every change, a sign of danger, or a favorable opportunity <watch for a while and tell us what you see> <spend the night watching a sick friend> <watching the clock as closely as a cat watches a mouse>

Ana *gaze, gape, stare, glare seedy *shabby, dilapidated, dingy, faded, threadbare

Ana drooping, flagging, sagging, wilting (see DROOP); sickly, *unwholesome, morbid; worn (see HAGGARD)

seek, search, scour, hunt, comb, ferret out, ransack, rummage are comparable when they mean to look for or go in quest of in the hope of finding. Seek has become widely extended in application and may take as its object either a person or a concrete thing or something intangible or abstract and may imply either a quest that involves great effort or one that makes slight demands; the term is more often used in the written than the spoken language <they sought him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance. And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him—Lk 2:44-45> <seek the truth>  <wisdom must be sought for its own sake or we shall not find it—Inge> Search implies both effort and thoroughness. It differs from seek especially in taking as its object the place in which or the person on whom something is sought; it therefore connotes an investigating, an exploring, a penetrating scrutinizing, or a careful examining <search every section of the country for spies> <search the house from top to bottom for a lost ring> <I have searched every nook and cranny> <search all the persons present when the money disappeared> <searched his memory for a name> <the book was edited in a way no editor could ever have time or love to find; it was searched sentence by sentence, word for word—Mailer> Scour, which means in general to run over or to traverse swiftly especially in pursuit or in search, can be used more narrowly to mean to make an exhaustive search of a territory or of something comparable to a territory for a thing that must be found <scour the coast for lurking submarines> <scour the neighborhood for the missing child> <the next morning Archer scoured the town in vain for more yellow roses—Wharton> <scoured the coppices and woods and old quarries, so long as a blackberry was to be found—D. H. Lawrence> Hunt basically comes close to scour in its general sense for it implies a pursuit of and often a search for something, but especially game. In the extended sense in which the term is here considered it implies specifically a vigorous and, often, unavailing search for something as elusive as game <they hunted till darkness came on, but they found not a button, or feather, or mark—Lewis Carroll> <hunt evidence far and wide> <I've hunted for the lost papers everywhere but I can't find them> <in . . . hunting up earlier quotations for recent words—Murray> Comb implies methods of searching as painstaking or thoroughgoing as those involved in going through the hair with a fine comb <comb the countryside for the escaped convicts> <comb the factories for more men for the army> <the Pacific Ocean between San Francisco and Hawaii is being combed today by aircraft and shipping for signs of the two planes—Morning Post> Ferret out stresses the finding of something that is difficult to get at and usually suggests a vigorous, arduous, persistent and, often, tricky method of search <ferret out a secret> <one of the professor's specialties being to ferret out captured . . . political commissars for execution—Shirer> <I have ferreted out evidence—Dickens> Ransack and rummage imply a search usually of a limited area; both tend to stress the manner of going through what is examined and suggest a haphazard and often disorderly or heedless pulling about and turning over of miscellaneous items. Though the two are often interchangeable, ransack is especially appropriate when one wishes to stress careless haste, lack of regard for the rights of others, or improper motives on the part of the searcher, while rummage may be chosen when a more neutral word is needed or when lack of a definite object of search is to be implied; thus, a thoughtless child might ransack the refrigerator to make himself a snack and then go rummage through his toys after a lost ball; a thief ransacks a house in search of loot, but rummages through a drawer with no clear and specific notion of what he may find <pass a rainy day rummaging about in the attic> <the men ransacked the thatched huts, rummaged among the pots, the fishing gear, the shell ornaments—M. S. Douglas> <apparently unlimited search, such as ransacking parts of an office can never be justified—Paul Wilson> <ransacked his father's shelves, dipped into a multitude of books—Macaulay> <stooped and deliberately rummaged in the dust at his feet, as if searching for the squirming threads of death it might contain—Wylie> <the impatience with which a community without tradition rummages through ways of life which other peoples, other cities have worked out for themselves slowly and painfully—Gordimer>

Ana inquire, question, *ask, interrogate: pursue, chase, *follow, trail

seem, look, appear can mean to be as stated in one's view or judgment, but not necessarily in fact. Often they are used interchangeably with apparently no difference in meaning <he seems tired> <the students look eager> <the orchestra appeared ready to begin> But even in such phrases seem suggests an opinion based on subjective impressions and personal reaction rather than on objective signs  <my other visits to Greece were over twenty years ago. How would it seem after such a long time, and seen in such a different way—Chubb> while look implies that the opinion is based on a general visual impression <her . . . lips looked parched and unnatural—Glasgow> Appear may convey the same implication as look but it sometimes suggests a distorted impression such as can be produced by an optical illusion, a restricted point of view, or another's dissembling <his tongue . . . could make the worse appear the better reason—Milton> <the attempt has been made to make it appear that this conflict is not between religion and science, but between the latter and theology. This seems to me a cheap and worthless evasion—Cohen>

Ana *infer, gather, judge, deduce, conclude seeming *apparent, illusory, ostensible

Ana *plausible, specious, credible: dissembling, disguising, masking, cloaking, camouflaging (see DISGUISE) seemly proper, nice, *decorous, decent

Ana fitting, suitable, appropriate, meet (see FIT); congruous, compatible, congenial, consistent, *consonant

Ant unseemly

seethe *boil, simmer, parboil, stew segment section, sector, division, *part, portion, piece, detail, member, fraction, fragment, parcel segregate vb *isolate, seclude, insulate, sequester

Ana *separate, divide, part, sever: *detach, disengage: *choose, select, single seize *take, grasp, clutch, snatch, grab

Ana *catch, capture, snare, ensnare, trap, entrap: appropriate, confiscate, usurp, *arrogate select adj Select, elect, picked, exclusive can mean marked by a superior character or quality which distinguishes the person, the thing, or the group so qualified from others (as in value, excellence, or favor). Select implies that the person or thing has been chosen with discrimination in preference to others of the same class or kind <the hotel caters to a select clientele> <the Milton of poetry is, in his own words again, the man of "industrious and select reading" —Arnold) Select is also often used, with little or no implication of choice or selection, in the sense of superior or exceptional (a select audience) (persecution of that sort which bows down and crushes all but a very few select spirits—Macaulay) Elect commonly implies careful or discriminating selection and it carries a stronger implication than select of admission to some carefully restricted or inner circle; sometimes it also suggests the award of special privileges (that delicious phantom of being an elect spirit . . . unlike the crowd—Kingsley) (Darwin was one of those elect persons in whose subconscious, if not in their conscious, nature is implanted the realization that "science is poetry"—Ellis) Picked, like select, may or may not imply actual choice; the term commonly applies to what is conspicuously superior or above the average though it may suggest little more than the best available (a picked team) (the candidates are all picked men) (the picked moments of exaltation and vision which great tragedy brings—Montague) Exclusive in its most general sense implies a character in a thing that forces or inclines it to rule out whatever is not congruous or compatible with it or is its opposite or antithesis in constitution or character (mutually exclusive colors when mixed in the right proportions form a neutral gray) (exclusive concepts—animal and vegetable, for instance—Bowen) (didacticism and a sense of humor are mutually exclusive qualities—Lowes) As applied especially to persons, groups, or institutions exclusive implies tendencies or rules which prevent free acceptance or admission of those not conforming to imposed standards or not satisfying the requirements of those who are fastidious, snobbish, or highly critical (a weak, critical, fastidious creature, vain of a little exclusive information or of an uncommon knack in Latin verse—Eliot) (the exclusive caste system of a rigid feudalism—Binyon)

Ana *choice, exquisite, rare, delicate, dainty, recherché: superlative, surpassing, peerless, *supreme Ant indiscriminate

select vb *choose, elect, prefer, opt, pick, cull, single Ana *assort, sort, classify: discriminate, discern (see corresponding nouns at DISCERNMENT)

Ant reject —Con refuse, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE vb) selection *choice, preference, election, option, alternative Ana choosing, culling, picking (see CHOOSE): discrimination, *discernment, insight, acumen Ant rejection

self-abnegation *renunciation, abnegation, self-denial Ana sacrificing or sacrifice, forbearance, forgoing, eschewal (see corresponding verbs at FORGO): surrendering or surrender, resignation, abandonment, relinquishment (see corresponding verbs at RELINQUISH)

self-assertive assertive, *aggressive, pushing, pushy, militant Ana obtrusive, intrusive, officious, meddlesome, *imper-tinent: bold, audacious (see BRAVE): positive, certain, *sure, cocksure self-assurance assurance, *confidence, self-confidence, aplomb, self-possession Ana coolness, collectedness, imperturbability (see corresponding adjectives at COOL): composure, sangfroid, *equanimity

Con diffidence, shyness, bashfulness, modesty (see corresponding adjectives at SHY) self-complacent *complacent, self-satisfied, smug, priggish

Ana & Con see those at COMPLACENT self-confidence *confidence, assurance, self-assurance, self-possession, aplomb

Ana composure, *equanimity: sureness, sanguineness (see corresponding adjectives at CONFIDENT) self-denial self-abnegation, abnegation, *renunciation Ana sacrificing or sacrifice, forbearance (see corresponding verbs at FORGO): abstaining, refraining (see REFRAIN): restraining or restraint, curbing or curb, checking or check (see corresponding verbs at RESTRAIN) self-esteem self-love, *conceit, egotism, egoism, amour propre

Ana *pride, vanity: self-respect, self-regard, self-admiration (see base words at REGARD n)

Ant self-distrust

self-love self-esteem, *conceit, egotism, egoism, amour propre

Ana *pride, vanity, vainglory: complacency, self-complacency, smugness, priggishness (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT)

Ant self-forgetfulness self-possession *confidence, self-confidence, assurance, self-assurance, aplomb

Ana *equanimity, composure: coolness, collectedness, imperturbability, nonchalance (see corresponding adjectives at COOL): poise, savoir faire, *tact

selfsame *same, very, identical, identic, equivalent, equal, tantamount

Ana alike, *like, identical, uniform

Ant diverse

self-satisfied *complacent, self-complacent, smug, priggish

Ana satisfied, content (see under SATISFY): conceited, egoistic, egotistic (see corresponding nouns at CONCEIT) semblance *appearance, look, aspect

Ana *likeness, similitude, resemblance, analogy, affinity: *pose, affectation, air: *form, figure, shape semiannual *biannual, biennial sempiternal eternal, *infinite, boundless, illimitable, un-circumscribed

Ana *everlasting, endless, interminable, unceasing: *immortal, deathless, undying: *lasting, perdurable send, dispatch, forward, transmit, remit, route, ship are comparable when they mean to cause to go or to be taken from one place or person or condition to another. Send, the most general term, carries a wide range of implications and connotations and is capable of replacing any of the remaining terms especially when joined with a suitable modifying adverb. Basically it implies the action of an agent or sometimes an agency or instrumentality that initiates passage of one to another typically by ordering or directing (<sent a messenger to the bank) (if the body is rotated in any dimension of space, certain definite and fixed messages will be sent to the brain by the vestibular sense—Armstrong) or by using force (<send an arrow into a target) (there can come a cloudburst, an inch or two or three falling within an hour to wash out fields, send rivers flooding, wreck houses—La Farge) or by employing some available facility or inherent capacity or power (<send a letter by airmail) (the burning forest sent smoke over the city) (diseases that rack the human frame and send epidemics of sickness over great tracts of the earth's surface—Swinton) Often the term carries special connotations characteristic of particular idioms; thus, when one sends a child to college, one makes it possible for him to go by providing funds; when a teacher sends her pupils back to their books after recess she leads them to shift their focus from one activity (play) to another (study); when a story sends its hearers into gales of laughter it impels attention and alters mood; when something (as music or a personality) sends one, it induces an intense emotional response. Dispatch tends to suggest speed in sending and to heighten notions of specific destination or cause, though the use of a speedy means is as likely to be stated as implied (the police chief dispatched several detectives to the scene of the murder) (two destroyers were dispatched to the aid of the sinking vessel) (dispatch word to them by radio) (a messenger was dispatched with a reprieve but failed to arrive before the soldier had been shot—Amer. Guide Series: Conn.) Forward (see also ADVANCE) implies a sending on or forward especially of something that has been delayed or stopped before reaching the person to whom it is to be delivered (the letter had been forwarded from his old address—J. D. Beresford) or, in commercial use, of something that has been asked for or ordered (the goods ordered will be forwarded by parcel post) Transmit (see also CARRY) fundamentally implies a sending or passing from one place, person, or point to another; it often emphasizes the means rather than the fact of sending (the information can be most rapidly transmitted by radio) (the virus of yellow fever is transmitted by a mosquito) (prophets, who are . . . a vehicle through which to transmit a revelation—W. W. Howells) Remit (see also EXCUSE) especially in reference to money can mean merely to send (profits, dividends, interest, rents and royalties may be remitted to any country—Mikesell) but often implies a sending in response to a demand (please remit the balance due on your account) In more general and in legal use the term is likely to imply a sending or referring back (as for further action or consideration) (where an appellate court . . . reverses an original sentence . . . and remits the record for appropriate action, the lower court may proceed to sentence the defendant anew in proper form and according to law—U. S. v. Keenan) (there may be disputes whether an issue belongs to the side of civil or to that of administrative law. Such conflicts and disputes are remitted . . . to the arbitrating authority—Ernest Barker) Route implies a sending along of something according to a predetermined route, and often suggests the reaching in proper succession of one person or place after another (route a memorandum to the various staff members) (route the films to a chain of motion-picture theaters) Ship applies to the sending especially of heavy goods or articles specifically by ship or more generally by any normal commercial transportation channel (ship coal to distant lands) (ship freight by rail) (kept busy . . . shipping mackerel and cod—C. R. Sumner) Ana *speed, quicken: direct, order (see COMMAND): *go, leave, depart senescence *age, senility, dotage

Ant adolescence

senility dotage, *age, senescence

Ana infirmity, feebleness, weakness, decrepitude (see corresponding adjectives at WEAK): childishness, childlikeness (see corresponding adjectives at CHILDLIKE): decay, disintegration (see DECAY vb) sensation 1 Sensation, percept, sense-datum, sensum, image can denote the experience or process which is the result of the activity of a sense organ and its associated neural structures. Sensation (see also SENSATION 2), the most general of these terms, is applicable to a specific awareness (as of heat, pain, or odor) resulting from adequate stimulation of a sensory receptor by a stimulus from without or within the body, whether this awareness enters fully into consciousness or not; specifically it means an impression received by a sensory end organ (as the retina of the eye, the taste buds of the tongue, or the tactile corpuscles of the skin) or by a combination of such end organs (the four basic taste sensations, sweet, sour, bitter, and salty) (gave himself up to the enjoyment of the sen- sations provided by a perfect spring day) (a reptile that appears . . . to squander more than two-thirds of its existence in a joyless stupor, and be lost to all sensation for months together—Gilbert White) Percept, sense-datum, and sensum are technical terms especially of epistemology that are subject to widely varied interpretation, but that typically denote a strictly individual and personal neural event occurring centrally in response to sensory stimulation and constituting an immediate unanalyzable private object of sensation (it makes for a neat little burlesque of the central debate between concept—the large, institutionalized idea, and percept—the irreducibly personal vision which must be coped with in its own terms—Rago) (instead of an irregular mass of pink sensation mixed with blue and red and topped with brown, he recognizes his mother's face. These emerging organized groups of sensations which cluster together (and soon seem to belong together) and serve to indicate things in the physical environment are called percepts; these may be defined briefly as "sensations plus meaning"—that is, groups of sensations that have become organized into meaningful wholes or patterns. Thus every physical object represents a percept, or at least a potential one—Hunter Mead) (observation of physical objects is primarily the noticing of sense-data; and each person has and observes his own color and sound sensa, just as he has and observes his own twinges, nausea and touch sense-data—A. C. Garnett) (a sense-datum is by definition whatever appears to the senses and in so far as we confine ourselves to a description of our sense-data we cannot possibly be in error—Pap) (our sense organs must select certain predominant forms, if they are to make report of things and not of mere dissolving sensa—Langer) Image (see also IMAGE 1) applies to a sensation that results in a mental representation of the thing seen, the sound heard, and the odor smelled and in the retention of that mental representation in the memory (after I had looked long at it, and passed on, the image of that perfect flower remained . . . persistently in my mind—Hudson) (I had never spoken to her, except for a few casual words, and yet her . . . image accompanied me even in places the most hostile to romance—Joyce) Image also refers to a mental representation that can be evoked in the mind in the absence of the thing represented; in this case, the term may apply to a mental representation that is in the memory as a result of previous sense experience or that is a construction of the imagination or fancy out of various bits of sense experience or as a result of a verbal description (when I recall London, Paris, Rome . . . the image that first presents itself is the earliest one—Grandgent) (a succession of efforts to call up before us veracious images of a bedroom, a bed, pillows, a lighted candle, a woman asleep, a man speaking to himself—Montague)

Ana *impression, impress, print, stamp: feeling, feel (see ATMOSPHERE): consciousness, awareness (see corresponding adjectives at AWARE)

2 Sensation, sense, feeling, sensibility are comparable when they mean the power to respond or the capacity for or the act of responding to stimuli, especially external physical stimuli. Sensation in technical use often denotes nothing more than the mere seeing, hearing, smelling, tasting, or feeling and does not imply recognition or comprehension (the first step, which most children take at the age of about five months, is to pass beyond mere pleasures of sensation, such as food and warmth, to the pleasure of social approbation—Russell) In more general use the term usually suggests somewhat more than mere receiving of impressions and may imply not only recognition but more or less clearly defined intellectual and emotional reactions (as pleasure or pain or curiosity). It therefore may apply to responses to other than purely physical stimuli <the sensation of finding a command of no avail is to the mind what sitting down upon a suddenly withdrawn chair is to the body—Deland> <there are sensations you cannot describe. You may know what causes them but you cannot tell what portions of your mind they affect nor yet, possibly, what parts of your physical entity—F. M. Ford> Sense is applied specifically to any one of the perceptive powers associated with the sensory end organs <the sense of taste> <the sense of smell> or in the plural (occasionally in the singular) to the combined powers which enable a sentient being to establish relations between itself and what is external to itself <the sudden, violent shock almost took away my senses—Hudson> <my brain immoderately stirred, my senses unusually quickened—Galsworthy> but it differs from sensation, when applied to the power or act of responding to stimuli, in suggesting a less corporeal and a more intellectual reaction and often a less objective stimulus. In fact its most emphatic implication in this sense is often that of intense awareness or of full consciousness <she had no sense at all of any word I said—W. H. Davies> <filled with a sense of pleasure so great that it constantly gave me pins and needles all along the lower parts of my legs—Dahl> <with a haze suspended all around them so that . . . their sense of direction and their sense of time were obscured—Cheever>  Feeling (see also FEELING 2; ATMOSPHERE 2) in its most specific meaning denotes the sense that has its end organs in the skin; usually it signifies the sense of touch <had no feeling in his fingertips> but often it is more inclusive and suggests other sensations (as heat, cold, or pressure) that are typically perceived through stimulation of the skin  But feeling is also used to denote a response to a stimulus or a set of stimuli that is a combination of sensation, emotion, and a degree of thought <judged a situation by his feelings rather than by the facts> <you know her feelings about the vulgarity of these people> Often also, the term denotes not the response, but the power to respond in general or as a characteristic <he complains that she has no feeling> <the delicacy of his feeling makes him sensibly touched—Hume> In this latter sense feeling is often replaced by sensibility, especially when a keenly impressionable nature and unusually delicate powers of appreciation or its opposite are implied <the extreme sensibility to physical suffering which characterizes modern civilization—Inge> <she was a creature of palpitating sensibility, with feelings so delicate that they responded to every breath—Crothers> Sometimes sentimental or affected responsiveness is suggested <the nerveless sentimentalist and dreamer, who spends his life in a weltering sea of sensibility—James>

Ana perceptibility or perceptibility, tangibility or tangibility, palpability or palpability, ponderability or ponderability (see corresponding adjectives at PERCEPTIBLE): reaction, action, behavior (see corresponding verbs at ACT): response, answer (see under ANSWER vb)

sense n 1 *sensation, feeling, sensibility

Ana awareness, consciousness, cognizance (see corresponding adjectives at AWARE): perception, *discernment, discrimination, penetration

2 Sense, common sense, good sense, horse sense, gumption, judgment, wisdom can all mean the quality of mind or character which enables one to make intelligent choices or decisions or to reach intelligent conclusions. Sense, because of its numerous significations, is often, when this meaning is intended, called common sense, good sense, or horse sense. All four terms imply a capacity—usually a native capacity—for seeing things as they are and without illusion or emotional bias, for making practical choices or decisions that are sane, prudent, fair, and reasonable and that commend themselves to the normal or average good mind <when it came to taking care of myself, I had little to offer next to the practical sense of an illiterate sharecropper—Mailer> <“Jane is a goose,” said the doctor, irritably. “Maggy is the only one that has any sense in that family”—Deland> <the common sense of common men . . . has not been seriously affected by these still academic aberrations of our alleged wise men—Niebuhr> <women have often more of what is called good sense than men. They have fewer pretensions; are less implicated in theories; and judge of objects . . . more truly and naturally—Hazlitt> Gumption implies native wit or sound common sense often combined with initiative and drive <there isn’t a grain of intelligence in it. Nobody with more gumption than a grasshopper could go and sit and listen—D. H. Lawrence> <in practical talk, a man’s common sense means his good judgment, his freedom from eccentricity, his gumption—James> Judgment seldom applies to a native quality though it usually suggests a foundation in native good sense. But it also suggests intellectual qualities (as discernment of facts or conditions that are not obvious as well as knowledge of those that are ascertainable and an ability to comprehend the significance of those facts and conditions and to draw correct unbiased conclusions from them) which are the result of training, discipline, and experience <‘tis true that strength and bustle build up a firm. But judgment and knowledge are what keep it established—Hardy> <the ultimate test of true worth in pleasure, as in everything else, is the trained judgment of the good and sensible man—Dickinson> Wisdom is of all these terms the one of highest praise. It often suggests great soundness of judgment in practical affairs and unusual sagacity <common sense in an uncommon degree is what the world calls wisdom—Coleridge> but it is also capable of suggesting an ideal quality of mind or character that is the result of a trained judgment exercised not only in practical affairs but in philosophical speculation, of wide experience in life and thought, of great learning, and of deep understanding <for wisdom is better than rubies; and all the things that may be desired are not to be compared to it—Prov 8:11> <wisdom is said to be the funded experience which man has gathered by living; but for so many harvests the crop is still a light one. Knowledge he has gained and power, but not goodness and understanding—Replier>

Ana *prudence, foresight, discretion: understanding, comprehension, appreciation (see corresponding verbs at UNDERSTAND): intelligence, brain, wit (see MIND) 3 *meaning, acceptance, signification, significance, import Ana denotation, connotation (see under DENOTE)

sense-datum sensum, percept, *sensation, image sensibility feeling, sense, *sensation

Ana perception, *discernment, penetration, discrimination, insight: sensitiveness, susceptibility (see corresponding adjectives at LIABLE): emotion, *feeling, affection sensible 1 *material, physical, corporeal, phenomenal, objective

Ant intelligible

2 *perceptible, palpable, tangible, appreciable, ponderable

Ana sensational, perceptual, imaginal (see corresponding nouns at SENSATION): obvious, patent, manifest, *evident: *carnal, fleshly, sensual

Ant insensible

3 *aware, conscious, cognizant, alive, awake

Ana perceiving, noting, remarking, observing, seeing (see SEE): knowing, *intelligent: understanding, comprehending, appreciating (see UNDERSTAND): sensitive, susceptible (see LIABLE)

Ant insensible (of or to) —Con impassible, insensitive, anesthetic (see INSENSIBLE)

4 prudent, sane, judicious, *wise, sage, sapient

Ana sagacious, perspicacious, astute, *shrewd: foresighted, discreet, provident (see under PRUDENCE): reasonable, *rational

Ant absurd, foolish: fatuous, asinine sensitive 1 susceptible, subject, exposed, open, *liable, prone

Ana impressed, influenced, affected (see AFFECT): predisposed, disposed, inclined (see INCLINE vb)

Ant insensitive

2 *sentient, impressible, impressionable, responsive, susceptible

Ana alert, *watchful, vigilant, wide-awake: *sharp, keen, acute: *aware, conscious, cognizant, sensible, alive sensual 1 *carnal, fleshly, animal

Ana *bodily, physical, corporeal, somatic: *coarse, gross, vulgar: lewd, lascivious, lustful, wanton (see LICENTIOUS)

2 *sensuous, luxurious, voluptuous, sybaritic, epicurean Ana see those at SENSUAL 1 sensum sense-datum, percept, *sensation, image

sensuous, sensual, luxurious, voluptuous, sybaritic, epicurean are comparable when they mean having to do with the gratification of the senses or providing pleasure by gratifying the senses. Both sensuous and sensual can imply reference to the sense organs and to perceptions based on the reactions of these organs and then come very close to sensory in meaning, but more typically both apply to things of the senses as opposed to things of the spirit or intellect. In this use sensuous is more likely to imply gratification of the senses for the sake of the aesthetic pleasure or the delight in beauty of color, sound, or form that is induced while sensual (for fuller treatment see CARNAL) tends to imply the gratification of the senses or the indulgence of the appetites (as of gluttony and lust) as an end in itself <nobody can resist the Bay of Naples, or if he can, then all the simple and sensuous delights of this world must turn to bitterness and ashes in his mouth—Mackenzie> <arise and fly the reeling faun, the sensual feast—Tennyson> <he liked the morning plunge in his great sunken tub, the sensual warmth of sudsy water—Wolfe> <Chinese painters are not, like the Persians, absorbed in expressing their sensuous delight in the wonder and glory of the world—Binyon> As applied to persons or their natures, sensuous often carries an implication of indifference to things of the spirit but it practically never suggests the carnality so often connoted by sensual <the sensuous, self-indulgent nature she [Elizabeth] derived from Anne Boleyn—J. R. Green> <his nature was purely sensuous, and she strove to make him moral, religious—D. H. Lawrence> <the young boy's love is a spiritual passion . . . without any sensory, still less any sensual, elements—Ellis> Luxurious (see also LUXURIOUS 2) implies indulgence, often self-indulgence, in sensual or, more often, sensuous pleasures, especially pleasures that induce a pleasant languor, delightful ease, or particularly a grateful peace of mind <the emotionalist steep himself or herself in luxurious feeling and pathetic imagination, which make no severe call upon either the will or the intellect—Inge> <the fatuous air of luxurious abandon . . . as she danced with the prince—Connolly> Voluptuous also implies giving oneself up to the pleasures of sense but it carries a stronger implication of abandonment to such pleasure for its own sake than does luxurious; also it more frequently carries a suggestion of sensual rather than of sensuous enjoyment <fair fallacious looks . . . softened with pleasure and voluptuous life—Milton>  <he had worked himself up in lecherous and voluptuous anticipation of this date—Farrell> Sybaritic implies voluptuousness of an overrefined and effeminate sort; usually it suggests indulgence in the rarest and choicest foods and drinks amid surroundings calculated to charm and soothe the senses <it was a sybaritic repast, in a magnificent apartment—Thackeray> <sybaritic grandeur which eclipses the splendor of a sultan's harem—Green Peyton> Epicurean may imply sensuality and voluptuousness but more often suggests sensuous rather than sensual delight in the pleasures of eating and drinking and a delicate and fastidious rather than a gross taste <warming their palace kitchens, and from thence their unctuous and epicurean panaches—Milton> <nothing to mar the sober majesties of settled, sweet, epicurean life—Tennyson> <drinking his tea with epicurean satisfaction—Powys>

Ana sensual, imaginal (see corresponding nouns at SENSATION): delicious, delectable, luscious, *delightful: aesthetic, *artistic

sentence vb Sentence, condemn, damn, doom, proscribe can all mean to decree the fate or punishment of a person or sometimes a thing that has been adjudged guilty, unworthy, or unfit. Sentence is used in reference to the determination and pronouncement of punishment or penalty following an act of judging and an adverse verdict <was tried on the charge of inciting to riot and sentenced to thirty days in jail—E. S. Bates> <he tries and sentences them on their merits, in the swift summary way of boys, as good, bad, interesting, silly—Emerson> Condemn (see also CRITICIZE) implies both an adverse judgment and a sentence which carries with it a penalty (as forfeiture of one's freedom, one's rights, or one's life) <Napoleon was condemned to exile> <cells for condemned prisoners> <was not inexorably condemned, as so many had feared at first, to be a vassal state in Hitler's unspeakable New Order—Shirer> or, in the case of a thing, a forfeiture of its existence or of some status which has legally protected it from invasion; thus, to condemn an old building is legally to decree its destruction; to condemn a piece of property is to take it over for the uses of the state, on payment of its appraised value. Damn, akin to condemn, is not employed in modern law. In theological use it implies the condemnation of the soul to hell or to eternal punishment <he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned—Mk 16:16> In general use, when it carries this implication, it is often employed in curses, imprecations, or expressions of strong disapproval <I give thee sixpence! I will see thee damned first—Canning> Otherwise it usually implies a verdict that is destructive or annihilating in its effects <if we fail, then we have damned every man to be the slave of fear—Baruch> Doom adds to condemn the implication of a punishment or penalty that cannot be evaded or escaped because imposed by an inexorable power <I am thy father's spirit, doomed for a certain term to walk the night—Shak.> <he does certain things that are very brave . . . he gambles that he can be terribly, tragically wrong, and therefore be doomed, you see, doomed to Hell—Mailer> This idea of fate or destiny is so strongly stressed in doom that in some cases the implication of an adverse judgment is lost or obscured (the city was doomed to destruction) (the substance of a scientific paper is incorporated into the general stock of knowledge; but the paper itself is doomed to oblivion—Huxley) Proscribe implies the publication or posting of a decree condemning a person to banishment or death or announcing his status as an outlaw and the forfeiture of his property or of his civil rights (a declaration . . . proscribed Napoleon as a public enemy, with whom neither peace nor truce could be concluded—Alison) (still a proscribed fugitive, but with the knowledge that he could at any time cause a formidable revolt—Stenton) The word in more general uses suggests ostracism or interdiction as the result of a judgment by some authoritative or influential body or group (dancing was once proscribed by many churches) (you . . . your rites, your garb proscribed, must yet receive one degradation more—Browning) (the individual is often blacklisted not because he is guilty of anything, but because he is . . . regarded as controversial and therefore proscribed—Elmer Rice)

Ana *judge, adjudge, adjudicate: condemn, denounce, blame (see CRITICIZE): determine, settle, rule, *decide Con acquit, absolve, vindicate, exonerate, *exculpate sententious pregnant, meaningful, significant, *expressive, eloquent

Ana formal, conventional, ceremonious (see CEREMONIAL): *showy, ostentatious: terse, pithy, compendious (see CONCISE) sentient, sensitive, impressible, impressionable, responsive, susceptible can all mean readily affected by stimuli, usually external stimuli. Sentient implies a capacity to be affected through the senses; it may describe inclusively the lowest thing in animal life that feels, or the infant aware only of rudimentary sensation, or the man with the most highly developed powers of sensation or perception. The term sentient creature or sentient being may apply to a creature or being within these classes or between them (the flowers in remote forests that no eye has ever seen, the shells of delicate form and rare color hidden forever in the deep waters of the sea—these fulfil the ends of their existence, though they have delighted no sentient being—Binyon) (whatever fate may have in store for the most sentient . . . the most civilized, the most socially developed people of the modern world—Brownell) or it may apply to something animate or inanimate to which similar powers are ascribed (it seemed the sentient earth must feel the summer—Mary Austin) Sensitive (see also LIABLE) applies usually to human beings who are quick or sharp in sensing anything. It may imply senses that respond to the most delicate of stimuli (to enjoy her [style] the reader must have . . . a sensitive ear; especially must he have a sense of "pitch" in writing—Cather) or it may imply quick emotional reactions that are the outward signs of one's being easily moved or stirred (of age indeed and of death they had a horror proportional to their acute and sensitive enjoyment of life—Dickinson) or an acuteness of mind that is linked with acuteness of sense and of emotion (France, the most intellectually sensitive of modern nations—Babbitt) Sometimes sensitive is applied not only to a part of the body (as a section of skin or an organ) which is abnormally or excessively reactive to stimuli but to inanimate things (as a photographic film, a thermometer, or an explosive) which responds quickly to some specific influencing factor (as light, heat, or shock) (the high vacuum tubes which constitute the sensitive brain of modern radio—Morrison) Impressible implies occasionally and impressionable regularly a readiness to be influenced, not only by a stronger power, but by a power that succeeds in producing an impression. They do not imply, as sensitive usually does, a power to judge accurately and delicately; rather they suggest crudeness or immaturity or indifference to the quality of the thing that impresses (the mind impressible and soft with ease imbibes and copies what she hears and sees—Cowper) (what he couldn't think of was David submitting, during his most impressionable years, to the worst superstitions of Capitalism—Mary Austin) Responsive, which implies sensitiveness to stimuli in particular or in general, suggests in addition a readiness to respond or react in the way that is wanted. Since it usually occurs only in a good sense, it is likely to connote alertness, cooperativeness, and enthusiasm (we shall presumably find them most responsive to the language, literature, and history of their own country—Inge) (she took up life, and became alert to the world again, responsive, like a ship in full sail, to every wind that blew—Rose Macaulay) Susceptible (see also LIABLE) suggests a fitness in disposition or in temperament to be affected by certain stimuli. Though it comes close to impressionable or responsive it more often implies weakness than does either of them, the weakness sometimes being stated but more frequently implied or suggested (as by the person considered or the circumstances attending) (in France it is . . . bad manners to be too susceptible—Brownell) (she is susceptible to flattery) (he is very young and very susceptible to the charms of women) (his temper was not very susceptible of . . . enthusiasm—Gibbon)

sentiment 1 emotion, affection, *feeling, passion

Ana thought, impression, notion, *idea: ideal, standard, exemplar (see MODEL)

2 *opinion, view, belief, conviction, persuasion

Ana *truth, verity: conclusion, judgment (see under INFER) sentimental, romantic, mawkish, maudlin, sappy, mushy, slushy are comparable when they mean unduly or affectedly emotional. Sentimental usually suggests emotion that does not arise from genuine or natural feeling but is evoked by an external cause, by a particular mood, by an excess of sensibility, or for the sake of the thrill, or is merely an affectation that is temperamental, the moment's fashion, or designed to achieve an end (sentimental songs) (his sense of character is nil, and he is as pretentious as a rich whore, as sentimental as a lollipop—Mailer) (a sentimental person, interested in pathetic novels and all unhappy attachments—Thackeray) (we are all for tootling on the sentimental flute in literature—Stevenson) (he had an alert and a sentimental mind and worried about the health of Mr. Hiram's cart horse and . . . the inmates of the Sailor's Home—Cheever) Romantic implies emotion that has little relation to things as they actually are, but is derived more from one's imagination of what they should be ideally or from one's conceptions of them as formed by literature, art, or daydreams (the process of growing from romantic boyhood into cynical maturity—Shaw) (its premise is romantic, if only because it assumes that every sparrow . . . is a warbler, if not a nightingale—J. M. Brown) (it has become the fashion to smile a little at romantic hopes for the world . . . But it could be that it is precisely such dreams and visions that are needed—Edman) Mawkish, when it implies sentimentality, suggests a kind that creates loathing or disgust because of its insincerity, emotional excess, or other signs of weakness or futility (stale epithets, which, when I only seem to smell their mawkish proximity, produce in me a slight feeling of nausea—L. P. Smith) (stories simpering with delight and mawkish with pathos—J. D. Hart) Maudlin stresses a lack of balance or self-restraint that shows itself in emotional excess (as unrestrained tears and laments); usually also it suggests extreme or contemptible silliness (the mob became not only enthusiastic but maudlin—Disraeli) (saying things that were inept, maudlin, unhinged, and knowing then that these very words must drive him on and on toward . . . more helpless depths of drunkenness—Styron) Soppy, mushy, and slushy come close to mawkish in their suggestion of distasteful and disgusting sentimentality. Soppy (chiefly in British use) often carries a strong suggestion of silliness in showing affection (they do not permit themselves to show much family affection, so who are we to object if they go soppy over a few four-footed friends?—Hahn) (a naturally sad but never soppy poet—Fraser) Mushy may suggest softness or wishy-washiness (Stuffy rolled over on her back and paddled the air hysterically, a hypocrite, trading shamelessly on her sex and the mushy hearts of humans—Panter-Downes) (you may . . . be a sharp, cynical sort of person; or you may be a nice, mushy, amiable, good-natured one—Shaw) Slushy applies chiefly to utterances or personalities that are so sentimental or emotionally confused as to seem senseless (slushy stories) (pander to everything that's shoddy and slushy and third-rate in human nature—Buchan)

Ana emotional, affectionate, feeling, passionate (see corresponding nouns at FEELING): affecting, *moving, pathetic, touching: affected, pretended, counterfeited, feigned, simulated (see AFFECT) separate vb Separate, part, divide, sever, sunder, divorce can all mean to become or cause to become disunited or disjoined. Separate implies a putting or keeping apart; it may suggest a scattering or dispersion of units (forces that separate families) (separate the parts of a watch) or a removal of one from the other (separate a husband from his wife) (the business of government cannot and should not be separated from the day-to-day lives of the human beings who conduct it—T. E. Dewey) (separate the wheat from the chaff) (separated his feelings from his work) or the presence of an intervening thing or things (the Atlantic separates Europe from America) (a thousand miles separate the two branches of the family) (<"What separates the men and the girls? A fence or something?" "Just foliage, dear, and upbringing"—Wouk) Part usually suggests the separation of two persons or things in close union or association; often also it suggests a complete or final separation (as by death or violence) (if aught but death part thee and me—Ruth 1:17) (part two combatants) Divide commonly stresses the idea of parts, groups, or sections resulting from literal or figurative cutting, breaking, or branching (divide a pie into six pieces) (divide the government into the executive, legislative, and judicial branches) (he that will divide a minute into a thousand parts—Shak.) Divide often, in addition, carries an implication of apportioning, distributing, or sharing (divide the candy among the children) (divide profits) (the grocer got along well with his assistant. They divided tasks and waited on alternate customers—Malamud) (divided his estate equitably among his heirs) Often divide is used in place of separate, especially when mutual antagonism or wide separation is connoted (united we stand, divided we fall) (the broad and deep gulf which . . . divides the living from the dead, the organic from the inorganic—Inge) (the suspicion which the Citizens' Committee predicted would divide neighbor from neighbor—Clinton) Sever adds the implication of violence by or as if by cutting and frequently applies to the separation of a part from the whole or of persons or things that are joined in affection, close affinity, or natural association (sever a branch from the trunk by one blow of the ax) (sever the head from the body) (severed from thee, can I survive?—Burns) (the hour is ill which severs those it should unite—Shelley) (finding herself severed from formal and religious education, she struggled with a sense of guilt—Hervey) Sunder often implies a violent rending or wrenching apart (even as a splitted bark, so sunder we—Shak.) (the Romans sundered copper-bearing rock by alternately playing fire and water on it—New Yorker) (man's most significant personal relationship is sundered in an atmosphere of chicanery and buffoonery—Cohn) Divorce implies the separation of two or more things so closely associated that they interact upon each other or work well only in union with each other (its academic tendency to divorce form from matter—Day Lewis) (you cannot divorce accurate thought from accurate speech—Quiller-Couch) Divorce can specifically refer to the legal dissolution of a marriage, a use in which it contrasts with separate which implies a mutually agreed ending of cohabitation without actual legal termination of the marital state.

Ana cleave, rend, split, rive (see TEAR): *estrangle, alienate: disperse, dispel, *scatter: *detach, disengage Ant combine

separate adj 1 *distinct, several, discrete

Ana diverse, disparate, *different, divergent, various: *free, independent

2 *single, solitary, particular, unique, sole, lone

Ana *special, especial, specific, individual: peculiar, distinctive (see CHARACTERISTIC): detached, disengaged (see DETACH) sequel outcome, issue, *effect, result, consequence, upshot, aftereffect, aftermath, event

Ana termination, *end, ending: conclusion, closing, finishing or finish (see corresponding verbs at CLOSE) sequence series, *succession, progression, chain, train, string

Ana ordering or order, arrangement (see corresponding verbs at ORDER) sequent, sequential *consecutive, successive, serial sequester vb *isolate, segregate, seclude, insulate

Ana *separate, sever, sunder serene tranquil, *calm, peaceful, placid, halcyon

Ana *still, stilly, silent, noiseless, quiet: *cool, collected, composed: smooth, effortless, *easy

Con disturbed, disquieted, agitated, upset (see DIS-COMPOSE) serial adj *consecutive, successive, sequent, sequential

Ana following, ensuing, succeeding (see FOLLOW): continuous, *continual series *succession, progression, sequence, chain, train, string serious, grave, solemn, somber, sedate, staid, sober, earnest may be applied to persons, their looks, or their acts with the meaning not light or frivolous but actually or seemingly weighed down by deep thought, heavy cares, or purposive or important work. Serious implies absorption in work rather than in play, or concern for what matters rather than for what merely amuses (the features . . . were serious and almost sad under the austere responsibilities of infinite pity and power—Henry Adams) (there was no great warmth or fervor in those daily exercises, but rather a serious and decorous propriety—Stowe) Grave implies both seriousness and dignity but it usually implies also an expression or attitude that reflects the pressure of weighty interests or responsibilities (a grave voice which, falling word by word upon his consciousness, made him stir inside with . . . fear—Styron) (his air was grave and stately, and his manners were very formal—Austen) Grave is more likely than serious to be used when a mere appearance is to be implied <loved to exaggerate, to astonish people by making extravagant statements with the gravest air—Hall> and it may be used of things with qualities suggestive of human gravity <the richness and grave dignity of its carved staircase and interior woodwork—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.> <my father's many-volumed edition of the Talmud . . . the look of those pages—grave, wide, solid columns of text—Behrman> Solemn usually heightens the suggestion of impressiveness or awesomeness often implicit in grave <perhaps it was natural . . . to mistake solemn dignity for sullenness—Shirer> <the solemn splendor of that most wonderful poem, the story of Job—Quiller-Couch> <it was a solemn moment, for these were the last words of Augustus to his people—Buchan> Somber applies to a melancholy or depressing gravity, completely lacking in color, light, or cheer <the Scots, famed for somber Calvinism and its intellectual theologizing, did not expect to warm to the enthusiastic kind of religion—P. D. Whitney> Sedate implies composure and decorous seriousness in character or speech and often a conscious avoidance of lightness or frivolity <good sense alone is a sedate and quiescent quality—Johnson> <her habitual expression was sedate and serious, a permanent reproof, as it were, to those who were first attracted by the voluptuous quality of her admirable figure—Linklater> Staid implies a settled sedateness, often a prim self-restraint, and an even stronger negation of volatility or frivolity than sedate <the side streets here are excessively maiden-lady-like . . . the knockers have a very staid, serious, nay almost awful, quietness about them—Keats> <the staid Roman citizen was repelled by the wild dances and the frenzied paeans—Buchan> Sober sometimes stresses seriousness of purpose <if our pupils are to devote sober attention to our instruction—Grandgent> but it more often suggests gravity that proceeds from control over or subdual of one's emotions or passions <come, pensive Nun, devout and pure, sober, steadfast, and demure—Milton> <this work is certainly of more sober mien than most of its author's others. It is very long and very serious, and both these qualities are certainly deliberate observances—Virgil Thomson> Earnest implies seriousness of purpose as well as sincerity and, often, zealotry and enthusiasm <an earnest student> <and men are merry at their chores, and children earnest at their play—Millay> <she set out on an earnest and grim quest for the dollar—Wouk>

Ana austere, stern, *severe, ascetic: *thoughtful, reflective, contemplative, meditative: *deep, profound Ant light, flippant —Con frivolous, flighty, volatile (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS)

sermon homily, *speech, address, oration, harangue, talk, lecture serpentine *winding, sinuous, tortuous, flexuous

Ana circuitous, roundabout, *indirect: *crooked, devious service n *use, advantage, profit, account, avail

Ana usefulness, utility (see USE n): *worth, value: helping or help, aiding or aid, assistance (see corresponding verbs at HELP)

servile *subservient, menial, slavish, obsequious

Ana *mean, abject, ignoble: fawning, cringing, truckling, cowering (see FAWN)

Ant authoritative

servitude, slavery, bondage agree in meaning the state of subjection to a master. Servitude may refer to the state of a person, or of a class of persons, or of a race that is bound to obey the will of a master, a lord, or a sovereign, and lacks the freedom to determine his or their own acts, laws, and conditions of living. The term is often vague or rhetorical, sometimes implying lack of political freedom, sometimes lack of liberty to do as one pleases <I am as free as Nature first made man, ere the base laws of servitude began, when wild in woods the noble savage ran—Dryden> More specifically servitude denotes the condition of one who must give service to a master and perform labor for him, whether he has bound himself (see BOUND adj) voluntarily or is a convict sentenced to penal servitude or a slave. Slavery implies subjection to a master who is the owner of one's person or who may treat one as his property <taken by the insolent foe and sold to slavery—Shak.> or entire loss of personal freedom and subjugation to another <is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?—Henry> Bondage applies to the state of one bound as a serf to the soil and sold with the land when conveyed to a new owner; it can apply also to a state of subjection from which there is no hope of escape except by breaking one's chains <what more oft, in nations grown corrupt, and by their vices brought to servitude, than to love bondage more than liberty—Milton> set vb 1 Set, settle, fix, establish mean to cause someone or something to be put securely in position. Set is the most inclusive of these terms, sometimes implying placing in a definite location, especially to serve some definite purpose <set a light at each window> <set out trees> <set food on the table> or to permanently fill some void <set a diamond in a ring> or establish some limit <set a limit to discussion> <the law of God determines the laws of this world and sets the bounds and the character of the institutions and activities of men—Donald Harrington> <the question of whether human nature is set by heredity or can be changed by environmental factors—Bauer> and sometimes implying a placing under orders (as in an occupation, a situation, an office, or a sphere of life) or under conditions where something or someone must perform an allotted or prescribed function <set a boy to work> <set the maids to cleaning house> <set proctors to watch the students> or occasionally suggesting a prescribing or ordaining of an object or objects on which one or one's efforts, mind, heart, or eyes concentrates <set the subject for a debate> <set a goal for his efforts> <set his heart on winning a prize> <set duty before pleasure> Settle comes close to set but carries a much stronger implication of putting a person or thing in a place or condition of stability, rest, or repose and often a weaker implication of regulative or dictatorial power <settle an invalid in an easy chair> <settle themselves in their new home> <offered to escort her to Paris and see her settled in a reasonably cheap hotel—Wouk> <the tendency to settle standards on the level of the "common man"—Edmund Wilson> Often the word carries an implication of decisive quieting, calming, or ordering of something that is disturbed, upset, unstable, or fluctuating <settle a person's stomach> <settle his doubts> <the white of an egg will settle the coffee> <everything's settled now. You need not worry, Reuben; there will be no fuss—Gibbons> <there's nothing will settle me but a bullet—Swift> Fix (see also ADJUST ; FASTEN) usually implies more stability and permanence in position, condition, or character than set or even settle <his resolution was already fixed—Buchan> <truth which the scientist strives to catch and fix—Lowes> <his place in the McCoy household had become fixed—Anderson> <what I have most at heart is, that some method should be thought of for ascertaining and fixing our language forever—Swift> <the undifferentiated, inchoate religious sense is thus intensified and fixed, to the great and lasting injury of the spiritual life—Inge> Establish (see also FOUND) stresses not so much the putting in place or the bringing into existence as the becoming fixed, stable, or immovable, although in some use both ideas are connoted <do not transplant a tree once it is established> <American sculptors . . . whose reputation was already established—Wharton> <the child initiates new processes of thought and establishes new mental habits much more easily than the adult—Eliot> <the novel as I have described it has never really established itself in America—Trilling> <at the end of the first growing season, the grass was firmly established—Farmer's Weekly>

Ana *implant: *fasten, attach, fix, affix: *prescribe, assign, define

Con eradicate, deracinate, uproot (see EXTERMINATE): *abolish, annihilate, extinguish: displace, supplant, *replace

2 *coagulate, congeal, curdle, clot, jelly, jell

Ana *harden, solidify: *compact, consolidate, concentrate set n Set, circle, coterie, clique can all denote a more or less carefully selected or exclusive group of persons having a common interest. Set applies to a comparatively large group, especially of society men and women bound together by common tastes  <I was myself living in several sets that had no connection with one another—Maugham> <her college set had stayed rigidly in a zigzag path . . . which they considered smart—Wouk> Circle implies a common center of the group (as a person or a cause that draws persons to him or it) or a common interest, activity, or occupation <the work of the younger writers . . . has even penetrated into academic circles—Day Lewis> <like sex, the word segregation was not mentioned in the best circles—Lillian Smith> <she felt violently the gaps that death made in her circle—Pritchett> <an active figure in Madrid's literary and theatrical circles—Current Biog.> Coterie stresses the notion of selectness or of congeniality within the small circle; clique heightens the implication of an often selfish or arrogant exclusiveness <we three formed a little coterie within the household—Symonds> <the poetry of revolt is apt to become the poetry of a coterie—Lowes> <the best English society—mind, I don't call the London exclusive clique the best English society—Coleridge> <the corruption and debauchery of the homosexual clique—Shirer> <every hoodlum in every crack gang and clique who fancied himself with the blade—Mailer> setting *background, environment, milieu, mise-en-scène, backdrop settle 1 *set, fix, establish Ana *secure, anchor, moor, rivet: *order, arrange

Ant unsettle

2 *calm, compose, quiet, quieten, still, lull, soothe, tranquilize

Ana placate, appease, *pacify, mollify, conciliate

Ant unsettle —Con *discompose, disquiet, disturb, perturb, agitate, upset

3 determine, *decide, rule, resolve

Ana *judge, adjudge, adjudicate: *close, end, conclude, terminate sever *separate, sunder, part, divide, divorce

Ana rive, cleave, rend, split (see TEAR): *cut, hew, chop: *detach, disengage several 1 *distinct, separate, discrete

Ana individual, particular, *special, especial

2 *many, sundry, various, divers, numerous, multifarious

Ana *single, separate, particular: detached, disengaged (see DETACH) severally individually, respectively, *each, apiece severe, stern, austere, ascetic can all mean given to or characterized by strict discipline and firm restraint.

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Severe is applicable to persons and their looks, acts, thoughts, and utterances or to things (as laws, penalties, judgments, and styles) for which persons are responsible. In all these applications it implies rigorous standards of what is just, right, ethical, beautiful, or acceptable and unsparing or exacting adherence to them; it not only excludes every hint of laxity or indulgence but often suggests a preference for what is hard, plain, or meager  <severe impartiality> <severe in dress> <these bleak and severe Sunday mornings, though they left me with a respect for the Bible, had the effect of antagonizing me against it—Edmund Wilson> Very often the word suggests harshness or even cruelty  <severe discipline> <severe criticism>  It is then by extension referable also to things for which persons are not responsible but which similarly impose pain or acute discomfort  <I do not think that she anticipated anything so severe as arsenic on her blackberries—Shirley Jackson>  Stern, though it often implies severity when applied to persons or their acts or words, stresses inflexibility or inexorability of temper; thus, a severe judge may appear kindly though dispassionately just, but a stern judge reveals no disposition to be mild or lenient; to be made of stern stuff is to have an unyielding will or an extraordinarily resolute character <he wanted to bang on his desk, arise magisterially, like a good confessor, being purposeful and stern—Styron> In extended use stern is applied to what cannot be escaped or evaded <stern necessity> <the stern compulsion of facts—Buchan> or to what is harsh and forbidding in its appearance or in its external aspects <the stern and rockbound land . . . on which his lot was cast—Faulkner>  Austere is chiefly applied to persons, their habits, their modes of life, the environments they create, or the works of art they produce; in these applications austere implies the absence of appealing qualities (as feeling, warmth, color, animation, and ornament) and therefore positively implies dispassionateness, coldness, reserve, or barrenness <my common conversation I do acknowledge austere, my behavior full of rigor—Browne> <secretly, these austere tyrants seized with delight upon so estimable an excuse for censuring a member of the set they deprecated—Sackville-West> Sometimes the word tends to add such connotations as restraint, self-denial, economy of means, and stark simplicity and becomes a term of praise rather than of depreciation <the austere dignity and simplicity of their existence—Pater> <mathematics, rightly viewed, possesses not only truth, but supreme beauty—a beauty cold and austere, like that of sculpture—Russell>  Ascetic implies laborious and exacting spiritual training or discipline, self-denial, abstention from what is pleasurable, and even the seeking of what is painful or disagreeable <strong-willed and ascetic, he discovered in discipline the chief end for which the children of Adam are created—Parrington>  The idea of discipline, especially by abstention from what is pleasurable or easy or self-indulgent for the sake of spiritual or intellectual ends may be emphasized <for science is ascetic. It is a discipline and a control of personal impulse that could arise only in a relatively mature civilization—Baker Brownell> <there was in him a real nobility, an even ascetic firmness and purity of character—Ellis)

Ana exacting, oppressive, *onerous, burdensome: *rigid, rigorous, strict, stringent: *hard, difficult, arduous: harsh, rugged, uneven, *rough

Ant tolerant: tender —Con lenient, clement, *forbearing, merciful, indulgent: gentle, mild, *soft shabby 1 Shabby, dilapidated, dingy, faded, seedy, threadbare refer to the appearance of persons and of things and mean showing signs of wear and tear. Shabby applies to persons and places and suggests a lack of freshness or newness in those items that contribute to appearance; sometimes the term applies directly to the things, especially clothes, which so contribute. Poverty is often suggested as the cause of this run-down condition but various other causes (as neglect or indifference) may also be suggested (old Bart, shabby and inconspicuous, dunking pound cake with his dirty fingers—W. S. Burroughs) (villages . . . with their shabby, unpainted shacks, dropping with decay—Brooks) (everything had been done to make the accused look as shabby as possible. They were outfitted in nondescript clothes—Shirer) (the old house . . . is too elegant for poor people, and too large; too shabby, in too shabby a neighborhood, for the rich—Tate) Dilapidated (compare dilapidate under RUIN) implies a worse appearance than shabby, usually suggesting a broken-down or tumbledown condition resulting from neglectful lack of repairs or from careless abuse (a dilapidated fence with its gate hanging from one hinge) (sat down in a dilapidated easy chair minus a cushion—Purdy) (an old toy is so much better . . . The very fact that it was worn and dilapidated caused it to create a feeling of warmth—Henry Miller) Dingy applies to what is no longer fresh or new in appearance and shows the effects of gradual soiling that dulls the colors or dims the brightness (out of his dingy retreat, dirty and uncomfortable, he would appear resplendent—Osbert Sitwell) (shabby in attire, dingy of linen—Thackeray) (counting another man's money . . . in a dingy office—Shaw) (he flashed from dingy obscurity into splendor—H. G. Wells) Faded also implies lack of freshness but it connotes the loss of vigor or brightness that shows that a person or thing has passed its prime and is revealing signs of drooping and withering (her slightly stale and faded gush about Chopin and her memories of Paris in the spring—Edmund Wilson) (she lives with her mother, a faded tired woman who played Lady Capulet—Wilde) (her clothes were always the same and it is hard to remember what she wore. She seemed to sink into the faded anonymity of the old street—Tate) (so many of the old friends are dead, and those who live are older and changed, and everything seems a bit faded and drab—H. L. Matthews) Seedy does not go so far as shabby in implying deterioration and lack of freshness but it does suggest some loss of those signs that marked a person or thing as strong or at the peak of value and usefulness (sordid squabbling with his landlady about the rent he owes on a seedy room—McCarten) (an English setter, a bitch, and rather seedy now and smelly—Henry Miller) (a table on which was a clutter of seedy Western souvenirs—a rusted, beat-up placer pan . . . and the shellacked tail of a beaver—Staford) Seedy is also used in reference to a person who feels himself not really sick but not up to the mark (we were all feeling seedy, and we were getting nervous about it—Jerome) Threadbare (see also TRITE) in its basic use implies such wear of fabric that all nap is worn away and the threads are visible (the curves of hips and breasts already discernible under the too short and often threadbare clothes—Metalious) but often this basic notion is lost and the emphasis is on the shabby state typical of or the fact of extreme grinding poverty (the only opportunity . . . to find escape from the grim, drab, threadbare unpicturesque poverty of her inharmonious home—Dorothy Canfield) (England, which has a threadbare Treasury—Sulzberger) (finally got threadbare enough and hungry enough to overlook my scruples—O'Leary) Ana worn (see HAGGARD): dowdy, frowzy, *slatternly: shopworn, *trite: decrepit (see WEAK)

Con trim, trig, spick-and-span, *neat, tidy: *new, fresh, new-fashioned

2 *contemptible, despicable, pitiable, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly

Ana *mean, sordid, ignoble: *base, low, vile shackle vb fetter, clog, trammel, *hamper, manacle, hog-tie

Ana *restrain, curb, check, inhibit: *hinder, impede, obstruct, block, bar: restrict, circumscribe, confine, *limit

Con disencumber, disembarrass, *extricate: release, liberate, *free shade n 1 Shade, shadow, umbrage, umbra, penumbra, adumbration can mean the comparative darkness caused by something which intercepts rays of light. Shade carries no implication of a darkness that has a particular form or definite limit but the term often stresses protection from the glare, heat, or other effect of the light that is cut off (the forest, one vast mass of mingling shade—Shelley) (chiaroscuro, by which light reveals [in paintings] the richness of shade and shade heightens the brightness of light—Ellis) (the trees afforded shade and shelter—Cather) Shadow usually applies to shade which preserves something of the form of the object which intercepts the light (it [the garden] . . . has neither arbor, nor alcove, nor other shade, except the shadow of the house—Cowper) (saw . . . the shadow of some piece of pointed lace, in the Queen's shadow, vibrate on the walls—Tennyson) (the shadowless winter, when it is all shade and therefore no shadow—Jefferies) In extended use shade implies darkness or obscurity; shadow, insubstantiality or unreality (there no shade can last in that deep dawn behind the tomb—Tennyson) ('tis but the shadow of a wife you see, the name and not the thing—Shak.) Umbrage (see also OFFENSE) applies chiefly to the shade cast by heavy foliage or trees, though sometimes it refers to the mass of trees or foliage which make for heavy shade (branches . . . spreading their umbrage to the circumference of two hundred and seven feet—Strutt) (the thrush sings in that umbrage—L. P. Smith) Its occasional extended use can draw meaning from either of these aspects and suggest, on the one hand, an indistinct indication, as if of something seen in deep shadow (the least umbrage of a reflection upon this accident—North) or, on the other, an overshadowing influence (to compete in the umbrage of big city . . . wages and other costs he had to simplify his . . . process—J. R. Malone) Umbra and penumbra are largely astronomical and optical terms. Umbra applies to the perfect or complete shadow cast on the moon or the earth in an eclipse, and penumbra to the imperfect or partly illuminated shadow which often surrounds the umbra. Umbra rarely and penumbra often are used in extended senses, the former implying a complete overshadowing or eclipse, the latter denoting the marginal region or border between areas which are themselves clearly one thing or the other, or in which the exact differences between one thing or another are so obscure as not to be clearly discernible (his memory was eclipsed in the umbra of a more compelling personality—Cobb) (physiology having rudely investigated its phenomena upon the same level as other biological processes, it [love] has been stripped of the mystical penumbra in whose shadow its transcendental value seemed real, though hid—Krutch) <the great ordinances of the Constitution do not establish and divide fields of black and white. Even the more specific of them are found to terminate in a penumbra shading gradually from one extreme to the other—Justice Holmes> Adumbration applies to something that is so faint or obscure a figure, sketch, or outline of something which actually exists or is to come that it serves as a foreshadowing of it or a hinting at it <the lugubrious harmony of the spot with his domestic situation was too perfect for him, impatient of effects, scenes, and adumbrations—Hardy> <if the Parthenon has value, it is only as an adumbration of something higher than itself—Babbitt>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana darkness, dimness, obscurity (see corresponding adjectives at DARK): *shelter, cover, retreat Con brightness, brilliancy, radiance, effulgence (see corresponding adjectives at BRIGHT): glare, glow, blaze (see under BLAZE vb)

2 ghost, spirit, specter, *apparition, phantasm, phantom, wraith, revenant

3 *blind, shutter

4 tint, *color, hue, tinge, tone

5 *gradation, nuance

Ana distinction, difference (see DISSIMILARITY): *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, dash, tinge

6 *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tinge, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, tincture, streak

Ana *trace, vestige: tint, tinge (see COLOR) shadow n *shade, umbrage, umbra, penumbra, adumbration

Ana *form, figure, shape, conformation, configuration: darkness, obscurity, dimness (see corresponding adjectives at DARK): silhouette, contour, *outline shadow vb *suggest, adumbrate

Ana *foretell, forecast, predict, prognosticate: *foresee, foreknow, divine

Con *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge, tell shake vb 1 Shake, tremble, quake, totter, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither are comparable when they mean to exhibit vibratory, wavering, or oscillating movement often as an evidence of instability. Shake, the ordinary and the comprehensive term, can apply to any such movement, often with a suggestion of roughness and irregularity <the earth itself seemed to shake beneath my feet—Hudson> <he shook with fear> <his body shook with laughter> Tremble applies specifically to a slight, rapid shaking of the human body, especially when one is agitated or unmanned (as by fear, passion, cold, or fatigue) <she stood with her hand on the doorknob, her whole body trembling—Anderson> <she is so radiant in her pure beauty that the limbs of the young man tremble—Meredith> The term may apply also to things that shake in a manner suggestive of human trembling <not a breath of breeze even yet ruffled the water: but momentarily it trembled of its own accord, shattering the reflections—Richard Hughes> Quake may be used in place of tremble but it commonly carries a stronger implication of violent shaking or of extreme agitation <his name was a terror that made the dead quake in their graves—Ouida> <his accusing hand . . . stiffly extended, quaking in mute condemnation—Terry Southern> Often the term suggests either an internal convulsion (as an earthquake or something suggestive of one) or an external event which rocks a person or thing to its foundations <the sounding of the clock in Venice Preserved makes the hearts of the whole audience quake—Addison> <I thought of the sounds that must be coming from those men, and at that thought my insides quaked; I thanked God we couldn't hear them—Kenneth Roberts> Totter usually suggests great physical weakness (as that associated with infancy, extreme old age, or disease); it therefore often connotes a shaking that makes movement extremely difficult and uncertain or that forebodes a fall or collapse <the mast tottered before it fell> <the little calf that's standing by the mother . . . totters when she licks it with her tongue—Frost> Quiver suggests a slight, very rapid shaking comparable to the vibration of the strings of a musical instrument; it differs from tremble chiefly in being more often applied to things <aspen leaves quiver in the slightest breeze> <it is not a dead mass of stone and metal, but a living thing, quivering and humming like a great ship at sea. A splendid piece of architecture—Highet> or in carrying a less necessary suggestion of fear or passion and a stronger implication of emotional tension <the little boy's lips quivered as he tried not to cry> <I was quivering and tingling from head to foot—Kipling> <eagerness that made their flanks quiver—Roberts> <Seymour sat whimpering and quivering with panic and temper and discomfort—Davenport> Shiver and shudder usually imply a momentary or short-lived quivering, especially of the flesh. Shiver typically suggests the effect of cold <came into the house snow-covered and shivering> but it may apply to a similar quivering that results from an emotional or mental cause (as an anticipation, a premonition, a foreboding, or a vague fear) <such thoughts . . . may make you shiver at first—Montague> <he shivered with pleasure as he conceived robberies, assaults—murders if it had to be—Malamud> or to a sudden, often seeming, quivering of a thing <his heart shivered, as a ship shivers at the mountainous crash of the waters—Bennett> <when the first star shivers and the last wave pales—Flecker> Shudder usually suggests the effect of something horrible or revolting; physically it implies a sudden sharp quivering that for the moment affects the entire body or mass <the spotted shadow of the heaven tree shuddered and pulsed monstrously in scarce any wind—Faulkner> <"I am afraid of it," she answered, shuddering—Dickens> <it was one of those illnesses from which we turn away our eyes, shuddering—Deland> <the chill of an age-old recognition shuddered my spine; a voice was sounding in the dimly lit air—Miller> Quaver sometimes implies irregular vibration or fluctuation, especially as an effect of something that disturbs <the breeze . . . set the flames of the streetlamps quavering—Stevenson> but often it stresses tremulousness especially in reference to voices and utterances affected by weakness or emotion  <dread returned, and the words quavered as she spoke them—Meredith> <the quavering, envenomed voice of . . . Scrooge—Styron> Wobble implies an unsteadiness that shows itself in tottering, or in a quivering characteristic of a mass of soft flesh or of a soft jelly, or in a shakiness characteristic of rickety furniture <this table wobbles> <bumping when she trots, and wobbling when she canters—Whyte-Melville> <antique French automobiles wobbling giddily along the roads—Panther-Downes> <picked up his glass and half emptied it. His hand wobbled so that some of it ran down his chin—Charteris> Teeter implies an unsteadiness that reveals itself in seesawing motions <an inebriated man teetering as he stands> <stood on chairs and teetered on stepladders—Dos Passos> Shimmy suggests the fairly violent shaking of the body from the shoulders down which is characteristic of the dance of that name and, therefore, may suggest vibratory motions of an abnormal nature <all kinds of starlets get an opportunity to shimmy around for the edification of Pharaoh and his court—McCarten>  <I often see the walls of my house shimmying a bit—Lucas) <the shimmying of unbalanced front wheels of an automobile> Dither implies a shaking or a hesitant vacillating movement often as a result of nervousness, confusion, or lack of purpose <dithering to his feet, he crept downstairs—Cronin> Ana oscillate, fluctuate, vibrate, waver, *swing, sway 2 Shake, agitate, rock, convulse can mean to cause to move to and fro or up and down with more or less violence. Shake, the most general of these words, in its specific senses usually retains this basic meaning <as there is a high wind blowing nearly all the time, the nests are continually shaken—Seago> but it seldom conveys merely this idea. Very often its meaning is narrowed but enriched by an implication of the particular intent or purpose of the movement; thus, to shake a rug implies an intent to dislodge dust; to shake a tree, to bring down its fruit; to shake a cocktail, to mix ingredients; to shake hands, to greet or to acknowledge an introduction; to shake one's fist, to threaten. Even in its extended use shake commonly implies movement, usually physical movement <he was visibly shaken by the news> <the exposure of unsuspected depravity in the highest circles shook the social fabric to its foundations—Lucius Beebe> <just one single example of real unreason is enough to shake our belief in everything—Theodore Sturgeon> Agitate usually carries a much stronger implication of tossing or of violent stirring than shake; it often also suggests a prolongation of the movement  <the leaves on the trees were agitated as if by a high wind—Hudson> <brown water in the basin . . . slightly agitated by concentric ripples, as though someone had recently thrown a stone into it—James Helvick> When the recipient of the action is a person agitate connotes emotional disturbance or excitement <he started a discussion which has agitated thinkers ever since—Whitehead> <the physician interposes, frightens the family, agitates the patient to the utmost—Overstreet> Rock suggests a swinging or swaying motion; it tends to lose the implication of lulling derived from its earliest associations with the movement of a cradle and to emphasize those of upheaving, derived from the violent swaying (as of a ship in a storm or of the earth in an earthquake) <the wind rocked the house> <the entire city was rocked by the explosion> <Tokyo rocks under the weight of our bombs—Truman> Often, especially in extended use, rock suggests, as shake does not, tottering and peril of falling <the stock market was rocked by the rumor of war> <constant insinuations finally rocked his faith in his friend> <the explosions that rock the world today are nothing less than the stirring of the common man the world over—Hansen> Convulse often implies more violence in the motion than any of the others; it also commonly suggests a pulling to and fro or a wrenching or twisting (as of the body in a paroxysm or of the earth in seismic disturbances) <Lucetta . . . convulsed on the carpet in the paroxysms of an epileptic seizure—Hardy> <they were convulsed with laughter> <the ferment of change that has convulsed, distorted, and reshaped our twentieth-century world—A. E. Stevenson>

Ana *move, drive, impel: flourish, brandish, *swing, wave: disturb, derange, unsettle, *disorder

3 *swing, wave, flourish, brandish, thrash shallow adj *superficial, cursory, uncritical

Ana slim, slight, slender, *thin: trivial, trifling, *petty, paltry: empty, hollow, idle, *vain sham n *imposture, cheat, fake, humbug, fraud, deceit, deception, counterfeit

Ana *pretense, pretension, make-believe: *trick, ruse, feint, wile, gambit, ploy sham vb feign, simulate, counterfeit, pretend, *assume, affect Ana *invent, create: ape, mock, mimic, imitate, *copy sham adj *counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, pseudo, pinchbeck, phony

Ana feigned, assumed, affected (see ASSUME): hoaxing, bamboozling, hoodwinking, duping (see DUPE): deceptive, delusive, delusory, *misleading shame n *disgrace, dishonor, disrepute, infamy, ignominy, opprobrium, obloquy, odium

Ana humiliation, degradation, abasement (see corresponding verbs at ABASE): mortification, chagrin (see corresponding adjectives at ASHAMED)

Ant glory: pride

shameless, brazen, barefaced, brash, impudent can apply to persons and their acts that defy the moral code or social decorum when they mean characterized by boldness and a lack of a sense of shame. Shameless implies a lack of effective restraints (as modesty, a sense of decency, an active conscience, or concern for the respect of others)  <shameless gossips> <shameless graft> <regards every compromise his comrades have made to get the machine going as a shameless betrayal of principle—West> <no composer . . . makes such shameless use of patriotic feelings to advertise his product—Virgil Thomson> Brazen implies not only complete shamelessness but defiant insolence <at first a furtive, now a brazen, thief>  <solicited praise and power with the brazen, businesslike air of a streetwalker on the prowl—Rovere> Barefaced implies absence of all effort to disguise or to mask one's transgressions; it connotes extreme effrontery  <barefaced tyranny> <however barefaced their deceptions, they manage to convince themselves at the time that they are speaking the truth—Muggeridge> Brash so strongly implies impetuosity that it does not stress shamelessness as clearly as the preceding words; however, it is often used in place of shameless when heedlessness and temerity make one indifferent to the claims of conscience or one's sense of decency  <brash reporters> <deeply I repented of brash and boyish crime—Lindsay> <felt secure enough in his wealth to make several brash, futile attempts at joining the country club—Styron> Impudent adds to shameless implications of bold or pert defiance of considerations of modesty or decency <conduct so sordidly unladylike that even the most impudent woman would not dare do it openly—Shaw> <women are getting impudent all over again and corsetieres, dreaming of the old, elegant, secure, confining days, may well despair—Lois Long> <she has a passion for impudent adventure, and . . . has quite properly explored a number of improper relationships—Payne>

Ana *abandoned, profligate, dissolute: *hardened, indurated, callous: *vicious, villainous, iniquitous

Con modest, pure, *chaste, decent: *shy, diffident, bashful shape vb *make, form, fashion, fabricate, manufacture, forge shape n *form, figure, conformation, configuration

Ana *outline, contour, profile, silhouette: *appearance, look, aspect, semblance shapeless *formless, unformed

Ana *rude, rough, crude

Ant shapely —Con proportionate, *proportional, commensurate share, participate, partake can mean to have, get, use, exercise, experience, or engage in something in common with another or others. Share implies that one as the original owner or holder grants the part use, enjoyment, or possession to another (willing to share her room at the convention) (sharing lunch with a squirrel) or that one as the receiver accepts the part use, enjoyment, or possession of something that belongs to or comes from another (she asked all to share in the salad) (I shared my sister's room last night when we had a guest) (the employees shared in the profits) (she shared unwillingly the grocer's fate though . . . her dissatisfaction went no farther than nagging—Malamud) But share may also take for its subject a group and imply a community of possession or use (you do not share the great earth among you fairly—Jefferies) (flowers have always been sinister to me when they are lovely—they seem to share the elusive promise of a woman who is beautiful—Mailer) Participate implies that one has or takes a part or a share in a thing (as a work, an experience, or an enterprise) (participate in a discussion) (may I ask you whether your wife participates in this undertaking?—Meredith) (the commerce of the United States with foreign nations, is that of the whole United States. Every district has a right to participate in it—John Marshall) (they participated, with a curious, restrained passion, in the speech made by the red-haired man. He spoke for them—Isherwood) Partake implies that one accepts, takes, or acquires a portion of a thing (as food, drink, a pleasure, or a burden) (both partook of salted bread that a slave proffered—Hervey) (we do not only meet to share each other's burdens, but to partake in each other's joys—Spurgeon) (adventurers who were willing to partake his fortunes—Kinglake) or comes to have some of the essential or distinguishing characters of a thing (the story itself ceases to be merely melodramatic, and partakes of true drama—T. S. Eliot)

Ana *communicate, impart: divide, dispense, *distribute sharp, keen, acute can all mean having a fine point or edge, but it is in several of their extended senses that they are most likely to come into comparison. As applied to persons or their qualities, especially of intellect, all three can indicate possession of alert competence and clear understanding. In such use sharp is likely to suggest an incisive self-centered quality, sometimes manifest in alert rationality, sometimes in devious cunning (she could never hear enough of this girl's worldly wisdom, vulgar sharp wit, and intimate gossip about well-known people—Wouk) (a man whose sharp face and sharp voice seemed wholeheartedly dedicated to chicanery and lewdness—Cheever) (the mumbo jumbo . . . interested him. He was sharp enough to guess that these formalities were in the honor of some god—Forester) (Russell's critique of these works and their philosophical bases is sharp, limpid, and yet profound. With sovereign ease he handles subtleties and ambiguities, disposes of mathematical paradoxes and philosophical paralogisms, refutes errors, and dissipates confusion—Kline) Keen (see also EAGER) usually stresses eager enthusiasm, clear-sightedness, and quick penetrating character of mind (now hath the child grown greater, and is keen and eager of wit and full of understanding—Morris) (candidates shall be selected on the basis of future promise of leadership, strength of character, keen mind, a balanced judgment—Official Register of Harvard Univ.) but it may imply no more than shrewd astuteness (able businessmen . . . as keen in their bargains as they were faithful to their engagements—Scudder) Acute (see also ACUTE) may come close to keen in implying a penetrating quality of mind but it is more likely to stress sensitivity and depth and effectiveness of perception especially in the making of subtle distinctions (his creative tendencies were restrained, however, by an acute critical sense, a liking for research, and his genius for teaching—Starr) (my very acute grandmother, who at eighty-eight is clear and definite in her political convictions—Current Biog.) (the acutest philosophers have succeeded in liberating themselves completely from the narrow prison of their age and country—Huxley) As applied to something perceptible through the senses sharp often suggests a disagreeably cutting or biting quality (sharp as vinegar) (a sharp voice) (a sharp flash) (a sharp wind) or it may emphasize distinctness or clearness of definition (a sharp outline) (sharp contrasts) (had happened close on twenty years ago. Yet how short a time it seemed, so sharp was still the impression of that night—Mackenzie) Keen, in contrast, may suggest a bracing, zestful, or piquant quality (the wind came keen with a tang of frost—Masefield) (very keen is the savor of the roast beef that floats up—Benson) Acute, less common in this sense, may impute an intensely perceptible and often distasteful quality to what it qualifies (the stench was acute—Mailer) (the sound rose to an almost painfully acute note) As applied to the senses themselves, all imply exceptional functional efficiency and choice is predicated on idiom; thus, sharp is used especially of sight and hearing, keen, of sight and smell, and acute, of hearing. As characterizing pleasures and pains, sharp suggests most definitely something that seems to cut or pierce, keen implies intensity, and acute implies poignancy (a sharp pain) (keen zest) (acute anguish)

Ana *incisive, trenchant, cutting, biting: mordant, *caustic, scathing: piercing, penetrating, probing (see ENTER): tricky, cunning, artful, wily, guileful, *sly

Ant dull: blunt

shatter vb shiver, *break, crack, burst, bust, snap

Ana demolish, *destroy: *ruin, wreck: rend, split, rive (see TEAR) shave vb *brush, graze, glance, skim

Ana touch, contact (see corresponding nouns at CONTACT): *escape, avoid shear vb Shear, poll, clip, trim, prune, lop, snip, crop are comparable when they mean to cut off something (as a piece, an excrescence, or a limb). Shear is the most general word of this group; it usually implies the use of a sharp cutting instrument (as shears, a razor, or a sharp knife) and, as its result, a close and even or a clean cut through, or off, or away, or from something. The term may or may not imply injury and suggests improvement more often than destruction (a machine with blades strong enough to shear a steel bar at one stroke) (shear the fleece from sheep) (each year he sheared his sheep) (a shark's curved razor-like teeth shear cleanly through the bone—Heiser) Poll implies the cutting of the hair as closely as if shaved; in this sense the verb seldom takes the person as its object, but the part affected (David . . . was in such grief that he had not polled his head—Whiston) (monks with polled crowns) It sometimes refers to the cutting off of the top or head of trees (as willows), often in order to provide new growth suitable for basketry, but sometimes in order to encourage the throwing out of branches from below (there were some beautiful willows, and now the idiot Parson has polled them into wretched stumps—Morris) Clip suggests a cutting evenly or closely without any indication of how much or how little is cut off (clipped her little son's curls) (clipped the shrubs into elaborate forms) (clip an article from a newspaper) Trim (see also STABILIZE) always implies the removal of something unwanted or overlong by or as if by cutting or clipping in order to improve the appearance of a thing, or to adjust it to something, or to prepare it for a definite use <trim a straggly hedge> <trimmed his hair and beard> <trim the rough edges from a piece of cloth> <what was not trimmed from our pages by an editor's nudge was given away in the haggings of publisher and author—Maller> Prune implies a trimming of a plant (as a tree or shrub) by cutting out superfluous parts (as dead branches) not only to improve its shape but to promote its growth or bearing <prune the rosebushes in the garden> Consequently prune in broader use implies a cutting down or out or excision so as to remove useless or needless material (as in written matter) <prune a manuscript before sending it off to the printer>  Lop implies a cutting off or away by or as if by an axe, especially of what is superfluous; typically it suggests pruning and the removal of dead or unnecessary branches or boughs, but it may suggest the similar removal of something that may be regarded as improperly associated or as an excrescence, a nuisance, or an interference <superfluous branches we lop away, that bearing boughs may live—Shak.> <Virginia, even after Maryland had been lopped off, remained a dominion of imperial extent—Morison> Snip, like clip, may imply the employment of scissors, but it may also suggest the use of sharp fingernails or of any other instrument by which a part may be pinched or cut off; it differs from clip in emphasizing suddenness and quickness in movement. It, therefore, often suggests a cutting off of a small piece at a time or a cutting into bits <snip off a loose thread> <snip the dead flowers from a plant> <the child, with its newfound toy, a pair of scissors, was snipping the newspaper into pieces> Crop, in most of its meanings, implies the cutting off of the top (as of a tree or grass), but when it emphasizes that implication, it usually suggests the cutting off of a piece at the top (as for identification or punishment) or a cutting extremely close (as of the hair) <the stiff-necked sectaries . . . who had been glad to stand in pillories and suffer their ears to be cropped rather than put bread in the mouths of priests—Brooks> <his hair . . . had been cropped by the prison barber—Yeats>

Ana *cut, slit, slash, hew; split, rive, cleave (see TEAR)

shed vb *discard, cast, molt, slough, scrap, junk

Ana remove, shift, transfer (see MOVE); reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE vb)

sheen *luster, gloss, glaze

Ana gleaming or gleam, glittering or glitter, flashing or flash (see FLASH) sheer adj 1 *pure, simple, absolute

Ana *outright, out-and-out, arrant, unmitigated

2 precipitous, abrupt, *steep

Ana perpendicular, *vertical sheer vb *turn, divert, deflect, avert shelter n Shelter, cover, retreat, refuge, asylum, sanctuary can mean the state or a place in which one is safe or secure from whatever threatens or disturbs. Shelter usually implies the protection of something that temporarily covers (as a shield or a roof) or that prevents the entrance or approach of something that would harm or annoy <seek shelter in a cave from an approaching storm> <shelters must be provided for sheep in winter> <the trees afforded shade and shelter—Cather> <the little boy would run yelping to the shelter of Mrs. Dixon's petticoats—Kenneth Roberts> <religious discipline is nothing but a permanent psychic shelter. You stay inside it, and you're less vulnerable—Wouk> Cover usually stresses concealment; it is often applied to a place of natural shelter (as a copse, thicket, or dense growth of brush) or, by extension, to something similarly thick or protective <they returned as wolves return to cover—Kipling> <the blackout, whose cover enabled a number of persons . . . to get about on various subversive missions—Shirer> Retreat stresses usually voluntary retirement from danger or annoyance and escape to a condition or place promising safety or security or peace. It often suggests remoteness, solitude, quiet, or, in religious use, conditions affording opportunities for prayer and meditation  <ah, for some retreat deep in yonder shining Orient—Tennyson> <regard the hut as a retreat and a camp rather than a home—Canby> Refuge also suggests an attempt to escape whatever threatens one's peace, safety, or happiness, but it usually implies fleeing from an attack or from pursuers, or something (as a thought or emotion) that harasses like a pursuer <refuse refuge to political exiles> <the escaped convict found refuge in a deserted house> <our clubs are . . . not refuges for bored husbands and homeless bachelors—Brownell> <millions of people . . . feel . . . the secrecy of the voting booth is their last refuge—Seldes> Asylum adds to refuge the implications of exemption from seizure or plundering and the finding of safety (as in the care of a protector or in a place outside the jurisdiction of the law) <the embezzler sought asylum in a country that had no extradition treaty> <during the war that followed, Britain gave asylum to many exiles from different lands—Victor Ross> Sanctuary stresses the sacredness of the place and its claim to reverence or inviolability; thus, a sanctuary for wildlife is an area which is exempt from intrusion by hunters and trappers and in which predators commonly are controlled so that the forms of life which are their prey may flourish <if thou breathest aught that can attain the honor of my house, by Saint George! not the altar itself shall be a sanctuary—Scott> <the most important single event . . . in our history is that it is our turn to be freedom's shield and sanctuary—A. E. Stevenson>

Ana protection, safeguarding or safeguard (see corresponding verbs at DEFEND); *harbor, haven, port shelter vb *harbor, lodge, house, entertain, board

Ana *defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard; *receive, accept, admit shibboleth *catchword, byword, slogan shield vb protect, guard, safeguard, *defend

Ana preserve, conserve, *save; *harbor, shelter, lodge, house shift vb *move, remove, transfer

Ana displace, *replace; *change, alter, vary; veer, *swerve, deviate shift n 1 makeshift, expedient, *resource, resort, stopgap, substitute, surrogate

Ana *device, contrivance, contraption; ruse, *trick, stratagem, maneuver, gambit, ploy, wile, feint, artifice

2 tour, trick, turn, *spell, stint, bout, go

Ana *change, alternation; allotment, assignment (see corresponding verbs at ALLOT) shimmy vb *shake, tremble, quake, totter, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, wobble, teeter, dither ship n *boat, vessel, craft ship vb forward, transmit, remit, route, *send, dispatch shipshape *neat, tidy, trim, trig, snug, spick-and-span shirk vb *dodge, parry, sidestep, duck, fence, mangle

Ana evade, elude, avoid, *escape; *recoil, shrink, quail, flinch shiver vb shatter, *break, crack, burst, bust, snap shiver vb quiver, shudder, quaver, *shake, tremble, quake, totter, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither shoal n Shoal, bank, reef, bar can all mean a shallow place in a body of water. In ordinary use shoal is applied to a shallow place, especially one that is difficult to navigate <dangerous shoals in uncharted waters> Bank, often as the plural banks, is applied to one that is formed by a muddy, sandy, or gravelly elevation but is deep enough to make navigation safe for lighter craft (as fishing boats) <the Grand Bank, also called the Banks of Newfoundland, is a noted fishing ground> and reef, to one where rock lies dangerously close to the surface <the reef-bound shores of Bermuda> Technically shoal is applied to elevations which are not rocky and on which the water is not more than 6 fathoms deep, bank to a similar elevation rising from the continental shelf and usually having a broad flat top under deeper water, and reef to a rocky elevation on which the water at low tide is 6 fathoms or less in depth. Bar carries implications found in many senses (as of length, narrowness, and hindrance). It is applied to a ridge of sand or gravel piled up at and often across or nearly across a river's mouth or an entrance to a harbor and obstructing navigation.

shock n cock, stack, heap, pile, mass, bank (see under HEAP vb)

shock vb cock, stack, *heap, pile, mass, bank shock n collision, clash, concussion, *impact, impingement, percussion, jar, jolt

Ana *encounter, skirmish: *attack, assault, onslaught, onset: shaking, rocking, agitation, convulsion (see corresponding verbs at SHAKE) shocking appalling, *fearful, awful, dreadful, frightful, terrible, terrific, horrible, horrific

Ana *ghastly, gruesome, lurid, macabre, grisly, grim: odious, abhorrent, abominable, *hateful: *repugnant, repellent, distasteful, obnoxious shoot vb 1 *fly, dart, float, skim, scud, sail

Ana *speed, hasten, hurry, quicken

2 *rush, dash, tear, charge

Ana dart, *fly, scud: *speed, hasten, hurry shoot n Shoot, branch, bough, limb can mean one of the members of a plant and especially a shrub or a tree that are outgrowths from a main stem or from one of its divisions. Shoot and branch are referable to most plants as well as to shrubs and trees and both imply development from a bud. Shoot, however, stresses actual growing and therefore applies chiefly to a young undeveloped member. Branch suggests a spreading out by dividing and subdividing and applies typically to a more or less fully developed member, whether it arises directly from the trunk or stem or from an outgrowth or a subdivision of an outgrowth. Bough is not interchangeable with shoot, for it usually suggests foliage and fruit or flowers. Although it is often used interchangeably with branch and is sometimes thought of as a large or main branch, it carries a comparatively weak implication of ramification and a strong connotation of full seasonal development; thus, bough may be preferred when the shrub or tree is in leaf or bloom and branch when the shrub or tree is stripped of foliage or its members are thought of as barren or dead <boughs loaded with fruit> <pine boughs for Christmas decorations> <bare branches> <superfluous branches we lop away, that bearing boughs may live—Shak.> <in a drear-nighted December, too happy, happy tree, thy branches ne'er remember their green felicity—Keats> Limb applies usually to a large branch that grows directly out of the trunk of a tree or to a member produced by the forking of the trunk <the knotty limbs of an enormous oak—Shelley>

shopworn *trite, hackneyed, stereotyped, threadbare

Ana wasted (see HAGGARD): attenuated, diluted, thinned (see THIN vb): antiquated, obsolete, archaic (see OLD) shore n Shore, coast, beach, strand, bank, littoral, fore- shore are comparable when they mean land bordering a body or stream of water. Shore is the general word for the land immediately bordering on the sea, a lake, or a large stream. Coast denotes the land along the sea regarded especially as a boundary. Beach applies to the pebbly or sandy shore washed by the sea or a lake  Both shore and beach may denote a resort frequented for pleasure or vacation. In this use shore more specifically indicates proximity to the sea <spend the summer at the shore> and beach a place adapted (as by the presence of a sandy beach) to the use of swimmers or sunbathers <spend a part of each day at the beach> Strand is elevated for shore or beach <to this lakeside, as to the holiest strand in Europe, pilgrims full of soul were drawn in thousands—L. P. Smith> Bank denotes the steep or sloping margin of a stream. Littoral is a technical or somewhat pretentious term occurring especially in geographic, political, and scientific writings for the whole coast or an extended, clearly specified portion of the coast of a particular sea or country; it may imply extension farther inland than coast usually implies <the whole Mediterranean littoral is . . . subject to earthquakes—Scribner's Mag.> Foreshore is applied sometimes to the part of the shore between high and low watermarks but at other times is extended to include the beach.

short 1 *brief

Ana decreased, lessened, reduced, diminished (see DECREASE): shortened, abridged, abbreviated, curtailed (see SHORTEN): *concise, terse, laconic

Ant long

2 crisp, brittle, friable, *fragile, frangible shortcoming *imperfection, deficiency, fault

Ana defect, flaw, *blemish: failing, frailty, foible, *fault

Con *excellence, merit, virtue, perfection shorten, curtail, abbreviate, abridge, retrench can all mean to reduce in extent, especially by cutting. Shorten commonly implies reduction in length or duration <shorten a road by eliminating curves> <to shorten a visit> It is also often used of apparent rather than actual length <they shortened the journey by telling stories> <if we really have a murderer in our midst, your easiest method of shortening your own young life would be to let him know how clever you are—Mary Fitt> <the vaccines will not even shorten the course of a cold—Fishbein> Curtail adds to shorten the implication of making cuts that impair completeness or cause deprivation <the interruption curtailed his speech> <the outdoor ceremony was curtailed because of the storm> <curtailed rights> <emergency order drastically curtailing the use of fuel—Current Biog.> Abbreviate implies reducing by omitting some normally present or following part; thus one abbreviates a word by cutting out or cutting off letters; one abbreviates a discussion by bringing it to a close sooner than planned or anticipated <their outing was abbreviated by a sudden drenching downpour>  Abridge expresses reduction in compass or scope rather more than in length <I feel you do not fully comprehend the danger of abridging the liberties of the people—Lincoln> but it may imply the retention of all that is essential and the relative completeness of the result <abridge a dictionary> Retrench stresses reduction in extent or costs of something felt to be in excess <retrench expenses> <the lords are retrenching visibly, and are especially careful to avoid any form of ostentation—Nancy Mitford>

Ana reduce, *decrease, lessen, diminish: *contract, shrink, condense

Ant lengthen, elongate: extend short-lived *transient, transitory, passing, ephemeral, momentary, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent

Ant agelong

shortly *presently, soon, directly shout vb Shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop are comparable when they mean as verbs to make or utter a loud and penetrating sound that tends or is intended to attract attention and, as nouns, a sound or utterance of this character. All, when used in reference to human utterance, can apply to either meaningful speech or inarticulate cries. Shout ordinarily implies vocal utterance in an energetically raised voice intended to carry a considerable distance or to rise above conflicting sound; in itself and apart from context the term carries no information about the emotional or meaning content or the tonal quality of the sound (the peddlers . . . shout their wares with a cry which is like the howl of a wolf—Gardner) (the geishas followed us, shouting insults in English, Japanese and pantomime—Mailer) (the lusty yells of the brown-shirted masses or the shouts of the Fuehrer blaring from the loudspeakers—Shirer) (the cuckoo shouts all day at nothing in leafy dells alone—Housman) In its extended use shout stresses attention-gaining quality (the brassy, peremptory shout of the ship's siren sounded . . . urgent and startling—R. B. Robertson) (his conservatory in winter is a shout of warring geraniums, which fills his heart with joy—G. W. Johnson) Yell is used chiefly with reference to human utterance and implies not only loudness but sharpness and stridency of sound and usually either the uncontrolled expression of an emotion (as horror, fear, rage, or triumph) or an urgent attempt to attract attention (the two boys yelled with fear—Buck) (faced a waiting crowd that let out a tumultuous yell of greeting—Sandburg) (heard the boy yell for help) In its extended use yell may apply to a sound suggesting a human yell (heard the lacerating yell of a scared bird shrill in his ears—Gibson) (the long, sunless winters, with their wild snows, their yelling gales—C. G. D. Roberts) or to an urgent appeal (they have exposed the flimsiness of satellite power, which—when the chips are down—must yell for Red Army help—Goldstein) Shriek implies a piercingly shrill sound or tone and, as applied to human utterance, suggests a strong emotional background (as of fear, horror, or anguish or less often of some pleasant or neutral emotion) (a case of goods from Paris to examine with little shrieks of excitement—Jesse) (the heavy booming of surf . . . could not drown the shriek of tortured metal in her damaged forepart—Porteous) (this instant's hesitation seemed to fill him with a tremendous, fantastic contempt, and he damned them in shrieked sentences—Crane) (I threatened the three men with my revolver, but they shrieked for mercy and I did not fire—R. H. Davis) In extended use shriek, like shout, stresses attention-gaining quality (the slogans and hyperboles of boundless confidence. The advertising columns shrieked with them—F. L. Allen) (the shriek of red furnaces against the sky—Brand) Scream in its basic use differs little from shriek (how quick the crows come flapping with their screams—Vance) (she screamed and fainted and came to and screamed and fainted all over again—Bromfield) (screaming to God for death by drowning—Millay) and it may be similar in extended use (the growing industries of Utah are screaming for water—Time) (the papers carried screaming headlines—Lovett) but more often its extension refers to something of which the action or occurrence is accompanied by or suggestive of physical screaming (every one of you will scream your lives out at the block within a year—George Orwell) (while smoke-black freights . . . screaming to the west coast, screaming to the east, carry off a harvest, bring back a feast—Lindsay) (smells of concentration camps and the basements of secret police. There are screaming nerves in it—Priestley) Screech implies a prolonged, typically inarticulate shriek that is conspicuously harsh or discordant or trying to the nerves (the groan . . . had changed to a screech like an electric butcher saw on bone—Wouk) (three overfed fish house cats were screeching at each other—Joseph Mitchell) (their ungreased wooden wheels screeching a cacophony that could be heard for miles—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.) In extended uses it is closely comparable to such uses of scream (many photographers . . . congratulate themselves when they have almost blown you down with screeching hues alone—a bebop of electric blues, furious reds, and poison greens—Fortune) (the driver applied his brakes with a jerk, and the car screeched to a standstill—Bruce Marshall) Squeal implies a sharp shrill sound that is not necessarily especially loud and that, if of human origin, is ordinarily less emotion-charged than a shriek, scream, or screech (the hulk of this man belied the squeal of his piping voice like a run-down wheel—Salomon) (on the stage the talk of Mr. Steinbeck's characters occasionally hits the ear with the effect of chalk squealing on a slate—Lardner) Often the term is used with specific reference to the natural cries of certain animals (the urgent squeals of a hungry pig) (rats squealing between the walls) Holler ordinarily refers to human utterance that in tone and volume is equivalent to shout (his holler and shout made the bobcat shiver—Warren) Often it implies a purpose (as of warning or attracting attention) (hollered again and again until the boy turned) or an expression (as of surprise or distress or anger) (let out a holler as the stone whizzed by his head) In extended use the term stresses vehemence (as in expostulating or criticizing or demanding) (the correspondents holler so . . . because the legend of the profession demands that one must be objective in all things—Belden) (I didn't see he'd taken my line at first and when I did I put up a holler—Brace) (in spite of six rate increases in the last seven years, casualty companies are already getting ready to holler for more—Time) Whoop, like holler, usually refers to human utterance equivalent in quality to shout, but ordinarily it implies eagerness, enthusiasm, or enjoyment as a cause (made a man want to cry and whoop all at the same time—Krey) In its varied extended uses it is likely to suggest exuberant, often noisy vigor or vitality (whoops up a selling boom—Stegner) (whooped through on a voice vote a stopgap foreign aid appropriation bill—Current Biog.)

Ana *roar, bellow, bawl, howl shout n yell, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

Ana bellow, vociferation, clamor, bawl, roar (see under ROAR vb)

shove vb *push, thrust, propel

Ana *force, constrain, oblige, compel, coerce: impel, drive, *move show vb 1 Show, manifest, evidence, evince, demonstrate are comparable when they mean to reveal something outwardly by or as if by a sign or to serve to make something outwardly apparent or visible. Show implies enabling others to see, but in this case what is revealed can only be inferred (as from acts, words, or looks) (he never shows what he thinks) (Tony . . . asked a question or two designed to show his intelligence—Archibald Marshall) (in this decision he showed his capacity for extreme boldness—Buchan) (slackness among civilians

. . . showed plainly in public life—Wecter) Manifest implies a fuller, plainer, and more indubitable revelation than show (in handwriting the Chinese believe that the inner personality of the writer is directly manifested—Binyon) (it is said that . . . a race manifests in all its history the same innate mental and emotional characteristics—Benedict) (the devotion manifested for these cherished beasts sometimes produced uncomfortable results—Replier) Evidence is often used in place of show (evidenced his appreciation) but it specifically implies that the outward act or utterance serves as proof of the existence or the actuality of something not fully proved or in question (argued that their hostility was evidenced by their acts) (initiative is evidenced by willingness to accept responsibility—McCain) (chaste, elegant, entirely in the contemporary mode, evidencing stylistic affiliations only with other contemporary buildings—Mumford) Evince implies some outward marks or tokens (as of an interest, an emotion, or a power) (he has evinced no interest in the project) (Cashel, bitterly humiliated by his own tears, and exasperated by a certain cold triumph which his captor evinced on witnessing them—Shaw) (the first paragraph evinces an ignorance of religious poetry, or an indifference to it—Tate) (he had never evinced any special interest in countries beyond our immediate borders—S. H. Adams) Demonstrate (see also PROVE 1) is used chiefly in reference to feelings; it ordinarily implies obvious or even deliberately displayed external signs (as effusiveness, enthusiasm, emotional excitement, or significant actions) (<demonstrate his approval by loud applause) (Paul was a person who demonstrated all his sentiments—Thackeray) (<demonstrated his own brand of intransigence—Funk)

Ana *reveal, disclose, discover: present, *offer, proffer, tender

Con *hide, conceal, secrete

2 Show, exhibit, display, expose, parade, flaunt can all mean to present in such a way as to invite notice or attention. One shows something which he enables others to see or look at (as by putting it forward into view intentionally or inadvertently or by taking another where he may see it) (<showed his tongue to the doctor) (<show our new home to friends) (<show the city to an out-of-town guest) (<the picture purported to show the earth's convexity—Martin Gardner) (I don't think he ever showed his full powers—Laski) One exhibits something which he puts forward prominently or openly, either with the express intention or with the result of attracting others' attention or inspection (<exhibit the museum's collection of Whistler engravings) (<exhibit articles made by children in school) (in many fashionable gown shops, garments are not exhibited but are shown only to prospective purchasers) (<exhibit unreasonable fear) (if any crave redress of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street—Shak.) (he exhibited with peculiar pride two cream-colored mules—Cather) (a group of rectangular buildings, exhibiting the stark functionalism of a toy village—Marquand) One displays something when he spreads it out before the view of others or puts it in a position where it can be seen to advantage or with great clearness (the exhibition was criticized because many paintings were not properly displayed) (the male makes a play for the female . . . by strutting before her, displaying his accomplishments, his prowess, his charms—Edmund Wilson) One exposes something when he brings it out of hiding or concealment or from under cover and shows, exhibits, or displays it consciously or unconsciously. The term sometimes means little more than to exhibit or display (he . . . looked me over as if I had been exposed for sale—Conrad) (the tide was low and the mud-banks were exposed and reeking—Cheever) Often it means to reveal publicly something and especially something disagreeable that has been or should be concealed (afraid to expose his ignorance by asking questions) (it was my duty to leave no stone unturned to discover and expose the awful truth—Rose Macaulay) Frequently it carries the additional implication of unmasking (it was . . . his friends . . . that he attacks in this terrible story of the passing stranger who took such a vitriolic joy in exposing their pretensions and their hypocrisy—Brooks) One parades something by displaying it ostentatiously or arrogantly (smugly parading his honesty) (I can't believe that God wants the strong to parade their strength—Hellman) (he is a writer who does not raise his voice. He avoids emphasis. His finest phrases . . . are tucked away, not paraded—J. M. Brown) Sometimes the term implies not merely ostentation or arrogance but an intent to deceive or mislead (<parades her love for her husband only because she actually did not love him—Parshley) (<speaking with open contempt of mature persons who paraded their deference to the wishes of a father—Krutch) One flaunts something when one parades it shamelessly, often boastfully, and offensively (<they flaunt their conjugal felicity in one's face—Wilde) (<ye vaunted your fathomless power, and ye flaunted your iron pride—Kipling) (<over this was an unbelievable flaunting of opulence—Hervey)

Ana *indicate, betoken, attest, bespeak, argue, prove: intimate, hint, *suggest

Ant disguise

show n *exhibition, exhibit, exposition, fair showy, pretentious, ostentatious can mean making or presenting an outward display that is by implication greater than what is necessary or justifiable. Showy, the ordinary term, carries less definite implications than the other words. It implies an imposing, striking, or impressive appearance, but it often suggests cheapness, inferiority, or poor taste (<showy brass ware—Shaw) (<showy furniture) (<showy decorations) or undue conspicuousness or gaudiness (<a showy wallpaper design) (<showy peonies) or overattention to superficial qualities (the showy talents, in which the present age prides itself—Newman) Pretentious (see also AMBITIOUS 2) suggests even less warrant for display, for it usually implies an appearance that is not justified by the thing's actual value or actual cost or by the person's actual worth, rank, performance, or capability; the term therefore implies a criticism of whatever is so described (I'd rather you didn't call me "sir" . . . it might give rise to the idea that I had asked you to It might appear rather pretentious—Mackenzie) (his sense of character is nil, and he is as pretentious as a rich whore, as sentimental as a lollipop—Mailer) (a brilliant sham, which, like a badly built and pretentious house, looks poor and shabby after a few years—Cather) Ostentatious stresses vainglorious display or parade but it does not necessarily imply either showiness or pretentiousness (<ostentatious public charities—Wilde) (the ostentatious simplicity of their dress—Macaulay) (thought their cortege ostentatious . . . slaves marching ahead with drums, porters bearing food and . . . gifts, and an armed escort—Hervey)

Ana *gaudy, tawdry, garish, flashy, meretricious: resplendent, gorgeous (see SPLENDID): opulent, sumptuous, *luxurious shrew scold, vixen, termagant, *virago, amazon shrewd, sagacious, perspicacious, astute can all mean acute in perception and sound in judgment, especially in reference to practical affairs. Shrewd implies native cleverness, acumen, and an exceptional ability to see below the surface; it often also connotes hardheadedness    (the shrewd wisdom of an unlettered old woman—Pater) <the hard mind of a shrewd small-town boy, the kind of boy who knows you have a real cigar only when you are the biggest man in town—Mailer> <she had had a mania for buying and selling land, and was a shrewd judge of values—Wolfe> Sagacious is usually applied to persons or their decisions, their judgments, and their methods of pursuing their ends; it stresses penetration, discernment, judiciousness, and often, farsightedness <the auctioneer, a small sagacious individual . . . , was directing his two blue-jowled assistants in the business of displaying to their best advantage the remaining pieces—Wylie> <he left an estate of approximately $172,000, accumulated through sagacious investments—Dilliard> Perspicacious is applied chiefly to mental sight or insight and suggests unusual power to see through and to understand what is dark, hidden, mysterious, or puzzling   <we must make allowance also for those blind spots which are found in the most perspicacious mortals—L. P. Smith> <some perspicacious manufacturer of another product . . . beat the rap the same way—Ace> <it occurred to the perspicacious riddleman that he would have acted more wisely by appearing less unimpressible—Hardy> Astute implies a combination of shrewdness and perspicacity and often, in addition, connotes an ability to keep one's counsel or an incapacity for being fooled, especially where one's own interests are concerned <savages . . . are often as . . . astute socially as trained diplomatists—James> <the man who can make millions by an astute business deal—Hobson> Astute, opprobriously used, heightens the suggestion, sometimes present in perspicacious, of artfulness, diplomacy, or craft. It may connote merely shrewd discernment and sagacity <I have described above our low-caliber presidents—they, too, are more or less astute party hacks—Edmund Wilson>

Ana knowing, *intelligent, smart, clever, quick-witted: politic, diplomatic, smooth (see SUAVE): *wise, prudent, sensible, judicious: penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER): *sharp, keen, acute shriek vb *shout, yell, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop

Ana vociferate, clamor, bellow, *roar: vent, ventilate, air, voice, *express shriek n shout, yell, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

Ana vociferation, clamor, bellow, roar (see under ROAR vb) shrink 1 *contract, constrict, compress, condense, deflate Ana *decrease, reduce, diminish, lessen: *shorten, abridge, retrench, curtail

Ant swell—Con *expand, amplify, distend, dilate, inflate

2 *recoil, flinch, quail, blench, wince

Ana cringe, cower (see FAWN): retreat, *recede: balk, shy, boggle, scruple, *demur shrivel *with,er, wizen

Ana parch, desiccate, *dry: sear, scorch, *burn shroud vb *cover, overspread, envelop, wrap, veil

Ana *hide, conceal, screen, bury: cloak, mask, camouflage, *disguise shudder vb shiver, quiver, quaver, *shake, tremble, quake, totter, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither shun avoid, evade, elude, *escape, eschew

Ana *decline, refuse, reject: balk, shy, scruple, *demur, stick, stickle: scorn, disdain, *despise

Ant habituate shut vb *close shut out eliminate, *exclude, debar, rule out, blackball, disbar

Ana *prevent, preclude, obviate: *hinder, obstruct, block, bar shutter n *blind, shade

shy adj Shy, bashful, diffident, modest, coy can mean showing disinclination to obtrude oneself in the presence or company of others. Shy implies a shrinking, sometimes constitutional, sometimes the result of inexperience, from familiarity or contact with others; shyness usually manifests itself in a certain reserve of manner or in timidity in approaching others <the savage . . . is a shy person, imbued with the notion that certain things are not to be talked of to strangers—Inge> <shy in the presence of strangers and bold with people she knew well—Anderson>

Bashful implies an instinctive or constitutional shrinking from public notice that usually expresses itself in awkwardness of demeanor and is especially characteristic of childhood and adolescence; as applied to mature persons it connotes abnormal or excessive shyness and lack of savoir faire <he hesitated, awkward and bashful, shifted his weight from one leg to the other—London> <as he grew up, he became increasingly bashful, and he never had a close friend of either sex—Donovan> Diffident implies a distrust, which may or may not be warranted, of one's own ability, opinions, or powers that gives rise to hesitation in their exercise <he was conservative and diffident by nature, and even after all these years he felt tongue-tied in the presence of those stricken by grief—Styron>

Modest, without implying self-distrust, may denote an absence of all undue confidence in oneself or one's powers <the most modest, silent, sheepfaced and meek of little men—Thackeray> but often it stresses not an inner lack of confidence but a manner free from brashness, boldness, and self-assertiveness <stood at ease . . . with the modest air of a man who has given his all and is reasonably assured it is enough—Wolfe> <entirely natural, modest, and unaffected in manner—Eliot Clark> Coy suggests assumed or affected shyness, often with the further implication of coquetry <I was vexed, and resolved to be even with her by not visiting the wood for some time. A display of indifference on my part would, I hoped, result in making her less coy in the future—Hudson> <without being in the least coy, Mrs. Gross displayed a certain half smiling modesty—Terry Southern>

Ana *timid, timorous: wary, chary, *cautious, circumspect

Ant obtrusive

shy vb balk, boggle, scruple, *demur, jib, stickle, stick, strain

Ana *recoil, shrink, quail, blench: *hesitate, waver, falter, vacillate sic vb *urge, egg, exhort, goad, spur, prod, prick

Ana *incite, instigate, abet: encourage, countenance, *favor sicken *disgust, nauseate

Ana revolt, offend, repulse (see corresponding adjectives at OFFENSIVE) sickly *unwholesome, morbid, diseased, pathological

Ana ailing (see corresponding noun at DISEASE): *weak, feeble, frail, infirm: mawkish, mushy, maudlin (see SENTIMENTAL)

Ant robust—Con *healthy, sound, wholesome, hale, well side *phase, aspect, facet, angle sidereal *starry, stellar, astral

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

sidestep vb *dodge, parry, shirk, duck, fence, malingering

Ana avoid, evade, elude, shun (see ESCAPE) siege n *blockade

sigh vb Sigh, sob, moan, groan are comparable as verbs when they mean to emit a sound, commonly an inarticulate sound, indicative of mental or physical pain or distress and as nouns, such a sound. Sigh implies a deep audible respiration that is a usually involuntary expression of grief, intense longing, regret, discouragement, weariness, or boredom (sigh no more, ladies, sigh no more, men were deceivers ever—Shak.) (a sigh uttered from the fullness of the heart—Hazlitt) (the stranger sometimes seemed to be under stress, sighed much and muttered inaudibly to himself—Malamud) Sob implies a sound made by a convulsive catching of the breath when weeping or when both speaking and crying or when trying to restrain tears; the noun, however, more often refers solely to this sound than does the verb, which often implies accompanying tears and speech (‘‘Ah!’’ It was a long, grieving sound, like a sigh—almost like a sob—Dickens) (the mother . . . knelt by his side, and they prayed, and their joint sobs shook their bodies, but neither of them shed many tears—Meredith) (she sobbed out her story) (like a child sobbing itself to sleep) Moan implies a low, prolonged, usually inarticulate sound, especially one that is indicative of intense suffering of mind or body (they are quick to hear the moans of immemorial grief—Blunden) (Polly moaned, overwhelmed with retrospective shame and embarrassment—Huxley) (to hear the piteous moan that Rutland made—Shak.) The term, however, is often extended to sounds suggestive of pain, complaint, or murmuring (the moan of the wind) (the moan of doves in immemorial elms—Tennyson) (the rain and the wind splashed and gurgled and moaned round the house—Kipling) Groan implies a heavier sound than moan and more often suggests an unbearable weight of suffering or a strong spirit of rebelliousness to pain or discomfort (thy groans did make wolves howl—Shak.) (the whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now—Rom 8:22) Often however, in extended use the term carries no hint of suffering but implies noises made in strong disapproval or in pretended suffering (greet a speaker with groans) or by something that moves or swings heavily (trees groaning in the wind) (the door upon its hinges groans—Keats) (the groan under the floorboard had changed to a screech—Wouk)

Ana lament, *deplete, bemoan, bewail: *long, yearn, pine, hunger, thirst sigh n groan, moan, sob (see under SIGH vb)

Ana regret, *sorrow, grief

sight n *look, view, glance, glimpse, peep, peek

Ana *prospect, outlook: vision, *revelation sightless *blind; purblind sign n 1 Sign, mark, token, badge, note, symptom can denote a sensible and usually visible indication by means of which something not outwardly apparent or obvious is made known or revealed. Sign is the most comprehensive of these terms, being referable to a symbol (see also CHARACTER 1) or a symbolic device or act (the mace is the sign of authority) (make the sign of the cross) or to a visible or sensible manifestation of a mood, a mental or physical state, or a quality of character (good manners are signs of good breeding) (they are gestures of exclusion—not snobbery, merely signs of a private life with all its unique standards—Fadiman) (suicide is the sign of failure, misery, and despair—Ellis) or to a trace or vestige of someone or something (the signs of her fate in a footprint here, a broken twig there, a trinket dropped by the way—Conrad) or to objective evidence that serves as a presage or foretoken (signs of an early spring) (there are signs that poetry is beginning to occupy itself again with the possibilities of sound—Day Lewis) (two men that night watched for a sign, listened for a wonder—Gwyn Jones) and concretely to a placard, board, tablet, or card that serves to identify, announce, or direct (watch for a road sign) (a brilliantly lighted bar sign) (did you see the sign announcing the new play?) (‘‘for rent’’ signs in the dingy windows) Mark (see also CHARACTER 1) may be preferred to sign when the distinguishing or revealing indication is thought of as something impressed upon a thing or inherently characteristic of it, often in contrast to something outwardly apparent or displayed (the bitter experience left its mark on him) (courtesy is the mark of a gentleman) (the distinguishing marks of Victorian poetry) (what, then, are the marks of culture and efficiency?—Suz-zallo) (the unrealized schemes of [the] past . . . have usually left their mark in the shape of some unfinished pier, half completed parade—Angus Wilson) Concretely also mark is applied either (1) to some visible trace (as a scar or a stain or a track) left upon a thing (birthmark) (the marks of smallpox) (the high-water mark is observable on the pier’s supports) (the marks of an army’s passage) (they found not a button, or feather, or mark, by which they could tell that they stood on the ground where the Baker had met with the Snark—Lewis Carroll) or (2) to something that is affixed in order to distinguish, identify, or label a particular thing or to indicate its ownership (a trademark) (a laundry mark) Token (see also PLEDGE) can replace sign and also mark except in their specific concrete applications when the sensible indication serves as a proof of or is given as evidence of the actual existence of something that has no physical existence (how could he doubt her love when he had had so many tokens of her affection?) (the savages bore gifts as tokens of their desire for peace and friendship) (tokens tossed his way—an occasional salute, a ‘‘well done’’ for the preflights . . . a tense smile—were hoarded fervently—Pynchon) Badge designates a piece of metal or a ribbon carrying an inscription or emblem and worn upon the person as a token of one’s membership in a society or as a sign of one’s office, employment, or function (a policeman’s badge) (each delegate wore a badge) (a gold key is the badge of membership in Phi Beta Kappa) In extended use badge often is employed in place of sign, mark, or token when it is thought of in reference to a class, a group, a category of persons, or as a distinctive feature of their dress, their appearance, or their character (for sufferance is the badge of all our tribe—Shak.) (essentially we were taught to regard culture as a veneer, a badge of class distinction—Malcolm Cowley) (the diplomat wearing his badge of office, the Homburg—Siler) Note usually means a distinguishing or dominant mark or characteristic; it differs from mark, its closest synonym, in suggesting something emitted or given out by a thing, rather than something impressed upon that thing (a fertile oasis possesses a characteristic color scheme of its own . . . The fundamental note is struck by the palms—Huxley) (you walk on stage . . . and somehow you’re alive, and inside the part, and yet you’re projecting a peculiar note, your own—Wouk) (the note of sadness . . . which . . . poets were to find so much more to their taste than the note of gladness—Henry Adams) Note may be used in place of mark for a characteristic that seems to emanate from a thing that strikes one as true or authentic and therefore is the test of a similar thing’s truth, genuineness, or authoritativeness (the grand manner that is the note of great poetry)

(tolerance, moderation, and pity are the abiding notes which help to keep Chaucer's poetry level with life—H. S. Bennett) Symptom can apply to any of the physical or mental changes from the normal which can be interpreted as evidence of disease, but in medical use it is commonly restricted to the subjective evidences of disease primarily apparent to the sufferer and is then opposed to sign, which is applied to the objective evidences of abnormality that are primarily determined by tests and instruments (symptoms and signs taken together constitute the evidence on which a diagnosis can be based) In extended use the term tends to follow popular rather than professional medical use and is applicable to an outward indication of an inner change (as in an institution, a state, or the body politic) or to an external phenomenon that may be interpreted as the result of some internal condition (as a weakness, defect, or disturbance) (even that . . . is treated lightly as a foible of the age, and not as a symptom of social decay and change—T. S. Eliot) (the belief that a young man's athletic record is a test of his worth is a symptom of our general failure to grasp the need of knowledge and thought in mastering the complex modern world—Russell) (she wanted . . . to be alone so that she could study and afterwards remember each symptom of this excitement that had caught her—Auchincloss)

Ana indication, betokening, attesting or attestation (see corresponding verbs at INDICATE): manifestation, evidencing or evidence, demonstration, showing or show (see corresponding verbs at SHOW): intimation, suggestion (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST)

2 Sign, signal can both mean a motion, an action, a gesture, or a word by which a command or wish is expressed or a thought is made known. Sign (see also SIGN 1; CHARACTER 1) is the general term that in itself carries no explicit connotations; it is used in reference to a bodily motion (as a shrug) or a gesture (as a beckoning) or an action (as a pantomime) by which one conveys a thought, a command, a direction, or a need to another with whom one either cannot communicate orally (as by reason of deaf-mutism, or lack of a common language, or distance) or does not wish to communicate orally (as from consideration of others or desire for secrecy) (put a finger to her lips as a sign for quiet) (the explorer made signs to the natives to show his friendly intentions) Signal usually applies to a conventional and recognizable sign that typically conveys a command, a direction, or a warning (she was startled by a ring at the door, the certain signal of a visitor—Austen) (the flying of the first champagne cork gave the signal, and a hum began to spread—Meredith) (at a signal given by the train conductor, the engineer climbed into his engine—Anderson) Signal is also applied to mechanical devices which by operating lights, moving barriers, or sounding an alarm, take the place of a guard, a watchman, or a policeman (traffic signals) (railroad signals)

Ana *gesture, gesticulation: *symbol, emblem

3 symbol, *character, mark

Ana *device, contrivance signal n *sign

Ana *alarm, tocsin, alert: *gesture, gesticulation: *motion, movement: *device, contrivance, contraption signal adj salient, striking, arresting, outstanding, prominent, remarkable, *noticeable, conspicuous

Ana distinctive, individual, peculiar, *characteristic: eminent, illustrious, *famous, renowned significance 1 signification, import, *meaning, sense, acceptance

Ana denotation, connotation (see under DENOTE):

suggestion, implication, intimation (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST)

2 *importance, import, consequence, moment, weight Ana *worth, value: *influence, authority, credit, prestige: merit, *excellence, virtue, perfection significant *expressive, meaningful, pregnant, eloquent, sententious

Ana cogent, telling, convincing, compelling, *valid, sound: forcible, forceful, *powerful: important, momentous, weighty (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

signification significance, import, *meaning, sense, acceptance

Ana signifying, meaning, denoting (see MEAN vb): denotation, connotation (see under DENOTE 2) signify import, *mean, denote

Ana convey, *carry, bear: *denote, connote: imply, *suggest silent 1 Silent, uncommunicative, taciturn, reticent, reserved, secretive, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped are comparable when they mean showing restraint in speaking to or with others. Silent and uncommunicative often imply a tendency to say no more than is absolutely necessary as a matter of habit (he had had a rather unhappy boyhood; and it made him a silent man—Conrad) (a stern, silent man, long a widower—Cather) (whose uncommunicative heart will scarce one precious word impart—Swift) or an abstinence from speech on some particular occasion typically because of caution or the stress of emotion (a silent, shaky embrace, each afraid to entrust words to her trembling lips—Styron) (she found the presidential nominee uncommunicative regarding plans to put women in high office—Current Biog.) Taciturn implies a temperamental disinclination to speech; it usually also connotes unsociableness or the nature of one who grudgingly converses when necessary (Benson was . . . a taciturn hater of woman—Meredith) (always taciturn, he now hardly spoke at all—Cloete) (the farmer was taciturn and drove them speechlessly to the house—Buck) Reticent implies the disposition to keep one's own counsel or the habit or fact of withholding much that might be said, especially under particular circumstances; the term does not usually connote silence but, rather, sparing speech or an indisposition to discuss one's private affairs (all subsequent autobiographies and confessions seem in comparison reticent, wanting in detail—L. P. Smith) (he had been characteristically reticent regarding the details of his own financial affairs—Marquand) (it was a matter upon which he was reticent, and with persons of his kidney a direct question is never very discreet—Maugham) Reserved implies reticence but it also suggests formality, standoffishness, or a temperamental indisposition to the give and take of friendly conversation or familiar intercourse (a reserved and distant demeanor) (grave, though with no formal solemnity, reserved if not exactly repressed . . . she was yet a woman of unmistakable force of character—Ellis) (habitually was reserved in speech, withholding her opinion—Sackville-West) Secretive also implies reticence, but it adds an implication of disparagement that reticent usually lacks, for it suggests an opposition to frank or open and often connotes an attempt to hide or conceal something that might properly be told (a secretive public official is the despair of reporters) (the rapport between this man and his parents was so intense and tacit that it seemed secretive—Cheever) (his voice became secretive and confidential, the voice of a man divulging fabulous professional secrets—Dahl) Close (see also CLOSE 1 & 2) comes near to reticent and secretive in its meaning but it usually denotes a disposition rather than an attitude or manner and, therefore, often suggests taciturnity (he was too close to name his circumstances to me—Dickens) Close-lipped and close-mouthed are often used in place of close not only as more picturesque terms but also as more clearly implying a determined refusal to disclose something that another desires to know (he is always closemouthed about his plans) (she proved a good secretary because she was close-lipped about all matters of a confidential nature) (those few who knew actual combat destination kept close-lipped—Dodson) (the family has been . . . extraordinarily closemouthed about even the broad outline of its commercial affairs—Freeman Lincoln) Tight-lipped carries a stronger implication of resolute but not necessarily temperamental reticence (infinite caution, tight-lipped, unshakable patience, these must be his rule—Buchan)

Ana restrained, curbed, checked, inhibited (see RESTRAIN); discreet, prudent (see under PRUDENCE)

Ant talkative —Con *vocal, articulate, fluent, voluble, glib: loquacious, garrulous (see TALKATIVE)

2 *still, stilly, quiet, noiseless

Ana *calm, serene, tranquil, placid, peaceful silhouette *outline, contour, profile, skyline

Ana shadow, *shade, adumbration silken, silky *sleek, slick, glossy, velvety, satiny

Ana lustrous, luminous, lambent (see BRIGHT) silly 1 *simple, foolish, fatuous, asinine

Ana *irrational, unreasonable: *stupid, slow, dull, dense, crass, dumb: vacuous, *empty

2 *foolish, absurd, preposterous

Ana inane, wishy-washy, *insipid: puerile, juvenile (see YOUTHFUL): ridiculous, ludicrous, *laughable similar *like, alike, analogous, comparable, akin, parallel, uniform, identical

Ana *same, equivalent, equal, identical: corresponding, correlative, complementary, *reciprocal

Ant dissimilar —Con *different, disparate, diverse: *opposite, contradictory, contrary, antithetical, antonymous similarity *likeness, resemblance, similitude, analogy, affinity

Ana *comparison, contrast, collation, parallel: agreement, accordance, harmonizing or harmony, correspondence (see corresponding verbs at AGREE)

Ant dissimilarity

simile *analogy, metaphor similitude *likeness, similarity, resemblance, analogy, affinity

Ant dissimilitude, dissimilarity simmer vb *boil, seethe, parboil, stew simper vb *smile, smirk, grin simper n smile, smirk, grin (see under SMILE vb)

simple adj 1 *pure, absolute, sheer Ana elemental, *elementary: *single, sole

Ant compound: complex

2 *easy, facile, light, effortless, smooth

Ana clear, plain, distinct, obvious, *evident, manifest: *clear, lucid, perspicuous

Ant complicated: difficult

3 *plain, homely, unpretentious

Ana ordinary, *common, familiar: lowly, *humble: insignificant, unimportant (see affirmative nouns at IMPORTANCE)

4 *natural, ingenuous, naïve, unsophisticated, artless

Ana *sincere, unfeigned: *childlike, childish: open, plain, *frank, candid

Con affected, pretended, assumed (see ASSUME): pretentious, ostentatious, *showy

5 Simple, foolish, silly, fatuous, asinine can all mean actually or apparently deficient in intelligence. Simple, when it implies actual deficiency in intelligence, is applied chiefly to persons whose intelligence is that of a child and who are incapable of dealing with ideas or situations that involve much mental effort. It may imply either illiteracy coupled with a lack of native shrewdness, or feeble-mindedness that does not amount to imbecility (this poor, simple boy. Half-witted, they call him; and surely fit for nothing but to be happy—Hawthorne) When used as a term of criticism of normal persons or their acts it suggests little more than failure to use one's intelligence (Marcia was a simple woman and easily deceived—Graves) (he knew they thought him simple Not simple, perhaps, but strange and imperceptive—Cloete)

Foolish (see also FOOLISH 2) as a term of criticism of normal persons and their acts is stronger than simple because it imputes either the appearance of idiocy or imbecility or a want of intelligence or of good judgment that makes one blind to dangers or consequences (he looks and acts foolish when he drinks too much) (oh, foolish youth! Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee—Shak.) (in his younger days he had been very foolish. He had flirted and giggled—Woolf) (feeling herself a rather foolish figure, with her stockings rolled around her ankles and her brassiere loose—Mary McCarthy) Silly is applied to persons who, though not mentally deficient in a technical sense, fail to act as rationally guided beings either by showing a lack of common sense or ordinary good judgment or by behaving in a manner that makes them ridiculous in the eyes of others (she wasn't a weak and silly creature, with running faucets in her eyes. She didn't swoon and give way to feelings and emotions—Farrell) (although we maintained a blackout at night, we felt silly about it—Liebling) Fatuous does not often imply a pathological lack of intelligence, but it does imply an appearance of this and regularly suggests a combination of foolishness, stupidity, and inanity. It is a term of contempt rather than of impersonal description, and is capable of additional connotations (as fatheadedness, vacuousness, obtuseness, or loss of a sense of proportion) (do you doubt that the most fatuous of the Georges, whichever it was, thought himself Newton's superior?—Landor) (Prescott . . . was no fatuous optimist—Brooks) (a fatuous and at the same time arrogant epistle, abounding in nonsense and lies and subterfuge—Shirer) (she still indulged in those fatuous remarks that had no point. Remarks like: Marriage is an institution made chiefly for men and women—Abse)

Asinine is also a term of contempt; it suggests an intelligence comparable to that of a donkey, considered the stubbornest and most stupid of the beasts of burden. As applied to persons or their acts, choices, or opinions it connotes an utter failure to exercise intelligence or thinking unworthy of a rational being (an asinine choice of profession) (an asinine use of his leisure time) (what is one to think of a man so asinine that he looks for gratitude in this world?—Mencken) (the most asinine and inept movie that has come out of Hollywood in years—McCarten)

Ana childish, *childlike: dull, dense, dumb, slow, *stupid, crass: *ignorant, illiterate, untaught

Ant wise

simple n *drug, medicinal, pharmaceutical, biologic simpleton *fool, moron, imbecile, idiot, natural simulate feign, counterfeit, sham, pretend, *assume, affect

Ana dissemble, *disguise, cloak, mask, camouflage: ape, mock, mimic, imitate, *copy simultaneous synchronous, coincident, *contemporary, contemporaneous, coeval, coetaneous, concomitant, concurrent

Ana concurring, coinciding, agreeing (see AGREE)

Con *preceding, foregoing, antecedent, previous: following, succeeding, ensuing (see FOLLOW) sin n *offense, vice, crime, scandal

Ana transgression, trespass, *breach, violation: *error, lapse, slip: *fault, failing, frailty since conj *because, for, as, inasmuch as sincere, wholehearted, whole-souled, heartfelt, hearty, unfeigned can mean genuine in feeling or expression or showing such genuineness. Sincere stresses the absence of hypocrisy, dissimulation, or falsification in any degree; it therefore usually connotes a strict adherence to truth, a revelation of just what one feels, thinks, or sees and no more, and an unwillingness to embellish, exaggerate, or make pretenses of any sort (the loathing with which he describes the sodden Vienna working classes is . . . so sincere that one thinks for a moment that out of it must come a people's rebel—Dorothy Thompson) (in spite of her confusion, something strong and sincere and questing emanated from her—Styron) Wholehearted and whole-souled imply the absence of all reservations and therefore stress not only sincerity, but also qualities (as earnestness or devotion or zealously) which suggest that one's whole being is stirred or moved (the service they one and all gave . . . was wholehearted and even passionate—Sackville-West) (whole-souled dislike of totalitarianism) (who could help liking her? her generous nature, her gift for appreciation, her wholehearted, fervid enthusiasm?—L. P. Smith) (demonstrated a whole-souled allegiance to the democratic world—Limb) Heartfelt places the emphasis upon the depth and genuineness of the feeling which finds expression in words, in signs of emotion (as tears), or in acts; the term suggests that one is deeply stirred or moved, and it is applied usually to what might, by contrast, be formally or conventionally expressed or outwardly indicated (heartfelt interest in the poor and suffering) (our sympathy for you therefore is heartfelt, for we are sharing the same sufferings—Sir Winston Churchill) Hearty comes closer to wholehearted than to heartfelt, but it carries a stronger implication than wholehearted of vigor or energy in expression or manifestation, and may connote simple honesty, great warmth, or exuberance in the display of feeling (receive a hearty welcome) (a hearty laugh) (in the hearty tones natural when the words demanded by politeness coincide with those of deepest feeling—Hardy) (the overwhelming mass of American citizens are in hearty accord with these basic policies—Roosevelt) Unfeigned is often used in place of sincere, especially when the absence of simulation is to be stressed; the term usually emphasizes spontaneity as well as genuineness (I confess to unfeigned delight in the insurgent propaganda—Lowes) (an unfeigned interest in people and scenes—Bruun)

Ana candid, open, *frank, plain: honest, honorable, conscientious, scrupulous, *upright: *straightforward, aboveboard, forthright

Ant insincere

sinewy *muscular, athletic, husky, brawny, burly

Ana robust, *healthy, sound: *strong, tough, tenacious, sturdy: nervous, *vigorous, energetic sing vb Sing, troll, carol, descant, warble, trill, hymn, chant, intone all mean to produce musical tones by or as if by means of the voice. Sing is the general term used of human beings and of animals and things that produce musical or sustained tones. In its primary application to human beings it usually implies utterance in words with musical inflections or modulations and often suggests such modulated utterance as an art to be practiced, studied, or learned (sing an aria) (sing the part of Faust) (sing a plaintive song) (she studied singing diligently but lacked the voice to profit from instruction) (grasshoppers chirping, and birds singing—Shaw) (the rigging sang in the wind) Troll usually suggests the use of full round tones in singing (while mountains were unloosing their hair to the music waterfalls trolled like bells for the wedding—Babette Deutsch) and is especially applicable to the hearty voices of jovial men raised in singing or the resonant celebration in song of great events or deeds (let us be jocund. Will you troll the catch you taught me but while?—Shak.) (strange adventure that we're trolling: modest maid and gallant groom—Gilbert) Carol suggests the voices of youthful, lively, or joyous singers, usually of persons, sometimes of birds; it may or may not suggest the singing of carols, but it often implies merriment or effortlessness and spontaneity (used to carol cheerfully in the morning, locked in the single bathroom—Canby) (a wren on a tree stump caroled clear—Masefield) Descant (see also DISCOURSE) implies part singing or, especially, the singing of a higher part in harmony with the plainsong of the tenor in a contrapuntal treatment. Descant often merely implies harmonious singing or singing in harmony with (they will . . . sing so sweetly, and withall descant it so finely and tunably—Topsell) (a device by which several singers appear to be descanting, when in fact only one is doing so—Grove's Dict. of Music) Warble frequently implies singing in a soft and gentle voice but with various modulations (as turns and trills and quavers); often it means no more than to sing melodiously or with sweetness (warble his native woodnotes wild—Milton) (the skylark warbles high his trembling thrilling ecstasy—Gray) Trill basically means to sing with trills or vibrations (as by rapidly alternating two notes a degree apart) (trill like a canary) but it is often extended to refer to the making of sounds involving vibration without much thought of musical quality (with a shrill trilling from the countless leaves in between gusts of wind—Idriess) (trilled his soup into his mouth with a swift sucking vibration—The Use of English) (could hear the noise of a telephone trilling—James Helvick) Hymn implies a lifting of the voice in songs of worship or praise, especially of God (evening by evening, as they came to the setting sun, they hymned Father, Son, and Holy Ghost—Pusey) (the thrush concerting with the lark that hymned on high—Pollok) Chant may mean little more than sing, but often it is used specifically to imply the method of singing adopted by priests or choristers singing unmetrical verse where the emphasis is upon musical recitation of phrases, measured even tones, and a reverential spirit. Intone also comes very close to the specific sense of chant in meaning but sometimes carries a stronger connotation of reciting in sustained monotone (the Psalms were chanted) (the priest intoned the Gospel of the Mass) (I joined with choirs of monks, intoning their deep sonorous dirges—L. P. Smith) (they would take hands and ring-a-rosy about him, chanting at the tops of their voices, until good humor was restored—Mary Austin)

single sear, *burn, scorch, char single adj 1 *unmarried, celibate, virgin, maiden

2 Single, sole, unique, lone, solitary, separate, particular can all mean one as distinguished from two or more or all others. Something single is not accompanied or supported by, or combined or united with, another (a single instance may be cited) (the strength of the lyric lies in the complete statement of a single selected facet of experience—Day Lewis) (that was the greatest single thing that had ever happened to her. No one had ever looked at her and made a respectful gesture before—Theodore Sturgeon) Something sole is the only one that exists, that acts, that has power or relevance, or that is to be or should be considered (he is the sole heir) (this is his sole invention) (your conscience must be the sole judge in this case) (acquire the sole rights of publication) (his sole object was to study the form of his sitter's head in every detail—Alexander) (California is not the sole repository of political virtue in the United States—Armbrister) Something unique (see also STRANGE) may be the only one of its kind in existence (the medal is unique, for no duplicates were made) (of the world's geniuses he strikes me as being unique—Mailer) or it may stand alone because of its unusual character (the unique character of the English conquest of Britain—Malone) (they stand alone, unique, objects of supreme interest—Osborne) Something lone (see also ALONE) is not only single but also separated or isolated from others of its kind; the word often replaces single in technical or poetic context (to sit beneath a fair lone beechen tree—Keats) (the ambitious Aaron Burr, who played a lone hand against the field—Parrington) (constitutes the lone industry of the community—Amer. Guide Series: VI.) Something solitary (see also ALONE) stands by itself, either as the sole instance or as a unique thing (her world was the Church, in which she hoped that her solitary child would some day be a polished pillar—Buchan) (began to eat again fiercely, like a great strong animal, tackling the solitary meal of its day—O'Flaherty) Something separate (see also DISTINCT 1) is not only single, but disconnected from or unconnected with any of the others in question (turning over in his thoughts every separate second of their hours together—Wharton) (group consciousness . . . makes the individual think lightly of his own separate interests—Cohen) Something particular (see also SPECIAL; CIRCUMSTANTIAL; NICE 1) is the single or numerically distinct instance, member, or example of the whole or the class considered or under consideration (a special provision for a known and particular territory—Taney) (Richard . . . replied that he had an engagement at a particular hour, up to which he was her servant—Meredith) (reality is a succession of concrete and particular situations—Huxley)

Ana individual, particular, *special, especial, specific Ant accompanied; supported; conjugal single vb prefer, *choose, select, elect, opt, pick, cull Ana *take, seize, grasp, grab; accept, *receive, admit;

*decide, determine, settle singular *strange, unique, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, odd, queer, quaint, outlandish, curious

Ana *different, diverse, divergent, disparate: *exceptional: *abnormal, atypical, aberrant

Con ordinary, *common, familiar: *usual, customary, habitual sinister, baleful, malign, malefic, maleficent all mean seriously threatening, portending, or promising evil or disaster, usually imminent or already initiated evil or disaster. Sinister is the most commonly employed of these words and the widest in its range of reference. It may be applied not only to something perceptible (a sinister cloud) (a sinister look) but to something imperceptible (a sinister influence) (a sinister intention) In either case sinister often expresses a judgment based on experience or on an interpretation of outward signs and implies on the part of the observer a resulting fear or apprehension of approaching evil or of lurking dangers; thus, a cloud is describable as sinister when it has the color, shape, or general character of one that the observer believes to precede a tornado; a person's influence may be interpreted as sinister when it is judged in the light of some of its visible effects (she was about half a mile from her residence when she beheld a sinister redness arising from a ravine a little way in advance—Hardy) (some of the customers did look sinister enough—scar-faced toughs in ragged caps—Wouk) (I did not wish him to know that I had suspected him of harboring any sinister designs—Hudson) Sinister is also applied to something that works or operates so covertly, insidiously, or obliquely that it is likely to find those whose well-being it threatens off guard (a sinister disease) (a sinister policy) (the sinister power exercised . . . by the combination in keeping rivals out of the business and ruining those who already were in—Justice Holmes) Baleful carries an even stronger suggestion of menace than sinister for it implies inevitable suffering, misery, or destruction; often it imputes perniciousness, noxiousness, or hellishness to the thing so described. It is applicable to something that works openly and without indirection (this dread power . . . can be made a giant help to humanity, but science does not show us how to prevent its baleful use—Baruch) as well as to something that works occultly or obliquely (deceit contrived by art and baleful sorcery—Shak.) (culling their potent herbs and baleful drugs—Milton) (the baleful power of fanaticisms and superstitions—Edmund Wilson) (the baleful horoscope of Abdallah had predicted the downfall of Granada—Prescott) Malign (see also MALICIOUS) carries over from its earliest sense a suggestion of an inherently evil or harmful tendency or disposition, even though the term in this sense is characteristically applied to immaterial things (as appearances, aspects, forces, or influences) rather than to persons (the eyes were no longer merely luminous points; they looked into his own with a meaning, a malign significance—Bierce) (believe that lions will only kill humans under a malign human influence—Wyatt) It also carries connotations (as of boding evil or disaster) derived from its reference in astrology to the aspects or the influences of the stars (a struggle between two forces, the one beneficent, the other malign—Bryce) (the spirit of competition, which, according to Rousseau, was one of the earliest of the malign fruits of awakening intelligence—Grandgen) (dense masses of smoke hung amid the darting snakes of fire, and a red malign light was on the neighboring leafage—Meredith) and occasionally suggests a force or power contributory to boded disaster (the prickly topic of symbolism, with its malign power to set the wise by the ears—Montague) Malefic and maleficent carry a stronger suggestion of balefulness than does malign, for both regularly imply not only a tendency toward but an active force productive of evil or disaster; thus, a malign influence bodes disaster; a malefic or maleficent influence is putting the threat of disaster into effect (the malefic arts of sorcery, witchcraft, and diabolism) (conjurations for the expulsion of malefic demons—Norman Douglas) (Saturn . . . represents malefic force. Cold, hostile, merciless . . . he blights all that he gazes on—Evangeline Adams) (like everything that has outlived its usefulness nationalism has changed from a beneficent into a maleficent force—C. K. Streit) (at times his maleficent power burst open the peak, sent fire through the jagged holes, and destroyed villages—Diez de Medina) Ana *ominous, portentous, fateful, unpropitious, insidious: *secret, covert, furtive, underhand, underhanded: *malicious, malignant, malevolent, spiteful sink vb *fall, drop, slump, subside Ana *droop, sag, flag, wilt: submerge, immerse, *dip: ebb, *abate, wane: disappear, *vanish sinuous *winding, flexuous, serpentine, tortuous Ana circuitous, roundabout, *indirect: *crooked, devious sire vb beget, get, procreate, *generate, engender, breed, propagate, reproduce site n *place, position, location, situation, spot, station Ana *area, tract, region, zone: *field, territory, province: section, sector (see PART): *locality, district situation 1 *place, position, location, site, spot, station Ana *area, region, tract, zone: section, sector (see PART): *locality, district, vicinity, neighborhood 2 *state, condition, mode, posture, status Ana *junction, pass, crisis, exigency, emergency: *predicament, plight, quandary, dilemma: case, *instance size n Size, dimensions, area, extent, magnitude, volume are here compared primarily as terms meaning the amount of space occupied or sometimes of time or energy used by a thing and determinable by measuring. Size usually refers to things having length, width, and depth or height; it need not imply accurate mathematical measurements but may suggest a mere estimate of these <the size of this box is 10 inches long, 8 inches wide, and 5 inches deep> <these trees are not the right size> <what is the size of the room?> <that exceptional mushroom, skull-like in its proportions and bold in size—Mailer> Size is also referable to things which cannot be measured in themselves, but can be computed in terms of the number of individuals which comprise them or the amount of space occupied by those individuals <the mere complexity and size of a modern state is against the identification of the man with the citizen—Dickinson> Since dimension means measurement in a single direction (as the line of length, or breadth, or depth) the plural dimensions, used collectively, is a close synonym of size; in contrast, however, it usually implies accurate measurements that are known or specified <the window frames must be exactly alike in dimensions> <the dimensions of the universe are not calculable> <the dimensions of the lot are 75 by 100 feet> <no reliable calipers exist long enough to stretch into the next century and measure the dimensions of greatness—Fadiman> Area is referable only to things measurable in the two dimensions length and breadth. It is used of plane figures or of plane surfaces (as the ground, a floor, or an arena) and is computed in square measure <the estate is 200 acres in area> <the forest fire covered an area of ten square miles> <the area of a rectangle is computed by multiplying its length by its breadth> <the major areas of the world are in the throes of revolutionary social change—Geismar> Extent is referable chiefly to things that are measured in one dimension; it may be the length or the breadth, but it is usually thought of as the length <the driveway's extent is 100 feet> <the wings of the airplane are 75 feet in extent> However it is often used as though it were the equivalent of area <the basement of St. Katherine's Dock House is vast in extent and confusing in its plan—Conrad> <the reports . . . constantly express amazement at the extent and severity of Russian attacks and counterattacks—Shirer> The word is also referable to measured time or to space measured in terms of time; thus, the duration of a thing is the extent of its existence <few lives reach the extent of one hundred years> <Germany was . . . a nine days' march from north to south, and of incalculable extent from west to east—Buchan> Magnitude, largely a mathematical and technical term, may be used in reference to size or two-dimensional extent  It may be used also in reference to something measurable whose exact quantity, extent, or degree may be expressed in mathematical figures; thus, the magnitude of a star is indicated by a number that expresses its relative brightness <an alpha particle bearing a positive charge equal in magnitude to twice the electron charge—Darrow> <the magnitude of the structure as a whole and the massive nature of its details are never obtrusive—O. S. Nock> Volume (see also BULK) is also a technical term; it is used in reference to something that can be measured or considered in terms of cubic measurements; thus, the volume of a solid cylinder is equal to the cubic measure of air it displaces, and that of a hollow one, to the cubic measure of its capacity; two objects that are equal in volume may differ greatly in weight; when a thing expands, it increases in volume <we could readily store a million times as many stars in the present volume of the system—B. J. Bok> <you may say that the waves . . . are not like real waves; but they move, they have force and volume—Binyon> Ana amplitude, *expanse, spread, stretch: *bulk, mass, volume skedaddle *scuttle, scurry, scamper, sprint Ana flee, fly, *escape, decamp: retreat, *recede: withdraw, retire (see GO) skeleton *structure, anatomy, framework skepticism *uncertainty, doubt, dubiety, mistrust sketch n 1 outline, diagram, delineation, draft, tracing, plot, blueprint (see under SKETCH vb) Ana design, plot, *plan, scheme, project: *chart, map 2 précis, aperçu, *compendium, syllabus, digest, pandect, survey sketch vb Sketch, outline, diagram, delineate, draft, trace, plot, blueprint are comparable when they mean to present or to represent something by or as if by drawing its lines or its features. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are observable in the corresponding nouns sketch, outline, diagram, delineation, draft, tracing, plot, blueprint. Sketch may imply a drawing, a painting, a model, or a verbal presentation (as in a description or exposition) of the main lines, features, or points with the result that a clear, often a vivid, but not a detailed impression or conception of the whole is given <then, in a calm historian's tone, he proceeded to sketch . . . some pictures of the corruption which was rife abroad—Joyce> <this lecture is a humble attempt to sketch out a metaphysics of natural science—Inge>  <in some of Miss Jewett's earlier books . . . one can find first sketches, first impressions, which later crystallized into almost flawless examples of literary art—Cather> Outline (compare OUTLINE n 1) differs from sketch in suggesting emphasis upon the contours of a thing that is represented or the main points of a thing expounded and in implying more or less inattention to the details which fill up, amplify, or particularize; the term therefore usually implies a more rigid selection and greater economy in treatment and less consideration for qualities which give pleasure than sketch implies and, often, suggests a presentation of a thing as a simplified whole <outlining a plan for a future investigation—Conant> <the detailed study of history should be supplemented by brilliant outlines, even if they contained questionable generalizations—Russell> <the gist of these books was preserved in a series of small outlines—Southern> Diagram implies presentation by means of a graphic design (as a mechanical drawing, a pattern showing arrangement and distribution of parts, or a chart, map, or graph) of something which requires explanation rather than representation or portrayal <diagram the nervous system> <he diagrammed his route on the tablecloth—Cather> <spread out on the table a number of maps and aerial photographs that diagrammed what the Authority is up to—Robert Rice> <there was little or no desire to amend the comprehensive diagram of . . . constitutional theory—Times Lit. Sup.> Delineate and delineation come close to describe and description and depict and depiction. Though they carry a strong implication of drawing a thing so as to show its lines or features with great distinctness, they tend to stress amplifying details and therefore often imply greater fullness or richness in treatment than the preceding words <his brush did its work with a steady and sure stroke that indicated command of his materials. He could delineate whatever he elected with technical skill—Jeffries> <the cult of beauty and the delineation of ugliness are not in natural opposition—Pound> <he had a capacity for delineating emotions he had never felt—Edman> Draft, especially as a verb, implies accurate drawing to scale, especially of an architect's plan for a building to be constructed or of a design (as for a ship, a machine, or an engine) <young architects usually spend their first years in drafting plans rather than in designing buildings> The term may apply to the drawing up of a preliminary statement which when corrected, polished, and copied will serve as a final statement <draft me a proper letter to send him—Shaw> <I have three or four drafts of each essay or chapter that I have written, and . . . all of them run to about twice the length of the finished piece—Geismar> <the legislature did pass a measure . . . yet the controls were suggested—some insist drafted—by the industry itself—Armbrister> Trace and tracing in their perhaps most common use refer to redrawing an existent design by following its lines as seen through a superimposed transparent sheet, but they can also apply when a precise and detailed pattern is to be formed by or as if by drawing. The terms are more likely to suggest accuracy in or as if in following or sometimes shakiness resulting from or as if from following a continuous line than they are to imply anything about the qualities of what is to be traced <trace an outline to be colored with crayons> <make a tracing of a diagram> <continuous blood pressure tracings have been recorded—Armstrong> <time was tracing purple reminders on his nose and cheeks—Costain> <Kurler swore, a palsied, tottering sound, and traced his name, a shaking, wandering line—Lowell> <with my eyes I traced the line of the horizon, thin and fine, straight around till I was come back to where I'd started from—Millay> <his fumbling brain had traced the braille of an enduring and bitter truth—Hervey> Plot is often used in place of diagram or draft or, less often, sketch when a map, chart, or graph rather than a design is implied; distinctively it throws emphasis upon the indicating of specific locations (as points, areas, sections, or objectives) so that their relation to each other or the whole is clear; thus, one who diagrammatically represents the condition of business during a given year by means of a graph is said to plot a graph or to make a plot of the curve of business activity <plot the course of a hurricane> <plot . . . the exact position of the ship—Heaton> Blueprint, from its common application to a photograph in white lines on blue paper of a draftsman's mechanical drawing or of an architect's plan, in extended use implies precise and detailed sketching or delineation; it suggests not the act of drawing or drawing up but the effect produced by what is drawn or drawn up <people engaged in the amusing and innocuous pastime of blueprinting a new social order—The Commonwealth> <the political leaders of the two countries are guided by the same political blueprints—Bevan> Ana design, plot, plan, scheme, project (see under PLAN n): chart, map, graph (see under CHART n) skewbald *variegated, parti-colored, motley, checkered, checked, pied, piebald, dappled, freaked skid vb *slide, slip, glide, glissade, slither, coast, toboggan skill *art, cunning, craft, artifice Ana proficiency, adeptness, expertness (see corresponding adjectives at PROFICIENT): efficiency, effectiveness (see corresponding adjectives at EFFECTIVE): *readiness, facility, dexterity, ease skilled skillful, *proficient, adept, expert, masterly Ana apt, ready, *quick, prompt: practiced, exercised, drilled (see PRACTICE vb): competent, qualified, *able, capable Ant unskilled skillful *proficient, adept, expert, skilled, masterly Ana *dexterous, adroit, deft: efficient, *effective: *conversant, versed Ant unskillful —Con *awkward, clumsy, inept, maladroit, gauche skim 1 float, *fly, dart, scud, shoot, sail 2 *brush, graze, glance, shave Ana *slide, glide, slip, slither: float, scud, shoot, sail, dart, *fly: *flit, hover skimpy scrimpy, exiguous, *meager, scanty, scant, spare, sparse skin n Skin, hide, pelt, rind, bark, peel can all denote an outer removable coat which adheres to and protects the inner tissues of a body or organism. Skin, the most general term, applies especially to the outer covering of animals, whether it is as delicate as the one which covers the human body or as tough as the one which covers a rhinoceros; it is used also of the outer coverings of various fruits, plants, and seeds especially when they are thin and tight <the skin of an apple> <the skin of an almond> Skin applies to this integument whether it covers the living organism or has been stripped from it. Hide applies to the tough skin of large animals (as the rhinoceros or the horse); in commercial use it is applied specifically to the raw or undressed skins of cattle, horses, and other large animals, sometimes in distinction from those of calves, sheep, and goats, which are commonly described merely as skins. Pelt is applied chiefly to the skin of an animal that is covered with hair, fur, or wool; in commerce it usually denotes an undressed skin of any of these animals and especially of a furred animal. It is applied also to the skin of a sheep or goat stripped of wool or hair and ready for tanning. Rind applies chiefly to the thick, tough, and often inelastic outer layer which covers certain fruits (as oranges and melons) or the stems and roots of some woody perennial plants (then usually called bark). The hardened skin on smoked meats (as bacon) and the hardened crust of molded cheeses are also called rinds. A skin or rind of a fruit or a portion of it that is or may be stripped free is called peel <slip on a banana peel> <candied orange peel> skin vb Skin, decorticate, peel, pare, flay can mean to divest something of its skin or thin outer covering. Skin is the most general of these terms, being applicable to any animal as well as to any plant or plant part that is covered by or as if by a skin <skin calves slaughtered for the market> <do not skin, but wash the eggplants in iced water—Dione Lucas> <skin the bark off a birch tree> Decorticate is applicable when an outer layer (as of bark, fiber, or husk) is to be removed by stripping <obviated the necessity of fully decorticating the canna stalks—Edward Samuel> <the decorticated seeds are crushed and pressed—Riegel> Peel and pare are frequently interchanged but distinctively peel may imply that the skin or outer covering can be removed by stripping or by pulling off while pare tends to be used when it requires to be cut off, usually with some of the adjoining substance; thus, freshly boiled potatoes can be easily peeled, but uncooked ones must be either scraped or pared; one speaks usually of peeling an orange because its rind may be stripped by the hand; one speaks usually of paring an apple since the skin is not easily detached from the flesh; one peels a hard-boiled egg. But pare may also be used of anything that is cut close and so is applicable to many things which do not have a skin or rind (<pared his toenails) (<pare expenses to a minimum) Flay tends to be applied largely to persons often in threats or in descriptions of torture or of cruel punishment (as scourging) (<he said he would flay the man alive if he again caught him prowling around) (<they killed and flayed a number of slaves and captives—Coon) (<campaign pledge to ban the medieval practice of flaying unruly convicts—Time) (<the son and his mother flay one another with their words—Fowlie)

skinny scrawny, rawboned, angular, gaunt, lank, lanky, *lean, spare

Ant fleshy

skip vb Skip, bound, hop, curvet, lope, lollop, ricochet can all mean to move or advance with successive springs or leaps. The first three words are commonly referable to persons or animals but they may be used in reference to inanimate things. Skip suggests quick, light, graceful movement and a continuous alternation of touching a surface and springing clear of it; often also when referred to living creatures it connotes sportiveness or excess of animal spirits (<wanton as a child, skipping—Shak.) (<small yachts skipped here and there—Villiers) Bound (see also JUMP) implies longer and more vigorous springs than skip and carries a stronger suggestion of elasticity and buoyancy of spirit (<like a roe I bounded o'er the mountains—Wordsworth) (<I saw her bounding down the rocky slope like some wild, agile creature—Hudson) (<the ball struck the earth and bounded across the field) Hop suggests a less flowing or springy movement than the two preceding words; at times it connotes jerkiness and lack of dignity in movement. It implies a succession of small quick leaps (as of birds, toads, or grasshoppers) (<he does not waltz, he hops) and in reference to children it suggests a jumping on one foot only (<chalked out a hop-scotch game and began to hop around its squares—Dorothy Canfield) Curvet may suggest a leap of a horse in which he raises both forelegs at once and as they are falling lifts both hind legs so that for an instant all his legs clear the surface, or in more general application it may imply frisking and gamboling or flightiness (<would you sell or slay your horse for bounding and curvetting in his course . . . ?—Cowper) (<a gang of merry roistering devils, frisking and curvetting on a flat rock—Irving) Lope evokes a picture of the long easy bounds of a lithe and agile animal (as a wolf or fox) on the run (<the long, loping stride of a mountaineer) (<he progressed at an uneven pace, loping forward almost recklessly for many yards . . . then pausing fearfully for seconds—Mailer) (<when it came time to feed them, he would . . . bang on the bottom of a tin pan; the fat cats would come loping up, like leopards, from all corners of the saloon—Joseph Mitchell) Lollop, on the other hand, implies a clumsy, irregular bounding that suggests awkwardness or heaviness of movement (<its doors opened; out poured, lolloped, flopped a villainous crew, mostly foxhounds too old or too young—Punch) (<the other buffalo also extricated itself from the slime and lolloped away—George Orwell)

Ricochet is referable almost exclusively to things which are thrown, shot, or cast. It suggests a skipping caused by a series of glancing rebounds after the object first strikes a surface (<the smaller the angle, under which a shot is made to ricochet, the longer it will preserve its force and have effect—Spearman) (<fretting as her husband ricocheted from job to job—E. W. Pike) (<our minds ricochet from the race problem to the housing problem, from the problem of foreign trade to the problem of displaced persons—C. W. Ferguson)

skirmish n *encounter, brush

Ana *contest, conflict, combat, fight, affray, fray; engagement, action, *battle skit *libel, squib, lampoon, pasquinade skulk *lurk, couch, slink, sneak

Ana secrete, *hide, conceal

Con emerge, *appear, loom skyline profile, contour, *outline, silhouette slack adj 1 lax, remiss, *negligent, neglectful

Ana *lazy, indolent, slothful, fainant: *indifferent, unconcerned, detached, aloof; sluggish, *lethargic

Con diligent, sedulous, industrious, *busy, assiduous: expeditious, quick, *fast

2 relaxed, *loose, lax

Ana *weak, feeble, infirm: inert, supine, passive, *inactive: *slow, leisurely, laggard

Con *tight, taut, tense: *steady, constant, uniform, even, equable: *firm, hard slacken *delay, retard, slow, detain

Ana abate, reduce, lessen, *decrease: *restrain, curb, check, inhibit: *moderate, temper, qualify

Ant quicken

slander n calumny, *detraction, backbiting, scandal

Ana defamation, vilification, aspersion, traducing (see corresponding verbs at MALIGN): *abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility slander vb defame, libel, calumniate, *malign, traduce, asperse, vilify

Ana *decry, depreciate, detract, derogate, disparage, belittle: *injure, damage, hurt: *attack, assail slang *dialect, vernacular, patois, lingo, jargon, cant, argot slant vb Slant, slope, incline, lean are comparable when they mean to diverge or cause to diverge from a vertical or horizontal line. Slant carries the sharpest and clearest implication of such divergence of any of these terms but it carries no explicit implication of how great or how little the divergence is; consequently it is accepted generally as the comprehensive term implying a noticeable physical divergence (<the Tibetans are of Mongol race, but their eyes slant less than those of the Japanese or Chinese—Harrer) (<lines of gray, plunging tropic rain slanted across the whole world—Beebe) (<one side of his body seemed to slant towards the other, he settled so much more heavily upon one foot—M. E. Freeman) Slope is often used interchangeably with slant, but it is especially likely to be chosen when the reference is to a surface or a side of an elevation (as a hill or a roof) and there is an intent to suggest a gradual divergence from a vertical or horizontal line; thus, "the ground slopes to the left" usually suggests a lack of steepness; "a sloping roof," unless qualified by such adverbs as sharply or steeply, usually implies a gradual slant (<the road slopes downward from this point) (<enjoyed their wide sloping lawns with the sprinklers idly turning—Auchincloss) (<wooded valleys and rolling hills slope away to the horizon—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Incline (see also INCLINE 2) carries a stronger implication of bending or tipping or of being bent or tipped; it is therefore especially appropriate not only when human or similar agency is implied but when what is bent or tipped is an immaterial thing (as one's will, one's thoughts, or one's intentions) (just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined—Pope) (inclined his head to the right) (the garden terraces incline to the south) (there is another theory to which the late Professor Freeman inclined (if so sturdy a figure could be said to incline)—Quiller-Couch) Lean differs from incline in carrying either a stronger implication of a definite directing of the inclination by a human agent or by some shaping or molding force (the old man leaned the mast . . . against the wall—Hemingway) (olive trees leaning from the hillsides, twisted by the sun—Davenport) (without looking up at him she leaned towards him—Marsh) or of a resting or an intent to rest either literally or figuratively against a support (both items lean heavily on nostalgia, both bring happy memories of an era unfortunately ended—Cerf) (the others treated me gingerly, fearing to be classed as Bolsheviks by association. Naturally, I leaned toward those who leaned towards me—Dent)

Ana veer, *swerve, deviate, diverge slant n *point of view, viewpoint, standpoint, angle

Ana attitude, *position, stand: bias, prejudice, *predilection slap vb *strike, hit, smite, punch, slug, slog, swat, clout, cuff, box slash vb slit, *cut, hew, chop, carve

Ana rive, rend, cleave, split (see TEAR): penetrate, pierce, *enter slatternly, dowdy, frowzy, blowsy can all mean deficient in neatness, freshness, or smartness, especially in dress or appearance. Slatternly stresses notions of slovenliness, unkemptness, and sordidness (a small, slatternly looking craft, her hull and spars a dingy black, rigging all slack and bleached nearly white, and everything denoting an ill state of affairs aboard—Melville) (lived with them, in the slatternly apartment among the unwashed dishes in the sink and on the table, the odor of stale tobacco smoke, the dirty shirts and underwear piled in corners—Warren) Dowdy is likely to imply a complete lack of taste typically marked by a blend of something untidy, drab, or tawdry (her shoes were bought a long time ago and have no relation to the dress, and the belt of her dress has become untied and is hanging down. She looks clean and dowdy—Hellman) (surely . . . it was old-fashioned, dowdy, savored of moth-eaten furs, bugles, cameos and black-edged notepaper, to go ferreting into people's pasts?—Woolf) (so dreadfully dowdy that she reminded one of a badly bound hymnbook—Wilde) Frowzy suggests a lazy lack of neatness, order, and cleanliness (a dumpy, frowzy woman, clad in old dress and apron—Coutts) (theater packed, and just as dirty and frowzy as when I first entered it in the year 1903—Bennett) but frowzy also may apply to a natural and not unwholesome disorder (white spruce, and the frowzy, slender jack pine thrive on the high land—Rowlands) (a live oak, frowzy with dry Resurrection ferns that the first rain startles to green life—M. S. Douglas) or it may suggest drab misery and squalor as an inevitable result of circumstances (a frowzy feeling, a mean, sleepy, stupid, fed-up, incomplete feeling—Jonas) (one may see women like this in poor districts . . . not quite anxious, not quite starved, but by circumstances reduced to a daily diet of frowzy economy—Swinnerton) (if a fully fed, presentably clothed, decently housed, fairly literate and cultivated and gently mannered family is not better than a half-starved, ragged, frowzy, overcrowded one, there is no meaning in words—Shaw) Blowsy implies dishevelment or disorder (her hair, so untidy, so blowsy—Austen) to which is often added a notion of crudity or coarseness or grossness (that blowsy hoyden of an America that existed when Grant was accounted a statesman and Longfellow an epic poet—Sinclair Lewis) (the pleasant but plebeian scent of Bouncing Bet, that somewhat blowsy pink of old English gardens—Peattie)

Ana slovenly, unkempt, disheveled, sloppy, *slipshod

Con *neat, tidy, trim, spick-and-span slaughter n *massacre, butchery, carnage, pogrom slavery *servitude, bondage slavish servile, menial, *subservient, obsequious

Ana *mean, abject, ignoble, sordid: *tame, subdued, submissive: *miserable, wretched slay *kill, murder, assassinate, dispatch, execute sleazy *limp, flimsy, floppy, flaccid, flabby

Ana *thin, tenuous, slight: *loose, slack sleek, slick, glossy, velvety, silken, silky, satiny are comparable when they mean having a smooth bright surface or appearance. Sleek and slick are sometimes interchangeable with this meaning (dark slick leaves—Langley) (the sleek blue plums—Wylie) but more often sleek connotes a smoothness or brightness that is the result of close attention or is an indication, especially when the reference is to a person or animal, of being in excellent physical condition (let me have men about me that are fat: sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights—Shak.) (a beautiful panther . . . so bright of eye, so sleek of coat—Thackeray) (the metal felt sleek and warm to his touch—Cloete) (a child's mind thrills at the touch of fur because it is sleek—Montague) and it may also suggest a smoothness of finish resulting from overattention to or overrefinement in dress and appearance (curse me the sleek lords with their plumes and spurs—Lindsay) (something sleek about him, something that suggested a well-bred dog—Anderson) (the poise, assurance, and sophistication of all these sleek faces—Wolfe) Slick, by contrast, is more likely to apply when the intent is to suggest such an extreme of smoothness as to provide an unsafe or slippery surface (the grass was slick from the night's dew, and the men slipped frequently—Mailer) In extended use slick is less likely than sleek to suggest desirable qualities and often carries more than a hint of contempt (as much a slick-surfaced commercial product as a serious piece of literary art—Gurko) (new hotels . . . so slick and shiny—Basso) (everything was to be slick, which was Marvin's term of approbation; but not too slick, which was his abomination—Mary Austin) Glossy implies a surface that is exceedingly smooth and shining, whether by nature or by art (the glossy leaves of the beech tree) (downy peaches and the glossy plum—Dryden) (glossy as black rocks on a sunny day cased in ice—Dorothy Wordsworth) Velvety implies the extreme softness associated with the surface or appearance of velvet. The word is often used of things as they appeal to the sense of touch or of sight or of both (a velvety skin) (a velvety flower) (a land of velvety meadows and lush gardens—Mumford) (the velvety flanks of the cattle—Glasgow) but it is also applicable to sounds that caress the ear or to tastes or odors that are delightfully bland (even her high notes are velvety) (the boy reading in his queer, velvety bass voice—Galsworthy) Silken implies the smoothness and luster as well as the softness of silk (silken hair) (to what green altar . . . lead'st thou that heifer lowing at the skies, and all her silken flanks with garlands dressed—Keats) (the lazy movement of their bodies beneath their silken doeskins—O'Meara) The term is used in reference both to things that appeal to other senses than those of touch or sight and to immaterial

terial things that are softly soothing and pleasant to the spirit or mind (a silken voice) (the silken sonority of the strings—Virgil Thomson) (the silken words) Silky is sometimes used in place of silken (fingers, silky and soft—Watts-Dunton) (blue, silky October days—Glover) (his eyes between his silky lashes gone soft—Boyle) but when the reference is to persons or their voices, manners, or productions it, more often than silken, suggests an ingratiating or a specious quality (put his talent for writing silky satire to most profitable unliterary uses—Derwent May) (Tchaikovsky's Meditation was no silky simpler of tone, but something that glowed inside—Cassidy) (there have been many able varmints since, but none quite as silky or loathsome—Perelman) Satiny applies to what is not only soft but smooth and shining (the satiny petals of a flower) (beautiful women with satiny backs were moving through the crowd—Wolfe)

Ana *bright, lustrous, brilliant: smooth, even (see LEVEL)

sleep vb Sleep, slumber, drowse, doze, nap, catnap, snooze mean to take rest by a suspension of consciousness. Sleep, the usual term, implies ordinarily the periodical repose of this sort in which men and animals recuperate their powers after activity, but it may imply such repose indulged in temporarily or at odd times (the young baby sleeps most of the time) (he sleeps fitfully) (they slept soundly all night) (he slept away his fatigue) (sleep off the effects of an opiate) (doped to make him sleep away the hours of travel—Ervine) Sleep can also refer to a condition (as dormancy, indolence, or death) felt to resemble true sleep (the restless enmity of the Angevin never slept—Freeman) (beneath those rugged elms . . . the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep—Gray) Slumber implies sleeping but it has acquired connotations that usually distinguish it from sleep. When applied to persons it usually suggests a sleeping quietly and easily (covered the sleeper with a blanket and the girl slumbered peacefully to Buffalo—LaCossitt) (hush, my dear, lie still and slumber! holy angels guard thy bed!—Watts) In extended use it is likely to connote the repose of death and inactivity and suggest prolonged heavy sleep (that I may slumber in eternal sleep—Shak.) (this New England of ours slumbered from the dawn of creation until the beginning of the seventeenth century—Coolidge) Drowse suggests a dull heavy condition of body and mind when one is falling asleep or is half asleep (sit drowsing by the fire) (it is idle to pretend that a man lectures as well if half his audience are drowsing—Whitehead) In extension it implies a sluggishness that makes something move or act slowly (the villages that once drowsed in the sun about the placid center squares—Theodore White) Doze carries somewhat the same implications as drowse but the term often suggests a falling asleep, unintentionally or naturally, and does not emphasize a previous drowsy condition; often it suggests a falling asleep for a brief period or a drifting in and out of sleep, and it may imply a state of bewilderment when suddenly awakened (he had just dozed off when the explosion occurred) (the sun drowsing on crooked streets, old men dozing in the parks—Green Peyton) (I have been dozing over a stupid book—Sheridan) (she dozed off for a moment or two, and then she got up and began . . . washing her hands—Gouge) Nap basically implies a taking of a short light sleep, especially in the daytime; in extended use it commonly implies an opposition to watch or be on the alert and does not necessarily suggest the taking of a nap but merely a relaxation of care or activity (as in preventing, protecting, or detecting) (while I nodded, nearly napping—Poe) (the Tory party is organized now; they will not catch us napping again—Dis- raeli) Catnap implies a frequent taking of brief refreshing naps, usually at odd intervals fitted between one's periods of activity (stays in top form by catnapping whenever he has a spare moment—Time) Snooze, a somewhat casual or slangy term, may be used in place of nap and others of the preceding terms but without any emphasis on their distinctive or figurative connotations (snooze by the fire) (the smaller, quieter resorts, where snoozing in a deck chair on the beach, salon orchestras and ornamental gardens are emphasized—Kenneth Young)

Ana rest, repose, relax (see corresponding nouns at REST) sleepy, drowsy, somnolent, slumberous mean affected by a desire to sleep or inducing such a desire. Sleepy, the ordinary term of this group, applies not only to persons but to things that suggest a resemblance to persons who show a readiness to fall asleep (away, you rogue, away! I am sleepy—Shak.) (a sleepy town) (the quiet, sleepy railroad station—Anderson) The term also applies to conditions or to things which incline one to sleep or to dozing or dreaming (the yellowhammer trills his sleepy song in the noonday heat—L. P. Smith) Drowsy differs from sleepy in carrying a stronger implication of the heaviness or loginess associated with sleepiness than of the actual need of rest (become drowsy after a heavy dinner) (when the sun should burn through the leaves . . . Mrs. Barkley would grow drowsy . . . and go off to take a nap—Deland) When applied to things rather than to persons, drowsy connotes more obviously than sleepy a soporific power (not poppy, nor mandragora, nor all the drowsy syrups of the world, shall ever medicine thee to that sweet sleep which thou owedst yesterday—Shak.) (drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds—Gray) (the leisurely swishing of the water to leeward was like a drowsy comment on her progress—Conrad) Somnolent may be used in place of drowsy; usually, however, it connotes the sluggishness or inertness characteristic of one who is sleepy or drowsy or the capacity for inducing this rather than the actual impulse to sleep or doze (a somnolent want of interest—De Quincey) (Eustacia waited, her somnolent manner covering her inner heat and agitation—Hardy) (the somnolent pages of a three-volume novel) Slumberous is often used in the sense of sleepy or drowsy or somnolent; occasionally it carries a distinctive connotation in which it usually suggests quiescence or the repose of latent powers (I . . . heard the mountain's slumberous voice—Shelley) (Eustacia's manner was as a rule of a slumberous sort, her passions being of the massive rather than the vivacious kind—Hardy)

Ana *lethargic, sluggish, comatose slender *thin, slim, slight, tenuous, rare

Ana *lean, spare, lanky, skinny; flimsy, flaccid, flabby, *limp: trivial, trifling, *petty, paltry, puny slick adj 1 *sleek, glossy, velvety, silken, satiny, silky

Ana finished, *consummate: flawless, *impeccable, faultless: shallow, *superficial

2 *fulsome, oily, unctuous, oleaginous, soapy

Ana bland, smooth, diplomatic, politic, *suave, urbane: specious, *plausible slide vb Slide, slip, glide, skid, glissade, slither, coast, toboggan can mean to move along easily and smoothly over or as if over a surface. Slide usually implies accelerating motion and continuous contact with a smooth and slippery surface; it is used not only in reference to persons and to moving things (as vehicles) (boys like to slide down banisters) (the fool slides o'er the ice that you should break—Shak.) (when it's quiet you can slide in there in a skiff—Gardner) but also, especially in extended use, with reference to things which pass rapidly before one because of one's own swift and easy motion <house after house slid by as we neared the city> or which move easily, unobtrusively, or gradually from one place or condition to another <prose that slides into poetry> <shadows slid along the huge wooden tables—Sinclair Lewis> <slide one's hand into another's pocket> <it was inevitable that existentialism should slide out of men's minds—Cousins> Slip carries a stronger implication than slide of a frictionless and unobstructed surface but a weaker suggestion of continued contact; it typically suggests involuntary rather than voluntary sliding, often definitely implying a loss of footing and a fall <slip on the ice> <he had hurt his elbow through dropping his stick and slipping downstairs—Bennett> <half-slipped, half-slid down toward the wide level ribbon that marked the frozen Schuylkill—Mason> When only swift, easy motion is implied, slip heightens the emphasis upon quietness, stealth, or skillfulness <while we were talking, he slipped from the house> Things are said to slip that pass quickly or without notice (as from one's grasp, one's control, one's memory, or one's observation) <the book slipped from her feeble hands> <the details have slipped from his mind> <it leaves us without our being aware that it is slipping away—J. M. Brown>  or as a result of one's negligence or inattention <the bus slipped by while they were engrossed in conversation> <the tool slipped and cut his hand> <he slips into occasional inaccuracies—Anthony Boucher> Glide comes closer to slide than to slip in its stress upon such continued smooth, easy, usually silent motion as is characteristic of some dances, but it may or may not imply unintermittent contact with a surface and, apart from its context, it seldom carries any suggestion of danger <they glide, like phantoms, into the wide hall—Keats> <even the swallows, the restless swallows, glided in an effortless way through the busy air—Jefferies> <two monsterlike cameras on trucks that glided backwards and forwards—Edmund Wilson> <I glide over these interesting items to dwell at some length on two men, now dead—Henry Miller> Often, like slide and, to a lesser extent, slip, glide is used in reference to things that apparently move because the observer is moving <the landward marks have failed, the fogbank glides unguessed—Kipling> <soft fell the splash of the oars . . . softly the banks glided by—Meredith> Skid is employed especially in regard to wheeled vehicles the tires of which on an icy, wet, or dusty road fail to grip the roadway, thereby causing the wheels to slide without rotating and the vehicle to go out of control <the car skidded on the icy patch and ran into a telegraph pole> In extended use skid, like slip, usually implies an element of danger or recklessness or a lack of complete control or grasp <he ran fast, occasionally skidding on an icy patch, but always quickly recovering his balance>  <his timid, tired voice skidding into a hoarse whisper—Capote> Glissade, basically a mountaineering term implying a long slide down a snow-covered slope, carries the major implications of both slide and glide but stresses skillful technique and control <the danger of glissading, for inexperienced persons, is that they may glissade in the wrong place—Conway> <Wilkins and I glissaded down the long snow slopes, and our porters . . . came sliding and tumbling after—Hillary> In extended reference to things glissade tends to lose its implication of skill and differs little from slide, slip, or glide <rock fragments are streaming or glissading down from above—C. A. Cotton> <you will really feel the buoyancy of the craft as it glissades over the Atlantic swell—The Motor> Slither typically implies a sliding down or along a rocky, pebbly, or other rough surface with noise and clatter <the rest [of the tile] bounced on the roof and then slithered down it and off it—Masefield> <the African Queen was slithering and grating over the mud and the tree roots—Forester> or it may suggest a gliding, sliding, sometimes undulating motion suggestive of a snake's movement < crawling through walls and slithering along the ground—de Kruif>   Both coast and toboggan basically imply a downward movement (as of a sled or toboggan) on a smooth or slippery course under the influence of gravity and thereby come close to slide and glide <coasted his car down the long hill to the village> <as Boylston Place ran downhill, it afforded in winter an irresistible chance for coasting, that is, for tobogganing with single or even with double or longer sleds—Santayana> But they differ in their extended use, for coast usually stresses movement in the absence of continuously applied force (as of momentum or gravity) <to coast from Earth to the moon . . . we must achieve a velocity of 25,000 mph—A. C. Clarke> <swallows were coasting in and out the smashed mill roof—Bartlett> and often suggests an easy drifting (the country . . . seems in a mood to coast along—U.S. News and World Report) while toboggan is likely to stress a building up of momentum and a resulting wild speed in a usually uncontrollable downward movement <three depth charges, each weighing 400 pounds, broke loose and tobogganed wildly on the main deck—Bigart> <could it be possible that man, who fondly called himself Homo sapiens, was tobogganing into another self-destructive war while the wounds of the last were still throbbing?—Pinckney> <the Chinese dollar, which, amid all the speculating, had been tobogganing steadily—Vanya Oakes> slight adj tenuous, rare, *thin, slender, slim

Ana *imperceptible, imperponderable, impalpable, intangible, insensible, inappreciable: trifling, trivial, puny, *petty, paltry: minute, diminutive, wee, little, *small slight vb *neglect, ignore, overlook, disregard, omit, forget

Ana scorn, disdain, contemn, *despise: flout, *scoff slighting *derogatory, depreciatory, depreciative, disparaging, pejorative

Ana contemptuous, disdainful, scornful, spiteful (see corresponding nouns under DESPISE vb)

slim *thin, slender, slight, tenuous, rare

Ana *lean, spare, skinny, scrawny: *meager, exiguous, scant, scanty: lithe, lithesome, lissome (see SUPPLE)

Ant chubby (of persons)

sling vb hurl, fling, pitch, toss, *throw, cast

Ana heave, hoist, *lift, raise: impel, drive (see MOVE): propel, shove, thrust, *push sling vb *hang, suspend, dangle slink *lurk, skulk, sneak slip vb *slide, glide, skid, glissade, slither, coast, toboggan slip n 1 *wharf, dock, pier, quay, berth, jetty, levee

2 lapse, *error, mistake, blunder, faux pas, bull, howler, boner

Ana accident, *chance: inadvertence, carelessness, heedlessness (see corresponding adjectives at CARELESS): *fault, failing, foible, frailty, vice slipshod adj Slipshod, slovenly, unkempt, disheveled, sloppy are comparable when applied to persons and their appearance or to their mental and manual processes, performances, or products, and mean manifesting conspicuous negligence or carelessness. Slipshod implies an easygoing tolerance of details that are inaccurate, incongruous, or lacking in precision, or careless indifference to the niceties of technique or to qualities that make for perfection (as thoroughness, soundness, and fastidiousness)    <was at first a slipshod observer . . . he had a positive distaste for exactitude—Peattie> <had the conscientious craftsman's contempt for slipshod work—Spaeth> Slovenly, a stronger term than slipshod, implies laziness and disorderliness which is evident throughout and is not merely a matter of detail. The term may be used of a person or his appearance and imply diametrical opposition to neat or tidy  <his person showed marks of habitual neglect; his dress was slovenly—George Eliot> <the beatnik is slovenly—to strike a pose against the middle class you must roil their compulsion to be neat—Mailer> or it may be applied to processes, technique, or workmanship without significant change in value <slovenly thinking> <the slovenly manner in which the dinner was served—Conrad>  Unkempt is applied usually to something that requires to be kept in order if a favorable impression is to be produced. It implies extreme negligence amounting to neglect <unkempt hair> <an unkempt garden> <add to this unkempt, untended, this grammatically anarchical Russian tongue the jargon of German Marxism: no simile can cope with the situation—Edmund Wilson> <most of the shops . . . had become pettifogging little holes, unkempt, shabby, poor—Bennett> Disheveled is more likely to describe a temporary state of ruffled disorder or disarray following intense effort (as in doing something or coping with some emergency) <she hoped she appeared calm. She was conscious of a disheveled appearance—Hervey> or in extended application a lack of normal planned orderliness (as of concept or development)  Sloppy implies a general effect of looseness and of spilling over. When applied to a person or his appearance it usually suggests loose, ill-fitting, unpressed garments, but it often also carries connotations of slovenliness <his sloppy appearance at breakfast offended her> <her hair was thin and tied in a sloppy knot at the back of her not too clean neck—Metalious> When applied to ideas or their expression, style, or manners or to a work or its workmanship, the word usually suggests a lack of control and precision or of confinement within proper limits, manifested in incoherency, emotional excess, or formlessness <it is a sloppy bit of reporting, poorly organized, loaded with pointless personal details—Sugrue> Ana *negligent, neglectful, slack, lax, remiss; *careless, heedless, inadvertent: *indifferent, unconcerned: *slatternly, dowdy, frowzy, blowsy Con precise, accurate, exact, *correct: fastidious, finicky, *nice slit vb slash, *cut, hew, chop, carve slither *slide, slip, glide, skid, glissade, coast, toboggan slog *strike, hit, smite, punch, slug, swat, clout, slap, cuff, box slogan *catchword, byword, shibboleth

Ana *phrase, expression, locution, idiom slope vb *slant, incline, lean

Ana deviate, diverge, veer, *swerve sloppy slovenly, unkempt, disheveled, *slipshod

Ana *negligent, neglectful, slack, remiss, lax: mawkish, maudlin, soppy, slushy (see SENTIMENTAL): *slatternly, dowdy, frowzy, blowsy

Con *careful, meticulous, scrupulous, punctilious: fastidious, finicky, *nice slothful indolent, faineant, *lazy

Ana *inactive, inert, supine, passive, idle: slack, remiss, lax, *negligent, neglectful: *slow, leisurely, deliberate, dilatory, laggard

Ant industrious —Con *busy, diligent, sedulous, assiduous slough vb *discard, cast, shed, molt, scrap, junk slovenly *slipshod, unkempt, disheveled, sloppy

Ana *slatternly, dowdy, frowzy, blowsy: *indifferent, unconcerned: *negligent, neglectful, slack, lax, remiss

Con *orderly, methodical: *neat, tidy, trim, spick-and-span slow adj 1 *stupid, dull, dense, crass, dumb

2 Slow, dilatory, laggard, deliberate, leisurely can apply to persons, their movements, or their actions, and mean taking a longer time than is necessary, usual, or sometimes, desirable. Slow (see also STUPID), the term that is the widest in its range of application, may also be used in reference to a thing (as a mechanism, a process, or a drug) that is the opposite of quick or fast in its motion, its performance, or its operation. In its varying applications slow often suggests a reprehensible or discreditable cause (as stupidity, lethargy, indolence, or inaction)  <slow wits> <slow movements> <he is as slow as a snail> <slow in getting results> <an unimaginative man, slow of comprehension—Times Lit. Sup.> but it may suggest either extreme care or caution  <slow to take offense> <he is slow in making changes> <he spoke with a slow, slightly thick precision, making elegant gestures—Wouk> or a tempo that is required by nature, art, or a plan or schedule     or a falling behind because of structural or mechanical defects or untoward difficulties  <the train is slow tonight because of the snowstorm> Dilatory is relatively a term of restricted application referable to persons or to things for which persons are responsible as their actors, performers, or creators and implying slowness that is the result of inertness, procrastination, or indifference  <though dilatory in undertaking business, he was quick in its execution—Austen> <he was temporizing, making, with unconscious prudence, a dilatory opposition to an impending catastrophe—Bierce> Laggard is even more censorious a term than dilatory, for it implies a failure to observe a schedule (as for arriving or performing) or to obey a call or demand promptly; it frequently suggests loitering or waste of time <laggard pupils keep a whole class back> <for Love was laggard, O, Love was slow to come—Millay> <in its coverage of spot news events, radio has been especially laggard—Rovere> <directed him and another general to . . . prod laggard manufacturers into speeding up production—Kahn> Deliberate (see also DELIBERATE 2) applies to persons, usually directly but sometimes indirectly, and then is applied to things for which a person is responsible; the term suggests absence of hurry or agitation and a slowness that is the result of care, forethought, calculation, or self-restraint <deliberate enunciation> <deliberate movements> <he returned with the same easy, deliberate tread—Cather> <she ate her food in the deliberate, constrained way, almost as if she recoiled a little from doing anything so publicly—D. H. Lawrence> Leisurely also implies a lack of hurry or a slowness that suggests that there is no pressure for time; the term applies not only to persons and their acts but to things that have no relation to persons <breakfast was a leisurely meal—Archibald Marshall> <his departure, like all his movements, was leisurely. He did not take the first available boat or the second—Waugh > <took leisurely leave, with kisses all around, of a half dozen young men—K. A. Porter >

Ant fast

slow vb slacken, *delay, retard, detain

Ana *moderate, temper, qualify: reduce, abate, *decrease, lessen

Ant speed —Con accelerate, quicken, hasten, hurry (see SPEED vb)

slug vb *strike, hit, smite, punch, slog, swat, clout, slap, cuff, box sluggish *lethargic, torpid, comatose

Ana inert, *inactive: indolent, slothful, *lazy: listless, languishing, *languid

Ant brisk: expeditious: quick (of mind) sluice vb *pour, stream, gush

Ana flood, inundate, deluge (see corresponding nouns at FLOOD): drench, *soak slumber vb *sleep, drowse, doze, nap, catnap, snooze

Ana relax, rest, repose (see corresponding nouns at REST) slumberous *sleepy, drowsy, somnolent slump vb *fall, drop, sink, subside

Ana *plunge, dive, pitch: sag, flag, *droop slushy *sentimental, mushy, romantic, mawkish, maudlin, soppy sly, cunning, crafty, tricky, foxy, insidious, wily, guileful, artful are comparable when they mean having or showing a disposition to attain one's ends by devious or indirect means. Sly implies a lack of candor which shows itself in secretiveness, in suggestiveness rather than in frankness, in underhandedness, or in furtiveness or duplicity in one's dealings with others <with knowing leer and words of sly import—Irving > <because the state is hostile, writers have become sly, circumspect and disingenuous—Philip Toyne> More often than the remaining words, sly is used with weakened force to imply a lightly arch or roguish quality <he was unpretentious, earnest, full of sly humor—Rollo Brown> Cunning (see also CLEVER 2) stresses the use of intelligence in overreaching or circumventing; nevertheless, it often suggests sly inventiveness rather than a high-grade mentality, and a perverted sense of morality <every man wishes to be wise, and they who cannot be wise are almost always cunning—Johnson > <all gods are cruel, bitter, and to be bribed, but women-gods are mean and cunning as well—Bottomley > <the fellow's eyes were now sly and cunning as a cat's, now hard and black as basalt—Wolfe > Crafty also implies a use of intelligence but it usually suggests a higher order of mentality than cunning: that of one capable of devising stratagems and adroit in deception <he disappointeth the devices of the crafty, so that their hands cannot perform their enterprise—Job 5:12 > <as a crafty envoy does his country's business by dint of flirting and conviviality—Montague > <crafty senior tactician for the Republicans and a man with an astonishing record of maintaining political control of his county—Michener > Tricky usually suggests unscrupulousness and chicanery in dealings with others; in general it connotes shiftiness and unreliability rather than skill in deception or in maneuvering <here was Woman, with a capital W, tricky and awful, inconstant as the weather—Styron > <he avoided the mean and tricky: he was always an honorable foe—W. C. Ford > Foxy implies shrewdness in dodging discovery or in practicing deceptions so that one may follow one's own devices or achieve one's own ends; it usually connotes experience and is rarely applied to the young or to novices <where one was legitimate—and a foxy play—the other was a snide trick—Lieb > <this time the lecherous Alsatian uses a foxier gambit to achieve his ends—Perelman >  Insidious suggests a lying in wait or a gradualness of effect or approach and applies especially to devious and carefully masked underhandedness <an insidious tempter > <persuaded that these people . . . are all part of an insidious conspiracy to undermine the world as he knows it—Edmund Wilson > <that form of bias which is most insidious, precisely because it pretends to be unbiased—Moberly > Wily and guileful stress an attempt to ensnare or entrap; they usually imply treacherous astuteness or sagacity and a lack of scruples regarding the means to one's end <nor trust in the guileful heart and the murder-loving hand—Morris > <shun the insidious arts that Rome provides, less dreading from her frown than from her wily praise—Wordsworth > <the headmaster, wily, had not confiscated these articles; he had merely informed the parents concerned—Bennett > Artful implies insinuating or alluring indirectness of dealing; it usually also connotes sophistication or coquetry or clever designs <being artful, she cajoled him with honeymouthed flattery until his suspicion was quieted—John Bennett > <oddly enough, they stayed sober. The artful Henry had told them that all the wine in Panama was poisoned—Chidsey > Ana furtive, clandestine, stealthy, covert (see SECRET): devious, oblique, *crooked: astute, *shrewd smack n 1 *taste, flavor, savor, tang, relish

2 *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak

small, little, diminutive, petite, wee, tiny, teeny, weeny, minute, microscopic, miniature can all mean conspicuously below the average in magnitude, especially physical magnitude. Small (opposed to large) and little (opposed to big, great) are often used without distinction. But small, more frequently than little, applies to things whose magnitude is determined by number, size, capacity, value, or significance     <small change >   <fear of life, memory of hard times, dread of small slights in the community . . . combined to keep the household temperature low—Buck > Small is also preferred when words like quantity, amount, size, and capacity are qualified <give me a small quantity of flour > <they have only a small amount of money > <the small size of the rooms was disappointing > Small also applies to intangible and immeasurable things which, however, may be said to be limited in some pertinent or significant way <he has a small mind > <her sadness at the small prospect of seeing him again—Archibald Marshall > <"I never . . . thought you could be so small about anything," said Selena, who was just angry enough to use the word small—Salinger > Little is usually more absolute in its implications than small, which often connotes less magnitude than is ordinary or is to be expected or is desirable; it may be preferred to small, therefore, when there is the intent to convey a hint of pettiness, of pettiness, or of insignificance in size, amount, quantity, or extent <take little interest in politics >  <the bull Bill . . . had picked out was a fierce, waspy little animal—Gipson > <he enjoyed the little vices and luxuries—coffee, fresh water, women—T. E. Lawrence > <this little man, whose intellectual resources were hardly more than a combination of prejudice and syntax—Sheean > <how unsubstantial then appear our hopes and dreams, our little ambitions, our paltry joys!—Benson > Little is also appropriate in the sense of a small amount, a small quantity, or a small extent; thus, one asks for a little sugar or a small quantity of sugar; one sees that the garden is little or of small extent <spading up a little culture along with the history—Schulberg > Little is also appropriate when the context carries a note of tenderness, pathos, or affection ⟨our little house⟩ (the air turned cold . . . so that the littles kids cried from cold as much as fright—Grau) ⟨her pathetic little smile⟩ ⟨sleep, my little one—Tennyson⟩ Diminutive not only carries a stronger implication of divergence from a normal or usual size or scale than small or little, but it often carries the meaning of extremely or even abnormally small or little ⟨the bedrooms are small but the parlor is diminutive⟩ ⟨in so hot a climate peach trees will produce only diminutive fruits in very small quantities⟩ ⟨the horses are so diminutive that they might be, with propriety, said to be Lilliputian—Cowper⟩ ⟨a diminutive financial wizard, who looked like a Kewpie doll—J. D. Hart⟩ Petite is the usual term to describe a trim, well-shaped woman or girl of diminutive size ⟨a bit incongruous that such a petite woman should write such huge tomes—Fisher⟩ Wee is found especially in dialectal use in place of small or little ⟨a wee lad⟩ ⟨a wee drop of whisky⟩ or in more general use as an equivalent of diminutive ⟨a little wee face, with a little yellow beard—Shak.⟩ ⟨the one to the bachelor uncle . . . was sweetly girlish, and just a wee bit arch—Gibbons⟩ Tiny goes further than diminutive or wee in suggesting extreme littleness or a smallness out of proportion to most things of its kind or in comparison with all other things ⟨they were prominent eyes yellowed with tiny red veins—Avram Davidson⟩ ⟨the behavior of the invisible, intangible, inconceivably tiny electrons and atoms—Darrow⟩ ⟨tiny, Swiss-made replicas . . . each . . . about the size of a small, oblong wristwatch—Terry Southern⟩ Teeny and weeny, found chiefly in childish or playful use, occur also in paired or reduplicated forms (as teeny-weeny and teeny-tiny) ⟨one day this teeny-tiny woman put on her teeny-tiny bonnet and went out of her teeny-tiny house to take a teeny-tiny walk—Fairy Tale⟩ ⟨he gave a weeny, weeny yawn—Wiggin⟩ Minute means extremely small on an absolute scale, usually a microscopic or near-microscopic scale ⟨a minute animalcule⟩ ⟨minute grains of sand⟩ ⟨ants that marched their minute columns over the floor—Hervey⟩ ⟨the tremendous forces imprisoned in minute particles of matter—Inge⟩ Microscopic applies to what is so minute that it is literally observable only under a microscope ⟨microscopic organisms⟩ or is of a comparable minuteness in its class ⟨no matter how microscopic his wage, he forced himself to save a dollar or two a year—Irving Stone⟩ ⟨the lady of the dreadnaught class with a leash on the microscopic Chihuahua—Cross⟩ Miniature applies to what is complete in itself but is built, drawn, or made on a very small scale ⟨in circus parades, Tom Thumb and his ménage rode together in a miniature red coach, drawn by two small ponies—Green Peyton⟩ (it was one of the miniature Italian cities . . . all compact and complete, on the top of a mountain—L. P. Smith) ⟨we may thus picture an atom as a miniature solar system—Eddington⟩

Ana *petty, puny, paltry, trifling, trivial

Ant large —Con big, great (see LARGE); vast, *huge, immense, enormous smaller *less, lesser, fewer small-town *insular, provincial, parochial, local

Ana narrow, narrow-minded, *illiberal, intolerant, hide-bound, bigoted; circumscribed, limited, confined, restricted (see LIMIT vb)

Ant cosmopolitan smart 1 bright, knowing, quick-witted, *intelligent, clever, alert

Ana *sharp, keen, acute: *quick, ready, prompt, apt: *shrewd, astute, perspicacious

Ant dull (of mind)

2 modish, fashionable, *stylish, chic, dashing

Ana elegant, exquisite (see CHOICE adj): finished, *consummate

Ant dowdy, frowzy, blowzy smash vb *crush, mash, bruise, squash, macerate

Ana shatter, burst, crack, *break: *press, squeeze, crowd, jam smell, scent, odor, aroma all denote a property of a thing that makes it perceptible to the olfactory sense. Smell not only is the most general of these terms but tends to be the most colorless. It is the appropriate word when merely the sensation is indicated and no hint of its source, quality, or character is necessary ⟨our horses . . . often reared up and snorted violently at smells which we could not perceive—Landor⟩ ⟨the smells of these offices—the smell of dental preparations, floor oil, spittoons and coal gas—Cheever⟩ It is also the preferred term when accompanied by explicitly qualifying words or phrases ⟨the rank smell of weeds—Shak.⟩ ⟨the rented coarse black gown . . . gave out a musty smell, as though it had been lying long disused—Wouk⟩ ⟨a smell of marigold and jasmine stronger even than the reek of the dust—Kipling⟩ and occasionally, even when unqualified, it implies offensiveness ⟨traced the smell to a stopped-up drain⟩ ⟨Cobden was much upset when he saw the middle classes leaving the smells of the . . . towns for the scents of the countryside—Lewis & Maude⟩ Scent tends to call attention to the physical basis of the sense of smell and is particularly appropriate when the emphasis is on the emanations or exhalations from an external object which reach the olfactory receptors rather than on the impression produced in the olfactory centers of the brain ⟨the scent of the first wood fire upon the keen October air—Pater⟩ ⟨if the air was void of sound, it was full of scent—Galsworthy⟩ ⟨the heavy scent of damp, funereal flowers—Millay⟩ ⟨presently a scent came with it, dank and pervasive. It was the must of the forest—Hervey⟩ but scent can apply specifically to emanations evidencing the passing of a body (as an animal) and may suggest a high level of sensory efficiency in a perceiver ⟨the dog caught the scent of a rabbit⟩ or from its use as a synonym of perfume the term may suggest a pleasant quality ⟨the rich, vital scents of the plowed ground—Glasgow⟩ Odor is oftentimes indistinguishable from scent, for it too can be thought of as something diffused and as something by means of which external objects are identified by the sense of smell. But the words are not always interchangeable, for odor usually implies abundance of effluvia and therefore does not suggest, as scent often does, the need of a delicate or highly sensitive sense of smell ⟨the odors of the kitchen clung to her clothes⟩ ⟨he smelled her perfume, a sweet pungent odor, intimately coquettish—Styron⟩ ⟨gave off a kind of sweetish rich animal-vegetable odor, such as one associates with the tropics—Purdy⟩ For these reasons odor usually implies general perceptibility and is the normal word in scientific use especially when the classification or description of types is attempted ⟨science, while recognizing the potency of our sense of smell, has not yet satisfactorily classified and catalogued the many varieties of odors that we recognize—Morrison⟩ Aroma usually adds to odor the implication of a penetrating, pervasive, or, sometimes, a pungent quality; it need not imply delicacy or fragrance, but it seldom connotes unpleasantness, and it often suggests something to be savored, with the result that it is used of things that appeal both to the sense of smell and taste or by extension to one's aesthetic sense ⟨the fresh river smell, rank and a little rotten, and spiced among these odors was the sultry aroma of strong boiling coffee—Wolfe⟩ ⟨an atmosphere, impalpable as a perfume yet as real, rose above the heads of the laughing guests. It was the aroma of enjoyment and gaiety—Gibbons) <the aroma of a wood fire is the significant part of a camper's delight—Morrison>

Ana *fragrance, redolence, perfume, bouquet, incense: savor, flavor (see TASTE)

smidgen *particle, bit, mite, whit, atom, iota, jot, tittle smile vb Smile, grin, simper, smirk are comparable as verbs meaning to express amusement or pleasure or satisfaction or, sometimes, contempt or indulgence, by a brightening of the eyes and an upward curving of the corners of the mouth and as nouns denoting such an expression. Smile is the general term, capable of being qualified so as to suggest malign as well as benign pleasure or amusement <smile tenderly> <smile derisively>  <she wears a fixed smile . . . and it never varies, no matter to whom she speaks. I never heard her laugh spontaneously—Mills> <she smiled slowly then, the same slow smile that ended before it reached her eyes—Buck> Grin implies a broad smile that shows the teeth. It often carries some suggestion of grimacing in anger or pain in its not infrequent implication of unnaturalness, of bewilderment, or senselessness <they could not see the bitter smile behind the painted grin he wore—Sill> More often, however, grin tends to imply naïve cheerfulness, mirth, or impishness <she saw too clearly now that what had been his weary, decadent smile, was, after all, simply a boyish grin—Terry Southern> <did a little prancing jig on his toes to show how fit he was, then he looked up at me and grinned—Dahl> <how cheerfully he seems to grin, how neatly spreads his claws, and welcomes little fishes in with gently smiling jaws!—Lewis Carroll> Simper implies a silly, affected, or languishing smile <so much vanity and outmoded affectation. The thin lips are curved into a simper that is the worst of all possible substitutes for a smile—Horace Gregory> <it was Ellen who came off best, bearing all the laurels, with all the simpering critics trotting attendance—Bromfield> Smirk, too, suggests affectation together with self-conscious complacency or embarrassment <had grown so conceited that he wouldn't deign to talk to his brother; he kept fussing and smirking around his father all the time—Rölvaa> <the solemnity of the ceremony was broken by smirks, whispered jokes and repressed titters—Graves>

Ant frown

smile n simper, smirk, grin (see under SMILE vb)

Ant frown

smirch *soil, dirty, sully, tarnish, foul, befoul, besmirch, grime, begrime smirk vb *simper, grin, smile smirk n simper, grin, smile (see under SMILE vb)

smite *strike, hit, punch, slug, slog, swat, clout, slap, cuff, box

Ana *beat, pummel, buffet: *punish, discipline, correct smog fog, mist, haze smooth adj 1 even, plane, plain, flat, *level, flush

Ana *sleek, slick, glossy

Ant rough —Con harsh, uneven, rugged, scabrous (see ROUGH)

2 effortless, *easy, light, simple, facile

Ana agreeable, *pleasant, pleasing, gratifying, grateful:

serene, tranquil, *calm, placid, peaceful

Ant labored —Con *hard, difficult, arduous

3 bland, diplomatic, politic, *suave, urbane

Ana polite, courteous, courtly (see CIVIL): oily, unctuous, slick, *fulsome

Ant bluff —Con blunt, brusque, curt, gruff, crusty

(see BLUFF)

4 *soft, bland, mild, gentle, lenient, balmy smother vb *suffocate, asphyxiate, stifle, choke, strangle, throttle smug self-complacent, self-satisfied, priggish, *complacent Ana self-respecting, self-esteeming, self-admiring (see base words under REGARD n): pharisaical, sanctimonious, hypocritical (see under HYPOCRISY) smuggled, bootleg, contraband are comparable in meaning transported in defiance of the law but each has implications and applications not shared with the others. Smuggled applies to what is taken out of or brought into an area (as a nation or district) clandestinely, especially to avoid payment of taxes or dues or to contravene the law <smuggled diamonds> <the same route that the pirates used in taking their smuggled goods to market—Amer. Guide Series: La.> In extended use it may stress deftly evasive action or surreptitious procedure <make use of local knowledge and smuggled information to sow alarm among Communist officials—Economist> <to the ordinary beholder there seem to be so many smuggled assumptions in the literature of social science—R. M. Weaver> Bootleg denotes a material thing (as liquor) made in or imported into a country or district and offered for sale or distribution in defiance of its prohibition in that country or of legal restrictions (as by rationing or licensing) on its use <bootleg whiskey> The term can imply fraud, deceit, and often secretiveness or concealment; thus, bootleg wiring is done by one who is not a legally qualified electrician and who may disregard safety requirements; bootleg prizefights are conducted without legal sanction and often with disregard of the welfare of fighters or patrons <Congress arbitrarily said, "We know better than unions what is good for employees." . . . Today several thousand employers and several million employees are operating under bootleg agreements in flagrant violation of the statute—A. E. Stevenson> Contraband applies to something of which the importation or exportation is declared illegal by law, proclamation, or treaty. Often the term is perfectly interchangeable with smuggled <waterfront resorts were notorious as smuggling centers . . . contraband cargoes were carried aboard motorboats and dories—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.> or it may nearly replace bootleg <Benz-drine . . . has been extremely common as a contraband item for introduction into prisons and correctional institutions—Maurer & Vogel> but it alone is specifically applied to something of which the exportation to belligerents is expressly prohibited and which, therefore, is liable to seizure <eventually Great Britain was seizing as contraband almost everything sent to Germany and to the neutral states on Germany's borders—Roehm et al> snag n *obstacle, obstruction, impediment, bar Ana *projection, protuberance: *difficulty, hardship, vicissitude: barring or bar, blocking or block, hindering or hindrance (see corresponding verbs at HINDER) snap vb 1 *jerk, twitch, yank Ana seize, snatch, clutch, grasp (see TAKE) 2 *break, crack, burst, bust, shatter, shiver Ana part, *separate, sever, sunder snappish *irritable, fractious, peevish, waspish, petulant, pettish, huffy, fretful, querulous Ana testy, touchy, cranky, *irascible: surly, crabbed, morose (see SULLEN) snappy *pungent, piquant, poignant, racy, spicy Ana *sharp, keen, acute: vivacious, *lively, animated: *quick, prompt, ready: smart, dashing, chic, modish (see STYLISH) snare n trap, *lure, bait, decoy Ana tricky, *deception, chicanery, chicanerie snare vb ensnare, trap, entrap, bag, *catch, capture

Ana *lure, entice, inveigle, tempt, seduce, decoy snarl n *confusion, disorder, chaos, disarray, jumble, clutter, muddle

Ana complexity, complication, intricateness or intricacy (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLEX); *difficulty, hardship snarl vb *bark, bay, howl, growl, yelp, yap snatch vb grasp, grab, clutch, seize, *take Ana *catch, capture: *pull, drag, draw sneak vb slink, skulk, *lurk sneer vb *scoff, jeer, gird, flout, gibe, f leer

Ana deride, taunt, mock, *ridicule: scout, *despise, scorn, disdain snip vb *shear, poll, clip, trim, prune, lop, crop

Ana *cut, slit, slash, chop: *bite snitch *steal, pilfer, filch, purloin, lift, pinch, swipe, cop snoopy *curious, inquisitive, prying, nosy

Ana meddling, officious, intrusive, *impertinent, obtrusive: interfering, interposing (see INTERPOSE) snooze vb *sleep, slumber, drowse, doze, nap, catnap snug 1 trim, trig, shipshape, *neat, tidy, spick-and-span

Ana compact, *close: *orderly, methodical, systematic 2 *comfortable, cozy, easy, restful

Ana *safe, secure: *familiar, intimate, close: sheltered, harbored (see HARBOR vb)

so *therefore, hence, consequently, then, accordingly soak vb Soak, saturate, drench, steep, impregnate, sop, waterlog can mean to permeate or be permeated with or as if with water. Soak suggests immersion in a liquid so that the substance absorbs the moisture and usually becomes thoroughly wetted, softened, or dissolved (<soak a sponge in water> <the blotter soaked up the spilled ink> <soak out the dirt from soiled clothes> <soak tapioca before cooking it>)

In its extended use the term implies a comparable immersion of one thing in another so that the latter is taken up by or enters into the very being of the former and becomes a part of it (<he soaked himself in the poetry of the great romanticists> <the shadowy copse was soaked in piny sweetness, golden and dim—Rose Macaulay> <soaked in the best prejudices and manners of his class—Galsworthy>)

Saturate (see also PERMEATE) may or may not imply a soaking; distinctively it stresses absorption (as of a liquid) up to a point where no more can be absorbed; thus, the air is said to be saturated when it can retain no more moisture in the form of vapor; one's clothes may be described as saturated when they are so damp that the addition of further moisture would make them dripping wet; a solution (as of salt in water) is said to be saturated when the liquid has dissolved as much of the substance as it can retain under the circumstances (as of heat and atmospheric pressure). Consequently in its extended use saturate usually implies a becoming imbued or infused with something in exactly the right measure or to the most useful degree (<to a mind not thoroughly saturated with the tolerating maxims of the Gospel—Burke> <the entire poem is saturated with imagination> <saturated with experience of a particular class of materials, an expert intuitively feels whether a newly reported fact is probable or not—James>)

Drench basically implies a thorough wetting by liquid and especially rainwater (<they were in an open buggy and were drenched to the skin—Cather>)

In its extended use the term carries an implication of being soaked or saturated by something that pours or is poured down upon one (<the solid mountains shone . . . drenched in empyrean light—Wordsworth> <the new life with which it drenches the spirits—Shelley>)

Steep implies a complete immersion and soaking in a liquid; it usually suggests the extraction of the essence of one thing so that it becomes part and parcel of the other; thus, one steeps tea leaves in boiling water in order to make the beverage tea. In extended use the acquirement of the qualities of one thing by a process suggestive of such steeping is often implied (<epistles . . . steeped in the phraseology of the Greek mysteries—Inge> <language simple and sensuous and steeped in the picturesque imagery of what they saw and felt—Lowes>)

but often the term means little more than to envelop with or as if with the quality (as color or light) shed from or emanated by something else (<her tall spars and rigging steeped in a bath of red-gold—Conrad> <the world was all steeped in sunshine—D. H. Lawrence>)

Impregnate (see also PERMEATE) commonly carries a suggestion of soaking in something other than water; it implies the interpenetration of one thing by another until the former is everywhere imbued with the latter (<impregnate rubber with sulphur> <when my mind was, as it were, strongly impregnated with the Johnsonian ether—Boswell> <this poem, everywhere impregnated with original excellence—Wordsworth>)

Sop usually applies to food soaked in meat juices or wine (<sop bread in gravy> <serve cake sopped in sherry and covered with a soft custard>)

but it may apply also to something (as soil) that is heavily soaked with liquid (<sopping wet clothes> <sop plants with too much water>)

Waterlog suggests a thorough soaking or drenching that makes a thing either useless or too heavy and sodden (as for floating or cultivating) ( <soil waterlogged by lack of proper drainage>)

Ana *dip, immerse, submerge: *permeate, pervade, penetrate soak n *drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, toper, topos, tippler soapy slick, *fulsome, oily, unctuous, oleaginous soar *rise, arise, ascend, mount, tower, rocket, levitate, surge

Ana *fly, dart, shoot: aspire, *aim sob vb moan, groan, *sigh

Ana weep, wail, *cry, blubber sob n moan, groan, sigh (see under SIGH vb)

Ana weeping, wailing, crying, blubbering (see CRY vb) sober 1 Sober, temperate, continent, unimpassioned can mean having or manifesting self-control or the mastery of one's emotions, passions, or appetites. Sober basically describes moderation in the use of food and drink and often specifically implies freedom from intoxication; this implication is often found with another (as of habitual abstinence from intoxicating liquors or merely of not being drunk at the time in question) (<he is, by reputation, a sober man> <Gilda, in a drink coma, squealed on Cabot Wright. Later, sober, she denied her own story—Purdy>)

In more general application sober implies a cool head, composure especially under strain or excitement, and freedom from passion, prejudice, fear, or any unreasonable excess (<sound, sober advice>  <his bearing was sober, his comments courteous—Wouk> )

Temperate (see also MODERATE 1) implies control over the expression of one's feelings, passions, appetites, or desires or the restrained exercise of one's rights, powers, or privileges, with the result that one never exceeds the bounds of what is right or proper (<in what temperate language Horace clothes his maxims . . . not a flourish! Not a gesture!—Replier> <he was a scholar and a stoic; what temperate virtues he owned had been hard won—Styron>)

Continent (compare continence under TEMPERANCE) carries a stronger implication of deliberate restraint placed upon oneself, upon one's feelings seeking expression, or upon one's desires, especially sexual desires, seeking satisfaction (my past life hath been as continent, as chaste, as true, as I am now unhappy—Shak.) (their strength was the strength of men geographically beyond temptation: the poverty of Arabia made them simple, continent, enduring—T. E. Lawrence) (not . . . a subject of irregular and interrupted impulses of virtue, but a continent, persisting, immovable person—Emerson) Unimpassioned so stresses the absence of heat, ardor, or fervor that it often connotes lack of feeling and, therefore, coldness, stiffness, or hardness of heart (when love is not involved in a union, any differences are likely to settle into . . . unimpassioned enmity—Hervey) (he was tired, excited, on fire, and Deborah seemed so unimpassioned—Webb) but it often implies a subduing of feeling or passion by rationality (the unimpassioned administration of disciplinary measures) (his manner resembled their manner, reserved, logical, unimpassioned, and intelligent—W. C. Ford)

Ana abstaining, refraining, forbearing (see REFRAIN): forgoing, eschewing, abnegating (see FORGO): *cool, collected, composed: reasonable, *rational

Ant drunk: excited

2 grave, *serious, sedate, staid, solemn, somber, earnest

Ana *decorous, decent, proper: *calm, placid, tranquil, serene: dispassionate, impartial, *fair, equitable

Ant gay —Con light, frivolous, flippant, light-minded

(see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS) sobriety *temperance, abstinence, abstemiousness, continence

Ana moderateness, temperateness (see corresponding adjectives at MODERATE): quietness, stillness (see corresponding adjectives at STILL): seriousness, gravity, somberness, sedateness (see corresponding adjectives at SERIOUS)

Ant drunkenness: excitement social *gracious, cordial, affable, genial

Ana *social, companionable, convivial, gregarious: intimate, *familiar, close: *amiable, obliging, complaisant, good-natured

Ant unsocial

social adj Social, gregarious, cooperative, convivial, companionable, hospitable are comparable rather than synonymous terms that all involve and often stress the idea of having or manifesting a liking for or attraction to the company of others. Social, a broadly inclusive word, is distinctly dichotomous. On the one hand it stresses sociability and the pleasant relation between individuals, singly or in groups (a social club) (spent a social evening with her friends) (Adams was known as a man of social talent, a good talker, admired for his richness of recollection and apt illustration—W. C. Ford) (of a jovial, social disposition, with a host of friends—Westcott) and may come close to sociable (which see under GRACIOUS) in meaning (having to drive home, and not feeling very social, I drank very little—Balchin) (Miss Pinckney is one of the most social of beings . . . Her hospitality is famous—Stoney) On the other hand it can stress relation to society and the community and approach societal in meaning; when applied with this notion to the individual or kind of individual it implies membership in or adherence to a more or less definitely organized society; thus, the common reference to man as a social animal implies that human beings as a result of qualities inherent in their fundamental animal nature tend to live in societies rather than in solitude (there is every reason to believe that the origin of culture derives from the fact that man is a social animal. Social species are those whose very existence depends on interaction among their members. It is important to repeat that these social essentials are not peculiarly human but are a basic fact in the existence of all mammalian species—Kimball Young) In relation to immaterial things social may imply no more than relation to society (established social custom) (the social aspects of cultures are the material traces of ideas and ideals in the habits and associations of men—McKeon) but more often it stresses the consideration and responsibility of society for its members and especially its weaker members (legislation which is enacted to protect and aid those who cannot help themselves is often called social legislation—W. H. Wilson & E. S. Eyster) (social rights—the right to work, to rest and leisure, to education, to material security in old age and in case of illness or disability—Mendel) As applied to lower animals, social heightens the notion of societal and implies not mere physical association but association in a community with specialization of function and often of form (the honeybee is a common social insect with the colony members specialized for reproduction or for work) Gregarious sometimes approaches the first aspect of social (a cheery, relaxed, fun-loving young man who enjoyed his own humor but enjoyed it all the more if it were shared by an appreciative audience. He was therefore gregarious, friendly, outgoing and extroverted—C. W. M. Hart) (always gregarious and eager for companionship, Tony tried twice to draw abreast of the men plodding along the unmarked trail—Herron) but in its commoner societal applications it tends, in distinction to social, to imply a need or desire for contiguity (he renounced . . . a life of solitude, and became a gregarious creature—Cowper) (impelled by gregarious instincts, Peter followed the crowd—H. G. Wells) (the gregarious bustle goes on as a matter of routine. Streets intersect, shops advertise, homes have party walls, and fellow citizens depend upon the same water supply; but there is no cooperation between human beings—Joyce) or a living contiguously rather than an active participation in the life of an integrated society (the ordinary gregarious human life, led by us in contact with others and in the stress of our normal pursuits—Powys) (many solitary insects are gregarious, that is, they share certain common needs or react in the same way to certain external stimuli so that dense populations assemble locally—O. W. Richards) (it is at least plausible that the domestication of animals—which are almost exclusively gregarious animals—is based on the relation of the hunter to the wild herd—Franz Boas) The remaining terms describe particular aspects of being social. Cooperative implies the existence of common ends which serve as the objectives of a group, a community, or society at large and of the need of mutual assistance in the attainment of those ends; the term therefore usually suggests shared effort, helpfulness, and a willingness to work for the welfare or well-being of the entire group (leadership of a cooperative rather than of a competitive type—Sellars) (capacity for cooperative industrial effort—Mumford) (with regard to a young English statesman, we want to know two things mainly—his intrinsic value, and his cooperative capacity—Pall Mall Gazette) (if we are to develop a cooperative foreign policy, we shall have to learn to consult continuously with other nations—Dean) Convivial is applied chiefly to persons, groups, or activities that manifest enjoyment of the company of others especially in festive joviality and eating and drinking (at the insistence of a convivial uncle . . . she permits herself to drink three glasses of champagne—Edmund Wilson) (has a convivial temperament . . . gets on a first-name basis quickly—Dwight Macdonald) (dinners convivial and political—Shelley) <she was a somewhat somber figure in that convivial household—Cather) Companionable implies a special fitness by nature or disposition for friendly and intimate association with others <thus we lived on unsocially together. More companionable . . . were the large crawling, running insects—crickets, beetles, and others—Hudson) and it is often applied to things (as situations or writings) that are felt to convey such a quality <they [swans] paddle in the cold companionable streams or climb the air—Yeats) <the book is above all companionable, and has an insinuation of appeal that no other work quite possesses—More) Hospitable usually implies a disposition to receive and to entertain not only one's friends but especially strangers; it therefore stresses receptiveness and generosity more than any of the preceding terms <it was no small joy to these west-movers . . . to find this hospitable, talkative man who was everywhere bustling about, trying to be of service to them—Rölvaa) <your criticism, so hospitable to ideas, so inflexible in judging right from wrong—Quiller-Couch)

Ana *gracious, cordial, sociable, genial, affable: *amicable, neighborly, friendly

Ant unsocial, antisocial, asocial society 1 elite, *aristocracy, nobility, gentry, county 2 *association, order, club soft adj Soft, bland, mild, gentle, smooth, lenient, balmy are applied to things with respect to the sensations they evoke or the impressions they produce and mean pleasantly agreeable because devoid of all harshness or roughness. Soft is applied chiefly to what soothes, calms, or induces a sensation of delicious quiet <as sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—Shak.) <a soft answer turneth away wrath—Prov 15:1) <ever, against eating cares, lap me in soft Lydian airs—Milton) <to feel forever its soft fall and swell—Keats) This positive connotation is often apparent in the use of soft even when its major implication is the absence or the subduing of some quality (as pungency, vividness, intensity, or force); thus, a soft fragrance is lacking in richness but is quietly agreeable and not overpowering; a soft color is lacking in vividness, but it is mellow rather than dull; a soft voice though lacking in resonance is not faint or feeble but is pleasantly low and without harshness or stridency <the far shore of the river's mouth was just soft dusk—Galsworthy) <the soft shock of wizened apples falling from an old tree—Millay) <listen to Yuriko's voice as it floated, breathlike and soft, through the frail partitions—Mailer) Bland (see also SUAVE) may be interchangeable with soft, but it generally suggests smoothness and suavity and stresses the absence of whatever might disturb, excite, stimulate, or irritate; thus, foods and beverages which are not unpleasant to the taste yet tend toward the insipid or are lacking in pungency, tang, or richness of flavor or ingredients may be described as bland; a bland climate not only is free from extremes but is neither stimulating nor depressing <bland fruits such as bananas) <the doctor prescribed a bland diet) <there was an unusual softness to the dark air and the bland starlight and an unusual density to the darkness—Cheever) <the whole shabby performance . . . the bland reassurances instead of the hard dichotomies—Michener) <full, clear, with something bland and suave, each note floated through the air like a globe of silver—Cather) Both mild and gentle stress moderation; they are applied chiefly to things that are not, as they might be or often are, harsh, rough, strong, violent, unduly stimulating, or irritating and are therefore pleasant or agreeable by contrast <a mild cigar) <mild weather) <a man of mild and simple character who . . . had shown no interest in anything at all except his collection of modern paintings—Dahl) <a gentle breeze) <a gentle heat) However, both words are capable of connoting positively pleasurable sensations, mild often being applied to what induces a feeling of quiet measured beauty or of serenity and gentle to what evokes a mood of placidity or tranquility, or a sense of restrained power or force <a mild, rosy spring evening in which blackbirds sang on the budding boughs of the elms—Gibbons) <some did shed a clear mild beam like Hesperus, while the sea yet glows with fading sunlight—Shelley) <O gentle sleep, nature's soft nurse—Shak.) <he was gentle, waiting for whatever he awaited with a grace she respected—Malamud) <she had a gentle face, and her eyes were filled with compassion—Theodore Sturgeon) Smooth (see also EASY, LEVEL) in most of its senses suggests the absence or removal of all unevennesses or obstacles (as to use or enjoyment); often it comes close to mild in stressing the pleasant quality of what might be harsh or irritating, but unlike mild and bland it rarely if ever hints at weakness or insipidness. Distinctively it may approach mellow (which see under MATURE) and suggest qualities of excellence that come with time (as through ripening or aging) or are the result of careful and skilled handling that eliminates all harshness <a smooth whiskey) <dancing every night to the island's smoothest orchestra—N. Y. Times) In reference to persons or their works and accomplishments (as in the arts) smooth may carry further the notion of care and skill in handling and suggest a polished finish stemming from experienced knowledgeability or craftsmanship <Gottfried's style is urbane and smooth and full of understatement, but the story he tells is one of wild passion—Artz) <behind the smooth performance of choir, organ and minister were hours of preparation and careful timing—Dawson & Wilson) <they themselves were smooth in manner, and they saw to it that in their presence life had no rough edges—Webb) or, in a less complimentary sense, a slick sophistication or meretricious attractiveness <he may be an authentic wonder-worker, but he's also a smooth customer—Gilman) <a smooth little blonde glides out of the bedroom—Time) <a smooth wolf who has a highly polished technique in sidestepping marriage—Tilden) Lenient (see also FORBEARING) is applicable chiefly to things that are grateful to the senses or to the mind because they exert an emollient, relaxing, softening, or assuasive influence <earthly sounds, though sweet and well combined, and lenient as soft opiates to the mind—Cowper) <in the lenient hush, strong torpid rhythms somehow flowed—E. P. O'Donnell) <I poured her a lenient rum and water—Morley) Balmy also implies a soothing influence on the senses or mind, but beyond this it suggests refreshment and sometimes exhilaration. Coupled with one or another of these implications there is also frequently a suggestion of fragrance, especially the aromatic fragrance of balm-producing trees <all balmy from the groves of Tahiti, came an indolent air—Melville) <a lovely soft spring morning at the end of March, and unusually balmy for the time of year—Butler d. 1902) <in the balmy atmosphere of that second victory she basks today—Fishwick) Ana moderated, tempered (see MODERATE vb): smooth, effortless, *easy: velvety, silken, *sleek, slick: serene, tranquil, *calm, placid, peaceful

Ant hard: stern —Con *rough, harsh, uneven, rugged: *intense, vehement, fierce, violent

soil, dirty, sully, tarnish, foul, befoul, smirch, besmirch, grime, begrime can all mean to make or become unclean. Soil basically implies fundamental defilement or pollution (as of the mind or spirit) <why war soils and disarranges

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

whatever it touches, I cannot say—Kenneth Roberts) <making that room our Chapter, our one mind where all that this world soiled should be refined—Masefield) but in much of its use it applies to a making or becoming superficially and literally unclean (as by spotting or staining or smudging) <dressed in gray shirt and trousers appropriately soiled and wrinkled from a day's work—MacInnes) In this sense the word is very close to the corresponding sense of dirty, which is slightly stronger in its implication of uncleanness and especially of disagreeable uncleanness; thus, "to soil one's clothes" may merely imply that the freshness of a clean or new thing is lost, but "to dirty one's clothes" usually implies some activity which has plainly left its unclean traces upon the garments. In its extended use, too, dirty tends to stress the unpleasant effect and typically suggests a making squalid or nasty of something that in itself is normal, wholesome, or clean <their religion took most of the rural whites' pleasures away from them, dirtying sex and the human body until it was a nasty thing—Lillian Smith) <a burlesque which dirtyes the idea of chivalry—Canby) Sully implies the staining or soiling of something that is pure, fresh, limpid, or innocent <they would not sully their fingers when eating human flesh—Elisofon) It is used more often in reference to immaterial or spiritual than to physical soiling <if it is boulderish to traduce one's host, it is an even worse breach of etiquette to sully one's own nest—Guérard) <those sins of the body which smear and sully, debase and degrade, destroy and ruin, condemn to the deepest pits of Hell—Farrell) <a merciless massacre sullied the fame of his earlier exploits—J. R. Green) Tarnish basically implies the dulling or dimming of the luster of a thing by chemical action (as of air, dust, or dirt) <silver tarnished by the sulfur in egg yolk) In extended use it suggests a dimming rather than a total sully of something of value <with similar scandals . . . it is not surprising that the image of state government is woefully tarnished—Armbrister) <her tawdry, shoddy, garish components are exposed as never before; yet her overall beauty is scarcely tarnished—Temple Fielding) Foul and the intensive form befoul stress a making filthy or nasty and apply either to a material or an immaterial thing. They often suggest pollution or defiling by something highly offensive or disagreeable <earth was scarred by mining pits and railway tracks; air was fouled and darkened by factory soot—J. D. Hart) <it is senseless to foul our municipal personnel with unproved charges of general corruption—Moses) <having befouled their own minds for hire, they made their living by befouling the minds of others—Anderson) <Milton was . . . virtuous after befouling himself; once smeared with the sluttish filth of an evil woman, he had finally been won over—Styron) Smirch and the intensive form besmirch may emphasize a discoloring by or as if by soot, smoke, or mud; usually they come close to sully in implying a destruction of immaculateness <now, with the singular rationation of the politician besmirched, he sought to go before the electorate and be washed whiter than snow by their votes—S. H. Adams) <the parson's well-practiced and spellbinding condemnation of the besmirching, degrading, befouling, hideous, and bestial sins of the flesh—Farrell) but they seldom carry as clear an implication of an effect on real virtue or purity as they do of a darkening or blackening of appearance, reputation, honor, or good name <their infamy spreads abroad, smirching the whole class to which they belong—Jefferies) <as black-hearted a brigand as ever smirched a page of Highland history—Joseph) <her reputation . . . was not smirched by gossip, for she was known to love her husband and to be virtuous—Bowers) Grime and the more usual begrime intensify the meaning of dirty and typically suggest deeply imbedded dirt often accumulated over a prolonged period <a rudely cut inscription grimed with dust of many a year—Henry Phillips) <she was always filthy, her legs grimed, her hair bedraggled, her face anything but clean—W. C. Williams) <wearing a dress that virtually swept the street; that would in fact actually sweep it from time to time, battering and *begrime*ing the hem—F. L. Allen) <they had stood, begrimed with train smoke—Stafford) sojourn vb *reside, lodge, stay, put up, stop, live, dwell solace vb *comfort, console

Ana *relieve, assuage, mitigate, allay, alleviate, lighten:

gladden, rejoice, delight, *please, gratify sole adj *single, unique, solitary, lone, separate, particular

Ana alone, *only: exclusive, picked, *select solecism *anachronism solemn 1 *ceremonial, ceremonious, formal, conventional

Ana liturgical, ritualistic (see corresponding nouns at FORM): *full, complete, plenary: imposing, august, majestic, magnificent (see GRAND)

2 *serious, grave, somber, sedate, earnest, staid, sober

Ana impressive, *moving: sublime, superb (see SPLendid): ostentatious (see SHOWY) solemnize celebrate, observe, *keep, commemorate solicit 1 *ask, request

Ana *resort, refer, apply, go, turn: *beg, entreat, beseech, implore, supplicate

2 *invite, bid, court, woo

Ana importune, adjure (see BEG): *demand, claim, exact: evoke, elicit, extract, extort, *educe solicitor *lawyer, attorney, counselor, barrister, counsel, advocate solicitous careful, concerned, anxious, worried (see under CARE n)

Ana apprehensive, *fearful, afraid: agitated, disturbed, disquieted, upset (see DISCOMPOSE): uneasy, fidgety, jittery (see IMPATIENT)

Ant unmindful: negligent solicitude *care, concern, anxiety, worry

Ana misgiving, *apprehension, foreboding, presentiment: compunction, *qualm, scruple: *fear, alarm, consternation, dismay

Ant negligence: unmindfulness solid *firm, hard

Ana compact, *close, dense: consolidated, concentrated, compacted (see COMPACT vb)

Ant fluid, liquid solidarity *unity, union, integrity

Ana consolidation, concentration, unification (see corresponding verbs at COMPACT): cooperation, concurrence, combination (see corresponding verbs at UNITE)

solidify *harden, indurate, petrify, cake

Ana *compact, consolidate, concentrate: condense, *contract, compress: *congeal, coagulate, set, clot, jelly, jell solitary 1 *alone, lonely, lonesome, lone, forlorn, lorn, desolate

Ana isolated, secluded (see corresponding nouns at SOLITUDE): retired, withdrawn (see GO): forsaken, deserted, abandoned (see ABANDON)

2 *single, sole, unique, lone, separate, particular

Ana alone, *only solitude, isolation, alienation, seclusion mean the state of one that is alone. Solitude applies not only to a physical condition where there are no others of one's kind with whom one can associate <this man [the lighthouse keeper]

in his wild solitude, forced to live only with himself, almost forgets the common language of men—Ellis) but often to the state, physical or mental, of one who by wish or by compulsion is cut off from normal contacts (as with colleagues, neighbors, friends, or family) (my spirits will not bear solitude, I must have employment and society—Austen) (these are the voices which we hear in solitude, but they grow faint and inaudible as we enter into the world—Emerson) Sometimes the term refers entirely to a mental state and comes very close in meaning to loneliness, implying a lack of intimate association with, rather than a separation from, others (had not been able to escape from the solitude imposed by existence in hotels. Since her marriage she had never spoken to a woman in . . . intimacy—Bennett) (aye, solitude, black solitude indeed, to meet a million souls and know not one—W. H. Davies) Isolation stresses detachment from others either because of causes beyond one's control or because of one's own wish. Since the term may refer to communities and to things as well as to individuals, it often suggests a cutting off physically rather than such a frame of mind as loneliness or depression (the solemn isolation of a man against the sea and sky—Stevenson) (axiomatic that the artist and man of letters ought not to work in cloistral isolation, removed from public affairs—Quiller-Couch) (we are exposed to isolation imposed on us from the outside by unfriendly powers—Ascoli) (many words and phrases have no significance in isolation but contribute to the significance only of whole sentences—Russell) Alienation stresses estrangement and lack or loss of adjustment either between the individual and his environment and especially his social or intellectual environment so that he is in fact isolated even when physically surrounded by multitudes of his kind (alienation . . . can mean estrangement from society or estrangement from self through society. The delinquent is estranged but so, too, is the organization man—Harold Rosenberg) or sometimes between the creator and his creation (his alienation seems more fully acknowledged and extreme than ever before—Times Lit. Sup.) Seclusion implies a shutting away or a keeping apart of oneself or another so that one is either inaccessible to others or accessible only under difficult conditions. The term may connote a condition (as confinement in an asylum or prison or withdrawal from the world or from human companionship) that makes contact difficult or repels the efforts of others to establish contact (the seclusion of their life was such that she would hardly be likely to learn the news except through a special messenger—Hardy) (the time would come when she could no longer live in seclusion, she must go into the world again—Stafford) (even in the seclusion of the convent, Sister had heard the rumors—Ruth Park) (it had a deep New England tendency to seclusion and secrecy—Time)

Ana retreat, refuge, asylum (see SHELTER n): retirement, withdrawal (see corresponding verbs at GO)

solve, resolve, unfold, unravel, decipher can all mean to make clear or apparent or intelligible what is obscure or mysterious or incomprehensible. Solve is the most general in meaning and suggestion in this group; it implies the finding of a satisfactory answer or solution, usually to something of at least moderate difficulty (the mystery and disquieting meaninglessness of existence . . . were solved for me now—L. P. Smith) (create a difficulty rather than solve one—A. M. Young) Resolve (see also ANALYZE), as contrasted with solve, is likely to indicate analytic arrangement and consideration of the various phases or items of a problem or situation rather than finding a final solution or answer and is likely to suggest dispelling of confusion or perplexity by a clear formulation of questions or issues (you may find it of some interest to be told that the law has had to struggle with these problems and to know how it has resolved them—Cardozo) In some situations this process may achieve an answer, especially a ready or summary one (he was at the same time resolving successive tangles of intrigue against himself and his policy—Belloc) (it was realized that the method of resolving apparent contradictions by liquidating one of the contradictions is not the way to arrive at true solutions—Times Lit. Sup.) Unfold implies continuous opening up, clarifying, and making more and more clear and patent until a full solution or resolution is apparent (went around and through and behind a situation, unfolding it . . . to include possibilities he hadn't known were upon its horizon—Mary Austin) (saw the great truth of evolution unfolded—Kaempffert) (the method of unfolding the course of a plot must in some ways be different in a play meant for acting and in a book meant for reading—Montague) Unravel stresses the notion of making a clear and orderly rearrangement of something entangled or a simple ordering of something complicated, especially by patient endeavor (the details are difficult to unravel at this distance of time—H. O. Taylor) (a whole elaborate plot may be unraveled by discovering the one relevant detail—Aydelotte) Decipher stresses the notion of finding the meaning or significance of something very obscure, clouded, cryptic, or enigmatic (placing of a writer or other artist in his proper rank or in deciphering the less obvious intentions of his work—Montague) (the results, so far as they could be deciphered from the puzzling procedure and twisted combinations, confirmed what had gone before—Atlantic)

Ana *decide, determine, settle: *illuminate, enlighten: interpret, elucidate, *explain somatic *bodily, physical, corporeal, corporal somber *serious, grave, solemn, sedate, staid, sober, earnest

Ana gloomy, *dark, murky: *dismal, bleak, cheerless: melancholy (see MELANCHOLIC)

Ant garish

somnolent *sleepy, drowsy, slumberous

Ana sluggish, comatose, *lethargic: inert, *inactive, passive, supine sonorous *resonant, ringing, resounding, vibrant, orotund

Ana *deep, profound: *rich, opulent: *loud, stentorian soon adv 1 *presently, shortly, directly

2 *early, beforehand, betimes soothe *calm, compose, quiet, quieten, still, lull, settle, tranquilize

Ana mollify, appease, placate, *pacify, propitiate, conciliate: ally, alleviate, assuage, mitigate, *relieve

Ant annoy: excite sop *soak, saturate, drench, steep, impregnate, waterlog sophism sophistry, casuistry, *fallacy sophistical fallacious, casuistical (see under FALLACY)

Ant valid —Con cogent, sound, convincing, compelling, telling (see VALID) sophisticate *adulterate, load, weight, doctor sophisticated, worldly-wise, worldly, blasé, disillusioned are synonymous when they apply to persons, to their attitudes and actions, or to products of human skill and effort and mean experienced or revealing experience in the ways of the world. Sophisticated may be a term of reproach or of commendation according to the point of view of the speaker or writer, but it regularly implies a loss of naturalness, simplicity, or spontaneity through experience. From one point of view the term connotes artificiality of manner, overrefinement, and absence of enthusiasm as the price paid for experience that brings knowledge of men and their ways (the Negro . . . could rarely afford the sophisticated inhibitions of civilization, and so he kept for his survival the art of the primitive, he lived in the enormous present—Mailer) From another point of view it implies a type of mentality marked by distinction, urbanity, cleverness, together with an indifference to all that is simple or banal in life (she didn't want to ride on the roller coaster and he guessed that her ideas of pleasure were more sophisticated—Cheever) From still another it may imply a cultivation that enables a man to rise above the ordinary or usual (the lack of a body of sophisticated and civilized public opinion, independent of plutocratic control and superior to the infantile philosophies of the mob—Mencken) (photographs realistic enough to catch the quality of the milieu which produced Pope John, surely the world's simplest and most sophisticated of men—Casey) Worldly-wise and worldly imply a wisdom gained by attention to the things and ways of the world. Often they stress alienation from true spiritual interests and, as a result, devotion to aims that will make one happy in this world, typically suggesting a concentration upon material ends or aims or upon a wealth of worldly experience (we apply the term "worldly-wise" to a man who skillfully chooses the best means to the end of ambition; but we should not call such a man "wise" without qualification—Sidgwick) (religion has been leading man toward a nobler vision, a better day, a higher hope, and a fuller life. The church, on the other hand, has been worldly, obscurantist, arrogant and predatory—Pfeffer) Blasé implies a lack of responsiveness to things which have once been a joy or delight. It usually suggests satiety, but also it tends to suggest such real or affected overexperience and overcultivation as leads to disdain for all that arouses the average person's interest (the blasé indifference of both the authorities and the people to the war was like cold water . . . on my spirits—Belden) (I was going through a period of adolescent awfulness in which I was trying to appear pale, interesting, and world-weary (the popular term . . . was "blasé"), and incapable of any reaction to sentiment—Skinner) Disillusioned implies having had experiences that have completely destroyed a person's illusions, with resulting hopelessness; it applies to a person who from experience is no longer capable of enthusiasm or of idealistic motives and who has grown not only realistic but scornful of the sentimental, the visionary, the emotional (in a few years the young [newspaper] man will become a cynic, appraising the world and his fellows with disillusioned eyes, even with bitterness—Walker) (the world, grown disillusioned and afraid, has neglected the one source that answers every problem, fills every need—Oursler)

Ana cultivated, cultured (see corresponding nouns at CULTURE); intellectualized (see corresponding adjective at MENTAL); knowing, brilliant, *intelligent, clever, alert Ant unsophisticated —Con *natural, simple, ingenuous, naïve, artless; crude, uncouth, callow, raw (see RUDE)

sophistry *fallacy, sophism, casuistry

Ana plausibility, speciousness (see corresponding adjectives at PLAUSIBLE); equivocation, *ambiguity, tergiversation: evading or evasion, avoiding or avoidance (see corresponding verbs at ESCAPE)

soppy *sentimental, romantic, mawkish, maudlin, mushy, slushy sorcery *magic, witchcraft, witchery, wizardry, alchemy, thaumaturgy sordid *mean, ignoble, abject

Ana *mercenary, venal; squalid, foul, filthy, nasty, *dirty; *contemptible, despicable, sorry, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby

SORROW n Sorrow, grief, heartache, heartbreak, anguish, woe, regret, though not close synonyms, share the idea of distress of mind. Sorrow is the most general term, implying a sense of loss or of guilt (when you depart from me, sorrow abides and happiness takes his leave—Shak.) (virginity she thought she had parted with without sorrow, yet was surprised by torments of conscience—Malamud) Grief denotes intense emotional suffering or poignant sorrow especially for some real and definite cause (compare GRIEVE) (a stifled, drowsy, unimpassioned grief, which finds no natural outlet—Coleridge) (I have lain in prison . . . Out of my nature has come wild despair; an abandonment to grief that was piteous even to look at; terrible and impotent rage; bitterness and scorn—Wilde) but grief may also denote a more mundane distress of mind that is representative of the distress and trials of day-to-day life or often of a particular situation in life (he had a thankless job which gave him all of the grief of running a war and none of the glory—Time) Heartache is used especially of persistent and deep sorrow that is slow to heal but that often gives little or no outward indication (the heartaches of a would-be author) (the heartache of a hunted race—Zangwill) (the dumb heartaches of those days—Churchill) Heartbreak can imply a yet deeper and more crushing grief (the sorrow and the heartbreak which . . . abide in the homes of so many of our neighbors—Truman) Anguish implies a distress of mind that is excruciating or torturing almost beyond bearing (anguish so great that human nature is driven by it from cover to cover, seeking refuge and finding none—Rose Macaulay) (a mild perturbation . . . about as like real anguish as three little eruptions on your arm are like confluent smallpox—Montague) (then came another sob, more violent than the first—a strangled gasp of anguish—Rølvaag) Woe implies a deep or inconsolable misery or distress usually induced by grief (the suffering people whose woes he has not alleviated—W. P. Webb) (outcast from God . . . condemned to waste eternal days in woe—Milton) Regret seldom implies a sorrow that shows itself in tears or sobs or moans; usually it connotes such pain of mind as deep disappointment, fruitless longing, heartache, or spiritual anguish; consequently the term is applicable within a wide range that begins with the disappointment one feels, sometimes sincerely but sometimes merely as suggested by the language required by convention, in declining an invitation and ends with the pangs of remorse for something done or left undone or of hopeless repining for what can never be restored (with a sigh that might have been either of regret or relief—Wharton) (in moments of regret we recognize that some of our judgments have been mistaken—Cohen) (that expression of mildly cynical regret and acceptance that one often notices in people who have seen much of life, and experienced its hard and seamy side—Wolfe)

Ana mourning, grieving (see GRIEVE); *distress, suffering, misery, agony; melancholy, dejection, *sadness, depression

Ant joy

sorrow vb mourn, *grieve

Ana *cry, weep, wail, keen: sob, moan, groan (see SIGH vb) sorry pitiable, *contemptible, despicable, scurvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby

Ana *mean, ignoble, sordid, abject; *miserable, wretched; paltry, *petty, trifling, trivial sort n *type, kind, stripe, kidney, ilk, description, nature, character sort vb *assort, classify, pigeonhole

Ana arrange, methodize, systematize, *order: cull, pick, *choose, select sot *drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, soak, toper, tosspot, tippler soul 1 *mind, intellect, psyche, brain, intelligence, wit Ana powers, faculties, functions (see singular nouns at POWER)

2 Soul, spirit can both denote an immaterial entity that is held to be distinguishable from and felt as superior to the body with which it is associated during the life of the individual and that in most religious beliefs is regarded as immortal, surviving the death of the body. Soul (see also MIND 2) may be preferred when the emphasis is upon the thing considered as an entity having specific functions, responsibilities, aspects, or destiny, while spirit (see also COURAGE, APPARITION) may be preferred when the stress is upon the quality, the constitution, the movement, or the activity of that entity <hoped to save his soul> <willing to sell his soul> <pray for the souls of the dead> <do the right thing for your soul's sake> <come close to God in spirit>  <the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak—Mt 26:41> Soul, both in the sense here emphasized and in the extended meanings derived from that sense, usually suggests a relation to or a connection with a body or with a physical or material entity to which it gives life or power; spirit in both its restricted and extended senses suggests an opposition or even an antithesis to what is physical, corporeal, or material and often a repugnance to the latter <it often takes a war to lay bare the soul of a people> <obey the spirit rather than the letter of a law> <Gibbon's magnificent saying, that the Greek language gave a soul to the objects of sense and a body to the abstractions of metaphysics—Quiller-Couch> <those who believe in the reality of a world of the spirit—the poet, the artist, the mystic—are at one in believing that there are other domains than that of physics—Jeans> Spirit only, and not soul, is used of incorporeal beings (as angels or devils) <I can call spirits from the vasty deep—Shak.>

Ant body

sound adj 1 *healthy, wholesome, robust, hale, well Ana *vigorous, lusty, nervous, energetic, strenuous: *strong, sturdy, stalwart, stout: intact, whole, entire, *perfect

2 *valid, cogent, convincing, compelling, telling Ana *impeccable, flawless, faultless, errorless: *correct, exact, precise, accurate: *rational, reasonable

Ant fallacious

sound n Sound, noise both mean a sensation or effect produced by the stimulation of the auditory receptors of the ear and the auditory centers of the brain. Sound is the general term applicable to anything that is heard regardless of its loudness or softness, its pleasantness or unpleasantness, or its meaningfulness or meaninglessness <he waited a good half hour after the last sounds of the departing enemy came down the wind—Mason> <it is impossible, words being what they are, to read the sound without reading the sense at the same time—MacLeish> <heard a sound, rather shrill and tentative, swell into hoarse, high clamor, and suddenly die out—Galsworthy> <approximates a laugh formed by . . . squeezing guttural sounds out of the throat—Pynchon> Noise basically applies to confused sounds emanating from many persons and usually suggests a clamor made by mingled outcries or shouts; in more general use, it may apply to a disagreeably loud or harsh sound, whatever its source

<the terrific noise of an explosion>  <dense jungle, restless with the shrill noise of wild life—Shipton> <he could not endure the noise of the machine shop> <the hell of distracting noises made by the carts, the cabs, the carriages—Mallock> Although the connotations of unpleasantness and discordance typically distinguish noise from sound, noise may sometimes be applied to a sound that merely engages the attention <still the sails made on a pleasant noise till noon, a noise like of a hidden brook—Coleridge> <the wetted earth gave out a cool delicious fragrance; there was a noise of birds—Huxley>

Ant silence

sound n *strait, channel, passage, narrows sound vb *fathom, plumb souppçon suspicion, suggestion, *touch, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak sour, acid, acidulous, tart, dry mean having a taste devoid of sweetness. All but dry suggest the taste of lemons, vinegar, or of most unripe fruits. Sour and acid are often interchangeable, but sour is more likely to be chosen to describe something that through fermentation has lost its natural sweet or neutral taste or, sometimes, smell <sour milk> <sour wine> and the term may additionally suggest a spoiled or rancid state <sour garbage> Acid, on the other hand, is appropriately used to describe something having a sharp sweetless taste in its natural state usually due to the presence of chemical acids <acid fruits> <acid drinks> Acidulous and tart are applied, as a rule, to things which may be described as acid, acidulous implying a modest degree of acidity and tart, a sharp but often agreeable acidulousness or, sometimes, acidity <some mineral waters are pleasantly acidulous> <most cooks prefer tart apples for pies and puddings> Dry is usually applied to wines which, although without any sweetness, are bland and therefore neither definitely acid nor definitely sour.

In their extended senses sour applies especially to what is crabbed or morose  and acidulous and tart to what is characterized by asperity, pungency, or sharpness <tart temper never mellows with age—Irving> <what has been dull and dead in your years is now tart to the taste—Mailer> <said in acidulous jest that in Congress the South takes a recurrent and unending revenge in behalf of the long-dead Lee—W. S. White> Acid, partly by allusion to the corrosive powers of some acids, is likely to describe what is biting or caustic <his wit became acid; his letters are filled with caustic comment to sharpen the temper of those on the fighting line—Parrrington> while dry may suggest matter-of-fact impersonal presentation of what is humorous, ironic, or sarcastic <there seemed to be a faint tinge of appeal in his eyes, curiously contrasted with the dry tone and the mocking words—Wouk>

Ana *bitter, acrid: *sharp, keen: morose, *sullen, glum, crabbed, saturnine, dour

source *origin, root, inception, provenance, provenience, prime mover

Ana beginning, commencement, starting or start (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN): *cause, determinant, antecedent

Ant termination: outcome

souse *dip, immerse, submerge, duck, dunk

Ana *soak, steep, saturate, impregnate souvenir 1 *remembrance, remembrancer, reminder, memorial, memento, token, keepsake

2 remembrance, recollection, *memory, reminiscence, mind sovereign adj 1 *dominant, predominant, paramount, preponderant, preponderating

Ana *supreme, transcendent, surpassing: absolute, *ultimate

2 independent, *free, autonomous, autarchic, autarkic Ana highest, loftiest (see positive adjectives at HIGH): *chief, principal, foremost: governing, ruling (see GOVERN): commanding, directing (see COMMAND vb)

sovereignty independence, freedom, autonomy, autarky, autarchy (see under FREE adj)

Ana *supremacy, ascendancy: command, sway, control, dominion, *power, authority sow vb *strew, straw, scatter, broadcast spacious, commodious, capacious, ample are comparable when they mean larger in extent than the average. Spacious implies great length and breadth and, sometimes, height; primarily, it is applied to things that have bounds or walls (<spacious rooms> <spacious gardens> <the whole interior . . . a dim, spacious, fragrant place, afloat with golden lights—Pater> <none of them were mansions but they were spacious and faced on neat lawns—Styron> In its extended use, though it usually implies limits, it suggests largeness, sweep, and freedom within those limits (<the spacious times of great Elizabeth—Tennyson> <one great spacious golden morning followed another—Powys> Commodious stresses roominess and freedom from hampering constriction along with convenience and comfortableness (<my mother's room is very commodious, is it not? Large and cheerful looking—Austen> <the commodious first-class grandstand . . . is built not only for comfort but for pleasant living—Dobie> Capacious stresses the ability to hold, contain, and, sometimes, receive or retain, more than the ordinary thing of its kind (the dull girls, with their slow but capacious memories—Gallant) <provides a capacious rack in its clubrooms which is daily filled with press releases—Mott> <fumbled in a capacious pocket of the old-fashioned sort—Sayers> <the capacious soul of Shakespeare—Hazlitt> Ample basically means more than adequate or sufficient (as in size, expanse, or amount) (<ample funds> <an ample garden>) It may suggest fullness and bulk (<she held the child beneath the folds of her ample cloak> <an imposing creature, tall and stout, with an ample bust and an obesity girthed in alarmingly—Maugham> and in extended use it often suggests freedom to expand or absence of trammels or limitations ( <religious experience which opens to him an even *ampl*er world, even greater issues—R. W. Livingstone> Ana vast, immense, enormous (see HUGE): *broad, wide, deep: extended or extensive (see corresponding verb at EXTEND) spade vb *dig, delve, grub, excavate spangle vb *spot, spatter, sprinkle, mottle, fleck, stipple, marble, speckle, bespangle spangled spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)

spare adj 1 extra, *superfluous, surplus, supernumerary Ana *excessive, immoderate, exorbitant, inordinate 2 *lean, lank, lanky, skinny, scrawny, gaunt, rawboned, angular

Ana *thin, slender, slim, slight: sinewy, athletic (see MUSCULAR)

Ant corpulent —Con fat, *fleshy, obese, portly, plump 3 *meager, exiguous, sparse, scanty, scant, skimpy, scrimpy

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana economical, *sparing, frugal, thrifty

Ant profuse

sparing adj Sparing, frugal, thrifty, economical can all mean exercising or manifesting careful and unwasteful use of one's money, goods, and resources. Sparing connotes abstention or restraint (<sparing in the expenditure of money> <sparing in giving praise> <he was lavish of encouragement, sparing of negation—S. H. Adams> <he had always been a sparing eater of plain foods but now he ate heartily—Buck> Frugal suggests the absence of all luxury and lavishness especially in food and ways of living and dress; positively it implies simplicity, temperance, and, often, content (<Roman life was a frugal thing, sparing in food, temperate in drink, modest in clothing, cleanly in habit—Buchan> <the cost of the war was appalling to his frugal mind—Forester> <he likes frugal fighters. Every kind of serious trouble a fighter can get into, he says, has its origin in the disbursement of currency—Liebling> Thrifty implies industry, good management, and prosperity as well as frugality (<lived in affluence for half a century; but memories of her early straits had made her excessively thrifty—Wharton> <their sober, thrifty, industrious life, concentrated upon moneymaking—Mumford> <the difference between a miserly man who hoards money out of avarice and a thrifty man who saves money out of prudence—Empton> Economical often is used interchangeably with thrifty when the sparing use of money and goods is emphasized (<an economical housekeeper>) However the word often implies more than saving, for its chief implication is prudent management or use to the best advantage, without waste, and it is therefore far more widely applicable than thrifty, which refers only to persons or their expenditures (<the verse, which nowhere bursts into a flame of poetry, is yet economical and tidy, and formed to extract all the dramatic value possible from the situation—T. S. Eliot> <historically, sea power is the most mobile and therefore the most economical form of military force—Time> <he applied his skill to the economical use of words, the brief but vivid description—Fellows>

Ana *meager, exiguous, spare: *stingy, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious: *moderate, temperate

Ant lavish —Con *profuse, prodigal, exuberant sparkle vb *flash, gleam, glance, glint, glitter, glisten, scintillate, coruscate, twinkle sparse *meager, spare, exiguous, scanty, scant, skimpy, scrimpy

Ana scattered, dispersed (see SCATTER): sporadic, occasional, *infrequent, uncommon: *thin, slim, slender

Ant dense —Con *close, thick, compact spasm paroxysm, convulsion, *fit, attack, access, accession spasmodic *fitful, convulsive

Ana *intermittent, alternate, recurrent, periodic: *irregular, unnatural: *abnormal, aberrant, atypical

Con *steady, even, constant, equable, uniform: regular, methodical, *orderly spat n bickering, squabble, *quarrel, wrangle, altercation, tiff

Ana dispute, controversy, *argument: contention, difference, variance, *discord

Con agreement, concurrence, coincidence (see corresponding verbs at AGREE) spat vb bicker, squabble, quarrel, wrangle, altercate, tiff (see under QUARREL n)

Ana dispute, argue, agitate, debate (see DISCUSS): *differ, disagree

Con *agree, concur, coincide

spate n *flood, deluge, inundation, torrent, cataract

Ana *flow, stream, current, tide: *succession, progression, series spatter *spot, sprinkle, mottle, fleck, stipple, marble, speckle, spangle, bespangle

Ana bespatter, asperse, splash (see SPRINKLE) spattered spotted, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)

spay castrate, *sterilize, emasculate, alter, mutilate, geld, caponize speak, talk, converse can all mean to articulate words so as to express one's thoughts. Speak is, in general, the broad term and may refer to utterances of any kind, however coherent or however broken or disconnected, and with or without reference to a hearer or hearers (not able to speak above a whisper) (I shall speak to him about it) (let him speak for the organization) (most of the material in this book was spoken before it was printed, as may perhaps be inferred from the style—Davis) (she repeated them, angered . . . but once the words were spoken she was sorry—McCullers) (the Bellman looked scared, and was almost too frightened to speak—Lewis Carroll) Talk, on the other hand, usually implies an auditor or auditors and connected colloquy or discourse (he left the room because he did not care to talk) (we talk in the bosom of our family in a way different from that in which we discourse on state occasions—Loves) (she talked and talked and talked, yet it seemed to Marjorie that she could never hear enough of this girl's worldly wisdom—Wouk) But speak is also used of relatively weighty or formal speech (often public speech), and talk, of what is more or less empty or frivolous (a fool may talk, but a wise man speaks—Ben Jonson) (a good old man, sir; he will be talkin—Shak.) (yet there happened in my time one noble speaker who was full of gravity in his speaking . . . No man ever spake more neatly, more pressly, more weightily, or suffered less emptiness, less idleness, in what he uttered—Ben Jonson) Converse implies an interchange in talk of thoughts and opinions (in the press conference the President can converse with the public rather than preach to it—Cater) (don't ever remember hearing my parents converse, and they never even chatted. My father would expound on law and ritual, my mother would listen—Behrman)

Ana pronounce, *articulate, enunciate: *stammer, stutter: *discourse, expatiate, dilate, descant

special adj Special, especial, specific, particular, individual are closely related terms because all carry the meaning relating to or belonging to one thing or one class especially as distinguished from all the others. Both special and especial imply differences which distinguish the thing so described from others of its kind, and the two can often be interchanged without significant loss. However special may be preferred when the differences give the thing concerned a quality, character, identity, or use of its own (the mistress of the boardinghouse refused to serve special food to any of her guests) (the baby requires a special soap because of his sensitive skin) (if the whole of nature is purposive, it is not likely that we can discern special purposes operating—Inge) (a special aspect of a more general malady—Babbitt) Often, in addition, special implies being out of the ordinary or being conspicuously unusual and therefore comes close to uncommon or exceptional (it's not like ordinary photographs. There's something special about it—Bennett) (Mom was drunk most of the time and sometimes used to tear up the whole neighborhood, but all the same she had very special ideas about being respectable—Theodore Sturgeon) (preventing the perpetuation of an hereditary upper class with special privileges and better education—Edmund Wilson) Special is also applicable to something added (as to a schedule, a series, or a sequence) for an exceptional or extraordinary purpose, reason, or occasion (special trains will be run to Washington for the inauguration) (a special dividend) Especial is more likely to be chosen when there is the intent to convey the idea of preeminence or of being such as is described over and above all the others (his especial friend) (a matter of especial importance) (this has no especial reference to any one person) (Egypt, as the granary of the ancient world, had especial need for Pussy's services—Replier) (an elegantly written piece in the author's own especial version of the neoclassic manner—Virgil Thomson) Specific (see also EXPLICIT) basically implies unique and peculiar relationship to a kind or category or individual (specific evidence of disease) (the specific virtue of a drug) (specific nutritional needs of the aged) In some (as philosophical, biological, or critical) uses it can suggest opposition to generic and imply a relation to a particular species as distinguished from a more comprehensive category to which that species belongs (specific characters by which members of the genus Rosa can be differentiated) (groups of specific rank) but in more general use it tends to stress uniqueness and to imply a relation to one thing or one individual as distinguished from all others that can be felt to fall into a category with that one (whether the specific freedoms we know and cherish . . . can be maintained—Sidney Hook) (make it possible for the imaginative talent to develop along those lines that reward with specific fruition—Hudson Review) (the binding of some ions is highly specific with respect to the protein involved—Cannan & Levy) However, specific also may mean no more than explicitly mentioned, or called into or brought forward for consideration (if such injuries . . . result in any of the following specific losses—insurance policy) (would be glad to hear of specific cases of scholars having difficulty with either passports or visas—ACLS Newsletter) (interested in any specific field only for its contribution to a view of the world as a totality—Cohen) In this last sense of specific particular is sometimes preferred on the ground that the term is clearly opposed to general and that it is a close synonym of single (for fuller treatment see SINGLE). The differences between the two words in this sense are not easily discoverable, but specific seems to be chosen more often when the ideas of specification or of illustration are involved, and particular, when the distinctness of the thing as an individual is to be suggested; thus, one gives a specific illustration to indicate a word's normal use but describes the particular uses of the word (in this connection, one of Don Quixote's adventures deserves particular mention—Muggeridge) (we get a sense for particular beauties of nature, rather than a sense for Nature herself—Binyon) Particular is often used also in the sense of special and especial (some half-dozen particular friends—Dickens) (the Debussy selection was the particular gem of the evening—Watt) In logic particular is opposed to universal and applies to matters (as propositions, judgments, and conceptions) which have reference to a single member or to some members of a class rather than to all; thus, "some men are highly intelligent" is a particular proposition, but "all men make mistakes" is a universal proposition. Often, in less technical use, particular implies an opposition to general as well as to universal (one is apt to amplify a particular judgment into a general opinion—Mackenzie) (we shall venture beyond the particular book in search of qualities that group books together—Woolf) Individual unequivocally implies reference to one of the class or group as clearly distinguished from all the others (the aspect of every individual stone or brick—Conrad) (one could hardly maintain the courage to be individual, to speak with one's own voice—Mailer) (it was not the magnitude or multiplicity of burdens that created martyrs and saints; it was the individual capacity to bear suffering—Hervey)

Ana distinctive, peculiar, individual, *characteristic: *exceptional: uncommon, occasional, rare (see INFREQUENT)

Con *common, ordinary, familiar: *usual, customary, habitual specie cash, currency, *money, legal tender, coin, coinage species *class, category, genus, denomination, genre

Ana *type, kind, sort, description, character, nature specific adj 1 *special, especial, particular, individual Ant generic

2 definite, *explicit, express, categorical

Ana designating, naming (see DESIGNATE): *clear, lucid, perspicuous: precise, exact (see CORRECT adj)

Ant vague

specific n *remedy, cure, medicine, medicament, medication, physic specify *mention, name, instance

Ana cite, *quote: stipulate (see corresponding noun under CONDITION) specimen example, sample, illustration, *instance, case specious *plausible, believable, colorable, credible

Ana *vain, nugatory, empty, hollow, idle: delusory, delusive, *misleading, deceptive: deceitful, *dishonest, untruthful, mendacious, lying speckle vb *spot, spatter, sprinkle, mottle, fleck, stipple, marble, spangle, bespangle speckled spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb) spectator, observer, beholder, looker-on, onlooker, witness, eyewitness, bystander, kibitzer are comparable when they mean one who sees or looks upon something. Spectator can be used precisely in place of auditor for one that attends an exhibition, performance, or entertainment which does not involve an appeal to the sense of hearing; thus, one tends to speak of the spectators at a football game, a prizefight, a pageant, a pantomime, or a circus but of the auditors or the audience at a concert, a lecture, or a play. Very often, however, the term is used more broadly to denote one who regards himself or is felt to be wholly apart from and in no manner identified with what is presented to his attention (as by his sight, hearing, or understanding) (it is only the spectator of morals who can assume the calm aesthetic attitude—Ellis) (the narrator . . . is a sensitive young artist, nominally a Communist, actually a spectator of history, a camera not much involved in life—Ludwig) Observer may or may not imply an intent to see, but it usually does suggest, whether one sees by intention or by accident, that one attends closely to details and often keeps a record of them; the term applies especially to those (as scientists) who gather evidence by carefully noting phenomena or the results of experiments or to military or diplomatic officials who are sent by countries not participating in a war or in a meeting of representatives from other nations to watch proceedings closely and to make a report of them; it is also applicable to whoever has formed similar habits and can be more or less relied upon for accuracy (it is the man of science who speaks, the unprejudiced observer, the acceptor of facts—Huxley) (an observer for the United States at assemblies of the United Nations) (you go about a lot amongst all sorts of people. You are a tolerably honest observer—Conrad) (I had once been a cool observer because some part of me knew that I had more emotion than most and so must protect myself with a cold eye—Mailer) Beholder sometimes carries a stronger implication of watching or regarding intently than either of the preceding terms, but it may mean little more than one who sees (all the beholders take his part with weeping—Shak.) The term is often applicable to one who has been privileged to look intently upon or, sometimes, consider deeply a person or thing with the result that he obtains a clear and accurate impression of that person or thing and is moved by the qualities (as beauty, power, tenderness, or pathos) of what is seen (to what extent is beauty subjective, existing only in the mind of the beholder—Hunter Mead) (what the beholder must realize as he looks and ponders is that history is not something in books—Duffus) Looker-on and onlooker differ from beholder chiefly in their suggestions of casualness or detachment and in their definite implication of lack of participation (there was a great crowd of lookers-on at the fire) (the surgeon refused to operate in the presence of onlookers) Either term is sometimes used in place of spectator when the distinction between the one who sees and what he sees is stressed (the onlookers, not the participants, see most of the game) (lookers-on often see what familiarity obscures for the participants—Moberly) (they dropped, panting, while the onlookers repeated that it was a shame and somebody ought to stop them—Davis) Witness specifically denotes one who has firsthand knowledge and therefore is competent to give testimony (no person shall be convicted of treason, unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act—U. S. Constitution) The term sometimes applies to a person who knows because he has seen (standing there, I was witness of a little incident that seemed to escape the rest—Quiller-Couch) but since witness does not necessarily imply seeing, eyewitness is often preferred as more explicitly implying actual sight (there were no eyewitnesses of the collision) (incontrovertible evidence, with occasional corroboration from the eyewitness accounts of the few survivors—Shirer) Bystander primarily denotes one who stands by when something is happening; sometimes it carries the implication of onlooker (the policeman took the names of all the bystanders) (men have been haunted recurrently by the question "Am I my brother's keeper?" . . . It is what makes being a bystander more and more impossible—Rothman) but at other times it suggests little more than presence at a place (difficult for each member of the society really to participate . . . He begins to be an onlooker at most of it, then a bystander, and may end up with indifference to the welfare of his society—Kroeber) (a bystander was injured by the explosion) Kibitzer specifically applies to one who watches a card game by looking over the shoulders of the players and who may annoy them by offering advice; in extended use the word denotes an onlooker who meddles or makes unwelcome suggestions.

specter spirit, ghost, *apparition, phantasm, phantom, wraith, shade, revenant speculate reason, reflect, *think, cogitate, deliberate Ana *ponder, meditate, muse, ruminate: *consider, weigh, study, contemplate, excogitate speculative 1 contemplative, meditative, *thoughtful, reflective, pensive

Ana conjecturing or conjectural, surmising, guessing (see corresponding verbs at CONJECTURE): pondering, musing, ruminating (see PONDER)

2 *theoretical, academic speech 1 *language, tongue, dialect, idiom

2 Speech, address, oration, harangue, lecture, talk, sermon, homily designate a discourse delivered to an audience. Speech can apply to a public discourse irrespective of its quality or its degree of preparation, of its aim (as to influence, instruct, or entertain), or of the caliber of its speaker or audience (the senator was called upon to make a speech) (after-dinner speeches) (<"The rest of my speech" (he exclaimed to his men) "you shall hear when I've leisure to speak it"—Lewis Carroll) Address implies formality and usually careful preparation; it often connotes distinction in the speaker or gives emphasis to the importance of the speech (commencement address) (the president is scheduled to deliver three addresses on his trip) (an article developed from his address to friends and admirers at a recent testimonial dinner—Sat. Review) Oration suggests eloquence, rhetorical style, and usually a dignified but sometimes a high-flown or long-winded appeal to the emotions of a large audience or assembly (a Fourth of July oration) (the oration of Mr. Webster was worthy of his fame, and what is much more, was worthy of the august occasion—Emerson) Harangue, once nearly equivalent to oration except for its added implications of vehemence and passion, commonly retains only these distinctive implications and connotes either length and tediousness of speech or an impassioned appeal to the audience (if you do not believe that emotion . . . is the basic social force, listen to the harangue of any successful politician—Furnas) Lecture often implies reading; it commonly designates a carefully prepared speech on a special topic intended to give information and instruction to a group of students or studious persons (they are still using lectures to pass out information which could be got by the student more rapidly and accurately from . . . books—Lynn White) Talk stresses informality; it may be used to designate either a lecture or an address when the speaker wishes to emphasize his desire to speak directly and simply to his auditors as individuals (this is a talk rather than an oration It is surely unnecessary to say how well, and with what an individual attitude and selectiveness Mr. Forster talks—Times Lit. Sup.) Sermon and homily both commonly imply religious instruction by an ordained preacher and a church congregation as the listeners; in such use sermon usually connotes a theme drawn from a scriptural text, while homily suggests practical moral counsel rather than doctrinal discussion. But both terms have extended use in which they denote a usually didactic talk or discussion on a moral theme (copious drafts of exhortation and homily administered . . . by reformers—Cardozo) (going around the country, preaching sermons on the need of defending the freedom of the mind—Davis) speechless *dumb, mute, inarticulate speed n 1 *haste, hurry, expedition, dispatch Ana *celerity, legerity, alacrity; fleetness, rapidity, swiftness, quickness (see corresponding adjectives at FAST); velocity, pace, headway (see SPEED)

2 Speed, velocity, momentum, impetus, pace, headway are comparable but not all mutually synonymous terms that basically apply to motion through space. Speed (see also HASTE n) denotes rate of motion, a value computable by dividing the distance covered by the time taken (a car that covers 300 miles in 6 hours has an average speed of 50 miles an hour) Velocity denotes the speed of something that is directed along a given path. Ordinarily velocity suggests rate of motion in a straight line (linear velocity) or in an arc or circle (angular velocity) (the velocity of a bullet) (the velocity of a skier) (velocity of a wind) (velocity of light) (a body rotating about a fixed axis with a constant angular velocity) Momentum in general or casual use may take the place of speed or velocity, but in technical use it denotes not rate of motion but quantity of motion, a value determinable by multiplying the mass of a moving body by its velocity (a falling stone gathers momentum) (the momentum of an iron ball rolling down an inclined plane is greater than that of a cork ball of the same diameter rolling with the same velocity) (as photons are always in motion, we may also speak of the momentum of a photon, much as we speak of the momentum of a motorcar—Jeanes) Impetus (see also STIMULUS) is a popular rather than technical synonym of momentum. In practice it is a closer synonym of impulse in the sense of the effect of an impelling force, for it regularly carries an implication of a rushing upon or an onset, with the result that it usually suggests great momentum or implies a powerful driving force as the cause of such momentum (whether the steam . . . retains sufficient impetus to carry it to our shores—T. H. Huxley) (the circulating blood receives a new impetus from the contraction of the ventricles of the heart) Pace belongs here not as a technical term but as a term in general use to denote the speed of or as if of one (as a person or horse) going afoot (he set the pace for his companions on the hike) (the pace was too slow for the rest of the party) Pace often finds extended use in describing such things as activities, progress, or rate of production (keep pace with the times) (the factories were asked to increase their pace) (in New York he had moved on from speed to speed and from height to height, keeping pace with all the most magnificent developments in the furious city—Wolfe) Headway basically applies to motion forward and in this sense is used chiefly in reference to ships (he started the screw turning until the African Queen was just making headway against the current—Forester) However it frequently denotes rate of movement ahead and then is used in reference not only to ships but to whatever is capable of advancing or making progress (our mutual security program had suffered a year of lost headway—Barnett) (the independent movements of nominalism and German mysticism made great headway—Thilly)

speed vb Speed, accelerate, quicken, hasten, hurry, precipitate can mean to go or make go fast or faster. Speed emphasizes rapidity of motion or progress; as a transitive verb it suggests an increase in tempo; as an intransitive verb, a high degree of swiftness (<speed up an engine> (<speed up the work in a factory> (the bullet sped through the air) (arrested for speeding) (the stoutest of the boatmen seized the staff out of turn and sped our craft forward—Wald) Accelerate stresses increase in rate of motion or progress; it does not necessarily imply speed (<accelerated his pace so as to overtake the leaders> (a rich soil accelerates the growth of most plants) (<accelerate the speed of a car> (History of late has accelerated her pace. Where once she moved slowly . . . she has within the past decade raced forward jet-propelled—J. M. Brown) (excitement was accelerating moment by moment, like the wheels of the train—Capote) Quicken stresses shortening of the time consumed, often with a suggestion of animation or stimulation (exercise *quicken*s the pulse) (a broad and continuous education that *quicken*s understanding of the modern world—Sidney Hook) Hasten implies urgent quickness or a quick or premature outcome (<hastened to apologize> (the annoyance and terror he lived in must have greatly hastened his early and unhappy death—Stevenson) (the science of archaeology is advancing into the past almost as rapidly as physics and electronics are hastening the future—Time) Hurry implies haste that causes confusion or prevents concentrated attention (his aim was hurried and his shot went wide of the mark)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

 <these defects might pass more easily in a turbulent romanticist, hurrying pell-mell to get expressed some moving and dramatic scene, careless of details—Fry> Precipitate implies impetuosity, suddenness, or abruptness (men will not bide their time, but will insist on precipitating the march of affairs—Buckle) <its ruin was precipitated by religious persecution—J. R. Green>

Ana *advance, forward, further, promote: *adjust, regulate, fix speedy expeditious, quick, swift, fleet, rapid, *fast, hasty

Ana brisk, nimble, *agile: prompt, *quick, ready

Ant dilatory

spell n Spell, shift, tour, trick, turn, stint, bout, go can mean a limited period or amount of some activity that often follows a schedule. Spell is ordinarily used in reference to very heavy or trying work which must be interrupted by a period of rest; the period may vary according to the laboriousness of the activity and the need of relief from it <each spell of work was followed by a brief rest> Shift suggests a change in time or hours of duty and therefore a change in the workers employed; it is used especially in reference to an industrial plant which is in continuous operation, and is applied variously to the period of work or to the body of workers engaged to work during that period <the third shift begins work at midnight> <the factory works on a schedule of three shifts each day> Tour occurs chiefly in the phrase tour of duty; it usually suggests a change in the character of the work and in its typical use (as of military or naval personnel) implies assignment for a definite term (as of weeks, months, or years) to a particular type of duty or to duty in a particular place <his next tour of duty will be in Ceylon> <after a year at sea the commander was given a tour of shore duty> Trick, like spell, usually implies the time allotted to one for working at or as if at the helm of a ship, and it may differ little from shift as applied to a period of work <to take his trick at the wheel—Marryat> <the night trick in a newspaper office> Turn in general use suggests an opportunity of a specified kind (as for work or play) or for a particular period that comes in alternation, rotation, or at more or less regular intervals <I'll take a turn at that job now> <the boys lined up, each waiting for his turn at bat> <if we each took our turn and did our bit in peace as we had to do during the war—Shaw> Stint (see also TASK) implies either an assigned amount of work or an assigned amount of time in which to accomplish it. The term is used widely in reference to one's own occupation, to the work of running a home, a farm, or a business, or to work in an industrial field especially where regular hours for a day's work are not or cannot be easily established <the author assigned himself a daily stint of three pages> <Spinoza was forced to grind his stint of lenses before he could gratify his love for philosophy> <in some countries miners' wages are regulated not by days but by stints> Bout, which has many specific applications and is perhaps more widely employed than any of the preceding terms, in general suggests an activity or condition that is marked by a definite beginning and end in time; specifically it may refer to a fight, an attack of illness and especially of a recurrent illness, or a spell (as of drinking, of work, or of exercise), but in every case it implies a beginning or end that marks it off from what precedes and follows   <he had been given to bouts only, and was not a habitual drunkard—Hardy> <copious eating and still more copious drinking, interrupted by bouts of . . . domestic horseplay—Huxley> <showing the effect of his past in . . . bouts of neurotic excitement—Buchan> Go is often not clearly defined in meaning, but it comes close to bout, spell, and turn, in suggesting a restricted period  <have a go at farming>

Ana *period: allotment, assignment, apportionment (see corresponding verbs at ALLOT)

spend, expend, disburse can mean to pay out money or an equivalent of money for something or in expectation of some return. Spend is the ordinary term; it may be used regardless of the amount dealt out in the purchase of something <spend a nickel for candy> <spend fifty dollars for a dress> <the government during the first year of the war spent billions of dollars> In intransitive use it requires usually an adverb or adverbial phrase to indicate the extent to which money or, by extension, its equivalent, is paid out <he has never known how it feels to spend freely> <the Pentagon spends so wastefully that we could cut our military budget at least 25 percent—Catton> <this world in arms is not spending money alone. It is spending the sweat of its laborers, the genius of its scientists, the hopes of its children—Eisenhower> However the word is often used with so little implication of an immediate or direct or commensurate return and with objects so remotely equivalent to money that it comes to imply a using in such a manner as to exhaust, drain, or deplete <spend six months searching for the home they wished to buy> <spent her small store of energy with caution> <man after man spends himself in this cause—Carlyle> <decided on a whim to spend the day like a yo-yo shuttling on the subway back and forth underneath 42nd Street—Pynchon> <spend his life and his blood in the service of the king> Expend comes very close to spend in meaning, but it tends to be used more in reference to business, industry, finance, or government than in reference to private persons and therefore to imply larger sums or more determinate ends <the social services upon which public revenue is expended—Hobson> In its extended use, too, expend tends to imply largeness of outgo and often, like spend, suggests a depleting or exhausting of what is being used <we have expended our resources—both human and natural—without stint—Truman> <youth is always giving itself, expending itself—Yeats> but it not infrequently carries an added suggestion of futility that is not apparent in spend <much thought had been expended, but little accomplished—Dawson & Wilson> <the tons of printer's ink and newsprint expended during the course of the hearings—Wall Street Jour.> <all the social feeling and intellectual effort . . . seemed to have expended themselves—John Morley> Disburse basically implies the paying out of money (as from public revenues, a huge fortune, an institutional income, or a society's funds), but it also may imply distribution (as to pensioners or among heirs) and often stresses an acting under authority in such paying or distributing <the treasurer has disbursed nearly five thousand dollars of emergency funds for repair of the clubhouse> <our time and our money, even though disbursed by governmental authority—Hambly> <waiting for the teller to disburse those complex payroll accounts—Morley> When extended to nonmonetary matters, disburse is likely to stress distribution <the hundred kilograms of uranium . . . was designated for research only, and was to be disbursed under strictly bilateral agreements—Lear>

Ana *distribute, dispense, divide, deal, dole: *allot, assign, allocate, apportion: *scatter, disperse, dissipate: *pay, compensate, remunerate

Ant save

spendthrift, prodigal, profligate, waster, wastrel are comparable when they denote a person who dissipates his resources foolishly and wastefully. All are more or less pejorative terms but they may differ significantly in emphasis and application. Spendthrift and prodigal are the most nearly neutral terms and in themselves, as apart from context, carry little suggestion of moral obliquity; they are, however, the members of the group with specific legal applications and are generally applicable when the basic notion is one of unwise and wasteful expenditure usually of material resources (as wages, wealth, or property). Spendthrift stresses lack of prudence in spending and usually implies imbalance between income and outgo rather than lavishness (to spendthrifts . . . there is only one limit to their fortune,—that of time; and a spendthrift with only a few crowns is the Emperor of Rome until they are spent—Stevenson) (a spendthrift is a man . . . who saves nothing, spends fifty-eight cents of every dollar on living expenses, forty cents on recreation and one cent each on education and alms—Brooklyn Daily Eagle) In legal and quasi-legal use the term implies such expenditure in relation to income and resources as are likely to leave the spendthrift and his dependents public charges. Prodigal (compare prodigal adj under PROFUSE) is more likely to suggest such lavish expenditure as can deplete the most abundant resources (this royal prodigal, lavishing the nation's wealth on palaces and parks while the people starved) (the Irish produce great writers because they're temperamentally prodigals—they're willing to squander their lives on the gratuitous work that great art demands—Edmund Wilson) In legal and quasi-legal use the term applies specifically to one held legally incompetent to manage his property or to incur debts because of demonstrated incapacity to avoid foolish dissipation of property. While profligate may imply the habits of a spendthrift, it is more likely to stress such extravagant, even vicious expenditure of one's personal powers (as of mind and body) that mere economic waste becomes a secondary matter; characteristically it suggests the utmost of debauchery and dissoluteness (they were not cautious schemers, husbanding their resources. Julius Caesar was a notorious profligate, who piled up enormous debts—Inge) (the wretched profligate found himself again plunged into excesses—J. R. Green) Waster often comes very close to spendthrift in meaning, but it carries a stronger implication of worthlessness than does the former word. It often suggests the habits of a loafer or ne'er-do-well but it is sometimes applied to men of inherited wealth who spend their lives in idleness or in frivolities (he who will not work, must . . . leave the town, as they will not sweat themselves for an healthy, idle waster—Adair) (the palaces and pleasure seats of the plutocrats are used for the recreation of workers instead of for the enervation of extravagant wasters—Shaw) (they're a bunch of wasters. All they do . . . is just dance and chatter and show off their clothes—Sinclair Lewis) Wastrel, though it often implies the wasting of money and other resources, more often is applied to a good-for-nothing, whether young or old, especially to one who is a drain upon the community; the prevailing implication is that of disreputableness (if we are to avoid the danger of so shaping them that they shall be mere mechanisms in working hours and mere wastrels in the rest—Grandgent) (even allowing for a large element of intentional exaggeration . . . there remains the basic fact that . . . we have the expression of the twisted psyche of an embittered, penniless wastrel—R. A. Hall)

spew vb *belch, burp, vomit, disgorge, regurgitate, throw up sphere *field, domain, province, territory, bailiwick

Ana dominion, sway, jurisdiction, control, *power: *range, reach, scope, compass: *function, office, duty, province spice *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, dash, vein, strain, streak

spick-and-span *neat, tidy, trim, trig, snug, shipshape

Ana *clean, cleanly: fresh, *new

Ant filthy

spicy *pungent, piquant, poignant, racy, snappy

Ana *spirited, high-spirited, gingery, fiery, peppery:

aromatic, redolent, balmy, *odorous spin vb *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl, pirouette

Ana *swing, sway, oscillate, vibrate

spine, backbone, back, vertebrae, chine designate the articulated column of bones which is the central and axial feature of the skeleton of human beings and other vertebrate animals. Spine, backbone, back, and vertebrae can be used without distinction, but one of the first three is more likely to be chosen when the structure is considered as a unit, and the last when its composite structure is pertinent. Spine and backbone are more often used in reference to human beings than to lower vertebrates; spine is often felt as more technical than backbone and is likely to be preferred when the intent is to appear informed or knowledgeable (the doctor recommended an operation on my brother's spine) (don't sit like that, you'll kink your backbone) but spine is also appropriate when vertebrae could be misleading (fractured his spine and injured three vertebrae) Back, more often than spine or backbone, applies to the bony column together with ligaments and muscles that support it and collectively make up a distinguishable part of the vertebrate body (broke his back in a fall) (a badly wrenched back) Vertebrae is likely to occur in technical anatomical use and in general use is often preferred when the reference is to other than human beings. Chine has lost this basic meaning except indirectly in application to meat animals, in which it is applied to a cut of meat including part of the backbone (a chine of beef)

spirit n 1 *soul

Ana *mind, intellect, soul, psyche

2 ghost, *apparition, phantasm, phantom, wraith, specter, shade, revenant

3 *courage, mettle, resolution, tenacity

Ana *fortitude, pluck, grit, backbone, sand, guts: zeal, fervor, ardor, *passion, enthusiasm: energy, strength, might, *power, force

4 *vigor, vim, dash, esprit, verve, punch, élan, drive

Ana vitality, animation, aliveness (see corresponding adjectives at LIVING): vivacity, liveliness, gaiety, sprightliness (see corresponding adjectives at LIVELY) spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, spunky, fiery, peppery, gingery mean having or manifesting a high degree of vitality, spirit, and daring. Spirited implies not only fullness of life but such signs of excellent physical, or sometimes mental, health as ardor, animation, energy, and enthusiasm; the term's implications vary widely, but it usually carries a suggestion of vigorous vitality, exaltation, or stimulation (his words, spirited as they were in meaning, contrasted sadly with the weakness of the voice—Stevenson) (a spirited turn to a jaded commonplace has achieved an opening that is flawlessly organic—Lowes) (the defense is spirited and extreme and nothing is given to the enemy—Sykes) (shaking his head backward, somewhat after the manner of a spirited horse—George Eliot) High-spirited can add to spirited a strong suggestion of dashing vigor and even of a temperamental unwillingness to accept guidance and control (a sensibly unheroic man who is led into wild shooting frays by a high-spirited girl—Anthony Boucher) <too high-spirited to be passive instruments in his hand—William Robertson) <they were high-spirited, perhaps a little insolent as well as reckless—Ellis) Mettle differs little from high-spirited except in its tendency to stress fearlessness and vigor more than restiveness (he found himself immediately at grips with one of the watch, a mettle fellow who fought like a wildcat—Costain) <his occasional sarcasms are no more than a high-spirited gaiety and his quarrels no more frequent or violent than might be normal in any mettle youngster—Edgar Johnson) Spunky often implies qualities similar to those suggested by high-spirited and mettle but it carries a stronger implication of quickness in taking fire and of an incapacity for being downed or daunted; also, the term is often applied to unlooked-for courage in persons or animals (she was under five feet and weighed less than ninety pounds, but he would have had an armful of spunky vitality—Thurber) <one of the great subjects for biography is that spunky, crotchety, illiterate, and wonderfully gifted maker of things, Henry Ford—Gill) Fiery, peppery, and gingery are used as synonyms of the preceding terms when one prefers a more concrete term. Fiery, suggesting the heat of flame or fire, implies impetuosity, passionateness, or sometimes irascibility in addition to spiritedness (a fiery soul, which, working out its way, fretted the pygmy body to decay—Dryden) <a fiery, tortured spirit, aiming at something greater than could be conceived by anything that was bound up with the flesh—Maugham) <the fiery thinker who flattened a generation with the hail of his words—Tracy) Peppery adds to spirited suggestions of a hotness or pungency characteristic of pepper and often distinctively connotes asperity or excitability (a peppery response) <Master Rickey is a peppery young man. Love and war come as natural to him as bread and butter—Meredith) <as he makes clear in peppery footnotes and caustic asides, he has aimed at an absolute precision of factual detail—Kazin) Gingery carries a heightened suggestion of a zest, spiciness, or snap associated with ginger (in gingery good health at 55—Newsweek) <he learned the high quick gingery ways of thoroughbreds—Masefield)

Ana courageous, intrepid, bold, audacious, valiant, *brave; impetuous, *precipitate; *eager, avid, keen; passionate, enthusiastic, zealous, fervent, ardent (see corresponding nouns at PASSION)

Ant spiritless

spiritless *languid, languishing, languorous, listless, enervated, lackadaisical

Ana *lethargic, sluggish, comatose: dull, slow, *stupid, dense, crass: *tame, subdued, submissive

Ant spirited

spiritual adj 1 *immaterial, incorporeal

Ant physical —Con *material, corporeal, phenomenal, sensible, objective: *bodily, corporal, somatic

2 *holy, sacred, divine, religious, blessed

Ana *supernatural, supranatural: *celestial, heavenly

Ant physical: carnal: material: temporal spite n despite, malignity, malignancy, spleen, grudge, *malice, ill will, malevolence

Ana rancor, animus, antipathy (see ENMITY): vindictiveness, revengefulness or revenge, vengefulness or vengeance (see corresponding adjectives at VINDICTIVE)

spiteful malignant, *malicious, malevolent, malign

Ana rancorous, antipathetic, antagonistic, hostile (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY): *vindictive, revengeful, vengeful spleen malignity, malignancy, grudge, spite, despite, *malice, malevolence, ill will

Ana animosity, antipathy, animus, rancor, antagonism (see ENMITY): venom, *poison: vindictiveness, revengefulness (see corresponding adjectives at VINDICTIVE) splendid, resplendent, gorgeous, glorious, sublime, superb can mean having or displaying outstanding or transcendently impressive qualities. Although, like most adjectives implying transcendence, they are often used interchangeably in hyperbole or in general expressions of great admiration or satisfaction, they are capable of being used more precisely in ways that convey quite distinctive images and impressions. Splendid implies an outshining of the usual or customary (as in brilliancy, luster, grandeur, or magnificence) or an impressing of the observer (as by surpassing brilliancy, luster, or grandeur) (a fine—yea even a splendid room, of great height, and carved grandeur—Galsworthy) <the splendid efflorescence of genius in Russia during . . . the last century—Ellis) <blocks set there like markers of a splendid city yet unbuilt which would rise grandly from the hills—Wolfe) <there was a majestic quality about this woman, something splendid, almost stately—Dahl) Resplendent implies a glowing or blazing splendor (girls, resplendent in fine red or green cloth coats with big fur collars framing the flashing vivacity of their faces—Ferber) <Juliet died, but not before she had shown how great and resplendent a thing love could be—Krutch) Gorgeous is likely to apply to the sumptuously splendid in color or display of colors (the July sun shone over Egdon and fired its crimson heather to scarlet. It was the one season of the year, and the one weather of the season, in which the heath was gorgeous—Hardy) The term sometimes stresses showiness or elaborateness rather than splendor of coloring (a gorgeous feast) (quite gorgeous archway with gates at the head of the staircase, covered and festooned with pink roses—Wouk) Glorious implies a being radiant with light or beauty or a standing out as eminently worthy of admiration, renown, or distinction (now is the winter of our discontent made glorious summer by this sun of York—Shak) <he soon saw within ken a glorious Angel stand . . . his back was turned, but not his brightness hid—Milton) <as often happens after a gray daybreak the sun had risen in a warm and glorious splendor—Conrad) <this glorious vision of manly strength and beauty—Shaw) Sublime applies distinctively to what is so elevated or exalted that the mind in contemplating or picturing it cannot reach full comprehension of it and must, in part at least, feel or imagine the vastness of its extent, power, beauty, or nobility (the main force of Buddhist art was spent in the creation of sublime figures, the images of those enlightened ones who in the clear beam of their purified vision beheld and understood the sorrows, the struggles, the vain angers and hatreds of imperfect mortality—Binyon) <the thunderstorm when it is felt to be sublime has lost in part at least the terrors it possesses as a natural event—Alexander) <he ran the gamut of denunciation, rising to heights of wrath that were sublime and almost Godlike—London) Superb describes what exceeds the merely grand, magnificent, sumptuous, or splendid and reaches the highest conceivable point of competence, brilliance, grandeur, magnificence, or splendor (a superb wine) (a superb performance) (the author's style is brilliant, his command of words and images superb—Harrison Smith) (as a boat builder he was superb . . . The boat was sculptured rather than built—Steinbeck) <superb figures, breathing health and strength—Binyon) <he had the superb vitality of early youth—Cather) Ana radiant, effulgent, luminous, brilliant, *bright: illustrious, eminent (see FAMOUS): excelling or excellent, surpassing, transcending or transcendent (see corresponding verbs at EXCEED) splenetic *irascible, choleric, testy, touchy, cranky, cross Ana morose, *sullen, glum, gloomy: *irritable, querulous, peevish, snappish: captious, carping, caviling (see CRITICAL) split vb rend, cleave, rive, rip, *tear

Ana *separate, part, divide, sever: *cut, chop, hew split n *breach, break, schism, rent, rupture, rift

Ana *crack, cleft, fissure: estrangement, alienation (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE): schism, heresy (see corresponding nouns at HERETIC)

split second *instant, moment, second, minute, flash, jiffy, twinkling spoil n Spoil, plunder, booty, prize, loot, swag can mean something of value that is taken from another by force or craft. Spoil applies to the movable property of a defeated enemy, which by the custom of old-time warfare belongs to the victor and of which he strips a captured city or place (fire the palace, the fort, and the keep—leave to the foeman no spoil at all—Kipling) With changes in methods and customs of warfare spoil, and especially its plural spoils, tends to be applied not only to property or land taken over by conquering forces in actual warfare or demanded by them from the conquered as a condition of making peace but also to whatever by custom and often unethical custom belongs to a victor whether in warlike endeavor or more peaceful pursuits; thus, in political use spoils applies chiefly to appointive public offices and their emoluments which the successful party in an election regards as its peculiar property to be bestowed as its leaders wish. But spoil may also apply to something gained by skill or effort (the spoils of a conservative industrial life—Brooks) or sometimes acquired as casually as if by looting (the car filled with country spoils) (brought back all sorts of frivolous spoils from her trip) Plunder implies open violence (as of marauders) and is a more inclusive term than spoil because not restricted to warfare; it consistently implies robbery, whether as incidental to war or as dissociated from it and is applicable to what has been seized not only by spoilers, pillagers, and sackers but by such ruffians as bandits, brigands, and highwaymen (often the pirates were glad to accept money instead of plunder, and ransom for the slaves—Forester) (a useless compiler, who fills letters and sermons with the plunder of the ancients and Holy Writ—H. O. Taylor) Booty, like plunder, is applicable to martial spoils as well as to what is seized by or as if by robbery or theft (birds like the berries. They gather them, fly to top branches where they can be on the lookout for danger, and eat their booty—Dorrance) (a cat springing on an oriole and marching proudly off with her golden booty projecting . . . from her mouth—Brooks) In international law booty is technically used in distinction from prize, booty referring to spoils taken on land, and prize, to spoils captured on the high seas or in the territorial waters of the enemy (finished, but never published, a Latin treatise on the right of seizing prizes at sea—Barr) Loot may be used in place of plunder, booty, or spoils when a highly derogatory or condemnatory term is desired (drawn into the conflict by a hope of sharing in the loot of the Church—Belloc) (they believed that the revolution which they had fought by brawling in the streets would bring them loot and good jobs—Shirer) The term is also applied specifically to the plunder of those who rob the dead or helpless victims of a catastrophe or who steal anything left of value in the ruins of buildings wholly or partly destroyed (as by fire, flood, earthquake, or violent storm) (prowlers among the ruins in search of loot) In more general use the term is applicable to gains felt as ill-gotten (corrupt officials enriched by the loot of years) Swag is also often used in place of loot or plunder especially to imply a collection or sackful of valuables gathered by or as if by thieves (asserted that the swag from . . . graft was kept hidden . . . in a metal box buried in the backyard—F. L. Allen) (certain the great swag of doubloons was there—if he could only find it—Dobie)

Ana *theft, robbery, larceny, burglary: acquisitions, acquisitions (see singular nouns at ACQUIREMENT)

spoil vb 1 *injure, harm, hurt, damage, impair, mar

Ana *ruin, wreck: *destroy, demolish

Con preserve, conserve, *save: amend, redress, remedy (see CORRECT vb)

2 *indulge, pamper, humor, baby, mollycoddle

Ana *injure, harm, hurt, damage: favor, accommodate, *oblige: *debase, deprave, vitiate, debauch

3 *decay, decompose, rot, putrefy, disintegrate, crumble

Ana corrupt, vitiate (see DEBASE): *ruin, wreck: impair, harm, *injure spoliate despoil, *ravage, devastate, waste, sack, pillage

Ana *rob, plunder, rifle, loot: defraud, swindle, *cheat sponge, sponger *parasite, sycophant, favorite, toady, lickspittle, bootlicker, hanger-on, leech sponsor n Sponsor, patron, surety, guarantor, backer, angel are comparable when they denote a person who in a greater or less degree accepts responsibility for another person or for a particular venture or undertaking. Sponsor usually implies public acceptance of a responsibility and a definite engagement to perform what is promised; the word implies making a pledge in behalf of another and thereby accepting responsibility for its fulfillment; thus, the sponsor of an infant in baptism makes the promises in the child's name and pledges himself to be responsible for the child's religious training if the latter is deprived of his natural guardians. In a wider sense sponsor suggests assumption of the role of promoter or supporter and may imply acceptance of any degree of responsibility from one that is complete (it is my way, when I have finished a book, to let it drop with a resigned shrug . . . The charm it once possessed for me, its sponsor, has long since vanished—Thomas Mann) to one that is indirect or remote and often purely economic (the major sponsors of scientific research, governments and business corporations—Flew) (for every person whose passage was paid to Virginia, the sponsor received fifty acres of land—Smelser & Kirwin) Patron stresses the acceptance of the relation as a protector or benefactor especially in return for service, honors, or devotion; it often implies the obligation to assist, support, or defend; thus, a patron of an artist or of a poet is a wealthy or influential person who makes him a protégé presumably in return for honors paid him; the patron of an institution, a cause, or a charity is one whose generous and regular contributions to its support are publicly recognized. Surety and guarantor imply answerability for another's debt or performance of duty in case of default because of prior acceptance of responsibility. Backer, less specific in denotation than the other terms, is used chiefly in relation to enterprises (as of sports, politics, and the theater); it often implies the giving of financial support, sometimes merely moral support or encouragement, but it carries no implication that responsibility for debts is assumed (the success of a publication is the success of its editors, and not of its business managers and its backers—Hendrick) Angel is a somewhat derogatory or contemptuous term for a financial backer, especially of a theatrical enterprise. Ana supporter or support, upholder, champion, advoca-tor or advocate (see corresponding verbs at SUPPORT); promoter, furtherer (see corresponding verbs at ADVANCE)

spontaneity abandon, *unconstraint

Ana spontaneousness, instinctiveness, impulsiveness (see corresponding adjectives at SPONTANEOUS); extemporaneousness, offhandedness, unpremeditatedness (see corresponding adjectives at EXTEMPORANEOUS); naturalness, simplicity, unsophistication, naïveté, ingenuousness (see corresponding adjectives at NATURAL) spontaneous 1 Spontaneous, impulsive, instinctive, automatic, mechanical in application to persons or their movements, acts, and utterances mean acting or activated without apparent thought or deliberation. Spontaneous can describe whatever is not affected or effected by an external or internal compulsion of the will and comes about so naturally that it seems unpremeditated as well as unprompted (a spontaneous burst of applause) (a spontaneous expression of feeling) (the spontaneous wish to learn, which every normal child possesses . . . should be the driving-force in education—Russell) (the witticisms are never planted: they are spontaneous and over in a flash, like the quick striking of a match—Edmund Wilson) Impulsive applies to someone or something actuated suddenly and impetuously under the stress of the feeling or spirit of the moment and seeming to be involuntary and forced by emotion rather than voluntary and natural (an impulsive act of generosity) (my heart, impulsive and wayward—Longfellow) (he made an impulsive gesture, and opened his lips; but he dared not speak—Deland) (to promote the carefree, impulsive purchasing of new items—Packard) Instinctive implies the guiding influence of instinct and a native and unreasoned prompting to actions characteristic of the species and presumably contributing to its life and well-being; when referred to human beings, the term is applied to actions, movements, or feelings which are instantaneous, unwilled, and often unconscious (as reflex movements, habitual actions, or specific responses to stimuli) (the most prolonged and difficult operations of our minds may yet become instantaneous, or, as we call it, instinctive—Shaw) (her attitude was not a matter of reason. It was as instinctive as the humping-up of a cat at a dog—Wouk) Automatic and mechanical apply to what at least to outward appearances seems to engage neither the mind nor the emotions and to suggest the operation of a machine. But automatic, like instinctive, stresses promptness in the response. It differs from instinctive, however, in implying adaptability to changing circumstances and readiness to react or to respond immediately and unvaryingly each time a given situation or stimulus recurs (the responses of a well-trained soldier to commands are automatic) (he pulled the hall door open, and he held it, in automatic and habitual caution, scarcely ajar—Boyle) (in fact, voting is so nearly automatic that a cynic might ask why we have election campaigns at all—Bliven b.1889) Mechanical, on the other hand, stresses the lifeless and, often, the perfunctory character of the response. It does not, as automatic often does, suggest perfect discipline; rather, it suggests a mind dulled by repetition of the act, motion, or operation and capable only of routine performance (he would deal you out facts in a dry mechanical way as if reading them in a book—Hudson) (engaged in futile and mechanical lovemaking, compulsive drinking, and considerations of suicide—Aldridge)

Ana *extemporaneous, extempore, impromptu, improvised, offhand, unpremeditated: *natural, simple, ingenuous, unsophisticated

2 *automatic

spoon vb ladle, dish, *dip, bail, scoop

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

sporadic occasional, rare, scarce, *infrequent, uncommon Ana scattered, dispersed (see SCATTER); sparse, exiguous, *meager sport vb *play, disport, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol Ana divert, *amuse, recreate, entertain: *skip, bound, hop sport n 1 play, disport, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol (see under PLAY vb)

Ana amusement, diversion, recreation, entertainment (see under AMUSE); merriment, jollity (see corresponding adjectives at MERRY)

2 *fun, jest, game, play

Ana *mirth, glee, hilarity, jollity

3 in plural form sports *athletics, games sportive *playful, frolicsome, roguish, waggish, impish, mischievous

Ana blithe, *merry, jocund, jovial, jolly: mirthful, gleeful, hilarious (see corresponding nouns at MIRTH)

spot n *place, position, location, situation, site, station Ana *locality, district, neighborhood, vicinity: region, *area, tract, belt, zone: section, sector (see PART) spot vb Spot, spatter, sprinkle, mottle, fleck, stipple, marble, speckle, spangle, bespangle can mean to cover or to mark or to become covered or marked with spots or streaks.

The same distinctions in implications or connotations are found in their participial adjectives (often used as simple adjectives) spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled. Spot usually suggests either accident or a result of nature.

When accident or carelessness is suggested, a staining or smirching is often connoted (spot a dress with mud) (spot a cloth with iodine) (the book was spotted with grease) (spotted her stockings in the rain) but, when the agency of art or nature is suggested, some design is usually implied that decorates, covers, or distinguishes; this use occurs mainly in the participial adjective (spotted muslin) (no spotted pony is ever pure Shetland—Riker) (a spotted leopard) (a spotted orchid) Spatter (see also SPRINKLE) essentially implies a dispersing or scattering in fragments; in general it presupposes an action (as of boiling grease, of dashing rain, or of a person washing) that causes something to fly out in drops or bits upon something or someone (do not get the lard too hot, for it will spatter all over you) (spray from one of the hoses spattered over the longshoremen—Pizer) (his every good fortune spattered others with misfortune—Malamud) (do ye wait for the spattered shrapnel ere ye learn how a gun is laid?—Kipling)

Sprinkle (see also SPRINKLE) implies an effect of or as if of scattering a liquid in small drops; the term may emphasize the numbers or frequency of tiny spots or the thin strewing of larger ones (his ill-fitting clothes were usually sprinkled with cigarette ashes—Lubell) (the massed rows of black skullcaps and white prayer shawls, sprinkled here and there with the frilly hats . . . of women—Wouk) (a heavily wooded section, sprinkled with small lakes—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Mottle stresses an irregular spotting (as in streaks or blotches or patches) usually with another color; therefore what is mottled tends to present a clouded or a broken appearance or a surface covered with unevenly placed spots (drifting clouds mottled the sea—Michener) (books bound in mottled calf) (his eyes were opaque as paving stones, and his cheeks a mottled gray—Kenneth Roberts) Fleck may imply a spot or blemish (as of the skin); usually, however, it suggests a light spotting by specks (as of snow, of color, of light, or of clouds) (overhead the still blue is scarcely flecked by a cloud—Black) (one hillside is flecked by a herd of black goats—Edmund Wilson) (immature birds . . . recognizable by their dark, flecked plumage—E. A. Armstrong) Stipple basically refers to a technique in engraving, painting, or drawing in which dots or short touches rather than lines are used, especially to depict masses or to indicate shadows. The term is often extended to other things that suggest this technique or its effect (accidentally joggled his arm in such wise as to stipple ink over the coat—Perelman) (sunlight that fell through the trees and stippled the sidewalks—Basso) (the quail that spins out of the stippled corn to windy air—Southerly) (a play stippled alternately with tenderness and dynamite—Nathan) Marble comes close to mottle, but it is specifically used when by intent or by nature the irregularly streaked effect of variegated marble is reproduced (for the endpapers we use . . . handmade paper marbled by hand—Notes on The Art of Book-binding) (well-marbled beef) (his uneven eyes, one blind, marbled and sunken in his skull—Malcolm Cowley) Speckle suggests a covering with small and often crowded spots (as of color); the term is sometimes used with a suggestion of the cause or nature of the marks (a few drops of unenthusiastic rain . . . speckled the shoulders of his coat—Charteris) (his arms were speckled from wrists to biceps with the punctures of a hypodermic needle—Kobler) (bright stars speckled the sky—Mansfield) Spangle and bespangle suggest a thick strewing with tiny sparkling bits (as of shiny metal) or with something giving a similar effect (an evening sheath . . . spangled with black sequins—Lois Long) (the spangled palaces of sin and fancy dancing in the false West of the movies—Steinbeck) (grass . . . all bespangled with dewdrops—Cowper) (a cold perspiration bespangled his brow—Gilbert) Ana splash, bespatter, besprinkle, asperse (see SPRINKLE): *soil, sully, dirty, smirch, besmirch: variegate, checker, dapple, freak (see corresponding adjectives at VARIEGATED) spotted spattered, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

sprain n *strain

sprain vb strain (see under STRAIN n) spread vb Spread, circulate, disseminate, diffuse, propagate, radiate can all mean to extend or cause to extend over an area or space. Spread basically implies a drawing or stretching out to the limit (spread a net) (spread a cloth on the ground) (the bird spreads its wings) (spread a sail) and in the sense here considered emphasizes distribution or dispersion (as by strewing or scattering or being strewed or scattered) over an extent of space that may be large or small or incalculable or calculable (spread fertilizer over a field) (this troublesome weed has spread over a large section of the country) Often it suggests an applying in or a taking the form of a thin layer (spread butter on bread) (the paint spreads thinly and evenly) (the clouds shifted, spread against the sky . . . and enveloped everything below—Styron) or a making or becoming more prevalent or more widely known or felt (don't go on spreading that nonsense—Rose Macaulay) (the heretic should be crushed before his heresy can spread—Fitzroy Maclean) (news of us might spread far beyond that town—Shipton) Circulate may imply in its primary and largely technical use a continuous or repeated movement over the same course from starting point to starting point (the blood circulates from the heart through the arteries and veins back to the heart again) (steam circulating through a heating system) In its more general applications the term tends to stress a moving about or a causing to move about freely and continuously, often to the more or less complete loss of the notion of going over the same course again and again (the seats were being filled up rapidly and a pleasant noise circulated in the auditorium—Joyce) (the satire, circulating in manuscript copies, had a great local vogue—Lucas) (all of us circulating ominously, and incognito, throughout the city, sizing up elevator operators—Salinger) Disseminate implies much the same as spread when that word suggests distribution here and there (disseminate information) (the London ladies were indignant, and naturally they started disseminating a vast amount of fruity gossip about the new Lady Turton—Dahl) (in those days the Boy Scout movement was already in existence, but it had still to disseminate sound views about knot-tying among the rising generation—H. G. Wells) Diffuse suggests a spreading throughout a space; it is applied primarily to things (as sound, light, odor, or vapor) that in moving permeate the medium through which they move and in its extended sense to things (as education, knowledge, fame, and spirit) that have or are felt to have a similar pervasive quality in their dissemination (the colors of the sky are due to minute particles diffused through the atmosphere—Tyndall) (it would surely be hard to find any country . . . where instruction is more widely diffused—Ellis) (a State in which power is concentrated will . . . be more bellicose than one in which power is diffused—Russell) (the so-called "correct speech" is being diffused to the mass of the populace through migration, mass education, and . . . communication media—Amer. Sociological Review) Propagate (see also GENERATE; compare propaganda under PUBLICITY) implies extension for the sake of increase (as of believers or members or of activity or operation) (propagate the faith) (propagate a false rumor) (I am bound by my own definition of criticism: a disinterested endeavor to learn and propagate the best that is known and thought in the world—Arnold) (extraordinary plebeians who rise sharply . . . and so propagate the delusion that all other plebeians would do the same thing if they had the chance—Mencken) Radiate implies a spreading from a center outward in or as if in rays; in general use it is often applied to the spreading of something material or immaterial from a fixed center (souls-searching Freedom! here assume thy stand, and radiate hence to every distant land—Barlow) (her face . . . was still pretty, even with the web of little wrinkles that radiated from the corners of her eyes—Basso) (a superb self-confidence radiated from him, as it does from any healthy animal—Gibbons) but in its common technical use the term is largely restricted in reference to diffusion in the form of rays (as of heat or light) (the sun radiates both light and heat)

Ana *distribute, dispense, deal: *scatter, dissipate spread n *expanse, amplitude, stretch

Ana extent, area, magnitude, *size: *range, reach, scope, compass sprightly *lively, animated, vivacious, gay

Ana *active, live, dynamic: *agile, nimble, brisk, spry: *merry, blithe, jocund spring vb 1 Spring, arise, rise, originate, derive, flow, issue, emanate, proceed, stem can mean to come up or out of something into existence. Spring stresses sudden or surprising emergence especially after a period of concealment or hidden existence or preparation (plants spring from seed) (thoughts that sprang up in his mind) (he had not chosen his course. It had sprung from a necessity of his nature—Brooks) (freedom of the mind, the basic freedom from which all other freedoms spring—Davis) Arise emphasizes the fact of coming into existence or into notice more than the conditions attending the event; often it conveys no clear suggestion of a prior state (a rumor arose and was widely circulated) (after Alfred no rival native house arose to dispute the throne with Alfred's heirs—Malone) When used with from, however, it usually implies a causal connection between what is the object of the preposition and what is the subject of the verb; in such cases it is synonymous with result, though it neither loses nor obscures its primary implication of coming into existence (mistakes often arise from ignorance) (the mischief arose from careless gossip) (the depression, the shock arising from what had happened abovestairs, left him almost at once—Bromfield) Sometimes, when the context suggests a cause, the from phrase is omitted (where there is continued discontent, trouble is certain to arise) (the right never existed, and the question whether it has been surrendered cannot arise—John Marshall) Rise and arise (see also under RISE 2) are often used interchangeably, but usage usually favors arise except where, in addition to the implication of beginning, there is either in the word or the context a strong suggestion of ascent (new nations rise only to fall) (mighty forces rise from small beginnings) (the Gothic cathedrals rose in England in the first half of the thirteenth century—Saunders) (great regimes rose, based upon the irrational and negative in man's nature—Straight) Originate suggests a definite source or starting point which may be specified or located (the theory of evolution did not originate with Darwin) (the fire originated in the basement) (the newsreel, originated . . . in France, was introduced in the United States in 1910—Mott) (its founding originated in the Puritans' conviction that learning was essential for godliness—Murdock) Derive also suggests a source; usually it does not imply, as originate implies, actual inception but presupposes a prior existence in another form or in another person or thing and connotes descent (as by inheritance, endowment, transference, or deduction) (the power of the executive derives from the people) (our thoughts often derive from our wishes) (the principle of symmetry derives, I suppose, from contemplation of the human form—Binyon) (much of our thinking about the rights and duties of the citizen derives directly from Greco-Roman thought—Hight) Flow, issue, emanate in common imply a passing from one thing to another, the former being the source from which the latter is derived. All of these words are colored by their basic meanings. Flow suggests passage like water, easily as if from a spring or abundantly as if from a reservoir (praise God, from whom all blessings flow—Ken) (the oleaginous sentences flowed easily from her pen—Gibbons) Issue most frequently suggests emergence into existence, as if from a womb (how far Arnold is responsible for the birth of Humanism would be difficult to say; we can at least say that it issues very naturally from his doctrine—T. S. Eliot) (if the naturalist's logic rests on wind, and issues in echoing phrases devoid of substance—Sullivan) Emanate is used largely in reference to immaterial constructions (as a law, a principle, a power, or a system of thought); it connotes the passage of something impalpable or invisible and suggests a less obvious causal connection between the source and the thing derived than flow or issue (but the house . . . was Carrie's and it was from her that emanated the atmosphere of a home—Purdy) (the government of the Union . . . is, emphatically, and truly, a government of the people. In form and in substance it emanates from them—John Marshall) Proceed stresses place of origin or, sometimes, parentage, derivation, or cause (no public benefit which you receive but it proceeds or comes from them to you and no way from yourselves—Shak.) (assuring her that his seeming inattention had only proceeded from his being involved in a profound meditation—Peacock) Stem suggests a growing out (as of a stem from a root or of a branch from a trunk) and is used chiefly in reference to things that come into existence through the influence of a predecessor either as a natural outgrowth or as a subordinate development (the good portrait painters . . . stem from Rubens—Mather) (it spread to the lower officers and the troops in the field—or perhaps it stemmed from them—Shirer)

Ana emerge, loom, *appear: *come, arrive: *begin, commence, start

2 *jump, leap, bound, vault

Ana frolic, rollick, gambol, disport (see PLAY) spring n 1 *motive, impulse, incentive, inducement, spur, goad

Ana *origin, source, root; inception: *cause, determinant, antecedent: *stimulus, stimulant, excitant, incitement, impetus

2 jump, leap, bound, vault (see under JUMP vb) springy *elastic, resilient, flexible, supple

Ana yielding, submitting (see YIELD): recoiling, rebounding (see REBOUND) sprinkle vb *spot, spatter, mottle, fleck, stipple, marble, speckle, spangle, bespangle sprinkled spotted, spattered, mottled, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)

sprint vb *scuttle, scurry, scamper, skeddadle

Ana *rush, dash, charge, shoot, tear: *speed, hurry, hasten: dart, *fly, scud spry *agile, brisk, nimble

Ana *quick, ready, prompt: *vigorous, energetic, strenuous: hale, *healthy, sound, robust

Ant doddering

spume *foam, froth, scum, lather, suds, yeast spunky *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, fiery, peppery, gingery

Ana dauntless, undaunted, bold (see BRAVE): daring, venturesome (see ADVENTUROUS): restive, restless, *impatience spur n goad, spring, *motive, impulse, incentive, inducement

Ana *stimulus, stimulant, excitant, incitement, impetus: activation, actuation, motivation (see corresponding verbs at ACTIVATE): *cause, determinant: provoking or provocation, exciting or excitement (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE) spur vb *urge, egg, exhort, goad, prod, prick, sic

Ana rouse, arouse, *stir, awaken, rally: *incite, instigate: excite, *provoke, stimulate: encourage, countenance, *favor

Ant curb —Con *restrain, inhibit, check spurious *counterfeit, bogus, fake, sham, pseudo, pinchbeck, phony

Ana *false: simulated, feigned, shammed (see ASSUME): supposititious, reputed, putative (see SUPPOSED)

Ant genuine —Con *authentic, veritable, bona fide: true, *real, actual spurn reject, repudiate, refuse, *decline

Ana disdain, scorn, scout, *despise, contemn: flout, *scoff, sneer

Ant crave: embrace squabble n *quarrel, wrangle, altercation, bickering, spat, tiff

Ana dispute, controversy, *argument: row, rumpus, scrap, *brawl, broil squabble vb quarrel, wrangle, altercate, bicker, spat, tiff (see under QUARREL n)

Ana *contend, fight, battle, war: struggle, strive (see ATTEMPT vb): dispute, agitate, argue (see DISCUSS)

squalid *dirty, nasty, filthy, foul

Ana slovenly, unkempt, disheveled, sloppy, *slipshod: sordid, abject (see MEAN adj): *slatternly, frowzy squander vb *waste, dissipate, fritter, consume

Ana *scatter, disperse, dissipate, dispel: *spend, expend, disburse square vb *agree, conform, accord, harmonize, correspond, tally, jibe

Ana equal, *match, approach, touch, rival: balance, offset (see COMPENSATE): concur, coincide (see AGREE) squash vb *crush, mash, smash, bruise, macerate

Ana *press, squeeze, jam, crowd: *compact, concentrate, consolidate squat adj *stocky, thickset, thick, chunky, stubby, dumpy

Ant lanky

squeal vb *shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, holler, whoop

Ana *cry, wail squeal n shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

squeamish finicky, finicking, finical, particular, fussy, persnickety, pernickety, fastidious, *nice, dainty

Ana exacting, demanding, requiring (see DEMAND): hypercritical, *critical, faultfinding, caviling, captious, carping squeeze vb *press, bear, bear down, crowd, jam

Ana compress, *contract: extract, elicit, *educe, extort: *force, compel, constrain, coerce squib *libel, skit, lampoon, pasquinade squirm *writhe, agonize

Ana twist, bend (see CURVE vb): wince, flinch, blench, shrink, *recoil stabilize, steady, poise, balance, ballast, trim are comparable when they mean to maintain or cause to maintain position or equilibrium. Despite their agreement in basic meaning they vary widely in their implications and in their range of application and are seldom interchangeable. Stabilize is used chiefly in reference to something which is fluctuating or is subject to fluctuation and which requires either external aids or regulation <Greece was an infant state, without stabilizing traditions or profound culture—Durant> <serve the whole nation by policies designed to stabilize the economy—Eisenhower> <the tendency of science is necessarily to stabilize terms, to freeze them into strict denotations—Cleath Brooks>  Steady is used chiefly in reference to something which is losing its customary or necessary stability or equilibrium and is demonstrating instability (as by rocking, shaking, fluttering, or tipping) <steady a table by putting a piece of wood under one of its legs> <medics steadied trays of instruments against bomb concussions—Alcine> <drew a deep breath and steadied himself with an effort of will—Huxley> Poise is used chiefly in reference to something that maintains its equilibrium perfectly under adverse conditions or in opposition to external forces (as gravity); it implies a proper distribution of weight with reference to the supporting medium (as air or water) or to the part (as a base, a foot, the hand, or a column) that bears the weight <the ballet dancer poised on tiptoe for an instant> <Mrs. Buffo, poised on her rampart . . . took the full impact of the onslaught—Pynchon> In extended use, when employed in reference to the mind or spirit, poise implies either acquired control over the faculties or an inner serenity that enables one to remain steady or impervious to disquieting or disturbing influences <he owed his reputation . . . to this particular trait, the ability to poise himself, invulnerable to surprise—Theodore Sturgeon> <self-collected, poised, and steady—Wordsworth> Balance also implies an equilibrium that is the result of the proper distribution of weight, but it carries none of the suggestions of sustained position or equilibrium so strong in poise; thus, one balances a boat by adjusting its cargo so that there is no excess weight at any one point, and one balances a flywheel by removing portions where the weight is excessive or by adding weight in its lighter sections, but in either case the equilibrium may be lost if the cargo shifts or a section of the flywheel alters in weight. Though both balance and poise imply that the thing affected is steadied, balance often carries so strong an implication of uncertain equilibrium that it suggests wavering or rocking <in a moment of inattention, the child crept to the edge, and was balanced on the very verge. To call to it, to touch it, would have insured its destruction—Jefferies> <the musicians struggled toward the raft in hip-deep water, balancing themselves with outthrust trombones and cornets—Styron> <caution warned her not . . . to disturb her equilibrium; her present peace of mind was too precious—and too precariously balanced—Hervey> Ballast is used in reference to what needs to be held down because too light or too buoyant; it implies the addition of something heavy or solid enough to ensure stability <ballast a ship with stone or metal> <ballast a free balloon with bags of sand> Ballast is occasionally found in extended use with reference especially to the mind and the moral character that might otherwise suffer from volatility, frivolousness, or unwieldiness <'tis charity must ballast the heart—Hammond> <like many other men of high intellectual gifts, Arnold was ballasted with a just proportion of . . . practical wisdom—Montague> Trim is chiefly nautical; it implies proper balancing of a boat or ship so that it sits well on the water or fulfills any of the conditions that make for steadiness in sailing <they could be trimmed on an even keel . . . like scales, in which the weight on one side must be counterpoised by a weight in the other—Jefferies>

Ana regulate, *adjust, fix: *set, settle, establish stable adj *lasting, durable, perdurable, permanent, perpetual

Ana enduring, persisting, abiding (see CONTINUE): secure, *safe: *steady, constant: staunch, steadfast, resolute (see FAITHFUL)

Ant unstable: changeable stack n heap, pile, mass, bank, shock, cock (see under HEAP vb)

stack vb *heap, pile, mass, bank, shock, cock

Ana collect, *gather, assemble: amass, *accumulate, hoard stagger vb *reel, whirl, totter

Ana sway, waver, fluctuate (see SWING): *stumble, lurch, blunder, flounder staid sedate, grave, *serious, somber, sober, earnest

Ana *decorous, decent, seemly: *cool, collected, composed: smug, priggish, self-complacent, *complacent

Ant jaunty

stain n *stigma, blot, brand

Ana *blemish, defect, flaw: mark, *sign, token: *disgrace, dishonor stake *bet, wager, pot, ante stalemate n *draw, tie, deadlock, standoff stalwart *strong, stout, sturdy, tough, tenacious

Ana husky, brawny, *muscular, sinewy, athletic: lusty, nervous, *vigorous: robust, sound, *healthy stammer vb Stammer, stutter both mean to speak in a faltering, hesitating, or stumbling manner. Stammer usually implies a proximate cause (as fear, embarrassment, or a sudden shock) which deprives one for the time being of control over his vocal organs and inhibits his power to speak straightforwardly; the word can suggest a blocking in which one either cannot form sounds or a slow confused articulation or an involuntary repetition of sounds or words (the eloquent tongue forgot its office. Cicero stammered, blundered, and sat down—Froude) <“Why—why—” stammered the youth struggling with his balking tongue—Crane> Stutter usually stresses the involuntary repetition of sounds, especially of consonantal or syllabic sounds. It is less likely than stammer to imply a proximate cause and typically, especially in medical use, implies a constitutional defect (as a nervous affliction or a speech defect) which results in a habitual and persistent speech problem (no two persons stutter alike . . . a stuturer who stumbles over the initial of “Peter” may have no trouble with any other p in . . . “Peter Piper’s peppers”—Scripture) <this gentleman has . . . a small natural infirmity; he stutters a little—Foote> In nontechnical use the terms are often used interchangeably especially in their extended senses, in which both terms are freely employed either in reference to a fluctuating repetitive sound or to something that halts or progresses by fits and starts like the speech of a stammerer or stuturer <climbed into his Ford and stuttered down the hill—Steinbeck> <her pen sometimes stammers with the intensity of the emotion that she controlled—Woolf>

stamp vb *mark, brand, label, tag, ticket

Ana impress, imprint, print (see corresponding nouns at IMPRESSION); authenticate, validate (see CONFIRM); avouch, warrant (see ASSERT) stamp n 1 *impression, impress, imprint, print

2 mark, brand, label, tag, ticket (see under MARK vb) stand vb tolerate, brook, *bear, suffer, endure, abide stand n *position, attitude

Ana *point of view, standpoint, viewpoint, slant, angle standard n 1 *flag, ensign, banner, color, streamer, pennant, pendant, pennon, jack

2 Standard, criterion, gauge, yardstick, touchstone can all mean a measure by which one judges a thing as authentic, good, or adequate or the degree to which it is authentic, good, or adequate. Standard applies to an authoritative rule, principle, or measure used to determine the quantity, weight, or extent or especially the value, quality, level, or degree of a thing <each generation . . . has its own ideals and its own standards of judgment—Crothers> <the ideal of general cultivation has been one of the standards in education—Eliot> <the building . . . by all the standards of St. Botolph’s . . . would be condemned as expensive, pretentious, noisy and unsafe—Cheever> Criterion denotes the thing, whether formulated into a rule or principle or not, by appeal to which one arrives at or confirms a given judgment (as of value, quality, fitness, or correctness) <the sole criterion of the truth of illusion is its inner congruity—Lowes> <the size of sunspots is a meaningless criterion in predicting the havoc which may occur to radio transmission—Dawes> <no exact criterion for a just and fruitful apportionment of the surplus wealth—Hobson> <these laws . . . did establish useful criteria of conduct—Handlin> Gauge, concretely a standard measure or scale or an instrument for measuring something that fluctuates (as in size or height), can in extension apply to a standard measure whether tangible or not  <the inarticulate, whose ferocity was a gauge of the injustices they had suffered—Bruce Marshall> <the degree of public acceptance of the opinions of leaders is the ultimate gauge of the importance and validity of those opinions—Rafferty> Yardstick, basically a measuring stick a yard long and subdivided into inches and fractions of inches, is often extended to standards or criteria especially for something intangible or immaterial <no absolute or universal yardstick about what constitutes a frustration—Kardiner> <the consumption of petroleum products, an accurate yardstick of economic growth—The Lamp> Touchstone can apply to a simple device by which authenticity or value may be determined and especially to an authentic or superior instance of a class of things by comparison with which another thing may be judged authentic or superior <consistency is a touchstone by which the basic doctrine can often be distinguished from the propaganda line—L. C. Stevens>  <the chief touchstone to folklore is the manner in which it is transmitted: one man tells another, one man shows another—Emrich>

Ana norm, median, par, mean, *average: rule, *law: *principle, fundamental, axiom: *model, pattern, exemplar

3 ideal, beau ideal, *model, pattern, exemplar, example, mirror

Ana see those at STANDARD 2 stand-in *substitute, supply, understudy, double, locum tenens, alternate, pinch hitter standoff n *draw, tie, stalemate, deadlock standpoint *point of view, viewpoint, angle, slant

Ana stand, *position, attitude stanza *verse stare vb *gaze, gape, glare, peer, gloat

Ana look, watch, *see: glower, lower, scowl, *frown stark *stiff, rigid, inflexible, tense, wooden

Ana settled, established, fixed, set (see SET vb)

Con *elastic, resilient, springy, flexible, supple: fluid, *liquid starry, stellar, astral, sidereal can mean of, referring to, or suggestive of a star or group of stars. Starry is the ordinary nontechnical term, capable of being used in reference to stars of various kinds (as the celestial bodies known as stars or the geometrical figure with five, six, or more points that is the conventionalized star)   <starry eyes> <here are the skies, the planets seven, and all the starry train—Housman> <starry towers of Babylon Noah’s freshest never reached—Yeats> Stellar has the same range of reference as starry, but, since the connotations of the words are not the same, they are rarely interchangeable; starry gathers its connotations (as of brilliancy, remoteness, and beauty) chiefly from the appearance of the celestial stars to the ordinary observer; stellar derives its suggestions chiefly from astrological lore of the stars as influencing all things and as shaping human destinies or from astronomical knowledge of the constitution, arrangement, and classification of stars; thus, one tends to speak of a stellar, rather than a starry, influence or aspect; of a stellar, rather than starry, eclipse or nebula <these soft fires . . . shed down their stellar virtue on all kinds that grow on Earth—Milton> <Kapteyn worked nearly alone in the field of stellar astronomy—G. W. Gray> Stellar is also used more often than starry of theatrical or cinematic stars <stellar roles in operas and musical festivals—Current Biog.> and it alone is freely used to imply outstanding quality or position in other relations  <he just wasn’t a stellar naval officer in the eyes of his subordinates—Lois & Don Thorburn> Astral is in much of its use a technical term in theosophy and similar cults, and in more general use it is likely to bear connotations of spirituality, mysticism, and remoteness from the fleshly that derive largely from mythological and other conceptions of the stars as the abode of celestial spirits or of supersensible beings whose nature and constitution are rarer and finer than those of earthly human beings (enchancements that unlock a crystal cage; an alphabet with astral fire seasoned—Wylie) (an astral thinker with disturbing, visionary thoughts of helping the whole world—Newsweek) (an astral myth) (a state of mind which may resemble that of a soul in its astral body looking back upon its corporeal one—Beebe) Sidereal is sometimes interchangeable with the other terms (walls of interlocked magnolias, sidereal with white, fragrant blossoms—Nat'l Geog. Mag.) (I felt that he was an Intelligence which had borrowed form and substance in deference to the requirements of sidereal politeness—Henry Miller) but distinctively it is used in opposition to solar, especially as applied to periods of time measured by the rotation of the earth with reference to a given star; thus, the sidereal day, determined by reference to Aries, is 3 minutes and 55.91 seconds shorter, as measured in solar time, than the mean solar day.

start vb *begin, commence, initiate, inaugurate

Ana institute, *found, establish, organize: *enter, penetrate: originate, proceed, *spring startle scare, alarm, terrify, terrorize, *frighten, fright, affray, affright

Ana *surprise, astonish, astound: rouse, arouse, *stir: electrify, *thrill

state n State, condition, mode, situation, posture, status can all mean the way in which a person or thing manifests his or its existence or the circumstances under which he or it exists or by which he or it is given a definite character. State may be used so generally that it denotes merely a form of existence which has little or no relation to material being (as in space or time or as substance) but is purely immaterial and typically mental or spiritual (Dante's Inferno) reminds us that Hell is not a place but a state—T. S. Eliot) The term may also be used specifically to name the combination of circumstances affecting a person or thing at a given time or the sum of the relations, qualities, or characteristics involved in his or its existence at the time under consideration (live fifty years happily in the state of matrimony) (the present state of industry) (the historian . . . visited Alexandria during the reign of this king. He was disgusted with its state—Farrington) (parents have probably gone too far in one direction and nature's reacting, trying to get back to the state of equilibrium—Huxley) Condition is interchangeable with state only when the effect or influence of present circumstances on actual or concrete existence is implied (the present condition of the country) (it is a condition which confronts us, not a theory—Cleveland) It regularly carries a stronger implication than state of a relation to the causes or circumstances which produced or are producing the effect and a weaker suggestion of the duration of that effect; also, condition may be used in the plural in the sense of combination of circumstances and of qualities or characteristics, as state may not (his physical condition improved with rest and sufficient exercise) (under the best conditions, a voyage is one of the severest tests to try a man—Emerson) (I probably had been hoping . . . the book would not change my life too much. I wished at that time to protect a modest condition—Mailer) (there is no possible method of compelling a child to feel sympathy or affection; the only possible method is to observe the conditions under which these feelings arise spontaneously, and then endeavor to produce the conditions—Russell) This suggestion of a relation to an external cause or causes is often so strong that the word frequently denotes a circumstance that serves as a causative influence or prerequisite rather than a combination of circumstances that form a state of being (see under CONDITION 1) Mode (see also METHOD; FASHION 2) is basically a philosophical term; typically it implies an opposition to the underlying reality which can be known only from its external manifestations (as color, form, and texture), and it usually applies to the combination of characters by which substance is manifested in a particular individual or instance (no mode . . . can exist except as the mode or modification of a substance; the substance is the abiding principle, the mode is transitory. The particular mode . . . is but a temporal expression of the substance—Thilly) (nearly all [painters] use color as a mode of form. They design in color, that is in colored shapes—Clive Bell) In somewhat less restricted use the term can apply to something that expresses or exemplifies a typical form or value of a larger class; thus, the mathematical mode is the most frequent value in a statistical array; the mode of a rock is its specific mineral composition as distinguished from the norm of its kind (Rouse's mode unit is the smallest isolated item pertaining to a prehistoric manufacture . . . This mode, or attribute, is a concept many archeologists work with in pottery classification—Wiley) Situation applies to a state or condition that represents a combination of definite concrete circumstances, often such a conjunction of particular circumstances that the whole has a peculiarly interesting character; more than state or condition, situation implies an arrangement of these circumstances not only with reference to each other but also with respect to the character or circumstances of the persons involved so as to make for a particular resulting condition (as of difficulty or advantage, embarrassment or elation, or uncertainty or security) (such views of life were to some extent the natural begettings of her situation upon her nature—Hardy) (there was a dizzy succession of events and of constantly changing situations for a politician to watch—Shirer) (that slender, unrigid erectness, and the fine carriage of head, which always made him seem master of the situation—Cather) The term is also applied to a comparably striking and interesting combination of events in a narrative, especially one whose outcome involves uncertainty or suspense (one knows the situation in fiction—the desperate girl appealing out of her misery to the Christian priest for help. So many women have this touch of melodrama, this sense of a situation—Rose Macaulay) (a master of plot and situation, of those elements of drama which are most essential to melodrama—T. S. Eliot) Posture (see also POSTURE 1) may be used in the sense of condition when that represents a state into which one is forced by need of preparation for something to come (put a warship in a posture of defense) ([Christ] insisted upon a certain . . . posture of the soul as proper to man's reception of this revelation—Liddon) (Spanish chants have no solemnity: . . . which doesn't preclude a general devout posture of mind—Santayana) The term is often a closer synonym of situation than of condition (a virgin of thirty-two, already lapsing, though naturally attractive and sprightly, into the mental posture of old maidhood—Follett) (production which will permit us to maintain both a strong economy and a strong military posture—Truman) Status may indicate an individual's state or condition as determined with some definiteness for legal administrative purposes or by social or economic considerations (the change in the status of the Negro, under the Thirteenth Amendment, from three fifths of a person to a whole person in computing state apportionment—C. L. Thompson) (a married woman's status was determined entirely by that of her husband—Ogg & Ray)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

<the job which a person is supposed to do . . . is what Linton and others call his role. The position which he occupies on the social ladder, as a result of his general practice of leading or following, supervising or being supervised, in the totality of his activities, is his status—Coon> <the social sciences have been, since their institution, jealous of their status as science—R. M. Weaver> <the city's status as a tourist attraction—Sargeant> Sometimes the term specifically denotes a superior state or condition and then implies elevated rank in a hierarchy <make him feel a man of status in the community—Beaglehole> <the status seekers . . . continually straining to surround themselves with visible evidence of the superior rank they are claiming—Packard> <because she could not accept less than twenty pounds a week without loss of status and got it but rarely, she was doomed to remain an amateur—Yeats> Even in uses in which it comes close to the specific aspect of state or the corresponding aspect of condition, status tends to retain some suggestion of a hierarchical relation and correspondingly, of comparison; thus, one might comment "his mental state, or condition, is a cause for concern" as a simple declaration, but "his mental status is unsatisfactory" implies comparison <established the bank's status as an independent international organization—Collier's Yr. Bk.> <Keynes regards the rate of interest and the marginal efficiency of capital as possessing something like the status of independent variables—Feuer>

Ana *phase, aspect: plight, *predicament, quandary, dilemma: pass, *juncture, exigency, emergency, crisis state vb 1 *say, utter, tell

2 report, *relate, rehearse, recite, recount, narrate, describe

Ana expound, *explain, elucidate, interpret: *assert, affirm, declare, profess stately magnificent, imposing, majestic, august, *grand, noble, grandiose

Ana princely, regal, royal, *kingly, imperial: *splendid, glorious, superb, sublime: sumptuous, opulent, *luxurious statesman *politician, politico station n 1 *place, position, location, situation, site, spot

Ana *locality, district, vicinity, neighborhood: region, *area, zone, belt, tract

2 *habitat, biotype, range statue *image, effigy, icon, portrait, photograph, mask statue *quality, caliber

Ana capacity, *ability: competence, qualification (see corresponding adjectives at ABLE) status situation, posture, condition, *state, mode statute 1 ordinance, regulation, *law, rule, precept, canon

2 *bill, act, law staunch *faithful, loyal, true, constant, steadfast, resolute

Ana trusty, trustworthy, *reliable, dependable, tried: stout, *strong, tough, tenacious, sturdy, stalwart Con *inconstant, fickle, mercurial, unstable, capricious stay vb 1 Stay, remain, wait, abide, tarry, linger can mean to continue to be in one place for a noticeable time. Stay, the most general of these terms, stresses continuance in a place or sometimes in a specified condition; it often specifically connotes the status of visitor or guest <they could not decide whether to stay or to go> <they went for tea and stayed for dinner> <staying a while at the Joneses, he could quietly insinuate . . . hilarious things about the Joneses when he weekended with the Browns—Theodore

Sturgeon> Remain is often used interchangeably with stay but distinctively means to stay behind or to be left after others have gone <few remained in the building after the alarm was given>  <she remembered her decision to send the young people of the village into the woods. There would have been many more casualties had they remained—Linklater> Wait implies a staying in expectation or in readiness <at his request no one waited for him at the pier> <the taxi waited while they were shopping> <the lights in the window had a leering, waiting look, like that on the faces of old pimps who sit in the cafés—Gibbons> Abide implies prolonged staying or remaining after at length and usually connotes either stable residence or patient waiting for an outcome <she hated the change; she felt like one banished; but here she was forced to abide—Hardy> Tarry implies staying when it is time to depart or to proceed <do not tarry if you wish to catch the noon train> <some children like to tarry on the way to school> <the celebrated trade winds . . . ceased to blow, and over the island a horrid stillness tarried—Stafford> Linger, like tarry, usually implies outstaying one's appointed or allotted time; frequently, however, it also implies either deliberate delay or disinclination to depart <strange, that now she was released she should linger by him—Meredith> <she shouldn't have come to the hotel suite. She shouldn't have lingered—this was fatal—after the others had left—Wouk> <after the guests had tarried long over their tea and had done with their jokes, the woman still lingered—Buck>

Ana *delay, procrastinate, lag, loiter: *arrest, check, interrupt: *continue, persist

2 sojourn, lodge, put up, stop, *reside, live, dwell

3 *defer, postpone, suspend, intermit

Ana *delay, retard, slow, slacken, detain: *restrain, check, curb: *hinder, obstruct, impede stay vb *base, found, ground, bottom, rest steadfast staunch, resolute, constant, true, *faithful, loyal Ana settled, established, set, fixed (see SET vb): *steady, constant: stable, durable, perdurable, *lasting: enduring, persisting, abiding (see CONTINUE)

Ant capricious

steady adj Steady, uniform, even, equable, constant are comparable when they mean neither markedly varying nor variable but much the same throughout its course or extent. Steady is the most widely applicable of these terms; in general it suggests regularity and lack of deviation, especially in movement, but it may imply such fixity in position as to be immovable or unshakable <steady as a rock>  or such consistency in character or conduct as to be perfectly reliable  <maybe she'd marry the first nice and good steady fellow with a steady job who'd be a steady provider—Farrell> When movement, motion, or direction is implied, the term may connote lack of fluctuation  <steady prices>  <you can't make millions on books, but it's a steady respectable business—Buck> or lack of nervousness <with hinged knees and steady hand to dress wounds—Whitman>  or a constant uninterrupted flow or pursuit   <steady work> Uniform stresses the sameness or likeness of the elements, parts, units, or instances that comprise a whole (as an aggregate, a series, a combination of instances, a course, or a texture) <the cells of the human organism are not uniform in structure and function> <the progress of civilization is not wholly a uniform drift towards better things—Whitehead> <one of the most fundamental social interests is that law shall be uniform and impartial—Cardozo> <the various tackle blocks and planks of the wooden ships were cut to uniform measure—Mumford) Even stresses steadiness more than uniformity; it often connotes a dead level (as in quality or in character) which is unvaryingly maintained or which is incapable of alteration or disturbance (her monotonous even voice) (the even flow of his verse) (I mean to . . . support with an even temper, and without any violent transports of mind, a sudden gust of prosperity—Fielding) Equable usually implies some inherent quality which makes for invariability, such as uniformity (an equable stride) (an equable pulse) or freedom from extremes or sudden marked changes (there is an equable climate in the most populated parts, warm and tempting to leisure—Peffer) (an equable temper) or a temperamental calmness (low equable tones, curiously in contrast to the strident babble—Kipling) (she won and lost, with the same equable sang-froid—Rose Macaulay) Constant (see also FAITHFUL, CONTINUAL) implies fixity in character, quality, or condition or persistence in kind or type under the same conditions (the sand is frequently yellow . . . but this color is by no means constant—Lyell) (science has to deal . . . with scores of chemical energies which it knows little about except that they always seem to be constant to the same conditions—Henry Adams)

Ana stable, durable, perdurable, perpetual, *lasting: enduring, persisting, continuing (see CONTINUE): staunch, steadfast, resolute, constant (see FAITHFUL): persevering, persisting (see PERSEVERE)

Ant unsteady: nervous, jumpy steady vb *stabilize, poise, balance, ballast, trim

Con *shake, rock, agitate, convulse steal, pilfer, filch, purloin, lift, pinch, snitch, swipe, cop are comparable when they mean to take another's possession without right and without his knowledge or permission. Steal, the commonest and most general of the group, can refer to any act of taking without right, although it suggests strongly a furtiveness or secrecy in the act (steal a pocketbook) (steal jewels) (steal a kiss) (steal a glance at someone) Pilfer suggests stealing in small amounts or with cautious stealth and often bit by bit (the pantry mouse that pilfers our food—Gustafson et al) (the ladies of unexceptionable position who are caught pilfering furs in shops—L. P. Smith) (pilfer the secret files of the foreign office—Morgenthau) Filch is close to pilfer but may suggest more strongly the use of active though surreptitious means, especially quick snatching (in pursuit of a thief who had filched an overcoat—McKenzie Porter) (a lot of fellows were too hungry to wait, and so some of the rations were filched—Autry) (a bulky, dark youth in spectacles . . . filching biscuits from a large tin—Sayers) Purloin usually shifts the stress onto the idea of removal or making away with for one's own use, often becoming generalized to include such acts as plundering or plagiarism (had purloined $386,920 from the New York realty management firm for which he worked, then absconded—Time) (added theft to her other sin, and having found your watch in your bedroom had purloined it—Butler d. 1902) (to quote him is not to purloin—Dryden) Lift, when it does not mean specifically to steal by surreptitiously taking from counters or displays in stores, is used frequently in spoken English in the sense of purloin (women shoplifters often work in gangs of three. Two act as shields while the third does the lifting—The Irish Digest) (lift money from the cash register) (imitators who lifted everything except the shirt off his back—F. S. Fitzgerald) Pinch, swipe, snitch, and cop are virtually interchangeable with filch. Pinch and swipe are often used in place of steal to suggest an act morally less reprehensible (loot having been pinched by him from the British ship Mary Dyer—Sydney Bulletin) or sometimes more dashing (well-dressed crooks really did steal the Gold Cup at Ascot . . . drove up in a handsome car . . . and pinched the cup out of the Royal Enclosure—J. D. Carr) (the bloke who pinched my photographs—Richard Llewellyn) and occasionally to suggest a petty meanness (hovering outside the dying butler's bedroom waiting to . . . pop in and swipe the old man's private notebooks—Time) Snitch possibly stresses more the removal by quick, furtive snatching (while he was bathing, somebody snitched his uniform—Wodehouse) (snitched people's ideas without telling them—Sayers) Cop usually lays stress upon quick, often spur-of-the-moment filching or purloining (some woman put on a dinner gown, mingled with guests, copped fifty thousand bucks in jewelry—Gardner) (ran home and copped a piece of beefsteak from his old lady—Farrell)

Ana *rob, plunder, rifle, loot, burglarize stealthy *secret, covert, furtive, clandestine, surreptitious, underhand, underhanded

Ana *sly, cunning, crafty, artful, tricky, wily: sneaking, slinking, skulking (see LURK) steel vb *encourage, inspirit, hearten, embolden, cheer, nerve

Ana fortify, reinforce, invigorate, *strengthen: determine, resolve (see DECIDE)

Con *unnerve, enervate, emasculate, unman: sap, undermine, *weaken, enfeeble: *discourage, dishearten, dispirit, deject steep adj Steep, abrupt, precipitous, sheer mean having an incline approaching the perpendicular. The words are here arranged in ascending order of degree of perpendicularity. Steep implies so sharp a slope or pitch that ascent or descent is difficult (a military road, which rises . . . by an acclivity not dangerously steep, but sufficiently laborious—Johnson) (the trail . . . then struck up the side of the mountain, growing steeper every foot of the way—Quillin) Abrupt adds to steep the suggestion of a sharper pitch or angle of ascent or descent and usually of a sudden break in a level (high abrupt banks in places become hanging cliffs with a drop of 100 feet or more—Amer. Guide Series: N. C.) Precipitous suggests extreme steepness and an abruptness like that of a precipice (a precipitous height) (a deep gorge, with precipitous, volcanic walls which no man could scale—London) Sheer implies precipitousness approaching the perpendicular and showing no break in its line (sheer cliffs that fell from the summit to the plain, more than a thousand feet—Cather)

Ana elevated, lifted, raised (see LIFT): lofty, *high steep vb *soak, saturate, impregnate, drench, sop, waterlog Ana *infuse, imbue, ingrain: penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER) steer vb *guide, lead, pilot, engineer

Ana *conduct, direct, manage, control: *govern, rule stellar *starry, sidereal, astral stem vb proceed, issue, emanate, derive, flow, originate,

*spring, arise, rise stentorian *loud, earsplitting, hoarse, raucous, strident, stertorous

Ana resounding, orotund, *resonant: *vociferous, clamorous, blatant: harsh, *rough stereotyped *trite, hackneyed, threadbare, shopworn Ana conventional, formal (see CEREMONIAL): obsolete, archaic, antiquated (see OLD): used, employed, utilized, applied (see USE)

Ant changeful

sterile, barren, impotent, unfruitful, infertile mean not having or not manifesting the power to produce offspring or to bear literal or figurative fruit. Sterile, opposed to fertile, in its basic application to living things implies an inability to reproduce <sterile hyphae that protect the fruiting body of a fungus>  <the workers among ants and bees are sterile> <the attempt will be made to distinguish between those who are childless from choice and those who are sterile—Jour. of Heredity> But sterile is widely extendible to things that might reasonably be expected to be fruitful but that in fact are not so; thus, poor worthless land in which plants will not grow is described as sterile; minds deficient in ideas are sterile; funds left in a safe-deposit box and drawing no interest are sterile; whatever offers no return (as of pleasure, profit, value, or use) is sterile <beneath his fun lurked the sterile bitterness of the still young man who has tried and given up—Wharton> <his unsatisfactory relations with women; and his impulses toward a sterile and infantile perversity—Edmund Wilson> Barren (see also BARE 1) applies especially to a female who has borne no offspring or who is or is believed to be incapable of bearing any  <she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her, who was called barren—Lk 1:36> In extended use the term can imply a lack of return or profit  Impotent (see also POWERLESS) applies to the male and implies a lack of the ability to copulate and a corresponding inability to reproduce his kind  Only rarely is the term in this sense used of other than the male animal, and in such use it approaches the aspect of impotent discriminated at powerless <whole groups of animals and plants are rendered impotent by the same unnatural conditions—Darwin> Unfruitful is sometimes used in place of barren not only as applied to the female but as applied to land, vegetation, or efforts which bear no fruit <an unfruitful tree> <unfruitful soil> <this unsavory and unfruitful piece of research—Cater> Infertile is often interchanged with sterile <an infertile egg> <infertile matings> but it is as likely to imply deficiency as absence of fertility and is appropriately used when a relative rather than an absolute sterility is to be implied <the infertile grazings of those hills—Allan Fraser> <an infertile strain of beef cattle> <has our history shown that liberty is so infertile a principle that with it we are unable to compete in the world struggle . . . ?—Chenery> <animals and plants, when removed from their natural conditions, are often rendered in some degree infertile—Darwin>

Ana *bare, barren, bald, naked; arid, *dry; *meager, exiguous; empty, hollow, nugatory, *vain

Ant fertile; exuberant —Con bearing, yielding, producing, turning out (see BEAR); fecund, fruitful, prolific (see FERTILE) sterilize 1 Sterilize, castrate, spay, emasculate, alter, mutilate, geld, caponize mean to make incapable of producing offspring. Sterilize, the most general of these terms, is applicable to both human beings and animals and is used whether the end is attained accidentally (as by undue exposure to X rays which kill germ cells) or deliberately (as by a surgical operation which prevents the germ cells from reaching the site where fertilization can occur or by removal of the gonads). Sterilize often suggests a legalized procedure undertaken to prevent the reproduction of undesirables (as imbeciles and habitual criminals); the term does not imply physical disfigurement and does not in itself necessarily imply interference with the capacity for copulation. Castrate, a narrower term than sterilize, means to deprive of the testes, the male reproductive glands. It is used of both human beings and animals and usually implies a surgical procedure and a loss of libido as well as of procreative power. By extension castrate may also mean to deprive of the ovaries, the female reproductive glands, and therefore is often used in place of spay, the specific term for this operation. Emasculate is often preferred to castrate when the reference is to human males and especially when there is the intent to stress the loss of virile or masculine qualities. Alter may replace castrate especially in reference to domestic pets and when an ambiguous or euphemistic term is appropriate. Mutilate (see also MAIM) is sometimes substituted for castrate especially when the intent is to convey strongly the idea of physical disfigurement or violence or when a euphemism is desired. Geld, meaning to castrate, is used chiefly in reference to domestic animals, especially the horse, and caponize, also meaning to castrate, most commonly has reference to the male domestic fowl, but both are sometimes used contemptuously of human beings.

Ant fertilize

2 Sterilize, disinfect, sanitize, fumigate can mean to subject to a process or treatment for the destruction of living organisms, especially microorganisms. Sterilize suggests drastic methods (as the application of intense heat, boiling, or the use of strong chemicals) with the intent of destroying all microorganisms whether they are disease-producing or not. The term usually suggests means taken to avoid infection. Disinfect also suggests vigorous methods (as exposure to strong sunlight and fresh air, thorough washing, and the use of special chemicals) with the intent of destroying all infective agents; the term usually suggests an intent to free from germs something that is known or feared to be infected. Sanitize, which basically means to make sanitary, is often preferred by public health officials when the reference is to preventive measures affecting the health of a community (as the treatment of drinking water or the cleansing of food processing facilities) and when neither sterilize (because it suggests complete destruction of microorganisms and often implies the taking of measures too drastic for general use) nor disinfect (because it suggests the actual presence of disease germs) exactly fits their needs or makes clear their intention. Fumigate is associated with these terms only because fumigation was once the usual method of disinfection; it implies the use of fumes (as smoke or gas) that are destructive not only of microorganisms but of such pests as cockroaches, beetles, and bedbugs.

stern adj *severe, austere, ascetic

Ana strict, *rigid, rigorous, stringent; *grim, implacable, unrelenting; *inflexible, inexorable; disciplined, trained, schooled (see TEACH)

Ant soft; lenient

stertorous *loud, stentorian, earsplitting, hoarse, raucous, strident

Ana harsh, *rough stew vb *boil, seethe, simmer, parboil

stick 1 Stick, adhere, cohere, cling, cleave can mean to be or become closely, firmly, or indissolubly attached. Stick implies attachment by affixing; one thing or a person sticks to another, or things or persons stick together when they are literally or figuratively glued together and can be separated only by tearing or forcing apart <the stamp sticks to the envelope> <by sticking together they gained their objective> <marriage . . . was nothing more than a token that a couple intended to stick to each other—F. M. Ford> <whether . . . there will be anyone so beyond suspicion that no slander can stick to him—

Davis) <I'm the celestial drudge . . . and I stick to my work till I drop at it—Gilbert> When referred to things, adhere is interchangeable with stick (the mud adhered to their shoes) It is narrower in idiomatic range than stick but is the usual term when the attachment results from growth of parts normally distinct or separate (abdominal tissues sometimes adhere after an operation) When referred to persons, adhere usually implies deliberate or voluntary acceptance (as of the creed of a church, the platform of a political party, or the doctrines of a philosopher) (he believes passionately that India will adhere to her traditional democracy if it can be made to work—Jerome Ellison) (he liked a certain order in his life; when he had made a plan he liked to adhere to it—Sackville-West) (the then current fashion, which royal ladies have adhered to ever since—Rose Macaulay) Cohere takes for its subject a collective singular or a plural noun that names things that stick together to produce a mass, a body, or a unified whole (the dry ingredients of a cake cohere only when liquid is added) (did not the whole composition cohere, were its unity broken, it would not be one picture or one quartet—Edman) (passing his hand over his cool forehead, he closed his eyes. The sounds cohered as in delirium—Stafford) But occasionally when the notion of producing a unified whole is to be stressed cohere may replace stick or adhere (the necessity that he shall conform, that he shall cohere—T. S. Eliot) (with weariness, anger, and disappointment I passed out and fell with my heavy musket . . . to the floor. Arms and the man did not cohere—Lovett) Cling usually implies attachment by hanging on (as by the arms, by roots, or by tendrils) and may suggest, often strongly, a need of support in one that clings (clinging to a capsized boat) (the vine clings to the wall) (man whose breeches clung to his bony legs as if he'd been wading waist-high in a river—Kenneth Roberts) In its extended use cling may add to the suggestion of need of support one of dependence (she clung to her father and mother even after her marriage) but at other times it suggests tenacity in holding on to something possessed, believed, or used (clung to the superstitions of his childhood) (clung stubbornly to their hopes of being saved at the last minute by a miracle—Shirer) Cleave implies closeness and strength of attachment; when applied to persons, it commonly suggests depth of devotion and fidelity in affection (my tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth, unless a pardon ere I rise or speak—Shak.) (he remains . . . for more essential reasons than mere responsibility. Even if there were no children, he would probably cleave to her—Mailer)

Ana *tie, bind: attach, *fasten, affix, fix: *implant Con sever, sunder, part, divide, *separate: *detach, disengage

2 stickle, balk, shy, boggle, *demur, scruple, jib, strain stickle vb balk, shy, boggle, jib, *demur, scruple, stick, strain

Ana *hesitate, vacillate, falter, waver: *object, kick, protest stick out *bulge, jut, protuberate, protrude, project, overhang, beetle

Ana *extend, prolong, elongate, lengthen: *expand, swell, distend: obtrude (see INTRUDE) stiff adj Stiff, rigid, inflexible, tense, stark, wooden can mean so firm, hard, or tough in texture, consistency, or quality as to be impossible or highly difficult to bend or enliven. Stiff, the most common word of this group, is applicable where this condition exists in any noticeable degree; it may describe either a desirable or an undesirable quality, because, except in its extended senses, it merely implies a condition and carries neither depreciative nor commendatory connotations (an edition of a book with stiff covers) (he wants a cane that is very stiff) (dislike a stiff custard) (every gust made a noise like the rattling of dry bones in the stiff toddy palms outside—Kipling) (sitting . . . on the edge of a stiff chair—F. S. Fitzgerald) In its extended senses stiff, when applied to persons or their manners and their expression, usually suggests either extreme formality and coldness (he replied with stiff condescension) (she preferred the easygoing parties of this day to the stiff entertainments she had known in her youth) or a lack of ease, grace, or graciousness in dealing with others (seemed to be struggling with her stiff reserve to give him comfort—Archibald Marshall) (Brutus had . . . a hard face, a pedantic style in speech and writing, and a stiff ungracious character—Buchan) (he seemed suddenly uneasy . . . I could tell by the drop of the head and by the stiff intent set of the body—Dahl) When applied to something that must be overcome or must be accomplished, the term implies unusual difficulty or the need of great exertion (a stiff ascent) (a stiff opposition) (a stiff examination) (a stiff task) (the casual reader will find certain parts of this book stiff going—Linton) and when applied to something that under particular circumstances or in a particular case has lost its usual or typical pliancy or pliability, stiff implies difficulty (as in using, moving, or handling) (branches stiff with ice) (limbs stiff with cold) (he grew stiff with fear) In a variety of other senses, stiff implies harshness or extreme severity (a stiff sentence) (a stiff penalty) or great strength or violence (a stiff breeze) (a stiff dose) (the two drinks he had drunk, both stiff ones, had clouded his mind—Stryker) Rigid (for extended senses see RIGID 2) implies so high a degree of stiffness that the thing so described cannot be bent or flexed without breaking it (an airship with a rigid hull) (a bridge supported by a series of rigid masonry arches) (a rigid crosspiece) Inflexible (for extended sense see INFLEXIBLE 2) differs from rigid only in suggesting a lack of limberness or an incapacity for being bent rather than a texture or consistency that resists bending or deforming. Consequently it is often used when a less precise term is needed and merely an approach to rigidity is suggested (an inflexible metal) (snakes . . . with portions of their bodies still numb and inflexible, waiting for the sun to thaw them out—Thoreau) Tense (see also TIGHT 1) occurs especially in reference to bodily structures (as muscles, fibers, or membranes) that are stretched so tight, or so strained by effort or excitement, that they have lost their elasticity or flexibility either for the time being or permanently (tense arteries) (tense nerves) (with muscles as tense as those of a tiger about to spring) (only his tense movements, the rather rigid way he held himself, the habitual drumming of his fingers, were in any way abnormal—Wouk) Stark usually suggests a stiffness that is associated with loss of life, warmth, power, vitality, or fluidity and therefore often also connotes desolation, barrenness, death, or present valuelessness; frequently it is accompanied by stiff or rigid (many a nobleman lies stark and stiff—Shak.) (cut flowers before they actually die . . . stretch themselves out with a palpable jerk, stark and rigid—Powys) (here all the surfaces remained stark and unyielding, thin and sharp—Santayana) (rats . . . danced comically before they died, and lay in the scuppers stark and ruffled—Sinclair Lewis) Often stark is merely an intensive (often an adverb) meaning little more than such as is stated or described without qualification (rich men who were once stark poor—Brinig) (he stood in stark terror) (they . . . wrote stark nonsense—Quiller-Couch) Wooden suggests not only the hardness and inflexibility of wood but its dryness and its lack of suppleness and plasticity; consequently the term suggests not only stiffness and lack of life and grace but often clumsiness or deadness or heaviness of spirit (Kim took a few paces in a stiff wooden style—Kipling) (the courtroom scene was . . . prosy, wooden, and lifeless—Elmer Rice) (he appears wooden, remote, often addicted to incredible posturings—Rothman)

Ana tough, tenacious, *strong, stout: *firm, hard, solid: formal, conventional, ceremonious (see CEREMONIAL): frigid, *cold, cool: difficult, *hard, arduous

Ant relaxed: supple

stiff-necked *obstinate, stubborn, mulish, dogged, pertinacious, pigheaded, bullheaded stifle *suffocate, asphyxiate, smother, choke, strangle, throttle stigma, brand, blot, stain can denote a mark of shame left on a name, reputation, or character. Stigma, though often implying dishonor or public shame, usually applies to a mark or a charge or judgment that is fastened upon a person or thing or is attached to it so as to discredit it and cause it to be generally disapproved or condemned (curmudgeonly inability to praise others which has ever been the stigma by which we may recognize the ungenerous—Partridge) (they can attach a social stigma to the relief by taking away the pauper's vote—Shaw)

Brand carries stronger implications of disgrace and infamy than stigma; it often suggests impossibility of removal, permanent social ostracism, and public condemnation (for the sorrow and the shame, the brand on me and mine, I'll pay you back in leaping flame—Kipling) (it may mean nothing very much to you, but . . . those words carry the ultimate, ignominious brand of incompetency and failure—Sayers) (segregation, however "equal" the physical facilities, does put the brand of inferiority on Negro pupils in the schools—N. Y. Times) Blot and stain imply a blemish that diminishes the honor of a name or a reputation or that sullies one's reputation for purity or virtue but does not bring either name or reputation into utter disrepute (thou noteless blot on a remembered name—Shelley) (there are blots on the chronicle, moments of the petulance . . . and the unhappy record of the meaningless and aimless slighting of General de Gaulle. But these are minor blemishes—Anthony West) (to have loved one peerless, without stain—Tennyson) (England will have a nasty stain on her flag if she sees this man go down without a hand lifted to save him—Parker)

Ana *disgrace, dishonor, opprobrium, odium, shame: contamination, tainting or taint, defilement, pollution (see corresponding verbs at CONTAMINATE)

still adj Still, stilly, quiet, silent, noiseless can all mean making no stir or noise. Still applies to what is motionless or at rest, often with the further implication of hush or absence of sound; sometimes one implication is stressed, sometimes the other, and sometimes both (ha! no more moving? still as the grave—Shak.) (the crowd remained still, quietly stupefied, and with a shaky reverence—Syron) (that chair, when you arose and passed out of the room, rocked silently a while ere it again was still—Millay) Stilly emphasizes the absence of sounds, but it usually implies also the absence of stir or motion (oft, in the stilly night, ere Slumber's chain has bound me—Thomas Moore) (the rigidly haughty forms stretched out, with crossed arms upon their stilly hearts, in everlasting and undreaming rest—Melville) (a mad rush of heavy feet went past his door, to speed over the stilly house—O'Casey) Quiet, like still, may imply absence of perceptible motion or sound or of both, but it carries stronger suggestions of lack of excitement, agitation, or turbulence, and of tranquillity, serenity, restfulness, or repose (through the green evening quiet in the sun—Keats) (the happy stillness of dawn . . . the quiet morning air—Meredith) (a quiet town filled with people who lived quiet lives and thought quiet thoughts—Anderson) (all the impetuous restlessness of her girlhood had left her and she had bloomed into a quiet half-indolent calm—Buck) Silent and noiseless differ from the other words of this group in being frequently applied to motion, movement, or stir that is unaccompanied by sound. Silent usually carries more positive suggestions of stillness or quietness (the Earth . . . from West her silent course advance[s]—Milton) (three mountaintops, three silent pinnacles of aged snow—Tennyson) whereas noiseless usually connotes absence of commotion or of sounds of activity or movement (along the cool sequestered vale of life they kept the noiseless tenor of their way—Gray) (this quiet sail is as a noiseless wing to waft me from distraction—Byron) (I looked out on a thoroughfare crowded with traffic, but yet a noiseless one—Fairchild)

Ana *calm, tranquil, serene, placid, peaceful: restful, *comfortable

Ant stirring: noisy still vb *calm, compose, quiet, quieten, lull, soothe, settle, tranquilize

Ana allay, assuage, alleviate, *relieve: *pacify, placate, mollify, appease: silence (see corresponding adjective at STILL)

Ant agitate

stilly *still, quiet, silent, noiseless

Ana *soft, gentle, mild, bland: placid, peaceful, *calm, tranquil, serene

Con agitated, disturbed (see DISCOMPOSE) stimulant *stimulus, excitant, incitement, impetus

Ana provocation, excitement, stimulation, quickening, galvanizing (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE): incentive, spur, goad, *motive

Ant anesthetic: anodyne stimulate excite, *provoke, quicken, pique, galvanize

Ana *quicken, animate, enliven, vivify: activate, energize, *vitalize: rouse, arouse, *stir, rally, waken, awaken

Ant unnerve: deaden stimulus, stimulant, excitant, incitement, impetus can all mean an agent that arouses a person or a lower organism or a particular organ or tissue to activity. Only the first three words have definite and common technical use. Stimulus, in this use chiefly a physiological or psychological term, applies basically to something (as a change in temperature, light, sound, or pressure) that occurs in the internal or external environment of an organism, is perceived by sense organs, and if sufficiently intense induces a neural or equivalent (as tropistic) response (any physical energy that acts upon a receptor of a living organism. A stimulus causes a reaction in an organism, but not necessarily a response (a reaction of a muscle or gland)—Charles Morris) (so long as a system recognizes stimuli, and reacts to them with fitting responses, it exercises control. And it may then remain intact and functioning, despite stresses which would otherwise upset its internal coordination—Weisz) Stimulant, typically a medical term, applies chiefly to a chemical substance and especially to a medicament that does or is intended to vitalize bodily activity, either generally or in respect to a particular system or organ or function (tea, coffee, and cocoa are true stimulants to the heart, nervous system, and kidneys; coffee is more stimulating to the brain, cocoa to the kidneys, while tea occupies a happy position between the two, being mildly stimulating to most of our bodily functions—Ukers) <drugs which speed up cell activity are called stimulants—Clemensen et al) <alcohol produces a false sense of well-being and efficiency, but actually it is a depressant rather than a stimulant—T. L. Engle) Excitant can come very close to stimulant in some of its uses; thus, one may speak of a substance as a stimulant or an excitant of intestinal motility. But distinctively excitant can apply to either a sought or an unwanted reaction and it can imply, as stimulus often but stimulant rarely does, either the initiating or the vitalizing of a process or activity <these amines, being excitants of the central nervous system, increase intellectual and motor activity, produce insomnia, nervousness, and tremors and have the property of antagonizing mild drug depression—Thienes) <a great many allergists believed that pine pollen contained little or no excitant of allergy. That is to say, the element within the pollen which stimulates antibody production was absent in pine pollen—Swartz)

In their more general use these three terms are seldom as clearly differentiable as in their basic use. Stimulus and stimulant are usually interchangeably applicable to whatever exerts an impelling or invigorating effect (as on a process, an activity, or a mind) <whenever an idea loses its immediate felt quality, it ceases to be an idea and becomes, like an algebraic symbol, a mere stimulus to execute an operation without the need of thinking—Dewey) <to borrow from commercial banks increases the money supply and is a business stimulant—F. M. Knight) <the colonial-development money is the extra stimulus to generate development faster than would otherwise be possible—Lewis) but excitant, here too, is more likely to suggest an initiating <we hold that ethical statements are expressions and excitants of feeling which do not necessarily involve any assertions—Ayer) and it is applicable when unwanted or undesirable ends result <the desire to gain vast and lucrative readership and audiences is the major excitant to the excesses of which so many are aware—Newsweek) Incitement applies to something that moves or impels usually a course of action; the term tends to emphasize an urging or pressing intended to drive one into moving or acting quickly rather than the result attained <to issue a solemn public condemnation and warning that this attack against the Jewish people is an incitement to massacre—The Nation) <energies slumbering in him which the incitements of the day do not call forth—James) <nor could all the incitements of its master induce the beast again to move forward—Galsworthy) Impetus (see also SPEED 2) usually stresses the stimulation of an increase in the momentum of activity already initiated <what also gave an unusual impetus to the mind of men at this period was the discovery of the New World—Hazlitt) <in estimating the social importance of this movement, we must be careful to discount the temporary . . . impetus it received from the economic slump of this period—Day Lewis) But the term sometimes applies also to a stimulus that initiates action <it is the impetus that I ask of you: the will to try—Quiller-Couch) Ana spur, goad, incentive, *motive, inducement: excitement, piquing, provocation (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE): irritation, nettling (see corresponding verbs at IRRITATE) stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tightfisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, miserly, cheeseparing, penny-pinching can mean unwilling or manifesting unwillingness to share one's goods with others or to give to another a part of one's possessions. Stingy implies mainly a lack of generosity; the term is applicable whenever there is a suggestion of a mean or illiberal spirit <if I want anything, he says that it cannot be afforded. I never thought before that he was stingy, but I am sure now that he must be a miser at heart—Trollope) <stingy at heart, Cabot, refusing to plunk down what they were asking for movies and plays, began browsing in a . . . public library—Purdy) Close and closefisted and tight and tightfisted usually imply stinginess of nature, but they also ordinarily suggest the power to keep a tight grip upon whatever one has acquired <closefisted in all his expenditures) <men and women who are closefisted and make a gift do not want their next week's mail loaded with appeals—William Lawrence) <he wasn't as tight as you . . . but he was a little bit close. So the bargain hung fire—Hammett) <must be eagle-eyed and tightfisted about these expenditures—A. E. Stevenson) Niggardly implies the character of one who is so stingy and so closefisted that he grudgingly gives the smallest portion or amount possible; the term may refer not only to the giving or spending of money or the giving of material goods but to the provision of what would add to the comfort, happiness, or well-being of oneself or of others <as poor and niggardly as it would be to set down no more meat than your company will be sure to eat up—Swift) <his niggardly allowance for rent and food) <they were not niggardly, these tramps, and he who had money did not hesitate to share it among the rest—Maugham) <literature is so lavish with wealth and titles . . . the real world is so niggardly of these things—Huxley) Parsimonious stresses frugality, but it suggests also niggardliness; because of this double connotation the term usually suggests not a virtue but a fault or, often, a vice <a lonely bachelor life in caring for his property and in adding to it by parsimonious living—Long) Penurious adds to parsimonious the suggestion of a niggardliness so great as to give the appearance of extreme poverty or of excessive closefistedness <a grudging master . . . a penurious niggard of his wealth—Milton) <I had a rich uncle . . . a penurious accumulating curmudgeon—Irving) Miserly implies penuriousness but it stresses obsessive avariciousness as the motive <her expenditure was parsimonious and even miserly—J. R. Green) <a miserly man who hoards money out of avarice—Empson) Cheeseparing and penny-pinching suggest frugality and parsimoniousness carried to the extreme <the cheeseparing guardians of the city's finances) <a campaign of administrative cheeseparing—Alan) <a penny-pinching appropriation for relief)

Ana *mean, sordid, ignoble: scrimpy, skimpy, *meager: greedy, acquisitive, avaricious, *covetous, grasping: *sparing, economical, frugal, thrifty

Ant generous —Con *liberal, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, munificent: *profuse, lavish, prodigal stinking *malodorous, fetid, noisome, putrid, rank, rancid, fusty, musty

Ana foul, filthy, nasty, *dirty: *offensive, repulsive, revolting stint n 1 *task, duty, assignment, job, chore

Ana quantity, amount (see SUM): allotment, apportionment (see corresponding verbs at ALLOT): prescribing or prescription, assigning (see corresponding verbs at PRESCRIBE): sharing or share, participation (see corresponding verbs at SHARE)

2 *spell, bout, shift, tour, trick, turn, go stipend *wage or wages, salary, fee, emolument, pay, hire Ana remuneration, compensation, recompensing or recompense (see corresponding verbs at PAY)

stipple vb *spot, spatter, sprinkle, mottle, fleck, marble, speckle, spangle, bespangle stippled spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mottled, flecked, marbled, speckled, spangled, bespangled (see under SPOT vb)stipulation *condition, terms, provision, proviso, reservation, strings*Ana* specification (see corresponding verb at MENTION); restriction, circumscription (see corresponding verbs at LIMIT)

stir vb Stir, rouse, arouse, awaken, waken, rally can all mean to cause to shift from quiescence or torpor into activity. Stir, often followed by up, usually presupposes excitement to activity by something which disturbs or agitates and so brings to the surface or into outward expression what is latent or dormant (a dreamy, faraway look came into Mr. Bohlen's eyes, and he smiled. Then he stirred himself and began leaping through the plans—Dahl) (if the . . . teacher longs to stir the sluggish mind of one of her scholars, she must first find out what the sluggishness is due to—Eliot) (she wants stirring up. She's got into a rut—Bennett) Sometimes the word suggests the evoking of rebellion or revolt (movements that begin by stirring up hostility against a group of people—Dewey) More often it implies the evocation of profound, agitating, but usually agreeable, emotion (peace has no drums and trumpets to stir the pulse—Love-man) (men lacking an arm or leg stirred universal pity—Wecter) Rouse, arouse, awaken, waken all presuppose a state of rest or repose, often that of sleep. Rouse derives its implications from its application to the starting of game from coverts or lairs by the cries of hunters or by beating of bushes and often suggests incitement to activity by startling, frightening, or upsetting. In addition it commonly implies intense or vigorous activity and often ensuing commotion or turbulence (every tent roused by that clamor dread—Shelley) (roused out of sleep by a heavy pounding on the door—Wechsberg) (Antony . . . had spoken words which roused the mob to fury—Buchan) Arouse, though frequently used interchangeably with rouse, tends to be weaker in its implications and often means little more than to start into activity and conveys no hint of what follows; thus, a noise in the night arouses a sleeping soldier if he merely wakes up into consciousness of it, but it rouses him when he also makes determined efforts to trace its source or hastily arms himself; a fear may be aroused and immediately dispelled; passions are roused when they are so stirred up that they exert a compelling influence (now I had to guard against arousing the emotions of others—Mailer) (the new force stirred and aroused the people—Anderson) Awaken and waken, like arouse, frequently imply an ending of sleep; in extended use they are employed chiefly in reference to mental or spiritual powers or faculties which need only the proper stimulation to be called forth into activity or to be elicited (waken love) (the conscience of the nation was awakened) (her eyes brightened, her features appeared gradually to awaken, and life flowed back into her face—Farrell) (had wakened and heard the lion—Hemingway) (waken to the point about seven minutes after—Laski) (that tree always awakened pleasant memories, recalling a garden in the south of France—Cather) Rally (see also RIDICULE) presupposes a diffusion of forces or a lack of concentration that promotes lethargy or inaction; it therefore implies a gathering together that stirs up or rouses (he rallied his strength for a final blow—Prescott) (as if his memory were impaired . . . [he] made an effort to rally his attention—Dickens) (they stirred and rallied a divided, defeated people—Shirer)

Ana excite, *provoke, stimulate, quicken, galvanize: *incite, foment, instigate: activate, energize, *vitalize: *move, drive, impel, actuate

stir n 1 *motion, movement, move, locomotion

Ana acting or activity, working or work, behaving or behavior, reaction (see corresponding verbs at ACT); change, alteration, variation, modification (see under CHANGE vb)

2 Stir, bustle, flurry, pother, fuss, ado all denote the signs of excitement or hurry that accompany an act, action, or an event. Stir suggests brisk or restless movement and ordinarily implies a crowd (he liked to hear the paper talked about. He liked to have a stir and rumpus going on—White) (as some messenger arrived . . . a stir would pass through the throng so full of swagger and of youth—Osbert Sitwell) Bustle adds the implication of a noisy, obtrusive, or self-important display of energy, especially when used in reference to an individual (she needs the bustle of life in a good hotel—Bennett) ('tis true that strength and bustle build up a firm. But judgment and knowledge are what keep it established—Hardy) (the meaningless and vulgar bustle of newspaper offices—Gibbons) Flurry stresses nervous agitation and undue haste (so now began a great flurry . . . There is no part of the world where there doesn't have to be excitement over a wedding—Upton Sinclair) (the resilience and strength of purpose that persist like deeply banked fires beneath a surface that is frequently all flurry and crepitation—Times Lit. Sup.) Pother and fuss both imply flurry and fidgety activity; pother often distinctively stresses commotion or confusion and fuss needless worry or effort (he is always in a pother about something or other) (she had invited her parents to come on the fiesta weekend, calculating that the excitement and fuss would distract their attention from herself—Wouk) (it had made a dreadful pother and this was still remembered uneasily—Mencken) (even this pother about gods reminds one that something is worthwhile—Pound) Ado usually suggests fussiness or waste of energy (go to work without any more ado) It also often implies trouble or difficulty (there was much ado before their affairs were straightened out)

Ana agitation, disturbance, disquieting or disquiet (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): excitement, stimulation (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE): *din, uproar, hubbub, pandemonium

Ant tranquillitystitch n *pain, twinge, ache, pang, throestock n *variety, subspecies, race, breed, cultivar, strain, clone stocky, thickset, thick, chunky, stubby, squat, dumpy are comparable when they apply to build of the human body and mean being relatively compact in form. Stocky implies a short and wide or thick build and is likely to be complimentary in suggesting compact sturdiness (stocky though not chubby—White) (a stocky hard-hitting catcher) Thickset may describe a thick, solid, burly body (too thickset for jockeying—Masefield) Thick may be used for bodily parts (thick lips) (thick legs) more often than for body build. Chunky may indicate a body type ample but robust and solid (short and chunky, not quite fat—Harold Sinclair) (a well-fed, chunky, healthy boy) Stubby, less apt than others in this set to describe human body types, indicates noteworthy lack of height or length and corresponding shortness (outfielders' gloves have longer fingers . . . infielders' gloves have relatively stubby fingers—New Yorker) Squat and dumpy are usually uncomplimentary. Squat may indicate unshapely lack of height as though suggesting a person squatting (the squat misshapen figure that flattened itself into the shadow—Wilde) (anchored vessels of every sort from squat Baltic timber carriers—Wheel- wright) Dumpy may suggest short, lumpish gracelessness of body (stumpy, dumpy girls with their rather coarse features, big buttocks and heavy breasts—Koestler) stodgy *dull, humdrum, dreary, monotonous, pedestrian Ana *heavy, weighty, ponderous: *irksome, tedious, wearisome, tiresome, boring: stuffy, straitlaced, prudish (see PRIM)

stoic *impassive, phlegmatic, apathetic, stolid

Ana detached, aloof, *indifferent, unconcerned: imperturbable, composed, collected, *cool: unassailable, indomitable (see INVINCIBLE): patient, long-suffering, resigned (see corresponding NOUNS at PATIENCE) stoicism impassivity, phlegm, apathy, stolidity (see under IMPASSIVE)

Ana *fortitude, grit, backbone, pluck, guts, sand: detachment, aloofness, indifference, unconcernedness or unconcern (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT)

stolid *impassive, phlegmatic, apathetic

Ana *dull, blunt, obtuse: *stupid, slow, dull, dense, crass, dumb: *heavy, ponderous: passive, supine, inert, *inactive

Ant adroit (sense 2)

stolidity impassivity, phlegm, apathy, stoicism (see under IMPASSIVE)

Con quickness, promptness, readiness, aptness (see corresponding adjectives at QUICK): animation, enlivening, quickening (see corresponding verbs at QUICKEN): *passion, fervor, ardor, zeal, enthusiasm stomach *abdomen, belly, paunch, gut stoop vb Stoop, condescend, deign can mean to descend below the level (as in rank or dignity) where one belongs or thinks he belongs to do something. Stoop implies a descent not only in rank or dignity but also, and more often, from a relatively high moral plane to a lower one; the term, therefore, can suggest disgraceful or shameful action (stoop to fraud) (to think that you should stoop to lying) Often the term implies a lowering of one's standards (as of conduct) or a debasement of one's principles for some unworthy end (as to satisfy greed or ambition) (aspiring to be the leader of a nation of third-rate men, he had to stoop to the common level—Mencken) (his ambition was still to paint huge historical pictures; but meanwhile, to keep the pot boiling, he was prepared to stoop to a pettier kind of art—Huxley) (but on the material side, Mr. Archer, if one may stoop to consider such things—Wharton) Condescend may imply the stooping of one who is actually exalted in power, rank, or dignity so as to accommodate himself to intercourse with those who are his inferiors; in this sense the term usually suggests graciousness and courtesy and a waiving of formalities (Spain's mighty monarch, in gracious clemency, does condescend, on these conditions, to become your friend—Dryden) Often, however, the term implies an assumption of superiority and a patronizing manner that tends to offend or affront the person who is regarded as an inferior (no beggar ever felt him condescend, no prince presume—J. R. Lowell) (those who thought they were honoring me by condescending to address a few words to me—F. W. Robinson) (he had, of course, every right to condescend. He was the success, the young man of twenty-three with a hit on Broadway—Wouk) Deign implies a temperament or frame of mind that makes one haughty, arrogant, or contemptuous more often than it implies high rank or dignity or high standards of conduct; it usually means to stoop to what one believes is not fully in keeping with one's dignity or to something that one is reluctant to do or say or offer; therefore the term is most common with scarcely, hardly, or in negative constructions ([the] very dog will hardly deign to bark at you—Arnold)

(my father she deigned to talk with because he was a simple and friendly man and vaguely a relation—Bromfield) (never deigned to make money in any considerable amount; but he has no doubt that he could do so if he tried—Gorer)

Ana *abuse, demean, humble: vouchsafe, accord, *grant, concede: favor, accommodate, *oblige

stop vb 1 Stop, cease, quit, discontinue, desist are comparable when they mean to suspend or cause to suspend activity. Stop applies primarily to action or progress or to what is thought of as moving or progressing; cease applies primarily to states and conditions or to what is thought of as being or as having existence; thus, a train stops but does not cease; the noise it makes both stops and ceases; one stops a car but may cease driving a car; one stops work on a book but ceases one's efforts to perfect its style (when I have fears that I may cease to be—Keats) Stop frequently connotes a sudden or definite, cease a gradual suspension of activity (stop a quarrel) (cease quarreling) (I gave commands; then all smiles stopped together—Browning) (you hear the grating roar . . . begin, and cease, and then again begin—Arnold) Quit (see also GO) may suggest finality in ceasing an activity, sometimes with an implication of accepting frustration or failure (he quit coming) (quit smoking) (since he has quit Party work, he has studied a great deal—Mailer) (a few came, straggling and reluctant and not at all constant: most quit after the first day—Pynchon) Discontinue implies the suspension of some activity, especially one that has become a form of occupation or employment or is a practice or habit (discontinue a correspondence) (discontinue a subscription to a journal) (she found it necessary to discontinue her studies—Current Biog.) (the English abstracts that were formerly printed in Russian technical periodicals have been discontinued—Martin Gardner) Desist usually stresses forbearance or restraint as the motive for stopping or ceasing but it may imply the futility of one's efforts (desist from further questioning) (an order . . . requiring such person . . . to cease and desist from the violation of the law so charged—U. S. Code) (Paul desisted, because he had read in the newspaper satirical remarks about initial-carvers, who could find no other road to immortality—D. H. Lawrence) (he had made two attempts to shave but his hand had been so unsteady that he had been obliged to desist—Joyce) Ana *arrest, check, interrupt: intermit, suspend, stay, *defer, postpone: *frustrate, thwart, foil, balk, circumvent Con start, *begin, commence, initiate: *go, depart, leave

2 stay, put up, lodge, sojourn, *reside, live, dwell stopgap makeshift, shift, expedient, *resource, resort, substitute, surrogate storm vb bombard, assault, assail, *attack story 1 *account, report, chronicle, version

Ana *history, chronicle, annals: relation, rehearsing, recital, recounting (see corresponding verbs at RELATE) 2 Story, narrative, tale, anecdote, yarn all denote a recital of happenings less elaborate than a novel. Story is the most general and the familiar word and may be interchanged with any of the others of the group, except in its generalized sense of legendary lore (snowy summits old in story—Tennyson) A story may be oral or written, factual or fictitious, in prose or in verse, and designed to inform or to entertain but characteristically treats of a connected series of events or incidents rather than a single incident (his life story) (the story of an opera) (the story of the Crusades) (a story full of incident) (he had told the story simply, without any visible attempt to work on her sympathy. Probably it was a true memory—

Malamud > The short story and a newspaper story may treat of but one incident. Narrative in its common use is more often factual than imaginative <his part of the book is impeccable; the narrative is a pleasure to read and the material of great interest—Geographical Jour.> <historical narrative>  As a literary composition narrative usually suggests a plot or causally connected series of motivated incidents; thus, a chronicle or a diary is not ordinarily called a narrative <at this point he spun into the narrative a little yarn which he had fabricated last night in bed—Rölvaaq> Tale suggests, in consequence of its historical connection with oral telling, a more leisurely and more loosely organized recital, characteristically treating legendary or imaginary happenings, often those of ancient times, and may be in verse <Oriental tales> <folktales> <tales of the court of King Arthur> <tales based on folklore, legends of great men and small—Mahler> Anecdote, retaining something of its original sense of an unpublished item, applies to a brief story of a single detachable incident of curious or humorous interest, often illustrative of a truth or principle or of the character or foibles of a notable person <an anecdote of Lincoln's boyhood> <during the meal he entertained them with anecdotes of his travels—Meredith> <an occasional anecdote, given as an example of the indignities she was made to suffer—Sackville-West> Yarn often suggests a rambling and rather dubious tale of exciting adventure, marvelous or incredible, ingenious or fanciful, and not always reaching a clear-cut outcome <without motive a story is not a novel, but only a yarn—Caine> <the uncle . . . would arrive from Australia once every few years bringing no gifts but his wonderful yarns. As far as Victoria remembered, he'd never repeated himself—Pynchon>

Ana narration, description (see corresponding verbs at RELATE): *fiction, fable, fabrication

3 *lie, falsehood, untruth, fib, misrepresentation stout adj 1 *strong, sturdy, stalwart, tough, tenacious

Ana *brave, bold, intrepid, valiant, valorous: indomitable, *invincible: resolute, staunch, steadfast (see FAITHFUL): *vigorous, energetic, lusty

2 *fleshy, fat, portly, corpulent, obese, plump, rotund, chubby

Ana thick, thickset, *stocky: burly, brawny, husky, *muscular

Ant cadaverous —Con *lean, lank, lanky, spare, angular, rawboned, skinny, scrawny straightforward, forthright, aboveboard when applied to persons, their actions, or their methods mean honest and open. Something straightforward is consistently direct and free from deviations or evasiveness   <he is a man; with clear, straightforward ideas, a frank, noble presence—Disraeli> Something forthright has directness like that of a thrust, or goes straight to the point without swerving or hesitating  <thought that this must be the true air of success: no conceit or obvious triumph, but a forthright glance, a confident smile, a new erectness in the shoulders—Wouk> Something aboveboard is free from all traces of deception or duplicity. Aboveboard is chiefly used predicatively and applies more often to actions or methods than to persons <one whose life had been so well-ordered, balanced, and aboveboard—Galsworthy> <the peace of mind that comes from being completely honest and aboveboard—Haupt> Straightforward, forthright, and aboveboard are also used adverbially with the same implications and connotations as their adjectival forms.

Ana honest, *upright, honorable, just: *fair, equitable, impartial: candid, *frank, open, plain

Ant devious: indirect strain n 1 *variety, subspecies, race, breed, cultivar, clone, stock

2 streak, vein, *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash strain vb 1 sprain (see under STRAIN n)

2 *demur, scruple, balk, shy, boggle, stickle, stick strain n 1 *stress, pressure, tension

2 Strain, sprain as nouns can mean an injury to a part of the body through overstretching and as verbs to cause or to suffer such an injury to a part of the body. Strain, the more general and less technical term, usually implies an injury to a body part or organ or to muscles as a result of overuse, overexercise, or overexertion or of overeffort (as in an attempt to regain one's balance or to lift too heavy an object); the injury may range from a slight soreness or stiffness to a disabling damage; thus, eyestrain is a condition of the eye or of the muscles of the eye involving pain and fatigue such as occurs in those who do close work with their eyes or in those who suffer from uncorrected defects of vision; charley horse is a familiar term for a stiffness resulting from muscular strain in the arm or leg (as of an athlete) <strained his back while trying to avoid a fall on a slippery sidewalk> But strain may specifically apply to an injury resulting from a wrench or twist and involving overstretching of muscles and ligaments and is then nearly interchangeable with, though typically suggesting less severe injury than, sprain which definitely implies an injury to a joint, usually as a result of a wrenching, with stretching or tearing of its ligaments, damage to the synovial membrane, swelling and pain, and disablement of the joint; thus, one may strain or sprain an ankle by a sudden slip that wrenches it <crippled by a sprain of the hip>

strained *forced, labored, farfetched

Ana tense, taut, *tight: *artificial, factitious: unnatural (see IRREGULAR): *stiff, rigid, inflexible, wooden strait n 1 Strait, sound, channel, passage, narrows can all denote a long and comparatively narrow stretch of water connecting two larger bodies. Strait, often as the plural straits with either singular or plural construction, denotes a relatively short and very narrow waterway <the Strait of Dover connecting the English Channel and the North Sea> <the Straits of Gibraltar connecting the Atlantic Ocean and the Mediterranean Sea> Sound applies to a longer and more extensive waterway than a strait; the term is often applied to a long passage of water between the mainland and an island or group of islands and therefore at each end opening into the same ocean or sea or arms of the same ocean or sea <Long Island Sound lying between the Connecticut shore and the north shore of Long Island and connecting the East River and the Atlantic Ocean> <the Channeleur Sound lying between the southeast coast of Louisiana and the Channeleur Islands and opening at both ends into the Gulf of Mexico> Channel is less frequent than strait or sound as a technical term in the sense here considered, but when it is so used it denotes a relatively large sound <the English Channel between southeastern England and the north coast of France> <the Mozambique Channel between the coast of southeastern Africa and Mozambique Island> Passage is practically synonymous with channel, denoting a connecting body of water wider than a strait <Mona Passage between the islands of Hispaniola and Puerto Rico> Narrows designates a strait or a contracted part of a body of water; it is especially used of the necklike part of a bottle-shaped harbor <the Narrows of New York harbor>

2 pass, exigency, pinch, emergency, *juncture, contingency, crisis

Ana *difficulty, hardship, vicissitude, rigor: perplexity, bewilderment, mystification (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE): plight, *predicament, fix, quandary straitlaced *prim, priggish, prissy, prudish, puritanical, stuffy

Ana narrow, narrow-minded, hidebound, intolerant (see ILLIBERAL): *rigid, rigorous, strict

Ant libertine

strand *shore, coast, beach, bank, littoral, foreshore strange, singular, unique, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, odd, queer, quaint, outlandish, curious can mean varying from what is ordinary, usual, and to be expected.

Strange, the most comprehensive of these terms, suggests unfamiliarity; it may apply to what is foreign, unnatural, inexplicable, or new (some strange and potent élan was released in Cabot shortly after the second treatment . . . He bloomed, as so few men do—Purdy) (to most of us the art of China and Japan, however much it may attract and impress, is strange—Binyon) (the people in the streets have their usual air, tranquil and indolent. No curiosity, no emotion in their faces. A strange people!—Edmund Wilson)

Singular distinctively implies difference from every other instance of its kind and therefore stresses individuality (a distinguished and singular excellence—Mencken) (the taxi driver had lugged the parcel . . . for the woman, and then—proving himself a singular example of his species—had broken a ten-dollar bill for her—Kahn) Often, however, the word suggests strangeness that puzzles one or piques one's curiosity (I experienced a singular sensation on reading the first sentence . . . There are sensations you cannot describe—F. M. Ford) (tis singular that even within the sight of the high towers of Antioch you could lose your way—Shelley)

Unique implies not only singularity but the fact of being unparalleled without suggesting, as singular does, a strange or baffling character or quality (personality always contains something unique—Justice Holmes) (he has the almost unique distinction of having made speeches which were both effective when delivered and also models of literary eloquence—Inge) (the majestic, the enduring novels treat of subjects which are rarely unique—Elizabeth Bowen)

Peculiar (see also CHARACTERISTIC) implies marked or conspicuous distinctiveness in character or quality (this difference arises . . . from the peculiar character of the Government of the United States—Taney) (the peculiar etiquette attached to elevators was rigidly observed by members of both households—Bemelmans) (only subtle and delicate minds . . . catch the characteristic aroma, the peculiar perfume—Brownell)

Often peculiar is employed where one of the succeeding terms (as eccentric or queer) might well be used (he is growing very peculiar) (made little effort to remember the day; with its peculiar quality of dementia it seemed not a commonplace and civilized social event but a nightmare—Styron)

Eccentric implies divergence from the beaten track; erratic adds to eccentric a stronger implication of caprice and unpredictability (an eccentric preference for beginning his dinner . . . in the late afternoon—Cather) (the house had grown, reflecting the stubborn and eccentric turns of Justina's mind—Cheever) (the workings of his mind were erratic) (this towering but erratic genius . . . who combined in his tempestuous character so many of the best and the worst qualities of the German—Shirer)

Odd stresses a departure from the usual, the normal, or the regular; it sometimes suggests an element of the fantastic; queer even more strongly implies eccentricity and often suggests that the thing so qualified is dubious or questionable

(great men whose odd habits it would have been glorious piety to endure—George Eliot) (the oddest sense of being herself invisible; unseen; unknown—Woolf) (Alice was not much surprised at this, she was getting so well used to queer things happening—Lewis Carroll) (completely out of control . . . her voice had become louder and her smile queerer—Wouk)

Quaint implies pleasant or especially old-fashioned oddness; outlandish, uncouth or bizarre oddness (a quaint village, full of half-timbered houses) (to post-Freudian ears, this kind of language seems touchingly quaint and ingenuous—Huxley) (an outlandish custom) (he wore the prophet's robe with a difference. He never let it look outlandish—Montague) (he introduced outlandish or unbelievable people and situations into his work; that is, . . . fantasy was not a mode of escape but a device of satire—Fitzell)

Curious usually implies extraordinary oddness or a singularity that invites close attention, study, or inquiry. When the word is employed as an equivalent of one or another of the foregoing words it tends to retain to a greater or less degree the notion of extraordinariness and often suggests that the thing so described merits notice or investigation (a curious sickening smell) (curious bits of folklore) (curious customs and habits of speech surviving from an earlier age) (my only guiding principle has been that the examples should be curious, striking and even, in certain cases, extravagant—Huxley) (a curious sensation, sitting only a yard away from this man who fifty years before had made me so miserable that I had once contemplated suicide—Dahl) (loneliness, far from being a rare and curious circumstance—Wolfe)

Ana *abnormal, atypical, aberrant: *fantastic, bizarre, grotesque: surprising, astonishing, amazing, flabbergasting (see SURPRISE)

Ant familiar

stranger, foreigner, alien, outlander, outsider, immigrant, émigré can all designate a person who comes into a community from the outside and is not recognized as a member of that community. This is the primary denotation of some of the words, but the secondary sense of the others, especially the last three. Stranger and foreigner may both apply to one who comes from another country or sometimes from another section as a resident or visitor. They have somewhat different implications, however, stranger stressing the person's unfamiliarity with the language and customs and foreigner the fact that he speaks a different language, follows different customs, or bears allegiance to another government (the time came when I was the observant foreigner, examining education in France. To tell the truth, I was not a stranger to it, having lived in France as a child and again as a youth—Grand-gent)

Alien emphasizes allegiance to another sovereign or government and is often opposed to citizen; thus, one may be called a foreigner after naturalization, but not with accuracy an alien. In extended use alien can imply either exclusion from full privileges of or inability to identify oneself with a group (the older I grow, the more of an alien I find myself in the world; I cannot get used to it, cannot believe that it is real—L. P. Smith) (he is anesthetic to their theological and political enthusiasms. He finds himself an alien at their feasts of soul—Mencken)

Outlander, in its general sense, is preferred to foreigner only for a literary or rhetorical reason or because it carries the implications of outlandish (to this vast matriarchal blackness he had returned, bringing a bride, an outlander—Hervey) (his neighbors were . . . outlanders of that particular type to which . . . his own fastidiousness found the greatest objection—Tarkington)

Outsider usually implies nonmembership in a group, clique, or caste largely because of essential differences in origin, interests, backgrounds, customs, and manners (was the only outsider in a company of which every member was privy to the origin, developments, and existing state of its complications—Sackville-West) Immigrant and émigré are often used of foreigners who are residents and no longer aliens. Immigrant usually is applied to a foreigner who has come voluntarily, typically in search of a better means of earning a living or a more satisfying way of life; émigré implies that the foreigner is a fugitive or refugee from his native land or, in a weaker sense, that he has left his abiding place rather from dissatisfaction than from strong hope for a better future (Hemingway, whom the young émigrés to Montparnasse . . . had hailed as a major prophet of the emptiness of everything—F. L. Allen) strangle vb *suffocate, asphyxiate, stifle, smother, choke, throttle stratagem *trick, ruse, maneuver, gambit, ploy, artifice, wile, feint

Ana *device, contrivance, contraption; expedient, shift, *resource, resort; machination, intrigue, conspiracy, *plot strategic tactical, logistic (see under STRATEGY)

strategy, tactics, logistics as used in relation to warfare are not always clearly distinguished. Strategy is the art or science involved in the direction of the forces at his disposal by the commander in chief of a belligerent nation or by those assisting him. The term usually implies the planning of major operations intended to gain the objectives of the war, and often, but not necessarily, connotes the effective presence of these officers at home or behind the lines. Tactics is the art or science of handling forces in the field or in action; the term implies not only the presence of the enemy as affecting the disposition or maneuvering of troops, ships, planes, and matériels but the direction of a commanding officer upon the scene (the theater of war is the province of strategy, the field of battle is the province of tactics—Hamley) Logistics is the art or science of military supply and transportation; the term usually implies both planning and implementation and covers such varied matters as design and development, acquisition, stockpiling, shipping and distribution, upkeep, and ultimate evacuation and disposition of matériel; acquisition, preparation, assignment, distribution, and physical care of personnel; preparation, operation, upkeep, and disposal of facilities; and provision of services. Broadly logistics constitutes the theory and practice of military housekeeping (generals and admirals and their staffs plan campaigns. That is strategy. They fight battles and these combat operations are known as tactics. A third element determines the success or failure of strategy and tactics. This is called logistics. A large part of an army, a fleet, or an air force, and nearly the entire civilian population today play a role in logistics. What they accomplish in producing and distributing the resources needed to implement strategy and tactics controls the outcome of war—Donald Armstrong)

The same differences in meaning are also found in strategic, tactical, and logistic (or logistical) as referred to the conduct of a war (strategic air war now being conducted so effectively upon German cities and factories by the Royal Air force and the United States 8th air force will in due time be supplemented or in part substituted by tactical air operations on which our ground forces will depend to cover advances of troops and to devastate the huge fortifications erected by the Nazis in northern France, Belgium and along the northern coast of the continent—David Lawrence) (the outstanding military lesson of this campaign was the continuous, calculated application of air power . . . in the most intimate tactical and logistical union with ground forces—MacArthur)

straw vb *strew, scatter, sow, broadcast stray vb *wander, roam, ramble, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander streak n strain, vein, *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash stream n *flow, current, flood, tide, flux stream vb *pour, gush, sluice

Ana flow, issue, emanate, proceed (see SPRING): flood, deluge, inundate (see corresponding nouns at FLOOD) streamer pennant, pendant, pennon, banner, *flag, ensign, standard, color strength *power, force, might, energy, puissance

Ana stoutness, sturdiness, toughness, tenaciousness (see corresponding adjectives at STRONG): soundness, healthiness (see corresponding adjectives at HEALTHY): *possessions, means, resources, assets strengthen, invigorate, fortify, energize, reinforce can mean to make strong or stronger. Strengthen is the most general term, applicable not only to persons or their physical, mental, or moral powers but also to things material or immaterial (as a structure, a system, an aggregation, or an influence); the word can connote increase either in force, energy, vigor, and power of resistance, or in intensity, authority, or effectiveness (their friendship strengthened as they grew older) (exercise is necessary to strengthen the body) (opposition will only strengthen their belief) (his case was greatly strengthened by the newly discovered evidence) (the handle of the tool had been bound by ordinary picture wire, apparently to strengthen a fracture in the wood—Hynd) (impulses to submission strengthened by habits of obedience bred in the past—Dewey) (after a period of hoarse whispering, her voice changes its tone and strengthens—Hearn) Invigorate is commonly used in reference to living things or of some power or activity of a living thing and is sometimes extended to things that have powers suggestive of life; it implies an increase in vigor or vitality or active or effective strength or force (their minds and bodies were invigorated by exercise—Gibbon) (the series of Midwestern novels that followed shocked and invigorated American thought—S. R. L.) (the general run of Canadians are invigorated when our athletes win recognition in the United States—D. M. Fisher) (a passing priest heard of Kaldi's discovery and thought that he would try these invigorating berries since he was inclined to fall asleep during his prayers—Charles Cooper) (invigorating sea breezes) Fortify, which primarily means to strengthen a town or city by defensive structures, in a more general sense means to strengthen against attack or stress of any sort (a certain uneasiness had come upon her, and even fortified by food she could not bring herself to go—Boyle) (fortified himself with a stiff drink) (I have been fortified in my belief by the utterances of this Court from the time of Chief Justice Taney to the present day—Justice Holmes) (set up on a pedestal, fortified by the strongest bulwark in executive acts, those principles which we would abandon at our peril—Vannevar Bush) (the old-fashioned polemical sermon followed, fortified with texts and garnished with quotations in Greek—Brooks) Energize implies a strengthening in the form of supplying the active power for working or for being ready for work and, therefore, is used of whatever can be roused into strong activity or infused with a desire to act (the office of Inspector General was greatly improved, and energized, during the first administration of Mr. Pitt—Chalmers) <as between husband and wife, hers was definitely the stronger spirit. She was more highly energized, more industrious, more ambitious—S. H. Adams) <he energized the Garden-Suburb ethos with a certain original talent and the vigor of a prolonged adolescence—Leavis) Reinforce implies the making of what is weak stronger or of what is strong still stronger by or as if by an addition that stiffens and supports, and thereby adds effectiveness, powers of resistance, cogency, or durability <reinforce concrete by embedding steel bars or mesh in it) <reinforce an argument by additional evidence) <reinforce a stocking at heel and toe) <the stimulus given by his dialectics to their keen and eager minds was supplemented and reinforced by the appeal to their admiration and love of his sweet and virile personality—Dickinson) <Maria's distrust returned, reinforced by resentment. Yet she said nothing—Hervey) <experience in Brazil seems to show that in mixed marriages the black element, if not reinforced, is absorbed by the white within a few generations—William Tate)

Ana embolden, steel, nerve, *encourage, inspirit, hearten, cheer: *vitalize, activate: galvanize, quicken, stimulate (see PROVOKE): *intensify, lighten, aggravate

Ant weaken —Con enfeeble, debilitate, sap, undermine, cripple, disable (see WEAKEN): *discourage, dishearten, dispirit, deject: *unnerve, enervate, unman, emasculate strenuous energetic, *vigorous, lusty, nervous

Ana virile, manful, manly (see MALE): dynamic, live, *active, operative: *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome: vehement, *intense, fierce, violent stress n 1 Stress, strain, pressure, tension are comparable terms when they apply to the action or effect of force exerted within or upon a thing. Stress and strain are the comprehensive terms of this group and are sometimes used interchangeably <put stresses and strains on parts of the body that were not constructed to bear that burden—Fishbein) <if sufficiently large stresses are applied to any crystal, it remains at least partly deformed when the stresses are removed—Seitz) <the wrench is an instrument for exerting a twisting strain, as in turning bolts and nuts—Burghardt & Axelrod) <by a powerful strain upon the reins, raising his horse's forefeet from the ground—De Quincey) <the breakup due to tremendous strains experienced in bad weather have time and again proven the fatal power of squalls over dirigibles—Furnas) Although stress is frequently used in technical contexts in the above sense of a force applied to deform a body, it is also used, especially in physics, of the equal and opposite forces with which the body resists being deformed <a weight suspended from a rod tends to pull the rod apart. The stress developed in the rod to resist being pulled apart is called tensile stress—Samuel Slade & Louis Margolis) Strain in technical contexts and especially in physics usually denotes the deformation of a body as a result of applied force <a new device . . . conveniently measures strain in vulcanized rubber . . . after application of a pre-determined stress—Technical News Bulletin) <it is generally held that most earthquakes are caused by the sudden release of elastic strain when this becomes greater than the strength of the rock—Science) Pressure commonly applies to a stress which is characterized by a weighing down upon or a pushing against a surface and which, in fluids, is distributed uniformly in all directions; it is usually measurable per unit area of surface affected <the normal atmospheric pressure is about 14.7 pounds per square inch—Van Nostrand's) <the pressure of the blood against the walls of blood vessels) <steam pressure) Tension applies to either of two balancing forces causing or tending to cause elongation of an elastic body or to the stress resulting from the elongation of such a body <a steel bar can safely bear a pull or tension of 16,000 lb. for each square inch of its cross section—Samuel Slade & Louis Margolis)

2 *emphasis, accent, accentuation stretch n *expanse, amplitude, spread

Ana *area, tract, region: extent, magnitude, *size strew, straw, scatter, sow, broadcast can mean to throw loosely or at intervals. Strew and the less common straw usually imply a spreading at intervals, but the intervals may be so fine as not to be obvious or so great that each thing may be separately identified <ground strewn with leaves) <strew a path with gravel) <as he sits in the armchair, the Sunday papers are strewn around him—Mailer) <he looked . . . over the great mesa-strewn plain far below—Cather) <petty ordinances . . . of no more weight than dandelion fluff strawed by the wind—Clement Wood) <the tent of night in tatters straws the sky-pavilioned land—Housman) Scatter (see also SCATTER) implies a separation of parts or pieces, but it distinctively implies a throwing that lets the things fall where they will <scatter pennies) <scatter bread crumbs) <no railroad scatters its soot over the neat white frame houses—Corey Ford) <a story . . . attacking tuberculars for coming to San Antonio and scattering their deadly germs about this innocent city—Green Peyton) Sow basically implies the strewing of seeds where they will sprout and develop <surrounding fields have been sown . . . with squash, pumpkin, and maize—Science) or in its extended use the strewing of something comparable to seed that can be disseminated (as throughout a group, a community, or an organization) < sow discord among the club members) < sow seeds of reason and understanding throughout the world—A. E. Stevenson) Broadcast (see also DECLARE) implies a scattering widely or in all directions <it is best to broadcast very fine seed) <early in April, just before a rain begins, broadcast 3 pounds of white clover seed—H. S. Pearson) Ana *spread, disseminate: disperse, dissipate (see SCATTER) strict stringent, *rigid, rigorous

Ana stern, *severe, austere, ascetic: *inflexible, inexorable: exacting, oppressive, *onerous, burdensome

Ant lax: loose: lenient, indulgent stricture *animadversion, aspersion, reflection

Ana criticism, censuring or censure, condemnation, denouncing or denunciation (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)

Ant commendation

strident 1 *loud, stentorian, earsplitting, hoarse, raucous, stertorous

Ana harsh, *rough: resounding, *resonant

2 blatant, clamorous, *vociferous, boisterous, obstreperous

Ana harsh, uneven, *rough strife *discord, conflict, contention, dissension, difference, variance

Ana combat, conflict, fight, affray, fray (see CONTEST): dispute, controversy, *argument: *brawl, broil, fracas: altercation, wrangle, *quarrel, squabble

Ant peace: accord

strike vb 1 Strike, hit, smite, punch, slug, slog, swat, clout, slap, cuff, box are comparable when they mean to come or bring into contact with or as if with a sharp blow. Strike, hit, and smite are the more general terms. Strike, the most general of the words, may indicate the motion of aiming or dealing the blow, the motion prior to contact with the hand, fist, instrument, weapon, or missile <strike at the enemy and miss) <strike out at random) It may indicate various types of contact from a light, often stroking contact (the light breeze struck the ship on the north side) to a forcible collision or blasting contact (the car struck a post and overturned) (the lightning struck the house) (strike a man down with a heavy blow) (the enemy struck with full force) It may suggest several types of physical or emotional effect or impression (strike someone dead) (strike a line on paper) (strike out a name from a list) (to be struck by the beauty of the scenery) (grief-stricken) (conscience-stricken) or it may be used to indicate any of the types of contact suggested by the other words in this group. Hit, although it is used in most of the situations in which strike occurs, emphasizes more than the latter the physical or figurative contact with or impact upon an object, usually one aimed at; it tends to stress forcefulness (hit a child on the wrist) (the shell hit the tank and tore through the side) (the disaster . . . hit him hard—H. G. Wells) (hit the right road home) (hit the winning number in a lottery) Smite, likely to appear in rhetorical or bookish contexts, commonly stresses the injuriousness or destructiveness of the contact and often suggests a motivation of anger or desire for vengeance (with the hammer she smote Siser, she smote off his head—Judg 5:26) (conscience-smitten) (smitten with grief) Punch, slug, slog, swat, and clout are generally used to suggest the giving of various kinds of usually sharp or heavy blows. Punch suggests a quick blow with or as if with the fist (would handcuff everybody rather than face the risk of having their noses punched by somebody—Shaw) Slug emphasizes the heaviness of the impact and may suggest a certain viciousness in the delivery of the blow (was attacked by an assault suspect, who slugged him with a 5-ft. iron pipe—Time) Slog emphasizes the heavy and typically haphazard quality of the blows (“Slog them on the head with your club . . .,” shouted Tammer. And as the twisted knot of men reeled conveniently towards me I did what execution I could—Strand Mag.) and in sports (as cricket or golf) it may stress power as opposed to finesse (hayfields fringed the very putting greens . . . and a man had to slog and slog again before he got out of them—Bernard Darwin) Swat suggests a forceful, slapping blow, usually with an instrument (as a bat, weapon, or flyswatter) (in off moments he would swat the regiments of cockroaches—de Kruif) (swat flies) (swat a baseball out of the ball park) Clout suggests a heavy careless blow (as with the hand or fist) (a shoe clouted his skull and inflicted a fracture—McCrae) (they clout our heads the moment our conclusions differ from theirs—Shaw) Slap, cuff, and box all denote blows of varying force with the open hand. Slap is the most general and indicates a sharp, stinging blow with or as if with the palm of the hand (slap a person in the face) (slapped the coverlet angrily—Kenneth Roberts) Cuff suggests a blow often forcible enough to dizzy or throw off balance and often dealt with the back of the hand (it was pointed out . . . that children could be hurried and delayed, cuffed or bribed, into becoming adults—Mead) (I swear I’ll cuff you, if you strike again—Shak.) Box suggests the delivery of an openhanded blow but is ordinarily limited to one against the ears (the mother boxed her child’s ears in a fit of temper)

Ana *beat, pummel, buffet, pound, baste, belabor, thrash 2 impress, touch, influence, *affect, sway striking arresting, signal, salient, conspicuous, outstanding, *noticeable, remarkable, prominent Ana *effective, effectual, efficacious: telling, convincing, compelling, cogent (see VALID): forcible, forceful, *powerful: impressive, *moving string n 1 *succession, progression, series, sequence, chain, train

2 in plural form strings *condition, stipulation, terms, provision, proviso, reservation stringent strict, *rigid, rigorous

Ana *severe, austere, stern: limiting, restricting, circumscribing, confining (see LIMIT vb): restraining, curbing (see RESTRAIN): exacting, oppressive, *onerous strip vb Strip, divest, denude, bare, dismantle can mean to deprive a person or thing of what clothes, furnishes, or invests him or it. Strip stresses a pulling or tearing off rather than a laying bare, though the latter implication is frequent; it often connotes more or less violent action or complete deprivation (strip the bark from a tree) (he was quickly stripped of his clothes) (where pasturing cattle stripped the ground) (once start stripping poetry of what you imagine are inessentials and you will find . . . the anatomy is made visible but the life will have gone—Day Lewis) (I had stripped a few of my habits, second and benzedrine at any rate, but I was . . . tense and brain-deadened—Mailer) Divest, in contrast to strip, does not suggest violence; it usually implies a taking away of what a person or thing has been clothed or equipped with especially as a sign of power, rank, influence, or prestige (divesting capitalists of further increments of power—Cohen) Therefore it often connotes an undoing or a dispossession or a degrading (divest an officer of all authority) (naturalism divests life, whether physical or spiritual, of all that separates it from the inanimate and inorganic—Inge) (the king is thus divested of his kingship and now becomes merely a corpse—Frazier) Denude implies a stripping or divesting, but distinctively it implies a resulting bareness or nakedness (stripped of its vines and denuded of its shrubbery, the house would probably have been ugly enough—Cather) (a ghostly lunar rainbow—the spectrum cleansed and denuded of all the garish colors of day—Beebe) (modern agriculture . . . denudes the land of the protective cover and food that wild creatures need—G. S. Perry) Bare, although it suggests a removal of what covers or clothes, seldom carries implications of violent or complete stripping; it is chiefly used in idiomatic phrases which imply more than the mere act; thus, to bare one’s head is to take off one’s hat usually as a sign of respect or reverence; to bare one’s sword is to unsheathe it and to have it ready for action; to bare one’s heart to another is to reveal feelings one has concealed; to bare the secrets of the grave is to disclose, often as a result of a discovery of documents, something which had been known only to persons now dead (no hidden secrets are bared in this biography—Lubell) (bared her teeth at the audience with comic ferocity—Wouk) Dismantle is used chiefly with reference to the act of stripping a house, a building, a ship, or a complex installation (as of machinery) of its entire equipment and furnishings (dismantle a factory) (the cottage itself was built of old stones from the long dismantled Priory—Hardy) (hurriedly dismantled a second bomb that he had brought along—Shirer)

Ana despoil, spoliare, devastate, waste, *ravage: rifle, loot, plunder, *rob

Ant furnish: invest strip n Strip, stripe, band, ribbon, fillet are comparable when they mean a relatively long and narrow piece or section. Strip and stripe both imply length and comparative narrowness and approximate uniformity of width. However strip commonly suggests separation from a larger piece (tear old linen into strips for bandages) (cut a sheet of paper into strips) and stripe stresses a contrast (as in color, texture, or pattern) between the section of a surface referred to and the sections bordering upon it (each white petal had a stripe of red) (gray cloth with alternate stripes of blue and red) (when one or more strips of braid have been sewn on a soldier's sleeve to indicate his rank or his length of service, they are called stripes) If actual separation is not implied strip may be employed when the difference between the portion of surface referred to and its neighboring portions is a matter of use, ownership, or physical character (the strip between sidewalk and curb belongs to the city) (each man on relief was allotted a strip of land for raising vegetables) However stripe may be used in such cases in preference to strip when the division is made evident by a contrast in appearance (narrow stripes of ice separated from each other by parallel moraines—Tyndall) (stripes of cultivated land in various shades of green) Band (see also BOND 1) may mean either a strip or stripe but often also connotes either an encircling with or without a suggestion of confining or uniting or a horizontal position rather than the vertical position so often connoted by stripe (the lower parts of the sleeves and of the skirt were adorned with bands of blue silk) (bands of colored light in the sky at dawn) (at closer range, the mountain showed three bands, the lowest green, the middle gray, and the highest white) Ribbon designates concretely a length of narrow woven material with selvedge edges, usually one that is fine and firm in texture and is used for ornamental bands, ties, and bows. In extended use ribbon is often used in place of strip when the strips are very long, very narrow, and very thin and when the material is flexible enough to appear like ribbon or to be handled like ribbon (steel ribbon for use in springs) (ribbons of red, green, and gold paper for tying Christmas packages) (the sails were torn by the hurricane into ribbons) (the road was a ribbon of moonlight over the purple moor—Noyes) Fillet, which basically denotes a narrow strip of ornamental material (as a band of ribbon for restraining the hair or a narrow molding or beading that forms the inner part of a picture frame), is often extended to various things that have no inherent ornamental quality and are otherwise describable as strips, ribbons, or bands (as a metal strip or ribbon from which coins are punched, a very thin molding, one of certain bands of white matter in the brain, or a long narrow piece of meat or fish without bone).

stripe n 1 *strip, band, ribbon, fillet

2 character, description, nature, *type, kind, sort, kidney, ilk strive struggle, endeavor, *attempt, essay, try

Ana work, labor, toil, travail (see corresponding nouns at WORK): *contend, fight striving n struggle, endeavor, essay, attempt, try (see under ATTEMPT vb)

Ana *work, labor, toil, travail: contending (see CON-TEND): *contest, conflict, combat, fight stroll vb *saunter, amble strong, stout, sturdy, stalwart, tough, tenacious can all mean having or manifesting great power or force (as in acting or resisting). Strong, the most inclusive of these terms, fundamentally implies the possession of great physical power and may connote such varied causes as sound health or physical size and vigor or soundness of construction and substance (a strong constitution) (the hammock is not strong enough to bear the weight of two persons) (a strong foundation) (his hands were large. They looked neither strong nor competent—Salinger) but in extended use it may apply to groups whose force is dependent upon numbers, organization, or discipline (a strong army) (a strong majority forced a wavering minority along the road of rectitude—Replier) or to a spiritual or mental power or faculty that acts with force and vigor (a strong mind) (a strong will) (a strong critical instinct) or to some very potent or powerful thing (a strong liquor) (a strong poison) (a strong current) (a strong battery) (the memorandum was couched in strong language and the Russians replied to it . . . with equally stern words—Shirer) or to something (as color or light or emotion or sentiment) that is particularly intense or violent (a strong purple) (the strong light of the setting sun) (strong love) (a strong attachment) (the impulse to fight is something so strong, so deep-seated, so uncontrollable by . . . reason—Edmund Wilson) Stout (see also FLESHY) carries a stronger implication than does strong of an ability to resist aggression or destructive forces or of an ability to endure hard use, severe pain, or great temptation without giving way. When applied to persons, it often suggests resolution, doggedness, or fearlessness (a stouter champion never handled sword—Shak.) (and let our hearts be stout, to wait out the long travail . . . to impart our courage unto our sons—Roosevelt) When applied to things, stout usually also suggests solid, substantial construction (a stout cane) (a stout ship) or a texture that resists stress or strain (a stout canvas) (a stout paper) (their feet were protected by stout boots—Mason) In fact the term is generally applicable when the suggestion of power to resist or endure is more emphatic than that of a power to do or to effect. Sturdy implies qualities in inanimate as well as in animate things that suggest the possession of rugged health; the term carries no suggestion of powers derived from such qualities as size, intensity, or vehemence but connotes rather an inner strength typically derived from healthy vigorous growth, close solid construction, or a determined spirit that gives it staying power and stoutness (the little fellow has sturdy legs) (was a sturdy, handsome, high-colored woman—Van Doren) (it is the sturdiest of creepers, facing the ferocious winds of the hills, the tremendous rains that blow up from the sea, and bitter frost—Jefferies) (our people are . . . conspicuous for a sturdy independence—Inge) Stalwart usually implies strength derived from what is so deeply established or firmly rooted that it is unassailable or impregnable or is completely dependable (William Law . . . was a stalwart Churchman, and showed no sympathy with the sectaries—Inge) (Dryden brings his stalwart common sense to bear upon the problem, and clarifies the issue—Lowe) (what is best in our society will have to be saved by the advocates of some older and more stalwart system of thought—Kirk) When applied to persons with reference to their physique or prowess, stalwart regularly suggests great strength, but it often throws the emphasis upon heroic build or largeness of frame (a stalwart man, limbed like the old heroic breeds—J. R. Lowell) Tough suggests the strength that comes from a texture or a spirit that is firm and unyielding and effectively resists attempts to pierce, destroy, or overcome; it stresses hardness rather than vigor, resistant elasticity or wiriness rather than hardness or solidity, or a capacity for yielding that is just sufficient to increase rather than to destroy a person's or thing's strength or stoutness (a tough membrane) (a tough opponent) (a tough resistance) (any type who reached the age of six . . . was a pint of iron man, so tough, so ferocious, so sharp in the teeth that the wildest alley cat would have surrendered a freshly caught rat rather than contest the meal—Mailer) (physically fragile, she was spiritually tough—Sackville-West) Tenacious comes very close to tough in its most general implications, but it places greater emphasis upon retentiveness of what has been gained or of adherence to a support, position, or idea; it carries a strong suggestion of holding on, of adhesiveness, or of maintaining strength or position in spite of all opposing forces that would dislodge, dispossess, thwart, or weaken (he had always held with tenacious devotion to one of the ancient traditions of his race—Wolfe) (he seemed to hold on to life by a single thread only, but that single thread was very tenacious—Arnold) When applied to material things and especially to substances it may suggest a powerful clinging quality and extraordinary resistance to forces that tend to effect separation or pulling apart (tenacious mud) (bold and tenacious as the bamboo shooting up through the hard ground of winter—Binyon) When applied to persons it suggests a stubborn hold upon something (as a possession or an opinion) that defies the efforts of others to break (Italians in possession are probably as tenacious of their rights as any one else—Lucas)

Ana *vigorous, energetic, lusty: *powerful, potent, forcible, forceful: robust, sound, *healthy: vehement, *intense, fierce, exquisite, violent stronghold citadel, *fort, fortress, fastness structure 1 *building, edifice, pile

Ant weak

2 Structure, anatomy, framework, skeleton are often used interchangeably. Structure is by far the richest in implications and the widest in its range of application. In general it denotes the formation, arrangement, and articulation of parts in something built up by nature or made by man. Often the word implies reference to everything that enters into the makeup of a particular body, organism, edifice, fabric, or substance; thus, a study of the structure of a brain involves attention to the two kinds of matter (gray and white) of which it is composed, to the three parts (forebrain, midbrain, hindbrain) into which it is divided, to the subdivisions of each of these parts, to the connections and interrelations between all these divisions, and to any peculiarities in form or arrangement of parts. Sometimes, however, structure implies a reference to certain features only, as for example: the parts or elements which distinguish kinds rather than individuals (crocodiles and alligators exhibit certain differences in structure) or the parts or features which are essential or necessary to a thing's existence as distinguished from those that are removable, detachable, or dispensable (in Gothic architecture the pointed arch is part of the structure and is not a decorative addition) or the parts or features that reveal the underlying design as opposed to those that complete the work or bring it into fullness of being (study the structure of a poem) Anatomy may be preferred when the typical structure of an organism or of an organ is to be denoted (the anatomy of an ape) (the anatomy of the heart) Framework and skeleton are applied to the underlying or supporting structure. Framework is used chiefly in reference to an artificial construction which serves as a prop and a guide in building but which is not visible in the completed thing (the framework of a sofa) (the carpenters are now working on the framework for the house) Skeleton is frequently used in the building trades for a rigid framework, especially one made of steel; it is often used in place of structure, design, outline in reference to literary constructions, sometimes to imply that the design is carefully developed and its parts definitely articulated (the skeleton of his argument is now finished) but more often, probably, to indicate a sketchy conception of the whole which serves as a starting point (he has the skeleton of his plot in mind) In either case it is usually further implied that the writing out in literary form and the elaboration of atmosphere, details, characters remain to be accomplished.

Ana integration, articulation, concatenation (see under INTEGRATE): organization, arrangement (see corresponding verbs at ORDER): *system, organism, scheme, complex struggle vb strive, endeavor, essay, *attempt, try

Ana *contend, fight: compete, vie, *rival, emulate: toil, labor, work, travail (see corresponding nouns at WORK) struggle n striving, endeavor, essay, attempt, try (see under ATTEMPT vb)

Ana toil, labor, *work, travail: *contest, conflict, fight, affray, fray: contending (see CONTENT)

strut vb Strut, swagger, bristle, bridle can all mean to assume an air of dignity or importance. Strut implies a pompous or theatrical affectation of dignity, especially as shown in one's gait or by one's bearing in movement (a poor player that struts and frets his hour upon the stage—Shak.) (Dr. Goldsmith . . . went . . . strutting away and calling to me with an air of superiority—Boswell) Swagger implies ostentation, a conviction of one's superiority, and, often, an insolent or overbearing gait or manner (scarcely deigned to set a foot to ground, but swaggered like a lord about his hall—Dryden) (what a swaggering puppy must he take me for—Goldsmith)

Bristle implies an aggressive manifestation sometimes of anger or of zeal but often of an emotion or desire that causes one to display conspicuously one's sense of dignity or importance (all the time he stuck close to her, bristling with a small boy's pride of her—D. H. Lawrence) (the bourgeoisie, bristling with prejudices and social snobberies—Rose Macaulay) Bridle usually suggests awareness of a threat to one's dignity or state and a reaction (as of hostility, protest, scorn, or resentment) typically expressed by a lofty manner with a tossing up of one's head and a drawing in of one's chin (by her bridling up I perceived she expected to be treated hereafter not as Jenny Distaff, but Mrs. Tranquillus—Tatler) (everything that poses, prances, bridles, struts, bedizens, and plumes itself—Ward) (military commanders who had bridled against . . . interference—Time)

Ana expose, exhibit, flaunt, parade (see SHOW vb)

Con cringe, cower, *fawn, truckle: grovel (see WALLOW) stubborn *obstinate, dogged, pertinacious, mulish, stiff-necked, pigheaded, bullheaded

Ana rebellious, contumacious, *insubordinate: intractable, recalcitrant, refractory (see UNRULY): obdurate, adamant, inexorable, *inflexible

Con pliable, pliant, adaptable (see PLASTIC): tractable, amenable (see OBEDIENT) stubby *stocky, thickset, thick, chunky, squat, dumpy studied *deliberate, considered, advised, premeditated, designed

Ana *thoughtful, considerate, attentive: intentional, *voluntary, willing, willful

Con *spontaneous, impulsive, instinctive study n concentration, application, *attention

Ana consideration, contemplation, weighing (see corresponding verbs at CONSIDER): reflection, thought, speculation (see corresponding verbs at THINK): pondering, musing, meditation, rumination (see corresponding verbs at PONDER) study vb *consider, contemplate, weigh, excogitate

Ana *scrutinize, examine, inspect: *ponder, muse, meditate: *think, reflect, reason, speculate stuff n *matter, substance, material

Ana constituent, ingredient, component, *element: *item, detail, particular stuff vb *pack, crowd, cram, ram, tamp

Ana distend, *expand, swell: squeeze, jam, *press:

gorge, glut, surfeit, sate, *satiated stuffy *prim, priggish, prissy, prudish, puritanical, strait-laced

Ana stodgy, *dull, humdrum: *irksome, tedious: narrow, narrow-minded, *illiberal, hidebound stumble, trip, blunder, lurch, flounder, lumber, galumph, lollop, bumble can mean to move unsteadily, clumsily, or with defective equilibrium (as in walking, in doing, or in proceeding). Stumble, trip, blunder, lurch, and flounder as applied to physical movement or gait usually suggest a departure from the normal and imply some extraneous influence to be responsible for such departure. Stumble characteristically implies striking an obstacle or impediment which hinders free movement or direct progress and therefore usually suggests a fall or a check or a cause of embarrassment or perplexity (the horse stumbled over a stone and threw its rider) (he found himself running from tree to tree . . . stumbling wildly towards the cleared ground—Caldwell) (his thought staggers, and reels, and stumbles—Martin Gardner) (the classic instance of the second-rate man who is offered a first-rate destiny, and who, in stumbling after it, loses his way in the world—Buchan) Occasionally stumble implies nothing more than accidental discovery or a coming upon without design (she tried to rationalize his death as we will, stumbling onto such conclusions as that it was time for him to go; he was meant to die young—Cheever) Trip definitely implies a loss of footing or of something comparable to a loss of footing, often on account of the interposition of an unseen obstacle; therefore in extended use trip often connotes a falling into a trap, a lapsing in speech, or making a wrong move (his plump hands wavering uncertainly away from his body as he tripped, and caught up and tripped, trying desperately not to fall behind the men running—Mailer) (how I rejoiced when I found an author tripping—Tyndall) (his tongue tripped over the word) (any military man familiar with firearms could trip you up, and if you were found out, you'd be hanged—Kenneth Roberts) Blunder stresses awkward confusion in movement or in proceeding that may suggest blindness, aimlessness, clumsiness, ignorance, or a failure to perceive where one is going or what is to be accomplished (unsteady on his feet and taken completely by surprise, he blundered headlong through the open doorway . . . and fell sprawling—Isherwood) (there was the constant danger of blundering into a house at a time when it was being ransacked by the Gestapo—Valtin) (the van . . . blundered away down the cart track like a drunken bee—Jan Struther) (various blundering attempts were made at alliance between various branches of thought—T. S. Eliot) Lurch suggests the heavy, ungainly rolling or swaying movement of a ship in a storm or of a drunken man; when applied more generally to persons, it usually implies loss of muscular control or extreme clumsiness (the distraught and frightened man . . . raised himself on his hands and lurched forward—Anderson) (sometimes, down the trough of darkness formed by the path under the hedges, men came lurching home—D. H. Lawrence) (the conductor . . . lurches through the car asking for tickets—Styron) Flounder stresses stumbling, struggling, or sprawling rather than rolling and usually implies an effort to proceed when one is out of one's element (as a fish out of water or a horse in the mire) or when one does not know the road or the way (went swiftly into the forest, leaping with sure feet over logs and brush. Pilon floundered behind him—Steinbeck) (they floundered on foot some eight miles to a squatter's cabin—Cather) In its extended use flounder usually implies the confusion of mind and the uncertainty of one who is completely muddled or at a loss but nevertheless proceeds (individuals who can't get a foothold in life, who flounder about in bewildered desperation—Deutsch) (nature has been floundering along for a great many millions of years to get things as they are—Furnas) Lumber, galumph, lollop, and bumble by contrast with the foregoing terms tend to suggest clumsiness, irregularity, or heaviness as a natural or usual manner of movement or gait. Lumber implies a ponderousness or clumsiness in movement (as of one heavily burdened or of great weight) (the jeep, opening its siren at a column of Quartermaster's trucks that lumbered along half a mile ahead, summoned them with stentorian wails to move over—Cozzens) (a veritable mountain of a man, [he] deeply resented the attention he invariably attracted when he lumbered down a Manhattan thoroughfare—Cerf) In extended use it implies comparable ponderousness or clumsiness in proceeding or accomplishing (wide-spread exasperation with the union leadership and at the lumbering slowness of the machinery of negotiation—New Statesman) (where so many other historical novels lumber along beneath their load of conscientious detail, Mr. Graves's imagination is invariably stimulated by what he finds—Strong) Galumph adds to lumber the suggestion of a thumping, bumping, weighty gait (Frankie lived by day beside the ceaseless, dumping shuffle of the three-legged elephant which was the laundry's sheet-rolling machine. When he piled onto his narrow pad in the long dim-lit dorm at night and turned his face to the white-washed wall, the three-legged elephant of the mangle roller followed, galumphing, through dreams—Algren) (doors banged, voices rose shrilly, several pairs of feet galumphed down the passage—Monica Stirling) The notion of thumping or of heavy, lurching irregularity is often prominent in extended use (I was sweating in the cool air, my heart galumphing as I stood up—McHugh) (the mornings are enlivened by the spectacle of high-ranking naval and Air Force officers, who will be horseborne in the procession, uneasily galumphing along the bridle path on their mounts—Panter-Downes) but sometimes it retains an earlier implication of gaily clumsy prancing (to a country that liked to think of its leaders as . . . mad but never without their dignity, Low brought the manhandling democratic touch. He made rank and office commonplace, turned politics into a galumphing merry-go-round—Pritchett) Lollop is more likely to suggest bounding irregularity than clumsiness or heaviness (calves lolloped in long grass—Patrick White) (the lioness . . . started to charge and seemed to come on in great bounds. She appeared to be lolloping along with a lot of up-and-down motion—F. G. Stewart) (an interurban trolley line (which terrified me the way it went lolloping around curves)—Palmer) (the breeze went lolloping along the corridors, blowing the blinds out—Woolf) Bumble suggests a blundering, haphazard progress (the hot auditorium where the June bugs bumbled foolishly against the window screens—Stafford) (plane . . . hit the ground, her tail wheel exploded, and she came leaping like a grasshopper up the runway on a flat tail wheel . . . She bumped and bumbled up to the line—Steinbeck) and, especially in its extended use, may carry more than a suggestion of floundering and blundering (this novel describes a whole small town as it bumbles its way towards an acceptable life under conditions it never made—Graham Bates) (so long as we continue pursuing so shortsighted and blind a policy, so long, I believe, will we bumble and stumble into error—Cherin)

Ana stagger, totter, *reel: *plunge, pitch, dive: falter, *hesitate, waver, vacillate: chance, *venture: encounter, *meet, confront

stun *daze, bemuse, stupefy, benumb, paralyze, petrify Ana astound, amaze, flabbergast (see SURPRISE): bewilder, dumbfound, nonplus, confound (see PUZZLE) stupefy *daze, stun, bemuse, benumb, paralyze, petrify Ana *confuse, muddle, addle, fuddle, befuddle: faze, rattle (see EMBARRASS): dumbfound, nonplus, bewilder, mystify (see PUZZLE)

stupendous tremendous, prodigious, monumental, *monstrous

Ana enormous, immense, *huge, vast, colossal, gigantic: astounding, amazing, astonishing (see SURPRISE) stupid adj Stupid, slow, dull, dense, crass, dumb are comparable when they mean conspicuously lacking in intelligence or power to absorb ideas or impressions or exhibiting such a lack. Stupid can apply to a sluggish slow-witted lack of intelligence, typically congenital or habitual, or it can apply to a usually more or less transitory benumbed or dazed state of mind that is typically the result of drunkenness, shock, or illness; although the term seldom is applied to the insane or the imbecile, it often also suggests senselessness <stupid with age—Shak.> <stupid with drink> (he could not stand stupid people, especially those who are made stupid by education—Wilde) <there emerged gradually a picture of stupid chicanery and petty corruption for stupid and petty ends—Faulkner> (he had gone on for years deceiving himself—too proud, too self-conscious, maybe just too stupid to realize it—Styron) Slow implies stupidity manifested especially in lack of quickness in comprehension or reaction; often the term is little more than a euphemistic substitute for stupid <the too great length of neck and limb, which made him loose and slow in body, as he was somewhat loose and slow in mind—Kingsley> <offers slow or retarded boys an adjusted program of education—adv.> Dull (see also DULL 2) suggests a labored slowness or sluggishness of mind that may be constitutional, or the result of lack of mental exercise, or of overwork, or of a physical condition, and is unrelieved by any hint of quickness, brightness, or liveliness <there were cows and they looked at him dully with their great dull eyes—James Baldwin> <had a warm spot in his heart for this dull, stupid, fumbling man—Shirer> <find the book long-winded, incredibly boring . . . and deadly dull—John O' London's Weekly> Dense implies a quality of mind that makes it impervious to ideas. Additionally it may imply qualities (as obtuseness or stolidity) that reveal lack of perception, sensitiveness, or subtlety  <never offered to take me over the house, though I gave her the broadest hints. She's very dense—Clive Arden> Crass suggests a gross unfeeling quality that makes the mind incapable of delicate mental processes (as analysis, discrimination, and evaluation) or impervious to refined or spiritual ideas <crass ignorance> <those dedicated guardians of man's aspiration who somehow redeem their crass society by being simultaneously its exiles, queer ducks and catalysts—Viereck> <the new business buildings in the City of London represent British philistinism in its most crass and shortsighted form—Mumford> <he resented him as a crass and stupid person who had fallen through luck into flowing prosperity—Malamud> Dumb (see also DUMB 1) is a term of contempt that may be used in place of any of the preceding terms especially when obtuseness and inarticulateness are also implied <how dumb do you think people are? Or how obtuse are you, actually?—Wouk> <too dumb to do things in the right way—Reilly> Ana foolish, silly, *simple, fatuous, asinine: sluggish, comatose, *lethargic: inert, idle, supine, *inactive: phlegmatic, stolid, *impassive Ant intelligent

stupor torpor, torpidity, lassitude, *lethargy, languor Ana phlegm, impassivity, stolidity (see under IMPASSIVE): inertness or inertia, passivity, supineness, inactivity, idleness (see corresponding adjectives at INACTIVE): insensibility, anesthesia (see corresponding adjectives at INSENSIBLE) sturdy stout, *strong, stalwart, tough, tenacious Ana sound, robust, *healthy: *vigorous, energetic, lusty: dogged, pertinacious (see OBSTINATE)

Ant decrepit

stutter *stammer

stygian *infernal, chthonian, Hadean, Tartarean, hellish style n 1 diction, phraseology, phrasing, *language, vocabulary

Ana *taste, zest, gusto, relish: *form, convention, usage, convenience

2 *fashion, mode, vogue, fad, rage, craze, dernier cri, cry

Ana modishness, smartness, chicness, stylishness, fashionableness (see corresponding adjectives at STYLISH)

3 *name, designation, title, denomination, appellation stylish, fashionable, modish, smart, chic, dashing can mean conforming to the choice and usage of those who set the vogue (as persons of wealth and taste or often the avant-garde). Stylish is likely to stress currency and, correspondingly, transitoriness  <recently it has been more stylish to assume that the author of a story is a complete victim and tool, either of his purse and social position or of his parents' neuroses and theories about child-raising—Smart>  <she has restored delight . . . to poetry, has written her poems with the completest possible clarity (here you will find no stylish obscurantism, so dear to the avant-garde)—Charles Jackson> Fashionable is often interchangeable with stylish  <it has become . . . fashionable to sneer at economics and emphasize "the human dilemma"—Mailer> but fashionable is distinctly more likely to imply conformance to what is established and generally accepted than to a transitory or restricted vogue <the Episcopal church—that's kind of the fashionable church in Paterson, where the nicest people go, or at least the ones with the most money—Chidsey> <one of the rare French intellectuals who has the courage to be publicly and outspokenly pro-American in France, a country where it is nowadays fashionable to ridicule the United States—Padover> Modish stresses conformity to the latest styles (all the ornaments deemed essential to a modish Victorian drawing room—New Yorker) but sometimes it suggests a step beyond what is describable as stylish or fashionable and may apply to what from another point of view might be called daring, extreme, or startling <tend to regard the pursuit of the new as necessarily silly and modish—Bentley> <nothing is so transitory as the modish. It is on the way out at the very moment that it comes in—J. M. Brown> <he was English enough to feel a contempt for modish philosophers who went about preaching a profitable brand of nihilism, blandly informing their fellow creatures that they were already in hell and there was no point in struggling against it—Wain> Smart comes close to modish in suggesting the height of what is stylish or fashionable, but it implies a position in the forefront of what is acceptably stylish

or fashionable rather than one beyond this point (he was handsome, he was rich, he was a sportsman and he was good company. . . . he had been long established as one of the smartest men in London—Maugham) (her college set had stayed rigidly in a zigzag path through the town, traversing a few hotel bars, nightclubs, and eating places which they considered smart—Wouk) (black is often used in smart, sophisticated interiors—Hazel & Julius Rockow) Chic is sometimes used simply as an equivalent to modish or smart (the good corporation wife does not make her friends uncomfortable by clothes too blatantly chic—Whyte) or even of fashionable (whether or not he [the artist] liked it, he became chic—Harper's) However it may not imply conformity to the latest style so much as an effectiveness in style which suggests the exercise of a knack or skill and the achievement of distinction (the natural elegance which enables her to look chic in camouflaged parachutist's overalls—Edmond Taylor) (decided to put her culinary tricks into book form for other women who want to whip up a chic meal—Butcher) (achieved so great a virtuosity that now he not only can do anything but does everything, fluctuating between a wistful religiosity and a chic diablerie—Untermeyer) Dashing applies to people or to things which they wear or use; it implies not only stylishness or, more often, modishness but a bold, shining quality that enables one to cut a figure in any group or assemblage (you're willing to be a dashing knight, but you also want to be a careful knight—Gardner) (he was a tall, handsome, dashing chap . . . whose magnificent disregard for money cut a wide swathe in the social life of the town—Amer. Guide Series: N. J.) (a pair of dashing young brokers)

Ana *new, novel, new-fashioned, newfangled, modernistic: *showy, ostentatious, pretentious

suave, urbane, diplomatic, bland, smooth, politic as applied to persons, their demeanor, and their utterances can mean conspicuously and ingratiatingly tactful and well-mannered. These words at times can convey so strong a suggestion of insincerity or of a surface manner that their distinctive implications are obscured. It is chiefly in their nonderogatory use that essential differences in meaning are apparent. Suave suggests qualities that are or have the appearance of being acquired through discipline and training and that encourage or are intended to encourage easy and frictionless intercourse with others. Negatively, it suggests the absence of everything that may offend or repel; positively, it suggests such qualities as affability without fulsome, politeness without stiffness, and persuasiveness without evident desire to force one's opinion on others (what gentle, suave, courteous tones!—Jackson) (a slight disturbance of his ordinary suave and well-bred equanimity—Lytton) (they could be as suave in advancing their bromides as we could be gauche in establishing our originalities—J. M. Brown) Urbane implies a high degree of cultivation, poise, and wide social experience; it also commonly suggests an ingrained or inbred courtesy which makes for pleasant and agreeable intercourse among all kinds of men regardless of their social or intellectual standing (writes with fluent charm, in the easy, urbane, richly allusive manner of an Oxford and Cambridge savant—Wecter) (men of delicate fancy, urbane instinct and aristocratic manner—in brief, superior men—in brief, gentry—Mencken) Since urbanity and an ability to deal with difficult or ticklish situations with great tact are theoretically the qualities of the typical diplomat, the adjective diplomatic, when used in reference to nondiplomats, carries these implications, often adding in addition a hint of artfulness in gaining one's own ends (Gabrielle's busy, active, diplomatic managing of the party—E. E. Hale) (the diplomatic manner . . . of a government official whose career depended on politeness to his equals and deference to his superiors—MacInnes) (I have grown to believe that the one thing worth aiming at is simplicity of heart and life; that one's relations with others should be direct and not diplomatic—Benson) Bland is negative as well as positive in its implications, for it usually implies the absence of irritating qualities as strongly as it suggests serenity, mildness, and gentility. Nevertheless, in spite of this vagueness, the term often carries a hint of benignity or the appearance of it and usually directly implies an ingratiating pleasantness (his manners were gentle, complying, and bland—Goldsmith) (he's simply a distinguished-looking old cleric with a sweet smile and a white tie: he's just honorable and bland and as cold as ice—Santayana) (most of the time he sat behind a look of bland absorption, now and then permitting himself an inscrutable smile—Hervey) Smooth differs from bland chiefly in being more positive in its implications and in being more consistently derogatory. Sometimes it stresses suavity, often an assumed suavity (the words of his mouth were smoother than butter, but war was in his heart—Ps 55:21) At other times it carries even a stronger implication of tactfulness and craft than diplomatic (I was not even my parents' son in 1928 but a devilishly smooth imposter, awaiting their slightest blunder . . . to assert my true identity—Salinger) (the sales talk of our government for the second one was a smooth and professional job—Edmund Wilson) Politic (see also EXPEDIENT) when applied to persons implies both shrewdness and tact; the term usually suggests the ability to gain one's ends or to avoid friction through ingratiating means or diplomatic methods. It varies considerably, however, in its implication of artfulness, sometimes connoting cunning or craft and sometimes little more than just the right degree of suavity (I . . . am an attendant lord . . . deferential, glad to be of use, politic, cautious, and meticulous—T. S. Eliot) (the mayors and corporations as a rule guided their cities through difficult times with politic shrewdness—Edwin Benson)

Ana *gracious, cordial, affable, genial, sociable: courteous, courtly, polite (see CIVIL): *fulsome, unctuous, slick Ant bluff

subdue subjugate, reduce, overcome, surmount, overthrow, rout, *conquer, vanquish, defeat, beat, lick Ana control, manage, direct (see CONDUCT vb): discipline, *punish, correct: foil, thwart, circumvent, *frustrate: *suppress, repress

Ant awaken (sense 2), waken subdued *tame, submissive

Ana meek, *humble, modest, lowly: *timid, timorous: docile, tractable, amenable (see OBEДИENT)

Ant intense: barbaric (of taste); bizarre (of effects): effervescent (of character and temperament) subject n 1 *citizen, national

Ant sovereign

2 Subject, matter, subject matter, argument, topic, text, theme, motive, motif, leitmotiv can mean the basic idea or the principal object of thought or attention in a discourse or artistic composition. Subject is the most widely applicable as well as the least definite in denotation of these words; it implies merely some restriction in one's field of choice and a governing principle determining the selection of one's material and demanding some concentration in the treatment of it (as in a discourse or work of art) (what is the subject of his painting?) (your subject is too comprehensive to be treated adequately in so short an article) (it was the first of the . . . major mistakes in World War II and became a subject of violent controversy

—Shirer> Matter and the more usual subject matter are often used as close synonyms of subject (hail, Son of God, Saviour of men! Thy name shall be the copious matter of my song—Milton) <Mr. Lytton Strachey . . . chose, as subject matter of a book, four people of whom the world had heard little but good—Replier> As often, however, these terms refer not to the idea, object, or situation selected for treatment but to a restricted field or range of material from which one selects the specific subject he intends to treat <Alexander's Bridge was my first novel, and does not deal with the kind of subject matter in which I now find myself most at home—Cather> Argument (see also REASON, ARGUMENT 2) can denote the subject, especially the carefully delimited subject, for a particular discourse (as a poem or a part of a poem) that is planned in advance of execution (the argument of the book is as simple as you could wish for—Parris) The word sometimes implies explicit statement of the leading idea or a summarizing of its development (Pope prefaced each epistle of his Essay on Man with an argument of it) Topic applies to a subject, usually of general interest, chosen because of its possibilities for individual or original treatment or for discussion by different persons holding diverse views (the students were asked to write an essay on one of the assigned topics) (I can't remember in a prolonged conversation what topic's been covered and what hasn't—Purdy) Text can mean a verse or passage, usually from Scripture, chosen as providing or suggesting a subject for a sermon or similar discourse (the excellency of this text is that it will suit any sermon; and of this sermon, that it will suit any text—Sterne) In extended use it is often applied to whatever suggests itself as a good starting point for a discourse the subject of which is yet to be defined or which lacks a definite subject (my text for this chapter is . . . any good daily newspaper—La Barre) Theme denotes a subject which one selects for literary or artistic treatment; it is applicable to something (as an idea, proposition, text, melodic phrase, or mood) which a writer, composer, or artist proposes to develop (as in a poem), to elaborate upon (as in a movement of a symphony), or to illustrate (as in a mural or series of murals) or which can be detected in a completed work as the dominant object of his concern (fools are my theme, let satire be my song—Byron) (waterfalls are from very early times a favorite theme for the painter—Binyon) Theme does not necessarily suggest a clearer definition than subject or topic, but, in distinction from them, it invites comparison with the treatment and calls attention to the quality, the form, the design, or the execution of the completed work; thus, an overworked theme implies a lack of freshness in the thought or design; a compelling theme suggests force and enthusiasm in its treatment (to produce a mighty book you must choose a mighty theme—Melville) Motive and motif are restricted in reference to works of art to those in which design or pattern is the important element. In music they are interchangeable in this sense with theme, the leading phrase which is repeated with variations during the course of a composition or movement; in the decorative arts they apply to the figure which stands out as the salient and dominant feature of the design and is repeated at appropriate intervals (the chief motif of the design is the peacock one, much favored by decorative artists) (don't speak. Don't think. This is, of course, a familiar refrain . . . It is the motif of the great dark stories of the 1930's—Geismar) Leitmotiv designates a specific melodic phrase that is associated with a particular person, mood, or situation (as in an opera) and that is repeated each time this person, mood, or situation reappears. The word has considerable extended use and is often applied to an insistent or recurrent idea that becomes the dominant theme of an author or of a work ("Fate went its way uncompromisingly to the terrible end." This is the leitmotiv of this interesting, dignified apologia of one of Austria's Elder Statesmen—S. R. L.)

subject adj 1 dependent, *subordinate, secondary, tributary, collateral

Ana *subservient, servile, slavish: conditional, contingent, *dependent, relative

Ant sovereign, dominant

2 *liable, open, exposed, prone, susceptible, sensitive

Ana *apt, likely, liable

Ant exempt

subject matter *subject, matter, argument, topic, text, theme, motive, motif, leitmotiv subjoin *add, append, annex, superadd

Ana attach, affix, *fasten: *unite, conjoin, combine

Con *detach, disengage: *separate, part, sever subjugate subdue, reduce, overcome, surmount, overthrow, rout, *conquer, vanquish, defeat, beat, lick

Ana circumvent, outwit, foil, thwart, *frustrate: compel, coerce, *force sublime glorious, *splendid, superb, resplendent, gorgeous

Ana transcendent, transcendental, ideal, *abstract: divine, spiritual, sacred, *holy: majestic, august, noble, stately (see GRAND) sublunary *earthly, terrestrial, earthy, mundane, worldly submerge immerse, duck, *dip, submerge, dunk

Ana *soak, saturate, drench, impregnate submission *surrender, capitulation

Ana yielding, submitting, succumbing, bowing, caving in (see YIELD): compliance, acquiescence, resignation (see under COMPLIANT)

Ant resistance

submissive *tame, subdued

Ana docile, tractable, amenable, biddable, *obedient: meek, lowly, *humble: *subservient, servile, slavish, menial

Ant rebellious

submit *yield, capitulate, succumb, relent, defer, bow, cave

Ana surrender, abandon, resign, *relinquish: abide, endure, suffer, *bear

Ant resist, withstand subordinate adj Subordinate, secondary, dependent, subject, tributary, collateral are comparable when they mean placed in or belonging to a class, rank, or status lower than the highest or the first in importance or power.

Subordinate applies to a person or thing that is lower than another in some such essential respect as by being under his or its authority (all officers of an independent army below the rank of general are subordinate officers)

(Montholon, up to that moment subordinate to the Grand Marshal, was entrusted with the management of the Emperor's household—Maurois) or by having a less important or less conspicuous place, position, or status in the scheme of a whole than some other member, part, or element (the relation of dominating to subordinate features—Binyon) (ceremony is subordinate in the scheme of life, as color is in a painting—Ellis) or by loss of independence and reduction to a lower or inferior position (at that time considered as a subordinate and inferior class of beings . . . subjugated by the dominant race—Taney) (it does tell us . . . why a complex of beliefs is dominant at one time and subordinate at another—Howe) Secondary differs from subordinate mainly in suggesting a much narrower range of difference, for it implies a position or an importance that is just below what may be described as primary, main, chief, or leading (what they actually believe is of secondary consequence; the main thing is what they say—Mencken) (the valuation of an object is thus secondary to the apprehension of it—Alexander) (each stage of the climb from valley to intermediate shoulders and crags, to a secondary and thence to the highest point—W. O. Douglas) In reference to order of development or derivation secondary is opposed to original or first and carries no necessary implication of inferiority in importance (the secondary meaning of a word) (his primary tools, the fundamental cutting tools with which he makes his secondary tools—R. W. Murray) Dependent (see also DEPENDENT 1) implies subordination to someone or something, but it also connotes the position or the status of one that hangs on, leans on, or relies on the other for support or for the provision of what is lacking in itself; thus, a dependent clause in a sentence is not completely intelligible apart from the main clause; a dependent child is not old enough to support himself and therefore must rely upon his parents or guardians. In its commonest use dependent implies a loss, through subjugation or through weakness, of one's independence; it therefore frequently stresses powerlessness or debasement more than subordination (England, long dependent and degraded, was again a power of the first rank—Macaulay) (Maggie is not dependent on Honora—she could get a better job tomorrow—Cheever) Subject definitely implies subordination to a dominant power but never carries, as subordinate sometimes carries, an implication of relative importance within a scheme of the whole; it often tends to suggest loss of those powers which imply a degree of freedom, responsibility, self-discipline, and self-sufficiency (a subject race) (aristocracy is out of date, and subject populations will no longer obey even the most wise and virtuous rulers—Russell) Tributary basically applies to peoples, races, or nations that have been conquered and made subject to another people, race, or nation and that are forced to pay tribute to their conquerors, but in more general use it is often interchangeable with subject (no conquering race ever lived or could live . . . among a tributary one without begetting children on it—Quiller-Couch) In another sense it is also applicable to whatever has an outlet into another and larger thing of the same kind and thereby yields supplies (as a flow of water or material) which increase the size or importance of the latter (the tributary streams of the Mississippi river) (the lane, receiving two tributary lanes from who should say what remote hamlets, widened out with this accession—Mackenzie) Collateral implies a being side by side, but it suggests not equivalence in value but subordination of one through or as if through an indirect relation to or a loose connection with the other; thus, a collateral cause of a war, though by implication operative at the same time as the most important or primary cause, is subordinate to the latter; a collateral issue is not the main issue; a collateral descendant is not a direct or lineal descendant but one in a different line (as of a brother or sister) (the union had engaged successfully in many collateral activities such as banking and cooperative housing—Soule) (the limiting of inquiry to the immediate, with total disregard of the collateral or circumstantial events—Poe)

Ana *auxiliary, subsidiary, subservient, contributory, adjuvant: *accidental, incidental, fortuitous

Ant chief, leading: dominant subordinate n *inferior, underling

Ant chief —Con head, master, leader (see CHIEF) subscribe agree, acquiesce, *assent, consent, accede

Ana concur, coincide, *agree: *approve, endorse, sanction: *promise, pledge, covenant

Ant boggle

subservient 1 *auxiliary, subsidiary, contributory, ancillary, adjuvant, accessory

Ana *subordinate, secondary, dependent, subject

2 Subservient, servile, slavish, menial, obsequious can mean showing or characterized by extreme compliance or abject obedience. Subservient (see also AUXILIARY) applies directly or indirectly to those who occupy a subordinate or dependent condition or who manifest the state of mind of one in such a position; the term stresses subordination and may connote cringing or truckling (editors and journalists who express opinions in print that are opposed to the interests of the rich are dismissed and replaced by subservient ones—Shaw) (a certainty that she would always worship him and be nice and subservient—Farrell) Servile suggests a lowly status and a mean or cringing submissiveness (servile labors) (mean, servile compliance—Burns) (in no country . . . did the clergy become by tradition so completely servile to the political authority—Shirer) (they are not loyal, they are only servile—Shaw) Slavish suggests the status or attitude of a slave and typically implies an abject or debased servility unbecoming to a free man (a slavish yes-man to the party bosses—S. H. Adams) (Oriental literature . . . is based on a slavish acceptance by the pupil of the authority of the master—Cohen) (fear took hold on me from head to foot—slavish superstitious fear—Stevenson) (she also became increasingly assiduous in her slavish attentions, until . . . one would almost have thought that her duty toward him was her very life—Wolfe) Both servile and slavish are used of unduly close dependence upon an original or model (it is the business of art to imitate nature, but not with a servile pencil—Goldsmith) (a slavish devotion to tradition) Menial in its typical extended reference applies to occupations requiring no special skill or intellectual attainment or ranked low in economic or social status and stresses the humbleness and degradation of or like that of one bound to such an occupation (niggers were ineducable and would therefore always be menial—Mayer) (competing against a mass of unemployed, they accepted the most menial and worst paid jobs—Handlin) (encouraged to rise from the menial and mechanical operations of his craft—Mumford) (most menial of stations in that aristocratic old Boston world—Parrington) Obsequious may apply to persons who are actual inferiors or to the words, actions, or manners by which they reveal their sense of inferiority in the presence of their superiors (a duteous and knee-crooking knave . . . doting on his own obsequious bondage—Shak.) (be civil, but not obsequious—Meredith) The word may imply a servile, often a sycophantic, attitude (brutal and arrogant when winning, they are bootlicking and servilely obsequious when losing—Cohn) (on the second Saturday evening after he got his new position, the tobaccoist, a rather obsequious man, called him Mr. Hall—Anderson) or extreme attentiveness in service or to the niceties of service (following him out, with obsequious politeness—Dickens)

Ana fawning, cringing, truckling, cowering (see FAWN): *compliant, acquiescent, resigned: *mean, ignoble, abject

Ant domineering: overbearing subside 1 *fall, drop, sink, slump

Ana sag, flag, *droop, wilt: shrink, *contract, constrict

2 *abate, wane, ebb

Ana dwindle, diminish, *decrease subsidiary *auxiliary, contributory, subservient, ancillary, adjuvant, accessory subsidy grant, subvention, *appropriation subsist exist, live, *be subsistence *living, livelihood, sustenance, maintenance, support, keep, bread, bread and butter subspecies *variety, race, breed, cultivar, strain, clone, stock substance 1 Substance, purport, gist, burden, core, pith can denote the inner significance or central meaning of something written or said. Substance implies the essence of what has been said or written devoid of details and elaborations; the term is used especially when such an essence is repeated for the sake of others, but it may be used also of what characterizes a discourse and gives it body as distinguished from the frills or rhetorical froth that give it finish <give the substance of a speech> <the substance of a scientific paper is incorporated into the general stock of knowledge; but the paper itself is doomed to oblivion—Huxley> <to strip her lines of all ornament, of all effective appeal, in order to contemplate better the substance of her poem—Fitts> Purport lays the stress upon purpose or intent but when used of written or spoken discourse it applies to what is intended to be conveyed or imparted and so actually refers to the central meaning. It is often interchangeable with substance but always with the implication of the speaker's or writer's purpose (the . . . purport of his letter was to inform them that Mr. Wickham had resolved on quitting the militia—Austen) <he has received just sufficient education to make him understand half the purport of the orders he receives—Kipling> Gist refers to the material part (as of a question, an argument, or a discourse); it is the substance thereof reduced to its lowest terms <the gist of the thing grows, at each stage of the progress, terser, more pungent, more crystal clear—Montague> <within an hour the Voice of America had begun translating the gist of the decision into thirty-four languages—Beverly Smith> Burden implies the part most insisted upon or most often repeated and usually means the main topic or theme <the burden of his conversation was that there was no escape "of no kind whatever"—Kipling> <that desire to hear lost laughter which is the burden of every century's lament—Replier> Core can apply to various things that give the effect of being whatever remains after the outer or superficial part is stripped off; in application to what is written or said it emphasizes the centrality of the meaning and the relative unimportance of the other aspects <the true center of the book is its core of irony, insight into the contrast between illusion and reality in the story of the West—Kohler> <when we have cut away all his errors, exaggerations, prejudices and nonsense, we shall find a hard core of truth—Day Lewis> Pith often equals substance in the sense of body; actually, however, it implies substance which gives a discourse its concentrated force, vigor, or vitality and is, therefore, a narrower and more expressive term <there is pith in this essay> <such counsels, rather than the systematic doctrine . . . contain the pith of what he has to say—J. M. Cameron> Ana *center, nucleus, heart, core, focus: *principle, fundamental: foundation, *base, groundwork 2 *matter, material, stuff substantial *massive, massy, bulky, monumental Ant airy, ethereal substantiate verify, corroborate, *confirm, authenticate, validate Ana *prove, demonstrate, try, test substitute n 1 surrogate, *resource, resort, expedient, shift, makeshift, stopgap Ana *device, contrivance, contraption: duplicate, copy, *reproduction 2 Substitute, supply, locum tenens, alternate, understudy, double, stand-in, pinch hitter designate a person who performs or is prepared to perform the duties of another during the latter's absence or incapacitation. Substitute is the general term interchangeable with any of the others; specifically it is often applied to a teacher not appointed to a full-time position but held in reserve for service when needed. A supply is a clergyman who substitutes for the regular preacher. A locum tenens is often a substitute for a professional man with a practice or clientele which needs to be cared for while he is away for a length of time; the term is used especially with respect to physicians and clergymen. An alternate is one appointed or elected to take the place of another (as a delegate to a convention, a holder of a fellowship, the winner of an award, or a juror) if the latter should be incapacitated or disqualified. An understudy is a reserve actor or actress prepared to take the part of a regular actor or actress on short notice. A double is a person sufficiently like another to be able to substitute for him in public and especially an anonymous actor or actress in motion pictures who substitutes in shots or scenes where the required action is considered too risky or onerous for the regular player. A stand-in in motion pictures is one whose chief duty is to substitute for a star during the preparation (as in arranging lighting) for actual shooting of scenes. A pinch hitter is a baseball player sent in to bat to replace a weak hitter when a hit is particularly needed or, by extension, a person who substitutes for another in an emergency; the term may connote competence or ability to rise to the demands of the situation but is frequently a more graphic equivalent of substitute. subsume *include, comprehend, embrace, involve, imply subtle *logical, analytical Ana penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER): *deep, profound: abstruse, *recondite Ant dense (in mind); blunt (in speech) subtract *deduct Ant add subvention grant, *appropriation, subsidy subvert *overturn, overthrow, capsize, upset Ana *ruin, wreck: *destroy, demolish: corrupt, pervert, deprave, *debase Ant uphold, sustain succeed 1 *follow, ensue, supervene Ana displace, supplant, *replace, supersede Ant precede

 2 Succeed, prosper, thrive, flourish can mean to attain or to be attaining a desired end. Succeed (see also FOLLOW) implies little more than this. Both persons and things succeed when they are effective in gaining their purposes or ends, in particular or in general; the term implies an antithesis to fail <the teaching that fosters these ends succeeds; the teaching which neglects them fails—Suz-zallo> <the little man had succeeded in disturbing the boy with his absurd proposal—Dahl> <the revolt against the tyranny of mathematics and physics is justified by the fact that these sciences have not succeeded in explaining the phenomena of life—Inge> Prosper carries an implication of continued or long-continuing success; it usually also suggests increasing success. Only through the context is it clear whether the success is in the continuation or the increase of health, of wealth, or of well-being <prosper in business> <Milenka was soon prospering. His coat came in soft and shining; his purr cleared and his eyes lost the milkiness that had clouded them—

Stafford <did all the naughty things little . . . children were punished for, did them and prospered in body and mind—Lillian Smith> Thrive adds the implication of vigorous growth; it often also implies succeeding noticeably because of or in spite of conditions or circumstances stipulated by the context <plants that thrive in an acid soil> <he worked hard and his business thrived> <the children thrive under good care and proper feeding> <like most great revolutionaries he could thrive only in evil times—Shirer> <states thrive or wither as moons wax and wane—Cowper> Flourish implies a period of vigorous growth and expansion (as in an institution, a business, an art, or a science) at or towards the peak of development or productivity and without signs of decay or decadence; it carries no suggestion of how far this growth will be maintained and sometimes by implication hints at a future decline <if physics and chemistry and biology have flourished, morals, religion, and aesthetics have withered—Krutch>  <the sciences cannot fully flourish, and may be badly damaged, in a society which gives an increasing share of its resources to military purposes—Science> It is also used of an individual to indicate the period of his prime or time of high success <Spenser and Fairfax both flourished in the reign of Queen Elizabeth—Dryden> Ana attain, achieve, gain, compass, *reach: effect, fulfill (see PERFORM)

Ant fail: attempt

succession, progression, series, sequence, chain, train, string are comparable when they mean a number of things that follow each other in some order. Succession implies that the units, whether things or persons, follow each other, typically in order of time or, less often, of place and usually without break or interruption   <there was a dizzy succession of events and of constantly changing situations—Shirer>  <reality is a succession of concrete and particular situations—Huxley> Progression (see also PROGRESS 2) applies to a succession in which there is movement and flow, and often change, so that a pattern is formed or an advance is indicated. The word is most frequent in mathematics and in music; in the former it denotes a succession of quantities between every two of which there is a particular but an unvarying relation <arithmetical progression> <all the following systems are based on a progression by which the amount of a bet is increased after a loss—Morehead & Mott-Smith> In music it denotes a succession of chords which constitute a harmony  Series applies to a number of things of similar or uniform character that stand in the same relation to each other or achieve the same end; often the term is indistinguishable from succession, but the combined or total effect of the units is rather more stressed than the fact that they follow each other    <it all came together in my understanding, as a series of experiments do when you begin to see where they are leading—Cather> <some so-called series are nothing more than miscellaneous collections of books published at the same price and in the same style—McColvin> Sequence is more restricted in meaning than series and implies a closer causal or logical connection between the things involved

(as a numerical or chronological order or a settled recurrence in the same order) <the sequence of the seasons> <his thoughts flow in logical sequence> <preferring rather to get the news in weekly retrospect, from the periodicals—for these organs treated events of a preceding week as an understandable sequence and gave them discernible pattern—Terry Southern> <our presidents have run in sequences, and . . . have tended to be classifiable under three main types—Edmund Wilson> Chain applies to a succession or series which forms a logical or causal sequence   <the long chain of development which makes the very language of the English Bible what it is—Lowes> <there is no climactic choice in the story; it moves evenly on a chain of circumstances—Walcutt> Train applies to a number of persons, animals, or concrete things or of effects or ideas that follow as attendants or as consequences or sometimes (as in the case of causes) that precede <she always has a train of admirers> <I invite your Highness and your train to my poor cell—Shak.>  <the August afternoon that the little train of silent people carried her out of her own door up to the family burying ground—Deland> <somebody who wrote and wrote and never finished even one train of thought to the very end—Purdy> String applies to a series or succession so uniform (as in character, size, or quality) that its units are or seem to be strung on a thread; usually there is little implication of chronological, logical, or causal connection  <his long string of single-handed successes made rich fare for . . . crime reporters—Spiers> <launched at once into a string of stories—Dawson & Wilson>

Ana consecutiveness, successiveness (see corresponding adjectives at CONSECUTIVE): articulation, concatenation, integration (see under INTEGRATE)

successive *consecutive, sequent, sequential, serial

Ana continuous, *continual, constant, incessant: rotating, alternating (see ROTATE) succinct terse, *concise, laconic, summary, pithy, compendious

Ana *brief, short: compressed, condensed, contracted (see CONTRACT vb): compact, *close: curt, brusque, blunt (see BLUFF)

Ant discursive succumb *yield, submit, capitulate, relent, defer, bow, cave

Ana surrender, abandon, resign, *relinquish sudden hasty, *precipitate, headlong, abrupt, impetuous

Ana quickened, hurried, speeded, accelerated (see SPEED vb): *fast, rapid, swift, fleet, expeditious suds *foam, froth, spume, lather, scum, yeast sue pray, plead, petition (see under PRAYER)

Ana entreat, beseech, *beg, importune, implore, supplicate: solicit, request, *ask: *demand, claim, exact, require suffer 1 *bear, endure, abide, tolerate, stand, brook

Ana accept, *receive, admit: *yield, submit, bow

2 *experience, undergo, sustain

Ana submit, succumb, defer, *yield

3 permit, allow, *let, leave sufferance *permission, leave

Ana toleration, endurance (see corresponding verbs at BEAR): acquiescence, resignation, compliance (see under COMPLIANT) suffering *distress, misery, agony, dolor, passion

Ana affliction, tribulation, *trial, visitation: adversity, *misfortune: *sorrow, grief, anguish, woe, heartache, heartbreak suffocate, asphyxiate, stifle, smother, choke, strangle,

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

throttle can all mean to interrupt the normal course of breathing. Suffocate commonly refers to conditions in which breathing is impossible through lack of available oxygen or through presence of noxious or poisonous gas (prisoners suffocated in the underground dungeon) Suffocate also refers to situations in which breathing is impossible because mouth and nose are covered (suffocating under the mud and earth which had fallen over his head) Asphyxiate is likely to refer to situations in which death comes through poisonous gases in the air or through lack of sufficient oxygen (asphyxiated by the chlorine gas in the cellar) Stifle is appropriately used to refer to situations in which breathing is difficult or impossible through lack of adequate fresh air and, often, presence of heat (closing a hatch to stop a fire and the destruction of a cargo was justified even if it was known that doing so would stifle a man below—Justice Holmes) Smother is likely to be used in situations in which the supply of oxygen is inadequate for life; it often suggests a deadening pall of smoke, dust, or impurity in the air (smothered by the dust after the explosion) (a smell of soot which smothered the scent of wistaria and iris—Bromfield) Smother also refers to situations in which the mouth and nose are covered so that one cannot breathe (was smothered with a cushion) Choke suggests difficulty in breathing through constriction, obstruction, or extreme irritation within the throat (choked to death by a brutal marauder) (gasping and choking as the harsh liquor burned his throat) (choking as he breathed the acrid smoke) Strangle also refers to constriction of the throat, obstruction of the windpipe, or irritation, but it is more likely to indicate fatality or quite serious condition (fingers itched to strangle him—R. W. Buchanan) (strangling on a chicken bone) Throttle usually suggests external compression of the throat done forcefully for the purpose of subduing or overcoming resistance (heartbeats . . . so violent that they seemed . . . throttling hands to her throat—Wharton)

suffrage n Suffrage, franchise, vote, ballot mean the right, privilege, or power of expressing one's choice or wish (as in an election or in the determination of policy). Suffrage is the usual term when the emphasis is upon the extent to which this privilege or power is enjoyed in a state or community or upon the kinds of citizens in a representative government who legally exercise this power; the word is frequently modified by a term indicating such extent or restriction (universal suffrage) (the long-fought battle that brought about woman suffrage) (household suffrage, or the restriction of the right to vote to male householders, existed in Great Britain from 1867 to 1918) Franchise may be chosen when the privilege or power is thought of as conferred by the government or as a statutory or legal right (the franchise was long withheld from British citizens who were not householders) (yet some people hesitate to give women the franchise! actually, a miserable privilege which any poor fool of a man may exercise—Jefferies) Vote is appropriate when the stress is on the power of each of the individuals on whom the franchise has been conferred to express his choice or opinion in the approved way, thereby aiding in the task of determining the will of the people (to have the vote and not to exercise it is to show oneself unworthy of one's citizenship) (a class that has not the vote lacks the power to assert its rights) (every American citizen has a like vote in choosing those who will make the laws) Ballot, which specifically implies some method of secret voting, is likely to be used when the emphasis is on the power to vote freely, effectively, and without coercion, on the expressed will of the majority, or on the ethical use of the vote (the ballot is the citizens' means of getting the kind of government they want) (among free men there can be no successful appeal from the ballot to the bullet, and . . . they who take such appeal are sure to lose their case and pay the cost—Lincoln)

suffuse *infuse, imbue, ingrain, inoculate, leaven

Ana *introduce, interpose, interject: impregnate, penetrate, pervade (see PERMEATE) suggest 1 Suggest, imply, hint, intimate, insinuate can all mean to convey an idea or the thought of something by indirect means. Suggest emphasizes a putting into the mind as the result of an association of ideas, an awakening of a desire, or an initiating of a train of thought (the militant severity of his judgments, and the caustic wit of his comments, suggest . . . how long and bitter would be the struggle—Parrington) (designing attractive books (with jackets that truly suggest their contents)—Malcolm Cowley) (he can suggest in his work the immobility of a plain or the extreme action of a bolt of lightning, without showing either—Nichols) Imply (see also INCLUDE) is in general opposed to express; the term stresses a suggesting, or putting into the mind, of an idea, a thought, or a meaning that is involved in a statement, an action, a situation, or a word and forms a part, but not necessarily an obvious part, of its full signification or significance (the philosophy of Nature which is implied in Chinese art—Binyon) (dislikes intensely to say this; in chapter after chapter he approaches it and implies it, only to draw back from saying it quite baldly—Brand Blanshard) Very often the difference between suggest and imply is not clear, though suggest often connotes the necessity of delicate perception and imply connotes the need of inference (a competent portraitist knows how to imply the profile in the full face—Huxley) (the "sayings" of a community, its proverbs, are its characteristic comment upon life; they imply its history, suggest its attitude toward the world and its way of accepting life—Cather) Hint implies the use of a remote or covert suggestion and often also connotes lack of candor, frankness, or straightforwardness (looking for a minute at the soft hinted green in the branches against the sky—Shirley Jackson) (he was not candid with her about his feelings; for once, when he had merely hinted at them to her, she had laughed—Dell) (the Star Route frauds, hinted at while Hayes was president, were uncovered before the death of Garfield—Paxson) Intimate frequently implies a lighter or more elusive suggestion than hint but it connotes delicacy of approach rather than lack of candor or frankness (he said that he had to be prudent or might not be able to say all that he thought, thus intimating to his hearers that they might infer that he meant more—Justice Holmes) Insinuate (see INTRODUCE 2) implies an artful hinting or a conveying, especially of an unpleasant or depreciative suggestion, in an underhanded or devious manner (by his tone and expression, rather than by his words, he insinuated that the boy was not to be trusted) (he could quietly insinuate the most scandalously hilarious things about the Joneses—Theodore Sturgeon) (the voice that insinuates that Jews and Negroes and Catholics are inferior excrescences on our body politic—Lerner) Ana present, *offer: *infuse, imbue, inoculate, leaven: *advance, further: allude, *refer, advert: connote, *denote

Ant express

2 Suggest, adumbrate, shadow are comparable when they are predicated of things that serve indirectly to represent another thing because they evoke a thought, an image, or a conception of it. One thing suggests another when it brings to mind something that is not objectively present, immediately apparent, or directly represented. The thing that suggests may be an outward sign which prompts an inference (a certain well-to-do air about the man suggested that he was not poor for his degree—Hardy) It may be a symbol, which calls to mind whatever it conventionally represents (the fleur-de-lis suggests the royal power of France) It may be a fragment which evokes an image of a whole or a concrete detail that gives an inkling of something abstract or incapable of representation (the curve of the greyhound is not only the line of beauty, but a line which suggests motion—Jefferies) It may be a word or a phrase that calls up a train of associations and reveals more than it actually denotes (phrases flat and precise on the surface yet suggesting mystery below—Day Lewis) (the business of words in prose is primarily to state; in poetry, not only to state, but also (and sometimes primarily) to suggest—Loves) One thing adumbrates another when the former faintly or darkly or sketchily suggests the latter. Adumbrate seldom takes a material object and is especially appropriate for use with one that is or is felt as beyond the present level or sometimes the reach of human comprehension or imagination (the Soviet demands, flatly presented or delicately adumbrated at Potsdam—Mosely) (this concept is adumbrated, but not yet distinctly conceived—Lowie) (both in the vastness and the richness of the visible universe the invisible God is adumbrated—Isaac Taylor) When one thing shadows (or shadows forth) another thing, it represents that thing obscurely (as by a symbol or other indirect means). Sometimes the word comes close to prefigure or foreshadow, but as a rule precedence is not implied (to the Chinese painters this world of nature seemed a more effective way of shadowing forth the manifold moods of man than by representing human figures animated by these moods—Binyon) suggestion *touch, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak suit 1 *prayer, plea, petition, appeal

Ant manifest

Ana entreaty, importuning or importunity, imploring, supplication (see corresponding verbs at BEG): asking, requesting or request, soliciting or solicitation (see corresponding verbs at ASK)

2 Suit, lawsuit, action, cause, case are all used to designate legal proceedings instituted for the sake of demanding justice or enforcing a right. Though often used interchangeably in the sense of lawsuit, they may have certain differences in their connotations and their applications. Suit stresses the attempt of a complainant through litigation to gain an end (as redress for a wrong, recognition of a claim, or the enforcement of law); it therefore may be used of the proceedings from the time of formal application through the prosecution (win a suit) (withdraw a suit) (a suit in equity) Lawsuit can add to suit the implication of actual trial in court and often that of judicial decision; it may therefore refer to the entire proceedings (the lawsuit of Brown versus Jones ended in victory for the defendant) Action comes very close to suit, but it is relatively colorless and throws the emphasis on actual proceedings rather than on petition (bring an action in Circuit Court) In technical legal use, however, it is a proceeding in a court of law which is distinguished from a suit in equity and which has for its end the ascertainment of facts. If the complainant's position is found correct in such an action, an appropriate legal remedy may then be applied. Cause emphasizes the grounds on which one institutes a suit; consequently, like suit, it implies the plaintiff's point of view, but it suggests even more strongly his sense of the justice of his demand (the customary arts of the pleader, the appeal to the sympathies of the public . . . he rejected as unworthy of himself and of his cause—Dickinson) Case, like cause, may imply rather the grounds of action than the actual proceedings but, unlike cause, may view or present these grounds from either or both points of view (the plaintiff has a good case) (the defendant's attorney stated his case) However case often is applied to the entire proceedings in a lawsuit including the judicial decision (one of the famous cases in legal history) (a study of historic capital cases) suitable *fit, meet, proper, appropriate, fitting, apt, happy, felicitous

Ana *decorous, decent, seemly, proper, nice: advisable, *expedient, politic: *due, rightful, condign

Ant unsuitable: unbecoming sulky surly, morose, glum, *sullen, crabbed, saturnine, dour, gloomy

Ana cranky, cross, testy, touchy (see IRASCIBLE): peevish, petulant, fretful, querulous, *irritable sullen, glum, morose, surly, sulky, crabbed, saturnine, dour, gloomy can mean governed by or showing, especially in one's aspect, a forbidding or disagreeable mood or disposition. One is sullen who is, often by disposition, gloomy, silent, and ill-humored and who refuses to be sociable, cooperative, or responsive (Sheridan was generally very dull in society, and sat sullen and silent—Scott) (he made them go back to the fields immediately after supper and work until midnight. They went in sullen silence—Anderson) (the furious quarrels, and always, always the bitter sullen face of the boy brooding over his work—Dahl) One is glum who is dismally silent either because of low spirits or depressing circumstances (we have of course good reason to look glum and little reason to laugh . . . now deprived of most of the things that make for gaiety and high spirits—Mais) (the two of you . . . sitting there as glum as a pair of saints in hell—Deasy) One is morose who is austere sour or bitter and inclined to glumness (a morose ill-conditioned, ill-natured person—South) (should there be any cold-blooded and morose mortals who really dislike this book—Boswell) One is surly who adds churlishness or gruffness of speech and manner to sullenness or moroseness (he indulged his moods. If he were surly, he did not bother to hide it; if he were aggressive, he would swear at her—Mailer) (“Sam, put it out of your mind,” I snapped in a rather surly rebuff—Michener) (the somewhat surly goodness, the hard and unattractive pieties into which she cannot really enter—Pater) One is sulky who manifests displeasure, discontent, or resentment by giving way childishly to a fit of peevish sullenness (though he had come in sulky unwillingness, he was impressed by the supper—Sinclair Lewis) (we were a precious pair: I sulky and obstinate, she changeable and hot-tempered—Shaw) One is crabbed who is actually or seemingly ill-natured, harsh, and forbidding. The term often refers to one's aspect and manner of speaking and usually implies a sour or morose disposition or a settled crossness (divine Philosophy! Not harsh and crabbed, as dull fools suppose—Milton) (the querulous, exacting father could not help . . . exasperating the children whom, in his own crabbed way, he yet genuinely loved—Woolf) One is saturnine who presents a heavy, forbidding, taciturn gloom (driven to saturnine and scornful silence by Gerald's goddess conversation—Wylie) (Sheridan's humor, or rather wit, was always saturnine, and sometimes savage; he never laughed—Byron) but saturnine may come close to sardonic (which see under SARCASTIC) and then suggests less a depressing heaviness and gloom than a wry mocking disdain and skepticism that is often at least superficially attractive (novels . . . in which evil is personified by saturnine persons who own yachts and look good in evening dress—Anthony West) <he felt worldly and saturnine like a character in a movie—Cheever) One is dour who gives a sometimes superficial effect of severity, obstinacy, and grim bitterness of disposition <though the Filipino seldom smiled, he was by no means dour. Kindliness was one of his most charming traits—Heiser) <he was silent, gloomy and dour, frequently irritable, unfriendly—C. W. M. Hart) One is gloomy who is so depressed by events or conditions or so oppressed by melancholy that all signs of cheerfulness or optimism are obscured, so that he appears sullen, glum, or dour as well as low-spirited <take a gloomy view of world conditions> <when she is gloomy she makes everyone unhappy> <he was constitutionally gloomy, a congenital pessimist who always saw the doleful side of any situation—White)

Ana lowering, glowering, frowning, scowling (see FROWN): spiteful, malevolent, *malicious, malign: *cynical, pessimistic

sully *soil, dirty, tarnish, foul, befoul, smirch, besmirch, grime, begrime

Ana *spot, spatter, sprinkle: defile, pollute, taint, *contaminate sum n Sum, amount, number, aggregate, total, whole, quantity denote a result obtained by putting or taking together all in a given group or mass. Sum denotes the result of simple addition, usually of figures, sometimes of particulars <four is the sum of two and two> Amount denotes the result reached by combining all the sums or weights or measures that form a whole <the amount of his purchases> <the amount of cotton raised in one year> Number, with its strong suggestion of enumerating, is usually applied to a countable aggregate of persons or things and is clearly distinct from amount, which ordinarily applies to things in bulk or mass; thus, one may pick a large number of apples to make a large amount of applesauce. Aggregate denotes the result reached by counting and considering together all the distinct individuals or particulars in a group or collection (though his errors are individually insignificant, their aggregate is so large as to destroy confidence in his accuracy) (it is not true that a social force or effort is the mere aggregate of individual forces and efforts—Hobson) Total and whole suggest the completeness or inclusiveness of the result; total often further implies magnitude in the result, and whole, unity in what is summed up  <the whole is the sum of its parts> Quantity in general use is employed chiefly of things which are measured in bulk, even though they can be counted  In technical and scientific use quantity is not limited to an aggregate or bulk but may be used of anything that is measurable in extent, duration, volume, magnitude, intensity, or value <spatial quantity> <the quantity of a vowel> <electrical quantities> <quantity of heat> <quantity of work performed by a machine>

sum vb *add, total, tot, cast, figure, foot

Ana compute, *calculate, estimate, reckon: *count, enumerate, number summary adj pithy, compendious, *concise, terse, succinct, laconic

Ana *brief, short: *quick, prompt, ready, apt: compacted or compact, concentrated (see COMPACT vb)

Ant circumstantial

summative *cumulative, accumulative, additive summit, peak, pinnacle, climax, apex, acme, culmination, meridian, zenith, apogee can mean the highest point attained or attainable. Summit is applied to what represents the topmost level attainable by effort or to what is the highest in its type or kind of attainable things <this scaleless monster, eight or nine feet long, sprawling in the shade by the side of the mud pools . . . was the summit of labyrinthodont evolution—Swinton) <the Bar's outstanding figure by acclaim . . . in the fullness of his powers and at the summit of his fame—Lustgarten> Peak usually implies a point rather than a level <the peak of enthusiasm> It is frequently applied to something that is or can be represented in a graph; used absolutely it designates the highest point reached in a course or during a stated or implied length of time <security prices reached new peaks this year> <his vocal control was at its peak when he did the recording—Paul Hume> Pinnacle is applied chiefly to what has reached a dizzy and, often, insecure height <the word theater means different things to different groups. To some its peak is South Pacific, which is despised by the aesthetes—Miller>  <never achieved the pinnacle of public life, the presidency, when lesser men did—Sevareid> Climax implies a scale of ascending values; it is applied to the highest point in force, in intensity, in interest, or in impressiveness in an ascending movement or series. The word often suggests an end or close <reserve your strongest argument for the climax of your speech> <the quarrel had been only the climax of a long period of increasing strain—Davis> <the Marxist version of history, according to which the seeming harmonies of our society would blow up in a catastrophic climax—Niebuhr> Apex is applied to the highest or culminating point (as in time or of accomplishment) to which everything in a career, a system of thought, or a cultural development ascends and in which everything is concentrated <if terrestrial culture were a pyramid, at the apex (where the power is) would sit a blind man, for . . . only by blinding ourselves, bit by bit, may we rise above our fellows—Theodore Sturgeon> <the British people, who look upon the king as the apex of their national and social aspirations—Bolitho> <the argument is that Wordsworth's economic, political, religious, and "sexual" unorthodoxies dawned gradually, reaching an apex about 1793—Carlos Baker> Acme is applied to what embodies or represents the perfection or pure essence of a thing <Sir Philip Sidney was the acme of courtesy> <to say "mither" instead of "mother" seems to many the acme of romance—Wilde> <seemed to consider this the very acme of humor, for he fairly hooted at us—R. H. Davis> Culmination can denote an apex that is the outcome of a movement, a growth, a development, or a progress and that represents its natural end or attained objective <this joint effort of church and crown . . . found its culmination under Louis XIV, when the nobles were definitely conquered by the crown and the Reformation by the church—Brownell> <the recent use of the atomic bomb . . . is the culmination of years of Herculean effort—Stimson> but often culmination suggests a coming to a head or issue rather than to a high point <war is a culmination of evils, a sudden attack on the very existence of the body politic—Roosevelt> <the Reformation . . . was . . . the culmination of a long agitation for national independence in religious matters—Inge> Meridian is applied to the prime or period of fullest development or vigor in a life (as of a person, a race, or an institution); it connotes not only prior ascent but ensuing decline <I have touched the highest point of all my greatness: and, from that full meridian of my glory, I haste now to my setting—Shak.> <the past eighteen years have constituted one of the great historical meridians of the presidency—Rossiter> Zenith adds to meridian the implications of luster and distinction <he had reached the zenith of his powers> <classical studies reached their zenith in the twelfth century—H. O. Taylor> Apogee, like meridian, is applied to the highest point (as in a course, a career, or a movement), but it seldom connotes being at the prime or height of glory (the French Revolution reached its apogee in the Reign of Terror) (a rangy man whose deeply burned, granular face reached an apogee of redness in his beard—Hervey)

summon, summons, call, cite, convoke, convene, muster mean to demand the presence of persons or, by extension, things. Summon implies the exercise of authority or of power; it usually suggests a mandate, an imperative order or bidding, or urgency (the king summoned his privy councilors to the palace) (summoned his secretary) (summon a person to appear in court) (I summon your Grace to his Majesty's parliament—Shak.) (a confiding, playful little animal, whom one alternately trained to do tricks and then summoned to jump snuggling upon one's knee—Sackville-West) (she could summon tears and delights as one summons servants—H. G. Wells) Summons, sometimes interchangeable with summon, usually implies the actual serving with a legal writ to appear in court. Call is often used in place of summon, especially when less formality is implied or the imperativeness of the bidding is not stressed, or when actual shouting is suggested (call men to arms) (call witnesses to court) (call a servant) (the president called congress together for an extra session) (I can call spirits from the vasty deep—Shak.) Often, however, there is a suggestion of an impulsion of God, of Nature, or of necessity (the young man felt that he was called to the ministry) (America is called to greatness—A. E. Stevenson) (he felt called upon to speak) Cite (see also ADDUCE) may occasionally replace summon or summons, especially in legal use (Andrew was cited to appear and testify—W. B. Parker) (he hath cited me to Rome, for heresy—Tennyson) Convoke implies a summons to assemble, especially for legislative or deliberative purposes (the king convoked parliament) (the Italian government convoked great congresses of physicists and engineers—Darrow) (he convoked the chiefs of the three armed services . . . and laid down the law—Shirer) Convene is related to convoke somewhat as call is to summon; it is weaker in its suggestions of the exercise of authority and of imperativeness, but otherwise it is often not distinguishable (convene the students in the school auditorium) (the Senate was convened by the tribunes—Froude) (the court-martial, perhaps fortunately, was never convened—Powell) Muster implies the summoning of an army or other body of troops or of a ship's company (as for military action, inspection, parade, or exercise). In extended use it implies the assembling of a number of things that form a collection or a group in order that they may be exhibited, displayed, or utilized as a whole (a daw that had a mind to be sparkish, tricked himself up with all the gay feathers he could muster together—L'Estrange) (before the residents could muster a fighting force, the marauders had filled their boats with plunder and were gone—Laird) Muster is used in place of summon with such objects as courage or strength, especially when the context implies the previous dissipation of the quality mentioned (at length you have mustered heart to visit the old place—Dickens)

Ana *command, order, bid, enjoin: evoke, elicit, *educate sumptuous *luxurious, opulent

Ana magnificent, stately, majestic, *grand: *splendid, resplendent, gorgeous, superb: *showy, ostentatious, pretentious: lavish, prodigal (see PROFUSE)

sunder vb sever, divide, part, *separate, divorce

Ana rend, rive, cleave, split (see TEAR)

Ant link

sundry *many, several, various, divers, numerous, multifarious

Ana *different, disparate, diverse, divergent: *distinct, separate: individual, distinctive, peculiar (see CHARACTERISTIC)

superadd annex, append, subjoin, *add

Ana *fasten, attach, affix superannuated *aged, old, elderly superb *splendid, resplendent, glorious, gorgeous, sublime

Ana superlative, transcendent, surpassing, *supreme: sumptuous, *luxurious, opulent: imposing, stately, majestic, magnificent, *grand supercilious disdainful, overbearing, arrogant, haughty, *proud, lordly, insolent

Ana vain, vainglorious (see under PRIDE): contemptuous, scornful (see corresponding nouns under DESPISE vb)

supererogatory, gratuitous, uncalled-for, wanton are comparable when they mean given or done freely and without compulsion or provocation or without warrant or justification. Supererogatory basically implies a giving above or beyond what is required or is laid down in the laws or rules; the word then suggests a devotion or loyalty that is not satisfied merely with the doing of what is required and that finds expression in the performance of additional labors, works, or services beyond those expected or demanded (the supererogatory services of representatives in Congress) In other usage the term is definitely depreciative in that it implies not a giving freely over and above what is required but a giving or adding of what is not needed or wanted and is therefore an embarrassment or encumbrance (for a mind like his, education seemed supererogatory. Training would only have destroyed his natural aptitudes—Huxley) (the virtual unity of language, laws, general race-ideals would seem to render protection of frontiers supererogatory—Angell) Gratuitous may apply to a giving voluntarily without expectation of recompense, reward, or compensation (the gratuitous education provided by the public schools of the United States) but it often stresses a giving without provocation of something disagreeable, offensive, troublesome, or painful (a gratuitous insult) (a gratuitous . . . imposition of labor—Mann) Gratuitous often means little more than uncalled-for, which suggests not only a lack of provocation but a lack of need or justification and therefore implies impertinence or absurdity, often logical absurdity (the gratuitous assumption that the new must surpass the old—Grandgent) (uncalled-for interference) (uncalled-for advice) Wanton (see also LICENTIOUS) also implies want of provocation, but it stresses capriciousness and the absence of a motive except reckless sportiveness or arbitrariness or pure malice (a wanton attack) (wanton destruction) (the wanton horrors of her bloody play—Shelley) (believing the deed [the burning of a haystack] to have been unprovoked and wanton—Meredith) (tyranny consists in the wanton and improper use of strength by the stronger—Bryce)

Ana *free, independent, autonomous: *excessive, extreme, exorbitant: *superfluous, supernumerary, extra, spare superficial, shallow, cursory, uncritical can mean lacking in depth, solidity, and comprehensiveness. Superficial applies chiefly to persons, their minds, their emotions, their attainments, or their utterances or writings, but it is also applicable to things (as circumstances, factors, conditions, or qualities). The term usually implies a concern with surface aspects or obvious features or an avoidance of all but these aspects or features (he had time for no more than a superficial examination of the report) (multiple superficial wounds of the left and right thigh . . . Profound wounds of right knee—Hemingway) (the tendency . . . of prose drama is to emphasize the ephemeral and superficial; if we want to get at the permanent and universal we tend to express ourselves in verse—T. S. Eliot > Often the term is definitely depreciative and adds implications of unpleasing qualities (as pretense, ostentation, slightness, lack of thoroughness, insignificance, or insincerity) <the lecture was very superficial> <our political theory is hopelessly sophomoric and superficial—Mencken> <its treatment of what is one of the important themes of our day seems generally too slick and superficial to be taken seriously—Merle Miller> Shallow regularly implies a lack of depth  <shallow breathing> and when applied to persons, their knowledge, their reasoning, or their emotions, is almost invariably derogatory and differs little from superficial used derogatorily except in its freedom from implication of outward show or of apparent but not genuine significance <do you suppose this eternal shallow cynicism of yours has any real bearing on a nature like hers?—Shaw> <he continued to prop up this utterly muddled man, this confused and shallow “philosopher,” as the intellectual mentor of the Nazi movement—Shirer> <people who are property-grabbers, shallow and callous egoists . . . are not capable of so noble and selfish a feeling as love—Salisbury> Cursory stresses a lack of thoroughness or of care for details rather than a concentration on the obvious; it often also suggests haste and casualness <even from a cursory reading of the book, I judge that it is a very fine piece of work> <knowing the nature of women, your cursory observations might prove to be more exacting . . . than my own—Terry Southern> <the coffeehouse must not be dismissed with a cursory mention—Macaulay> <as they worked, they cursed us—not with a common cursory curse, but with long, carefully thought-out, comprehensive curses—Jerome> Uncritical implies a superficiality or shallowness unbefitting to a critic or sound judge, whether of literature or the arts or of more general matters (as data, statements, or events) which must be evaluated, related, estimated, or judged <an uncritical judgment of a book> <she was absolutely uncritical, she believed everything—Audrey Barker> <I would not have you so uncritical as to blame the Church or its clergy for what happened—Quiller-Couch>

Ant radical (sense 1)

superfluity *excess, surplus, surplusage, overplus

Ana overflowing or overflow, teeming, swarming (see TEEM): exuberance, profusion, lavishness, prodigality (see corresponding adjectives at PROFUSE) superfluous, surplus, supernumerary, extra, spare all describe what is above or beyond what is needed or indispensable. Superfluous implies a superabundance or excess that requires elimination or pruning <many people . . . found themselves superfluous and, in their turn, were compelled to emigrate—Handlin> <artists . . . not tempted, as are those who work direct from nature, to transcribe superfluous detail because it happens to be before their eyes—Binyon> Sometimes the term either loses its implication of richness of supply or places no emphasis on that idea and comes to mean little more than nonessential or dispensable, if circumstances require its sacrifice <art, music, literature, and the like—in short . . . , superfluous things—Sherman> <gradually the heat, the exertion had consumed all superfluous energy—Hervey> or unnecessary, useless, or needless <authority, like a good educator, ought to aim at making itself superfluous—Inge> Surplus applies to what remains over when what is needed or required for all present purposes has been used <there will be no surplus wheat this year> <each year the surplus funds of the institution were invested> <the task of inducing those with surplus land to part with it voluntarily to the landless—Masani> <transporting its troops to Manchuria, giving it surplus airplanes—Richard Watts> Supernumerary implies something added to a number that is normal, adequate, or prescribed; it need not necessarily suggest that there is no need or no use for what is added, though in reference to a physical condition it often implies a departure from the normal <extra ribs, as well as other supernumerary internal parts—Science News Letter>  <offered the supernumerary position of inspector general—Roucek> Extra is often used in place of supernumerary <buy a few extra Christmas presents in case someone has been forgotten> <was looking at Kitty as if she had suddenly sprouted an extra head—Rolfs> but it may also apply to an addition not in number but in amount <he was subjected to extra work as acting chairman of the House Committee—C. H. Lincoln> or in price <there is an extra charge for coffee> Spare is often used in place of surplus but it carries a stronger suggestion of being held for future use, often a special use  <the spare room is the guest room>  <carry a spare tire for an automobile> or of not having any demands on it for a particular use <he never has any spare cash> <bring along a little spare time, too, and some extra patience, to work these fast . . . streams of New England—Corey Ford> or of being easily spared <have you a spare cigarette on you?> Ana *supererogatory, gratuitous, uncalled-for, wanton: *profuse, lavish, prodigal, exuberant: *excessive, inordinate, extravagant, extreme superhuman preternatural, miraculous, supranatural, *supernatural

Ana potent, puissant, *powerful, forcible, forceful: Herculean, cyclopean, titanic, gigantic (see HUGE) superimpose *overlay, superpose, appliqué superior adj *better, preferable

Ant inferior superlative adj *supreme, transcendent, surpassing, peerless, incomparable, preeminent

Ana *consummate, finished, accomplished: *splendid, glorious, sublime, superb supernatural, supranatural, preternatural, miraculous, superhuman are overlapping rather than strictly synonymous terms whose meanings all involve a contrast with what is natural or, sometimes, normal or predictable. All, with the possible exception of the uncommon supranatural, are used hyperbolically to mean exceeding usual or likely human standards and then are generally equivalent to such terms as extraordinary, exceptional, or wonderful; thus, in an emergency a man may exhibit supernatural strength; one may show preternatural awareness of small sounds when alone at night; a scholar may decipher a manuscript with miraculous accuracy; a player may win against odds by a superhuman effort. Supernatural stresses deviation from the natural that is felt as above or beyond what is observable and capable of being experienced by ordinary means; in much of its use it suggests spirituality and implies a relation to God or to divine powers  <the gods in Homer do exert supernatural effects; for when Zeus nods, all Olympus shakes—Noss> <medieval theologians who did so much to establish and define the terminology of Christianity spoke of man's supernatural life, the life of the soul above the natural life of the body—M. W. Baldwin> <the belief in a supernatural power, in God, was natural to him who felt that he could plow and plant, but that only God made his work produce grain and fruit—

Wood) but sometimes the word loses these suggestions and implications and can then denote more or less neutrally a transcending of the natural and comprehensible or known (not to him, as to us, a world . . . mapped, botanized, zoologized; a tiny planet about which everybody knows, or thinks they know everything: but a world infinite, magical, supernatural—because unknown—Kingsley) (richer, warmer, more vibrant with love and yearning and compassion, a wonderful, mysterious, supernatural Voice spoke from above their heads—Huxley) or it can apply to things commonly felt as matters of superstition rather than of divine spirituality and then often carries a depreciatory note (books that describe fraudulent production of supernatural phenomena—G. R. Price) (his Northmen kept away from Amneran Heath and Morven, on account of the supernatural beings you were always apt to encounter thereabouts—Cabell) (going without a companion, he had taken my revolver to preserve him from dangers—meaning those of a supernatural kind—Hudson) Supranatural implies a transcending of what is natural and especially of what is comprehensible or capable of becoming comprehensible; it is likely to be chosen when the theistic connotations of supernatural are to be avoided (the supernatural phenomena investigated by parapsychologists) (a mystic who resorts to supranatural explanations for two of history's greatest riddles—Werner) Preternatural applies chiefly to what is not regarded as natural or being within the usual range or compass of nature. Usually the term means abnormal or strange and inexplicable to an extreme or startling degree (a degree of acumen which appears to the ordinary apprehension preternatural—Poe) (the preternatural prowess of the hero—Emerson) (preserved the preternatural neatness of a man who is often tempted and deeply familiar with sloth—Cheever) Miraculous applies particularly to events or effects in the physical world that are out of the ordinary course of things or that deviate from the known laws of nature either in kind or degree (the plant, his hope, which he had deemed dead, blossomed with miraculous suddenness—Bennett) (for the last two years he was like a flame burning on in miraculous disregard of the fact that there was no more fuel to justify its existence—Huxley) In its also common religious use miraculous applies to what is regarded or accepted as performed by divine power or happening as a result of divine intervention (the medical man's way of saying that, short of miraculous intervention, you may as well order the coffin—Sayers) (the miraculous transformation of water into wine at the wedding in Cana) (miraculous cures attributed to a saint) Superhuman is sometimes used in the sense of supernatural but in this use it tends to stress the notion of being higher than mankind or sometimes than average or ordinary mankind and it does not carry a clear implication of divinity as supernatural often does (superstitious belief in superhuman agency—Mozley) (if a man believes that he is a superhuman servant of a living god it is not difficult to persuade him that he has a right to . . . make use of the toil of his merely human neighbor—Floyd Taylor) (you can't expect me to be superhuman like you. If you can forgive everything, that's your good luck—Bellow) Ana divine, spiritual, sacred, *holy, blessed: *infinite, eternal, boundless, illimitable supernumerary surplus, extra, spare, *superfluous superpose superimpose, *overlay, appliqué supersede *replace, displace, supplant

Ana repudiate, spurn, reject (see DECLINE vb): *abandon, desert, forsake: stay, suspend, intermit (see DEFER)

supervene *follow, succeed, ensue

Ana *add, append, annex, subjoin, superadd: combine, *unite, conjoin, cooperate supervision *oversight, surveillance

Ana controlling or control, management, direction, conducting or conduct (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT): leading, guiding (see GUIDE) supine 1 *prone, prostrate, recumbent, couchant, dormant 2 *inactive, inert, passive, idle

Ana slothful, *lazy, indolent, faincant: *lethargic, sluggish, torpid: apathetic, *impassive, phlegmatic supplant displace, *replace, supersede

Ana *eject, oust, dismiss, expel: uproot, eradicate, extirpate, *exterminate supple 1 flexible, resilient, *elastic, springy

Ana pliable, pliant, *plastic: *soft, gentle, mild

Ant stiff

2 Supple, limber, lithe, lithesome, lissome can all apply to bodily movements and mean showing freedom and ease in bending and twisting. Supple implies great flexibility of muscles and joints, perfect muscular coordination, and rapidity yet smoothness in change of posture or movement (the light supple spring of a cat from its hiding place) (the Bishop stood watching the flowing, supple movements of their arms and shoulders, the sure rhythm of their tiny moccasined feet—Cather) (in good condition—not fat, like grass-fed cattle, but trim and supple, like deer—Burroughs) Limber also implies great flexibility of muscles and joints and the power to move quickly or easily, but it carries no clear suggestion of grace or of muscular coordination (limber country boys jumping from rock to rock) (Gilda rose as limber as a 16-year-old, and gamboled the full length of the room—Purdy) Lithe is applied chiefly to persons or animals that are slender, supple, nimble, and usually graceful in movements (a lithe dancer) (they climbed the wall—your lady must be lithe—Browning) (a lithe movement of her apparently boneless little figure—Jesse) Lithesome may suggest an agility and vigor that makes for sure graceful movement (the warlike carriage of the men, and their strong, lithesome, resolute step—Kinglake) (an altogether more lithesome and nonetheless useful wolfhound—Nat'l Geog. Mag.) Lissome tends to suggest a light easy supple grace in bearing or in movement (she only wanted wings to fly away, easy and light and lissome—Ransom) (she dismounted with lissome grace, beaming welcomingly—Wodehouse) (the lissome grace of the cat tribe—Stevenson-Hamilton)

Ana graceful, elegant (see corresponding nouns at ELEGANCE): *easy, smooth, effortless, facile supplement n 1 *complement

2 *appendix, addendum, addenda supplement vb complement (see under COMPLEMENT n)

Ana *improve, better: heighten, enhance, aggravate, *intensify supplicate implore, beseech, entreat, importune, *beg, adjure

Ana pray, sue, plead, appeal, petition (see under PRAYER): *ask, request, solicit supply vb *provide, furnish

Ana *replace, supplant, supersede: compensate, satisfy, recompense (see PAY): fulfill, *satisfy, answer: sustain, *support, prop, bolster, buttress supply n *substitute, locum tenens, alternate, understudy, pinch hitter, double, stand-in supply adj *temporary, provisional, ad interim, acting support vb 1 Support, sustain, prop, bolster, buttress, brace are comparable when they mean to hold up either literally or figuratively, though they vary greatly in their specific senses and in the range of their applicability. Support suggests the presence of a foundation or base and is applicable in diverse uses with the general meaning or suggestion of carrying from or as if from below, of maintaining or holding up the weight or pressure of, and of forestalling sinking or falling back, or sometimes, merely, of enduring the difficulties or rigors of without yielding and without undue distress (pillars supporting the balcony) (he supports the greater muscular tension involved with less evident fatigue—Brownell) (support the Constitution) (found the Roman winter . . . too poignant for his anatomy to support without pain—Wylie) Sustain may center attention on the fact of constantly holding up or of maintaining undiminished (sustain the weight of office) (found it difficult to sustain an interest in their talk—Douglas) or it may more specifically imply an upholding by aiding or backing up (for nine years, Napoleon has been sustained by the people of France with a unanimity such as the United States never knew—Aguecheek) or by supplying the physical or mental nutrients needed for strength (this intellectual interest is great enough to sustain the reader through the analytical labyrinths we must search together—Hunter Mead) Prop may imply a weakness, a tendency to fall, sink, or recede, or a need for strengthening or reinforcing on the part of the thing being treated (propping up the table with a packing case) (trying to prop up the decaying structures of last-century imperialism—G. L. Kirk) (the plot, a slim tale of vengeance, is psychologically shallow and propped up by unpardonable coincidences—Anthony Boucher) Bolster blends the suggestions of sustain and prop; it may suggest a supporting comparable to that afforded an invalid by pillows (bolster up the falling fortunes of the East India Company—Parrington) (bolster the diminishing lumber trade within the next 75 years—Amer. Guide Series: N. J.) (assign some extra instruments to bolster the choir's volume of sound—P. H. Lang) Buttress tends to suggest strengthening, reinforcing, or stabilizing, sometimes massive, at a stress point in the manner of an architectural buttress (combat business slumps and to buttress the economy so that danger of another depression will be reduced to a minimum—Newsweek) (a code of laws buttressed by divine sanctions which should be unshakable—Farrington) (the popular success formula is buttressed by evidence from the careers of an impressive minority—R. B. Morris) Brace may suggest supporting or strengthening so that the thing treated is made firm, unyielding, or rigid against pressure (brace the shelf with an angle iron) (then he braced himself against a giant oak on his front lawn and experienced a savage kind of exaltation as the elements raged around him—Cerf) (the shoring up of a tottering political system, which is precisely the problem that we face in trying to brace the western democracies—G. W. Johnson)

Ana *carry, bear, convey: endure, *bear, suffer, stand: evidence, evince, *show: *indicate, attest, argue, betoken: uphold, advocate, back, champion (see SUPPORT 2)

2 Support, uphold, advocate, back, champion are comparable when they mean to favor actively and in some concrete manner a person or thing that meets opposition. Support is general and comparatively colorless. One supports a candidate for election whether one merely votes for him or takes a leading part in his campaign; one supports a cause whether one merely announces one's stand in favor of it or contributes money and time to furthering its interests (any politician who supported her husband was regarded with favor by Mrs. Lincoln—R. P. Randall) (it is not enough to support the capitalist system; to escape abuse as an iconoclast, you must publicly venerate it as well—Bliven b. 1889) Uphold carries an implication of keeping erect or from falling or breaking down; it is appropriately used in reference to something that already exists but is attacked or challenged (those who uphold the ideal of pure poetry—Day Lewis) (tried to uphold the morale of the occupied capital—Paxson) (he is the Philistine who upholds and aids the heavy, cumbersome, blind, mechanical forces of society—Wilde) Advocate implies vocal support either in speeches or in writings; often it connotes urging or pleading (I believe that our political leaders should live by faith . . . but I doubt that they should advocate faith, if only because such advocacy renders a few people uncomfortable—E. B. White) (the few local believers in world government brought to town a play that advocated it—Davis) Back often implies strong support from the rear to be used whenever assistance is needed to prevent the failure of a person or of his ventures or efforts. Sometimes it connotes reserve forces or the use of force; sometimes it implies money reserves or the promise of financial assistance (his father said he would back him in business) (states, large and small, with . . . their very practical traders pushing for foreign markets, and their navies and armies to back the traders and annex these markets—Shaw) (there would be more talk, but talk backed by armed force—Cloete) Often back derives its implications from its use in betting and suggests a willingness to hazard something and especially money on a person's or thing's chance for success (I back you to hold your own against them all—Wharton) (the wife of a Dublin civil servant prohibited her husband from backing horses, but he continued to gamble secretly—The Irish Digest) Champion implies public defense of a person or thing believed to be unjustly attacked or too weak to advocate its own cause and may therefore connote distinction or gallantry in the one who champions (who . . . championed every cause I called my heart's cause, loving as I loved, hating my hates, spurned falsehood, championed truth—Browning)

Ana *approve, endorse, sanction: espouse, embrace, *adopt: *defend, protect, shield support n maintenance, sustenance, *living, livelihood, subsistence, keep, bread

Ant adversary, antagonist supposed, supposititious, suppositious, reputed, putative, purported, conjunctural, hypothetical can mean accepted or advanced as true, real, or in accordance with the facts on the basis of less than conclusive evidence. All imply a measure of doubt of what is asserted and may serve as a disclaimer of responsibility for the assertion. Supposed is likely to imply rather general or common acceptance of what is asserted, though suggesting the presence of uncertainty or conflicting evidence or the likelihood of error (the identity thus asserted with its supposed though sometimes debated poetic essence—Kolodin) (there has not been a reputable student of grammar for a long time who believed the grammar books which are in common use. But we, the people, are loyal to our supposed grammar—Laird) (have we not in the present censorship an ineffectual check on certain supposed evils which perhaps are not very real evils?—Walkley) Supposititious occasionally comes close to supposed (we have no reason to conclude that my idea of the absent thing has only such meaning as can be expressed in anticipatory terms—whether the anticipation be mine or that of a supposititious observer—Victor Lowe) but usually it carries distinct and positive suggestions of fraudulence or spuriousness (ready to lend his last cent to a man in distress or supposititious distress—Herzberg) (dispatched a lawyer . . . to enlarge upon the theme of his father's suppositi- tious affluence—Kobler) Suppositious is used chiefly to imply that a belief or assertion is based on theory or on a postulate or hypothesis, and lacks factual support (this was no suppositious contract between ruler and ruled in prehistoric times—Parrington) (it [magic] comes down to a suppositious, misguided philosophy, a pseudo science—Howells) Reputed, putative, and purported imply a basis in tradition or in popular belief. Reputed in itself is usually a thoroughly neutral word (Ferdinand Latizar, reputed to have been a Mexican—Amer. Guide Series: La.) (Ross's goose, which was reputed to be near extinction—Times Lit. Sup.) but can be strongly colored by context (naturally, no lady would willingly admit that she had been ignored; so that the reputed prowess of Danny may be somewhat overstated—Steinbeck) Putative describes something that is commonly or generally accepted but about which the describer reserves certain doubts (that much of the time so saved was frittered away . . . is a fact which diminished the putative efficiency of the new regime—Mumford) (the U. S. Fascists met . . . its slapstick Waterloo, when a small detachment of Philadelphia cops stormed headquarters and captured the entire putative army, all of them generals—C. W. Ferguson) In its common legal use it applies to a thing or person that may be subject to proof that it is not what it is generally accepted to be; thus, a putative marriage is one duly formalized but to a greater or less degree invalid because of some impediment (as consanguinity) (proceedings to establish paternity and provide for the support of a child born out of wedlock may be instituted . . . within one year after the putative father has ceased making contributions for the support of such child—U. S. Code) Purported may differ little from reputed and putative (payments of allowances based on a purported marriage and made prior to judicial annulment or termination of such marriage—U. S. Code) (the purported head of the family is an ancient and garrulous lush; his helpmate is a domineering crone—McCarten) but especially in its common journalistic use the word tends to stress the writer's disclaimer of responsibility for the matter asserted (compare alleged under ADDUCE) and may approach rumored in meaning (the weekly reproduced a purported letter from De Gasperi, apparently addressed to a British officer in 1944—Time) (a list containing the names of 380 purported Communists in the United States—Current Biog.) Conjectural implies inference from incomplete or defective evidence, and what is so described is offered as a possibility or likelihood but not as a fact (the conjectural etymology of a word) (conjectural emendations in a faulty text) (conjectural causes of a depression) Hypothetical describes someone or something (as a principle, a situation, or a question) that is invented or put forward as possibly true or as likely to be true in the main if not in detail, or as the tentative basis for continuing an argument or investigation (a hypothetical explanation of nebulae) (this land claimed by the Spaniards—a hypothetical claim, all the interiors being still in the hands of the Indians—Amer. Guide Series: Texas) (my French visitor—who was a real, flesh-and-blood visitor, and not, like most of his kind, a hypothetical foreigner invented to point a moral—Grandgent) (this study is hypothetical—i.e., tentative propositions derived from the existing body of social theory and empirical knowledge, but not yet refined into tested theoretical generalizations—A. K. Davis)

Ana assumed, presumed, presupposed, postulated (see PRESUPPOSE): tentative, *provisional: *doubtful, dubious, questionable: *theoretical, speculative, academic: alleged (see under ADDUCE)

Ant certain

suppositious, suppositious *supposed, reputed, putative, purported, conjectural, hypothetical Ana pretended, simulated, feigned, shammed, counterfeited or counterfeit (see ASSUME): questionable, dubious, *doubtful: factitious, *artificial suppress 1 *crush, quell, extinguish, quench, quash Ana subdue, overcome, surmount, *conquer: *abolish, annihilate: *destroy: *ruin, wreck

2 Suppress, repress both mean to hold back by the use of more or less force someone or something that seeks an outlet (as by expression or activity). Suppress carries a strong implication of putting down or keeping back completely. It usually implies the exercise of great or oppressive power or even of violence. It often is a synonym of such words as overpower, crush, abolish, destroy, eliminate, or stifle, but in each case it tends strongly to suggest the prompt use of effective methods (suppress an insurrection) (ungovernable passions . . . suppressed by the very same means which keep the rest of us in order—Conrad) (the bishop was purple with suppressed wrath—Sherman) (a regime of terror designed to brutally suppress . . . freedom, culture and national life—Shirer) Repress, on the other hand, implies little more than a checking or restraining sometimes by an external force, sometimes by the power of the will or mind. It often suggests that the thing so held back may break out again or in a different way and so comes close to inhibit, bridle, or curb (repressed his curiosity) (repressed her desire to weep) (his breathing was a little quickened; but he repressed all other signs of agitation—Dickens) (money and religion: yes, those are the two repressed subjects in the modern novel upon which furtively we open the door—Pritchett) (it is necessary to repress a natural scorn of the master of the glad hand and the soft soap—H. A. Burton) (as she passed the elm tree . . . a thrill of recollected fear would run through her; but she repressed the temptation to talk about it—Mary Fitt) In psychology suppress is commonly used with reference to desires, instincts, and emotions which are consciously and forcibly inhibited by the mind from seeking expression or overt activity; repress usually suggests an unconscious or subconscious process by which a desire or an impulse that is regarded as unacceptable because of one's religious, moral, or social training is inhibited by a refusal to recognize it or to permit consideration of it and so is left to operate in the unconscious.

Ana *arrest, check, interrupt: extinguish, *abolish, annihilate: *forbid, prohibit, ban: subdue, overcome, surmount, *conquer supranatural *supernatural, miraculous, preternatural, superhuman supremacy, ascendancy denote the position of being first (as in rank, power, or influence). Supremacy implies superiority over all others (as in utility, in quality, in efficiency, in desirability, or in prestige) (in the Sahara, the automobile has begun to challenge the supremacy of the camel—Huxley) (the British concept of the supremacy of the home . . . was so deep and so great that not even the Crown could enter the home—Wayne Morse) (last summer American atomic supremacy gave place to something like atomic equality between "the two great colossi"—New Statesman) Ascendancy may or may not imply supremacy, but it always involves the idea of domination or of autocratic power (an idea has ascendancy over his imagination when it has the latter completely under its sway) (the whole system of oppression and cruelty by which dominant castes seek to retain their ascendancy—Russell) (a speaker can get an ascendancy over the House, if he has a strong personality and the ability to regain the thread of his speech—Woodrow Wyatt) <the rays of the gas lamps, feeble at first in their struggle with the dying day, had now at length gained ascendancy—Poe>

Ana preeminence, transcendence, superlativeness, peerlessness, incomparability (see corresponding adjectives at SUPREME): *power, authority, dominion, control, sway supreme adj Supreme, superlative, transcendent, surpassing, preeminent, peerless, incomparable can all mean highest in a scale of values. All of these words may be interchangeable when used rhetorically or bombastically with the resulting loss in definiteness, but all are capable of discriminative use in which they carry distinctive implications and connotations. Supreme is applicable to what is not only the highest in rank, power, or quality but has no equals in that status, all others of the same class or kind being inferior in varying degrees (the Supreme Court of the United States) <Shakespeare is generally regarded as the supreme dramatic poet> <I did not detect in his playing the fire and dash that I look for in the work of a supreme virtuoso—Sargeant> <he smiled again with an air of supreme contentment. "It's the first time I've ever done what I wanted to do"—Bromfield> Superlative is applicable to whatever, by comparison with all other things of the same kind or with all other manifestations of the same quality, admits of no superior especially in commendatory qualities, for superlative may admit equals but it excludes superiors (the superlative genius of Goethe) <his superlative rudeness> <what makes him a great artist is a high fervor of spirit, which produces a superlative, instead of a comparative, clarity of vision—Galsworthy> <there is a smaller proportion than usual of superior books and a minuscule number of superlative ones—Kinkead> <enhanced with a superlative commentary . . . it is commendable in all respects—McCarten> Transcendent and surpassing are applicable to whatever goes beyond everything else of its kind or in its quality; both can connote an exceeding even of the superlative, but transcendent suggests realization of the ideal, and surpassing suggests almost inconceivable attainment (the transcendent acting of Duse) <Cleopatra's reputation for transcendent beauty> <his surpassing skill in surgery> <the geometric pattern is of a surpassing intricacy—Rovere> <[his] native gifts are perhaps not of a transcendent kind; they have their roots in a quality of mind that ought to be as frequent as it is modest—Trilling> Preeminent is applicable to what goes beyond all others in achieving distinction or eminence; it implies both superlativeness and uniqueness within the limits indicated, but it seldom carries a suggestion of direct supremacy or transcendence (the preeminent general in that war) <the preeminent film of the year> <the preeminent example of magnanimity> <although his own case is preeminent, there are a sufficient number of others—J. D. Adams> Peerless and incomparable both imply the absence of equals but, commonly, peerless connotes the absence of superiors and incomparable connotes the impossibility of being equaled; while both normally refer to commendatory qualities, incomparable is also freely referable to qualities that merit condemnation (a peerless performance of Hamlet) <Philip Sidney, called the peerless one of his age—Quiller-Couch> <the incomparable refinement with which he has drawn this interior with its two youthful figures—Binyon> <nothing—simply nothing at all—transcends a cat's incomparable insincerity—Theodore Sturgeon> <peerless among women; perfect in beauty, perfect in courtliness—H. O. Taylor> Ana *chief, foremost, leading, capital: predominant, *dominant, paramount, sovereign

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

sure 1 assured, *confident, sanguine, presumptuous Ana relying, trusting, depending, counting, banking (see RELY): inerrant, unerring, *infallible: *safe, secure

2 Sure, certain, positive, cocksure mean having or showing no doubt. Sure and certain are often interchangeable. But sure frequently emphasizes the mere subjective state of assurance; certain often suggests more strongly a conviction that is based on definite grounds or on indubitable evidence <"I know my hour is come." "Not so, my lord." "Nay, I am sure it is"—Shak.> <be out of hope, of question, of doubt; be certain—Shak.> <in the library he too seemed sure of himself—though once they were on their way home he became almost remote, strangely watchful—Malamud> <they were sure and certain, forever wrong, but always confident. They had no hesitation, they confessed no ignorance or error—Wolfe> Positive often suggests overconfidence or dogmatism, but it implies conviction or full confidence in the rightness or correctness of one's statement or conclusion (an assertive positive man . . . had his own notion of what a young man should be—Anderson) <so much more positive than most of his customers, and he impressed his own convictions on them so determinedly, that he had his own way—Scudder> <an easy and elegant skepticism was the attitude expected of an educated adult: anything might be discussed, but it was a trifle vulgar to reach very positive conclusions—Russell> Cocksure tends to carry a strong implication of presumption or overconfidence in positiveness (certitude is not the test of certainty. We have been cocksure of many things that were not so—Justice Holmes) <people . . . regarded as brash to the point of arrogance, cocksure to the verge of folly—MacLeish>

Ana decisive, *decided: self-assured, assured, self-confident (see corresponding NOUNS at CONFIDENCE): dogmatic, doctrinaire, oracular (see DICTATORIAL)

Ant unsure

surety 1 security, bond, *guarantee, guaranty, bail

Ana *pledge, earnest, token, hostage, pawn

2 guarantor, *sponsor, backer, patron, angel surfeit vb *sate, sate, cloy, pall, glut, gorge

Ant whet

surge vb *rise, arise, ascend, mount, soar, tower, rocket, levitate surly morose, glum, *sullen, crabbed, sulky, saturnine, dour, gloomy

Ana *rude, ungracious, ill-mannered, discourteous: boorish, churlish (see under BOOR): snappish, waspish, fractious, *irritable

Ant amiable —Con *gracious, cordial, affable, genial surmise vb *conjecture, guess

Ana *infer, gather, judge, deduce, conclude: *think, conceive, fancy, imagine: *consider, regard, deem surmise n conjecture, guess (see under CONJECTURE vb)

Ana inference, deduction, conclusion (see under INFER): *hypothesis, theory surmount overcome, overthrow, rout, *conquer, vanquish, defeat, subdue, subjugate, reduce, beat, lick

Ana surpass, transcend, outdo, outstrip, excel, *exceed surpass transcend, excel, outdo, outstrip, *exceed

Ana surmount, overcome, beat (see CONQUER) surpassing transcendent, *supreme, superlative, preeminent, peerless, incomparable

Ana excelling, outdoing, outstripping (see EXCEED): *consummate, finished, accomplished surplus n *excess, superfluity, surplusage, overplus

Ana *remainder, residue, residuum

Ant deficiency

surplus adj *superfluous, supernumerary, extra, spare

Con *needful, necessary, requisite, indispensable, essential surplusage surplus, superfluity, overplus, *excess

Ana & Ant see those at SURPLUS n

surprise vb 1 Surprise, waylay, ambush are comparable when they mean to attack unawares. Surprise is in military as well as in general use. As a technical term it implies strategy in the disposition and movement of troops and equipment and secrecy in the operations; it need not suggest that the attack has been successful (an army suddenly attacked within the lines which it had reckoned upon to ward off its enemy is in a military sense surprised—Maurice) (R.A.F. bombers surprised a large invasion training exercise and inflicted heavy losses—Shirer) In more general use one may surprise a person or something he is concealing by coming on him when he is off guard (housemaids must vanish silently if surprised at their tasks—Sackville-West) (high instincts before which our mortal nature did tremble like a guilty thing surprised—Wordsworth) Waylay commonly suggests a lying in wait on a road or highway. Sometimes it implies concealment by the roadside and an often evil intent to disturb or interfere with (as by robbery or assault) (he was waylaid on his return from the bank) (I am waylaid by Beauty . . . Oh, savage Beauty, suffer me to pass—Millay) Sometimes it carries no suggestion of hostility or evil intent but implies intercepting a person in his progress and detaining him (unable any longer to bear not seeing her, he waylaid her in the street. She would not speak to him, but he insisted on speaking to her—Maugham) (riding in the park . . . Carola beheld her intended galloping furiously down the Row, and left her sister Clementina's side to waylay him—Meredith) Ambush tends to evoke the image of would-be attackers concealed in a thicket; it is often used in reference to guerrilla warfare (his body was brought after he had been ambushed by Indians on nearby Wolf Run—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) but it can be extended to other situations in which one is caught as if by an ambush (see AMBUSH n) (the same kind of feeling ambushed me a few weeks ago—Jan Struther) (the woman clasped her hands together; the butterfly sleeves fluttered as though ambushed—Harriet La Barre)

Ana *catch, capture: *take, seize, grasp, grab

2 Surprise, astonish, astound, amaze, flabbergast can mean to impress one forcibly because unexpected or startling or unusual. Surprise can mean to come upon another suddenly and with startling effect, or, more broadly, it can apply to an unexpected or unanticipated development that tends to arouse some degree of surprise, amazement, or wonder; both senses imply a lack of preparation or a reversal of what is anticipated (her friends planned to surprise her on her birthday with a gift) (apt not only to be interested but also to be surprised by the experience life was holding in store for him—Conrad) (the morning skies . . . surprised her daily as if they were uncommon things—West) Astonish can imply a dazing or silencing (it is the part of men to fear and tremble, when the most mighty gods by tokens send such dreadful heralds to astonish us—Shak.) or it may mean to surprise so greatly as to seem incredible (while still an undergraduate . . . [he] had astonished the scientific world by his acceleration of the metamorphosis of the tadpole—Mackenzie) (the former corporal showed an astonishing grasp of military strategy and tactics—Shirer) or sometimes merely unusual (he . . . astonished his fellows by buying and smoking ten-cent cigars—Anderson) Astound stresses a stunning or overwhelming emotional effect and usually implies so great a difference between what one believes possible and what one discovers to be true that one can find no precedent for it; thus, a piece of news surprises one when it is unexpected; it astonishes when one finds it hard to believe; it astounds when one cannot account for it by any previous knowledge or experience; the successful laying of the Atlantic cable astounded everybody, while its later breaks astonished no one, but after it was finally in operation, many said that no future human invention could surprise them (astounded his congregation by putting up for sale a mulatto slave girl—Amer. Guide Series: N.Y. City) Amaze, though it carries an implication of astonishment, stresses rather bewilderment, perplexity, or wonder (that he should even speak to her was amazing!—but to speak with such civility—Austen) (went through agonies of jealousy and remorse, and fantasies of revenge, which amazed her with their violence—Wouk) Flabbergast is a picturesque and often hyperbolic synonym of astonish or amaze; it suggests vividly the physical signs of a sudden dumbfounding (a delightful letter . . . that flabbergasted me as usual with your critical knowledge—Justice Holmes) (some off-the-cuff retort that will excite the reporters but flabbergast the President's aides—Cater)

Ana startle, alarm, scare (see FRIGHTEN): bewilder, nonplus, confound, dumbfound (see PUZZLE vb): *embarrass, disconcert, discomfit, rattle, faze surrender vb abandon, resign, *relinquish, yield, leave, cede, waive

Ana *abdicate, renounce: *forgo, forbear, sacrifice, eschew: submit, capitulate, succumb (see YIELD): *commit, consign, confide, entrust surrender n Surrender, submission, capitulation denote the act of yielding up one's person, one's forces, or one's possessions to another person or power. Surrender usually implies a state of war and present domination by a victor or by an admittedly stronger power; in addition it often also implies the immediate cessation of fighting (the commander replied that no terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender could be accepted) Submission often implies surrender (as of an army, its supplies, and its fortifications), but it stresses the acknowledgment of the power or authority of another and often suggests loss of independence; it is used especially of those who rebel or of those whose weak condition leaves them at the mercy of a stronger power or subject to its threats. Unlike surrender, submission often implies not a previous state of war but a threat of disastrous warfare (submission, Dauphin! 'tis a mere French word; we English warriors wot not what it means—Shak.) (declaring my submission to your arms—Browning) Capitulation also implies surrender, but it suggests a conditional one on terms agreed upon between the parties or the commanders of the forces concerned (in Greece to offer earth and water was the sign of capitulation—Newman) (after Lee's surrender at Appomattox Buckner . . . negotiated terms of capitulation . . . for the trans-Mississippi armies—Coulter) surreptitious underhand, underhanded, *secret, covert, stealthy, furtive, clandestine

Ana sneaking, slinking, skulking, lurking (see LURK): hidden, concealed, screened (see HIDE)

surrogate substitute, shift, makeshift, expedient, *resource, resort, stopgap surround, environ, encircle, circle, encompass, compass, hem, gird, girdle, ring can mean to close in or as if in a ring about something. Surround is a general term without specific connotations; it implies enclosure as if by a circle or a ring (the town was once surrounded by a wall) (a crowd surrounded the victim of the accident) (the ships are surrounded by a veil of smoke) <whole divisions were frequently overrun or surrounded and cut to pieces when a timely withdrawal would have saved them—Shirer> Often the term denotes not a literal enclosure but something which forms the circumstances, the environment, or the border of something (<surrounded by luxury) (a pleasant white-haired widow surrounded by many potted plants—Cheever) <those mental and moral barriers with which the average Englishman surrounds himself—Bagot> Environ also implies enclosure as if by a circle or a ring, but it often differs somewhat from surround in carrying a clearer implication of the permanent or continuing existence of what environs; thus, “a nation environed by foes” does not clearly imply as immediate danger as “an army surrounded by foes” does, but the former does suggest a persistent or ever-present danger in a way that the latter cannot. The difference is often slight but usually perceptible <the passions and motives of the savage world which underlies as well as environs civilization—Howells> <persuading the doubter that our human spirits are environed by other and vaster spiritual powers—Whiteley> <there are old buildings still . . . but they are usually overshadowed by an environing swarm of new stucco—H. L. Davis> Encircle is not quite the equal of surround though very like it in meaning and often interchangeable with it; it more definitely suggests an enclosing circle and therefore often is suited to a more concrete use; in this sense it is often equal to circle <I found myself encircled in the arms of my . . . Father—Richardson>  <the close which encircles the venerable cathedral—Macaulay> <its frame residences—many of them aged—circle a small business district—Amer. Guide Series: Texas> Also, encircle and circle may denote to proceed in a circle about something, a meaning unknown to surround <circled the house in his search> <as a hungry wolf might have encircled . . . the firelit camp of a hunter—Anderson> <at this speed, 186,000 miles per second, it would take us only about one seventh of a second to circle the earth—B. J. Bok> Encompass suggests something that closes in or shuts off a place or person; it often also suggests a motive (as protection or homage or hostility) <the flaming Seraph, fearless, though alone, encompassed round with foes, thus answered bold—Milton> <the love of all thy sons encompass thee—Tennyson> <for an instant . . . he contained within himself illimitable space and power, enough to encompass and hold all the ships and men that at this moment lay between heaven and the Atlantic—Hervey> Compass implies a being surrounded or encompassed usually by something that covers and protects or by something that weighs down upon and depresses <those wild regions of obscurity which are vaguely felt to be compassing us about in midnight dreams of flight and disaster—Hardy> <we must be humble, for we are compassed by mysteries, and our spiritual faculties are poor and dull—Inge> <the Great Peace beyond all this turmoil and fret compassed me around—L. P. Smith> Hem, usually followed by an adverb and especially in, carries the strongest implication of confinement or of perfect enclosure of any of these words and often suggests difficulty or impossibility of escape <the constables were hemmed in so closely that they could make no use of their pikes—Costain>  <low hills which hem the valley—Ernestine Evans> <lone flower, hemmed in with snows, and white as they—Wordsworth> Gird and girdle both basically apply to an encircling of the waist with a belt or girde. Gird is sometimes preferred when the meaning of to surround or encircle is expressed and the idea of a strong or insuperable barrier is implied <I girded thee, though thou hast not known me—Isa 45:5> <like to his island, girt in with the ocean—Shak.> <girt with a chain he cannot wish to break—Cowper> <shut up as in a crumbling tomb, girt round with blackness as a solid wall—Tennyson> Girdle, on the other hand, tends to imply an encirclement suggestive of a belt or sash or constituting a zone <great coastal plain which girdles the United States—Morgan> and seldom connotes a tight or confining quality in what encircles <the whole harbor looks like Coleridge's Xanadu, the walls and towers girdled round with radiance—Atkinson> Ring carries a vivid picture of formation in a ring, but beyond this it has no particular implication. It is frequently chosen as a picturesque word in the senses of surround, encircle, and hem in

Ana *enclose, envelop, wall, fence, cage, coop: circumscribe, confine, *limit surveillance *oversight, supervision

Ana inspection, scrutiny, examination (see under SCRUTINIZE) survey vb view, espy, descry, behold, *see, observe, notice, remark, note, perceive, discern

Ana *scrutinize, scan, inspect, examine: *see, look, watch survey n *compendium, syllabus, digest, pandect, sketch, précis, aperçu survive *outlive, outlast

Ana endure, *continue, persist, last: withstand, *resist, fight susceptible 1 sensitive, subject, exposed, prone, *liable, open

Ana inclined, disposed, predisposed (see INCLINE vb): alive, awake, sensible, conscious (see AWARE)

Ant immune

2 *sentient, sensitive, impressible, impressionable, responsive

Ana affected, impressed, touched, influenced, swayed (see AFFECT): stirred, aroused, roused (see STIR)

Con resisting, withstanding (see RESIST): frustrating, thwarting, baffling (see FRUSTRATE) suspend 1 disbar, shut out, *exclude, eliminate, debar, blackball, rule out

Ana *eject, dismiss, oust: *banish, exile, ostracize

2 stay, intermit, postpone, *defer

Ana *arrest, check, interrupt: *stop, cease, discontinue: *delay, detain, retard

3 *hang, sling, dangle

Ana poise, balance, steady, *stabilize suspended, pendent, pendulous can mean hanging from or remaining in place as if hanging from a support. Suspended may imply attachment from a point or points above so that a thing swings freely or is held steady in its proper place or position (<suspended from his neck was a medalion—R. H. Brown> <chimes are a set of metal tubes suspended from a frame and struck by wooden mallets—McConathy et al>  <water free from suspended silt> Pendent usually describes something which hangs downward from a support or from one point of attachment; it seldom carries any further implication and so is applicable both to what is motionless and to what swings or moves or is in danger of falling  Pendulous adds to pendent the specific implication of swaying or swinging, sometimes carrying a suggestion of actual floating in space (a pendulous nest) <breasts . . . grown flabby and pendulous with many children—Buck> <steep cliffs . . . hung with pendulous vines, swinging blossoms in the air—Melville> <so blend the turrets and shadows there that all seems pendulous in air—Poe> suspicion 1 mistrust, *uncertainty, doubt, dubiety, dubiousity, skepticism

Ana misgiving, foreboding, presentiment, *apprehension: distrust, mistrust (see under DISTRUST vb)

2 *touch, suggestion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak sustain 1 *support, prop, bolster, buttress, brace

Ana *continue, persist, endure, abide: uphold, back (see SUPPORT): *prove, demonstrate

Ant subvert

2 *experience, undergo, suffer

Ana *receive, accept, take: endure, *bear, stand, brook: *meet, encounter, face, confront sustenance 1 nourishment, nutriment, *food, aliment, pabulum, pap

2 maintenance, support, *living, livelihood, subsistence, keep, bread suture n *joint, articulation swag n *spoil, plunder, loot, booty, prize swagger vb *strut, bristle, bridle

Ana flourish, brandish, shake, *swing, wave: brag, *boast, vaunt, crow, gasconade

Con cower, cringe, truckle (see FAWN): shrink, quail, blench, wince (see RECOIL) swallow vb *eat, ingest, devour, consume

Ana *receive, accept, take: believe, credit (see corresponding nouns at BELIEF): *absorb, imbibe, assimilate swarm vb *teem, abound, overflow swat vb *strike, hit, smite, punch, slug, slog, clout, slap, cuff, box

Ana *beat, pound, pummel, baste, belabor

sway vb 1 *swing, oscillate, fluctuate, pendulate, vibrate, waver, undulate

Ana *shake, rock, agitate, convulse

2 influence, impress, strike, touch, *affect

Ana control, direct, manage, *conduct: rule, *govern: bias, *incline, dispose, predispose sway n dominion, control, command, *power, authority

Ana *supremacy, ascendancy: *range, reach, scope, sweep: spread, stretch, amplitude, *expanse swearing *blasphemy, profanity, cursing sweep n *range, gamut, reach, radius, compass, scope, orbit, horizon, ken, purview

Ana *expanse, amplitude, spread sweeping *indiscriminate, wholesale

Ana promiscuous, heterogeneous, motley, *miscellaneous sweet, engaging, winning, winsome, dulcet are comparable when they are applied to persons or things with respect to the sensations they evoke or the impressions they produce and mean distinctly pleasing or charming because devoid of all that irritates, annoys, or embitters. Sweet when extended beyond its primary application to one of the basic taste sensations, whether to things that produce other sensory impressions or to persons or things that induce emotional or intellectual response, is ordinarily a term of mild general approbation for what pleases, attracts, or charms without stirring deeply or arousing a profound response <what a sweet little cottage> <twilight, sweet with the smell of lilac and freshly turned earth—Corey Ford> <flower motifs and emblems, all printed in sweet colors—Rosner> <has been very sweet. He wants to help, but of course there's nothing he can do—Auchincloss> but in this as in its primary application sweet may also imply an excess of what in more moderate quantity is pleasing and then comes close to surfeiting or cloying (compare SATIATE) <the flaw in her book is the sweet side, the Pollyanna note, that fatal emphasis on the happy ending—Rosemary Benét> Engaging and winning come very close to one another, both implying a power to attract favorable attention and strongly suggesting a power to please or delight; engaging, however, more often stresses the power of a thing to attract such attention, whereas winning usually emphasizes the power of a person to please or delight <an engaging story> <engaging manners> <she has winning ways>  <affectionate, cheerful, happy, his sweet and engaging personality drew all men's love—H. O. Taylor> <simple as a child, with his gentle, winning voice and grave smile—Brooks> Winsome is chiefly applied to persons or to their attractions; the term is somewhat more inclusive in meaning than the others, for it usually implies an engaging quality, a cheerful disposition, pleasing though not striking looks, and often a childlike quality <tears came to his eyes as he remembered her childlike look, and winsome fanciful ways—Wilde> Dulcet suggests an appealing and gratifying or soothing quality whether to the senses (as of some, especially musical, sounds) or to the feelings or emotions <the voice was . . . dulcet as the hum of heavy honeybees amid orange blossoms—Wouk> <could not . . . expect such dulcet weather to last—Sackville-West> <the classic, dulcet, but difficult art of architecture—R. W. Kennedy>

Ana *pleasant, pleasing, agreeable, gratifying, grateful, welcome: delicious, delectable, luscious, *delightful: lovely, fair, *beautiful: ineffable (see UNUTTERABLE) Ant sour: bitter swell vb *expand, amplify, distend, inflate, dilate

Ana *extend, elongate, lengthen: *intensify, heighten, enhance: *increase, augment, enlarge

Ant shrink —Con *contract, condense, compress, constrict swerve, veer, deviate, depart, digress, diverge mean to turn aside from a straight line or a defined course. Swerve may refer to a turning aside, usually somewhat abruptly, by a person or material thing <at that point the road swerves to the left> <the great roots of a tree swerve upward out of the design—Binyon> or it may suggest a mental, moral, or spiritual turning aside <had never swerved from what she conceived to be her duty—A. J. Kennedy> <if I be false, or swerve a hair from truth—Shak.> <our affections and passions put frequently a bias . . . so strong on our judgments as to make them swerve from the direction of right reason—Bolingbroke> Veer is frequently used in reference to a change in the course of a wind or of a ship; often it suggests either a frequent turning this way or that or a series of turnings in the same direction, especially of the wind in a clockwise direction <the wind veered to the east> <[the ship] plunged and tacked and veered—Coleridge> <the wind had veered round, and the Aurora was now able to lay up clear of the island of Maritimo—Marryat> In extended use the term commonly implies a change or series of changes of direction or course under an external influence comparable to the wind <his thought, veering and tacking as the winds blew—Parrington> or a turning aside for a tactical reason (as to avoid an undue influence) <the plan has worked. . .

the state . . . has not only veered away from bankruptcy; it has also improved its services—Armbrister) Deviate implies a turning aside from a customary, chosen, allotted, or prescribed course (finding it no easy matter to make my way without constantly deviating to this side or that from the course I wished to keep—Hudson) It is commonly used in reference to persons, or their minds, their morals, and their actions, with the suggestion of a swerving from a norm or standard or from a right or lawful procedure or course (when the aesthetic sense deviates from its proper ends to burden itself with moral intentions . . . it ceases to realize morality—Ellis) (had told him the story many times and . . . never deviated in the telling—Costain) (from a fundamental sincerity he could not deviate—T. S. Eliot) The next three words of this group usually imply a turning aside from a literal or figurative way (as a path, course, track, or standard) which still continues. Depart stresses the turning away from and leaving an old path, a customary course, or an accepted type or standard; it may further imply a forsaking of the antiquated, conventional, or traditional ([books] which depart widely from the usual type—Grandgent) or a deviation from what is right, true, or normal (forced by circumstance to depart from the principles of his own logic—W. P. Webb) Digress commonly implies a departure from the subject of one's discourse that may be voluntary and made with the intent to return (let me digress for a few minutes to indicate the possible results of this condition) or involuntary and the result of an inability to think coherently or to stick to the point to be developed (I shall not pursue these points further for fear of digressing too far from my main theme—Spilsbury) Diverge is sometimes used in the sense of depart (let them [professors] diverge in the slightest from what is the current official doctrine, and they are turned out of their chairs—Mencken) but more typically it suggests a separation of a main, old, or original course or path into two or more courses or paths that lead away from each other (they proceeded along the road together till . . . their paths diverged—Hardy) (two roads diverging like the branches of a Y—Belloc)

Ana *turn, divert, deflect, sheer, avert: *curve, bend swift *fast, rapid, fleet, quick, speedy, hasty, expeditious Ana *easy, effortless, smooth, facile: headlong, *precipitate, sudden swimming adj *giddy, dizzy, vertiginous, dazzled

Ana reeling, whirling, tottering (see REEL): swaying, wavering, fluctuating (see SWING) swindle vb *cheat, overreach, cozen, defraud

Ana *dupe, gull, bamboozle, hoodwink, trick: *steal, pilfer, purloin, filch swing vb 1 Swing, wave, flourish, brandish, shake, thrash are comparable when they mean to wield or to handle something so that it moves alternately backward and forward or upward and downward or around and around. Swing often implies regular oscillations (impassable, swinging hands with their escorts . . . they dawdled up the hill toward the college—Faulkner) (he spun the typewriter around, and tested the action of the bell several times, swinging the carriage back and forth—Bliven b. 1916) It may, however, imply continuous rotatory movements (swung a pail over his head) Wave distinctively implies undulating or fluttering motions without rhythmical regularity (wave a flag) (wave a handkerchief) and usually additionally implies, according to the nature of the thing waved and the way in which it is waved, a specific intent or purpose (as of signaling, ordering, displaying an emotion, or greeting) (then grave Clarissa graceful waved her fan; silence ensued—Pope) (waved my arm to warn them off—Tennyson) (you cannot wave a wand over the country and say "Let there be Socialism": at least nothing will happen if you do—Shaw) Flourish implies ostentation, triumph, or bravado in swinging or waving something held in the hand (as a weapon, a stick, or a rod) (with their swords flourished as if to fight—Wordsworth) (he walked with a gay spring . . . flourishing his cane—Bennett) (Painless flourished the forceps, planted himself square in front of his patient, heaved a moment, and triumphantly held up in full view an undoubted tooth—S. E. White) Brandish stresses menace or threat as flourish seldom does; otherwise it suggests somewhat similar motions (I shall brandish my sword before them—Ezek 32:10) (he brandishes his pliant length of whip, resounding oft—Cowper) (the . . . speech was a curious mélange of olive branches and brandished fists—Frye) Shake (see also SHAKE 2) can come very close to wave or flourish (with his mighty wind shall he shake his hand over the river—Isa 11:15) (shaking her fingers playfully in the direction of the vehicle—Thackeray) but like brandish it commonly suggests a menacing or threatening or warning intent (people passing by . . . shake their fists and curse—Housman) ("Take heed, Oliver! take heed!" said the old man, shaking his right hand before him in a warning manner—Dickens) Thrash (see also BEAT 1) implies a noisy vigorous swinging suggestive of the motions of a flail in threshing grain (thrashing his arms to keep warm) (thrashed his legs in swimming) (on a blanket on the nursery floor and watched him proudly while he thrashed his sturdy arms and legs—Davenport)

Ana parade, flaunt, display, exhibit (see SHOW vb)

2 Swing, sway, oscillate, vibrate, fluctuate, pendulate, waver, undulate mean to move to and fro, back and forth, or up and down. Swing (see also SWING 1) implies movement in an arc of something attached only at one side or at one end (as by being suspended, hinged, or pivoted); apart from the context the term conveys no definite implication of whether the movement is induced or is automatic, whether it is occasional or constant, or whether it is rhythmical and regular or intermittent and irregular (the red amaryllises . . . swung in heavy clusters—Stark Young) (the door swung open) (suddenly Gil's head swung sharply to the right—Mason) (a pendulum swings with great regularity) Sway implies a slow swinging motion, especially in a flexible or unsteady object that yields to lack of support or to pressure from one side or another (to hear the swaying of the branches of the giant pine—Binyon) (she stood up; she seemed to sway a little as she stood—Mary Austin) (caravans of camels, swaying with their padded feet across the desert—L. P. Smith) Oscillate implies a swinging motion of or as if of something suspended so that it moves through a regular arc; the term usually implies a movement from one side or place or from one condition, attitude, or position to another, with more or less regularity (hurricanes frequently move along an irregular path that oscillates about the relatively straight or smooth curved path that the storms were depicted as following . . . before the 1940's—R. C. Gentry & R. H. Simpson) (Bohemianism has continuously oscillated between the poles of escape and revolt—Levin) (American attitudes oscillate between such poles as withdrawal and intervention, optimism and pessimism, idealism and cynicism—Bundy) Vibrate is sometimes used in the sense of oscillate (the double complex pendulum, when it vibrates in one plane—Encyc. Brit.) but it more typically implies rapid periodic oscillations usually over an arc of small amplitude and may suggest the rapid pulsations of the string of a musical instrument (as the piano or violin) when touched by a hammer or bow or the rapid beating of some wings (as of a hawkmoth or hummingbird) (you know that if you strike a note of music, all the octave notes will vibrate—Manning) (ultrasonic . . . waves vibrate so fast they can't be heard by the human ear—Boyd Wright) In a more extended sense vibrate may imply a trembling, a quavering, or a throbbing suggestive of the movements of musical strings when an instrument is being played (on summer evenings when the air vibrated with the song of insects—Anderson) (nerve and bone of that poor man's body vibrated to those words—Stowe) Fluctuate occasionally implies a tossing up and down restlessly like the waves of the sea or like something floating on such waves, but is chiefly used in an extended sense implying constant irregular alternations suggestive of the movement of waves (stock prices that fluctuate from day to day) (the old unquiet breast, which neither deadens into rest, nor ever feels the fiery glow that whirls the spirit from itself away, but fluctuates to and fro—Arnold) (causes the respiration, pulse, and blood pressure of the test subject to fluctuate widely from the normal—Armstrong) (there are about seven hundred and fifty of them . . . but the number fluctuates rapidly with the demands of the situation—Hahn) Pendulate, a somewhat uncommon word, is a near synonym of oscillate in implying a swinging between two extremes, but it often comes close to fluctuate in its strong suggestion of constant change (the ill-starred scoundrel pendulates between Heaven and Earth—Carlyle) (he pendulated between extremes, between adding to his poetic masterpieces and to his notorious "Don Juan list"—Cournot) (saw the Colonel pendulating between Perkins' room and Pinchot's room. He would toddle out of one room . . . and enter another—White) Waver (see also HESITATE) carries a stronger implication of unsteadiness or of uncertainty in swinging than does sway or oscillate (banners and pennons wavering with the wind—Berners) (he needed assurance, his plump hands wavering uncertainly away from his body—Mailer) (a great misery spoke from the hold. It wavered eerily about the fringes of her consciousness—Hervey) Undulate is more often used than fluctuate when a wavelike motion is implied; especially in its extended use it seldom suggests violent changes, but rather the continuous rolling or rippling that is associated with the steady flow of waves (the ripe corn under the undulating air undulates like an ocean—Shelley) (the . . . flame . . . made the jades undulate like green pools—Lowell) (the great serpent drew back like a flash, and turning, undulated slowly away—Beebe)

Ana *turn, spin, whirl, wheel, revolve, rotate, gyrate:

*shake, tremble, quiver, quaver, quake

3 wield, manipulate, *handle, ply

Ana control, manage, direct, *conduct swipe vb *steal, pilfer, filch, purloin, lift, pinch, snatch, cop swirl vb circle, spin, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, pirouette sybaritic *sensuous, sensual, luxurious, voluptuous, epicurean syccophant *parasite, favorite, toady, lickspittle, bootlicker, hanger-on, leech, sponge, sponger

Ana blandisher, cajoler, wheedler (see corresponding verbs at COAX): fawner, truckler (see corresponding verbs at FAWN) syllabus *compendium, digest, pandect, survey, sketch, précis, aperçu

Ana conspectus, synopsis, epitome, *abridgment, brief, abstract symbol 1 Symbol, emblem, attribute, type can all denote a perceptible thing that stands for or suggests something invisible or intangible. Symbol and emblem are often used interchangeably but they can be so used as to convey clearly distinguishable notions. Symbol is applicable to whatever serves as an outward sign of something spiritual or immaterial; thus, the cross is to Christians the symbol of salvation because of its connection with the Crucifixion; the circle, in medieval thought, was the symbol of eternity because it, like eternity, has neither beginning nor end. This close and natural connection between the symbol and what it makes visible or partly intelligible is not always so strongly implied; it may be a traditional, conventional, or even an arbitrary association of one thing with another that is suggested (a king's crown is the symbol of his sovereignty and his scepter the symbol of his authority) (upstairs suites and private dining rooms whose symbol became a hot bird and a cold bottle served by a gray-waiter in sideburns—Lucius Beebe) (a flock of sheep is not the symbol of a free people—New Republic) Emblem, as distinguished from symbol, implies representation of an abstraction or use in representation; it is applicable chiefly to a pictorial device or a representation of an object or a combination of objects (as on a shield, a banner, or a flag) intended to serve as an arbitrary or chosen symbol of the character or history of one (as a family, a nation, a royal line, or an office) that has adopted it; thus, the spread eagle, the usual emblem of the United States, is found in its coat of arms and on some of its coins and postage stamps; the emblem of Turkey, a crescent and a star, appears on its flag (the emblem of the school is a dolphin, token of the marine source of the founder's wealth—Thorogood) (remembering this flower . . . as the feminine emblem of the big college football games—Edmund Wilson) Emblem is also applied to what is technically known in painting and sculpture as an attribute, some object that is conventionally associated with the representation either of a character (as a Greek divinity or a Christian saint) or of a personified abstraction, and is the means by which the character or abstraction is identified; thus, in fine art the balance is the emblem, or attribute, of Justice; the turning wheel, of Fortune; the club, of Hercules; and the spiked wheel, of St. Catherine of Alexandria (Saint Helena is always painted with a cross beside her, or holding one, as a reminder that it was she who found the original cross. In this instance the cross is an attribute, not a symbol—G. W. Benson) Type, especially in theological use, is applied to a person or thing that prefigures or foreshadows someone or something to come and that stands therefore as his or its symbol until the reality appears. In theology, biblical interpretation, and religious poetry, it usually also implies a divine dispensation whereby the spiritual or immaterial reality is prefigured by a living person, event, experience, or the like; thus, in medieval religious poetry Jerusalem is the type of heaven (the heavenly Jerusalem); in allegorical interpretation of Scriptures, the paschal lamb is the type of Christ, the victim on the Cross (spiritual wisdom . . . is unchanging and eternal; it is communicated to us in types and shadows dim—in symbols—till we grow up into the power of understanding it—Inge) (concludes that the whole of the Old Testament is one great prophecy, one great type of what was to come—Maas)

Ana *sign, mark, token, badge: device, motif, design, *figure, pattern

2 *character, sign, mark Ana *device, contrivance: diagram, delineation, outline, sketch (see under SKETCH vb) symbolism *allegory symmetry, proportion, balance, harmony are comparable chiefly as used in the arts of design and decoration to mean a quality which gives aesthetic pleasure and which depends upon the proper relating of details and parts to each other (as in magnitude, or arrangement) and to the consequent effect produced by the whole. Symmetry implies a median line or an axis on either side of which the details correspond (as in size, form, and placing). Often it implies such mathematical precision especially in arrangement of elements or parts as is observable in the corresponding halves of a perfect crystal, in a geometrically regular star, or in the conventionalized leaf or flower of decorative design (symmetry is the keynote of most formal gardens) (the symmetry of a Greek temple) (abandoned the decent gown for a short coat or jacket and displayed the symmetry of their legs—Trevelyan) but, in its stress of mechanical precision, symmetry may sometimes suggest an arid sterile quality, lacking in true artistic expression (symmetry is a condition of perfect but inert balance; it will be entirely useless in a composition—Taubes) Proportion implies a grace or beauty, independent of a thing's actual magnitude, duration, or intensity, that stems from the measured fitness of every one of its details and the consequent perfection of the whole (we care for size, but inartistically; we care nothing for proportion, which is what makes size count—Brownell) (an impressive structure of Greek design, notable for its beauty of proportion and simplicity of detail—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.) Balance is sometimes employed as an equivalent of symmetry, but it can be used distinctively to imply equality of values rather than repetition of details or parts and a massing of different things (as light and shade, sharply contrasted colors, or figures and background) so that each one tends to offset the other or to reduce the other's emphasis without loss of significance on either side. Balance implies as its aesthetic object an inducing of a pleasant satisfaction in the thing's quiet beauty or of a delight in the unified yet varied effect of the whole (it is a similar principle of unsymmetrical balance which the Taoist artists sought in design. Space therefore, empty space, becomes a positive factor, no longer something not filled and left over, but something exerting an attractive power to the eye, and balancing the attractive power of forms and masses—Binyon) (every good statue is marked by a certain air of repose; every fine picture exists in a state of stable equilibrium brought about by the balance of its masses—Krutch) (balance is a subtler quality than symmetry. Symmetry means repetition Balance, which is a free, almost irregular extension of the concept of symmetry, implies, unlike symmetry, the element of risk—Charles Johnson) Harmony, when used specifically in reference to the arts of design and decoration, retains as its leading implication the same idea as is involved in its general sense (see HARMONY 1), that of beauty resulting from a perfect interrelation of details and their fusion into an agreeable whole. However it often denotes specifically the aesthetic impression produced by something which manifests symmetry, proportion, or balance, or these qualities in combination (a coloring harmony obtained by the aid of a long experience in the effects of light on translucent surfaces—Henry Adams) (we hear harmonious tones; but . . . the pleasure they give us . . . [is] the pleasure of their relational form which makes us attribute to them and their physical combination a quality which we call harmony—Alexander) (choosing with care and with a good eye for harmony the shoes, socks, shirt, and necktie he would wear—Wolfe) sympathetic 1 *consonant, congenial, congruous, compatible, consistent

Ana agreeing, harmonizing or harmonious, accordant, correspondent (see corresponding verbs at AGREE) 2 *tender, compassionate, warm, warmhearted, responsive Ana kindly, *kind, benign, benignant: understanding, appreciating, comprehending (see UNDERSTAND)

Ant unsympathetic sympathy 1 *attraction, affinity

Ana reciprocity, correspondence (see corresponding adjectives at RECIPROCAL): *harmony, consonance, accord, concord

Ant antipathy

2 Sympathy, pity, compassion, commiseration, condolence, ruth, empathy are comparable though often not interchangeable when they mean a feeling for the suffering or distress of another. Sympathy is the most general term, ranging in meaning from friendly interest or agreement in taste or opinion to emotional identification, often accompanied by deep tenderness (sympathy with my desire to increase my . . . knowledge—Fairchild) (sympathies were . . . with the Roman Stoics—Ellis) (satire had its roots not in hatred but in sympathy—Perry) Pity has the strongest emotional connotation; the emotion may be one of tenderness, love, or respect induced by the magnitude of another's suffering or of fellowship with the sufferer (pity is the feeling which arrests the mind in the presence of whatsoever is grave and constant in human sufferings and unites it with the human sufferer—Joyce) (pity that made you cry . . . not for this person or that person who is suffering, but . . . for the very nature of things. . . . out of pity comes the balm which heals—Saroyan) Pity sometimes may suggest a tinge of contempt for one who is inferior whether because of suffering or from inherent weakness; there is also a frequent suggestion that the effect if not the purpose of pity is to keep the object in a weak or inferior state (pity for the man who could think of nothing better—T. S. Eliot) (the parents of a crippled child should give him understanding and challenge rather than pity) Compassion, which originally meant fellowship in suffering between equals, has come to denote imaginative or emotional sharing of the distress or misfortune of another or others who are considered or treated as equals; it implies tenderness and understanding as well as an urgent desire to aid and spare (one of his neighbor women cooked a chicken and brought it in to him out of pure compassion—Cather) (with understanding, with compassion (so different from pity) she shows the sordid impact . . . on the lives of the natives—Campion) (when Jesus came in his gentleness with his divine compassion—Bridges) but while compassion suggests a greater dignity in the object than pity often does, it also implies a greater detachment in the subject (as a priest he regards all history from that eminence of spiritual objectivity which is called compassion—Albright) Commiseration and condolence agree in placing the emphasis on expression of a feeling for another's affliction, rather than on the feeling itself. Commiseration denotes a spontaneous and vocal expression, often one made in public or by a crowd (there was a murmur of commiseration as Charles Darnay crossed the room . . . the soft and compassionate voices of women—Dickens) Condolence denotes a formal expression of sympathy especially for the loss of a relative through death and refers strictly to an observance of etiquette without an implication as to the underlying feeling (a condolence call) (they received many condolences) Ruth denotes softening of a stern or indifferent disposition (look homeward, Angel, now, and melt with ruth—Milton) Empathy, of all the terms here discussed, has the least emotional content; it describes a gift, often a cultivated gift, for vicarious feeling, but the feeling need not be one of sorrow; thus empathy is often used as a synonym for some senses of sympathy as well as in distinction from sympathy (what he lacks is not sympathy but empathy, the ability to put himself in the other fellow's place—G. W. Johnson) Empathy is frequently employed with reference to a nonhuman object (as a literary character or an idea, culture, or work of art) (a fundamental component of the aesthetic attitude is sympathy, or—more accurately—empathy. In the presence of any work of art . . . the recipient . . . must surrender his independent and outstanding personality, to identify himself with the form or action presented by the artist—Read)

Ana tenderness, warmheartedness, warmth, responsiveness (see corresponding adjectives at TENDER): kindness, kindness, benignness, benignancy (see corresponding adjectives at KIND) symptom *sign, mark, token, badge synchronous coeval, coetaneous, contemporaneous, *contemporary, simultaneous, coincident, concomitant, concurrent syndicate n *monopoly, corner, pool, trust, cartel syndrome *disease, disorder, condition, affection, ailment, malady, complaint, distemper synopsis brief, conspectus, epitome, *abridgment, abstract synthetic *artificial, ersatz, factitious system 1 System, scheme, network, complex, organism, economy can mean an organized integrated whole made up of diverse but interrelated and interdependent parts. System usually implies that the component units of an aggregate exist and operate in unison or concord according to a coherent plan for smooth functioning (the digestive system) (amid a system where the classic principles of capitalism still work successfully—Laski) (comprehend all experience in a closed system—Inge) (it does not form an independent system, like the universe: it exists as an element in human culture—Mumford) Scheme may replace system but tends to stress an overall design for the interrelation of components, often a design carefully calculated or planned detail (the cheerful, sanguine, courageous scheme of life, which was in part natural to her and in part slowly built up—Ellis) (our complex system, presenting the rare and difficult scheme of one general government, whose action extends over the whole—John Marshall) (the Newtonian scheme of the universe does not banish God from the universe—Times Lit. Sup.) but sometimes scheme may carry a suggestion of irony or depreciation that is absent from system (see also PLAN). Network suggests a system with interconnection or intercrossing at salient points sometimes involved but susceptible to analysis or control (a network of abandoned narrow-gauge logging roads penetrates the wooded areas—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) (even the lowliest savages live in a social world characterized by a complex network of traditionally conserved habits, usages, and attitudes—Sapir)

Complex stresses an elaborate interweaving, interconnection and interrelationship of components difficult to trace (for these ancestors of ours, in one half of their thoughts and acts, were still guided by a complex of intellectual, ethical and social assumptions of which only medieval scholars can today comprehend the true purport—Trevelyan) (this complex of conditions which taxes the terms upon which human beings associate and live together is summed up in the word culture—Dewey) (modern science, with infinite effort, has discovered and announced that man is a bewildering complex of energies—Henry Adams) Organism basically applies to systems having life, but it is sometimes extended to systems felt as analogous to biological systems (as in capacity for growth and development) (not because of an interest in the individual himself as a matured and single organism of ideas but in his assumed typicality for the community as a whole—Sapir) (the Church grew, like any other organism, by responding to its environment—Inge) Economy implies a system concerned with needs and their regulation and fulfillment by individual, species, household, business, or government (the plantation economy, with its base in slavery, was not conducive to the growth of industrial enterprise—Amer. Guide Series: N. C.) (the principle may operate successfully in the close economy of a good family, or even within a small religious community—Hobson)

Ant chaos

2 *method, mode, manner, way, fashion

Ana *plan, project, scheme, design: procedure, *process, proceeding systematic *orderly, methodical, regular

Ana systematized, organized, ordered, arranged (see ORDER vb): *logical, analytical systematize organize, methodize, *order, arrange, marshal

Ana *adjust, regulate, fix

T

table n *list, catalog, schedule, register, roll, roster, inventory taciturn *silent, uncommunicative, reserved, reticent, secretive, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped Ana *dumb, mute, inarticulate: restrained, inhibited, curbed, checked (see RESTRAIN)

Ant garrulous: clamorous (especially of crowds): convivial (of habits) tackle n *equipment, apparatus, machinery, paraphernalia, outfit, gear, matériel tact, address, poise, savoir faire can all mean the skill and grace with which a well-bred person conducts himself in his relations with others. Tact stresses skill and consideration in one's association with or handling of others, whether social equals or not. It implies delicate and sympathetic perception, especially of what is fit, graceful, or considerate under given circumstances (of political wisdom . . . Elizabeth had little or none; but her political tact was unerring—J. R. Green) (had been known to correct her mistress—with the utmost tact and respect—on a point of historical accuracy—Sackville-West) (without the tact to perceive when remarks were untimely—Hardy) Address stresses dexterity and grace in approach (as in meeting strangers or in coping with new or with difficult situations). It often connotes adroitness and suavity and commonly implies success in winning favor or in attaining one's ends (to bring the thing off as well as Mike has done requires address—Wouk) (his acute and flexible logic could support, with equal address . . . the adverse sides of every possible question—Gibbon) Poise often implies both tact and address; it stresses, however, self-possession or equanimity in meeting embarrassing or upsetting situations <mental poise . . . a balance of mind and temper that neither challenged nor avoided notice, nor admitted question of superiority or inferiority—Henry Adams> <would look into his eyes, the reserve, the statuesque poise all going to pieces—Styron> Savoir faire may stress worldly or social experience and a knowledge of what is the proper thing to say or do or of how to act under all circumstances <the inexperience and want of savoir faire in high matters of diplomacy of the Emperor and his ministers—Greville> But it as often suggests a seemingly intuitive ability to act appropriately and with the utmost ease and tact rather than one based on breadth of experience <the alcoholic usually has memories of occasions when liquor seemed to sharpen his wits, polish his manners and infuse him with savoir faire—Seliger>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana diplomaticness or diplomacy, politicness or policy, suavity, urbanity (see corresponding adjectives at SUAVE): *courtesy, amenity, gallantry

Ant awkwardness tactical strategic, logistic (see under STRATEGY) tactics *strategy, logistics tag n mark, brand, stamp, label, ticket (see under MARK vb)

tag vb 1 *mark, brand, stamp, label, ticket

2 *follow, pursue, chase, trail, tail tail vb *follow, pursue, chase, trail, tag taint vb *contaminate, pollute, defile

Ana *debase, deprave, corrupt, vitiate: spoil, decompose, rot, putrefy, *decay: imbue, inoculate, *infuse take 1 Take, seize, grasp, clutch, snatch, grab are comparable when they mean to get hold of by or as if by reaching out the arm or hand. Take is not only the most general but also the only colorless term in this group. In ordinary use, especially with reference to physical things, it may imply nothing more than a movement of the hand to get hold of something <take the lamp from the table> <take meat from a platter> or it may imply, with reference not only to physical but to immaterial or intangible things, numerous and often difficult operations by means of which one gets possession of or control over something <take a city> Between these two extremes take may imply, in innumerable idiomatic applications, a very wide range of methods of getting hold of something or possessing it in some way; thus, one takes a prize by winning it in a competition; one takes a cottage by renting it; one takes the temperature of a room by observing the thermometer <take a bath> <take the air> <take a rest> Seize usually suggests a sudden and forcible taking or getting hold of, and it therefore is interchangeable with take only when emphasis is placed upon these qualities <the hungry children seized the food that was offered them> <the policeman seized the thief in the act of escaping> <the fort was seized before its defenders had time to repel the assault> <seizing between his teeth the cartilage of the trainer's ear—Shaw> In extended use, especially when the thing seized or the thing seizing is something immaterial or intangible, the term usually suggests a catching of something fleeting or elusive <seize an opportunity> <seize the attention of the crowd> or the capture of something by force and, usually, surprise <seize the throne> <the Breton seized more than he could hold; the Norman took less than he would have liked—Henry Adams> or the ready understanding of something difficult to apprehend or analyze <the character of Louis XIII is difficult to seize, for it comprised qualities hardly ever combined in one man—Bello> Grasp basically implies a laying hold of with the hands, teeth, or claws so as to hold firmly <thy hand is made to grasp a palmer's staff—Shak.> In extended use the term implies a comparable ability to comprehend fully or adequately something difficult to comprehend either inherently or by reason of circumstances <understood the words I heard, but couldn't seem to grasp their meaning—Kenneth Roberts> <the evil of the corruption and falsification of law, religion, education, and public opinion is so enormous that the minds of ordinary people are unable to grasp it—Shaw> Clutch in its basic use implies more haste, more avidity, more urgency, and often less success in getting hold of the thing desired than grasp <I . . . clutched desperately at the twigs as I fell—Hudson> Only when success is clearly indicated is a tight hold or a clenching suggested <I gave him all the money in my possession . . . Gunga Dass clutched the coins, and hid them at once in his ragged loincloth—Kipling> <he clutched Father Joseph's hand with a grip surprisingly strong—Cather> In extended use the term usually suggests a mental or emotional grasping at or seizing that is comparable to a physical clutching <they clutch childishly at straws of optimism—Wouk> <can you never like things without clutching them as if you wanted to pull the heart out of them?—D. H. Lawrence> Snatch carries the strongest implication of a sudden, hurried movement, but it seldom carries as strong a suggestion of the use of force as does its closest synonym, seize; rather, it often implies stealth <snatch a purse> <snatch a kiss> or promptness in rescuing <snatch a child from the flames> <snatched from the jaws of death> or rudeness or roughness <snatched the book from her hand> Consequently in extended use one snatches only what one can get by chance, surreptitiously, or by prompt action <snatch a free moment for writing a letter> <youngsters snatching at fun while they chased the dream of a happy marriage—Wouk> Grab commonly implies more rudeness or roughness than snatch, and it also usually implies as much force or violence as seize; distinctively it often suggests vulgarity and indifference to the rights of others or to the standards of the community, or a more or less open unscrupulousness in getting what one wants for oneself <grab all the meat from the platter> <grabbed his hat and ran> <grab power> <Hitler had been helpless to prevent the Russians from grabbing the Baltic States—Shirer>

Ana *have, hold, own, possess: *catch, capture: confiscate, appropriate, preempt (see ARROGATE)

2 *receive, accept, admit

Ana acquiesce, accede, *assent, consent, subscribe

3 *bring, fetch

Ana *carry, convey, bear tale *story, narrative, anecdote, yarn

Ana *fiction, fable: *myth, legend, saga talent genius, *gift, faculty, aptitude, knack, bent, turn

Ana capacity, *ability, capability: *art, skill, craft, cunning: endowment (see corresponding verb at DOWER) talisman *fetish, charm, amulet talk vb *speak, converse

Ana *discuss, dispute, argue: *discourse, expatiate, dilate, descant: *chat, chatter, prate talk n *speech, address, oration, harangue, lecture, sermon, homily talkative, loquacious, garrulous, voluble, glib are comparable chiefly as applied to persons and their moods and as meaning given to talk or talking. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are also seen in their corresponding nouns talkativeness, loquacity or loquaciousness, garrulity or garrulousness, volubility or volubleness, and glibness. Talkative and talkativeness, the least explicit of these terms, may imply nothing more than a readiness to engage in talk, or they may suggest fluency and ease in talking or a disposition to enjoy conversation <a talkative boy learns French sooner in France than a silent boy—Sydney Smith) <he was talkative, he had a natural curiosity—Styron) <among them they noticed a beautiful, slim, talkative old man, with bright black eyes and snow-white hair—L. P. Smith) Loquacious and loquacity more commonly imply fluency and ease in speech or, sometimes, an undue talkativeness <had lost his usual loquacity and quaint humor—Kingsley) <talks in a rapid and persuasive fashion (he is described as loquacious and good-natured)—Current Biog.) <a loquaciousness at times rising to eloquence—Walter Cerf) Garrulous and garrulity imply prosy, tedious, or rambling loquacity and usually suggest much idle talk about trivial things <a fond garrulous old man, who loved to indulge his mind in reminiscences of the past—Trollope) <his petty vanities and anxieties, are set down with a naïve, irresistible garrulity—Brit. Book News) Voluble and volubility suggest a free, flowing, and seemingly unending loquacity <perhaps it was an overwhelming shock for the voluble French to discover that foreigners could enjoy conversation, too—MacInnes) <realizing that she had made a faux pas, was uneasy and voluble—S. H. Adams) <he sang of the lark, and it was the lark's voluble self—Pater) <for it was not a fault in him to dislike Aunt Charlotte, whose volubility must have assorted ill with his customary reserve—Archibald Marshall) Glib and glibness are often interchangeable with voluble and volubility, but distinctively they may suggest a facility indicative of superficiality, trickery, or deceitfulness <as usual when bemused, he flung out a smoke screen of his own variety of glib chatter—Theodore Sturgeon) <a glib excuse) <to train students as speakers, while neglecting them as listeners, is to foster glibness and deceitfulness—Wendell Johnson)

Ana *vocal, fluent, articulate, voluble, glib, eloquent: *vociferous, clamorous

Ant silent —Con reticent, reserved, uncommunicative, secretive (see SILENT) talkativeness loquacity, garrulity, volubility, glibness (see under TALKATIVE)

Ana fluency, articulateness, eloquence, volubility, glibness (see corresponding adjectives at VOCAL)

Ant silence

tall *high, lofty

Ant short

tally vb *agree, square, accord, harmonize, correspond, conform, jibe

Ana *match, equal: coincide, concur (see AGREE)

Con *differ

tame adj Tame, subdued, submissive are comparable when they mean docile and tractable or incapable of asserting one's will either permanently or for the time being. Tame implies opposition to wild and in its basic sense applies chiefly to animals that have been domesticated and therefore accustomed to control by men (<tame horses) In extended use it also applies to persons, or less directly to the acts and words of persons, whose wills have been broken or who have allowed themselves to be dominated by the will of another (<the tribunal lately so insolent, became on a sudden strangely tame—Macaulay) Often the term implies little more than a temperamental lack of proper spirit or independence, or undue docility or timidity (<a tame reply) <tame acquiescence in tradition and routine—Babbitt) Subdued stresses quietness and in its most general sense implies a toning down with a loss or veiling of all vehemence or intensity (<a subdued, passionate, desperate voice—Styron) <subdued colors) In reference to persons, their acts, words, or characters, it implies a real or apparent domination by or subjection to another, or a similar response to circumstances, and a resulting quietness or meekness that suggests a broken will, complete dependence, or excessive timorousness (<Zeke's natural manner with his mother was well-trained deception, a subdued mockery—Farrell) <she had a mild, subdued, expiring look—Crabbe) <in such a man, so gentle and subdued . . . a race illustrious for heroic deeds, humbled, but not degraded, may expire—Wordsworth) Submissive implies the state of mind of one who has yielded his will to control by another and who unquestioningly or humbly obeys what is ordered or accepts what is given <meek, humble, timid persons . . . who are cautious, prudent, and submissive, leave things very much as they find them—Benson) <the bigot is conventional, rigid . . . is submissive to authority, suppressive of the weak—Ernst) <the perverse, negative will . . . has to be made submissive before it can become positive and integrated with the heart and mind—Henry Miller)

Ana tractable, amenable, docile, biddable, *obedient: *timid, timorous: pliant, pliable (see PLASTIC)

Ant fierce

tamp vb *pack, crowd, cram, stuff, ram

Ana *press, squeeze, jam, crowd: *compact, consolidate, concentrate tamper *meddle, interfere, intermeddle

Ana *interpose, interfere, intervene: trouble, discommodate, *inconvenience tang *taste, flavor, savor, relish, smack

Ana pungency, piquancy, raciness (see corresponding adjectives at PUNGENT) tangent adj abutting, adjoining, *adjacent, contiguous, contermious, juxtaposed tangible sensible, *perceptible, palpable, appreciable, ponderable

Ana *material, physical, corporeal, objective: actual, *real, true: obvious, *evident, manifest

Ant intangible

tantalize tease, harass, harry, *worry, annoy, plague, pester

Ana vex, *annoy, irk, bother: torment, torture, try, *afflict: *bait, badger

Ant satisfy tantamount *same, selfsame, very, identical, identic, equivalent, equal

Ana *like, alike, uniform, similar tap vb Tap, knock, rap, thump, thud can mean, as verbs, to strike or hit audibly or, as nouns, the sound or effect produced by such striking or hitting. Tap implies a light blow usually repeated (as to attract attention to one's presence, needs, or wishes) <tap at her door> <tapping on the window> <she tapped her pencil on the desk for order) Knock implies a more forcible blow than tap, often a pounding or hammering (as on a door to call attention to one's need for admittance or on a person's body or head in an attack or a collision) <there came a heavy knock on the door> <the messenger knocked loudly to awaken us> In extended use knock may imply a sound or an effect that suggests a knocking <an automobile engine may knock because of uneven combustion) Rap suggests a smart, vigorous striking (as with the knuckles) on a hard surface so as to produce a sharp, quick sound or succession of sounds <the chairman rapped sharply for order>  In extended use rap implies utterance that comes as quick and as sharp as rapping <rap out a series of commands> <the tired businessman . . . wants his poems snapped at him, rapped at him—Lowes) Thump implies the dull, heavy, yet resonant sound made by something that pounds or beats (as the fist upon a table or heavy feet upon the ground) or by something that pulsates forcibly and noisily <hear the thump of many feet) <the thumping of a big drum> <the thump of a boat against the pier> <everybody's heart was thumping as hard as possible—Thackeray> Thud places more emphasis upon the sound made than upon the action which produces it and carries a less strong suggestion of repetition; also, it more often suggests the sound made by something falling and striking than by something being struck; otherwise it differs only by suggesting a flatter or hollower and less resonant sound than thump <the dull thud of a heavy body striking the floor>

Ana *strike, smite: *beat tap n rap, knock, thump, thud (see under TAP vb) tar n *mariner, sailor, seaman, gob, bluejacket

tardy adj Tardy, late, behindhand, overdue can all designate persons or things that do not arrive or take place at the time set, the time due, or the expected and usual time. Tardy implies a lack of promptness or punctuality or a coming or happening or doing after the proper or appointed moment; it need not imply slowness in movement but may suggest rather a being delayed in starting or beginning <ten years is a long time for a courtship, and she summons courage to spur her tardy swain—Seamus Kelly> <the tardier indicators of business activity have finally begun to turn down—Fortune> Late implies an opposition to early and usually connotes a failure to come or take place at the time due because of procrastination, slowness of movement or growth, or the interference of obstacles; it is applied especially to persons or to things that are governed by a schedule <be late for work> <you are too late to get your dinner> <the train is very late today> <spring is very late this year> Behindhand usually applies either directly or indirectly to persons who are in arrears (as in the payment of debts or in the fulfillment of obligations) or who are slower than normal (as in mental progress, in the acceptance of fashions, or in taking action) <behindhand in the payment of his rent>  <Spain, usually so behindhand in matters of art, displayed expressionists . . . even nonobjectivists—Gómez Sicre> Overdue is applied to things that are affected by a person's being, or less often to a person that is, markedly late or behindhand; thus, a person is behindhand in the payment of his rent, but the rent is overdue when such a situation occurs; a ship is overdue when it is seriously or conspicuously behind its scheduled time of arrival <her gallant was now more than an hour overdue—Barclay>  Overdue also may refer to something that might logically or suitably have appeared or occurred a long time before <colonies that are overdue for liberation—Landman> <the valuable work . . . received long overdue recognition—Kuney>

Ana dilatory, laggard, *slow: delayed, detained, retarded (see DELAY)

Ant prompt

tarnish vb *soil, dirty, sully, foul, befoul, smirch, besmirch, grime, begrime

Ana darken, dim, bedim, *obscure: defile, pollute, taint, *contaminate

Ant polish —Con cleanse, *clean: *illuminate, illumine, lighten tarry *stay, remain, wait, abide, linger

Ana *delay, procrastinate, lag, loiter, dawdle tart adj *sour, acid, acidulous, dry

Ana piquant, *pungent: *sharp, keen: curt, brusque, blunt (see BLUFF): *irritable, snappish, waspish

Tartarean *infernal, chthonian, Hadean, stygian, hellish task, duty, assignment, job, stint, chore are comparable when they mean a piece of work which one is asked to do and is expected to accomplish. Task refers to a specific piece of work or service usually imposed by authority or circumstance but sometimes undertaken voluntarily <some person or some organization whose task it is to realize the daydreams of the masses—Huxley> <the spirit in which judgy or advocate is to look upon his task—Cardozo> Duty is likely to indicate work, service, or conduct enjoined on a person because of his rank, status, occupation, or affiliation; it is more likely in most uses to suggest obligation, often moral, than specific imposition by a taskmaster <it is emphatically the province and duty of the judicial department to say what the law is—John Marshall> <some of the military branches having a preferred status . . . had higher pay scales for less dangerous duties—Kingsley Davis> Assignment suggests a specific amount of work or sort of service assigned authoritatively <it is not our assignment to settle specific questions of territories—Truman> Job is a general term wide in suggestion ranging from voluntary undertaking of some signal service down to an assigned bit of menial work  Stint stresses carefully or equitably measured or timed apportionment of work <took to doing "German Romance" as my daily work, ten pages daily my stint—Carlyle> Chore is likely to suggest minor routine activity necessary for continuing satisfactory operating (as of farm or office) <leisure after the chores and happy meeting places where the farmer and his family might play—Burlingame>

Ana *function, office, duty, province: *work, labor, toil: employment, occupation, business (see WORK)

taste n 1 Taste, flavor, savor, tang, relish, smack can all mean the property of a substance which makes it perceptible to the gustatory sense. Taste not only is the most inclusive of these terms but it gives no suggestion of a specific character or quality <dislike the taste of olives> <the fundamental tastes are acid, sweet, bitter, and salt> Flavor applies to the property of a thing which is recognized by the cooperation of the olfactory and gustatory and to some extent tactile senses. The term therefore usually denotes the combination of tastes and smells perceived when eating or drinking a thing. Usually, also, it suggests the blend of tastes and odors and textures that give a substance a distinctive or peculiar character <this peach has a particularly fine flavor> <the flavor of a fine tea has been described as "a bouquet which can be tasted"> Savor stresses sensitiveness of palate or of nose and may refer to the odor of something cooking as well as to the flavor of something eaten <caught the rich savor of roasting meat as they passed the window> <sipping slowly to enjoy the full savor of the wine> Tang applies chiefly to a sharp penetrating savor, flavor, or odor; it usually implies a live, pungent quality <prefer apples with a tang> <the tang of dry champagne> <the tang of a salt breeze> Relish and smack are comparatively rare in this sense; relish (see also TASTE 2) comes close to savor and usually suggests enjoyment of the taste  <my first endeavor must be to distinguish the true taste of fruits, refine my palate, and establish a just relish in the kind—Shaftesbury> Smack comes close to flavor but applies usually to one that is added to or is different from the typical flavor of a substance <ale with a burnt musty smack>

In extended use these words usually call up one or more suggestions from their basic senses. Taste usually denotes a strong impression or a heightened sense of the quality of something <the book leaves a bad taste in the mouth> <the first taste of sudden death and destruction from the skies—Shirer> Flavor implies a predominant or distinctive and pervasive quality <imparted an unwonted lachrymose flavor to his tone—Purdy> <the passing hour's supporting joys have lost the keen-edged flavor—Meredith> <flavor, in fine, is the spirit of the dramatist projected into his work—Galsworthy> Savor differs from flavor largely in suggesting a stimulating or enlivening character or quality that, like salt, spice, or other seasoning, gives life or pungency to a thing <an odd blend of bitter naturalism and quiet humor . . . gives it a savor quite its own—Anthony Boucher> <no one treats me like a child now, and the savor has gone out of my life—Ellis> Tang, relish, and smack come still closer to their basic senses <the language has a tang of Shakespeare—Gray> <Yankeeisms . . . whose salt-sea flavor has its own peculiar tang in it—J. R. Lowell> <the full flavor, the whole relish of delight—Beecher> <your lordship . . . hath yet some smack of age in you, some relish of the saltness of time—Shak.> <the Saxon names of places, with the pleasant, wholesome smack of the soil in them—Arnold>

2 Taste, palate, relish, gusto, zest are comparable when they mean a liking for or an enjoyment of something because of qualities that give the sense of taste a pleasurable sensation or that produce comparably pleasant mental or aesthetic impressions. Taste (see also TASTE 1) may imply a liking that is either natural or acquired; the term is often used to designate a deep-seated or ingrained longing for something that lies behind one's predilection for it, one's bent to it, one's aptitude for it, or a predisposition to enjoy one thing more than another <cultivate a taste for olives> <he had no taste for the study of law> <she had a taste for melancholy—for the smell of orange rinds and wood-smoke—that was extraordinary—Cheever> More often taste refers to a liking that is based upon an understanding of peculiar excellences, especially aesthetic excellences, and that gives one a more or less discerning appreciation of a thing's beauty or perfection (as of form, design, and color) or grace and dignity and consequently greater enjoyment of it  <all tastes are legitimate, and it is not necessary to account for them—Virgil Thomson> <without any technical knowledge she had acquired a good taste in music—Ellis> In this sense taste is often so close to another sense of taste, namely, the power of discriminating aesthetic judgment, that the two meanings tend to overlap. In the first case, however, taste is not an abstraction but a concrete thing referable to an individual or a group of individuals <we have our tastes in painting as in confectionery. Some of us prefer Tintoretto to Rembrandt, as we do chocolate to coconut—Brownell> In the latter sense taste is an abstraction used commonly without reference to individuals. In general it implies a capacity for discerning true excellence and the setting up of standards whereby all may be taught to appreciate the excellence they discern; sometimes it denotes the body of standards so set up <you do have talent, but you're pitifully ignorant of the first principles of taste—Wouk> Palate may imply either the literal physical sensation or sense of taste  <people who considered cider was just like champagne. It was a matter of palate—Hilton> or a corresponding intellectual reaction and then suggest pleasure afforded the mind <in the midst of such beauty . . . one's body is all one tingling palate—Muir> <had no philosophy, but things distressed his palate, and two of those things were International propaganda and the Organized State—Yeats> Relish often suggests a more distinct or a more exciting flavor in the thing that evokes enjoyment or liking; but especially it tends to imply a keener or more personal gratification than taste  <seemed to speak all his words with an immense wet-lipped relish, as though they tasted good on the tongue—Dahl> <[the artist's brain] can go further and build up, always with a passionate relish for what it is producing—Montague> Gusto can imply either the hearty relish with which one sometimes may attack a meal, execute a piece of work, or go about the performance of an act (as a task or duty), or a quality in the thing which is executed or in the act which is performed that indicates vital or enthusiastic interest, keen delight, and intense imaginative or emotional energy in the doing of it <ambitious politicians . . . succumbing with glee and gusto to the temptations of power—Huxley> <this dramatic sense . . . gives Rostand's characters—Cyrano at least—a gusto which is uncommon on the modern stage—T. S. Eliot> Zest, like gusto, applies either to the spirit in which one approaches something one likes to do, make, or encounter or the quality imparted to the thing done, made, or envisioned as a result of this spirit. In contrast with gusto it suggests eagerness, avidity, or a perception of a thing's piquancy or peculiar flavor rather than a hearty appetite indicative of abounding energy <the Elizabethan theater had its cause in an ardent zest for life and living—Arnold> <his robustiousness, his zest for malicious humor—Hervey>

Ana *predilection, prepossession, partiality; appreciation, understanding, comprehension (see corresponding verbs at UNDERSTAND); inclination, disposition, predisposition (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE); *discernment, discrimination, penetration, insight, acumen
Ant antipathy

tasty savory, sapid, *palatable, appetizing, toothsome, flavorsome, relishing

Ant bland

tat vb *weave, knit, crochet, braid, plait tattle *gossip, blab

Ana divulge, disclose, betray, *reveal taunt vb mock, deride, *ridicule, twit, rally

Ana *scoff, jeer, gibe, flout; affront, insult, *offend, outrage; scorn, disdain, scout (see DESPISE); chaff, *banter taut *tight, tense

tautology *verbiage, redundancy, pleonasm, circumlocution, periphrasis

tawdry *gaudy, garish, flashy, meretricious

Ana *showy, pretentious: vulgar, gross, *coarse: flamboyant, *ornate, florid tax vb *burden, encumber, cumber, weigh, weight, load, lade, charge, saddle teach, instruct, educate, train, discipline, school are comparable when they mean to cause to acquire knowledge or skill. Teach implies a direct showing to another with the intent that he will learn; it usually suggests the imparting of information, but in addition it often also connotes the giving of help that will assist the learner in mastering such difficulties as are involved in putting the new knowledge to use or in making it a part of his mental or physical equipment <teaching the young to read> <teach arithmetic> <taught the boys how to swim> <that same prayer does teach us all to render the deeds of mercy—Shak.> Instruct stresses the furnishing, especially the methodical furnishing, of necessary knowledge or skill to someone else <schoolmasters will I keep within my house, fit to instruct her youth—Shak.> <he is wise who can instruct us and assist us in the business of daily virtuous living—Carlyle> Educate, although it implies or presupposes teaching or instruction as the means, stresses the intention or the result, the bringing out or development of qualities or capacities latent in the individual or regarded as essential to his position in life (schools that educate boys for the ministry) (in my eyes the question is not what to teach, but how to educate—Kingsley) (educate the masses into becoming fit for self-government—Huxley) Train, even when it is used as a close synonym of educate, almost invariably suggests a distinct end or aim which guides teachers and instructors; it implies, therefore, such subjection of the pupil as will form him or fit him for the state in view (universities exist . . . on the one hand, to train men and women for certain professions—Russell) Train is especially employed in reference to the instruction of persons or sometimes animals who must be physically in excellent condition, mentally proficient, or quickly responsive to orders for a given occupation or kind of work (train a dog to point game) (troops . . . equipped and trained to fight in the bitter cold and the deep snow—Shirer) Discipline, even more than train, implies subordination to a master or subjection to control, often self-control (he consciously seeks to discipline himself in fine thinking and right living—Ellis) (feeling . . . the rush of old jealousy he had thought long since disciplined from him—Buck) School is sometimes interchangeable with educate (some of them have been schooled at Eton and Harrow—Shaw) or with teach or instruct (schooled by my guide, it was not difficult to realize the scene—S. C. Hall) but it is more often used in the sense of train or discipline, frequently with the added implication of learning to endure what is hard to bear (that I can bear. I can school myself to worse than that—Wilde) (groomed and faultless, schooled in power, he bowed greetings—Wolfe) Ana impart, *communicate: *practice, drill, exercise: inculcate, instill, *implant tear vb Tear, rip, rend, split, cleave, rive can all mean to separate forcibly one part of a continuous material or substance from another, or one object from another with which it is closely and firmly associated. Tear implies pulling apart or away by or as if by main force; it often suggests jagged rough edges or laceration (tore his coat on a nail) (tear a piece of paper lengthwise) (he took hold of it with his powerful hands and tore it out by the roots—Anderson) (flood tore a . . . gorge through the township—Amer. Guide Series: VI.) (grief tears her heart) Rip usually implies a forcible pulling or breaking apart typically along a line or juncture (as a seam, a joint, or a connection) (Macduff was from his mother's womb untimely ripped—Shak.) (rip the shingles from a roof) Rend implies greater violence than tear and either heightens the implication of a lacerating effect or adds that of severing or sundering (rend your heart, and not your garments—Joel 2:13) (the black volume of clouds . . . rent asunder by flashes of lightning—Irving) (his pride and vanity had been rent by her ultimate rejection—H. G. Wells) Split implies a cutting or breaking apart in a continuous, straight, and usually lengthwise direction or in the direction of grain or layers (split a log with a wedge) (great rocks split by an earthquake) In extended use the term implies force or intensity sufficient to split something (split their sides with laughter) (pain that seemed about to split his head) (let sorrow split my heart, if ever I did hate thee—Shak.) (ear-splitting outcries) Cleave, a somewhat rhetorical word, may come close to split, but more often it conveys the notion of laying open by or as if by a stroke of an edged weapon (struck the final blow, cleaving the Archbishop's skull—Lucas) (his acumen clove clean to the heart of a piece of writing—Mandelbaum) Rive is elevated for split (blunt wedges rive hard knots—Shak.) (all thoughts to rive the heart are here, and all are vain—Housman)

Ana slit, slash, *cut: *pull, drag: damage, *injure, impair 2 *rush, dash, shoot, charge

Ana *speed, hasten, hurry: dart, *fly, scud tease tantalize, pester, plague, harass, harry, *worry, annoy

Ana *bait, badger, hector, chivy: importune, adjure, *beg: fret, chafe, gall (see ABRADÉ) tedious *irksome, tiresome, wearisome, boring

Ana burdensome, *onerous, oppressive: fatiguing, exhausting, fagging, jading (see TIRE vb): *slow, dilatory, deliberate tedium, boredom, ennui, doldrums are comparable when they denote a state of dissatisfaction and weariness.

Ant exciting

Tedium suggests a repression of energy for lack of a proper or adequate outlet, and dullness or lowness of spirits resulting from irksome inactivity or from the irksome monotony of one's pursuits or surroundings (incessant recurrence without variety breeds tedium—Lowes) (able boys and girls will go through endless tedium . . . to acquire some coveted knowledge or skill—Russell)

Boredom adds to tedium suggestions of listlessness, dreariness, and unrest resulting either from a lack of interest in one's pursuits or surroundings or from the fact that they pall or fail to excite interest (I suppose I shall go on "existing" till the boredom of it becomes too great—J. R. Green) (wealthy indolent women . . . who got up at noon and spent the rest of the day trying to relieve their boredom—Dahl) Ennui stresses profound dissatisfaction, discontent, or weariness of spirit; usually it suggests physical depression, languor, or lassitude as well as boredom (that ennui, that terrible taedium vitae, that comes on those to whom life denies nothing—Wilde) (the inexhaustible power and activity of his mind leave him no leisure for ennui—Arnold) Doldrums applies to a phase or period of depression that in persons may be marked by listlessness, despondency, and flagging energy (Lotharioism is simple monogamy's doldrums multiplied, and with thrice monogamy's duties—Nathan) or in more general applications (as to economic activity) may be marked by inactivity and dullness.

Ana irksomeness, tediousness, tiresomeness, wearisomeness (see corresponding adjectives at IRKSOME): melancholy, dumps, blues, gloom (see SADNESS)

teem, abound, swarm, overflow can all mean to be plentifully supplied (with) or to be rich (in). Though they are often interchangeable, each of these words may carry distinctive implications. Teem implies productiveness or fecundity (the rivers teem with fish) (his mind teems with plans) It often suggests little more than crowding and activity (Tozeur, which has a railway station and positively teems with French officials—Huxley) Abound implies plenitude in numbers or amount; usually it stresses profusion (distant forests aglow with tropical colors and abounding with strange forms of life—Jefferies) It is as often used with reference to qualities as to things (the young soldiers abound in vigor and courage) Swarm in its relevant extended sense implies even more strongly than teem motion and thronging (a marketplace swarming with buyers and sellers—Macaulay) It is also more capable of suggesting infestation (the house swarmed with flies) Overflow in its extended sense adds to abound the implication of exceeding capacity (he overflows with good nature) Sometimes it suggests glutting (the market overflows with goods)

Ana *bear, produce, yield, turn out: *generate, engender, breed, propagate: multiply, augment, *increase teeny tiny, little, diminutive, *small, petite, wee, weeny, minute, microscopic, miniature teeter vb *shake, tremble, quake, totter, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, wobble, shimmy, dither tell vb 1 *count, enumerate, number 2 *say, utter, state

3 divulge, discover, *reveal, disclose, betray

Ana impart, *communicate: *relate, rehearse, recite, recount: *inform, acquaint, apprise telling compelling, convincing, cogent, sound, *valid

Ana forceful, forcible, *powerful, potent: *effective, effectual, efficacious: *conclusive, decisive, determinative, definitive temerity, audacity, hardihood, effrontery, nerve, cheek, gall are comparable when they mean conspicuous or flagrant boldness (as in speech, behavior, or action). Temerity usually implies contempt of danger and consequent rashness; often it suggests, especially when a proposal or project is under discussion, a failure to estimate one's chances of success (impetuously brushed aside the legalistic twaddle of the lawyers . . . and they frowned on such temerity—Bowers) (tenth-rate critics and compilers, for whom any violent shock to the public taste would be a temerity not to be risked—Arnold) Audacity implies either a bold and open disregard of the restraints imposed by prudence, convention, decorum, or authority or undue presumption in making advances (he had committed the supreme audacity of looking into her soul—Sackville-West) (the moral audacity, the sense of spiritual freedom, that one gets from certain scenes in the Gospels—Edmund Wilson) Hardihood stresses firmness of purpose and often additionally implies considered defiance (as of conventions or decorum). It may be used without depreciative intent, but it is frequently employed as a term of contempt almost equivalent to insolence or impudence (no historian or astronomer will have the hardihood to maintain that he commands this God's-eye view—Toynbee) (the reviewers . . . were staggered by my hardihood in offering a woman of forty as a subject of serious interest to the public—Bennett) Effrontery is definitely derogatory; it is used in place of any of the three preceding words when one wishes to impute flagrant disregard of the laws of courtesy, propriety, or fair dealing or an arrogant assumption of a privilege (had the damnable effrontery to tell me my father's delay was occasioned . . . by his addiction to immoral practices—Cheever) (she had won her way to success by strength of will and hardness of heart, and a kind of haughty effrontery—Wharton) Nerve, cheek, and gall are close to effrontery, nerve, however, often carrying a strong suggestion of hardihood, cheek of impudent self-assurance, and gall of outrageous insolence (had the ghostly nerve to tell you . . . that you were being vulgar—Wouk) (the cheek of him . . . imagine a miserable-looking leprechaun like Pat Dolan to be having notions of a fine girl like Maria—Laverty) (the small stockholder who . . . has the gall to ask questions about the management—Cohn)

Ana rashness, recklessness, foolhardiness, daring, venturesomeness (see corresponding adjectives at ADVENTUROUS): precipitateness, impetuosity, abruptness (see corresponding adjectives at PRECIPITATE): impertinence, intrusiveness, officiousness (see corresponding adjectives at IMPERTINENT)

Ant caution

temper vb *moderate, qualify

Ana *adjust, regulate, fix: mitigate, alleviate, lighten, assuage, allay, *relieve: mollify, *pacify, appease

Ant intensify temper n 1 *mood, humor, vein

Ana mettle, spirit (see COURAGE): emotion, *feeling, affection, passion: attitude, *position, stand

2 *disposition, temperament, complexion, character, personality, individuality

Ana *state, condition, posture, situation: *quality, property, attribute temperament *disposition, temper, complexion, character, personality, individuality

Ana *mind, soul: nature, kind, *type temperance, sobriety, abstinence, abstemiousness, continence can all mean self-restraint in the gratification of appetites or passions. In its more general sense temperance implies simply habitual moderation and the exercise of judgment (temperance in eating and drinking) (exaggeration, exaltation, the fanatic spirit, are extremely rare. Temperance is the almost universal rule in speech, demeanor, taste, and habits—Brownell) But temperance may be used specifically in reference to the use of intoxicating beverages and then tends to imply not merely moderation but abstention; thus, a temperance hotel is one where no intoxicating liquors are sold or served. Sobriety, like temperance, suggests avoidance of excess not only in drinking (what would be sobriety for a billiard marker would be ruinous drunkenness for a . . . billiard player—Shaw) but also in thought or action. Often it connotes the idea of seriousness or of avoidance of ostentation (sobriety in dress) (admired him for his cleanliness, sobriety and industry—Cheever) Abstinence implies voluntary deprivation (the Cynic preached abstinence from all common ambitions, rank, possessions, power, the things which clog man's feet—Buchan) (the man who has made a virtue of abstinence secretly regrets, when he grows old, the discretions of his youth—Abel) Abstemiousness and its much commoner adjective abstemious suggest habitual self-restraint, moderation, or frugality especially in eating or drinking (the most abstemious of men . . . he held old-fashioned and rather puritanical views—Woolf) Continence emphasizes self-restraint in regard to one's impulses or desires (he knew what to say, so he knows also when to leave off, a continence which is practiced by few writers—Dryden) In its specific sense it stresses self-restraint in sexual indulgence. Sometimes it implies chastity or complete abstention; often, when referred to husband and wife, it implies avoidance of undue indulgence (chastity is either abstinence or continence. Abstinence is that of virgins or widows; continence, of married persons—Taylor)

Ana forgoing, forbearing or forbearance, sacrificing or sacrifice, eschewal (see corresponding verbs at FORGO): frugality, sparingness, thriftiness (see corresponding adjectives at SPARING): restraining, curbing, checking (see RESTRAIN)

temperate 1 *moderate

Ana mild, gentle, lenient, *soft: *steady, even, equable, constant: restrained, curbed, checked (see RESTRAIN)

Ant intemperate: inordinate

2 *sober, continent, unimpassioned

Ana *sparing, frugal, economical: abstaining, refraining, forbearing (see REFRAIN): dispassionate, just, equitable, *fair temporal *profane, secular, lay

Ana *material, objective, physical, corporeal

Ant spiritual

temporary, provisional, ad interim, acting, supply can all be applied to a person holding a post for a limited time, to the post held by that person, or to his appointment. Temporary merely implies that the post is not held on tenure but may be terminated at the will of those having the appointive power. It is interchangeable with many of the other words but is not so explicit (a temporary position)

<temporary clerks>  Provisional is applied chiefly to a government or to the head or leading officials of a government that is set up in a new state or after a revolution until a permanent government can be established. Ad interim definitely suggests appointment for an intervening period (as between the death or resignation of an incumbent and the appointment or election of his successor) <an ad interim pastor> The term is also applied to an appointment made by the president of the United States when the Senate is not in session and confirmation is not possible until after the recess <an ad interim appointment as ambassador> Acting is applied to the person who during a vacancy in an office or during the absence of the incumbent assumes temporarily, by appointment or by fixed procedure, the powers given the person regularly appointed or elected <the president of the common council becomes acting mayor when the mayor is on vacation> Supply implies the performance of duties of another or service as a locum tenens

Ant permanent

tempt entice, inveigle, *lure, decoy, seduce

Ana allure, *attract: *invite, solicit, court, woo: *induce, persuade, prevail, get tenacious tough, stout, *strong, sturdy, stalwart

Ana dogged, pertinacious, *obstinate, stubborn: resolute, staunch, steadfast, true (see FAITHFUL): persevering, persisting (see PERSEVERE)

tenacity resolution, spirit, mettle, *courage

Ana pluck, grit, guts, sand, *fortitude, backbone: hardihood, audacity, nerve (see TEMERITY)

tend, attend, mind, watch are comparable when they mean to take charge of or look after someone or something especially as a duty or in return for remuneration. Tend usually retains some notion of an earlier sense in which it means to pay attention; hence, it is appropriately used in situations to which this notion is relevant. Often it is used in reference to menial, unskilled, or routine employments and then typically takes for its object something that requires attention (as in anticipating wishes or needs, looking out for accidents, mishaps, or signs of danger, or maintaining effective mechanical operation); thus, one who tends a lock is employed to work the devices adjusting the level of the water in the canal when a boat approaches; a shepherd is one who tends a flock of sheep; a stoker tends a furnace and supplies it with fuel when needed <standard roses tended by her hands—Meredith> Tend is used in reference to the care of persons when a menial or a ministering rather than a professional relationship is implied <employ a girl to tend to the children for a few hours each day> <sacrificing her leisure to tend the sick and helpless poor in their homes> Attend, which is more likely to be colored by a sense meaning to take charge, is appropriate when the services given are of a professional character or are the prerogatives of a post that one holds as a mark of honor or merit <the new doctor attended the governor in his last illness> Mind is closer to tend than to attend, but it distinctively suggests a guarding or protecting (as from harm, injury, or failure)  <the men . . . were gone to dinner: I stayed to mind the furnace—Edgeworth> Watch (see also SEE 2) may come close to mind, but it tends to imply a more constant or more professional relationship and to suggest a more definite need of vigilance and usually the intention of forestalling danger <employed a man to watch the factory when the machines were idle> <wilt thou receive this weighty trust when I am o'er the sea? To watch and ward my castle strong, and to protect my land—Scott>

Ana *defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard: *nurture, nurture, foster, cherish, cultivate tendency, trend, drift, tenor can mean a movement or course having a particular direction and character or the direction and character which such a movement or course takes. Tendency usually implies an inherent or acquired inclination in a person or thing that causes him or it to move in a definite direction so long as no one or nothing interferes. Often, when used in reference to persons, the word means little more than leaning, propensity, or disposition  <he worked to destroy the tendency to dreams in himself—Anderson> More often, especially when used in reference to groups or communities or their activities or the course or direction they take with or without consciousness or intent, the term implies a driving force behind the direction or course taken and an insusceptibility to its being controlled or changed <gave the King a policy at once plausible and insidious, temporizing and yet thick with tendency—Hackett> <the whole tendency of evolution is towards a diminishing birthrate—Ellis> <the tendencies which Lycurgus had endeavored to repress by external regulation reasserted themselves—Dickinson> Trend is used primarily in reference to something that follows an irregular or winding course and denotes the general direction maintained in spite of these irregularities <jagged ranges of mountains with a north and south trend> In its extended use trend may differ from tendency in implying a direction subject to change through the interposition of a sufficiently strong force or agency, in implying a course taken at a given time by something subject to change and fluctuation, or in implying the general direction followed by a changing or fluctuating thing throughout its entire course or within given limits of space or of time <the current trends toward intolerance and the garrison state—Mower> <Aristotle, the most balanced of all the Greek thinkers and the best exponent of the normal trend of their ideas—Dickinson> Drift may apply to a tendency whose direction or course is determined by such external influences as a wind or the movement of flowing water or a fashion or a state of feeling <the drift of public opinion went steadily against him—Parrington> <stoutly opposed the drift toward national prohibition and equal suffrage—Sam Acheson> but it may apply also to the direction or course taken by something (as speech, writing, or teaching) that has a meaning, a purpose, or an objective which is not definitely stated or made clear but which is inferable; in this sense the word is scarcely distinguishable from intention, purport, or import <for the drift of the Maker is dark, an Isis hid by a veil—Tennyson> <write it down . . . and then maybe I can get the drift of it—Stafford> <I see the whole drift of your argument—Goldsmith> Tenor is a very close synonym of drift in this latter sense but it more often refers to utterances or documents and carries a much stronger implication of clearness of meaning or purport <the general tenor . . . of the talks—Bernard Smith> Both in this sense and in its more common sense of a course or movement having a particular clearly observable direction tenor carries a strong implication of continuity in that course and of absence of fluctuation in its direction; therefore it frequently suggests unaltered, often unalterable, procedure <along the cool sequestered vale of life they kept the noiseless tenor of their way—Gray> <the village . . . was . . . away from the main road and the tenor of its simple agricultural economy had not been disturbed—Iengar> <even a foible is forgiven so long as it ruffles not the calm tenor of respectability—Gogarty>

Ana *leaning, propensity, penchant, proclivity; inclination, disposition, predisposition (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE): bent, turn, genius, aptitude (see GIFT) tender adj Tender, compassionate, sympathetic, warm, warmhearted, responsive are comparable when they mean expressing or expressive of feeling that reveals affectionate interest in another especially in his joys, sorrows, or welfare. Tender implies a sensitiveness to influences that awaken gentle emotions (as love, affection, pity, or kindness) and often a capacity for expressing such emotions with a delicacy and gentleness that are especially grateful to the person concerned <his mother was very tender with him . . . she saw the effort it was costing—D. H. Lawrence> <the inflections of their voices, when they were talking to each other very privately, were often tender, and these sudden surprising tendernesses secretly thrilled both of them—Bennett> Compassionate implies a temperament or a disposition that is either easily moved by the sufferings or hardships of another or is quick to show pity with tenderness or mercy <not cold and blaming . . . but an older and wiser brother, very compassionate—Sinclair Lewis> <to wax compassionate over a bird, and remain hard as flint to a beast, is possible only to humanity—Replier> Sympathetic is a more comprehensive term than compassionate; it implies a temperament or a disposition that enables one to enter into the life of another and share his sorrows, his joys, his interests, his antipathies, and his ways of thinking and feeling and to give that other the impression that he is not alone or that he is being fairly and justly understood <thus a tête-à-tête with a man of similar tastes, who is just and yet sympathetic, critical yet appreciative . . . is a high intellectual pleasure—Benson> <though some considered her arrogant and forbidding, I found her personality sympathetic—Edmund Wilson> Sympathetic is also applicable to attitudes or treatments that reveal a capacity for appraising or treating men and their experiences with great fairness and understanding  Warm implies a capacity for feeling and expressing love, affection, or interest with depth, ardor, or fervency; it suggests less softness of feeling or compassion than tender, but more heartiness, cordiality, or force  <we common people are all one way or the other—warm or cold, passionate or frigid—Hardy>  Warmhearted differs little from warm in meaning, but it usually carries a stronger implication of generosity, unselfishness, and, often, compassionateness <she is warmhearted, impulsive, kind, and independent—Kaplan> <his portrait of the metropolis is warmhearted and accurate—Bracker> Responsive differs from the preceding terms in usually suggesting sensitiveness to another's display of tenderness, compassion, sympathy, or warmth and a capacity for responding to that emotion; it stresses impressionableness and suggests a reaction, rather than a taking of the initiative <rushed to Moscow as the new British ambassador in the hope of striking a more responsive chord among the Bolsheviks—Shirer> <she took up life, and became alert to the world again, responsive, like a ship in full sail, to every wind that blew—Rose Macaulay>

Ana gentle, lenient, mild, *soft: humane, benevolent, *charitable, altruistic: *pitiful, piteous

Ant callous: severe tender vb *offer, proffer, present, prefer

Ana propose, purpose, design (see INTEND): *suggest, intimate tender n *overture, approach, advance, bid tenet *doctrine, dogma

Ana belief, conviction, persuasion, view (see OPINION):

*principle, fundamental, axiom tenor drift, trend, *tendency

Ana movement, *motion, move: procedure, proceeding

(see PROCESS): *meaning, significance, import tense adj 1 *tight, taut

Ana strained (see corresponding noun at STRAIN): nervous, unquiet, uneasy, jittery (see IMPATIENT)

Ant slack

2 *stiff, rigid, inflexible, stark, wooden

Ana tough, tenacious, stout (see STRONG): *firm, hard

Ant expansive —Con *loose, relaxed, lax, slack: *limp, flaccid, flabby tension 1 *stress, strain, pressure

2 equilibrium, equipoise, *balance, poise tentative *provisional

Ana *temporary, ad interim, acting: testing, trying, demonstrating, proving (see PROVE)

Ant definitive

tenuous *thin, rare, slender, slim, slight

Ana ethereal, aerial, *airy

Ant dense

tergiversation *ambiguity, equivocation, double entendre term n 1 end, confine, bound, *limit

2 *word, vocable

3 in plural form terms *condition, stipulation, provision, proviso, reservation, strings

Ana restriction, limit (see corresponding verbs at LIMIT): requisite, prerequisite, *requirement termagant *virago, scold, shrew, vixen, amazon terminal adj final, concluding, *last, latest, eventual, ultimate

Ana closing, ending, terminating, concluding (see CLOSE)

Ant initial terminate end, *close, conclude, finish, complete

Ana *abolish, extinguish, abate: *stop, cease, discontinue termination *end, ending, terminus

Ana result, issue, outcome (see EFFECT): concluding or conclusion, completion, closing or close (see corresponding verbs at CLOSE)

Ant inception: source terminus *end, termination, ending

Ant starting point —Con beginning, commencement, start (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN) terrestrial *earthly, earthy, mundane, worldly, sublunary

Ant celestial terrible terrific, frightful, dreadful, *fearful, awful, horrible, horrific, shocking, appalling

Ana frightening, alarming, startling (see FRIGHTEN): agitating, upsetting, disturbing, perturbing (see DISCOMPOSE) terrific terrible, frightful, dreadful, *fearful, horrible, horrific, awful, shocking, appalling

Ana frightening, alarming, terrorizing (see FRIGHTEN): agitating, upsetting, disquieting (see DISCOMPOSE)

terrify *frighten, fright, scare, alarm, terrorize, startle

Ana agitate, upset, perturb, disquiet (see DISCOMPOSE): *dismay, appall, horrify, daunt: cow, *intimidate, browbeat, bulldoze

Con *calm, compose, soothe, tranquilize territory domain, province, *field, sphere, bailiwick

Ana region, tract, *area, zone, belt: limits, confines, bounds (see singular nouns at LIMIT) terror panic, consternation, *fear, dread, fright, alarm, dismay, horror, trepidation

Ana apprehensiveness, fearfulness (see corresponding adjectives at FEARFUL): agitation, disquiet, perturbation, upsetting or upset (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): appalling, daunting, dismaying (see DISMAY) terrorize terrify, *frighten, fright, alarm, scare, startle, affray, affright

Ana *intimidate, cow, bulldoze, browbeat: coerce, compel, *force: drive, impel, *move: agitate, upset (see DISCOMPOSE)

terse *concise, succinct, laconic, summary, pithy, commendous

Ana *brief, short: compact, *close: *expressive, sententious, meaningful: *incisive, crisp, clear-cut test n trial, proof, demonstration (see under PROVE)

Ana examination, inspection, scrutiny (see under SCRUTINIZE): verification, substantiation, corroboration, confirmation (see corresponding verbs at CONFIRM) test vb try, *prove, demonstrate

Ana essay (see ATTEMPT vb): examine, inspect, *scrutinize: verify, substantiate, *confirm testimonial n recommendation, *credential, character, reference

Ana commendation (see corresponding verb at COMMEND): approval, endorsement (see corresponding verbs at APPROVE) testimony *evidence, deposition, affidavit

Ana trial, test, proof, demonstration (see under PROVE): witnessing or witness, attesting or attestation, certifying or certification, vouching for (see corresponding verbs at CERTIFY) testy *irascible, choleric, splenetic, touchy, cranky, cross Ana *irritable, peevish, snappish, waspish: hasty, sudden, impetuous (see PRECIPITATE): captious, carping, caviling, faultfinding (see CRITICAL) text topic, argument, theme, *subject, matter, subject matter, motive, motif, leitmotiv thalassic *aquatic, marine, oceanic, neritic, pelagic, abyssal thankful *grateful

Ana appreciating or appreciative, valuing, prizing, cherishing, treasuring (see corresponding verbs at APPRECIATE): satisfied, content (see under SATISFY)

Ant thankless

thaumaturgy *magic, sorcery, witchcraft, witchery, wizardry, alchemy thaw vb melt, *liquefy, deliquesce, fuse

Ant freeze

theatrical adj *dramatic, dramaturgic, melodramatic, histrionic

Ana *artificial, factitious: formal, conventional, *ceremonial, ceremonious: affecting, pretending, assuming, simulating, feigning (see ASSUME): *showy, pretentious, ostentatious theft, larceny, robbery, burglary mean the act or crime of stealing, though they have differences in legal application. The same differences in implications and applications are observable in the agent nouns thief, larcener or larcenist, robber, burglar, denoting one who steals. Theft and thief are the most general and the least technical of these terms; they imply the taking and removing of another's property usually by stealth or without his knowledge and always without his consent. The terms are often so broad that they may include reference to any taking of another's property without his consent (as by pilfering, purloining, swindling, embezzling, or plagiarizing) (the theft of a purse) (the theft of the city's money by grafters) (a thief removed his watch from his pocket) Larceny and the less common agent nouns larcener and larcenist are legal terms implying direct theft but excluding such specialized forms as swindling, embezzlement, and plagiarizing. The terms connote an unlawful or felonious act, a removal of another's property from the place where it belongs, and complete possession, even for a moment, by the thief (the shoplifter was not apprehended until she had left the store, so that there would be proof of larceny) (the maid was found guilty of larceny) Grand larceny and petty larceny are common in ordinary use as indicating respectively a theft of an appreciable amount and a theft of a negligible amount. Robbery and robber in their precise legal use imply the taking of another's property from his person or in his presence by means of violence or intimidation (highway robbery) (the paymaster was attacked and the payroll money was seized by armed robbers) Burglary and burglar in legal use imply a breaking and entering with an intent to commit a felony, usually that of larceny or robbery. In the laws of different states and nations the detailed specifications of the crime, for example, the time of occurrence (nighttime often being stipulated) or the actual commission of the felony, may or may not be considered material to the charge (the burglary of their home was committed during their absence for the evening) (she lived in constant fear of burglars)

theme 1 text, topic, argument, *subject, matter, subject matter, motive, motif, leitmotiv

2 composition, paper, *essay, article then *therefore, hence, consequently, accordingly, so theorem *principle, axiom, fundamental, law

theoretical, speculative, academic can be applied to minds, types of reasoning or philosophizing, or branches of learning as meaning concerned principally with abstractions and theories, sometimes at the expense of practical basis or application. Theoretical in its most usual and nonderogatory sense applies to branches of learning (as sciences) which deal with the inferences drawn from observed facts and from the results of experiments and with the laws or theories that explain them (the distinguishing feature of theoretical science is the anticipation of facts from experience—Georg von Wright) In this sense the term is often opposed to applied, which describes branches of learning which have to do with the putting of such laws and theories into use (as in mechanics, in industry, or in social reform) (theoretical versus applied chemistry) (applied ethics is grounded upon theoretical ethics) (a purely theoretical definition would be that a person is emotionally sensitive when many stimuli produce emotions in him—Russell) But theoretical often implies a divorce from actuality or reality that makes one unable to see things as they are and usually makes him see them only in the terms of preexistent ideas or theories. In this sense it is opposed to practical (seems compelled to establish that . . . the book does have great practical importance in spite of its predominantly theoretical character—M. G. White) (things that had seemed drearily theoretical, dry, axiomatic, platitudinal, showed themselves to be great generalizations from a torrent of human effort and mortal endeavor—Benson) Speculative (see also THOUGHTFUL 1) may go further than theoretical in suggesting a deep interest in theorizing or in forming theories or hypotheses and often additionally implies a daring use of the imagination (the rights of man . . . were necessarily more abstract, more detached from usage and concrete applicability, more open to speculative interpretation—Sabine) (so vaguely speculative are they that their author found it necessary to explain them in lengthy prefaces—W. J. Fisher) Often, however, there is very little difference evident in the use of these terms (was a great inventor and builder, but in the speculative and theoretic side of science he had little interest—Buchan)

<this is about as far as speculative chemistry will take one in this field; and the rest of the subject is experimental—Furnas> Academic (see also PEDANTIC) carries a much stronger implication of a habit of looking at a thing, or things in general, abstractly, without reference to real life or practical concerns, and often in terms of the theories and dicta of a particular school (as of literature or art) <academic thinkers and schoolmen, men whom the free spaces of thought frightened and who felt safe only behind secure fences—Parrington> <apart from its academic tendency to divorce form from matter, I cannot believe that any such theory of poetry, built on a neurosis, is admirable or adequate—Day Lewis>

Ana conjectural, hypothetical (see SUPPOSED): postulated, premised, presupposed (see PRESUPPOSE)

theory *hypothesis, law

Ana judgment, conclusion, deduction, inference (see under INFER): postulate, presumption, assumption, presupposition (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ant practice

therefore, hence, consequently, then, accordingly, so are adverbs used as connectives to indicate logical or causal sequence. They vary in the degree of closeness of connection suggested as well as in the kind of sequence implied. Therefore and hence are employed chiefly to indicate that what follows is a necessary deduction from what has preceded. Therefore commonly introduces a conclusion <all men are rational beings, John Jones is a man, therefore John Jones is a rational being> Hence, though often interchangeable with therefore, stresses the importance of what precedes <both statements may be false, but both cannot be true since they are contradictory; hence, if A be true, B is false, or if B be true, A is false> Consequently, though often used to introduce a deduction, does not always imply necessity in the inference. Rather it suggests good grounds for the conclusion or implies a strong antecedent probability <he said he would come; consequently I expect him> It also may indicate that what follows is a result of what precedes <he said he would come; consequently I am waiting for him> Then, when used to indicate logical sequence, is employed chiefly in the consequent clause or conclusion in a conditional sentence <if A is true, then B is false> Accordingly usually indicates logical or causal sequence but connotes naturalness or usualness in what follows as a consequence rather than necessity or inevitability <he said he was hungry; accordingly they shared their meager lunch with him> So is typically found in more casual expression and is often indefinite in its suggestion of which kind of sequence is indicated <the day was fine and so we set out> thesis dissertation, treatise, monograph, disquisition, *discourse

Ana *exposition: *argumentation, disputation: article, paper, *essay thespian *actor, player, impersonator, trouper, performer, mummer, mime, mimic thick 1 thick, thickset, *stocky, chunky, stubby, squat, dumpy

Ana *broad, wide, deep

Ant thin —Con slender, slim, slight, tenuous, rare (see THIN adj): *lean, spare

2 compact, *close, dense

Ana condensed, compressed, contracted (see CONTRACT vb): concentrated, compacted (see COMPACT vb)

3 close, confidential, chummy, *familiar, intimate thickset *stocky, thick, chunky, stubby, squat, dumpy

Ana bulky, *massive, massy: *fleshy, stout, portly, plump thief robber, burglar (see under THEFT) thin adj Thin, slender, slim, slight, tenuous, rare are in general referable not only to measure in width or amount but also to quantity or quality and agree in meaning not broad, not thick, not abundant, nor dense. Thin basically implies comparatively little extension between two surfaces of a thing    or the comparatively small diameter of a cylindrical or nearly cylindrical thing in proportion to its height or length  <the thin trunk of a tree> <thin wire> In its extended senses the term usually implies the lack of the flesh or substance that fills out a thing to its normal or usual extent and gives it fullness, richness, substantiality, compactness, or density  <thin wine>   <thin hair> <thin, pebbly earth, which was merely the rock pulverized by weather—Cather> <like the air of a mountaintop—thin, but pure and bracing—Inge> <would make a sound as thin and sweet as trees in country lanes—Millay> Slender, as applied to the bodies of men and of animals, implies leanness or spareness without any suggestion of gauntness or lankiness and usually carries a distinct connotation of gracefulness and of good proportions   <slender white hands—Anderson> Slender is preferred to thin in describing things of narrow extension when the thinness is an element of beauty and gracefulness of line  <the slender legs of a Sheraton chair> <the pure slender lines of water falling from the abrupt wooded crag—Binyon> In its extended use slender is often employed with little distinction from thin, but it is often preferred when quantity or amount rather than quality is stressed  <packed up her slender belongings—Kipling> <with slender forces he had to face the formidable Sextus—Buchan> <such a vision [of life] as might come as the result of few or slender experiences—T. S. Eliot> Slim differs little from slender when applied to the figures of persons or animals; it may sometimes suggest fragility or gauntness rather than grace, and lack of flesh rather than excellent proportions. In its extended senses, however, slim usually carries a clearer implication of meagerness or scantiness than slender, which, though it suggests smallness in amount or quantity, implies less commonly than slim a falling short of adequacy or sufficiency; thus, slim resources are by suggestion more meager than slender resources <he has a slim chance of recovery> <his hopes for success are slim> <there was a slim attendance at the meeting> Slight through most of its variations in meaning carries a more obvious implication of smallness than of thinness; when applied to persons, it seldom suggests height or length, as slender usually does or slim sometimes does  When applied to things, it is often derogatory and usually implies a failure to come up to a level of what is commensurate, adequate, or significant   <his success was slight> <there is . . . ground to recognize a slight intellectual superiority in the upper social class—Ellis> <he liked the folksong, because it was a slight thing, born of immediate impulse—Huxley> Tenuous basically implies extreme thinness or even absence of perceptible thickness; the term is literally applicable to things (as lines, cords, or wires) of great length or height and of minute diameter <the most tenuous of threads> <as tenuous as the filament of a spider's web> or to fabrics and textiles which are exceedingly sheer or gauzy <tenuous fabrics such as tulle and chiffon> In its extended senses tenuous often describes something which covers an expanse but lacks density, compactness, or solidity (some [stars] are extremely dense and compact, others extremely tenuous—Eddington) <tenuous evening mists—Darrow> or something which is so finespun or so fine-drawn as to be exceedingly subtle, abstruse, or visionary (a tenuous idealism—Binyon) <poetry . . . so tenuous in thought and feeling that only the most exquisite diction can justify its perpetuation in cold print—Grandgent> <I did not despise the golden, tenuous imaginings . . . starting in my own spirit—Galsworthy> Rare in the sense of rarefied (see also INFREQUENT, CHOICE) is applied chiefly to gases and especially to air <he was miles high . . . nearly slumping in the rare air—Cozzens> In its uncommon extended use it suggests tenuity or sometimes extreme exaltation or elevation <reared in the rarest air of German intellectualism—Time> <if we try to express almost any poems of his in prose, we find it impossible; its rare spirit evaporates in the process—Day Lewis>

Ana *lean, spare, lank, lanky, gaunt: *meager, exiguous, scanty: cadaverous, pinched, wasted, *haggard: attenuated, extenuated, diluted (see THIN vb)

Ant thick

thin vb Thin, attenuate, extenuate, dilute, rarefy. Thin is the most inclusive of these terms and is interchangeable with any of the others, though not without some loss of precision or of specific connotations. Basically it implies reduction in thickness or in density; in extended use it implies a comparable diminution (as of strength, depth, or intensity) <thin a forest by removing surplus trees> <thin wine by adding water> <the voice thins when one raises its pitch> <thin paint with turpentine> <constant use thins silver> Attenuate implies thinning as the result of some such process as drawing out, spinning fine, or culturing (as a strain of bacteria) repeatedly or as the effect of conditions (as disease or starvation) which emaciate <attenuate wire by drawing it through successively smaller holes> <hammer brass in order to attenuate it>  <attenuate a virus by heating it> <the powerful frame attenuated by spare living—Dickens> In its frequent extended use attenuate implies the loss of properties that are necessary to a thing's strength, richness, effectiveness, or vitality, and it often connotes overrefining, oversubtilizing, or overemphasis of an opposing quality <we may reject and reject till we attenuate history into sapless meagerness—Palgrave> <if she had had a little more self-control she would have attenuated the emotion to nothing by sheer reasoning—Hardy> <illusions which science can attenuate or destroy, but which it is powerless to enrich—Krutch> Extenuate in a somewhat learned use can suggest attrition either by literally emaciating and exhausting (see also PALLIATE) <peasants . . . so extenuated by hunger that they could scarcely hold the spade—Lecky> or by a gradual diminishing of a thing's importance or significance <the . . . tendency . . . to extenuate the responsibility of human nature, not merely on the moral side, but equally on the spiritual side—Mackenzie> Dilute implies a thinning of what is concentrated by the addition or, in extended use, sometimes by the influence of something that weakens it, neutralizes it, or destroys its vigor or intensity <dilute peppermint oil with alcohol> <dilute hydrochloric acid with water> <the pioneer spirit has been diluted by new race mixtures, its confidence shaken by new social trends—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.> <the rough, spontaneous conversation of men they [clergymen] do not hear, but only a mincing and diluted speech—Emerson> Rarefy implies a thinning in density and usually an expansion in volume or a decrease in weight or pressure <the rarefied air of mountainous regions> <the expansive power of moisture rarefied by heat—Macaulay>

The word occurs in extended use chiefly with reference to ideas, emotions, and intellectual powers, sometimes suggesting their spiritualization or refinement and the elimination of all grossness and impurity and sometimes imputing to them a vaporous or tenuous quality <plain truths lose much of their weight when they are rarefied into subtleties—Cudworth> <love is a gentle flame that rarefies and expands her whole being—Hazlitt>

Ana reduce, lessen, diminish, *decrease: *liquefy, melt Ant thicken

thing 1 matter, concern, business, *affair

2 Thing, object, article are comprehensive terms applicable to whatever is apprehended as having actual, distinct, and demonstrable existence. They vary, however, in their range of application. Thing is the term of widest reference. In its most inclusive sense it need not imply direct knowledge through the senses but is equally applicable to something so known and to something the existence of which is inferred from its signs or its effects; thus, one thinks of the state, the church, literature, and the law as things rather than as ideas or abstractions; a friend's affection is as real a thing as is his house or his hand; one distinguishes a word from the thing it names <name the things that are on this table> <wanted to do the right thing>  In somewhat more restricted use thing can denote specifically an entity having existence in space or time as distinguished from one existing only in thought <virtue is not a thing but an attribute of a thing> or in still more restricted use an inanimate entity and especially a material possession as distinguished from living beings and especially persons <more interested in things than in human beings> Often the word is used idiomatically to mention without specifically identifying an item that cannot or need not be further identified or whose nature is implicit in the context; thus, in "be sure to wear warm things," clothing is implied; in "bring in the tea things," the necessary collection of dishes, implements, and foods is implied (what's that thing in your hand?) Occasionally thing may be used in reference to persons when contempt is expressed or derogation intended <do you call that thing a man?> Object has for its primary implications externality to the mind or existence outside the observer. In philosophical and scientific use it is applied to something that is put before one as an entity capable of being seen, observed, or contemplated  <modern physicists are concentrating on the atom as an object of study> This basic implication of object is its chief distinction from thing when either word is used to denote something that can be perceived by one or more of the senses. For object in this, its ordinary sense, is applied chiefly to what has body and usually substance and shape <he groped his way in the darkness with hands outstretched to detect any objects in his path> <in the glare of the torch they saw moving objects in the distance> Article is the most limited in its range of application, being used chiefly of objects that are thought of as members of a group, kind, or class <meat is an important article of food> <articles of merchandise>  <articles of apparel>

Ana *item, detail, particular think 1 Think, conceive, imagine, fancy, realize, envisage, envision are comparable when they mean to form an idea or notion of something in the mind. Think, the most general and least explicit word of this group, may imply nothing more than the entrance of an idea or notion into one's mind <please do not think of it> but often it suggests some consideration or reflection typically resulting in a decision or judgment (<think one plot better than another> <think that a change in occupation is desirable> or it implies a conscious mental act such as a recalling or recollection <try to think how the accident happened> or a bringing of a definite picture or a clear idea into one's mind <one cannot think infinity> <think what a sacrifice he has made> or the framing of a purpose or intention <he . . . thought he would send for his mother; and then he thought he would not—Hardy> Conceive implies a bringing forth in the mind of an organized product of thought (as an idea, a plan, a project, or a design); often the term suggests the growth and development of that idea as the mind dwells upon it and brings it into being (it was among the ruins of the Capitol that I first conceived the idea of a work which has amused and exercised near twenty years of my life—Gibbon) <they're philosophers . . . They can't help conceiving the highest good in terms of intelligence and morality—Wouk> Imagine carries a stronger implication than conceive does of visualization or of definitely creating a mental image of a thing; thus, one can conceive, but scarcely imagine, a world of more than three dimensions <the girl was in his mind . . . He couldn't help it, imagined seeing her in the things that were hanging on the line—Malamud> <I could imagine easily original plots for stories or plays, but never received any impulse to write them—Æ> Fancy (see also LIKE) may differ little from imagine, but it commonly suggests unreality or a degree of untruth in the idea conceived or the image developed; sometimes it even implies a tendency to cut oneself off from facts and to be governed by one's dreams or desires <fancied himself as an infallible prophet . . . and master of such powers that they awed even him—Ogdon> <some fancied she might marry again, but others didn't think she ever would, being too independent—Phillipotts> Realize (see also REALIZE 1) implies a very vivid conception or imagination through which a grasp of the significance of a thing is attained <burning with the passion of infinitely realized and therefore eternally restless love—Sullivan> <people say that they cannot realize these big numbers. But that is the last thing anyone wants to do with big numbers—to realize them—Eddington> Envisage and envision imply a conception or imagination actually or potentially so clear or so detailed that one does or can contemplate it as though it were before one <education . . . as Hitler envisaged it, was not to be confined to stuffy classrooms but to be furthered by a Spartan, political and martial training—Shirer> <envisaging the future without fear—Bennett> <he had envisioned the starred face of the night with high exaltation and noble inspiration—Wolfe>

Ana *consider, weigh, study, contemplate: *understand, comprehend, appreciate: surmise, *conjecture, guess

2 Think, cogitate, reflect, reason, speculate, deliberate can all mean to use one's powers of conception, judgment, or inference in regard to any matter or subject which concerns one or interests one. Think is the general term implying mental activity for the sake of forming ideas or of reaching conclusions; the term need not suggest closeness of application, clearness in the ideas formed, or correctness in the conclusions reached, though when used without qualification it often does suggest the attainment or approximation of these <when I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child: but when I became a man, I put away childish things—I Cor 13:11> <colleges are places where at least some men learn to think—Lippmann> <I am even prepared to be told that when you paid the price of this book you were paying me to think for you—Shaw> Cogitate places more stress on the process than upon the results of thinking; it is often used to suggest the appearance or the atmosphere of profound but not necessarily productive thinking <still cogitating and looking for an explanation in the fire—Dickens> <Mrs. Berry had not cogitated long ere she pronounced distinctly and without a shadow of dubiosity: "My opinion is . . ."—Meredith> Reflect usually implies a turning of one's thoughts back upon or back to something that exists, has occurred, or needs reexamining; it implies quiet, unhurried, and serious consideration or study <stood reflecting on the circumstances of the preceding hours—Hardy> <all the most important things in his life, [he] sometimes reflected, had been determined by chance—Cather> <began to . . . study its organization, reflect on its psychology and political techniques and ponder the results—Shirer> Reason implies consecutive logical thought, beginning with a postulate, a premise, or definite data or evidence and proceeding through inferences drawn from these to a conclusion or judgment <since, where all is uncertain, we must reason from what is probable of human nature—Quiller-Couch> <no man as near death as I was feeling, could, I reasoned, be absorbed by such trifles—Lucas> Speculate implies the processes of reasoning but stresses either the uncertainty of the premises or the incompleteness of the data and therefore usually imputes a hypothetical or theoretical character to the conclusions reached <the two women speculated with deep anxiety on whether or not little Pamela had died of exposure—Cheever> <it is interesting to speculate whether it is not a misfortune that two of the greatest masters of diction in our language, Milton and Dryden, triumph with a dazzling disregard of the soul—T. S. Eliot> Deliberate suggests slow and careful thought or reasoning and fair consideration of various aspects in an attempt to reach a conclusion often on a matter of public interest <lawmakers . . . can—and do—spend huge amounts of time deliberating matters of absolute insignificance—Armbrister> <please you, deliberate a day or two—Shak.> <the future relations of the two countries could now be deliberated on with a hope of settlement—Froude>

Ana *ponder, meditate, muse, ruminate: *infer, deduce, conclude, judge thirst vb hunger, pine, yearn, *long, hanker

Ana covet, crave, *desire, wish, want though, although, albeit introduce subordinate clauses stating something that is or may be true in spite of what is asserted in the main clause. Though, the most widely used of these words, can introduce a clause that states an established fact or one that offers only a supposition, either a hypothesis or an admission of possibility or probability <though philology was Bede's chief interest and concern, he by no means stopped there—Malone> <remembered a great deal of classical literature, badly taught though it was—Hight> <let us not defer our trip, though it rain tomorrow> Although, which is freely interchangeable with though, is often preferred when it introduces an assertion of fact and when the subordinate clause precedes the main clause <although they worked hard . . . their movements seemed painfully slow—Forester> <although the war was still on, the diamond trade began to show signs of recovery—Hahn> Albeit is especially appropriate when the idea of admitting something that seems a contradiction is stressed  <passages of moving, albeit restrained, eloquence—N. Y. Herald Tribune Book Rev.>

thought *idea, concept, conception, notion, impression Ana *opinion, view, sentiment, belief, conviction, persuasion thoughtful 1 Thoughtful, reflective, speculative, contemplative, meditative, pensive can be applied to persons or their moods, attitudes, expressions, and utterances as meaning characterized by or showing the power to engage in thought, especially in concentrated thinking. Thoughtful may imply either the act of thinking concentratedly or the disposition to apply oneself to the careful and serious consideration of problems or questions at issue (he has a shrewd rather than a thoughtful face) (Marlowe—not excepting Shakespeare or Chapman, the most thoughtful and philosophical mind, though immature, among the Elizabethan dramatists—T. S. Eliot) (a thoughtful book on a serious subject—Seltzer) Reflective differs from thoughtful in its stronger implication of orderly processes of thought, such as analysis and logical reasoning, and in its suggestion of a definite aim, such as the understanding of a thing's nature or of its relation to other things or the reaching of a definite conclusion (men of reflective and analytical habit, eager to rationalize its [plutocracy's] instincts and to bring it into some sort of relationship to the main streams of human thought—Mencken) Speculative implies a tendency or inclination to think about things of which direct knowledge is either impossible or so limited that any conclusions are bound to be uncertain (economics is regarded by many persons as a speculative science) (speculative writing about the state—Frankfurter) Hence the term often implies theorizing or conjecturing without consideration of the evidence or with little attention to the evidence (about a thousand practical and positive topics the Frenchman, who speaks from experience and examination, finds our views speculative and immature—Brownell) (the philosophical background of Chinese culture has always tended to create reflective rather than speculative thinkers—Hart) Contemplative carries a stronger implication than the other words of an attention fixed on the object of one's thoughts; it may imply as its object something perceivable by the senses or something abstract yet comprehensible by the mind, or it may suggest a habit of mind (a contemplative thinker, withdrawn from active life—Theodore Spencer) (practical curiosity becomes contemplative and examines things for their own sake when . . . man . . . having arrived at the stage of ideas and thought, applies them to the data presented by sensible experience—Alexander) (the contemplative life which is concerned with human feeling and thought and beauty—Ruskin) Meditative, except in religious use, where it comes very close to contemplative, usually implies a tendency to ponder or muse over something without necessarily implying any such intellectual purpose as understanding a thing or reaching a conclusion regarding it. The term therefore often comes close to thoughtful, though it usually implies some consecutive reasoning and sometimes suggests pleasure rather than seriousness in the exercise of thought (indulge in many a meditative walk) (a meditative temperament) (sympathies . . . that steal upon the meditative mind, and grow with thought—Wordsworth) Pensive is not always clearly distinguishable from meditative, though at times it carries a stronger suggestion of dreaminess, of wistfulness, or of melancholy (for oft, when on my couch I lie in vacant or in pensive mood—Wordsworth) (silent and pensive, idle, restless, slow—Byron)

Ana *serious, earnest, grave, sober: engrossed, absorbed, *intent: *abstracted, preoccupied

2 Thoughtful, considerate, attentive are applied to persons and their acts in the sense of being mindful of the comfort or happiness of others. Thoughtful usually implies unselfish concern for others or the capacity for anticipating another's needs (in his thoughtful wish of escorting them through the streets of the rough, riotous town—Gaskell) Considerate stresses concern for the feelings of others or thoughtfulness in preventing or in relieving pain, suffering, or distress (the French poor people are very considerate where they see suffering—Meredith) (too courteous and considerate to make stubborn subordinates bend properly to his will—Nevens & Commager) Attentive emphasizes continuous thoughtfulness or implies repeated acts of kindness or courtesy (Emmy had always been good and attentive to him. It was she who ministered to his comforts—Thackeray) (I was never more surprised than by his behavior to us. It was more than civil; it was really attentive—Austen)

Ana solicitous, concerned, careful, anxious (see under CARE): courteous, polite, gallant, chivalrous (see CIVIL)

Ant thoughtless thoughtless *careless, heedless, inadvertent

Ana rash, reckless, foolhardy (see ADVENTUROUS): *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof: lax, remiss, *negligent

Ant thoughtful

thrash vb 1 *beat, pound, pummel, buffet, baste, belabor

Ana *strike, smite, slug, slap

2 flourish, brandish, shake, *swing, wave

Ana wield, manipulate, swing, ply, *handle threadbare 1 *shabby, dilapidated, dingy, faded, seedy

Ana damaged, injured, impaired (see INJURE): worn (see HAGGARD)

2 shopworn, *trite, hackneyed, stereotyped

Ana antiquated, obsolete, archaic (see OLD): exhausted, depleted, drained, impoverished (see DEplete) threaten, menace both mean to announce or forecast (as by word or look) an impending or probable infliction (as an evil or an injury). Threaten basically implies an attempt to dissuade or influence by promising punishment or the infliction of reprisals upon those who disobey an injunction or perform acts objectionable to the speaker (the magistrates . . . solicited, commanded, threatened, urged—Milton) (another form of lying, which is extremely bad for the young, is to threaten punishments you do not mean to inflict—Russell) However the term has been so extended in its meaning that it is often used with reference to things (as events, conditions, or symptoms) which presage or otherwise indicate something, and typically something dire or disturbing, to be about to or likely to happen (overcast skies that threaten rain) (lived on the margin of survival, constantly threatened by famine and disease—Geddes) (without invoking the rule of strict construction I think that "so near as to obstruct" means so near as actually to obstruct—and not merely near enough to threaten a possible obstruction—Justice Holmes) Menace is a somewhat more literary term than threaten, and it carries a much weaker implication of an attempt to dissuade or influence and a much stronger suggestion of an alarming or a definitely hostile character or aspect (conditions that menace our liberty) (is it not experience which renders a dog apprehensive of pain, when you menace him?—Locke) (the devastating weapons which are at present being developed may menace every part of the world—Attlee)

Ana *intimidate, bulldoze, cow, browbeat: forebode, portend, presage, augur (see FORETELL): *warn, forewarn, caution thrifty economical, *sparing, frugal

Ana provident, prudent, foresighted (see under PRUDENT): saving, preserving, conserving (see SAVE)

Ant wasteful

thrill vb Thrill, electrify, enthuse are comparable when they mean to fill with emotions that stir or excite physically and mentally or to be stirred by such emotions. Thrill suggests pervasion by emotions that set one atingle or aquiver (as with pleasure, horror, or excitement); commonly it implies an agreeable sensation even when the exciting cause is potentially distressing or painful (a thrilling detective story) (by carefully copying what other people did, she would manage to get through . . . this thrilling, agonizing, exquisite ordeal—Sackville-West) (why should not mind be able to pass on to mind its thrilled sense of a storm or a flower . . .?—Montague) Electrify differs from thrill in suggesting effects comparable to those produced by an electric current that shocks rather than stuns; it implies a sudden, startling, and violent stimulation by a power that for the time being holds one obedient to its will or under its sway (the blue-eyed girl whose silvery tones and immense vitality had electrified audiences—Tomkins) (she was not eating anything, she was using up all her vitality to electrify these heavy lads into speech—Cather) Enthuse can be used effectively in respect to an arousing of enthusiasm in someone or an experiencing of enthusiasm about something (Lubichov, enthused by the music of his native land, beat his baton with more and more zest—Bambrick) (as a dogmatic theologian, the Bishop did not enthuse himself and he did not understand other people's enthusiasms—Frank O'Connor) (the War Dance [among Indians] was a ceremony to arouse the community and enthuse the warriors—Wissler)

Ana excite, stimulate, galvanize, quicken (see PROVOKE): *stir, arouse, rouse, rally: penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER): quiver, tremble, shiver (see SHAKE) thrive *succeed, prosper, flourish

Ana *increase, augment, multiply, enlarge

Ant languish

throb vb beat, *pulsate, pulse, palpitate throb n beat, pulsation, pulse, palpitation (see under PULSATE) throe *pain, ache, pang, twinge, stitch through n *crowd, press, crush, mob, rout, horde

Ana *multitude, army, host, legion: assembly, congregation, gathering, collection (see under GATHER) throatle vb *suffocate, asphyxiate, stifle, smother, choke, strangle through *by, with throw, cast, fling, hurl, pitch, toss, sling can all mean to cause to move swiftly forward, sideways, upward, or downward by a propulsive movement (as of the arm) or by means of a propelling instrument or agency. Throw, the general word, is often interchangeable with the others; basically it implies a distinctive propelling motion of the bent arm and wrist, but in practice it is applicable in respect to almost any propulsive action (people who live in glass houses should not throw stones) (the fire engine throws a long stream of water) (this gun throws a huge shell) (he threw off his coat) (the skeptic cannot throw his opponent if his own feet are in the air—Inge) Cast is sometimes interchangeable with throw, but it typically is used when what is thrown is light (cast a net) (cast dice) and is either directly aimed (cast his line in angling) or scattered more or less carefully (cast seed) or is thrown only in a figurative sense (cast a black look) Fling implies more violence and less control in propulsion than either of the preceding words; it often implies a force gained from strong emotion (as anger, contempt, or enthusiasm) (then he loathed his own beauty, and, flinging the mirror on the floor, crushed it into silver splinters beneath his heel—Wilde) (the opening pages irritated him . . . in the end, in exasperation, he flung them aside—Malamud) Hurl stresses driving and impetuous force that makes for speed and distance in throwing (him the Almighty Power hurled headlong flaming from the ethereal sky—Milton) Pitch sometimes means no more than to throw lightly or carelessly (could take up a sack of grain and with ease pitch it over a packsaddle—Zane Grey) (when you get your new outfit, pitch out that dress—Ethel Wilson) but distinctively it more than any of the preceding words stresses a sense of direction and a definite target in throwing (pitch horseshoes) (pitching hay onto the high load) (pitching matchbooks at a crack . . . was the favorite sport—James Jones) (possible . . . to run up to their enemy's lines and roll, bowl, or pitch their grenades among the legs of their opponents—Wintringham) Toss implies light, careless, or more or less aimless throwing (he . . . tossed me some pieces of money—Dickens) (she rested on a log and tossed the fresh chips—Frost) (toss a coin to decide who should go) The term often also suggests a throwing to and fro or up and down (an hour's play in tossing a ball) (they . . . discussed a doubt and tossed it to and fro—Tennyson) Sling suggests propelling with a sweeping or swinging motion, usually with force and suddenness (grabbed the boy's collar and slung him against the wall)

Ana drive, impel (see MOVE vb): propel, thrust, shove, *push: heave, raise, *lift, boost throwback *reversion, atavism throw up *belch, burp, vomit, disgorge, regurgitate, spew thrust vb *push, shove, propel

Ana *throw, cast, fling: drive, impel, *move: *enter, penetrate, pierce thud vb thump, knock, rap, *tap

Ana hit, *strike, smite: pound, *beat thud n thump, knock, rap, tap (see under TAP vb)

Ana slumping, falling (see FALL)

thump vb thud, knock, rap, *tap

Ana pound, *beat, belabor: punch, smite, *strike thump n thud, knock, rap, tap (see under TAP vb)

Ana pounding, beating, pummeling (see BEAT vb) thwart foil, *frustrate, baffle, balk, circumvent, outwit

Ana *hinder, impede, obstruct, block, bar: defeat, overcome, surmount (see CONQUER): check, curb, *restrain: *prevent, forestall, anticipate ticket n mark, brand, stamp, label, tag (see under MARK vb)

ticket vb *mark, brand, stamp, label, tag

Ana affix, attach, *fasten: append, *add tickle *please, regale, gratify, delight, rejoice, gladden

Ana divert, *amuse, entertain: *thrill, electrify tide n flood, *flow, stream, current, flux tidings *news, intelligence, advice tidy *neat, trim, trig, snug, shipshape, spick-and-span

Ana *orderly, methodical, systematic

Ant untidy —Con *slipshod, slovenly, sloppy, unkempt, disheveled tie n 1 *bond, band

2 *draw, stalemate, deadlock, standoff

Ana equality, equivalence (see corresponding adjectives at SAME) tie vb Tie, bind both mean to make fast or secure. They are often used interchangeably without marked loss, but since in both their primary and extended senses they carry fundamentally distinct connotations, greater precision in their use is often possible. Tie basically implies the use of a cord or rope to attach one thing that may wander or move to another that is stable (I'll tie them [our horses] in the wood—Shak.) Bind, on the other hand, implies the use of a band or bond (see BOND n) to attach two or more things so that they are held firmly together or brought into union (gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles—Mt 13:30) (bind a sprained ankle)  <bind a person hand and foot> In extended use, especially when what is tied or bound is a person, both terms imply a deprivation of liberty and an imposed restraint. Tie, however, specifically suggests a being held down by something stronger than oneself and an inability to get away or free oneself <tied to a job> <tied to an unsympathetic wife> Bind, on the other hand, either suggests a being held together in a close union, for the sake of strength or mutual support <the common danger bound all classes together> <and vows of faith each to the other bind—Shelley> or a being held down by such a bond, as a pledge, a compact, a duty, or an obligation, or by a bond of blood, marriage, or friendship <and vows, that bind the will, in silence made—Wordsworth> “Are you engaged?” . . . “There’s someone . . . We don’t want to spoil things by having anything definite and binding”—Gibbons>

Ana *fasten, attach: *secure, rivet, anchor, moor: *join, connect, link

Ant untie

tier *line, row, rank, file, echelon tiff n *quarrel, bickering, spat, squabble, wrangle, altercation

Ana scrap, rumpus, row, *brawl, broil: difference, variance, dissension, contention, *discord tiff vb spat, bicker, quarrel, squabble, wrangle, altercation (see under QUARREL n)

Ana dispute, argue (see DISCUSS): *differ, disagree: *contend, fight tight 1 Tight, taut, tense are comparable chiefly in their basic senses in which they mean drawn or stretched to the point where there is no looseness or slackness. Tight implies a drawing around or about something in a way that constricts or binds it or a drawing of the edges of something firmly together   <Tom has eaten . . . till his little skin is as tight as a drum—Hughes> When applied to a structure, tight more often suggests a drawing together of all parts so that nothing can enter or escape  <if the granary be not tight, the grain will leak out almost as fast as it is shoveled in—Grandgent> When applied to a situation, it suggests that those involved in it are cornered or squeezed unmercifully <those who take refuge in gaps find themselves in a tight place when the gaps begin to close—Inge>  When the emphasis is upon pulling or stretching a cord, a rope, or a fabric to the point where it can be stretched no more without breaking or without putting undue strain upon its supports, tight is often used but taut is the more explicit word and therefore the more appropriate; thus, a tight cord may be one which ties up a bundle closely and firmly or is stretched to the limit between two points but a taut cord is one which is tight only in the second of these senses <taut as a drumhead> <he is taut as one of the hawsters of his own boat—Brooks> <her sails are loose, her tackles hanging, waiting men to seize and haul them taut—Lowell> In other than nautical or mechanical use, taut often carries a suggestion of strain, especially of nervous strain <in appearance and manner, she was formidable and astringent, with hands that seemed forever taut—Hervey> <so frightened by his driving that she couldn’t enjoy the night . . . tense, taut, and curling up inside—Farrell> When there is an implication of tightness or tautness that involves severe physical or, more often, nervous strain or that manifests itself in signs of such strain, tense may be preferred  <help him to unbend his too tense thought—Arnold> <just as a bicycle chain may be too tight, so may one’s carefulness and conscientiousness be so tense as to hinder the running of one’s mind—James> <the rat was crouching, very tense, sensing extreme danger, but not yet frightened—Dahl>

Ana strict, stringent (see RIGID): *close, compact: constricted, contracted, compressed, condensed, shrunken (see CONTRACT vb): snug, shipshape (see NEAT)

Ant loose

2 also tightfisted *stingy, close, closefisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, miserly, cheeseparing, penny-pinchng

Ana *mean, ignoble, sordid, abject

3 tipsy, intoxicated, *drunk, drunken, inebriated tight-lipped *silent, uncommunicative, taciturn, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, reticent, reserved, secretive time n *opportunity, occasion, chance, break

Ana *juncture, contingency, emergency, exigency timely well-timed, opportune, *seasonable, pat

Ana appropriate, fitting, meet, proper, suitable (see FIT): fortunate, *lucky, happy, providential

Ant untimely

timetable *program, schedule, agenda

timid, timorous both mean so fearful and apprehensive as to hesitate or hold back. Timid stresses lack of courage and daring and usually implies extreme cautiousness and fearfulness of change or of venture into the unknown or uncertain  <timid as a deer> <timid about making decisions>

Timorous stresses domination by fears and apprehensions; it implies a temporary or habitual frame of mind which causes one to shrink from an action or activity which requires independence, decision, or self-assertiveness and suggests terror rather than extreme caution <Murray, the most timorous, as Byron called him, of all God’s book-sellers—Scott> <in another moment she seemed to have descended from her womanly eminence to helpless and timorous girlhood—Wharton> <timorous and fearful of challenge—Mencken>

Ana *fearful, apprehensive, afraid: *cautious, circumspect, calculating, wary, chary

Con *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, bold, audacious timorous *timid

Ana *fearful, apprehensive, afraid: recoiling, shrinking, quailing, blenching (see RECOL): trembling, quivering, shivering, shuddering (see SHAKE)

Ant assured

tincture n *touch, suggestion, tinge, suspicion, soupçon, shade, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak

tinge n 1 tint, shade, hue, *color, tone

2 tincture, *touch, suggestion, shade, suspicion, soupçon, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak tint n hue, shade, *color, tinge, tone tiny minute, miniature, diminutive, wee, *small, little, teeny, weeny tippler *drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, soak, toper, tosspot tipsy intoxicated, inebriated, *drunk, drunken, tight tirade, diatribe, jeremiad, philippic can all mean a violent, often long-winded, and usually denunciatory speech or writing. Tirade implies a swift emission of heated language, sometimes critical, sometimes abusive, but usually long-continued and directed against persons or things that the speaker or writer believes worthy of castigation <screaming a tirade of protest and rage—Davenport> <the King . . . had . . . to impose silence on the tirades which were delivered from the University pulpit—J. R. Green> Diatribe carries a stronger implication of bitterness and, often, of long-windedness than tirade (a rambling, bitter diatribe on the wrongs and sufferings of the laborers—Kingsley) (a diatribe in some . . . paper which neglected to mention what I had said, it merely indicated that it had been awful—Mailer) Jeremiad stresses the implication of dolefulness or lugubriousness, but it usually applies to a diatribe in that strain (a jeremiad against a civilization that values knowledge above wisdom—Durrell) Philippic applies to an oration or harangue that constitutes a denunciatory attack filled with acrimonious invective and often directed against a public person, a way of life, an aggressive power, or some dictatorial assumption (gave full rein to his mingled exasperation and boredom in a philippic so withering that it roused a lethargic Senate—S. H. Adams) (delivered a violent philippic against democracy—S. R. L.) Ana harangue, oration, *speech: invective, vituperation, *abuse: denunciation, censure, condemnation (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)

Ant eulogy

tire vb Tire, weary, fatigue, exhaust, jade, fag, tucker can all mean to make or in some cases to become disinclined or unable to continue because of loss of strength or endurance. Tire is the general and ordinary word and usually implies the draining of one's strength or patience; it may suggest such causes as overexertion, long continuance at a task, boredom, or a sense of futility and usually it requires textual amplification to indicate the cause and the degree of the effect (it tires me to death to read how many ways the warrior is like the moon, or the sun, or a rock, or a lion, or the ocean—Walpole) (music that gentlier on the spirit lies, than tired eyelids upon tired eyes—Tennyson) (spoke exclusively from the larynx, as if he were altogether too tired to put any diaphragm breath into his words—Salinger) (we shall not fail or falter; we shall not weaken or tire—Sir Winston Churchill) Weary as often suggests an incapacity for enduring more of the same thing or an unwillingness to continue one's effort or one's interest as a depletion of that strength or that interest (the others would never even raise their eyes when this happened, as men too well aware of the futility of their fellows' attempts and wearied with their useless repetition—Kipling) (ah, I am worn out—I am wearied out—it is too much—I am but flesh and blood, and I must sleep—Millay) (I have only one prayer—that I weary of you before you tire of me—Mailer) (wearied of her husband's infidelities, and could not bear them any more—Rose Macaulay) Fatigue is stronger than tire and implies great lassitude brought on by overstrain or undue effort. It usually implies an incapacity for further strain or effort without damaging effects (I rested . . . in a shrubbery, being, in my enfeebled condition, too fatigued to push on—H. G. Wells) (she flung herself upon a sofa, protesting . . . that she was fatigued to death—Burney) Exhaust (see also DEplete) heightens fatigue's implications of drained strength or a worn-out condition of mind or of body (she is too exhausted to sleep) (exhausted and addled by the frustration of their failures—Mailer) Jade implies weariness or fatigue that makes one lose all freshness, spirit, animation, or interest and become dull and languid. The term seldom carries as clear a suggestion of physical or mental overexertion as fatigue and often implies satiety even more clearly than weary; it is especially useful when the implication of overindulgence in something or the overworking of a particular sense or faculty is to be conveyed (to minds jaded with debauches of overemphasis it does contrive to give a thrill—Montague) (to the jaded . . . eye it is all dead and common . . . flatness and disgust—James) Fag implies work until one droops with weariness or fatigue (I worked . . . at correcting manuscript, which fags me excessively—Scott) (with a gasp for breath said, "Lord, what a run. I'm fagged to death"—Masefield) Tucker closely approaches fatigue or exhaust in meaning but sometimes carries the additional suggestion of loss of breath (too tuckered to finish a job—Leavitt) (seemed tuckered out from listening to long speeches—Dorothy Canfield)

Ana irk, vex, *annoy, bother: *deplete, drain, exhaust, impoverish, bankrupt tireless *indefatigable, weariless, untiring, unwearying, unwearied, unflinching

Ana assiduous, sedulous, diligent, industrious, *busy: energetic, strenuous, *vigorous tiresome *irksome, wearisome, tedious, boring

Ana oppressive, burdensome, *onerous, exacting: fatiguing, exhausting, jading, fagging (see TIRE vb): arduous, *hard, difficult titanic *huge, vast, immense, enormous, elephantine, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantean, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, cyclopean, Brobdingnagian title n 1 *claim, pretension, pretense

Ana *right, privilege, prerogative, birthright: *reason, ground, argument, proof: *due, desert, merit

2 *name, designation, denomination, appellation, style title *particle, bit, mite, smidgen, whit, atom, iota, jot toady n *parasite, sycophant, favorite, lickspittle, bootlicker, hanger-on, leech, sponge, sponger toady vb *fawn, truckle, cringe, cower

Ana *follow, tag, trail, tail: blandish, cajole, wheedle (see COax) toboggan vb coast, *slide, slip, glide, skid, glissade, slither

tocsin *alarm, alert

Ana signal, *sign toil n labor, *work, travail, drudgery, grind

Ana *effort, exertion, pains, trouble: employment, occupation, calling, pursuit, business (see WORK)

Ant leisure

token 1 *sign, mark, symptom, badge, note

Ana *symbol, emblem, attribute: *evidence, testimony: indication, proving or proof, betokening (see corresponding verbs at INDICATE)

2 *pledge, earnest, pawn, hostage

Ana *guarantee, guaranty, security, surety

3 *remembrance, remembrancer, reminder, memorial, memento, keepsake, souvenir

Ana *gift, present, favor

tolerance forbearance, leniency, indulgence, clemency, mercifulness (see under FORBEARING)

Ana *mercy, charity, grace, lenity: *patience, long-suffering, longanimity

Ant intolerance: loathing tolerant *forbearing, lenient, indulgent, clement, merciful

Ana *charitable, benevolent, humane: forgiving, excusing, condoning (see EXCUSE vb)

Ant intolerant: severe tolerantly forbearingly, clemently, mercifully, leniently, indulgently (see under FORBEARING) tolerate endure, abide, *bear, suffer, stand, brook

Ana accept, *receive: submit, *yield, bow, succumb tone *color, hue, shade, tint, tinge tongue *language, dialect, speech, idiom tongue-lash vb upbraid, rate, berate, *scold, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig, rail, revile, vituperate too *also, likewise, besides, moreover, furthermore tool *implement, instrument, appliance, utensil

Ana *device, contrivance, contraption, gadget: *machine, mechanism, apparatus: *mean, instrument, instrumental-ity, agent, agency

toothsome *palatable, appetizing, savory, sapid, tasty, flavorsome, relishing tooper *drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, soak, tosspot, tippler topic *subject, matter, subject matter, argument, text, theme, motive, motif, leitmotiv torment vb torture, rack, *afflict, try

Ana *worry, annoy, harry, harass, plague, pester; distress, *trouble: *bait, badger, hector: agonize, *writhe tornado *whirlwind, cyclone, typhoon, hurricane, waterspout, twister torpid *lethargic, sluggish, comatose

Ana inert, *inactive, idle, passive: phlegmatic, *impassive, stolid

Ant agile

torpidity torpor, stupor, *lethargy, languor, lassitude

Ana inertness, inactivity, idleness, passiveness (see corresponding adjectives at INACTIVE)

torpor torpidity, stupor, *lethargy, languor, lassitude

Ana apathy, phlegm, impassivity, stolidity (see under IMPASSIVE): inertness or inertia, passiveness, inactivity (see corresponding adjectives at INACTIVE)

Ant animation

torrent n *flood, deluge, inundation, spate, cataract tortuous *winding, sinuous, serpentine, flexuous

Ana *crooked, devious: roundabout, circuitous, *indirect torture vb rack, torment, *afflict, try

Ana *writhe, agonize: persecute, oppress, *wrong: *distress, trouble: *worry, annoy, harry, harass: *maim, mutilate, mangle toss vb pitch, sling, *throw, cast, fling, hurl

Ana impel, drive (see MOVE vb): thrust, propel (see PUSH vb)

tosspot *drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, soak, toper, tippler tot vb total, *add, sum, cast, figure, foot total adj *whole, entire, all, gross

Ana complete, *full, plenary: including or inclusive, comprehending or comprehensive (see corresponding verbs at INCLUDE)

total n *sum, aggregate, whole, amount, number, quantity total vb tot, *add, sum, figure, cast, foot totalitarian adj Totalitarian, authoritarian, as applied to a government or state, require discrimination, for, although applicable to the same states, they actually carry a different emphasis. Totalitarian implies as an objective an undivided state in which all power, whether political, economic, commercial, cultural, or religious, is vested in the government and in which the people as a unit sanction and support this government and obey its orders. Practically, it implies toleration of but one political party, the one which supports the government, and the concentration of authority in the hands of one person or group, theoretically the mouthpiece of the people. Authoritarian implies a type of governmental organization in which professedly as well as actually all political power is ultimately concentrated in the hands of an individual head (as a sovereign, a leader, or a dictator) and not (as in democratic countries) in the people or in a representative body. No matter how the various powers vested in the government may be distributed for practical purposes, an authoritarian state is so organized that the final and determining authority is its head. Practically an authoritarian government, though professing political power, often extends its control over the economic and cultural life of the people; thus, Italy, with the rise of Mussolini and the Fascists to power in 1922, became an authoritarian state; Germany, with the election of Hitler as Chancellor in 1933, became a totalitarian state.

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

totter 1 *shake, tremble, quake, quaver, quiver, shiver, shudder, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither

Ana rock, agitate, *shake, convulse: sway, *swing, fluctuate, oscillate, waver

2 *reel, stagger, whirl

Ana *stumble, lurch, blunder, flounder, trip touch vb 1 Touch, feel, palpate, handle, paw can all mean to lay the hand or fingers on an equally sensitive part of the body upon so as to get or produce a sensation often in examination or exploration. Touch usually stresses the act which leads to or produces the sensation or the resulting knowledge, but it does not invariably imply the act of placing a bodily part in contact with the object considered for it may suggest the use of an instrument which induces a specific sensation or produces another sensation (as that of sounds heard) <touch an iron lightly with a wet finger to see if it is hot enough for ironing> <touch the strings of a violin lightly with the bow> <if you touch the baby he will awaken> or it may suggest an immaterial contact <it is essential that the College . . .

be strengthened in its enduring task of touching creatively the lives of those many who will study here—N. M. Pusey>

Feel stresses the sensation induced or produced; usually it suggests a sensation on the part of the person touching but may connote a sensation on the part of the one touched <come near . . . that I may feel thee, my son—Gen 27:21>

<the natural philosopher concerned himself with almost anything that he could see or hear or feel—Darrow>

<all that the saints and mystics say about the irradiation of the whole personality by the felt presence of the Holy Spirit—Inge> Although touch and feel often connote examination or exploration, they do not throw the emphasis on that end; on the other hand, palpate (as well as the noun palpation), especially in medical use, stresses the feeling of the surface of a body, usually a human body, as a means of discovering the condition of organs that cannot be seen <the doctor palpated the swollen mass and said no bone was broken> <examine the condition of the abdominal organs by palpation> <having probed and prodded and palpated that tortured . . . flesh until it was as familiar as his own—Styron>

Handle (see also HANDLE, TREAT) implies a laying of the hands or fingers upon so as to get the feel of a thing, or a taking up into the hands so as to determine its qualities (as of weight, condition, or finish) by the sense of touch (she insists upon handling cloth before she buys it) <handle this fur and feel its softness yet strength> <handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh—Lk 24:39>

Paw implies a touching or stroking with the hand, often but not always involving the connotation of getting or stimulating a sensation; the term is often used when the action is clumsy or offensive <the inspectors . . . pawing through his papers, consulting dusty books of regulations—W. S. Burroughs> <kept trying to kiss and hug and paw her—Wouk>

Ana examine, inspect, *scrutinize: investigate (see corresponding noun at INQUIRY)

2 *affect, influence, impress, strike, sway

Ana arouse, *stir: excite, stimulate, quicken (see PROVOKE): *injure, harm, damage, hurt, impair

3 approach, rival, *match, equal touch n 1 *contact

Ana feeling, sense, *sensation, sensibility: tangibleness, palpableness (see corresponding adjectives at PERCEPTIBLE): *impact, impingement, shock, clash

2 Touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash, vein, strain, streak are comparable when they mean a perceptible trace of something foreign, extraneous, or peculiar. Touch can suggest an impression left on someone or something by or as if by contact with another, but in general it implies little more than an appreciable trace (in the air was a touch of frost—Galsworthy) (he was a very active lad, fair-haired, with a touch of the Dane or Norwegian about him—D. H. Lawrence) (occasionally the wrinkled serenity of her face became a touch grim—Styron) Suggestion implies an outward sign that is just enough to give one a hint or an inkling of the presence or existence of something (his voice conveyed a suggestion of fear) (the taste of the fowl delicately dominant over the tart suggestion of Burgundy—Wouk) Suspicion and soupcçon differ little from suggestion, but they tend to imply a fainter trace requiring more delicate perception or evoking less certainty (tea with a suspicion of brandy) (add a soupcçon of red pepper) (just a suspicion . . . of saturnine or sarcastic humor—A. W. Ward) (a soupcçon of army rank had slipped . . . insidiously into his voice—Salinger) Tincture, tinge, and shade are terms used primarily in describing color. Tincture and tinge usually imply an admixture with something that gives the thing affected a faint cast or an appearance suggestive of a lightly suffused coloring (what he said had plausibility and perhaps a tincture of sincerity—Hackett) (both young men were Whigs of a radical tincture—Current History) (a subjective tinge entered into the nineteenth-century description of nature—Jeans) (eyes that . . . had some tinge of the oriental—Edmund Wilson) Shade implies enough of a trace to suggest the smallest possible degree of some quality; it usually derives its implications from the meaning of shade as a gradation in the darkening of a color (he smiled; in that smile there was a shade of patronage—Galsworthy) (eyes that were too small and a shade too close together—Dahl) (the distinction between French plums and stewed prunes is . . . not to be overlooked by those sensitive to these nice shades—Sackville-West) Smack, spice, and dash are used primarily in relation to the stimulation of the sense of taste. Smack suggests a trace which is pronounced enough or decided enough for one to savor it (the Saxon names of places, with the pleasant, wholesome smack of the soil in them—Arnold) Spice and dash suggest a slight admixture or infusion, especially such as gives zest, relish, or pungency (there was a spice of obstinacy about Miss Dale—Trollope) (a king of England should have a spice of the devil in his composition—Smollett) (he is a man with a dash of genius in him—Arnold) (his ancestry was chiefly English, with some Scotch and a dash of both French and Dutch—Kellogg) Vein, strain, and streak all suggest linearity and imply continuity though not necessarily evident continuity to the thing, usually a quality or condition, so designated. Vein applies to a trace that runs through a personality, a work, or a movement in the manner of a vein so that it lies below or within the substance or character of the thing as a whole and occasionally shows on the surface or crops out (in Swift he discovered an inimitable vein of irony—Johnson) (he had always had a vein of childish obstinacy—M. E. Freeman) Strain and streak can both denote a distinctive characteristic that runs through and modifies the whole of which it is a part (throughout the speech . . . ran a curious strain, as though he himself were dazed at the fix he had got himself into—Shirer) They are used especially of a personal characteristic that is clearly distinguishable from or even contrasts sharply with the rest of one's qualities (a strain of eccentricity, amounting in some cases almost to insanity—L. P. Smith) (the streak of extreme stubbornness . . . was both his strength and his misfortune—Galbraith) (a streak of Indian blood in him—Long) Ana *trace, vestige: contamination, pollution, defilement, tainting (see corresponding verbs at CONTAMINATE): *impression, impress, imprint, stamp, print touching affecting, *moving, impressive, poignant, pathetic Ana *tender, responsive, sympathetic, compassionate: *pitiful, piteous, pitiable touchstone criterion, *standard, gauge, yardstick Ana test, proof, trial, demonstration (see under PROVE) touchy *irascible, choleric, splenetic, testy, cranky, cross Ana *irritable, fractious, snappish, waspish, peevish: captious, caviling, faultfinding, carping (see CRITICAL) Ant imperturbable tough tenacious, stout, sturdy, *strong, stalwart Ana resisting or resistant, withstanding, opposing (see corresponding verbs at RESIST): *firm, hard: intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, headstrong (see UNRULY): dogged, pertinacious, *obstinate, stubborn Ant fragile

tour n 1 shift, trick, turn, *spell, stint, bout, go 2 *journey, voyage, trip, cruise, expedition, jaunt, excursion, pilgrimage tow vb tug, haul, hale, *pull, draw, drag tower vb mount, ascend, soar, rocket, *rise, arise, levitate, surge toxic *poisonous, venomous, virulent, mephitic, pestilent, pestilential, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmatic toxin *poison, venom, virus, bane toy vb *trifle, dally, flirt, coquet Ana *play, sport, disport, frolic: fondle, *caress, pet, cosset, cuddle, dandle trace n Trace, vestige, track can all mean a visible or otherwise sensible sign left by something that has passed or has taken place. Trace basically applies to a line (as of footprints) or a rut made by someone or something that has passed (follow the traces of a deer through the snow) (the clear trace of a sleigh) (when the hounds of spring are on winter's traces—Swinburne) The term is often extended to suggest a mark, whether material or immaterial, that is evidence of something that has happened or has influenced a person or thing (the child carefully removed the traces of jam from his mouth) (would tell him they had detected in the book some slight traces of a talent which . . . could be schooled to produce, in time, a publishable book—Wolfe) (the stimulation of violent emotions may leave permanent traces on the mind—Inge) Vestige may be preferred to trace when the reference is to something that remains or still exists to give evidence of or testimony to the existence of something in the past; it often applies to remains (as a fragment, a remnant, or a relic) that constitutes a tangible or sensible reminder of what has gone before (of this ancient custom no vestige remained—Gibbon) (the vestiges of some knowledge of Latin still appear . . . in his sentences—The Nation) (some embryonic organs neither disappear nor take on permanent function, but rather persist throughout life as vestiges—Arey) (a remote outpost, with only a vestige of its former commerce in livestock—P. E. James) Track has come to be used more often than trace in the sense of a line of perceptible marks, especially in hunting, where it also may mean the scent followed by the hounds, and in geology, where it usually means a line of fossilized footprints (the hounds are on the track of the fox) (the track of a dinosaur) (he could just discern the marks made by the little feet on the virgin snow, and he followed their track to the furze bushes—George Eliot) Ana *sign, mark, token trace vb *sketch, outline, diagram, delineate, draft, plot, blueprint Ana copy, duplicate, reproduce (see corresponding nouns at REPRODUCTION): map, chart, graph (see under CHART n)

tracing n sketch, outline, diagram, delineation, draft, plot, blueprint (see under SKETCH vb)

Ana *reproduction, copy, duplicate: *plan, project, scheme, plot, design track n *trace, vestige

Ana print, stamp, imprint (see IMPRESSION): *sign, mark, token tract *area, region, zone, belt

Ana *expanse, stretch, spread, amplitude: *locality, district, vicinity: section, sector, *part, portion tractable amenable, biddable, docile, *obedient

Ana pliant, pliable, *plastic: submissive, subdued (see TAME): *compliant, acquiescent

Ant intractable: unruly —Con ungovernable, refractory, headstrong, willful (see UNRULY): stubborn, *obstinate trade n 1 Trade, craft, handicraft, art, profession are general terms which designate a pursuit followed as an occupation or means of livelihood and requiring technical knowledge and skill. Trade is applied chiefly to pursuits involving skilled manual or mechanical labor and the management of machinery or tools (the trade of a carpenter) (a blacksmith's trade) (he is a plumber by trade) Craft is not always clearly distinguished from trade, but it tends to be used of those pursuits that involve not only manual or mechanical labor but allow more or less freedom for the exercise of taste, skill, and ingenuity; many of the crafts were once or are still carried on independently in the small shop or home; thus, weaving, tailoring, and goldsmithing are often spoken of as crafts; the village shoemaker practised a craft, but the laster in a modern shoe factory follows a trade. Handicraft implies handwork and usually suggests dexterity in manipulation of instruments or of materials; in comparison with craft it tends to imply more definite independence from machinery and it more often applies to an activity carried on for other than purely economic reasons; thus, basket-making, embroidery, lacemaking, and bookbinding are handicrafts when carried out with the use of simple hand tools whether the products are primarily a source of livelihood or not. Art as applied to an occupation (compare ART 1) implies the use of knowledge and skill by the practitioner and often comes very close to craft in such phrases as the manual arts, industrial arts, household arts, practical arts. But art, when unqualified, usually designates one of the creative pursuits (as painting or sculpture) that, whether practised as an occupation or an avocation, involve an elaborate technique, great skill, definite ends to be achieved, and the possession and exercise of highly personal creative judgment and taste. Further, art is so freely applicable to the general principles or underlying system of rules, methods, and procedures on which a trade or craft, or a creative pursuit, or a branch of learning or doing, or an aspect of human affairs is based, that it is often difficult, apart from the context, to determine whether the word denotes a pursuit or a technique (the art of navigation) (the art of interior decorating) (dancing as an art, a profession, an amusement—Ellis) (proficient in the art of self-defense—Shaw) (literature is an art and therefore not to be pondered only, but practiced—Quiller-Couch) Profession is, in general, applied only to a pursuit that requires prolonged study and training before one is ready to follow it as a means of livelihood; the term also often implies that one has undergone tests of one's fitness and has won a degree or has given proof of one's qualifications and has been licensed to practice; it often also implies devotion to an end other than that of personal profit or the earning of a livelihood (law, medicine, architecture, and teaching are pro- fessions) (a person may be a clergyman, a nurse, a civil engineer, or a dentist by profession)

Ana *work, employment, occupation, pursuit

2 commerce, *business, industry, traffic traduce *malign, asperse, vilify, calumniate, defame, slander, libel

Ana *decry, detract, derogate, depreciate, disparage: revile, vituperate (see SCOLD vb)

traffic n 1 *business, commerce, trade, industry

Ana transportation, conveyance, carrying (see corresponding verbs at CARRY)

2 *intercourse, commerce, dealings, communication, communion, conversation, converse, correspondence

Ana familiarity, intimacy, closeness (see corresponding adjectives at FAMILIAR) trail vb *follow, pursue, chase, tag, tail train n *succession, progression, series, sequence, chain, string train vb 1 *teach, discipline, school, instruct, educate

Ana *practice, exercise, drill: *habituate, accustom: *harden, season

2 aim, *direct, point, level, lay

Ana *turn, divert, deflect traipse *wander, stray, roam, ramble, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, meander trait *characteristic, feature

Ana *quality, character, property, attribute traitorous treacherous, perfidious, *faithless, false, disloyal

Ana recreant, renegade, apostate (see corresponding nouns at RENEGADE): seditious, mutinous, rebellious (see INSUBORDINATE): disaffected, estranged, alienated (see ESTRANGE)

trammel *hamper, fetter, shackle, clog, manacle, hog-tie

Ana *hinder, impede, obstruct, block, bar: *restrain, curb, check, inhibit: *limit, restrict, circumscribe, confine tramp n *vagabond, vagrant, hobo, truant, bum tranquil serene, placid, *calm, peaceful, halcyon

Ana quiet, *still, silent, noiseless: *soft, gentle, mild: restful, *comfortable: *cool, composed, collected

Ant troubled

tranquelize *calm, compose, quiet, quieten, still, lull, soothe, settle

Ana allay, assuage, alleviate, *relieve: mollify, appease, *pacify

Ant agitate

transcend surpass, *exceed, excel, outdo, outstrip

Ana surmount, overcome (see CONQUER) transcendent 1 surpassing, superlative, *supreme, peerless, preeminent, incomparable

Ana *consummate, finished, accomplished: *perfect, entire, whole, intact

2 transcendental, ideal, *abstract

Ana absolute, *ultimate, categorical: *infinite, boundless, eternal transcendental transcendent, ideal, *abstract

Ana *supernatural, supranatural: categorical, *ultimate transcript copy, carbon copy, duplicate, *reproduction, facsimile, replica transfer vb 1 *move, remove, shift

Ana *carry, convey, transport, transmit: *commit, consign

2 Transfer, convey, alienate, deed are comparable chiefly as legal terms meaning to make over property from one owner to another. Transfer is the general term; it is applicable when the property is real or personal and when it is passed from one owner to another by a lawful means (as sale, gift, or foreclosure). Convey stresses the legalistic aspects of the transfer; it is the precise term when a sealed writing or deed plays an essential part in the transfer and is used chiefly of the transfer of real property and of ships. Alienate is not always clearly distinguished from transfer or convey; in precise legal use, however, it implies the passing of a title by the act of the owner as distinguished from its passing by the operation of the law (as in the case of inheritance by descent) (entailed property cannot be alienated) Alienate, however, may be used when the sale of property is not voluntary but is ordered or enforced by a court (as in foreclosure or in condemnation proceedings). In ordinary nonlegal use alienate often implies diversion (as by force or by a sovereign power or an imperative need) (he pleaded for the resumption by clerics of Church revenues alienated into lay hands—Belloc) Deed, a popular rather than a technical legal term, is equivalent to convey.

transfiguration transformation, metamorphosis, transmutation, conversion, transmogrification (see under TRANSFORM)

Ana exaltation, magnification (see corresponding verbs at EXALT): enhancing, heightening, intensifying (see INTENSIFY)

transfigure *transform, metamorphose, transmute, convert, transmogrify

Ana *exalt, magnify: heighten, enhance, *intensify transform, metamorphose, transmute, convert, transmogrify, transfigure can all mean to turn or change one thing into another or a different thing or from one form into another and different form. In general, the same differences in implications and connotations are observable in the corresponding nouns transformation, metamorphosis, transmutation, conversion, transmogrification, transfiguration. Transform may imply a mere changing of outward form or appearance (a Hunter senior transformed into a bride floating in a white brilliant mist, on the arm of an awkward trapped-looking young man—Wouk) (the placid sunshine . . . seems to have been transformed in a moment into imperious angry fire—Pater) or it may imply a basic changing of character, nature, or function (transform electrical energy into light) (to Samarcaud . . . we owe the art of transforming linen into paper—Newman) (the task of transforming a heterogeneous selection of mankind into a homogeneous nation—Russell) (too much organization transforms men and women into automata—Huxley) Metamorphose may add implications not often present in transform such as that of a supernaturally or magically induced change (men were by the force of that herb metamorphosed into swine—Steele) or of a fundamental change in structure and habits that characterizes the development of some forms of animal life (the caterpillar is a larva which finally metamorphoses into a butterfly or moth) or of a transformation specifically induced by chemical or physical agencies (rocks metamorphosed by heat) In more general use the term carries a much stronger implication than transform of an abrupt, startling, or violent change (the little song . . . later metamorphosed into one of the noblest chorales—P. L. Miller) (a convention of maidenly modesty has been metamorphosed many a fine woman into an embittered, disillusioned old maid—Kyne) (if you deny man his intelligence, you metamorphose him into a machine) Transmute usually suggests a fundamental change, especially one involving a metamorphosis of a lower element or thing into a higher one (a simple romantic narrative transmuted by sheer glow or beauty into a prose poem—Galsworthy) (Shakespeare, too, was occupied with the struggle—which alone constitutes life for a poet—to transmute his personal and private agonies into something rich and strange, something universal and impersonal—T. S. Eliot) (in order to trans- mute energy to higher and more subtle levels one must first conserve it—Henry Miller) Convert carries a slighter suggestion of change in kind, nature, or structure than the preceding terms but a stronger one of such changes in details or properties as fit something for a given use or function or for a new use or function (convert iron into steel) (nature converts the fallen trunks of trees into coal) (having conducted their lame guest to a room in the Georgian corridor hastily converted to a bedroom—Galsworthy) (every possible industry was converted to produce war goods—Morris Sayre) (that a new seam of richest material has been opened up and that poets are learning how to convert that raw material to their own uses—Day Lewis) Transmogrify implies a thoroughgoing metamorphosis that is often grotesque, a bewildering, or even preposterous (see Social life and Glee sit down, all joyous and unthinking, till, quite transmogrified, they're grown Debauchery and Drinking—Burns) (wondering how the caricatured capitalism of his forebears can be transmogrified into a harmonious . . . way of life—Current Biog.) (the classical heroes and heroines were transmogrified into medieval knights and ladies—Lowe) Transfigure is often interchangeable with transform or metamorphose (her face was transfigured by uncontrollable passion—Bennett) but more typically it suggests an exaltation or glorification of the outward appearance (Jesus . . . was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun—Mt 17:1-2) (if she be guilty, 'twill transform her to manifest deformity . . . if innocent, she will become transfigured into an angel—Shelley) (the moment when good verse . . . is transfigured into a thing that takes the breath away—Day Lewis)

Ana *change, alter, modify, vary transformation metamorphosis, transmutation, conversion, transmogrification, transfiguration (see under TRANSFORM)

Ana change, alteration, modification, variation (see under CHANGE vb): evolution, *development transgression trespass, violation, infraction, *breach, infringement, contravention

Ana encroachment, invasion, entrenchment (see corresponding verbs at TRESPASS): slip, lapse, *error: *offense, sin, vice, crime transient adj Transient, transitory, passing, ephemeral, momentary, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent, short-lived are comparable when they mean lasting or staying only for a short time. Transient and transitory are often used as if they were interchangeable; but transient more frequently applies to what is actually short in its duration or stay (the summer hotel does not take transient guests) (transient sorrows—Wordsworth) (an ancient folk tradition whose transient resting-place was the Bronx—Geismar) and transitory, like its close synonym passing, to what is by its nature or essence bound to change, pass, or come to an end sooner or later (objects of sense . . . are transitory and ephemeral—Thilly) (wise men will apply their remedies to . . . the causes of evil which are permanent, not to . . . the transitory modes in which they appear—Burke) (a passing fancy) (the confounding of the Passing with the Permanent—Austin) Ephemeral may imply existence for only a day (ephemeral insects) (ephemeral flowers) In extended use, it implies marked shortness of life or of duration (as of influence or appeal) (jazz is perishable, ephemeral, elusive—Balliett) Momentary implies duration for a moment or a similar very short time (a momentary irritation—Hardy) Fugitive and fleeting apply to what passes swiftly, and is gone; but fugitive carries a stronger implication of the difficulty of catching or fixing (oh joy! . . . that nature yet remembers what was so fugitive!—Wordsworth) <both crucifix and river . . . offered contentment and poignant, fugitive hints of another world—Styron) and fleeting, of the impossibility of holding back or restraining from flight (a calm and studious expression, but touched with a curious, fleeting light of triumph—Styron) <a fleeting wisdom told her that . . . one does not love another for his good character—Hervey) Evanescence implies momentariness, but it stresses quick and complete vanishing, and it usually connotes a delicate, fragile, or airy quality (<evanescent visitations of thought and feeling . . . arising unforeseen and departing unbidden—Shelley) <all was unstable; quivering as leaves, evanescent as lightning—Hardy) <it is poetry of the most evanescent type, so tenuous in thought and feeling that only the most exquisite diction can justify its perpetuation in cold print—Grandgent) Short-lived implies extreme brevity of life or existence often of what might be expected to last or live longer (<short-lived fame) <their satisfaction was short-lived) <trade unions have pressed their demands regardless of the fact that sellers' market conditions would be short-lived—The Scotsman)

Ant perpetual —Con *lasting, permanent, perdurable, stable, durable transitory *transient, passing, ephemeral, momentary, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent, short-lived

Ant everlasting; perpetual translation, version, paraphrase, metaphrase can all denote a restating in intelligible language of the meaning or sense of a passage or work or the passage or work that is the product of such a restatement. Translation implies a turning from one language into another (<English translations of the Bible) <a literal translation) <translation is an art that involves the re-creation of a work in another language, for readers with a different background—Malcolm Cowley) Version (see also ACCOUNT 2) may be used in place of translation especially to imply a rendering that adheres rather to the spirit than to a literal translating of the original (<the year 1632 saw a complete version of the Aeneid by Vicars—Conington) but often it is used to denote one of the translations of a given work, and especially of the Bible (<the Authorized or King James Version) <the Douay Version is used by English-speaking Roman Catholics) Paraphrase may apply to a very free translation the purpose of which is to present the meaning rather than the phrasing of a passage or work (<a translation must be a paraphrase to be readable—FitzGerald) It may apply also to an imitation with enough changes to obscure its indebtedness to an original in another tongue (<[Latin] plays which were not paraphrases from the Greek—Buchan) Commonly, however, the term denotes a free, amplified, and often, interpretative rendering of the sense of a difficult passage in the same language (<write a paraphrase of Milton's Lycidas) <paraphrases of the Psalms in the Authorized Version) Metaphrase is occasionally used by learned writers to denote a translation that is almost slavishly faithful to the original (what is often called a literal translation) to distinguish it from a paraphrase or free translation (<the way I have taken [in a translation of the Aeneid] is not so straight as metaphrase, nor so loose as paraphrase—Dryden)

translucent lucid, pellucid, diaphanous, limpid, *clear, transparent

Ana luminous, radiant, brilliant, effulgent, *bright; iridescent, opalescent, *prismatic transmit 1 forward, remit, route, ship, *send, dispatch

2 *carry, bear, convey, transport

Ana *move, remove, shift, transfer: *communicate, impart: propagate, breed, engender, *generate transmogrification transformation, metamorphosis, trans-mutation, conversion, transfiguration (see under TRANSFORM) transmogrify *transform, metamorphose, transmute, convert, transfigure transmutation transformation, metamorphosis, conversion, transmogrification, transfiguration (see under TRANSFORM) transmute *transform, metamorphose, convert, transmogrify, transfigure transparent *clear, lucid, pellucid, diaphanous, translucent, limpid

Ant opaque —Con *turbid, muddy, roily transpire *happen, occur, chance, befall, betide transport vb 1 *carry, bear, convey, transmit

Ana *move, remove, shift, transfer: *bring, fetch, take

2 Transport, ravish, enrapture, entrance can all mean to carry away by strong and usually pleasurable emotion. Transport need not suggest that the transporting emotion is joy or delight; it may be an emotion (as rage, amazement, fear, or wonder) strong enough to exceed ordinary limits; usually, the term implies excessive agitation or excitement (<the test of greatness in a work of art is . . . that it transports us—Read) <transported with rage) Ravish can imply a seizure by emotion and in this use is typically an emphatic term for a being filled with joy or delight (<his eye was ravished by a thin sunshine of daffodils spread over a meadow—Clemence Dane) <a sound of angelic chimes infinitely ravishing to my senses—Sabatini) <I was given my first taste of music in the high sense, and never, surely, could a youth from a small country town have been more ravished by such an experience—Hall) Enrapture basically implies a putting into a state of rapture and typically suggests an intense, even ecstatic, delight, often in one of the arts (<he is enrapturing us with his extraordinary powers to make us see and feel beauty—Welty) <he may never achieve a full understanding of the medium of the art that enraptures him—Tassovini) But sometimes enrapture stresses the bemusing aspect of rapture and then tends to suggest a bedazzling and often a suppressing of the powers of clear thinking (<gives him a weary skepticism before the enraptured claims—Schlesinger b. 1917) <[his] personality simply has not enraptured the voters—Rowland Evans & Robert Novak) Entrance implies a throwing into a state of mind resembling a trance; it usually suggests a being held spellbound by something that awakens an overmastering emotion (as joy, fear, or wonder) <entranced with this reverent gesture . . . her tentative approval of her cousin settled into awed respect—Hervey) <he felt his head whirl. Her complete abandon was entrancing—Buck) <the beauty of the land entranced them—Baily)

Ana quicken, stimulate, excite, *provoke: agitate, upset, perturb (see DISCOMPOSE): *lift, elevate

3 depart, *banish, exile, expatriate, ostracize, extradite

Ana expel, *eject, oust transport n *ecstasy, rapture

Ana enthusiasm, *passion, fervor, ardor: *inspiration, fury, frenzy: bliss, beatitude, blessedness, felicity, *happiness

transpose *reverse, invert

Ana *exchange, interchange: transfer, shift (see MOVE) trap n *lure, bait, decoy, snare

Ana stratagem, ruse, *trick, maneuver, gambit, ploy, artifice, wile, feint: *ambush, ambushade: intrigue, machination, *plot, conspiracy trap vb entrap, snare, ensnare, bag, *catch, capture

Ana seize, *take, clutch, grasp: betray, beguile, delude (see DECEIVE) trash n 1 *refuse, waste, rubbish, debris, garbage, offal 2 *nonsense, twaddle, drivel, bunk, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, rot, bull trauma, traumatism *wound, lesion, bruise, contusion travail labor, *work, toil, drudgery, grind Ana *effort, exertion, pains, trouble traverse *deny, gainsay, contradict, negative, impugn, contravene Ana controvert, confute, refute, *disprove, rebut Ant allege travesty n *caricature, parody, burlesque travesty vb caricature, parody, burlesque (see under CARICATURE n) Ana *copy, mimic, ape, mock, imitate treacherous perfidious, traitorous, *faithless, false, disloyal Ana betraying, deceiving, misleading, double-crossing (see DECEIVE): seditious, mutinous, rebellious (see INSUBORDINATE): *dangerous, perilous

treason *sedition
Ana revolution, revolt, *rebellion, uprising, insurrection: betrayal, deceiving or deception, double-crossing (see corresponding verbs at DECEIVE): overthrowing or overthrow, subverting or subversion (see corresponding verbs at OVERTURN) Ant allegiance treasure vb prize, value, *appreciate, cherish Ana esteem, respect, regard, admire (see under REGARD n): *revere, reverence, venerate: *save, preserve, conserve treasury *museum, library, gallery, archives treat vb 1 parley, negotiate, *confer, commune, consult, advise Ana *discuss, dispute, argue, debate: *consider, weigh, study: *think, reason, deliberate 2 Treat, deal, handle are comparable when they mean to have to do with a person or thing in a way specified in the context. Treat in the sense of doing about, serving, or coping with is usually accompanied by context indicating an attitude, temperament, or point of view determining behavior or a manner of approach or execution (<treat all controversial questions impartially> <treat a subject realistically> <treat with care> <treating her guests cavalierly with scorn nearly all the ancient virtues—Hummel> <before Massasoit died he made his sons promise to treat the Brown family kindly—Clift> Deal, followed by with, may suggest managing, controlling, or authoritative disposing (<she dealt with moral problems as a cleaver deals with meat—Joyce> <the dean dealt with the matter promptly> <the only previous meeting . . . had dealt essentially with the immediate problems of military cooperation—Deakin> and sometimes it suggests a relationship between persons or parties on a more or less even basis (<we're dealing with a ruthless foe that knows exactly what he wants—L. B. Salomon> Handle is often interchangeable with treat and deal (with); it may suggest a placing, directing, disposing, or manipulating with or as if with the hand (<handle an ax skillfully> <handle the distribution of tickets> <handling the arrangement of flowers> <the federal government picked up a group of unfiled functions that the states could not handle—Berle> <occasionally he wondered—if and when they were married—how on earth he would handle her—Styron> Ana *conduct, manage: regard, respect (see under REGARD n): *consider, account: *estimate, appraise, evaluate, value, rate treasure disquisition, dissertation, thesis, monograph, *discourse

Ana article, paper, *essay: *exposition treaty *contract, bargain, compact, pact, entente, convention, cartel, concordat tremble *shake, quake, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, totter, wobble, teeter, shimmy, dither Ana *thrill, electrify: falter, waver (see HESITATE): quail, shrink, wince (see RECOIL) tremendous stupendous, monumental, prodigious, *monstrous Ana enormous, immense, *huge, vast, gigantic, colossal: astounding, amazing, flabbergasting (see SURPRISE): terrifying, alarming, startling, frightening (see FRIGHTEN)

trenchant *incisive, clear-cut, cutting, biting, crisp Ana piercing, penetrating, probing (see ENTER): *sharp, keen, acute: *sarcastic, satiric, ironic, sardonic: *caustic, mordant, acrid, scathing: poignant, *pungent, piquant trend *tendency, drift, tenor Ana movement, *motion, move: inclination, disposition, predisposition (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE): progression, *progress trepidation horror, terror, panic, consternation, *fear, dread, fright, alarm, dismay Ana apprehensiveness, fearfulness (see corresponding adjectives at FEARFUL): anxiety, worry, concern, solicitude, *care: awe, *reverence, fear trespass n transgression, violation, infraction, *breach, infringement, contravention Ana invading or invasion, entrenchment, encroachment (see corresponding verbs at TRESPASS): intrusion, obstruction (see corresponding verbs at INTRUDE): *offense, sin, vice, crime trespass vb Trespass, encroach, entrench, infringe, invade all mean to make inroads upon the property, territory, or rights of another. Trespass implies an intrusion, often one that is either an unwarranted and unpardonable or an unlawful and offensive intrusion (<warn hunters against trespassing on his land> <shall probably trespass on your hospitality till the Saturday se'nnight following—Austen> <it is essential that . . . an artist should consciously or unconsciously draw a circle beyond which he does not trespass—T. S. Eliot> Encroach usually implies gradual or stealthy entrance upon another's territory or assumption of another's rights or possessions; the term may imply either the act of a person or the agency of a thing (<impertinence . . . ever encroaches when it is tolerated—Burney> <houses encroaching . . . upon the desolation of the marshland—Styron> <the motive of simplicity is to prevent frivolities of fashion from encroaching upon our time—Inge> <today . . . the expert encroaches on the artist—Mailer> Entrench may throw less emphasis than do the preceding words upon unlawful intrusion and more upon cutting or digging into what belongs to another, what should be used in another way, or what is outside one's sphere (<demands that entrenched too much upon his time> <it does not appear that he entrenched upon his own or his mother's private fortune—Buchan> Infringe implies an encroachment that is a clear breach of the law or violation of the rights of another (<infringe a patent> <he was infringing upon the liberties of a man who had never done him any injury—Edgeworth> <the statute proposed would infringe fundamental principles as they have been understood by the traditions of our people and our law—Justice Holmes> Invade implies a definite entrance into the territory or rights of another usually with hostile intent or injurious effect (<the gangrene has invaded healthy tissues> <where there is a legal right, there is also a legal remedy by suit, or action at law, whenever that right is invaded—Blackstone>  <she'll probably insult you for invading what she calls their privacy—Basso)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana *intrude, obtrude, interlope, butt in: interfere, intervene, *interpose trial 1 test, proof, demonstration (see under PROVE)

Ana inspection, examination, scanning, scrutiny (see under SCRUTINIZE): *process, proceeding, procedure

2 Trial, tribulation, affliction, visitation, cross are comparable when they denote suffering, misery, or unhappiness regarded as an infliction which cannot be escaped or avoided. Trial implies a trying (as of one's endurance, patience, self-control, courage, or power to resist temptation). The word is applicable not only to distressing situations or conditions but to persons or things that cause distress or annoyance (the trials and tribulations of traveling over desert—T. D. Clark) (he has always been a trial to his parents) (hotels are a trial of both spirit and flesh—Peffer) Tribulation, when not completely interchangeable with trial, heightens the emphasis on the suffering or anguish involved in trial (out of this time of trial and tribulation will be born a new freedom and glory for all mankind—Sir Winston Churchill) and often connotes divinely permitted suffering as a test of virtue (the just shall . . . after all their tribulations long, see golden days—Milton) Affliction stresses the implication of imposed suffering that challenges one's powers of endurance; the term need not suggest a relation between suffering and deserts (if severe afflictions borne with patience merit the reward of peace, peace ye deserve—Wordsworth) (the dark and senseless afflictions of a nightmare—Kenneth Roberts) Visitation heightens the implications of affliction by stressing the severity of suffering and by suggesting an ordeal; distinctively it often connotes retribution or retributive justice (many people regarded the disastrous flood as a visitation) (woe unto them! for their day is come, the time of their visitation—Jer 1:27) Cross in its applications closely parallels trial and tribulation but it may differ from them in its implications of suffering accepted and borne for the sake of a larger, unselfish good rather than as a test of character (leaving her . . . solemnly elate at the recognition of the cross on which she must agonize for the happiness of some other soul—Deland) The word often directly alludes to the words of Jesus to the rich young man: "Come, take up the cross, and follow me" as recorded in the Gospel according to Mark, or to his own carrying of the cross to the place of his crucifixion.

Ana *distress, suffering, misery, agony: *sorrow, grief, anguish, woe, heartbreak: *misfortune, adversity: *difficulty, hardship, vicissitude, rigor tribulation *trial, affliction, visitation, cross

Ana oppression, persecution, wronging or wrong (see corresponding verbs at WRONG): *sorrow, grief, anguish, woe: *distress, suffering, misery, agony

Ant consolation

tributary adj *subordinate, secondary, dependent, subject, collateral

Ana conquered, vanquished, subjugated, subdued (see CONQUER): *auxiliary, subsidiary, ancillary, adjuvant, contributory tribute n *encomium, eulogy, panegyric, citation trick n 1 Trick, ruse, stratagem, maneuver, gambit, ploy, artifice, wile, feint are comparable when they mean an act or an expedient whereby one seeks to gain one's ends by indirection and ingenuity and often by cunning. Trick implies cheating or deceiving and often evil intention (tricks and devices to conceal evasions and violations of ethical principles—Wagner) (she could not be entirely sure that . . . he was not after all merely using a trick to get rid of her—Bennett) The word may, however, imply nothing more than roguishness or playfulness and be used to designate an antic, a prank, a practical joke, or a harmless hoax (the brothers were fond of playing tricks on their sisters) (the tricks of the clowns in a circus) It may also be applied to a dexterous device or contrivance that pleases, persuades, deludes, or evokes surprise or wonder (an auctioneer who knows all the tricks of his trade) (illusion in the theater is often accomplished by tricks of lighting) (that idle trick of making words jingle which men of Nuflo's class in my country so greatly admire—Hudson) Ruse implies an attempt to give a false impression (as by diverting others' attention from one's real purposes or by making what is untrue seem true) (her "falling" through the glass skylight . . . must be construed by him as a form of reckless intrepidity, the hardened ruse of a dyed-in-the-wool newspaper woman—Purdy) (a favorite ruse of the opium smugglers was to insert a hypodermic needle into an egg, withdraw carefully all the albumen and then refill the cavity with opium—Heiser) Stratagem, though commonly applied to a ruse by which an advantage is gained over an enemy (as by outwitting or surprising him), is not restricted to military operations; in extended use it usually implies a clear objective such as entrapping or circumventing and a more or less elaborate plan for achieving one's end (on our guard against the stratagems of evil rhetoric—R. M. Weaver) (some women . . . are driven to every possible trick and stratagem to entrap some man into marriage—Shaw) Maneuver usually suggests tactics or handling and moving of troops or ships for the accomplishment of definite ends. In extended use it commonly implies adroit or dexterous manipulation of persons or things (the Longbourn party were the last of all the company to depart, and, by a maneuver of Mrs. Bennet, had to wait for their carriage a quarter of an hour after everybody else was gone—Austen) It may, however, be applied to a single strategic move comparable to one in a game of chess (unless indeed, all her talk of flight had been a blind, and her departure no more than a maneuver—Wharton) Gambit in chess denotes an opening that risks a pawn or minor piece to gain an advantage in position; in extended use it can apply to a device that is intended or serves to launch a conversation (opened, safely as I thought, with the gambit of inquiring whether present conditions were satisfactory—Jeremy Potter) (he could not, if he had pondered conversational gambits for an hour, have hit on a more successful one—Day Lewis) (always carried turtle eggs in his pockets and bounced them on bars as a conversational gambit—Bergen Evans) Perhaps more often the advantage-gaining aspect of the basic meaning of gambit is stressed, and the term is applied to a trick or tactic designed to gain its user a competitive advantage often by harassing or embarrassing an opponent (from the Russian point of view it is no mere diplomatic gambit to keep Germany weak and disunited: it is a doctrine of self-preservation—Harold Nicolson) (if a stranger just ahead drops a rosary, don't take any notice. That's the opening gambit of the oldest trick in the world—Aldor) (to avoid the multitude of taxes and assessments, the standard gambit of the peasant was to "dress poor" and "talk poor"—Idzerda) (nobody could be sure whether his anti-market talk was real, or simply a Gaullist gambit designed to enhance the French bargaining position—Scheingold) Ploy carries a suggestion of finesse and often of roguishness and can come very close to the last-mentioned value of gambit (this summer's ploy in the game of oneupmanship, is to holiday in Europe without doing the great museums. . . . little out-of-the-way museums and provincial churches are admissible. But to score special points one must visit really distinguished collections in private houses—Genauer) <perhaps the most common ploy of stockholders at annual meetings is imparting ideas on how the business should be run—Wall Street Jour.> or it can be used of an individual maneuver in the development of a gambit <subplays or individual maneuvers of a gambit are usually referred to as loys—Stephen Potter> However in their common conjoined use gambit and ploy are seldom distinguishable <demonstrates his Gamesmanship technique for inducing embarrassment and discomfort, and offers loys and gambits for use against such rivals as fishing companions, wine experts, and fellow club members—New Yorker> <among the loys and gambits the President may have used in the process were the White House breakfast . . . the fireside chat . . . the press conference . . . the dangled patronage—Rossiter> Artifice suggests the employment of devices or contrivances; it usually connotes ingenuity, but it need not connote an intent to deceive or overreach <the artifices by which friends endeavor to spare one another's feelings—Shaw> <he was witnessing a remarkable performance? Not a show of artifice . . . but a genuine creative effort—Hervey> Wile usually suggests an attempt to entrap or ensnare by allurements or by false and deceptive appearances; it may connote slyness and imposture, but it often suggests coquetry or an attempt to charm (the Devil was helping him and made him sly and foxier than the fox with all the wiles, and the cunning, and the craftiness—Farrell) <he was no longer a mild old man to be worked on by the wiles of engaging youth, but a stern-spoken person in high authority—Archibald Marshall> Feint basically applies to a thrust (as of a rapier or a fist) seemingly directed at one part of an opponent's body but actually designed to divert his attention and his guards away from the part at which it is really aimed. In extended use the term commonly implies the employment of a stratagem or maneuver which distracts attention from one's actual intention until it is accomplished <I love to think the leaving us was just a feint—Browning> <smiled a little embarrassedly at his colleague who, whether in feint or truth, was too occupied to take a part—Terry Southern> <believed the dropping of parachutists was merely an Allied feint to cover their main landings—Shirer>

Ana *imposture, deceit, deception, counterfeit, humbug, fake, cheat, fraud: *fun, jest, sport, game, play 2 turn, tour, shift, *spell, stint, bout, go trick vb gull, befool, hoax, *dupe, hoodwink, bamboozle Ana *deceive, delude, beguile, mislead: outwit, circumvent (see FRUSTRATE): cajole, wheedle, blandish, *coax trickery *deception, double-dealing, chicanery, chicane, fraud

Ana *deceit, dissimulation, guile, cunning, duplicity: *imposture, cheat, fraud, sham, fake, humbug, counterfeit tricky crafty, foxy, insidious, cunning, *sly, wily, guileful, artful Ana *crooked, devious, oblique: deceptive, delusive, *misleading, delusory: deceitful, *dishonest tried *reliable, dependable, trustworthy, trusty Ana staunch, steadfast, constant, *faithful: proved, demonstrated, tested (see PROVE) trifle, toy, dally, flirt, coquet can all mean to deal with a person or thing without seriousness, earnestness, close attention, or purpose. Trifle, the most comprehensive term of the group, may be used interchangeably with any of the others, implying any of such varied attitudes as playfulness, unconcern, indulgent contempt, or light amorosness <dabbled in poetry, delivered ironical orations, . . . trifled with some of the radical doctrines then current—Lerner) <knows when to be serious and when to trifle, and he has a sure tact which enables him to trifle with gracefulness and to be serious with effect—Newman> <she began to trifle with plans of retirement, of playing in Paris, of taking a theatre in London, and other whims—Shaw> Toy implies a dealing with a person or thing in a way that keeps one pleasantly occupied but does not engage one's full attention or evoke serious intention <since Plutarch, innumerable hands have toyed with historical biography, but not until our time has it become perfected as an art form—Mandel> <he lapsed into becoming an observer of life, toying on the margin of women and politics—Lowenthal> <there is evidence that Augustus, like Julius, toyed with the idea of giving the Assemblies greater power and making them representative of the whole body of citizens in Italy—Buchan> Dally stresses indulgence in something (as thoughts or plans) as a pastime or amusement rather than as leading to something definite or serious; it usually retains some hint of deliberate dawdling, the notion predominant in another of its senses <dallied with him, and liked him well enough, but there was a more glittering catch on her horizon—Kathleen Fitzpatrick> <poetry . . . is not a mere exercise in fancy, not a dallying with pretty little nothings—Kilby> <for so, to interpose a little ease, let our frail thoughts dally with false surmise—Milton> Flirt, which in several of its senses implies quick jerky movement, in this extended use stresses vagrancy and superficiality of interest, attention, or liking and often a tendency to pass heedlessly from one person or concern to another <German leaders were flirting with the idea of a deal with Russia—Time> <the bright young people flirting with new isms—O'Hearn> <afraid to have either war or peace with the enemy, we flirt with both prospects—Ascoli> Coquet primarily refers to a trifling in love, such as is characteristic of a flirtatious woman <she coquetted with the solid husbands of her friends, and with the two or three bachelors of the town—Dorothy Parker> but it is also used in reference to things which catch one's interest but with which one will not come fairly to terms <there were none of those external indications of Christmas which are so frequent at "good" Jewish houses . . . Mrs. Henry Goldsmith did not countenance these coquettings with Christianity—Zangwill>

Ana palter, fib, equivocate, prevaricate, *lie: waver, vacillate, falter, *hesitate: dawdle (see DELAY)
trifling trivial, *petty, puny, paltry, measly, picayunish, picayune

Ana inane, wishy-washy, banal, jejune, vapid, *insipid: *vain, idle, otiose, nugatory, empty, hollow: *venial, pardonable trig trim, *neat, tidy, spick-and-span, snug, shipshape Ana *orderly, methodical trill vb *sing, troll, carol, descant, warble, hymn, chant, intone trim vb 1 *shear, poll, clip, prune, lop, snip, crop 2 *stabilize, steady, poise, balance, ballast

Ana *adjust, regulate, fix: counterbalance, counterpoise, offset, *compensate trim adj *neat, tidy, trig, snug, shipshape, spick-and-span Ana *clean, cleanly: compact, *close

Ant frowzy

trip vb *stumble, blunder, lurch, flounder, lumber, galumph, lollop, bumble

Ana totter, stagger, *reel: *fall, drop trip n *journey, voyage, tour, excursion, cruise, expedition, jaunt, pilgrimage trite, hackneyed, stereotyped, threadbare, shopworn are comparable when they describe something, especially a once effective idea or expression in writing or art or a dramatic plot, lacking the power to evoke attention or interest because it lacks freshness. Trite applies to something spoiled by too long familiarity with it and suggests commonplaceness or total lack of power to impress (the foregoing remarks doubtless sound trite and commonplace—Cohen) (it is as true as it is trite to liken the desert to a sea and the camel to a ship—Coon) (one could wish however that he had found a less trite and commonplace way of ending his chapters—Geographical Jour.) Hackneyed, often interchangeable with trite, stresses the idea of such constant use that all significance or force is dulled or destroyed (the hackneyed pictures we have seen again and again—C. M. Smith) (used the hackneyed old theme of the vanity of earthly power for one of his best poems—Langer) (a hackneyed and cheap melodrama) Stereotyped stresses an imitative quality and a usually total lack of originality or creativity (most advertising today is stereotyped—using the same words, the same ideas that we have had for more than 50 years—Printers' Ink) (a stereotyped novel about a young girl growing to womanhood) Threadbare applies to what has been used or exploited so much that its possibilities of interest have been totally exhausted (when one writer hit upon a good phrase the others took it up and used it until it became threadbare—Walker) (this charge is becoming threadbare with repetition—Pollack) (our self-deceptive pretence of jollity at a threadbare joke—Hawthorne) Shopworn suggests a loss, from constant use, of some or most of the qualities that appeal or arouse interest (there hardly exists a more shopworn plot than the one about the show that during its preparation has to battle against all sorts of obstacles to emerge in the end a sensational success—Baum) (when a book as unusual as this appears the old adjectives seem too shopworn to do it justice—Graham Bates) (he has devoted his very considerable talents to a shopworn theme: the building of the first space platform—McComas)

Ana *old, antiquated, archaic, obsolete: banal, flat, jejune, *insipid, vapid: depleted, exhausted, drained, impoverished (see DEplete)

Ant original: fresh triumph n *victory, conquest

Ana vanquishing, subjugation, surmounting, overthrowing, routing (see corresponding verbs at CONquer) trivial trifling, *petty, puny, paltry, measly, picayunish, picayune

Ana *small, little, diminutive: *futile, vain, fruitless, bootless: slight, slim, slender, *thin, tenuous

Ant weighty: momentous troll vb *sing, carol, descant, warble, trill, hymn, chant, intone troop n band, troupe, *company, party

Ana *crowd, throng, press: assembly, gathering, collection (see under GATHER): legion, host, army, *multitude troubadour *poet, versifier, rhymers, rhymester; poetaster, bard, minstrel trouble vb 1 Trouble, distress, ail can all mean to cause to be uneasy or upset. Trouble suggests loss of tranquillity or serenity and implies disturbance of any sort that interferes with efficiency, convenience, comfort, health of body, or peace of mind (‘tis not my speeches that you do mislike, but ‘tis my presence that doth trouble ye—Shak.) (let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me—Jn 14:1) (it was his face which was so startling, so troubling: limber-jawed, twitching all over with emotion—Styron) Distress implies subjection to strain or pressure that causes such reactions as tension, pain, worry, or grief; thus, a cough distresses when it is tight and persistent; the formation of gas in the stomach distresses by its pressing bloating effect; a person is distressed in mind when anxiety distracts or crushes him; a person is financially distressed when he is in circumstances so straitened that he cannot pay his debts or satisfy his needs (it was this unseeing quality . . . that distressed Maria, that left her with a mingling of compassion and apprehension—Hervey) Ail implies that something has gone wrong or is the matter; in contrast to trouble and distress it is used only in respect to unspecified causes; thus, a cough may be said to trouble or to distress a person but not to ail him; one can be troubled or distressed but not ailed by something disturbing (few American industries have gone to such lengths . . . to find out what was ailing it—Nation's Business) (that . . . was what ailed the Jews: they never knew when they were whipped—Douglas)

Ana *discompose, disquiet, disturb, perturb, upset, agitate: vex, irk, *annoy, bother

2 *inconvenience, incommode, discommode

Ana *embarrass, discomfit, disconcert, abash: *worry, annoy, plague, pester: perplex, *puzzle, distract trouble n *effort, exertion, pains

Ana flurry, fuss, ado, *stir, bustle, pother: labor, toil, *work: *difficulty, rigor, vicissitude, hardship troupe troop, band, *company, party trouper *actor, player, performer, mummer, mime, mimic, thespian, impersonator truant n *vagabond, vagrant, tramp, hobo, bum truce, cease-fire, armistice, peace are comparable when they mean a state of suspension of hostilities or an agreement for suspending hostilities. The first three terms are commonly interchangeable and each of them can sometimes replace peace, yet all four terms can so differ in emphasis and in connotation as to permit them to be used distinctively and with a degree of precision. Truce is the most general term and can apply to an understanding or agreement for the suspension of hostilities or to a resulting suspension, not only on the part of military forces and nations but equally in the case of disputes (as between labor and management) and of individuals engaged in disputing (a volume of essays . . . where the parts of his complex and tortured spirit come together in a truce of amity and concord—Woolf) (their present chilly marital truce—F. H. Bullock) Historically truce denotes an interruption of hostilities for a predetermined and specified period, and it remains the most appropriate term when this notion is prominent (on Christmas Eve the Communist high command called a truce for the holidays—Collier's Yr. Bk.) (wants a two or three year truce on tariffs—Vernon) Truce also is appropriately used when the agreement is local rather than general (agree to a truce to bury the dead) or when there is a clear indication that no general or permanent termination of hostilities is proposed (in international law, [truce is] an agreement between belligerent parties by which they mutually engage to forbear all acts of hostility against each other for some time, the war still continuing—Collegiate Law Dict.) Cease-fire is the most recent of these terms and is rarely used except in relation to actual military engagement. Basically it applies to a literal order to desist from firing on an enemy (efforts to secure full observance of a cease-fire—Lie) As applied to a suspension of hostilities it may imply an intermitting of acts of active hostility for the duration of a period of negotiation (the cease-fire was over; the peace talks had failed—Newsweek) or as a preliminary step toward a more permanent or more substantial suspension (the first stage is a cease-fire. This is already in effect. The second is the signing of a truce agreement to make the cease-fire permanent—U. N. Bulletin) but more often it implies a cessation of hostilities for an indefinite period of time with the warring parties, typically in a state of military readiness, remaining in the positions they held at the time hostilities ceased or withdrawing a short distance to create a demilitarized zone and without the implication of a permanent peaceful settlement (the fighting should be stopped by an armistice agreement. A cease-fire leaving opposing forces where they now are would be unsatisfactory—Tillman Durdin) (press for a reduction in the military strength of the parties holding the cease-fire line—U. N. Background Papers) Cease-fire may additionally suggest the intercession of a neutral party in securing the cessation of hostilities (had two weeks in which to persuade Nationalists and Communists to quit shooting at each other before sitting down together; he arranged a cease-fire just 30 minutes before the conference began—Time) (cease-fire arrangements by the United Nations—Landis) and in supervising its observance (Contribute contingents to the United Nations for . . . the supervision of agreed cease-fires—Munro) Armistice (in full, general armistice) basically applies to a formal agreement at the highest level for the laying down of arms and a suspension of military operations; though it does not ordinarily suggest a permanent state, it does commonly imply one that persists either indefinitely or until termination of hostilities by a peace treaty (an armistice is a written agreement, usually between the highest authorities of the warring powers, which suspends military operations for a definite or indefinite period of time A General Armistice is broader in scope, embodying both military and political principles and usually precedes peace negotiations—Coast Artillery Jour.) (no treaty followed the armistice, which was never more than an imperfect cease-fire—Liebling) But sometimes armistice (in full, local armistice) applies to a merely local or temporary suspension and is then indistinguishable from truce in a similar sense (an armistice is) an agreement for the general cessation of active hostilities between two or more belligerents. Distinguished from general armistices are arrangements for a short-term or partial suspension of arms called local armistice or truce which may be made between commanders in the field, for a variety of purposes such as burying the dead. General armistices are made by commanders in chief, usually pursuant to political decision of the governments concerned. An armistice does not put an end to the state of war—Gross) In its occasional extended use armistice usually stresses the temporariness and uncertainty of the state (he had learned to live in the land and had established an uneasy armistice between himself and the hostility of rocks and elements—Mowat) Peace (compare peaceable and peaceful under PACIFIC) can denote a state of mutual concord between governments or more specifically the state resulting from the termination of hostilities (if ever there is to be a peace which is not an armistice, men must learn to live at least as well as they now know how to die—J. M. Brown) (today there is a truce in Korea. After 3 years of hostilities, we are now in the first year of an armed peace—Eisenhower) or it can apply to an agreement by which such a state is attained (the purpose of some overtures, it could be foreseen, would be to test out Allied solidarity by offering a tempting separate peace to one or the other—Feis) (the severely punitive peace . . . which the Allies attempted to impose upon Turkey—Kennan) Unlike the other terms peace imputes permanence or an intention of permanence to the state of or the agreement for suspension of hostilities (Adler says flatly that there can be no peace between sovereign states; at best there can be nothing more than an uneasy “truce,” a period of jockeying and diplomatic cheating preliminary to the next outbreak of armed conflict—Time)

truckle *fawn, toady, cringe, cower

Ana defer, succumb, bow, cave, *yield, submit: *follow, tag, trail, fail truculent *fierce, ferocious, barbarous, savage, inhuman, cruel, fell

Ana intimidating, cowing, bulldozing, browbeating, bullying (see INTIMIDATE): terrorizing, terrifying, frightening (see FRIGHTEN): threatening, menacing (see THREATEN) true 1 *faithful, loyal, constant, staunch, steadfast, resolute Ana *reliable, dependable, trustworthy, tried: persevering, persisting (see PERSEVERE): *sincere, wholehearted, whole-souled, unfeigned

Ant false (sense 2): fickle

2 *real, actual

Ana genuine, *authentic, veritable, bona fide: exact, precise, *correct, right: typical, natural, *regular truism *commonplace, platitude, bromide, cliché

Ant false

Ana triteness, threadbareness (see corresponding adjectives at TRITE): banality, jejuneness, inanity (see corresponding adjectives at INSIPID) trust n 1 Trust, confidence, reliance, dependence, faith can all mean the fact of feeling sure or the state of mind of one who feels sure that a person or thing will not fail him. Trust implies an absolute and assured resting on something or someone; it often suggests a basis upon other grounds than experience or sensible proofs. It is the most frequent term in religious use (O God . . . in thee is my trust—Ps 141:8) but it occurs also in secular use, especially when an intimate knowledge of or a deep affection for someone is implied (he was a gentleman on whom I built an absolute trust—Shak.) or when there has been no cause for changing an instinctive or intuitive judgment respecting a person's or thing's reliability (the ways in which some of the most highly placed and powerful figures in the state have betrayed the public trust—Armbrister) Confidence need not imply such definite grounds for one's assurances as the support of experience or of convincing evidence; when it does, it carries less suggestion of emotional factors than trust and a stronger implication of an assurance based upon the evidence of one's senses (those in whom we had no confidence, and who reposed no confidence in us—Burke) When it does not imply such grounds, it usually suggests less reliable grounds for that feeling than does trust (he had . . . an unquenchable confidence in himself and a deep, burning sense of mission—Shirer) Reliance implies not only an attitude or feeling but also an objective expression of it in act or action (he had such reliance on the doctor's skill that he allowed himself to be operated upon at once) (his diffidence had prevented his depending on his own judgment in so anxious a case, but his reliance on mine made everything easy—Austen) (Mark had written out his Christmas sermon with a good deal of care and an excessive reliance on what other preachers had said before him—Mackenzie) Dependence differs from reliance chiefly in suggesting greater subordination of self (affectionate dependence on the Creator—Thomas Erskine) (he had a . . . mixture of conceit and terrible self-doubt, and . . . he shifted between extremes of emotional dependence and independence—Wouk) Faith (see also BELIEF 1) implies confidence, but it often suggests a degree of credulity or an unquestioning acceptance of something capable of being objectively tested and proved or disproved; it is often used when the person or thing in which one has faith is open to question or suspicion (he has great faith in a popular patent medichine) <my faith in Germanism had not wavered—H. S. Chamberlain>

Ana assurance, conviction, certitude, *certainty: *belief, faith, credence, credit

Ant mistrust

2 *monopoly, corner, pool, syndicate, cartel trust vb *rely, depend, count, reckon, bank

Ana confide, entrust, *commit, consign: hope, *expect, look trustworthy *reliable, dependable, trusty, tried

Ana *safe, secure: veracious, truthful (see corresponding nouns at TRUTH): staunch, constant, steadfast, *faithful: honest, *upright, scrupulous

Ant deceitful: dubious trusty trustworthy, tried, *reliable, dependable

Ana *faithful, staunch, steadfast, constant truth, veracity, verity, verisimilitude are comparable when they mean the quality or property of keeping close to the facts or to things as they are and avoiding such distortions as lies, fictions, or misrepresentations. Truth is a general term ranging in meaning from a transcendent idea to an indication of conformity with fact and of avoidance of error, misrepresentation, or falsehood <the truths of religion are more like the truths of poetry than like the truths of science: that is, they are vision and insight, apprehended by the whole man, and not merely by the analyzing mind—Times Lit. Sup.> <truth as the opposite of error and of falsehood—Eliot> Veracity usually implies rigid and unflinching adherence to, observance of, or respect for truth <question an opponent's veracity> <his passion for veracity always kept him from taking any unfair rhetorical advantages of an opponent—Huxley> <I cannot, indeed, guarantee the absolute veracity of any of my apparently authentic law reports—Sutherland> Verity typically designates the quality of a state or thing in being true or entirely in accordance with factual reality or with what should be so regarded: sometimes the word designates what is marked by lasting, ultimate, or transcendent value <most primitive and national religions have also started out, naturally enough, with the assumption of their own verity and importance—Kroeber> <the old verities and truths of the heart, the old universal truths lacking which any story is ephemeral and doomed—love and honor and pity and pride and compassion and sacrifice—Faulkner> Verisimilitude describes the quality of a representation that causes one to accept it as true <to convey human nature in fiction requires the highest degree of verisimilitude; events that seem just like those of life as the reader's experience has led him to conceive of life must happen to people who seem just like human beings in a succession which seems just like the course of human affairs—E. K. Brown> <the mathematical picture . . . so far as we know . . . depicts the phenomena of nature with complete verisimilitude—Jeans>

Ana exactness, precision, correctness, rightness (see corresponding adjectives at CORRECT): authenticity, genuineness, veritableness (see corresponding adjectives at AUTHENTIC)

Ant untruth: lie, falsehood try vb 1 test, *prove, demonstrate

Ana *judge, adjudge, adjudicate: inspect, examine, *scrutinize

2 *afflict, torment, torture, rack

Ana *worry, harass, harry, plague, pester: *trouble, distress: irk, vex, bother, *annoy

3 *attempt, endeavor, essay, strive, struggle

Ana *aim, . . . aspire: *intend, mean, propose, purpose, design try n attempt, endeavor, essay, striving, struggle (see under ATTEMPT vb)

Ana *effort, exertion, trouble, pains: test, trial, proof (see under PROVE) tryst rendezvous, assignation, *engagement, appointment, date tucker fatigue, exhaust, jade, fag, *tire, weary

Ana *deplete, drain, exhaust, impoverish, bankrupt tug vb tow, hale, haul, drag, *pull, draw tumid *inflated, flatulent, turgid

Ana expanded, distended, swollen, dilated (see EXPAND): pretentious, *showy, ostentatious: bombastic, grandiloquent, magniloquent, *rhetorical tumor, neoplasm, malignancy, cancer can all denote an abnormal growth or mass of tissue. Tumor, the most general term, is applicable to any such growth or mass in or on the surface of the body of a human being, animal, or plant <the term tumor literally means a swelling, and thus has been applied to the prominence caused by an overdistended bladder, to the enlargement of pregnancy, to the swelling produced by an abscess, to the overgrowth of tissue (hyperplasia) associated with injury and consequent inflammation, and to numerous other phases of tissue enlargement directly connected with recognized disease processes—Mohler> Neoplasm often replaces tumor in technical use when the reference is specifically to a more or less unrestrained new growth of cells that serves no physiological purpose or to a mass formed by such growth  Malignancy in application to a neoplasm denotes a growth that because of unrestrained proliferation and tendency to spread and invade other tissues constitutes a danger to life. This use, though deplored by some purists, is common in technical literature and often used euphemistically in discussion with a patient or his associates. Cancer is the usual popular and technical term for a malignant neoplasm, though sometimes it is applied specifically to such neoplasms arising in epithelial tissues (as skin or membrane) which are more often distinguished as carcinomas from the other great class of cancers, the sarcomas, that originate in non-epithelial tissues (as bone, muscle, or connective tissue).

tumult *commotion, agitation, turmoil, turbulence, confusion, convulsion, upheaval

Ana agitation, perturbation, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): uprising, insurrection, *rebellion, revolt, mutiny: disorder, unsettlement (see corresponding verbs at DISORDER): *din, uproar, pandemonium tune n *melody, air tune vb *harmonize, attune

Ana *adjust, regulate, fix: *adapt, accommodate, reconcile, conform turbid, muddy, roily are comparable when they mean not clear or translucent but clouded with or as if with sediment. Turbid describes something (as a liquid or, in extended use, an idea, affair, or feeling) which is stirred up and disturbed so that it is made opaque or becomes obscured or confused <the turbid water of a river in flood> <careless handling of a bottle makes wine turbid> <the turbid ebb and flow of human misery—Arnold> <the air without had the turbid yellow light of sandstorms—Cather> <turbid feelings, arising from ideas not fully mastered, had to clarify . . . themselves—H. O. Taylor>

Muddy describes something which is turbid or opaque as a result of being mixed with mud or with something suggestive of mud or which is merely mud-colored <muddy coffee>  In extended use the term carries a stronger suggestion than turbid of a dull, heavy, or muddled character  <a muddy thinker, but a superb artist—J. D. Adams) <the muddy and slow-moving plot has something to do with spying and counterspying—H. H. Holmes) Roily describes something which is turbid and agitated <where the roily Monongahela meets the clear Allegheny—Weed) <the human rubble . . . washed up by the roily wake of the war—Woodburn)

Ana obscure, *dark, murky: *dirty, foul, nasty

Ant clear: limpid

turbulence *commotion, agitation, tumult, turmoil, confusion, convulsion, upheaval

Ana *din, uproar, babel, pandemonium: agitation, perturbation, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

turgid tumid, *inflated, flatulent

Ana expanded, distended, amplified, swollen (see EXPAND): magniloquent, grandiloquent, *rhetorical, bombastic turmoil *commotion, agitation, tumult, turbulence, confusion, convulsion, upheaval

Ana agitation, disquiet, disturbance, perturbation (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): restlessness, nervousness, uneasiness, jitteriness (see corresponding adjectives at IMPATIENT)

turn vb 1 Turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, twirl, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl, pirouette can all mean to go or move or cause to go or move in a circle. Turn is a general rather colorless word implying movement in circle after circle or in a single full circle or through an arc of a circle. It is interchangeable with most of the other terms in their less specific uses  <turned to speak to his friend> Revolve may suggest regular circular motion on an orbit around something exterior to the item in question <the earth revolves around the sun> It may refer to the dependence of the less important, the secondary, on something cardinal or pivotal which resolves or determines <though local questions, such as the State Bank and state aid to railroads, gave rise to sharp contests, politics usually revolved around national questions—A. B. Moore> <everything in that house revolved upon Aunt Mary—Deland> Rotate is likely to suggest a circular motion on an interior axis within the thing under consideration which may be not moving otherwise <the earth rotates on its axis while it revolves in its orbit> Gyrate may suggest the regularity of revolve, but it is more likely to be used to indicate a fluctuating or swinging back and forth which describes circular or spiral patterns (stocks gyrated dizzily on uncertainty over the foreign situation—Wall Street Jour.)  Circle basically applies to a movement around in a more or less circular pattern, but it can also be used with reference to a lack of straight directness in a winding course  <the essayist's license to circle and meander—Woolf> or, specifically, to a curved or arched course followed in avoiding something <the soldiers were circling homewards in high spirits at a safe distance from the war area—Wald> Spin implies rapid sustained rotation on an inner axis or fast circling around an exterior point <he who but ventures into the outer circle of the whirlpool is spinning, ere he has time for thought, in its dizzy vortex—Bayard Taylor> Twirl can add to the ideas of spin those of dexterity, lightness, or easy grace <this . . . book . . . I toss i' the air, and catch again, and twirl about—Browning> Whirl stresses force, power, speed, and impetus of rotary or circular motion <and collections of opaque particles whirled to shore by the eddies—Bartram> <the withered leaves had gathered violence in pursuit, and were whirling after her like a bevy of witches—Glasgow) Wheel may suggest either going in a circular or twisted course or turning on an arc or curve to a new course  <she had crossed the threshold to the porch, when, wheeling abruptly, she went back into the hall—Glasgow> Eddy suggests the circular movement, sometimes fast, sometimes slow, of an eddy; it may be used in situations involving indirection, futility, or isolation from main currents <as the smoke slowly edded away—Crane> <the dead leaves which edded slowly down through the windless calm—West> <waves of friends and reporters edded through the . . . apartment—Time> Swirl suggests more rapidity, flow, or graceful attractiveness than eddy <further than ever comet flared or vagrant star dust swirled—Kipling> <the black water was running like a millrace and raising a turbulent coil as it swirled and tossed over the ugly heads of jutting rocks—Costain> <her dark hair swirled about her face—Helen Howe> Pirouette suggests the light graceful turning of a ballet dancer <ashes pirouetted down, coquetting with young beeches—Tennyson>

Ana *swing, oscillate, vibrate, fluctuate, pendulate, undulate

2 Turn, divert, deflect, avert, sheer are comparable when they mean to change or cause to change course or direction. Turn is the most comprehensive of these words and the widest in its range of application. It may be used in reference to any change in course or direction of something movable, no matter how small or how large an arc is traversed, but it usually requires qualification <here the river turns slightly to the north> <he turned the car just in time to avoid a collision> <the force of the impact turned the boat completely around> It may also be used in reference to something (as things that show a drift, a bent, or a tendency or persons or things that can respond to an influence) which follows a figurative course or proceeds in a definite direction <turn the conversation to livelier topics> <turn public opinion against a person> <turn an enemy into a friend> <even the younger men had turned against me—Yeats> <in his need his thoughts turned to the sea which had given him so much . . . congenial solitude—Conrad> Divert may be preferred to turn when there is an implication of an imposed change in an existent or a natural course or direction <divert a river by providing a new channel> <the unfounded belief that a lightning rod is capable of diverting lightning from a building it is about to strike> <the machinery of our economic life has been diverted from peace to war—Atlee> When used in reference to a person's concerns (as thoughts, interests, attention, or intentions) it often presupposes mental concentration, fixity of attention, or resoluteness of purpose; therefore, when an attempt to alter the situation (as by distracting, dissuading, or sidetracking) is to be suggested, divert is the appropriate word <hard to divert his attention when he is engrossed in study> <had I spoke with her, I could have well diverted her intents—Shak.> <could France or Rome divert our brave designs, with all their brandies or with all their wines?—Pope> Deflect, in contrast to divert, implies a turning (as by bouncing, refracting, or ricocheting) from a straight course or a fixed direction <deflect a ray of light by passing it through a prism> <deflect a magnetic needle> In its extended use it is chiefly referred to thoughts, purposes, or interests that pursue a rigid or clearly defined course or direction; consequently the word sometimes connotes deviation or aberration <he underwent all those things—but none of them deflected his purpose—Belloc> <after all, she had perhaps purposely deflected the conversation from her own affairs—Wharton) Avert implies a turning away from what is before one physically or mentally; it is used chiefly in reference to something at which one has been looking or of which one has been thinking and carries commonly a strong implication of avoidance and, often, a further suggestion of repugnance (tried to avert her eyes; but like a child irresistibly drawn to peek at the monster in a horror movie . . . kept glancing at Mr. Greech—Wouk) (the last drop of her magnanimity had been spent, and she tried to avert her shuddering mind from Charlotte—Wharton) Sheer is used basically in reference to the turning of a boat or ship from its course especially in an emergency (the yachts sheered to so that their captains could speak to each other) (sheer off the boat just in time to avoid collision with a rock) In its extended use the word commonly implies a sudden or conspicuous turning aside from a path or course that has been followed (an age when the interests of popular liberty and of intellectual freedom had sheered off from the church—J. R. Green)

Ana *swerve, veer, deviate, diverge, digress, depart:

*move, shift

3 *resort, refer, apply, go

4 *depend, hinge, hang turn n 1 trick, tour, shift, *spell, stint, bout, go 2 *gift, bent, faculty, aptitude, genius, talent, knack

Ana inclination, disposition, predisposition, bias (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE): propensity, proclivity, penchant, *leaning, flair

turncoat *renegade, apostate, recreant, backslider

Ana deserter, forsaker, abandoner (see corresponding verbs at ABANDON) turn out *bear, produce, yield

Ana *make, form, fashion, shape, manufacture, fabricate: propagate, breed, *generate, engender tussle vb *wrestle, grapple, scuffle

Ana *contend, fight: *resist, combat, withstand, oppose: compete, vie, *rival twaddle n *nonsense, drivel, bunk, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull tweet n chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, twitter, chitter (see under CHIRP vb)

tweet vb *chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, twitter, chitter twine vb *wind, coil, curl, twist, wreathe, entwine

Ana *curve, bend: interweave, interplait (see base words at WEAVE): entangle, enmesh twinge n *pain, ache, pang, throe, stitch twinkle vb *flash, gleam, glance, glint, sparkle, glitter, glisten, scintillate, coruscate twinkling *instant, moment, minute, second, flash, jiffy, split second twirl vb *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, whirl, wheel, eddy, swirl, pirouette twist vb 1 *wind, coil, curl, twine, wreathe, entwine

Ana combine, unite, associate (see JOIN): plait, braid, knit, *weave: encircle, *surround

2 bend, *curve

Ana spin, twirl, whirl (see TURN vb): contort, distort (see DEFORM) twister *whirlwind, cyclone, typhoon, hurricane, tornado, waterspout twit vb *ridicule, deride, mock, taunt, rally

Ana reproach, chide, *reprove: reprehend, blame, censure (see CRITICIZE): *scoff, jeer, gibe twitch vb *jerk, snap, yank

Ana *pull, drag, tug: clutch, snatch, grasp (see TAKE) twitter vb *chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, tweet, chitter twitter n chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, tweet, chitter (see under CHIRP vb)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

type n 1 *symbol, emblem, attribute

Ana *sign, mark, token: intimation, suggestion (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST 1): adumbration, shadowing (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST 2)

Ant antitype

2 Type, kind, sort, stripe, kidney, ilk, description, nature, character are comparable when they denote a number of individuals thought of as a group or class because of one or more shared and distinctive characteristics.

Type may suggest strong, clearly marked, or obvious similarities throughout the items included so that the distinctiveness of the group that they form cannot be overlooked (the landforms are related to these rock types—Trueman)

(the most dangerous type of critic: the critic with a mind which is naturally of the creative order—T. S. Eliot)

Kind in most uses is likely to be very indefinite and involve any criterion of classification whatever (each kind of mental or bodily activity—Spencer) (their soil yields treasures of every kind—Buckle) (the kind of fear here treated of is purely spiritual—Lamb) but it may suggest criteria of grouping dependent natural, intrinsic characteristics (Sinic philosophers conceived yin and yang as two different kinds of matter . . . yin symbolized water and yang fire—Toynbee)

Sort is often a close synonym of kind (the sort of culture I am trying to define—Powys) and may be used in situations having a suggestion of disparagement (the sort of journals put out by the learned societies—New Republic) (Victorianism of a meaner and baser sort—Millett) (what sort of idiots have you got around here?—Long)

Type, kind, and sort are usually interchangeable and are used most of the time without attention to special connotations.

Stripe and kidney are used mostly of people rather than things; the first may suggest political attitude or affiliation, the second persuasion, disposition, or social level (all Fascists are not of one mind, one stripe—Hellman) (economic dogmatists of whatever stripe—Atlantic) (the crown representative and comptroller, were political appointees; and like many men of that kidney had never done a fair share of the work—Morison)

Ilk may suggest grouping on the basis of status, attitude, or temperament (no matter if . . . your ancestors spoke only to Cabots and their ilk—Walker) (one great composer is worth twenty of your ilk—Bella & Samuel Spewack)

Description, nature, and character are close synonyms of type and kind mostly in phrases beginning with of. Description may suggest a grouping in which all salient details of description or definition are involved; nature may suggest inherent, essential characteristics rather than superficial, ostensible, or tentative ones; and character may stress distinctive or individualizing criteria (all embargoes are not of this description. They are sometimes resorted to . . . with a single view to commerce—John Marshall) (the few hitherto known phenomena of a similar nature—Amer. Jour. of Science) (until the invention of printing advertising was necessarily of this primitive character—Presbrey)

Ana exemplar, example, *model, pattern typhoon *whirlwind, cyclone, hurricane, tornado, waterspout, twister typical *regular, natural, normal

Ana generic, general, *universal, common: specific (see SPECIAL)

Ant atypical: distinctive tyrannical, tyrannous despotic, arbitrary, *absolute, autocratic

Ana *dictatorial, authoritarian, magisterial: *totalitarian, authoritarian: domineering, imperious, *masterful tyro *amateur, dilettante, dabbler

Ana *novice, apprentice, probationer, neophyte

U ubiquitous *omnipresent

ugly, hideous, ill-favored, unsightly are comparable when they mean contrary to what is beautiful or pleasing especially to the sight. Ugly is the comprehensive term which may apply not only to what is distasteful to the sight but also to the hearing or occasionally to another sense or to whatever gives rise to repulsion, repugnance, dread, or extreme moral distaste in the mind (acres of ugly wooden tenement houses line the drab streets—Amer. Guide Series: Mass.) (these evenings . . . ended up in a welter of ugly words, tears, misunderstandings—Styron) (it is essential to sweep away in art all that is . . . fundamentally ugly, whether by being, at the one end, distastefully pretty, or, at the other, hopelessly crude—Ellis) (how eager we are to reveal all sorts of . . . ugly secrets about ourselves—Mailer) (life in the moment . . . seemed ugly and brutal—Anderson) Hideous carries an even stronger implication of the personal impression produced by something ugly by stressing the suggestions of induced horror or loathing; it may on occasion be applied to something which, without regard to any surface ugliness, arouses intense personal distaste (an altogether hideous room—expensive but cheesy—Salinger) (the papers of the students dismayed me as a hideous revelation of the abysses of noneducation that are possible in the United States—Edmund Wilson) Ill-favored applies especially to the features or to the general aspect or appearance of a person or sometimes an animal that may be described as ugly; the word emphasizes the unpleasing or disagreeable character, so far as the eyes are concerned, but seldom suggests marked distaste, repugnance, or dread (an ill-favored thing, sir, but mine own—Shak.) (a scrawny, ill-favored little girl, always untidily dressed—Mead) Unsightly usually refers to things, especially material things, upon which the eye dwells with no pleasure; it often is used in place of ugly when a connotation of distaste is not strongly marked (their unsightly hovels were not visible from his melancholy old house on the hill—Deland) (an unsightly swamp and dump grounds—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.)

Ana *plain, homely; grotesque, bizarre (see FANTASTIC) Ant beautiful —Con fair, lovely, handsome, pretty, comely, good-looking (see BEAUTIFUL) ultimate 1 *last, latest, final, terminal, concluding, eventual 2 Ultimate, absolute, categorical, despite great differences in implications, mean in common so fundamental as to represent the extreme limit of actual or possible knowledge. Something ultimate represents the utmost limit attained or attainable either by analysis or by synthesis (that lofty musing on the ultimate nature of things—Huxley) (the fugue was considered the ultimate vehicle for profound musical expression—Wier) Something absolute (see also PURE 1; ABSOLUTE 2) has the character of being above all imperfection because it is not derived but original, not partial but complete, not subject to qualification because unlimited, and not dependent on anything else because self-sufficient. What is absolute has, as a rule, ideal existence and implies an opposite in actuality lacking the marks of absoluteness (absolute reality as opposed to reality as known) (absolute, as opposed to human, justice) (truth . . . is no absolute thing, but always relative—Galsworthy) (Luther . . . was led to set up the text of the Bible as a sort of visible absolute, a true and perfect touchstone in matters religious—Babbitt) Something categorical (see also EXPLICIT) is so fundamental that human reason cannot go beyond it in a search for generality or universality and has therefore an affirmative, undeniable character; thus, the categorical concepts or the categories as they are often called, are the few concepts (as quantity, quality, and relation) to which all human knowledge can be reduced, inasmuch as no more general conceptions can be found to include them.

ululate *roar, bellow, bluster, bawl, vociferate, clamor, howl

Ana wail, keen, weep, *cry: bewail, lament (see DEPLORE) ululation see under ululate at ROAR vb

umbra penumbra, *shade, shadow, umbrage, adumbration umbrage 1 shadow, *shade, umbra, penumbra, adumbration

2 *offense, resentment, pique, dudgeon, huff

Ana annoyance, vexation, irking (see corresponding verbs at ANNOY): irritation, exasperation, provocation, nettling (see corresponding verbs at IRRITATE): indignation, rage, fury, wrath, *anger, ire umpire n referee, *judge, arbiter, arbitrator unaffected artless, *natural, simple, ingenuous, naive, unsophisticated unafraid fearless, dauntless, undaunted, bold, intrepid, audacious, *brave, courageous, valiant, valorous, doughty Ana *cool, composed, imperturbable: *confident, assured, sure

Ant afraid —Con *fearful, apprehensive: *timid, timorous unassailable impregnable, inexpugnable, invulnerable, *invincible, unconquerable, indomitable

Ana stout, sturdy, tenacious, tough, *strong, stalwart unavoidable *inevitable, ineluctable, inescapable, unescapable

Ana certain, positive, *sure unbecoming *indecorous, improper, unseemly, indecent, indelicate

Ana unfitting, inappropriate, unsuitable (see UNFIT): inept, *awkward, maladroit, gauche, clumsy unbelief, disbelief, incredulity are comparable when they mean the attitude or state of mind of one who does not believe. Unbelief stresses the lack or absence of belief especially in respect to something (as religious revelation) above and beyond one's personal experience or capacity (a sense of loss and unbelief such as one might feel to discover suddenly that some great force in nature had ceased to operate—Wolfe) (if thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out . . . Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief—Mk 9:23-24) Disbelief implies a positive rejection of what is stated or asserted (a disbelief in ghosts and witches was one of the most prominent characteristics of skepticism in the seventeenth century—Lecky) (a disbeliever in aristocracy, he never perceived the implications of his disbelief where education was concerned—Russell) (comprehension flooded Maria's mind, followed by a sort of stupefying disbelief—Hervey) Incredulity implies indisposition to believe or, more often, a skeptical frame of mind (there is a vulgar incredulity, which . . . finds it easier to doubt than to examine—Scott) (was looking interestedly around . . . when suddenly he started forward . . . and in an instant, his face seemed suddenly to go ashen with bitter incredulity—Terry Southern >

Ana *uncertainty, doubt, dubiety, dubiousity, skepticism

Ant belief

unbeliever freethinker, *atheist, agnostic, infidel, deist unbiased impartial, dispassionate, *fair, just, equitable, uncolored, objective

Ana uninterested, disinterested, detached, aloof (see INDIFFERENT)

Ant biased

unburden *rid, clear, disabuse, purge

Ana disencumber, unload, discharge (see base words at BURDEN vb): *free, release, liberate

Ant burden —Con encumber, load, lade, weight, tax, saddle (see BURDEN) uncalled-for gratuitous, wanton, *supererogatory

Ana *impertinent, intrusive, officious: *foolish, silly, absurd, preposterous uncanny *weird, eerie

Ana *strange, singular, erratic, eccentric, odd, queer: *mysterious, inscrutable unceasing *everlasting, endless, interminable uncertainty, doubt, dubiety, dubiousity, skepticism, suspicion, mistrust can all mean a feeling of unsureness about someone or something. Uncertainty stresses the lack of certainty or certitude that may range from a mere falling short of these to an almost complete lack of knowledge or conviction especially about the result or outcome of something (suffered an agonizing uncertainty concerning his son's fate) <she drove without any uncertainty or hesitation as to her route—Deland> <if you are really in love, there is no uncertainty: there must not be, or else your marriage would always be . . . a gamble—MacInnes> <waited in eagerness and impatience, and then in uncertainty, in anxiety, in hurt pride, in anger—Farrell> Doubt implies both an uncertainty about the truth or reality or status of something and an inability to make a decision, often even after study or investigation; frequently the term implies such a feeling or state of mind in respect to religious beliefs or doctrines (he never felt a doubt of God's existence) <there crept into the diary . . . signs of doubt and then of despair—Shirer> <longed for some reassurance in the midst of the dismay and doubt which possessed her—Gibbons> <no man likes to have his intelligence or good faith questioned, especially if he has doubts about it himself—Henry Adams> Dubiety (compare dubious under DOUBTFUL) comes closer to uncertainty than to doubt, for it stresses a lack of sureness rather than an inability to reach a decision as to where the truth lies. But it regularly carries, as uncertainty does not, a strong implication of wavering or of fluctuations between one conclusion and another <faith free from all dubiety> <the twilight of dubiety never falls upon him—Lamb> <cannot escape the dubieties and problems of his day and . . . finds himself swerved from his certainties and confronted with the tenuousness of his preconceptions—Sat. Review> Dubiosity is not always distinguishable from dubiety <men . . . swallow falsities for truths, dubiosities for certainties—Browne> Sometimes, however, it suggests not uncertainty, but vagueness, indistinctness, or mental confusion <had not cogitated long ere she pronounced distinctly and without a shadow of dubiosity: "My opinion is . . ."—Meredith> Skepticism suggests in this, its general sense, an unwillingness to believe without demonstration or an incredulity while any plausible evidence to the contrary exists; it usually refers to a habitual or temperamental state of mind or to a customary reaction to something proposed for belief <an easy and elegant skepticism was the attitude expected of an educated adult; anything might be discussed, but it was a trifle vulgar to reach very positive conclusions—Russell>

<has found that skepticism rather than dogmatism is the key to human freedom—New Republic> Suspicion stresses conjecture or apprehension that someone or something is not true, real, or right or that he or it has worked or is working evil or injury, but it also implies that the conjecture or apprehension is accompanied by uncertainty or doubt, often to the extent that the term comes close to doubt <seized with unwonted suspicion of his own wisdom—Meredith>  <the most ordinary actions became . . . entangled in complicated webs of apprehension and suspicion—Gibbons>  Mistrust (see also DISTRUST) implies doubt that is based upon suspicion and that therefore precludes the possibility of one's having faith or confidence or trust in a person or thing <intracommunity bickering, conflict, and mistrust obscure the steady vision of extracommunity danger—A. E. Stevenson> <man is only weak through his mistrust and want of hope—Wordsworth>

Ant certainty —Con certitude, conviction, assurance (see CERTAINTY)

uncircumscribed boundless, illimitable, *infinite, sempiternal, eternal

Ant circumscribed

uncivil *rude, ill-mannered, impolite, discourteous, ungracious

Ana boorish, loutish, churlish (see under BOOR): brusque, blunt, gruff, crusty (see BLUFF)

Ant civil uncolored 1 *colorless, achromatic

2 dispassionate, impartial, objective, unbiased, *fair, just, equitable uncommon *infrequent, scarce, rare, occasional, sporadic

Ana *strange, singular, unique: *exceptional: *choice, exquisite

Ant common

uncommunicative *silent, taciturn, reticent, reserved, secretive, close, close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped

Ant communicative unconcerned *indifferent, incurious, aloof, detached, uninterested, disinterested

Ana *cool, collected, composed, nonchalant: apathetic, *impassive, stolid, phlegmatic

Ant concerned —Con solicitous, anxious, worried, careful (see under CARE) uncongenial unsympathetic, incompatible, *inconsonant, inconsistent, incongruous, discordant, discrepant

Ana *antipathetic, unsympathetic, averse: *repugnant, repellent, abhorrent, obnoxious

Ant congenial —Con companionable, cooperative, *social: pleasing, *pleasant, agreeable unconquerable *invincible, indomitable, impregnable, inexpugnable, unassailable, invulnerable

Ant conquerable

unconstraint, abandon, spontaneity can all denote the free and uninhibited expression of one's thoughts or feelings or the quality of mood or style resulting from a free yielding to impulse. Unconstraint is the most general term and may be used in place of either of the others, though it is less positive in its implication <the old red blood and stainless gentility of great poets will be proved by their unconstraint—Whitman> Abandon adds to unconstraint the implication either of entire loss of self-control <weep with abandon> or of the absence or impotence of any influence hampering free, full, or natural expression of feeling <had the fire and abandon that alone can arouse audiences to fever pitch—Copland) <jazz is the passion of movement, excitement, abandon, sex—Overstreet> Spontaneity suggests an unstudied naturalness and agreeable freshness of expression or manner; sometimes it connotes lack of deliberation and obedience to the impulse of the moment <Keats' letters . . . have a deceptive spontaneity which invites the mind to pass over them . . . without pausing to penetrate below the surface—Murry>

Ana spontaneousness, impulsiveness, instinctiveness (see corresponding adjectives at SPONTANEOUS): naturalness, simplicity, unsophistication, ingenuousness, naiveté (see corresponding adjectives at NATURAL)

uncouth *rude, rough, crude, raw, callow, green

Ana *awkward, clumsy, gauche uncritical *superficial, shallow, cursory

Ant critical —Con discerning, discriminating, penetrating (see corresponding nouns at DISCERNMENT): comprehending, understanding, appreciating (see UNDERSTAND)

unctuous *fulsome, oily, oleaginous, slick, soapy

Ana bland, politic, smooth, diplomatic (see SUAVE): obsequious (see SUBSERVIENT)

Ant brusque

undaunted *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, valorous, dauntless, doughty, bold, audacious

Ana resolute, staunch, steadfast (see FAITHFUL): *confident, assured, sanguine, sure

Ant afraid —Con *fearful, apprehensive: cowed, browbeaten, bullied (see INTIMIDATE) under *below, beneath, underneath undergo *experience, sustain, suffer

Ana *bear, endure, abide, tolerate: accept, *receive: submit, bow, *yield, defer underhand, underhanded *secret, covert, stealthy, furtive, clandestine, surreptitious

Ana deceitful, *dishonest: *crooked, devious, oblique: *sly, cunning, crafty, tricky, insidious, wily, guileful

Ant aboveboard —Con *straightforward, forthright: open, plain, *frank, candid underling n *inferior, subordinate

Ant leader, master underlying basic, *fundamental, basal, radical

Ana *essential, cardinal, vital, fundamental: requisite, indispensable, necessary, *needful undermine *weaken, enfeeble, debilitate, sap, cripple, disable

Ana *ruin, wreck: *injure, damage, impair: thwart, foil, *frustrate

Ant reinforce underneath *below, under, beneath understand, comprehend, appreciate mean to have a clear idea or conception or full and exact knowledge of something. Understand and comprehend both imply an obtaining of a mental grasp of something and in much of their use are freely interchangeable <“You begin to comprehend me, do you?” cried he . . . “Oh! Yes—I understand you perfectly”—Austen> <the artist, it seemed . . . had thoughts so subtle that the average man could comprehend them no more than a mongrel could understand the moon he bayed at—Wolfe> But understand may stress the fact of attained grasp, and comprehend may stress the process by which it is attained; thus, one understands a decision when he knows what it involves even though he fails to comprehend the reasoning process on which it was based; a person may understand a foreign language without comprehending exactly how he learned it <for well on a thousand years there have been universities in the Western world; to understand the present institutions, we must therefore comprehend something of their history—Conant> Sometimes the difference is more subtle, for understand can imply the power to receive and register a clear and exact impression, and comprehend can imply the mental act of grasping clearly and fully; thus, the concept of infinity can be understood theoretically though scarcely comprehended as a verity <in order fully to understand America, it is helpful to have some grasp of the origins, culture and problems of the racial and religious groups which are gradually being fused into one people—Current History> <the average layman—or Congressman—is deemed unable to comprehend the mystic intricacies and intrigues of foreign affairs—Kennedy> <felt in Russia the presence of elements he could not understand and never would understand, and . . . some of our official representatives said they shared with him this feeling of bafflement—Edmund Wilson> <being untutored in local history . . . in no way detracted from my sense of enjoyment, nor lessened my ability to comprehend the real beauty of all that surrounded me—Carruthers> Appreciate (see also APPRECIATE 2) implies a just judgment or the estimation of a thing's true or exact value; therefore the word is used in reference to persons or things which may be misjudged (as by underestimating or overestimating or by undervaluing or overvaluing) <you are of an age now to appreciate his character—Meredith> <the public opinion which thus magnifies patriotism into a religion is a force of which it is difficult to appreciate . . . the strength—Brownell>

Ana conceive, realize, envision, envisage (see THINK): interpret, elucidate, construe (see EXPLAIN): penetrate, pierce, probe (see ENTER) understanding 1 *reason, intuition

Ana comprehension, apprehension (see under APPREHEND): *discernment, discrimination, insight, penetration

2 *agreement, accord understudy n *substitute, supply, locum tenens, alternate, pinch hitter, double, stand-in undulate waver, *swing, sway, oscillate, vibrate, fluctuate, pendulate

Ana *pulsate, pulse, beat, throb, palpitate undying *immortal, deathless, unfading

Ana *everlasting, endless, unceasing, interminable unearth *discover, ascertain, determine, learn

Ana *dig, delve: expose, exhibit, *show: *reveal, disclose, discover uneasy *impatient, nervous, unquiet, restless, restive, fidgety, jumpy, jittery

Ana anxious, worried, solicitous, concerned, careful (see under CARE): disturbed, perturbed, agitated, disquieted (see DISCOMPOSE) uneducated *ignorant, illiterate, unlettered, untaught, untutored, unlearned

Ana *rude, crude, rough, raw, callow, green, uncouth

Ant educated

unerring *infallible, inerrable, inerrant

Ana *reliable, dependable, trustworthy: exact, accurate, precise, *correct unescapable *inevitable, ineluctable, inescapable, unavoidable

Ana & Ant see those at INESCAPABLE uneven *rough, harsh, rugged, scabrous

Ant even —Con *level, flat, plane, smooth: equable, even, uniform, *steady, constant unfading *immortal, deathless, undying

Ana *everlasting, endless: *lasting, perdurable, perpetual unfeigned *sincere, wholehearted, whole-souled, heartfelt, hearty

Ana genuine, veritable, bona fide, *authentic: *natural, simple, naive: *spontaneous, impulsive unfit, unsuitable, improper, inappropriate, unfitting, inapt, unhappy, infelicitous are comparable when they mean not right with respect to what is required or expected under the circumstances or demanded by the end, use, or function in view. Except for this denial of rightness, the terms otherwise correspond in applications and in implications to the affirmative adjectives as discriminated at FIT.

Ant fit —Con adaptable, pliable, malleable (see PLASTIC): *able, capable, competent, qualified unfitting inappropriate, improper, unsuitable, *unfit, inapt, unhappy, infelicitous

Ana unbecoming, unseemly, *indecorous

Ant fitting

unflagging unwearied, unwearied, tireless, untiring, *indefatigable, weariless

Ana persevering, persisting or persistent (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE): *steady, constant

Con indolent, fainéant, slothful, *lazy unflappable *cool, composed, collected, unruffled, imperturbable, nonchalant unfold 1 Unfold, evolve, develop, elaborate, perfect can all mean to cause something to emerge from a state where its potentialities are not apparent or not realized into a state where they are apparent or fully realized. Unfold suggests usually a natural process by which is unveiled or disclosed the true character, the real beauty or ugliness, or the significance or insignificance of someone or something (the bud unfolds itself into the flower) (I see thy beauty gradually unfold, daily and hourly, more and more—Tennyson) (they were theater people, and the unfolding of a new creative work was a solemnity—Wouk) Evolves implies an unfolding or unrolling itself gradually and in orderly process; the term is particularly applicable when the slowness of the process and the complications involved in it are to be suggested (the Protozoa . . . evolved the types that were transitional to higher animals—Miner) (societies are evolved in structure and function as in growth—Spencer) (life has evolved according to a Creator's plan—Marquand) However evolve is often used with weakened emphasis on the implications of slowness and complexity to imply specifically the production of a result (as an idea, a theory, or an aesthetic effect) from within or as if from within (twilight combined with the scenery of Egdon Heath to evolve a thing majestic without severity, impressive without showiness—Hardy) (this novel and intensely exacting technique, evolved . . . by the critical genius of a few . . . Frenchmen and of Henry James—Montague) Develop (see also MATURE) implies a passing through several stages and stresses the coming out or unfolding of latent possibilities in a thing, whether by a natural process or through human means (compare DEVELOPMENT) (there were different ideas of how the paper should develop. They wanted it to be successful; I wanted it to be outrageous—Mailer) (shorter than his wife—a jolly pink-faced man with a quietness that might have been developed to complement the noise she made—Cheever) (most of the great European thinkers of the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries . . . helped to develop the conception Shaftesbury first formulated—Ellis) Elaborate distinctively stresses attention to detail and increasing complication by means of which the latent possibilities of a thing are more fully or completely developed (the sun, under whose influence one plant elaborates nutriment for man and another poison—Southey) (the constitutional system which was in course of being gradually elaborated—Gladstone) (the Negro discovered and elaborated a morality . . . an ethical differentiation between the good and the bad in every human activity—Mailer) Perfect stresses a freeing from faults, defects, or blemishes, and it can additionally imply an unfolding or development of something so that it stands as a complete or finished product (she had cultivated and perfected a vast cowlike calm which served her now in good stead—Pynchon) (he first conceives, then perfects his design, as a mere instrument in hands divine—Cowper) (a new determination to complete and perfect his plant-setting machine had taken possession of him—Anderson)

Ana *show, manifest, evidence, evince, demonstrate: exhibit, display, expose (see SHOW)

2 *solve, resolve, unravel, decipher unformed *formless, shapeless

Ant formed —Con *definite, definitive: developed, matured (see MATURE): fashioned, fabricated, manufactured, made (see MAKE) unfortunate *unlucky, disastrous, ill-starred, ill-fated, calamitous, luckless, hapless

Ana baleful, malefic, *sinister: *miserable, wretched: unhappy, infelicitous (see UNFIT)

Ant fortunate —Con *lucky, providential, happy: auspicious, propitious, *favorable unfounded *baseless, groundless, unwarranted

Ana *false, wrong: *misleading, deceptive: mendacious, *dishonest, untruthful unfruitful barren, *sterile, infertile, impotent

Ant fruitful, prolific —Con *fertile, fecund ungodly *irreligious, godless, unreligious, nonreligious

Ana wicked, evil, ill, *bad: reprobate, *abandoned, profligate: *impious, blasphemous, profane ungovernable *unruly, intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, willful, headstrong

Ana *contrary, perverse, froward, wayward: contumacious, *insubordinate, rebellious, factious

Ant governable: docile —Con submissive, subdued, *tame: tractable, amenable, *obedient ungracious *rude, ill-mannered, impolite, discourteous, uncivil

Ana churlish, boorish (see under BOOR): brusque, gruff, blunt, curt (see BLUFF)

Ant gracious unhappy infelicitous, inapt, unsuitable, improper, inappropriate, unfitting, *unfit Ana inept, maladroit, gauche, *awkward Ant happy

uniform adj 1 *like, alike, similar, analogous, comparable, akin, parallel, identical

Ana *same, equivalent, equal

Ant various

2 *steady, constant, even, equable

Ana consistent, *consonant, compatible: regular, *orderly

Ant multiform

unify consolidate, concentrate, *compact

Ana *integrate, articulate, concatenate: organize, systematize (see ORDER vb): *unite, combine, conjoin unimpassioned *sober, temperate, continent

Ana *cool, composed, collected, imperturbable: *calm, serene, placid, tranquil: *impassive, stolid, stoic, phlegmatic

Ant impassioned

uninterested *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof, detached, disinterested union *unity, solidarity, integrity

Ana integration, articulation, concatenation (see under INTEGRATE): *harmony, consonance, accord, concord unique 1 *single, sole, lone, solitary, separate, particular

Ana *only, alone

2 singular, *strange, peculiar, eccentric, erratic, odd, queer, quaint, outlandish, curious

Ana *exceptional: uncommon, rare, *infrequent unite 1 conjoin, combine, *join, connect, link, associate, relate

Ana *mix, blend, merge, amalgamate: *weave, knit: *integrate, concatenate, articulate

Ant divide: alienate

2 Unite, combine, conjoin, cooperate, concur are comparable especially when they are applied to people or groups or categories of people or to human institutions and when they mean to join forces so as to act together or to form a larger unit. Unite may suggest either of these ends (to unite their strength to maintain international peace and security—Dean) (states which would be politically independent but economically united—Current Biog.) but it more commonly suggests the formation of a new or larger unit (as by merging) (slowly uniting the Middle Eastern peoples in a strong emotional, religious nationalism—Atyeo) Combine (see also JOIN) is often used interchangeably with unite, but it may be preferred when a somewhat looser or more temporary association is to be suggested (several citizens combined to lead the campaign for the adoption of the city-manager form of government) (it is not so difficult to combine matrimony and a career in a small city—Hobby) Combine also is the one of these words that is at all likely to carry derogatory connotations (compare combine under COMBINATION) (no man is at liberty to combine, conspire and unlawfully agree to regulate the whole body of workmen—J. N. Welch & Richard Hofstadter) Conjoin (see also JOIN) stresses firmness of the combination (the English army, that divided was into two parties, is now conjoined in one—Shak.) (despotism, priesthood, and proletariat have ever been good friends; a kind of freemasonry . . . has conjoined them from time immemorial against the honest and educated classes—Norman Douglas) Cooperate implies a combining for the sake of action or mutual support or assistance (it is . . . difficult to induce a number of free beings to cooperate for their mutual benefit—Goldsmith) (because the states can so seldom cooperate on common problems, federal intervention is inevitable—Armbrister) Concur in this relation retains the notion of agreement from another of its senses (which see under AGREE 2) and specifically implies a joining in agreement (was also a member of the Senate Finance Committee, with which he concurred in a recommendation of lowered income taxes—Current Biog.) (the Scotch philosopher believed that there was a moral discipline in nature . . . Bryant and Cole concurred in this opinion—Ringe)

Ana mingle, commingle, coalesce, fuse (see MIX): adhere, cohere, *stick, cling, cleave

Ant part

unity, solidarity, integrity, union can all denote a combining of all the parts, elements, or individuals into an effective whole, or the property or character of the whole achieved by such a combining. Unity is the comprehensive term applicable to wholes formed either of persons or of things; it may characterize such diverse things as a people, a nation, a church, an association, or a natural or artificial structure (as the human body or a cathedral) or a work of art (as a drama, an epic, a painting, or a bas-relief). In every case it implies oneness, especially of what is varied or diverse rather than uniform in its elements, that is gained by the interdependence of parts or individuals and by the cooperation of all so that each within its proper limits helps in effecting the end of the whole (the indispensable unity of a beautiful design—Alexander) (the wish to impose order upon confusion, to bring harmony out of dissonance and unity out of multiplicity is a kind of intellectual instinct, a primary and fundamental urge of the mind—Huxley) Unity often implies a oneness of spirit that results in a group of persons when there is harmony and concord (what he sought was unity of sentiment, not an unfeatured uniformity, and he attained it—Buchan) Solidarity denotes a kind of unity in a group (as a class, a community, or an institution) which enables it to show its strength, express its opinion, or exert its influence both through individuals and through the whole with the force of an undivided mass; the term implies unwillingness in individuals or in subgroups to go counter to the interests, aspirations, or will of the group as a whole (one secret of their power is their mutual good understanding . . . They have solidarity, or responsibility, and trust in each other—Emerson) (instead of national solidarity following the war, we have only a revival of Know-Nothingism; one faction of hyphenates tries to exterminate another faction—Mencken) (the Mingotts had not proclaimed their disapproval aloud: their sense of solidarity was too strong—Wharton) Integrity is used chiefly in reference to wholes that have been built up so that each stands as a thing marked by completeness and a unity dependent on the perfection of its parts and their mutual interdependence; the term usually stresses soundness, undividedness, or freedom from impairment (guarantee the integrity of the British Empire forever—Upton Sinclair) (the integrity, the clean drive and the unforced power that distinguishes the good "primitive" novel—Morton) Union is the general term for the act of uniting several things to form a whole or for the body or organization which results from such a uniting (the union of thirteen states to form the United States) However the term can carry the deeper implications of a thorough integration of parts and of their harmonious cooperation (such harmony alone could hold all Heaven and Earth in happier union—Milton) (the union, peace and plenty of the kingdom—Clarendon) (thanks to . . . God, who has restored union to my family—Scott)

Ana identification, incorporation, embodiment, assimilation (see corresponding verbs at IDENTIFY): cooperation, concurrence, uniting, combining (see corresponding verbs at UNITE): integration, concatenation, articulation (see under INTEGRATE) universal 1 Universal, cosmic, ecumenical, catholic, cosmopolitan can all mean worldwide or at least extremely widespread (as in extent, range, influence, appeal, or use). Universal is likely to suggest what is worldwide rather than pertinent to or characteristic of the whole universe; it is often further narrowed to refer to the world of men and human affairs or to important or significant parts of this world. It is likely to indicate a unanimity or conformity of practice or belief or a broad comprehensiveness (no other theory which has won universal acceptance—Binyon) (the universal favor with which the New Testament is outwardly received—Thoreau) (replaced a philosophy which was crude and raw and provincial by one which was, in comparison, catholic, civilized, and universal—T. S. Eliot) Cosmic is used to suggest matters pertinent to the whole universe as opposed to the earth, especially in suggestions of infinite vastness, distance, or force (sardonic phantoms, whose vision is cosmic, not terrestrial—Loves) (the great cosmic rhythm of the spirit which sets the currents of life in motion—Binyon) Ecu- menical applies to situations involving people throughout the whole world or all people in groups or divisions as indicated, often in religious contexts (the incorporation of all the broken fragments of the former Iranic and Arabic societies into the wholly different structure of a Western World which has grown into an ecumenical "Great Society"—Toynbee) Catholic may stress an attitude involved, as well as a fact, in the including, comprehending, or appreciating of all or many peoples, places, or periods (he was a catholic nature lover. The tropics, the desert, the tundra, the glaciers and the prairies all found a place in his heart—Peattie) Cosmopolitan may imply an understanding and appreciation of other lands, sections, nations, or cities coming about through personal experience in traveling or living elsewhere; it often contrasts with provincial (one of the most entertaining and most cosmopolitan of novelists. Born in Tuscany, he was educated in New England, England, Germany, and Italy, became interested in Sanskrit, edited a newspaper in India—Van Doren)

Ana *earthly, terrestrial, worldly, mundane: *whole, entire, all, total

2 Universal, general, generic, common are comparable when they mean characteristic of, belonging or relating to, comprehending, or affecting all or the whole. Universal as used chiefly in logic and philosophy implies reference to each one of a whole (as a class, a category, or a genus) without exception; thus, "all men are animals" is a universal affirmative proposition, and "no man is omniscient" is a universal negative proposition; color is a universal attribute of visible objects, but chroma is not (prolongation of the . . . war, with its increasing danger of universal catastrophe—Science) (habits both universal among mankind and peculiar to individuals—Allport) (if we want to get at the permanent and universal we tend to express ourselves in verse—T. S. Eliot) General can imply reference to all, either of a precisely definable group (as a class, type, or species) (ladies, a general welcome from his grace salutes ye all—Shak.) (these first assemblies were general, with all freemen bound to attend—Amer. Guide Series: Md.) or of a more or less loosely or casually combined or associated number of items. In contrast to universal, general tends to be used with less precise boundaries and often implies no more than reference to nearly all or to most of the group (ethylene has come into general but not yet universal favor with surgeons—Morrison) (the ideal of general cultivation has been one of the standards in education—Eliot) But when used with respect to words, language, ideas, or notions, general tends to suggest lack of precision in use or signification (some rather weak cases must fall within any law which is couched in general words—Justice Holmes) Generic is often used in place of general when a term implying reference to every member of a genus or often of a clearly defined scientific or logical category and the exclusion of all other individuals is needed; thus, a general likeness between two insects may be a likeness that is merely observable, whereas a generic likeness is one that offers proof that they belong to the same genus or that enables a student to assign a hitherto unknown insect to its proper category; the use of words is a general characteristic of writing but the use of meter is a generic characteristic of poetry (there is no such thing as a generic "Asian mind"—R. A. Smith) (the novel has always had a generic habit of reaching out to the extremes of literary expression—Schorer) (absolute generic unity would obtain if there were one summum genus under which all things without exception could be eventually subsumed—James) Common (see also COMMON 3; RECIPROCAL 1) differs from general in implying participation, use, or a sharing by all members of the class, group, or community of persons or, less often, of things under consideration (a thing . . . practiced for two hundred years by common consent—Justice Holmes) (crowds . . . swept along by a common animating impulse—Binyon) (our common tongue—Lowes)

Ant particular

universe cosmos, macrocosm, *earth, world unkempt slovenly, sloppy, *slipshod, disheveled

Ana frowzy, *slatternly, blowsy, dowdy: *negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss unlawful, illegal, illegitimate, illicit are comparable when they mean contrary to, prohibited by, or not in accordance with law or the law. Otherwise than this negation in character, the words in general carry the same differences in implications and connotations as the affirmative adjectives discriminated at LAWFUL. But there are a few recognizable differences. Illegitimate tends to be more narrowly used than legitimate; its most common application is to children born out of wedlock or to a relation which leads to such a result (the illegitimate son of the Duke) (their union was illegitimate) but it is occasionally referred to something that is not proper according to the rules (as of logic) or to the authorities or to precedent (your inference is illegitimate) (it is illegitimate to suppose a chasm between the brute facts of physical nature . . . and the most abstract principles—Alexander) (I am far from thinking, with some modern theoretic purists, that it is illegitimate in painting to play on the power of association—Binyon) Illicit is used much more widely than illegitimate; it may imply a lack of conformity to the provisions of a law intended to regulate the performance, the carrying on, or the execution of something that comes under the law of state or of church (illicit liquor traffic) (an illicit marriage according to the Church may still be a legal marriage from the point of view of the State) but it is also applied to something that is obtained, done, or maintained unlawfully, illegally, or illegitimately (most persons . . . have long believed that happiness, being as they suspect somehow illicit at best, must have its locus beyond ourselves, beyond this world—Edman) (the tradition that illicit love affairs are at once vicious and delightful—Shaw) (the . . . monk who loved Virgil had to study him with an illicit candle—Quiller-Couch)

Ana iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious (see VICIOUS)

Ant lawful —Con *due, rightful, condign unlearned *ignorant, illiterate, unlettered, uneducated, untaught, untutored

Ana crude, *rude, rough, raw, callow, green, uncouth unlettered illiterate, *ignorant, uneducated, untaught, untutored, unlearned unlikeness *dissimilarity, difference, divergence, divergency, distinction

Ana diversity, *variety: disparity, variousness (see corresponding adjectives at DIFFERENT): discrepancy, discordance, incongruousness, incompatibility, inconsistency, inconsonance (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT) unlucky, disastrous, ill-starred, ill-fated, unfortunate, calamitous, luckless, hapless can all mean having, meeting, or promising an outcome that is distinctly unfavorable (as to hopes, plans, or well-being). Unlucky implies that in spite of efforts or merits one meets with bad luck, often chronically, or that a specific occasion or action will be or has proved to be unfavorable especially in its outcome or consequences (the child who is born on an unlucky day—Kardiner) (the loss of over $200,000 in an unlucky coffee speculation—H. G. Pearson) <it was the unluckiest step we ever made to admit him into the bosom of our family—Lytton) Disastrous and ill-starred both carry the astrological implication that the stars are adverse to the person or thing in question and both suggest a more or less dire fate for him or it <the intrepid but ill-starred General . . . met with an airplane accident . . . and was burned to death—Peers) Though disastrous and ill-starred often imply a calamitous result as inevitable <in his fury made sudden decisions which would prove utterly disastrous to the fortunes of the Third Reich—Shirer) <the period and the region that produced Burr's ill-starred conspiracy—H. E. Davis) disastrous is not infrequently used in a much weakened sense without a hint of inevitability or, often, an implication of consequences more serious than that of a turning of the tables upon one or the other of the participants or contenders <a . . . denial of poetic possibilities . . . is liable to disastrous refutation by a triumphant instance of the "poetizing" . . . of that very word—Lowes) Ill-starred, on the other hand, is close to ill-fated in meaning in that both imply an evil and unavoidable destiny awaiting a person or an action <the holiday was ill-starred from the outset, and a series of minor catastrophes culminated in a blowout on a lonely road—Cerf) <the ill-fated attempt to collect the old war debts—Soule) <serviced as a wagoner with General Braddock's ill-fated army—J. M. Brown) Unfortunate, though often interchangeable with unlucky, carries a much weaker implication of the intervention of chance <had an unfortunate day at the races) and a much stronger suggestion of misfortune, misery, unhappiness, or desolation, often to the extent of eliminating all suggestions of luck or of chance; occasionally it means nothing much more than regrettable or disastrous in its weakened sense <a most unfortunate family) <an unfortunate choice of words) <expecting some unfortunate woman to instruct simultaneously a crowd of fifty urchins of all degrees of ignorance—Grandgent) Calamitous, which is used of events rather than persons, resembles unfortunate in its frequent elimination of all suggestion of luck or chance and in sometimes meaning little more than regrettable or upsetting <mother was afraid to leave the house in case something calamitous would happen, so we had a little extra time for dressing—Molly Weir) but it, like the noun calamity (which see under DISASTER) often suggests dire misery or the utmost of woeful distress typically stemming from some grave and extraordinary event <in that calamitous year of 1932 a total of 277,952 foreclosures forced people out of their homes—O'Brien) <men naturally admire Hannibal though the success of his cause might have been calamitous to the progress of civilization—Cohen) <there was more news than ever before, practically all of it calamitous—Catton) Luckless and hapless are more or less rhetorical terms implying that the person or thing so described has or reveals less than average good luck or good fortune (as in his undertakings or in their outcome); usually these words mean nothing more than unhappy, miserable, or wretched <she had disobeyed—and at the wrong time. Ah, the horrible, chancy, luckless wrong time—Styron) <hapless beings caught in the grip of forces we can do little about—Whyte) <the other victims . . . met an even more hapless fate—E. S. Bates)

Ant likeness

Ana inept, *awkward; distressing, troubling (see TROUBLE): *sinister, malign, baleful

Ant lucky —Con auspicious, propitious, *favorable, benign: fortunate, happy, providential (see LUCKY)

unman *unnerve, emasculate, enervate

Ana sap, undermine, *weaken, enfeeble, debilitate: *abase, degrade: *deplete, drain, exhaust, impoverish, bankrupt

unmarried, single, celibate, virgin, maiden are comparable as adjectives when they mean not united in bonds of marriage. Unmarried merely states the fact; it is usually applied to those who have not yet married, but in law, it is applicable to a person who has been divorced and has not remarried and, sometimes, to one who has been widowed <an unmarried woman) <he said he would remain unmarried) <the question of being both unchaste and unmarried apparently never arises—Marcuse) Single is applied to those who are not yet married but is commonly used of those who remain unmarried through life <housing problems of single men and women) <has to take anything she can get in the way of a husband rather than face penury as a single woman—Shaw) Celibate may be applied to the state of one having no expectation of marrying and it is especially applicable to that of one who is bound by a solemn vow to abstain from taking a mate. It is used chiefly of priests, monks, and nuns, of others who have dedicated their lives to religion, or of men or women who have accepted a way of life incompatible with having a spouse or children <the masses of [Orthodox] believers preferred to confess to the celibate holy men . . . in the distant monastery—Burks) <the dandy must be celibate, cloistral; is, indeed, but a monk with a mirror for beads and breviary—an anchorite, mortifying his soul that his body may be perfect—Beerbohm) Virgin tends to stress a pure unsullied state of chastity. It usually applies to the unmarried but it may also be referred to the married when the marital relation has not been consummated, usually on grounds of choice <Saint Ursula and her virgin companions) <the young chief could not be told . . . for he was married, and the secret could be given only to a virgin youth—Corlett) Maiden holds much the same implications as virgin, but it often differs in its heightened suggestion of purity and freedom from sexual intercourse <he has two maiden sisters) <his mind partly on a slit-skirted maiden cyclist—Birney)

unmatured *immature, unripe, unmellow

Ant matured —Con *mature, adult, grown-up unmellow *immature, unmatured, unripe

Ant mellow, mellowed —Con developed, ripened, matured (see MATURE vb)

unmindful *forgetful, oblivious

Ana heedless, thoughtless, *careless, inadvertent: *negligent, neglectful, remiss

Ant mindful: solicitous —Con careful, concerned, anxious, worried (see under CARE): *thoughtful, considerate, attentive unmitigated *outright, out-and-out, arrant unmoral *immoral, amoral, nonmoral unnatural anomalous, *irregular

Ana *abnormal, aberrant, atypical: *monstrous, prodigious: *fantastic, grotesque, bizarre

Ant natural unnerve, enervate, unman, emasculate can all mean to deprive of strength or vigor and of the capacity for endurance, overcoming difficulties, or making progress. Unnerve implies marked loss of courage, steadiness, and self-control or of power to act or fight usually as a result of some calamity or sudden shock <government was unnerved, confounded, and in a manner suspended—Burke) <that beloved name unnerved my arm—Arnold) <entered . . . hesitantly, unnerved and bewildered—Styron) <the narcotic and unnerving property of these stimulants has been thoroughly established—Day Lewis) Enervate implies a more gradual physical or moral weakening or dissipation of one's strength until one is too feeble to make effort; usually the term implies a weakening of moral fiber under the influence of such debilitating factors as luxury, indolence, or effeminacy (those unhappy people whose tender minds a long course of felicity has enervated—Bolingbroke) (Plato asserts that a life of drudgery disfigures the body and . . . enervates the soul—Dickinson) Unman implies loss of manly fortitude or spirit; it often suggests a shameful reduction to tears, tremors, extreme timidity, or other state regarded as womanish (what, quite unmanned in folly? . . . Fie, for shame!—Shak.) (the strangeness of the night . . . the dead man they had left in the field had unsettled them all and had unmanned at least one of them—Cheever) Emasculate (see also STERILIZE 1) implies a loss of essential or effective power especially by the removal of something (as a factor or a condition) which has made for strength (as of a person, a group, or a law) (Hellenism . . . was not destroyed, though it was emasculated, by the loss of political freedom—Inge) (many states emasculate such civil rights statutes as exist—Swindler)

Ana upset, agitate, perturb (see DISCOMPOSE): bewilder, distract, confound (see PUZZLE vb): *weaken, enfeeble, sap, undermine unoffending *harmless, innocuous, innocent, inoffensive unpremeditated *extemporaneous, extempore, extemporary, improvised, impromptu, offhand

Ant premeditated —Con *deliberate, considered, designed, studied unpretentious *plain, homely, simple

Ana *natural, unsophisticated, simple, ingenuous, unaffected: unassuming (see corresponding affirmative verb at ASSUME) unpropitious *ominous, portentous, fateful, inauspicious Ana *sinister, baleful, malign, malefic, maleficent: threatening, menacing (see THREATEN): *adverse, antagonistic, counter

Ant propitious unqualified incompetent, *incapable

Ana disabled, crippled, weakened, debilitated (see WEAKEN): *unfit, unsuitable

Ant qualified —Con *able, capable, competent unquiet *impatient, nervous, restless, restive, uneasy, fidgety, jumpy, jittery

Ana agitated, upset, perturbed, disquieted, disturbed (see DISCOMPOSE): worried, anxious, solicitous, concerned, careful (see under CARE)

Ant quiet

unravel *solve, resolve, unfold, decipher

Ana disentangle, untangle, *extricate: elucidate, explicate, interpret, *explain, expound unreasonable *irrational

Ana absurd, preposterous, *foolish, silly: *simple, fatuous, asinine: *excessive, immoderate, inordinate

Ant reasonable unrelenting *grim, implacable, relentless, merciless

Ana inexorable, obdurate, *inflexible, adamant: *stiff, rigid: *severe, stern

Ant forbearing

unreligious *irreligious, ungodly, godless, nonreligious unremitting constant, incessant, *continual, continuous, perpetual, perennial

Ana unceasing, interminable, endless (see EVERLASTING): assiduous, sedulous, diligent (see BUSY): *indefatigable, untiring

Con remiss, lax, slack (see NEGLIGENT): *fitful, spasmodic: sporadic, *infrequent: desultory, haphazard, *random unripe *immature, unmatured, unmellow

Ana crude, raw, green, callow, *rude: *premature, untimely, forward, precocious

Ant ripe —Con matured, ripened, developed (see MATURE vb)

unruffled imperturbable, unflappable, nonchalant, *cool, composed, collected

Ana *calm, placid, peaceful, serene, tranquil: poised, balanced (see STABILIZE)

Ant ruffled: excited unruly, ungovernable, intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, willful, headstrong are comparable when they mean not submissive to government or control. Unruly stresses a lack of discipline or an incapacity for discipline; in addition it often connotes such qualities as turbulence, disorderliness, waywardness, or obstreperousness (unruly children) (whatever my unruly tongue may say—J. R. Green) (the unruly passions—T. S. Eliot) (cleared the land, dug ditches and dammed unruly streams—Amer. Guide Series: Ariz.) Ungovernable implies either an incapacity for or an escape from guidance or control. When applied directly or indirectly to persons, it usually suggests either no previous subjection to restrictions or a state of having thrown off previous restrictions (the fiercest and most ungovernable part of the . . . population—Macaulay) or the loss of all power to control oneself or to be controlled by others (he fell into an ungovernable rage) When used in reference to things, it usually suggests their incapacity for human direction or control (that . . . ungovernable wonder the wind—Hawthorne) (genius was as valuable and as unpredictable, perhaps as ungovernable, as the waves of the sea—Buck) Intractable and refractory both imply resistance to all attempts to bring under one's control, management, or direction. When applied to persons, intractable suggests a disposition to resist guidance or control (an intractable child) (an intractable temper) (his rough, intractable spirit—John Wesley) (a young man who resisted his mistress' wishes was an intractable young man indeed—Sackville-West) When applied to things, it suggests a more or less marked resistance to working, manipulation, treatment, or management (intractable soil) (an intractable metal) (Shakespeare was unable to impose this motive successfully upon the intractable material of the old play—T. S. Eliot) Refractory, on the other hand, often implies active resistance indicated by manifest disobedience, open protest, or rebelliousness (it becomes my duty to struggle against my refractory feelings—Burney) (there is no use in making the refractory child feel guilty; it is much more to the purpose to make him feel that he is missing pleasures which the others are enjoying—Russell) or, when the reference is to an inanimate thing, a degree of intractability that offers especially great resistance or presents unusual difficulties (bricks and other refractory substances are used to line furnaces) (cheerfulness is in ethics what fluorspar is in metallurgy. It is a flux absolutely necessary in dealing with refractory moral elements—Crothers) Recalcitrant carries an even stronger implication of active and violent resistance or of obstinate rebellion; it usually suggests defiance of another's will, order, or authority (his father became recalcitrant and cut off the supplies—Stevenson) (in Russia a minority of devoted Marxists maintain by sheer force such government as is possible in the teeth of an intensely recalcitrant peasantry—Shaw) The term is less often applied to things than intractable and refractory, but there is some use when seemingly insuperable difficulties are implied (he discovers poetry in the most unlikely places and wrings it out of the most recalcitrant material—Day Lewis) Willful usually implies intractability because of an overweening desire or an obstinate determination to have one's own way and an unwillingness to be guided by those who are wise or experienced (to willful men, the injuries that they themselves procure must be their schoolmasters—Shak.) (we know we haven't finality, and so we are open and receptive, rather than willful—H. G. Wells) Headstrong implies violent self-will that makes for refractoriness or recalcitrance (the headstrong young ruler, who had taken his country out of its alliance . . . into a foolish neutrality—Shirer) (they are testy and headstrong through an excess of will and bias—Emerson) Ana *insubordinate, rebellious, contumacious: obstreperous, boisterous, strident (see VOCIFEROUS): *contrary, perverse, froward, wayward: fractious, *irritable, snappish, waspish

Ant tractable, docile

unseemly *indecorous, improper, unbecoming, indecent, indelicate

Ana unfitting, unsuitable, inappropriate (see UNFIT): incongruous, incompatible, inconsistent, *inconsonant

Ant seemly

unsettle *disorder, derange, disarrange, disorganize, disturb

Ana discommode, incommode, trouble (see INCONVENIENCE): upset, agitate, perturb, *discompose, disquiet

Ant settle unsightly *ugly, hideous, ill-favored

Ana distasteful, obnoxious, repellent, *repugnant: *hateful, odious, detestable, abominable unsocial, asocial, antisocial, nonsocial are comparable in meaning not social and therefore opposed in some way to what is social. However, they are not ordinarily interchangeable. Unsocial is applied chiefly to persons or to their temperaments, acts, and motives, and implies a distaste for the society of others or an aversion to companionship or fraternization (he is a withdrawn, unsocial person) (an unsocial disposition) Asocial is also applied to persons, but especially to their behavior, their thoughts, or their acts regarded objectively (as from the psychologist's point of view); it implies a lack of all the qualities which are suggested by the word social especially as opposed to individual. What is asocial lacks reference to, or orientation towards or in respect to, or significance for others and is by implication, individualistic, self-centered, egocentric, or egoistic (asocial interests) (dreaming is an asocial act) Antisocial is applied chiefly to things (as ideas, movements, acts, or writings) which are regarded as harmful to or destructive of society or the social order or institutions (as the state and church) (anarchists are both asocial in their thinking and antisocial in their propaganda) (antisocial theories) (antisocial conduct) Nonsocial is applied only to things which cannot be described as social in any sense of the word (nonsocial questions) (nonsocial activities)

Ant social unsophisticated *natural, simple, ingenuous, naïve, artless

Ana candid, *frank, open, plain: genuine, bona fide, *authentic: crude, callow, green, uncouth (see RUDE)

Ant sophisticated unspeakable *unutterable, inexpressible, ineffable, indescribable, indefinable

Ana *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting: *repugnant, repellent, obnoxious, distasteful: abominable, odious, *hateful, detestable unstable *inconstant, fickle, capricious, mercurial

Ana *changeable, variable, mutable, protean: volatile, effervescent, buoyant, resilient, *elastic

Ant stable unsuitable *unfit, improper, inappropriate, unfitting, inapt, unhappy, infelicitous

Ana unbecoming, unseemly, *indecorous, indecent: inept, maladroit, *awkward, clumsy, gauche

Ant suitable unsympathetic 1 incongenial, discordant, incongruous, incompatible, *inconsonant, inconsistent, discrepant

Ant sympathetic —Con harmonizing or harmonious, accordant, correspondent (see corresponding verbs at AGREE)

2 *antipathetic, averse

Ana *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof: *hardened, callous, indurated

Ant sympathetic

untangle disentangle, *extricate, disencumber, disembarass

Ana *free, release, liberate

Con *hamper, fetter, manacle, shackle, trammel untaught *ignorant, illiterate, unlettered, uneducated, untutored, unlearned

Ant taught untimely *premature, forward, advanced, precocious

Ana *immature, unmatured, unripe, unmellow

Ant timely —Con *seasonable, opportune, well-timed, pat untiring *indefatigable, tireless, weariless, unwearying, unwearied, unflagging

Ana unceasing, interminable, *everlasting: assiduous, sedulous, diligent (see BUSY): persevering, persisting (see PERSEVERE) untouchable n *outcast, castaway, derelict, reprobate, pariah untruth *lie, falsehood, fib, misrepresentation, story

Ana mendaciousness or mendacity, dishonesty, deceitfulness (see corresponding adjectives at DISHONEST): equivocation, tergiversation (see AMBIGUITY)

Ant truth —Con veracity, verity (see TRUTH): *honesty, integrity, probity, honor untruthful lying, mendacious, *dishonest, deceitful

Ana *false, wrong: *misleading, deceptive, delusive, delusory

Ant truthful —Con honest, *upright, scrupulous: veracious (see corresponding noun at TRUTH)

untutored *ignorant, illiterate, unlettered, uneducated, untaught, unlearned

Ant tutored

unutterable, inexpressible, unspeakable, ineffable, indescribable, indefinable mean incapable of being told or described. All are often nothing more than intensives implying an extreme that goes beyond the power of words to express. In its more explicit denotations unutterable can imply such various reasons why the thing so qualified cannot be voiced or spoken, as the greatness of one's awe (my tongue . . . attempts th' unutterable Name, but faints—Watts) Inexpressible usually applies to what is so delicate, so immaterial, or so subtle, that there are no words to reveal its true or exact nature (speech able to express subtleties . . . that before seemed inexpressible—Ellis) Unspeakable differs little from unutterable in its explicit meaning (joy unspeakable and full of glory—1 Pet 1:8) (a thousand memories . . . unspeakable for sadness—Tennyson) (the bawdy thoughts that come into one's head—the unspeakable words—L. P. Smith) More often, perhaps, unspeakable means too unpleasant, disgusting, or horrible to describe in detail (twisted shapes of lust, unspeakable, abominable—Tennyson) (a pledge which enabled . . . officers to excuse themselves from any personal responsibility for the unspeakable crimes which they carried out—Shirer) Ineffable is a near synonym of inexpressible, but carries a stronger suggestion of a character that transcends expression because of some elusive quality (as etherealness, spirituality, or ideality <ineffable tenderness> <the eyes remained distant and serious, as if bent on some ineffable vision—Wharton> <to explore the delicate involutions of consciousness, the microscopically sensuous and all but ineffable frissons of mental becoming—Mailer> <who shall say that in this silence, in this hovering wan light, in this air bereft of wings, and of all scent save freshness, there is less of the ineffable, less of that before which words are dumb?—Galsworthy> Indescribable and indefinable may imply to the thing a quality or sometimes the lack of any quality or to the would-be describer or definer a deficiency (as of perceptiveness, understanding, or language) that makes precise description, definition, narration, or explanation impossible <I keep being conscious of some subtle smell . . . It's not exactly a smell, either! It's more than that. It's a taste in the mouth and a strange indescribable feeling through every pore of the body—Powys> <an indescribable horror . . . I myself could hardly put it into words. But the effect it has upon me I could describe; only that would make you as miserable as I am—Powys> <our men have fought with indescribable and unforgettable gallantry—Roosevelt> <she lacks the indefinable charm of weakness—Wilde> <if an idea cannot be analyzed into any function of a given set of primitive ideas, it is indefinable relative to that set—Richard Robinson> <men may attribute to women mysterious, indefinable traits which finally prove to be mere caprice—Blankenagel>

unwarranted *baseless, groundless, unfounded

Ana unauthorized, unaccredited (see corresponding affirmative verbs at AUTHORIZE): unapproved, unsanctioned (see corresponding affirmative verbs at APPROVE)

Ant warranted

unwearied *indefatigable, tireless, weariless, untiring, unwearied, unflagging

Ana persevering, persisting or persistent (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE): unceasing, interminable (see EVERLASTING): constant, *steady unwearying *indefatigable, tireless, weariless, untiring, unwearied, unflagging

Ana see those at UNTIRING unwholesome, morbid, sickly, diseased, pathological apply to what is unhealthy or unhealthful in any of various ways.

Unwholesome is applicable not only to what is not healthy or healthful physically and mentally but also to what is morally corruptive <sick at heart, and enfeebled by unwholesome diet—Bancroft> <unwholesome surroundings in which to bring up children> <an aura . . . of unwholesome cleverness—J. V. Baker> <an unwholesome influence> Morbid, in the sense of showing the effects of disease, is somewhat old-fashioned  <morbid tissue> The term is more often descriptive of a physical, emotional, mental, or social condition or of fancies, feelings, or behavior that are abnormal or are a sign of abnormality (as derangement, decadence, or deterioration) <displayed a morbid interest in the gruesome details of the accident> <in this vision . . . there is something of morbid suspicion—Edmund Wilson> <her thoughts had been more and more preoccupied with death, and with her morbid shame lest someone see her in the state of nature after she was dead—Wolfe> <but one feels gradually creeping on . . . the morbid excitement of the high-tensioned life around her—Ellis> Sickly, more than any of these words, implies the appearance of weakness or wanness characteristic of poor health, or an inherent lack of robustness or virility; it applies not only to persons but to animals and to plants, not only to bodies but to minds and souls, not only to thoughts, feelings, and behavior, but to objective things (as colors, odors, or lights) that suggest the quality or character of a person weakened or wasted by disease <sickly children>   <the chronic habits of the sickly soul—Crabbe> Diseased applies not only to something (as a part or an organism) that is attacked by disease, but, like morbid, is often extended to whatever is deranged, disordered, dying, or abnormal  <canst thou not minister to a mind diseased?—Shak.> <when love grows diseased, the best thing we can do is to put it to a violent death—Etherege> Pathological is applied to physical, mental, and moral conditions which have their origin in disease or which constitute gross deviations from the usual, expected, or normal, and, by implication, the wholesome <enormously sensitive and resilient, almost pathological in his appetite for activity—Mencken> <the beguiling Alice-world of pathological curves, some of which bound a small finite area and yet are infinite in length, while others entirely fill squares, cubes, and hypercubes, and some cross themselves at all points—Gridgeman> <this irrational age, governed by absolute violence and pathological hate—Mumford>

Ana detrimental, deleterious, noxious, *pernicious, baneful: toxic, *poisonous: injurious, hurtful, harmful, mischievous (see corresponding nouns at INJURY)

Ant wholesome —Con *healthful, salubrious, salutary, hygienic: *healthy, robust, sound

upbraid *scold, rate, berate, tongue-lash, revile, vituperate, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig, rail

Ana reprehend, reprobate, blame, censure, denounce (see CRITICIZE): reproach, reprimand, rebuke, *reprove upheaval *commotion, agitation, tumult, turmoil, turbulence, confusion, convulsion

Ana heaving, raising, lifting (see LIFT vb): alteration, change (see under CHANGE vb): cataclysm, catastrophe, *disaster uphold *support, advocate, back, champion

Ana *help, aid, assist: defend, vindicate, justify, *maintain: sanction, *approve, endorse

Ant contravene: subvert upright, honest, just, conscientious, scrupulous, honorable are comparable when they are applied to men or their acts and words and mean having or exhibiting a strict regard for what is morally right. Upright implies manifest rectitude and an uncompromising adherence to high moral principles <the old-fashioned word upright. It's a good word, comprises a good many things—all the straight qualities, like loyalty, truthfulness, the right sort of pride—Goudge> <we shall exult, if they who rule the land, be men . . . wise, upright, valiant; not a servile band—Wordsworth> Honest implies a recognition of and strict adherence to solid virtues (as truthfulness, candor, respect for others' possessions, sincerity, and fairness) <it was fiction, but it was made as all honest fiction must be, from the stuff of human life—Wolfe> It is more widely applicable than upright which often implies independence of spirit and self-mastery and which is therefore referable chiefly to thoughtful and highly disciplined men. Honest, on the other hand, may be used in reference to the ignorant as well as the learned, and to the simple as well as the wise <the honest heart that's free frae a' intended fraud or guile—Burns> <if we be honest with ourselves, we shall be honest with each other—Macdonald> Just (see also FAIR) may stress conscious choice and regular practice of what is right or equitable  <human beings are a good deal less rational and innately just than the optimists of the eighteenth century supposed—Huxley) Conscientious and scrupulous both imply an active moral sense which governs all one's actions. Conscientious stresses painstaking efforts to follow that guide at all costs, especially in one's observance of the moral law or in the performance of one's duty (his whole character . . . was far too sturdily conscientious to allow of any suspicion being cast upon his rectitude—A. W. Ward) (conscientious and incorruptible and right-minded, a young man born to worry—Styron) Scrupulous (see also CAREFUL 2), on the other hand, implies either anxiety in obeying strictly the dictates of conscience or meticulous attention to the morality of the details of conduct as well as to the morality of one's ends (Sebastian was scrupulous, and certain accepted conventions had forced him to satisfy his conscience—Sackville-West) Honorable (see also HONORABLE 1) implies the guidance of a high sense of honor or of a sense of what one should do in obedience not only to the dictates of conscience but to the demands made by social position or office, by the code of his profession, or by the esteem in which he is held (Leopold's defenders . . . believed that he had done the right and honorable thing in sharing the fate of his soldiers and of the Belgian people—Shirer) (did this vile world show many such as thee, thou perfect, just, and honorable man—Shelley)

Ana *moral, ethical, virtuous, righteous: *fair, equitable, impartial: *straightforward, aboveboard uprising *rebellion, revolution, revolt, insurrection, mutiny, putsch, coup

Ana fight, combat, conflict, fray (see CONTEST): strife, contention, dissension (see DISCORD): aggression, *attack uproar *din, pandemonium, hullabaloo, babel, hubbub, clamor, racket

Ana strife, contention, dissension, *discord, conflict, variance: *confusion, disorder, chaos: fracas, *brawl, broil, melee uproot eradicate, deracinate, extirpate, *exterminate, wipe

Ana *abolish, extinguish, annihilate, abate: supplant, displace, *replace, supersede: subvert, overthrow, *overturn: *destroy, demolish

Ant establish: inseminate upset vb 1 *overturn, capsize, overthrow, subvert

Ana invert, *reverse: bend (see CURVE vb)

2 agitate, perturb, disturb, disquiet, *discompose, fluster, flurry

Ana bewilder, distract, confound (see PUZZLE vb): discomfit, rattle, faze, *embarrass: *unnerve, unman upshot outcome, issue, result, consequence, *effect, aftereffect, aftermath, event, sequel

Ana *end, termination, ending: climax, culmination (see SUMMIT): concluding or conclusion, finishing or finish, completion (see corresponding verbs at CLOSE)

urbane *suave, smooth, diplomatic, bland, politic

Ana courteous, polite, courtly, *civil: poised, balanced (see STABILIZE): cultured, cultivated, refined (see corresponding nouns at CULTURE)

Ant rude: clownish, bucolic urge vb Urge, egg, exhort, goad, spur, prod, prick, sic mean to press or impel to action, effort, or speed. Urge implies the exertion of influence or pressure either from something or someone external or from something within (as the conscience or the heart); specifically it suggests an inciting or stimulating to or toward a definite end (as greater speed or a prescribed course or objective) often against the inclinations or habits of the one urged (the crowd urged on their favorites with shouts of encouragement) (his conscience urged him to battle for the cause) (with remarkable speed the four guests . . . saddled their mules and urged them across the plain—Cather) (his new young life, so strong and imperious, was urged towards something else—D. H. Lawrence) Egg usually presupposes a hesitant, inert, or lagging will and usually suggests an encouraging or even an abetting (schemers and flatterers would egg him on—Thackeray) (she egged me to borrow the money—Kipling) Exhort may suggest the arts of a preacher or orator inciting men to good or better lives or actions and usually implies a fervor or zeal characteristic of a preacher in stimulating through admonition, encouragement, or pleading (William exhorted his friend to confess, and not to hide his sin any longer—George Eliot) (he may probably be exhorted to "do well in his examination"—Inge) Goad basically denotes the use of a pointed rod in driving cattle and carries in its extended use a strong implication of something that irritates or inflames and drives one on in spite of inclinations or habit of yielding to other desires or motives (many of them . . . had been goaded by petty persecution into a temper fit for desperate enterprise—Macaulay) (man's inquisitive nature has goaded him on to look deeply into these matters—Morrison) Spur basically applies to a spiked device attached to the heels of a rider and used to urge on a lagging horse; it is likely to suggest in its extended use a superior impulsion that makes up for the weakness or reluctance of one's nature or will (love will not be spurred to what it loathes—Shak.) (he is . . . spurred on by yearnings after an unsearchable delight—Symonds) (reproaches too, whose power may spur me on . . . to honorable toil—Wordsworth) Prod implies a being driven or forced into action as if by means of a stick or goad and may suggest a thrust or a push and an impelling against one's will (the excitement of trying . . . to prod them into action—J. R. Green) (Indians grew hungry and hatred of the white man prodded them into open hostilities—Julian Dana) Prick comes close to spur in implying an impulsion from something sharp-pointed or irritating that serves to urge or drive (rely on their animal instinct and developed reflexes to prick them into awareness when danger threatened—Majdalany) (pricked on by knightly spur of female eyes—J. R. Lowell) Sic basically means to urge on a dog to chase or attack someone; with persons it often implies exhorting or goading to attack or worry (a civilized nation sicced on the Barbary whelps to tear the peaceful passerby—Spears)

Ana impel, drive, actuate, *move: stimulate, excite, quicken, *provoke urge n *desire, lust, passion, appetite

Ana *motive, spring, spur, goad, incentive: longing, yearning, pining (see LONG): craving, coveting, desiring (see DESIRE vb)

urgent *pressing, imperative, crying, importunate, insistent, exigent, instant

Ana impelling, driving (see MOVE): constraining, compelling, obliging (see FORCE vb)

usage 1 practice, custom, use, *habit, habitude, wont

Ana *method, mode, manner, way, fashion: procedure, proceeding, *process: guiding or guidance, leading or lead (see corresponding verbs at GUIDE): *choice, preference

2 *form, convention, convenience

Ana formality, ceremony, *form use n 1 Use, service, advantage, profit, account, avail can all mean a useful or valuable end, result, or purpose. Use stresses either employment for some purpose or end of practical value (turn every scrap of material to use) or the practical value of the end promoted or attained (the findings in the investigation were of little use) (sweet are the uses of adversity—Shak.) Service, though often interchangeable with use, is especially appropriate when the reference is to persons or animals or their work or actions (the horse was unfit for service—Scott) (render a service to a friend) Service often implies that the result of one's act or works is beneficial (I have done the state some service, and they know't—Shak.) Advantage adds to use the implication of improvement or enhancement (as in value or position) (he uses every penny to advantage) (her beauty proved to be of great advantage to her in her stage career) (Constance had never before seen him to such heroic advantage—Bennett) (true Wit is Nature to advantage dressed—Pope) Profit distinctively implies reward or the rewarding character of what is attained, and often implies pecuniary gain (the student worked hard but to no profit) (he found moral profit also in this self-study; for how, he asked, can we correct our vices if we do not know them—L. P. Smith) (coal and steel interests were merging with mutual profit—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Account is used chiefly in fixed phrases (turn his musical talent to account) (of little account) It is sometimes interchangeable with use, advantage, or profit, but distinctively it suggests calculable value (a book that turns to account the conclusions of other recent German theorists—Babbitt) Sometimes it is nearly equivalent to importance (our family . . . whose honor is of so much account to both of us—Dickens) Avail so strongly suggests effectualness or effectiveness in the end attained that the negative idiomatic phrases in which it is often found are equivalent to ineffectual or ineffectually (the search was of no avail) (he labored unceasingly without avail to move the rock) (he studied hard but to no avail)

Ana benefit, profit (see corresponding verbs at BENEFIT); value, *worth; *function, office, duty; purpose, *intention, object

2 Use, usefulness, utility are comparable when they mean the character or the quality of serving or of being able to serve an end or purpose. Use (see also USE 1; HABIT) is the most general or least explicit of these terms; it usually implies little more than suitability for employment for some purpose stated or implied (our gymnasium . . . is of excellent use, and all my girls exercise in it—Meredith) (she said she would have saved the pieces had they been of any use) Usefulness, on the other hand, is employed chiefly with reference to definite concrete things that serve or are capable of serving a practical purpose (demonstrated the usefulness of his device) (her [the cat's] sacred character was in no wise impaired by her usefulness—Replier) (libraries have moved into that wider area of usefulness which today makes them one of the most effective instruments for ensuring a democratic way of life—Collier's Yr. Bk.) Utility, which comes very close to usefulness, may be preferred in technical, economic, and philosophical speech or writing, where it is often regarded as a property that can be measured or altered (as in quantity or quality) or that can be viewed as an abstraction (the extent to which the price of motorcars per unit of utility has fallen—Schumpeter) (in economics production is simply the creation of utility . . . adding some kind of utility to raw materials so that they will satisfy consumers' wants—Goodman & Moore) (universities exist for two purposes; on the one hand, to train men and women for certain professions; on the other hand, to pursue learning and research without regard to immediate utility—Russell) Ana applicability, relevance, pertinence (see corresponding adjectives at RELEVANT); suitability, fitness, appropriateness (see corresponding adjectives at FIT) 3 wont, practice, usage, custom, *habit, habitude use vb Use, employ, utilize, apply, avail can all mean to deal with something so as to give it a practical value or to make it serviceable to oneself or others. One uses a thing, or a person when regarded as a passive object, as a means or instrument to the accomplishment of a purpose or as an aid to the attainment of an end; the thing may be concrete (use a hoe in cultivating) (used a dictionary to build up his vocabulary) (use a person as a tool) or it may be abstract (use patience in dealing with children) (use discretion in investing money) (the way to learn to use words is to read some good literature often and carefully—Russell) (his sense of being used rose suddenly above the treacherous sympathy he had begun to feel for her—Tarkington) One employs a person or thing that is idle, inactive, or not in use, when he puts him or it to work or finds a profitable use for him or it (she had . . . employed her leisure in reading every book that came in her way—Shaw) (the student crammed full of knowledge which he cannot employ—Grandgent) (craftsmen were finding in the new land raw materials on which they could employ all their artistry—Amer. Guide Series: Pa.) Although use and employ are often interchanged, there can be a perceptible difference in meaning; wherever the idea of serving as the means or instrument is uppermost, use is likely to be preferred; wherever the idea of engaging or selecting, of keeping occupied or busy, or of turning to account is uppermost, employ is the desirable and often the necessary choice; thus, a writer uses words effectively who knows what ones he should employ in a given context; a teacher often uses his pupils as monitors when he should keep them employed in study. One utilizes something when he finds a profitable use for it or discovers how to employ it for a practical purpose (he even tried to figure out a way to utilize the small limbs cut from the tops of the trees—Anderson) (charged against him that he utilized his military office for private gain—R. G. Adams) One applies something when he brings it into contact or into relation with something else where it will prove its usefulness or acquire practical value. This suggestion of making a connection or bringing into contact is strong in all senses of apply (see also DIRECT, RESORT); in the present sense it can not only affect the construction but can even obscure the implication of usefulness; thus, one uses a mustard plaster to relieve a chest pain, but one applies a mustard plaster to the chest. The same implication distinguishes apply from the other words when the idea of usefulness is stressed; thus, one who knows how to employ words reveals his ability to select those words that express his exact meaning, no more and no less, but one who knows how to apply words reveals his ability to use them relevantly, that is, in reference to the things or ideas with which they are idiomatically associated (foreigners learning English find difficulty in applying certain words and phrases (as evening dress and night-dress, tool and instrument, or bad and naughty)) (our own word virtue is applied only to moral qualities; but the Greek word which we so translate should properly be rendered "excellence," and includes a reference to the body as well as to the soul—Dickinson) The implication of a useful or definite end is strongest in apply when the word carries the further suggestion of relating what is general or theoretical to what is particular or concrete, for some such practical purpose as identification (we can discover if this fabric is woolen by applying specific tests) or clarification of a problem (before forming an opinion, the judges must know what laws apply to the particular case) or invention (most modern inventions and discoveries are the result of a fresh outlook in applying the laws of physics and chemistry) (the law does all that is needed when it does all that it can, indicates a policy, applies it to all within the lines, and seeks to bring within the lines all similarly situated—Justice Holmes <it is a test which we may apply to all figure painters—a test which will often discover the secret of unsatisfactory design—if we ask whether the figures are really occupied by what they are doing—Binyon > One avails (oneself of) something or someone that is at hand or is offered by using it or him to one's own benefit or advantage <far from resenting such tutelage I am only too glad to avail myself of it—Shaw > <takes us . . . into the consciousness of his characters, and in order to do so, he has availed himself of methods of which Flaubert never dreamed—Edmund Wilson >

Ana *form, usage; rite, ceremony, formality (see FORM n)

Ana *handle, manipulate, ply, wield: *practice, exercise usefulness *use, utility

Ana value, *worth: *excellence, merit usual, customary, habitual, wonted, accustomed can mean familiar through frequent or regular repetition. Usual stresses the absence of strangeness and is applicable to whatever is normally expected or happens in the ordinary course of events <they paid the usual fee> <open for business as usual> <it appeared to him to be the usual castle, and he saw nothing unusual in the manner of his reception by the usual old lord—Henry Adams> <the characters were better drawn than is usual in romantic drama—Quinn> <darkness caused them to speak much louder than usual—Dahl> Customary often implies characteristic or distinguishing quality, and is applied to whatever is according to the usual or prevailing practices, conventions, or usages of a particular person or, especially, of a particular community <having her customary cup of tea before walking down the road to the bus stop—Salinger> <we had no idea how men behave when their customary way of life is disrupted—Lippmann> Sometimes invariable or fixed quality is implied <the assumption that whatever has been customary must be bad, and that anything which is or seems novel must be good—Grandgent> Habitual implies settled or established practice, and is commonly applied to what has settled by long repetition into a habit <his habitual energy>  <I stop ashamed, for I am talking habitual thoughts, and not adapting them to her ear—Yeats> <shut away from all that was familiar and habitual to him—Hervey> Wonted, a somewhat bookish word, stresses habituation, but tends to be applied to what is favored, sought, or purposefully cultivated <in revolutionary times when all our wonted certainties are violently called in question—Moberly> <robbed him of his peace, destroying his pleasure in wonted things—Parrington> Accustomed is often interchangeable with wonted and customary, but it is a more familiar word than the first and is weaker in its suggestions of custom and fixity than the second <work with accustomed diligence> <even his evening clothes were as habitual as his breath and hung on him with a weary and accustomed grace as if he had been born in them—Wolfe>

Ana *regular, natural, normal, typical: *common, ordinary, familiar: prevalent, *prevailing, rife, current usurp *arrogate, preempt, appropriate, confiscate

Ana seize, *take, grab, grasp

Ant abdicate

utensil *implement, tool, instrument, appliance

Ana *device, contrivance, contraption, gadget utility *use, usefulness

Ana suitability, fitness, appropriateness (see corresponding adjectives at FIT): value, *worth utilize *use, employ, apply, avail

Ana *benefit, profit: *handle, manipulate, ply, wield: forward, further, promote, *advance utopian *ambitious, pretentious

Ana impracticable, unfeasible, impossible (see affirmative adjectives at POSSIBLE): visionary, quixotic, chimerical (see IMAGINARY): ideal, transcendental, *abstract utter vb 1 *say, tell, state

Ana enunciate, *articulate, pronounce: *speak, talk

2 *express, vent, voice, broach, air, ventilate

Ana enunciate, *articulate, pronounce: *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge: *declare, announce, publish, advertise

V

vacant *empty, blank, void, vacuous

Ana *bare, barren: destitute, void, *devoid: idiotic, imbecilic, foolish (see corresponding nouns at FOOL)

Con *full, complete, replete vacate *annul, abrogate, void, quash vacillate *hesitate, waver, falter

Ana fluctuate, sway, oscillate (see SWING): *demur, scruple, boggle vacuous *empty, vacant, blank, void

Ana barren, *bare: inane, wishy-washy, *insipid

Con *full, replete vacuum n void, cavity, *hole, hollow, pocket

vagabond, vagrant, truant, tramp, bum, hobo mean a person who wanders at will or as a habit. Vagabond may apply to a homeless wanderer lacking visible means of support <apprehend all nightwalkers . . . vagabonds and disorderly persons—Philadelphia Ordinances> but more often it lacks derogatory implications and emphasizes the mere fact of wandering and implies a carefree fondness for a roaming life <Rousseau . . . that young vagabond of genius—L. P. Smith> <an exquisite defense of the fine art of irresponsible travel, and an encomium on the “cultured vagabond”—Nock> Vagrant is more likely to imply disreputableness and in its common legal use it denotes a person without fixed or known residence whose habits or acts are such that he is likely to become a public menace or a public charge <arrested as a vagrant> <the jail is the winter home of many vagrants> Even in more general use the term tends to carry stronger implications of disreputableness and waywardness than vagabond <every beggar, vagrant, exile-by-choice and peregrine-at-large . . . This whole hard-up population—Pynchon>  Truant carries as its strongest implication the habit of wandering away from where one ought to be or of loitering when one ought to be elsewhere and especially at school <I have a truant been to chivalry—Shak.> <by truant we mean a boy of school age who intentionally stays away from school for no other reason than that he does not wish to go—Powers & Witmer> Tramp is the ordinary and generally derogatory word for one who leads a wandering life; it can apply to any such person whether he moves about in search of work, especially seasonal work, or whether he lives by beggary and thievery <whoever, not being under seventeen, a blind person or a person asking charity within his own town, roves about from place to place begging, or living without labor or visible means of support, shall be deemed a tramp—General Laws of the Commonwealth of Mass.>  Bum basically applies to a lazy, idle, and often drunken, good-for-nothing, who will not work but habitually sponges on others <dwells in a black-and-white world where a guy is either your pal or probably a bum—Hal Boyle> <the local ne'er-do-well, the traditional village bum> But bum, especially when qualified, may denote one who wanders in pursuit of a particular occupation or activity <fruit bums who follow the harvests north>  Hobo is often distinguished from tramp, sometimes in terms of willingness to work, sometimes in terms of methods of travel, the tramp being then taken as one who typically tramps the roads, the hobo as one who typically rides surreptitiously on freight trains. A common application of hobo is to the migratory worker who roves about following such seasonal occupations as harvesting and crop picking <hoboes are traveling workers, tramps are traveling shirkers and bums are stationary shirkers—Cleveland Plain Dealer> <in Western parlance a hobo is not a tramp. A hobo is a migratory laborer, who carries his blankets on his back, looking for work—World's Work> Ana wanderer, roamer, rover (see corresponding verbs at WANDER)

vagary *caprice, freak, fancy, whim, whimsy, conceit, crotchety

Ana *mood, humor, temper, vein: *fancy, fantasy, dream, daydream: notion, *idea vagrant n *vagabond, truant, tramp, hobo, bum

Ana wanderer, roamer, rover (see corresponding verbs at WANDER) vagrant adj *itinerant, peripatetic, ambulatory, ambulant, nomadic

Ana moving, shifting (see MOVE vb): wandering, roaming, roving, rambling, straying, ranging (see WANDER): strolling, sauntering (see SAUNTER) vague *obscure, dark, enigmatic, cryptic, ambiguous, equivocal

Ana *formless, unformed: *doubtful, dubious: abstruse, *recondite

Ant definite: specific: lucid —Con *clear, perspicuous: express, *explicit vain 1 Vain, nugatory, otiose, idle, empty, hollow are comparable when they mean devoid of worth or significance. Something vain (see also FUTILE) is devoid of all value, either absolutely because worthless, superfluous, or unprofitable or relatively because there are other things which are of infinitely greater value, greater necessity, or greater profitableness <vain pleasures of luxurious life, forever with yourselves at strife—Wordsworth> <unless the forces of destruction . . . are brought under control, it is vain to plan for the future—Attlee> <vain pomp and glory of this world—Shak.> Something nugatory is trifling or insignificant or, especially in legal use, inoperative <in the decorative arts, the freedom given to the individual is rendered nugatory by the absence of cultural recognition of the innovator—Mead>  <limiting the right to pass laws for the execution of the granted powers, to such as are indispensable, and without which the power would be nugatory—John Marshall>

<the book is so one-sided that as a constructive contribution it is nugatory—Times Lit. Sup.> Something otiose has no excuse for being or serves no purpose and is usually an encumbrance or a superfluity <mummified customs that have long outlasted their usefulness, and otiose dogmas that have long lost their vitality—Inge> <it ought to be comparatively easy to decide . . . what kinds of criticism are useful and what are otiose—T. S. Eliot> <you were drastic . . . A firm hand pruned your lines; a sharp ear tested their music. Nothing soft, otiose, irrelevant cumbered your pages—Woolf> Something idle has no solidity, either being baseless or groundless or being incapable of having any worthwhile effects or result <idle theorizing> <idle dreams> <there is nothing that can control speculation, and preserve legitimate theory from idle fancy, but a strict adherence to the essential principles of science—Dingle> <it is idle to illustrate further, because to those who agree with me I am uttering commonplaces and to those who disagree I am ignoring the necessary foundations of thought—Justice Holmes> Something empty or hollow is destitute of substance or reality and is only apparently or deceptively sound, real, worthwhile, genuine, or sincere <empty threats>  <in itself unreal, empty, of no importance, and discardable overnight—Wouk> <empty profundities to which no operational meaning can possibly be attached—Huxley> <they were married with the bright hollow panoply attending such military affairs—Styron> Ana worthless, valueless (see affirmative nouns at WORTH): ineffectual, *ineffective, inefficacious: fruitless, bootless, *futile, abortive

Con effectual, *effective, efficacious

2 *futile, fruitless, bootless, abortive

Ana *ineffective, ineffectual, inefficacious: trivial, trifling, puny, *petty, paltry: delusive, delusory, *misleading

3 proud, vainglorious (see under PRIDE n)

Ana self-satisfied, self-complacent, *complacent, priggish, smug: conceited, egoistic, egotistic (see corresponding nouns at CONCEIT)

Con *humble, meek, modest: diffident, *shy, bashful vainglorious proud, vain (see under PRIDE n)

Ana arrogant, haughty, supercilious, disdainful, insolent, *proud: boasting or boastful, bragging, vaunting, gasconading (see corresponding verbs at BOAST)

vainglory *pride, vanity

Ana pomp, *display, parade: flaunting, parading, exhibition (see corresponding verbs at SHOW): rhapsody,rodomontade, rant, *bombast valiant *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valorous, dauntless, undaunted, doughty, bold, audacious Ana stout, *sturdy, tenacious, stalwart (see STRONG): indomitable, unconquerable, *invincible

Ant timid: dastardly valid, sound, cogent, convincing, compelling, telling can all be applied directly or indirectly to arguments, reasons, principles, or processes of thought or to their presentation and mean having or manifesting the power to impress themselves on others as right and well-grounded. Valid and sound both imply that the power is inherent in the rationality or logicity of the thought apart from its presentation. Something is valid against which no objections can be maintained, because it conforms strictly to the law or regulations (as of the state or the church) <hold a valid title to a piece of property>   or because it is supported or justified by facts and correct reasoning  <valid evidence> <universally valid principles—Inge> or, less often, because it is fully in accordance with claims or promises made for it and is entirely effectual or efficacious (a valid method of testing intelligence) (these folkways remain valid for anybody who gets solace from them—Wouk) A person or a thing is sound that is free from error or fault in his or its processes of thought and that avoids fallacies, insufficient evidence, hasty conclusions, or superficiality. The term not only suggests flawlessness in reasoning but solidity in the grounds upon which this reasoning is based (a sound thinker) (his assurance that he had never used an argument which he did not believe to be sound—Inge) (to admit . . . that reason cannot extend into the religious sphere is absolutely sound so long as we realize that reason has a coordinate right to lay down the rules in its own sphere of intelligence—Ellis) Something cogent or convincing or compelling commands mental assent. But cogent tends to stress a power or force resident in the argument or reasoning that makes it conclusive, convincing suggests a power to overcome doubt, opposition, or reluctance to accept, and compelling calls particular attention to the substantial nature of the objective evidence (the remarks of Gibbon [on universities and their degrees] are still . . . cogent—Aldington) (there are other ways of making a thing . . . convincing . . . besides merely appealing to one's logic and sense of fact—Babbitt) (so expressed, the argument does not sound strongly convincing; but it is really cogent, and the conclusion is sound—Darrow) (though his logic is often unconvincing, his documentation is always compelling—Muller) Something telling produces at once the desired effect; frequently the term implies the compelling of assent but it seldom directly suggests soundness or cogency though, in general, it does not deny the existence of these qualities (the first speaker for the affirmative used far more telling arguments than the second speaker) (every point made by the prosecuting attorney was telling) The term is often applied to words, phrases, tones of expression, or rhetorical methods which convince, persuade, or win admiration and support because of their pertinency, their suitability, or their forcibleness (a telling illustration of what Darwin unintentionally did to the minds of his disciples—Shaw) (such telling effects of contrast as the Japanese [artists] produced by an empty space—Binyon)

Ana *conclusive, determinative, definitive, decisive: *effective, effectual: legal, *lawful, licit: *logical, analytical, subtle

Ant fallacious, sophistical validate *confirm, authenticate, substantiate, verify, corroborate

Ana *certify, attest, witness, vouch

Ant invalidate

valor *heroism, prowess, gallantry

Ana *courage, mettle, tenacity, spirit, resolution: indomitableness, unconquerableness, invincibility (see corresponding adjectives at INVINCIBLE): *fortitude, guts, sand, backbone valorous *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, dauntless, undaunted, doughty, bold, audacious Ana venturesome, daring (see ADVENTUROUS): stout, sturdy, tenacious, stalwart, tough, *strong valuable adj precious, invaluable, priceless, *costly, expensive, dear

Ana estimated, appraised, evaluated (see ESTIMATE): valued, appreciated, prized, treasured (see APPRECIATE): esteemed, admired, respected (see corresponding verbs under REGARD n)

value n *worth

Ana *price, charge, cost, expense: *importance, consequence, significance, weight: *use, usefulness, utility value vb 1 *estimate, appraise, evaluate, rate, assess, assay Ana *calculate, compute, reckon: *judge, adjudge, adjudicate

2 prize, treasure, *appreciate, cherish

Ana esteem, respect, admire (see under REGARD n): love, enjoy (see LIKE): *revere, reverence, venerate vanish, evanesce, evaporate, disappear, fade can all mean to pass from view or out of existence. Vanish implies a complete, often mysterious, and usually sudden passing; it commonly suggests absence of all trace or of any clue that would permit following until found (no facts on the mother's disappearance. Died in childbirth, ran off with someone, committed suicide: some way of vanishing painful enough to keep Sidney from ever referring to it—Pynchon) (all those emotions of fear and abhorrence . . . vanished instantly from my mind—Hudson) (Addison complained that in his time the very appearances of Christianity had vanished—Huxley) Evanesce differs from vanish in its greater stress on the process (as effacement or dissipation) by which a thing passes from visibility or thought; sometimes the term distinctly suggests a gradual process (I touch a scarf and it falls into air and light and seems to evanesce—Goyen) (the sun-streaming clarity of checkered beach parasols, of friendly boys digging castles in the sand, faded in outline, evanesced from the bright precision of reality to vagueness of storm and fog—Joseph Bennett) Evaporate suggests a vanishing as silently and inconspicuously as water does into vapor (because of future expenses already mandated by the legislature, that surplus will evaporate soon—Armbrister) The term is often used in respect to tenuous qualities, but it may be employed to describe stealthy or prudent or sudden departures or withdrawals of persons (people whose faith, so tenuous anyway, had evaporated upon the threatening winds of a "cosmic cataclysm"—Styron) (looking at the high gray-green grass. A man could evaporate in that stuff in a second—R. O. Bowen) (if we try to express almost any poem of his in prose, we find it impossible; its rare spirit evaporates in the process—Day Lewis)

Disappear stresses only the passing from sight or thought; the passing implied may be sudden or gradual, permanent or temporary, but such suggestions are mostly contextual and not in the word (the traditional view, that the world was made up of a vertical scale of creatures, gradually disappeared—S. F. Mason) (some say, let us go back to Palestine, else Judaism will disappear—Cohen) (seldom have other writers been able to disappear from their narrative as completely as Faulkner does—Robert Humphrey) Fade, often with out or away, implies a gradual diminution in clearness and distinctness until the thing becomes invisible (the ship gradually faded from sight) (all other certainties had faded or eroded away in growing up—Wouk) (this story seems to have faded out of the popular mind—Norman Douglas)

Ana *escape, flee, fly: dispel, disperse, dissipate, *scatter Ant appear: loom vanity *pride, vainglory

Ana self-esteem, self-love, *conceit, egotism, egoism, amour propre: complacency, self-complacency, self-satisfaction, smugness, priggishness (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT): show, ostentation, pretense (see corresponding adjectives at SHOWY)

vanquish *conquer, defeat, beat, lick, subdue, subjugate, reduce, overcome, surmount, overthrow, rout

Ana *frustrate, foil, outwit, circumvent: *overturn, subvert

Con surrender, submit, capitulate (see corresponding nouns at SURRENDER): *yield, succumb vanquisher *victor, conqueror, winner, champion vapid *insipid, flat, jejune, banal, wishy-washy, inane Ana *soft, bland, gentle, mild: *tame, subdued, submissive: mawkish, maudlin, soppy, slushy, mushy, *sentimental

Con racy, spicy, *pungent, piquant: trenchant, crisp, *incisive: *expressive, significant, pregnant, meaningful variable adj *changeable, protean, changeful, mutable Ana *fitful, spasmodic: fickle, mercurial, unstable, *inconstant, capricious: mobile, *movable

Ant constant: equable variance *discord, contention, dissension, difference, strife, conflict

Ana difference, diversity, divergency, disparateness (see corresponding adjectives at DIFFERENT): separation, division, severing, sundering (see corresponding verbs at SEPARATE): incongruousness, uncongeniality, incompatibility, discordance, discrepancy (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT) variation change, alteration, modification (see under CHANGE vb)

Ana *variety, diversity: difference, divergence, divergency, *dissimilarity: *deviation, deflection, aberration variegated, parti-colored, motley, checkered, checked, pied, piebald, skewbald, dappled, freaked can all mean having a pattern involving different colors or shades of color. Variegated implies variation in the color (as of a single piece, object, or specimen) without indication of what colors or what forms—spots, streaks, blotches—are involved <disliked the variegated hues of the buildings—they reminded him of the garish brilliance in the lower town—Norman Douglas> <variegated tulips> Parti-colored implies the presence of two or more colors but stresses not so much the presence of different colors as their clear demarcation and distinct presentation. Motley in most uses is likely to suggest presence of colors of very noticeable diversity in a chance, haphazard, or very capricious arrangement <birds of motley colors and varied cries—Chesterton> <the motley dress of a court jester> Checkered indicates a regular alternation of rectangular shapes different in color or shade like a checkerboard, especially an alternation between black and white or dark and light <the checkered fabric of Constable's pictures, their deep undertones overlaid with variegated passages of crumbling impasto and strewn with particles of white light—Ironside> Checked indicates much the same thing but is admissible in situations where figures are less certainly rectangular; it is common in reference to fabrics  Pied suggests patches, blotches, or spots of colors on a contrasting background and especially the white on black of a magpie's plumage. Piebald suggests similar coloration, especially in reference to the markings of a horse or dog, and skewbald implies an arrangement of spots and background involving white and some color other than black <piebald strictly means spotted white and black and skewbald white and any color but black—Simpson> Dappled describes a marking with small spots, patches, or specks of color or shade differing from that of the background <it lay dappled with sun and shade, still, clear, and irresistible—Ertz> Freaked may suggest bold streaks of contrasting color <tall bare fells, capped and freaked with snow—Brophy> <the woods were freaked and pied with fresh transparent leaves and flowers—Wylie>

Ana flecked, stippled, marbled, mottled, spattered, spotted (see under SPOT vb)

variety 1 Variety, diversity are comparable when they are used in reference to a group, class, or complex whole and denote the state or quality of being composed of different parts, elements, or individuals. Variety may imply that the things which differ, whether they are fundamentally similar or completely dissimilar, are related because they contribute to the same end or play a part in the formation of the same whole (his variety is to be praised . . . what is distressing . . . is his style—Mailer) <most workers would prefer some variety in their work, but they cannot get it—Hobson> Diversity, though often used interchangeably with variety, distinctively stresses the marked difference or divergence of the individuals, parts, or elements, and seldom suggests even a class or categorical likeness <the practical reduction of human diversity to subhuman uniformity, of freedom to servitude—Huxley> <the moral and intellectual explosion needed . . . to reestablish tolerance of qualitative diversity and intellectual freedom as the true basis of democracy—Julian Huxley> <the great diversity among human beings>

Ana *dissimilarity, unlikeness, difference, divergence, divergency: multifariousness, variousness (see corresponding adjectives at MANY): miscellaneousness or miscellany, heterogeneousness or heterogeneity, assortment or assortment (see corresponding adjectives at MISCELLANEOUS)

2 Variety, subspecies, race, breed, cultivar, strain, clone, stock are comparable when they mean a group of related plants or animals narrower in scope than a species. These terms tend to be variable in application and subject to confusing overlap in use, but all can carry distinctive implications. Variety stresses deviation from a type; historically, it denotes an infraspecific category differing from the typical form of the species in characters that are too trivial or too inconstant to justify its separation as a distinct species. In modern use it is appropriately selected when it is desirable to call attention to such deviation without making any specific taxonomic suggestion or it may be used specifically of any such divergent group developed under human control (as by selective breeding, hybridization, and cultivation) <an early variety of peach> <developing new varieties to meet special conditions> Subspecies, which stresses subordinate status, is primarily a taxonomic term applicable to a morphologically distinguishable subdivision of a species that is geographically isolated but physiologically capable of interbreeding with other comparable subdivisions of the same species. Race stresses common ancestry and differentiation based on readily discernible hereditary characters  As applied to the human species (Homo sapiens), race is a highly controversial term that basically denotes any of the primary subdivisions of recent man historically native to distinct parts of the world and distinguished by relatively fixed characters in physical type (as skin color, hair form, and skull shape) <the Caucasoid race> <the Mongoloid race> In more general use race may apply to either large or small groups within a species. Though often used as if interchangeable race and variety are not exactly correspondent; while they sometimes agree, they more often overlap in their reference, for race emphasizes a common descent, while variety stresses divergence from a type. Breed can refer to a group within a species of animals or occasionally of plants the members of which presumably share a common ancestry and are visibly similar in most characters. More specifically breed refers to such a group (as Jersey cattle or beagle dogs) that has been developed under human control chiefly through selective breeding and the fixing of desired qualities. Cultivar applies specifically to a race or breed of plants originated (as by selection or hybridization) under cultivation. Strain, like variety, stresses difference, but it is more likely to be used of subdivisions of subdivisions (as subspecies, or especially breeds or varieties) than, as variety typically is, of primary subdivisions of the species. It is especially applicable when the distinguishing character is a physiological quality (as vigor, or yield, or virulence); the term may imply human control as a means of gaining this result (as through crossing or inbreeding) or it may imply chance variation (the appearance of virulent and antibiotic-resistant bacterial strains) or controlled conditions (an improved strain of Golden Bantam corn) (superior milking strains have been developed in most dual-purpose breeds of cattle) Clone is the most precisely delimited term of this set; it denotes all the individuals that constitute the asexually produced progeny of a single parent and are therefore genetically identical. Though applicable to organisms (as bacteria and protozoans) that reproduce asexually in nature, it is used typically of economic plants that are propagated by such means as dividing, budding, or grafting and in such use may come close to variety, race, or strain; thus, one can speak of the Baldwin variety of apple or the Baldwin clone. Stock places emphasis upon community of origin and genetically close relationship in the group but its range of reference is not clearly defined. Often also it carries over from other senses of the word the notion of being a source or original (culled out a vigorous stock from which he selected several clones) (the several stocks developed by inbreeding were crossed to gain hybrid vigor)

various 1 *different, diverse, divergent, disparate

Ana *distinct, separate: distinctive, peculiar, individual (see CHARACTERISTIC): varying, changing (see CHANGE vb)

Ant uniform: cognate

2 *many, several, sundry, divers, numerous, multifarious

Ana *miscellaneous, heterogeneous, assorted

Con *same, identical, equivalent, equal: similar, alike, *like vary 1 *change, alter, modify

Ana deviate, diverge, digress, depart (see SWERVE):

*transform, metamorphose, convert

2 *differ, disagree, dissent

Ana deviate, diverge, digress, depart (see SWERVE):

*separate, divide, part vast *huge, immense, enormous, elephantine, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantuan, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, cyclopean, titanic, Brobdingnagian

Ana stupendous, tremendous, prodigious, *monstrous: *large, big, great: *spacious, capacious vault vb *jump, leap, spring, bound

Ana surmount (see CONQUER): mount, ascend, *rise, soar vault n jump, leap, spring, bound (see under JUMP vb)

Ana surmounting (see CONQUER): rising, mounting, ascending, soaring (see RISE)

vaunt vb *boast, brag, crow, gasconade

Ana parade, flaunt, exhibit, display, *show: magnify, aggrandize, *exalt veer *swerve, deviate, depart, digress, diverge

Ana shift, transfer, *move: *turn, divert, deflect, sheer vehement *intense, fierce, exquisite, violent

Ana forcible, forceful, *powerful, potent: fervid, perfervid, *impassioned, passionate, ardent: *furious, frantic, wild, rabid, delirious vehicle *mean, instrument, instrumentality, agent, agency, medium, organ, channel veil vb *cover, overspread, envelop, wrap, shroud

Ana mask, cloak, camouflage, *disguise: conceal, *hide, secrete, screen vein 1 *mood, humor, temper

Ana *disposition, temper, complexion, temperament

2 strain, streak, *touch, suggestion, suspicion, soupçon, tincture, tinge, shade, smack, spice, dash velocity *speed, momentum, impetus, pace, headway

Ana *celerity, legerity, alacrity: *haste, hurry, expedition, dispatch velvety silken, silky, satiny, glossy, slick, *sleek venal *mercenary, hireling, hack

Ana corrupt, nefarious, iniquitous, *vicious, infamous, flagitious: sordid, ignoble (see MEAN adj) venerable *old, ancient, antique, antiquated, archaic, obsolete, antediluvian

Ana venerated, revered, revered (see REVERE): *aged, old venerate *revere, reverence, worship, adore

Ana esteem, respect, admire, regard (see under REGARD n): cherish, prize, treasure, value, *appreciate veneration reverence, worship, adoration (see under REVERE)

Ana deference, homage, obeisance, *honor vengeance revenge, retribution, *retaliation, reprisal

Ana punishment, disciplining or discipline, castigation (see corresponding verbs at PUNISH): avenging, revenging (see AVENGE): recompensing or recompense, repayment (see corresponding verbs at PAY) vengeful *vindictive, revengeful

Ana rancorous, inimical, hostile, antagonistic (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY): malevolent, spiteful, *malicious, malignant venial, pardonable are applied to faults, sins, or errors and mean of such a character as not to warrant punishment or the imposition of a penalty. Venial in most use implies an opposition to grave, serious, or grievous (he had learned to see what was really criminal in what he had done, and what was venial—Trollope) and in theological use to mortal (see mortal under DEADLY); consequently it often means trifling, not willful, or harmless (the fastidious could carp at many minor slips or infelicities; but they seem fairly venial—R. H. Bowers) (the venial indiscretions of youth—Southey) (the venial flaws, which are obvious, are venial compared with those of the best natural languages—Guérard) Pardonable implies that such excuse or justification may be offered for the fault or error that it is not worthy of consideration (her heart innocent of the most pardonable guile—Conrad) (able to add, with pardonable pride, "it was a costly and a noble act"—Coulton)

Ant heinous: mortal (in Roman Catholic theology) venom *poison, toxin, virus, bane venomous *poisonous, virulent, toxic, mephitic, pestilent, pestilential, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmal

Ana malignant, malign, malevolent (see MALICIOUS): baleful, malefic, maleficent (see SINISTER): *pernicious, baneful, noxious, deleterious, detrimental vent vb *express, utter, voice, broach, air, ventilate

Ana *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge: *assert, declare, aver, avow

Ant bridle (sense 1) —Con *restrain, inhibit, check, curb: *suppress, repress ventilate 1 *aerate, oxygenate, carbonate

2 *express, vent, air, utter, voice, broach

Ana expose, exhibit, display, *show: disclose, divulge, discover, *reveal: publish, advertise, broadcast (see DECLARE) venture vb Venture, hazard, risk, chance, jeopardize, endanger, imperil can all mean to expose to the chance of being unsuccessful, lost, or injured. Venture implies a daring to stake something (as the success of an action or undertaking, one's life, or one's property) on the chance of getting an advantage or gain whether great or small; the term implies only the chances taken and the contingencies foreseen and does not, apart from the context, indicate its outcome (he determined to venture his life and his fortunes

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

for the cause of freedom) <you have deeply ventured; but all must do so who would greatly win—Byron> But venture is often used in a weakened sense to mean little more than dare or, sometimes, attempt <imagine the fate of a university don of 1860, or 1870, or 1880, or even 1890 who had ventured to commend Leaves of Grass to the young gentlemen—Mencken> <his class fellows were all rather gloomily polite to him, and one or two ventured awkward words of condolence—Archibald Marshall> Hazard usually implies the putting of something to the chance of losing it; the term suggests more uncertainty or precariousness than venture and less hope of a favorable outcome and is often used in place of venture because of this implication <men that hazard all do it in hope of fair advantages—Shak.> <his own possessions, safety, life, he would have hazarded for Lucie and her child, without a moment's demur—Dickens> Like venture, hazard is also often used in a much weaker sense but it comes closer to dare than to attempt <sometimes as he hunted he got a glimpse of the giraffe moving through the bush, but was never near enough to hazard a shot—Cloete> <no Elizabethan dramatist offers greater temptation: to the scholar, to hazard conjecture of fact; and to the critic, to hazard conjecture of significance—T. S. Eliot> Risk carries a still stronger implication of exposure to real dangers and of taking actual chances <Captain Cook had sailed straight through the middle of the group, not risking a landing because of the fierce aspect of the natives—Heiser> Chance may suggest a trusting to luck and a sometimes irresponsible disregarding of the risks involved in an action or procedure <decided to withdraw from Kentucky rather than chance defeat in enemy territory—Hay> <I'll chance it, if it kills me> Jeopardize carries further the implication of exposure to dangers; it implies not only that they are a constant threat but that the odds in one's favor are equally or even unfavorably balanced with those against one <found it difficult to steer a course that should not jeopardize either his loyalty or his honesty—Sidney Lee> <no traveler from abroad, however fair-minded, could tell the truth about us without jeopardizing his life, liberty, and reputation—Brooks> Endanger and imperil both stress exposure to dangers or perils, and do not in themselves throw emphasis upon a taking of chances. Imperil may imply more certainty or more imminence to the predicted risk than endanger but the two words are often used interchangeably without significant loss <not so great a wind as to endanger us—Defoe> <condemned the abolitionists as agitators who actually endangered the cause of freedom—Cole>  <new technical processes and devices litter the countryside with waste and refuse, contaminate water and air, imperil wildlife and man and endanger the balance of nature itself—Kennedy> venturesome *adventurous, daring, daredevil, rash, reckless, foolhardy

Ana bold, audacious, intrepid, *brave: stout, sturdy, stalwart (see STRONG)

Con *timid, timorous: *fearful, apprehensive, afraid veracity *truth, verity, verisimilitude

Ana integrity, probity, *honesty, honor verbal *oral

verbiage, redundancy, tautology, pleonasm, circumlocution, periphrasis are comparable when they denote a fault of style or a form or mode of expression involving the use of too many words. Verbiage may imply delight in words for their own sake (as for their sound, their color, or their suggestions) and overindulgence in their use for these reasons; the term, however, often suggests a pointless or habitual wordiness that tends to make what is written dull, meaningless, obscure, or unduly heavy reading <his concise and well-informed speeches were welcomed amid the common verbiage of debate—Buchan> <the almost luscious richness of Aunt Phoebe's imagination, her florid verbiage, her note of sensuous defiance—H. G. Wells> Redundancy does not in general carry the implications of expansiveness, floridity, or heaviness so often apparent in verbiage; but the term sometimes implies the use of more words than are required by idiom or syntax and so suggests a fault of style <redundancies result . . . when the writer fails to perceive the scope of a word—Westley> <the . . . florid redundancy of Italian prose—Ellis> Tautology is needless or useless repetition of the same idea in different words <he cautioned his students to beware of such tautologies as "visible to the eye" and "audible to the ear"> Pleonasm implies the use of syntactically unnecessary words as in "the man he said." Sometimes pleonastic expressions are acceptable means of emphasis and are thought of as figures of speech <it is a pleonasm, a figure usual in Scripture, by a multiplicity of expressions to signify one notable thing—South> Circumlocution and periphrasis denote a roundabout or indirect way of saying a thing <the gift of the pamphleteer, who cuts through academic circumlocution—Dean> <this was not however a question to be asked point-blank, and I could not think of any effective circumlocution—Conrad> <one of those anomalous practitioners in lower departments of the law who . . . deny themselves all indulgence in the luxury of too delicate a conscience (a periphrasis which might be abridged considerably)—De Quincey> <"The answer is in the negative" is a periphrasis for "no"—Time>

Ana wordiness, verbosity, prolixity, diffuseness (see corresponding adjectives at WORDY)

verbose *wordy, prolix, diffuse, redundant

Ana grandiloquent, magniloquent, flowery, bombastic (see RHETORICAL); loquacious, voluble, glib, garrulous, *talkative

Ant laconic —Con *concise, terse, succinct: compact, *close verge n edge, rim, brim, brink, *border, margin

Ana bound, *limit, end, confine: *circumference, perimeter, compass verify corroborate, substantiate, *confirm, authenticate, validate

Ana *prove, test, try, demonstrate: *certify, attest, witness, vouch: establish, settle (see SET vb)

verisimilitude *truth, veracity, verity

Ana agreement, accordance, harmonizing or harmony, correspondence (see corresponding verbs at AGREE): *likeness, similitude, resemblance veritable *authentic, genuine, bona fide

Ana actual, *real, true

Ant factitious

verity *truth, veracity, verisimilitude vernacular *dialect, patois, lingo, jargon, cant, argot, slang versatile, many-sided, all-around can all mean marked by or showing skill or ability or capacity or usefulness of many different kinds. When applied to persons, versatile stresses aptitude and facility in many different activities requiring skill or ability, especially the ability to turn with no diminution in skill from one activity to another without a hitch; applied to things, it stresses their multiple and diverse qualities, uses, or possibilities  <the most versatile soprano now active—Kolodin> <versatile interests>   Many-sided applied to persons stresses breadth or diversity of interests or accomplishments; applied to things, their diversity of aspects, attributes, or uses (a many-sided scholar and citizen) (a many-sided and truly civilized life—Trevelyan) (a many-sided personality) (a many-sided agreement—Manchester Guardian) All-around implies completeness or symmetry in development, either general or within a single activity with many phases; the term need not imply special or great attainments but rather a general ability to do oneself credit; when applied to things, it implies an analogous general usefulness (many observers have called him the best all-around reporter in the country—Walker) (the all-around adaptability and quality of our men—Vosseller) Ana gifted, talented (see corresponding nouns at GIFT); accomplished, finished, *consummate: ready, apt, *quick, prompt verse 1 Verse, stanza both mean a unit of metrical writing. Verse is both wider and more varied in its popular usage since it can denote a single line of such writing, such writing as a class, or, along with stanza, a group of lines forming a division of a poem and typically following a fixed metrical and sometimes rhythmical pattern. Verse may also specifically denote the part of a song preceding the refrain or chorus or a comparable part of an anthem or hymn. But in technical use and in discussion of prosody verse is restricted to the single line of metrical writing and stanza is regularly employed for the group of lines that forms a division of a poem.

2 *paragraph, article, clause, plank, count versed *conversant

Ana *learned, erudite: informed, acquainted (see INFORM): intimate, *familiar versifier *poet, rhymer, rhymester, poetaster, bard, minstrel, troubadour version 1 *translation, paraphrase, metaphor

2 *account, report, story, chronicle vertebrae *spine, backbone, back, chine vertex *apex

vertical, perpendicular, plumb can mean situated at right angles to the plane of the horizon or extending from that plane at such an angle. Vertical suggests a relation to the vertex or topmost point (see APEX 1); it is used most often when the thing so described actually extends upward from the plane of the horizon or from its base or support in such a direction that if its direction line were produced, it would reach the zenith (vertical threads in a tapestry) (a vertical piston) (walls not quite vertical) Vertical is, of these terms, the most frequently applied to abstractions and the most common in extended use (the vertical organization of society) Perpendicular differs from vertical in being normally applied to things that extend upward or downward from the horizontal or both upward and downward; thus, one looks up or down the perpendicular face of a cliff (a perpendicular fall of water) Consequently, perpendicular is used more often than vertical to suggest little more than precipitousness or extreme steepness or stiffness and straightness of line (a perpendicular descent) (a stiff perpendicular old maid—Mitford) Plumb is largely a builder's term used particularly in judging the exact verticality or perpendicularity of something by its conformity to the direction of a plumb line (the wall was plumb)

Ant horizontal

vertiginous *giddy, dizzy, swimming, dazzled

Ana reeling, whirling, staggering, tottering (see REEL) verve *vigor, vim, spirit, dash, esprit, punch, élan, drive

Ana vivacity, animation, liveliness (see corresponding adjectives at LIVELY): buoyancy, resiliency, elasticity (see corresponding adjectives at ELASTIC)

very selfsame, *same, identical, identic, equivalent, equal, tantamount vessel ship, *boat, craft vestige *trace, track

Ana print, imprint, *impression, stamp vex irk, *annoy, bother

Ana chafe, fret, gall (see ABRABE): *irritate, exasperate, nettles, provoke

Ant please, regale —Con *pacify, appease, mollify, propitiate viands provisions, comestibles, *food, feed, victuals, provender, fodder, forage vibrant *resonant, sonorous, ringing, resounding, orotund

Ana pulsating, pulsing, throbbing, beating (see PULSATE): thrilling, electrifying (see THRILL) vibrate *swing, sway, oscillate, fluctuate, pendulate, waver, undulate

Ana *pulsate, pulse, beat, throb, palpitate: quiver, quaver, tremble, *shake vice 1 *fault, failing, frailty, foible

Ana defect, flaw, *blemish: infirmity, weakness (see corresponding adjectives at WEAK)

2 *offense, sin, crime, scandal

Ana transgression, trespass, violation, *breach, infraction: immorality (see corresponding adjective at IMMORAL): *evil, ill

Ant virtue

vicinity neighborhood, district, *locality

Ana region, *area: section, sector (see PART n)

vicious, villainous, iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious, infamous, corrupt, degenerate are comparable when they mean highly reprehensible or offensive in character, nature, or conduct. Vicious may imply an addiction to or connection with vice or immorality; usually it suggests moral depravity and is the diametrical opposite of virtuous (form vicious habits) (we cannot afford to have poor people anyhow, whether they be lazy or busy, drunken or sober, virtuous or vicious—Shaw) Often the word implies a particular highly reprehensible quality (as ugliness or violence of temper or deliberate cruelty) (the horseman delivered one last vicious cut with his whip—Kipling) (he looked at the piece of meat and crust, and suddenly, in a vicious spurt of temper, flung it into the fire—D. H. Lawrence) or it may imply a debasing (the multiplication of critical books and essays may create . . . a vicious taste for reading about works of art instead of reading the works themselves—T. S. Eliot) or complete vitiation by faults, defects, or irremediable conditions (a vicious system of financing) (discriminate between thoroughly vicious ideas and those which should have a chance to be heard—Chafee) Villainous is a more condemnatory term than vicious; it may suggest specifically qualities which can be associated with a villain, a rascal, or a scoundrel or it may be little more than an intensifying equivalent of vicious (a villainous assault) (a villainous practice) (a villainous temper) (dreams bizarre and frantic, villainous beyond men's wildest imaginings—Styron) Iniquitous is more fixed in its meaning than the preceding terms; it commonly implies the absence of all signs of justice or fairness or a complete indifference to the standards or principles which govern the conduct of civilized or law-abiding men (iniquitous disregard of the rights of small nations) (that quenchless hunger for raw, quick, dirty money in American politics, which hardly sugarcoats its bribes, which glazes over its most iniquitous corruption—White) Nefarious is often used in place of iniquitous when one wishes an even more censorious form of expression. The word implies impiety in its deepest sense or a breach of laws and traditions which have immemorably been honored, but it commonly means extremely or flagrantly wicked (the nefarious neglect of their aged parents) (race prejudice is most nefarious on its politer levels—Clurman) Flagitious and infamous both imply shameful and scandalous badness or wickedness, but the former is somewhat less rhetorical and more closely descriptive than the latter (in the beginning, the common law applied only to acts that all men, everywhere, admitted were flagitious—G. W. Johnson) (forced and flagitious bombast—T. S. Eliot) (else, perhaps, I might have been entangled among deeds, which, now, as infamous, I should abhor—Wordsworth) (Alice . . . would have scouted as infamous any suggestion that her parent was more selfish than saintly—Shaw) Corrupt (see also DEBASE 1) may be applied to persons in an official capacity or to their acts, then implying a loss or lack of moral integrity or probity that makes one accessible to bribes or other inducements to go contrary to sworn duties or obligations (control of municipal government in . . . many . . . American cities had fallen into the clutches of corrupt political machines—Armbrister) (bent only on turning each to his own personal advantage the now corrupt machinery of administration and law—Dickinson) or the term may be more generally applied, and then suggests degradation or depravity (those moral wildernesses of civilized life which the Square automatically condemns as delinquent or evil or immature or morbid or self-destructive or corrupt—Mailer) (humanity they knew to be corrupt and incompetent—Henry Adams) Degenerate stresses a descent and deterioration from a presumed original or earlier high type or condition to one that is very low in the scale morally, intellectually, physically, or artistically. However it additionally carries so strong an implication of corruption, and so often suggests extreme viciousness that it is generally used to describe what is especially reprehensible and offensive from the historical point of view or in comparison to other members of its class or other instances of the type (preferred to prop up an effete and degenerate dynasty rather than face a vigorous reformed China—G. F. Hudson) (what he has to say is inspired by revolt against the degenerate practice of his times—Binyon) (we are solemnly warned that in the hands of modern writers language has fallen into a morbid state. It has become degenerate—Ellis)

Ana debased, depraved, debauched, perverted (see under DEBASE): dissolute, profligate, *abandoned, reprobate: lewd, lascivious, wanton, lecherous, libidinous (see LICENTIOUS)

Ant virtuous

vicissitude 1 *change, alternation, mutation, permutation Ana turning, rotation, revolving or revolution (see corresponding verbs at TURN): reversal, transposition (see corresponding verbs at REVERSE): *succession, progression, sequence, series: *variety, diversity 2 *difficulty, hardship, rigor

Ana *misfortune, mischance, adversity: *trial, tribulation, affliction victim, prey, quarry denote a person or animal killed or injured for the ends of the one who kills or injures. Victim primarily applies to a living creature, usually an animal, sometimes a person, that is killed and offered as a sacrifice to a divinity; in more general use it applies to one who has been destroyed, ruined, seriously injured, or badly treated by some ruthless person or impersonal power before which he has been helpless (the victims of a pestilence) (spent much time in the back of the grocery, complaining of his poverty as if it were a new invention and he its first victim—Malamud) (was the girl born to be a victim; to be always disliked and crushed as if she were too fine for this world?—Conrad) (all are victims of circumstances;

all have had characters warped in infancy and intelligence stunted at school—Russell) Prey applies to animals hunted and killed for food by more powerful carnivorous animals (the hungry family flew like vultures on their prey—Johnson) In extended sense prey applies to a victim of something that seizes or captures or falls in a manner suggestive of the action of a predatory animal (Hitler, having taken his plunge, and with such reckless bravado, now suddenly was prey to doubts—Shirer) (people who make solemn talk about art and are the natural prey of the artists of Punch—Montague) Quarry is predominantly a hunting term referable to a victim of the chase, especially one taken with hounds or hawks; it may be applied to the animal as pursued as well as the animal as taken after pursuit (the startled quarry bounds amain, as fast the gallant greyhounds strain—Scott) In extended use quarry usually applies to a person or thing determined upon as a victim and vigorously and relentlessly pursued (you think . . . you are the pursuer and she the pursued. . . Fool: it is you who are the pursued, the marked-down quarry, the destined prey—Shaw) (sometimes a man has to stalk his quarry with great caution, waiting patiently for the right moment to reveal himself—Dahl)

victor, winner, conqueror, champion, vanquisher can all denote one who gains the mastery in a contest, conflict, or competition. Victor, the more literary term, and winner, the ordinary term, usually stress the fact of defeating one's opponents; additionally victor can connote a triumph or a glorious proof of one's powers. The terms are applicable when the test is one of strength, strategy, skill, or endurance (the winner in the oratorical contest) (he who battles on her [Justice's] side, God, though he were ten times slain, crowns him victor glorified, victor over death and pain—Emerson) (life is a contest between people in which the victor generally recuperates quickly and the loser takes long to mend—Mailer) (he undoubtedly was going to be a very rich man. So her boss said. And her boss picked winner—Donn Byrne) Conqueror stresses the defeat and subjugation of an enemy or opposing force; the term is seldom used appropriately in respect to friendly games or competitions where winner is the regular term, for it usually presupposes a warlike struggle or an attempt to crush by getting the upper hand (England never did, nor never shall, lie at the proud foot of a conqueror—Shak.) (there was also in it . . . a note of the triumphant conqueror, the defier of the world—Shirer) Champion applies to the one who gains acknowledged supremacy through a contest or in a field of competition (as in an athletic contest or in a given sport). The term does not apply to a winner of any test, but only of a test in which one meets all of those of highest rank in the field or meets the one who holds the title of champion or one who challenges one's own right to hold that title (the heavyweight champion of the world) (he could end up being champion for a while. But I doubt if he could hold the title in a strong field—Mailer) Vanquisher is often used in place of conqueror and, often ironically or somewhat hyperbolically, in place of victor or winner, when there is an intent to imply an overpowering or an overwhelming or crushing defeat (but I shall rise victorious, and subdue my vanquisher—Milton) (realized that gold is not always the vanquisher of every obstacle—Cable)

victory, conquest, triumph can mean the result achieved by one who gains the mastery in a contest or struggle. Victory and conquest in their basic use carry the same implications and suggestions as the corresponding agent nouns (see VICTOR) (“Victory,” said Nelson, “is not a name strong enough for such a scene”; he called it a conquest—Southey) In their common extended use, victory is likely to suggest a gaining of superiority or success, often in intellectual or spiritual fields (a first instance of the victory of technical knowledge . . . over the traditional crafts—Michael Barbour) (his mental victory over this cruel illness is . . . inspiring—Patterson) (music . . . starts off at the point where the victory of the spirit over musical instruments is complete—Spender) while conquest is more likely to imply a bringing of something under one's control, especially so that it may be put to use (man's conquest of the soil—Shaplen) (art is essentially a conquest of matter by the spirit—Binyon) Triumph may apply either to a brilliant or decisive victory or an overwhelming conquest and suggest the acclaim and personal satisfaction accruing to the winner (his [Wellington's] triumph will be sung . . . far on in summers that we shall not see—Tennyson) (it is surely questionable whether we . . . should desire their triumph, a degree of success that clearly implies the full accomplishment of all their ends, good and bad—The Commonwealth) In its extended use triumph tends to stress decisiveness and brilliance of the result (the triumph of industrialism and the spread of urbanism—Glicksberg) or to express the pleasure of the successful person (she was clearly conscious of her success . . . There was a little prance of triumph in her walk—Dahl)

Ana winning, gaining (see GET): ascendancy, *supremacy: control, sway, dominion, command, *power, authority Ant defeat

victuals *food, feed, viands, provisions, comestibles, provender, fodder, forage vie *rival, compete, emulate

Ana *contend, fight: strive, struggle, essay, endeavor (see ATTEMPT vb)

view n 1 *look, sight, glance, glimpse, peep, peek

Ana scrutiny, scanning, inspection, examination (see under SCRUTINIZE)

2 *opinion, belief, conviction, persuasion, sentiment

Ana *idea, thought, concept, conception: inference, deduction, conclusion, judgment (see under INFER) view vb survey, contemplate, observe, note, remark, notice, perceive, discern, *see, behold, descry, spy

Ana scan, *scrutinize, inspect, examine: *consider, regard, account viewpoint *point of view, standpoint, angle, slant

Ana *position, stand, attitude: ground, *reason vigilant alert, wide-awake, *watchful

Ana anxious, agog, keen, avid, *eager: circumspect, wary, chary, *cautious: *quick, ready, prompt: *sharp, keen, acute

Con *negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss: *forgetful, unmindful, oblivious vigor, vim, spirit, dash, esprit, verve, punch, élan, drive can all denote a quality of force, forcefulness, or energy.

Vigor implies a strength that proceeds from a fundamental soundness or robustness or a display of energy or forcefulness deriving from this or befitting it (the physical and intellectual vigor and toughness which the trial lawyer needs—Robert Hale) (the tendency . . . to mistake gush for vigor and substitute rhetoric for imagination—Day Lewis) Vim stresses the display of usually enthusiastic energy put into the work of doing or making something (fights with vim) (the workmen . . . are always busy; there is a hearty vim to their work that proves interest—Century) Spirit (see also COURAGE, SOUL, APPARITION) stresses vivacity, animation, and liveliness which usually derive from mood, disposition, or temperament (all in arms . . . as full of spirit as the month of May—Shak.) (the pieces . . . were written in deadeast winter of the dead years . . . and few of the contributions had spirit—Mailer)

(sing it with a spirit that will start the world along—Work) Dash may imply the presence of any of these qualities, vigor, vim, and spirit, often in the form of a bold devil-may-care force; it tends to stress the impact of the thing upon the mind of the observer or reader or listener (drawn with Dureresque vigor and dash—Hardy) (the two sisters were not beautiful . . . but they had the dash . . . that a later generation came to call sex appeal—Shaplen) Esprit is not quite equivalent to spirit; like spirit it implies a quality which has its basis in nature and is manifested in mood or temperament; unlike it, it suggests the force displayed by an exceedingly active and subtle mind and so comes close to meaning cleverness, brains, or wit usually with an added suggestion of vivacity (as in conversation) (one man who is a little too literal can spoil the talk of a whole tableful of men of esprit—Holmes) (the industrial esprit that could spark general economic advance—Riesman) Verve also comes close to spirit, but it often carries a clearer implication of a characteristic or peculiar force or energy, the exact description of which only the context can supply or suggest (writing with the verve and gusto dear to the mid-nineteenth century—Mary Ross) (the spirit of their times is in them. There is the same tremendous energy and verve and vitality—Edith Hamilton) (his manly verve for the enlivening of that gray court—Belloc) Punch suggests a quality that carries with it the power to gain its aim; it may imply a convincing or commanding quality, but it stresses forcefulness and immediate effectiveness (the searing punch of cloud to ground lightning—Dillon) (verbs that have punch—Westley) Élan approaches dash in meaning, but it carries a stronger connotation of impetuosity and assurance or of ardor in the display of force and energy (his stories . . . are told in a formal style and exhibit the attempt to recapture a certain note of urbanity, wit, and élan—Mailer) (performed with great élan in a sophisticated style—Dance Observer) Drive also, like dash and élan, suggests a quality that affects others, but it carries a richer implication than either of the display of power to force through to the ends in view and to carry the observers, especially the readers, along with it (the city had lost . . . the surging drive that supposedly was so characteristically American—Harold Sinclair) (the dynamic core of a society, its central impulse and drive—Maughan) (this titan's spirit which gave such drive and strength to the mightiest of his plays—J. M. Brown)

Ana strength, force, *power, might, energy: soundness, healthiness (see corresponding adjectives at HEALTHY): vivacity (see corresponding adjectives at MALE)

vigorous, energetic, strenuous, lusty, nervous can all mean having or manifesting great vitality and force. A person or thing is vigorous that has or manifests active strength or force and exhibits no signs of a depletion of the powers associated with freshness or robustness of body or mind (seemed as vigorous as a youth half his age) (a vigorous, fast-growing tree) (the vigorous mother of a large family) (a vigorous argument—Edmund Wilson) (Kate was a bold, vigorous thinker—Anderson) A person or thing is energetic that displays abundant force or a capacity for great activity; the term does not necessarily connote the reserve vitality and force that vigorous implies and it sometimes even suggests an exertion of effort or a bustling activity that has little to do with inherent physical or mental strength; therefore the term may be used to suggest compliment or, less often, slight depreciation (to be counted among the strong, and not the merely energetic—J. R. Lowell) (capable and energetic women, as fit to intimidate local government boards as to control the domestic economy of their own homes—Sackville-

West) <received by bustling male assistants very energetic and rapid—Bennett>  A person that is strenuous is continuously and zealously energetic, while a thing that is strenuous makes constant demands on one's vigor, energy, and zeal; in both cases the term implies no flagging of ardor or no avoidance of the arduous <to hustle and to be strenuous . . . seem to be prominent American virtues—Cohen> <strenuous liberty—Milton> <the spirit of our religion calls for strenuous opposition to the current principles and practice of the world—Inge> A person or thing is lusty that exhibits exuberant vigor or energy <therefore my age is as a lusty winter, frosty, but kindly—Shak.> <Pete Gurney was a lusty cock turned sixty-three, but bright and hale—Masefield>  A thing (as a quality, a style, or an utterance) is nervous that conveys a feeling of continuing often forceful activity such as results from mental vigor and energy <the nervous alertness of youthful brains, and the stamina of youthful bodies—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.> <Tyndale's own diction was singularly simple, energetic, nervous, and yet restrained—Loves> <his rhythm has a pulsating and nervous vitality—Collety>

Ana virile, manly, manful (see MALE): *muscular, athletic, sinewy, husky: stout, sturdy, stalwart, *strong, tough Ant languorous: lethargic vile *base, low

Ana depraved, corrupted, perverted, debased, debauched (see under DEBASE): *coarse, vulgar, obscene, gross: foul, filthy, nasty, *dirty: *mean, abject, sordid: *offensive, repulsive, revolting, loathsome

vilify *malign, traduce, asperse, calumniate, defame, slander, libel

Ana *abuse, outrage, mistreat, misuse: assail, *attack: revile, vituperate, berate (see SCOLD)

Ant eulogize

villain, scoundrel, blackguard, knave, rascal, rogue, scamp, rapsallion, miscreant can all denote a low, mean, and reprehensible person utterly lacking in principles. Villain describes one utterly given to crime, evil, and baseness <are not made villains by the commission of a crime, but were villains before they committed it—Ruskin> Scoundrel may suggest blended worthlessness, meanness, and unscrupulousness  Blackguard may imply inveterate depravity; sometimes it is used with a suggestion of angry contempt as the antithesis of gentleman <you must employ either blackguards or gentlemen, or, best of all, blackguards commanded by gentlemen, to do butcher's work with efficiency and dispatch—Kipling> Knave may suggest sly trickery and deceit <cheating knaves gathered at the taverns> <more fool than knave> Rascal may suggest base dishonesty <your true rascal is today your only true citizen of the world. He plunders all nations without pride in one or prejudice against another—Linklater> Rogue often suggests the blended roughness and wiliness of a vagabond <sturdy rogues taking to the roads as highwaymen> but both rascal and rogue are freely used with greatly weakened force and then imply no more than a more or less pleasing mischievousness <tell me about . . . the dear little rogues—Whitman> <the Yankee . . . was already established as a comic rascal—Bergen Evans> Scamp may describe one given to artful cheating, clever robbery, or interesting escapades  and it, too, is often used with weakened force, then suggesting impish and often childish trickery <the most audacious scamp in all the animal kingdom is Bugs Bunny—My Baby Magazine> Rapsallion may refer to an ill-dressed rogue or rascal rarely successful <the rapsallions of the river, the Black Gangs—Le Sueur> Miscreant typically refers to a singularly conscienceless villain  Ana offender, sinner (see corresponding nouns at OFFENSE): *criminal, malefactor villainous *vicious, iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious, infamous, corrupt, degenerate

Ana debased, depraved, perverted (see under DEBASE): atrocious, *outrageous, heinous: dissolute, profligate, *abandoned vim *vigor, spirit, dash, esprit, verve, punch, élan, drive

Ana force, strength, *power, energy vindicate 1 justify, defend, *maintain, assert

Ana *support, uphold, advocate

2 exonerate, *exculpate, absolve, acquit

Ana *disprove, refute, confute: *defend, protect, shield, guard

Ant calumniate

vindictive, revengeful, vengeful are close synonyms often used interchangeably to mean showing or motivated by a desire for vengeance. Distinctively vindictive tends to stress this reaction as inherent in the nature of the individual and, therefore, is especially applicable when no specific motivating grievance exists <there was nothing vindictive in his nature; but, if revenge came his way, it might as well be good—Stevenson> The term can imply a persistent emotion or a tendency to seek revenge for real or fancied wrongs or slights, sometimes with implacable malevolence, sometimes with spiteful malice  <his zeal . . . was mingled with a vindictive hatred of the Puritans, which did him little honor either as a statesman or as a Christian—Macaulay> <it is not true that suffering ennobles the character; happiness does that sometimes, but suffering, for the most part, makes men petty and vindictive—Maugham> but occasionally it implies no more than a punitive or retributive intent  <the prison sentence handed down by a court that was more puzzled than vindictive was mild—Purdy> <the punishments in Dante's Inferno, though seldom devoid of a certain horrible appropriateness, are essentially vindictive in their nature. Retributive punishment is the essential of medieval justice—Cohen> Revengeful and vengeful are more likely to suggest the state of one specifically provoked to action and truculently ready to seek revenge <no creature is so revengeful as a proud man who has humbled himself in vain—Macaulay> <such a close farmer, as to grudge almost the seed to the ground, whereupon revengeful Nature grudged him the crops which she granted to more liberal husbandmen—Thackeray> <knowing that by one word—Yes or Forgive or Love—she might have . . . released all of the false and vengeful and troubling demons right up into the encompassing air of night, and everything would be right again—Styron> <to some vengeful people the treaty seemed too easy upon Germany; to many liberals it seemed too harsh—Nevins & Commager> Additionally revengeful and especially vengeful can apply to an agent or weapon by which vengeance is won <may my hands . . . never brandish more revengeful steel—Shak.> <provide thee proper palfries, black as jet, to hale thy vengeful wagon swift away—Shak.) <they unnerve us with vengeful roar of wheel—Lewisohn>

Ana implacable, unrelenting, relentless, merciless, *grim: spiteful, *malicious, malignant, malign violation *breach, infraction, transgression, trespass, infringement, contravention

Ana *offense, sin, vice, crime, scandal: desecration, *profanation, sacrilege, blasphemy: invading or invasion, encroachment, entrenchment (see corresponding verbs at TRESPASS) violence *force, compulsion, coercion, duress, constraint, restraint

Ana vehemence, intensity, fierceness (see corresponding adjectives at INTENSE): *effort, exertion, pains, trouble: *attack, assault, onslaught, onset violent *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite

Ana *powerful, potent, forceful, forcible: *excessive, immoderate, inordinate, extreme, extravagant virago, amazon, termagant, scold, shrew, vixen can all mean a woman of pugnacious temperament. Virago and amazon are often interchangeable; both tend to suggest physical vigor and size and often a masculine quality of mind or interests (<viragoes with red faces, thick necks, and tousled lint-colored hair screamed at all present to come and have a shy at the wooden figures—Lynd> <an amazon of a woman appeared suddenly in the doorway. She was well over six feet and well over two hundred pounds—Nancy Rutledge>  and both may apply to a woman engaged in typically masculine pursuits and especially fighting <their leader was a fiery little Mexican virago scarcely out of her teens—Green Peyton> <Charles XII of Sweden had a bearded female grenadier in his army, a reputedly beautiful amazon—Joseph Mitchell> <the warrior maiden Marfisa, a true virago and amazon—R. A. Hall> Distinctively virago can imply fierceness of temper and a domineering nature (sometimes she abjures her femininity, she hesitates between chastity, homosexuality, and an aggressive virago attitude—Parshley) <certain viragoes, who made life a burden to the brothers—G. W. Johnson> while amazon is more likely to suggest heroic qualities (as of dedication and competence)  <you can . . . while some intellectual amazon at your right tells you all about Péguy and Beethoven and Karl Marx, smile at your wife and be glad she has just the mind she has—Le Beau> Termagant carries a strong implication of habitual disorderly turbulence, boisterousness, and uncontrollable temper  <what she was trying to accomplish was to get rid of all his relatives . . . She became a termagant—a confirmed scold—Howard> Scold, shrew, and vixen designate women who habitually inflict their bad temper on others. A scold indulges herself in vulgar, abusive, and often castigating speech <really was a scold . . . had fought life single-handed . . . with all the ferocity of outraged sensibilities, and had come out of the fight scratched and disheveled, with few womanly graces—Stowe> <she laid on external things the blame of her mind's internal disorder, and thus became by degrees an accomplished scold—Peacock> while a shrew possesses a bitter tongue and a nagging disposition  and a vixen, a fiery temperament and often a tendency to snappish asperity <a woman tropical, intense . . . she blended in a like degree the vixen

and the devotee—Whittier> virgin adj 1 *unmarried, single, celibate, maiden 2 also virginal maiden, boyish, *youthful, juvenile, puerile Ana *chaste, pure, modest, decent: fresh, *new virile manful, manly, *male, masculine, manlike, mannish Ant effeminate: impotent (sense 2) virtual *implicit, constructive

Ant actual virtually, practically, morally can all mean not absolutely or actually, yet so nearly so that the difference is negligible. So close are these words in meaning that they (especially the first two) are often interchanged although each can carry specific implications that make discriminative use possible. Virtually may imply that the difference is merely that between what a thing is in name or outward seeming and what it is in fact, in essence, in effect, or, sometimes, in potentiality <the prime minister is virtually the ruler of his country> <their father's request is virtually a command> <the British contended that the American colonies were virtually represented> Practically implies a difference between what is enough for practical purposes or from the point of view of use, value, or effectiveness and what satisfies the requirements formally or absolutely <badly spotted fruit is practically worthless>  Morally implies a difference between what satisfies one's judgment and what is required for proof by law or by logic (the jurors were morally certain of the defendant's guilt, but owing to a lack of evidence, they were compelled to render a verdict of "not guilty") When morally qualifies words such as "impossible," it occurs in a statement of a conviction and is slightly less positive than "absolutely" <it is morally impossible to accomplish more under the circumstances> virtue 1 *goodness, morality, rectitude

Ana honor, *honesty, integrity, probity: *fidelity, piety, fealty, loyalty: righteousness, nobility, virtuousness (see corresponding adjectives at MORAL)

Ant vice

2 *excellence, merit, perfection

Ana *worth, value: effectiveness, efficacy, effectualness (see corresponding adjectives at EFFECTIVE): strength, might, *power, force virtuoso *expert, adept, artist, artiste, wizard virtuous *moral, ethical, righteous, noble

Ana pure, *chaste, modest, decent: *upright, just, honorable

Ant vicious

virulent *poisonous, venomous, toxic, mephitic, pestilent, pestilential, miasmatic, miasmatic, miasmatic

Ana *deadly, mortal, fatal, lethal: *pernicious, noxious, baneful, deleterious: malignant, malign (see MALICIOUS) virus 1 *poison, venom, toxin, bane

2 *germ, microbe, bacterium, bacillus visage *face, countenance, physiognomy, mug, puss vision 1 *revelation, prophecy, apocalypse

2 *fancy, fantasy, phantasy, phantasm, dream, daydream, nightmare

Ana illusion, *delusion, hallucination, mirage: *imagination, fancy, fantasy visionary adj *imaginary, fanciful, fantastic, chimerical, quixotic

Ana romantic, *sentimental, maudlin: utopian, *ambitious, pretentious: ideal, transcendent, transcendental (see ABSTRACT): illusory, seeming, *apparent visit n Visit, visitation, call are comparable when they mean a coming to stay with another, usually for a brief time, as a courtesy, an act of friendship, or a business or professional duty. Visit applies not only to such a stay with another <pay a visit to a friend>   but also, to a more prolonged stay as a house guest or in a place where one goes for rest, entertainment, or sightseeing  <off for a visit to Washington> <plan a visit to Europe> Visitation (see also TRIAL 2) is chiefly employed in reference to a formal or official visit (as to a church, a college, or a ship) made by one in authority (as an ecclesiastical superior, a school superintendent, or a medical inspector) <parochial visitations of a bishop>  The term may also be used of something that visits one, often by or as if by the will of a superior power <ye gentle visitations of calm thought—Shelley> or that is visited upon one and that is usually regarded as an affliction <an illness, a maiming accident or some other visitation of blind fate—Conrad> Call applies only to a brief visit, such as one makes upon a person who is not a friend, but with whom one has social or official relations  or by a person in quest of business or of a business order <the morning call of the grocer's boy> The term, however, may be used in place of visit for a short social visit.

visitant *visitor, guest, caller visitation 1 *visit, call

2 *trial, tribulation, affliction, cross

Ana *misfortune, mischance, adversity: calamity, catastrophe, *disaster: hardship, vicissitude (see DIFFICULTY) visitor, visitant, guest, caller mean one who visits another or comes to pay a visit. Visitor is the general word applicable to anyone who comes under this description <there are visitors in the drawing room> <summer visitors> but it is especially applicable to one who makes a friendly visit or one who comes in the cause of charity, social service, or investigation  <the visitor from the Red Cross found no one at home> Visitant is applied especially to a visitor who is or seems to be from another sphere (as heaven or hell) <supernatural visitant> <at the sound of this the visitant returned . . . Markheim . . . thought he bore a likeness to himself: and always, like a lump of living terror, there lay in his bosom the conviction that this thing was not of the earth—Stevenson> As compared with visitor, guest emphasizes the idea of hospitable entertainment; it applies therefore chiefly to one who comes as a result of an invitation <they had ten guests at dinner> <we shall have no guests until the children are perfectly well> It also is often used, sometimes in the expanded form paying guest, of a lodger or boarder, and is used regularly for patrons of a restaurant or hotel. Caller is applicable not only to one who comes for a social or business call (see under VISIT) but to anyone regardless of his intentions who seeks entrance to one's home or office <told her maid that she would not be at home to callers that day> vital 1 *living, alive, animate, animated

Ana *vigorous, energetic, lusty: *active, live, dynamic

2 fundamental, *essential, cardinal

Ana important, significant, consequential, weighty, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE): indispensable, requisite, necessary, *needful

vitalize, energize, activate can all mean to arouse to activity, animation, or life something inactive, inert, latent, or arrested (as in development). Vitalize may stress the arousal of something more or less inert or lifeless to vital activity, often by communicating an impetus or force, or an imparting of significance or interest to (something) or a making one aware of its inherent significance or interest; the term usually suggests a vigor, freshness, or health in the effect    Energize implies an arousing to activity by an imparting of strength or a source of power that increases capacity for activity or an acting with a vitality presumably induced by such power <oats are, without doubt, the best energizing food for horses—Wynnalen> <storage batteries energize railroad block signal circuits—Orsino & Lynes> <it is Christianity which energized the special genius that made the West what it is—Cogley> <when a man and woman are successfully in love, their whole activity is energized and victorious. They walk better . . . they think more clearly—Lippmann> Activate implies a passing from an inactive to an active state; though the process involved can be equivalent to that implied by energize the stress is quite different and is consistently upon an arousing to activity by the influence of an external agent <breaks contact with the photoelectric cell and activates an alarm—Hynd> <the report has done much to crystallize and activate official and private opinion—Walter White> <vitamin D activated by sunlight> <political and legal hacks whose function it was to supply the docile social machinery for cleverer men to activate and guide—Mattingly>

Ana animate, *quicken, enliven, vivify: stimulate, galvanize, excite, *provoke

Ant atrophy

vitiate *debase, deprave, corrupt, pervert, debauch

Ana pollute, defile, taint, *contaminate: degrade, demean, *abuse: impair, spoil, *injure, damage: annul, invalidate, *nullify vitiated debased, depraved, corrupted, debauched, perverted (see under DEBASE)

Ana defiled, polluted, contaminated, tainted (see CONTAMINATE): impaired, spoiled, injured (see INJURE): invalidated, annulled (see NULLIFY)

vituperate revile, berate, rate, upbraid, *scold, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, wig, rail

Ana condemn, denounce, censure, blame, reprehend, reprobate (see CRITICIZE): vilify, asperse, traduce, *malign, calumniate: *execrate, objugate

Con *commend, applaud, compliment: *praise, extol, eulogize vituperation *abuse, invective, obloquy, scurrility, biliousgate

Ana *animadversion, aspersion, stricture, reflection: *attack, assault, onslaught, onset: condemnation, denunciation, censoring or censure (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE): vilifying or vilification, maligning, calumnia-tion (see corresponding verbs at MALIGN)

Ant acclaim, praise

vituperative *abusive, opprobrious, contumelious, scurrilous

Ana *coarse, vulgar, gross, obscene: insulting, offending, outraging (see OFFEND): condemning or condemnatory, denouncing or denunciatory (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE) vivacious *lively, animated, gay, sprightly

Ana buoyant, effervescent, volatile (see ELASTIC): *merry, blithe, jocund: frolicsome, sportive, *playful

Ant languid vivid *graphic, picturesque, pictorial

Ana *sharp, keen, acute: *dramatic, dramaturgic, theatrical: *expressive, eloquent, meaningful: nervous, lusty, *vigorous: *clear, lucid, perspicuous

Con *obscure, vague, enigmatic vivify *quicken, animate, enliven

Ana *vitalize, energize, activate: *renew, restore, refresh: *stir, rouse, arouse: stimulate, galvanize, excite (see PROVOKE)

vixen shrew, scold, termagant, *virago, amazon vocable n *word, term vocabulary *language, phraseology, diction, phrasing, style vocal 1 Vocal, articulate, oral can all mean uttered by the voice or having to do with utterance. Vocal implies the use of voice, but not necessarily of speech or language; thus, vocal sounds are sounds produced by a creature that has vocal organs; vocal music is contrasted with instrumental music because the musical tones are produced by the voice rather than by a musical instrument. Articulate implies the use of distinct intelligible language; thus, speech is the uttering of articulate sounds; articulate cries are those that are expressed in meaningful words rather than in meaningless sounds <Constance nodded her head in thorough agreement. She did not trouble to go into articulate apologies—Bennett> Oral implies the use of the voice rather than the hand (as in writing or typing) in communicating (as thoughts, wishes, orders, questions, or answers) <an oral examination> <an oral command> <the oral transmission of tradition>

2 Vocal, articulate, fluent, eloquent, voluble, glib can mean being able to express oneself clearly or easily, or showing such ability. Vocal usually implies ready responsiveness to an occasion for expression or free and usually forceful, insistent, or emphatic voicing of one's ideas or feelings <earth's millions daily fed, a world employed in gathering plenty yet to be enjoyed, till gratitude grew vocal in the praise of God—Cowper> <this instantaneous indignation of the most impulsive and vocal of men was diligently concealed for at least six weeks, with reporters camped upon his doorstep day and night—Mencken> Articulate is as often applied to thoughts and emotions with reference to their capacity for expression as to persons or their utterances. It implies the use of language which exactly and distinctly reveals or conveys what seeks expression <the deepest intuitions of a race are deposited in its art; no criticism can make these wholly articulate—Binyon> <the primitive poet . . . was used by the community to make its spiritual needs articulate—Day Lewis> <how can you write about a literary subject . . . when you yourself are hardly articulate, can scarcely express the most commonplace thoughts—Edmund Wilson> Fluent stresses facility in speaking or writing and copiousness in the flow of words; unlike vocal and articulate, it refers chiefly to the manner of the expression rather than to the matter seeking expression <it was his gift to be fluent on anything or nothing—Stevenson> The word can carry a definite suggestion of depreciation or contempt <politically at the mercy of every bumptious adventurer and fluent charlatan—Shaw> but it also is the only one of these words capable of implying facility and ease in the use of a foreign language <had a fluent command of idiomatic French> Eloquent usually implies fluency but it suggests also the stimulus of powerful emotion and its expression in fervent and moving language; it is applicable not only to speakers but to writers and can be extended to things that convey similar suggestions (see also EXPRESSIVE) <pressed his arm reassuringly, and the gesture was more eloquent than any words could be—Wolfe> <Tully was not so eloquent as thou, thou nameless column with the buried base—Byron> <the wording of the Weimar Constitution was sweet and eloquent to the ear of any democratically minded man—Shirer> Voluble and glib both imply loquacity and are usually derogatory. Voluble suggests a flow of language that is not easily stemmed <indulge in voluble explanations>  Glib implies such facility in utterance as to suggest superficiality or emptiness in what is said or slipperiness or untrustworthiness in the speaker  <he has a glib tongue> <their only virtue, a glib conversance with such topics as came up for discussion—Sackville-West>

Ana expressing, voicing, venting (see EXPRESS vb): *expressive, sententious, eloquent

vociferate *roar, bellow, bluster, bawl, clamor, howl, ululate

Ana *shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, holler vociferation see under vociferate at ROAR vb

vociferous, clamorous, blatant, strident, boisterous, obstreperous are comparable when they mean so loud and noisy, especially vocally, as to compel attention, often unwilling attention. Vociferous implies both loud and vehement cries or shouts; it often suggests also a deafening quality <watermen, fishwomen, oysterwomen, and . . . all the vociferous inhabitants of both shores—Fielding> <vociferous vindications of their innocence—Irving> <vociferous protests> Clamorous can imply insistency as well as vociferousness in demanding or protesting <it was impossible to yield to her clamorous demands—Replier> but as often it stresses the notion of sustained din or confused turbulence <the district had been clamorous with trucks arriving, backing in and out . . . the drivers bawling and cursing—Peggy Bacon> Blatant implies a tendency to bellow or be conspicuously, offensively, or vulgarly noisy or clamorous <they were heretics of the blatant sort, loudmouthed and shallow-minded—Expositor> <building against our blatant, restless time an unseen, skillful, medieval wall—Lindsay> Strident basically implies a harsh and discordant quality characteristic of some noises that are peculiarly distressing to the ear; it is applied not only to loud, harsh sounds but also to things which, like these, irresistibly and against one's will force themselves upon the attention <the colors are too strident> <the strident yellow note of the cockerel shot up into the sunshine—Gibbons> <there was no strident old voice to bid him do this or that; no orders to obey, no fierce and insane faultfinding—Deland> Boisterous has usually an implication of rowdy high spirits and flouting of customary order and is applied to persons or things that are extremely noisy and turbulent, as though let loose from all restraint <from the distant halls the boisterous revelry floated in broken bursts of faint-heard din and tumult—Jerome> <boisterous spring winds—Cather> Obstreperous suggests unruly and aggressive noisiness, typically occurring in resistance to or defiance of authority or restraining influences <the most careless and obstreperous merriment—Johnson> <disrespectful of Parliamentary decorum, they are so obstreperous that sittings sometimes have to be suspended to stop their hubbub—Flanner>

Ana noisy, sounding (see corresponding nouns at SOUND): bewildering, distracting (see PUZZLE vb)

vogue mode, *fashion, style, fad, rage, craze, dernier cri, cry voice vb *express, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate Ana *reveal, disclose, tell, discover, divulge: *communicate, impart: *speak, talk void adj 1 *empty, vacant, blank, vacuous

Ana exhausted, depleted, drained (see DEplete): *bare, barren: hollow, empty, nugatory, *vain

2 *devoid, destitute void n vacuum, *hole, hollow, cavity, pocket

Ana emptiness, vacancy, vacuity (see corresponding adjectives at EMPTY): abyss, *gulf, abysm void vb vacate, *annul, abrogate, quash volatile effervescent, buoyant, expansive, resilient, *elastic

Ana unstable, mercurial, *inconstant, fickle, capricious: light-minded, frivolous, flippant, flighty (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS): variable, *changeable, protean volatility *lightness, light-mindedness, levity, frivolity, flippancy, flightiness

Ana vivaciousness or vivacity, gaiety, liveliness, animation, sprightliness (see corresponding adjectives at LIVELY): unstableness or instability, mercurialness, inconstancy (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSTANT): variability, changeableness (see corresponding adjectives at CHANGEABLE) volcano *mountain, mount, peak, alp, mesa volition *will, conation

Ana *choice, election, option

Con *force, coercion, compulsion, duress volubility glibness, garrulity, loquacity, talkativeness (see under TALKATIVE)

Ana fluency, glibness, eloquence, articulateness (see corresponding adjectives at VOCAL) voluble 1 fluent, glib, eloquent, *vocal, articulate

Ana copious, abundant, *plentiful: *easy, facile, effortless, smooth

Ant stuttering, stammering

2 glib, garrulous, loquacious, *talkative

Ant curt

volume 1 magnitude, *size, extent, dimensions, area 2 *bulk, mass voluntary, intentional, deliberate, willful, willing can mean constituting or proceeding from an exercise of free will.

Voluntary, the most widely applicable of these terms, often implies not only freedom from constraint but freedom from the control of an influence that might suggest, prompt, or incite action; it does not necessarily imply that these influences have not been operative, but it usually suggests that the decision is the result of one's free choice (a voluntary renunciation of his inheritance) (a voluntary confession) (a voluntary system . . . which possessed a certain pleasant dignity denied to the systems of a more compulsory sort—Sackville-West) Often the term carries another, sometimes a different, implication, such as that of spontaneity (voluntary contributions) (our voluntary service he requires not—Milton) or, especially when the opposition is to involuntary, that of subjection to or regulation by the will (voluntary movements of the eyes) (voluntary muscles) or that of prior consideration and clear choice (voluntary manslaughter) or that of absence of any legal obligation or compulsion (as to do or make) (voluntary bankruptcy) or of any valuable consideration in return for doing or making (voluntary conveyance of property)

Intentional applies chiefly to acts or processes entered into in order to achieve a desired end or purpose or to the end or purpose so willed or effected; the use of the word eliminates all suggestion of the possibility of accident or inadvertence (an intentional insult) (not one in a thousand . . . perpetrates any intentional damage to fish, fowl, or flowers—Jefferies) Deliberate (see also DELIBERATE 2, SLOW) adds the implication of full knowledge or full consciousness of the nature of one's intended act and a decision to go ahead in spite of such knowledge or consciousness (a deliberate falsehood) (deliberate murder) (an organized and deliberate attack—carefully planned and calculated—N.Y. Times) Willful (see also UNRULY) adds to deliberate the implications of a refusal to be taught, counseled, or commanded, and of an obstinate determination to follow one's own will or choice in full consciousness of the influences or arguments opposed to the attitude adopted or the action or deed contemplated (willful murder) (willful ignorance) (his willful abuse of his children) (willful blindness to ascertained truth—Inge) Willing carries, in contrast, an implication of characteristics (as agreeableness, openness of mind, or absence of reluctance) that makes one ready or eager, without suggestion or without coercion, to accede to the wishes or instructions of others or to do something or effect some end pleasing to them (how curious is that instinct which makes each sex, in different ways, the willing slave of the other!—Jefferies) (willing service) (where ears are willing, talk tends to be loud and long—Huxley)

Ana chosen, elected, opted (see CHOOSE): *free, independent, autonomous

Ant involuntary: instinctive (sense 2) —Con compelled, coerced, forced (see FORCE vb)

voluptuous luxurious, sybaritic, epicurean, *sensuous, sensual

Ana indulging or indulgent, pampering (see corresponding verbs at INDULGE): *luxurious, opulent, sumptuous

Ant ascetic

vomit *belch, burp, disgorge, regurgitate, spew, throw up

Ana *eject, expel, oust voracious, gluttonous, ravenous, ravening, rapacious can all mean excessively greedy and can all apply to persons, their appetites and reactions, or their behavior. Voracious implies habitual gorging with food or drink, or with whatever satisfies an excessive appetite (a voracious eater) (a voracious reader) (voracious birds, that hotly bill and breed, and largely drink—Dryden) Gluttonous differs from voracious chiefly in its common suggestions of covetous delight (as in food) and of acquiring or eating past need or to the point of satiety (he was gluttonous for jewels—Gunther) (though a Norman was not gluttonous, he was epicurean—Lytton) (his gluttonous appetite for food, praise, pleasure—Guérard) Ravenous implies excessive hunger and suggests violent or grasping methods of dealing with food or with whatever satisfies an appetite (he contracted a habit of eating with ravenous greediness. . . . The sight of food affected him as it affects wild beasts and birds of prey—Macaulay) (he had mad hungers that grew more ravenous as he fed them—Wilde) Ravening is sometimes employed in place of ravenous (the hordes of ravening ants—Beebe) but more often it comes close to rapacious in suggesting a violent tendency to seize or appropriate to oneself in the manner of a bird of prey or a predatory animal (beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves—Mt 7:15) Rapacious may imply the seizure of food (rapacious animals we hate: kites, hawks, and wolves, deserve their fate—Gay) but more often it suggests excessive and utterly selfish acquisitiveness or cupidity (the Indians, who, though often rapacious, are devoid of avarice—Parkman) (the European nations, arrogant, domineering, and rapacious, have done little to recommend the name of Christianity in Asia and Africa—Inge)

Ana greedy, grasping, acquisitive, *covetous: satiating, sating, surfeiting, gorging (see SATIATE) vortex *eddy, whirlpool, maelstrom votary *addict, devotee, habitué

Ana *enthusiast, fanatic, zealot, bigot vote n *suffrage, franchise, ballot vouch *certify, attest, witness

Ana *support, uphold: *confirm, substantiate, verify, corroborate vouchsafe *grant, accord, concede, award

Ana *give, bestow, confer, present: condescend, deign, *stoop: *oblige, accommodate, favor voyage n *journey, tour, trip, excursion, cruise, expedition, jaunt, pilgrimage vulgar 1 *common, ordinary, familiar, popular

Ana *universal, general: *prevailing, prevalent, current, rife: *usual, customary: crude, *rude, rough, uncouth:

sordid, ignoble, *mean

2 *coarse, gross, obscene, ribald

Ana low, *base, vile: *offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting: indelicate, indecent, *indecorous

W

wage or wages, salary, stipend, fee, pay, hire, emolument can all mean the price paid a person for his labor or services. Wage or wages applies chiefly to an amount paid on a daily, hourly, or piecework basis and typically at weekly intervals for labor, especially labor that involves more physical than mental effort (a gardener's wages) (a steelworker's daily wage) Salary and stipend both usually apply to compensation at a fixed, often annual, rate that is paid in regular (as weekly or monthly) installments but stipend is more likely to apply to the compensation of a teacher, a clergyman, or a magistrate, or it may denote money received from a scholarship or a pension (many a parson has brought up a family on a stipend of seventy pounds a year—Shaw) Fee applies to the price usually in the form of a fixed charge, asked or paid for the service of a professional (as a physician, lawyer, musician, or artist) when such service is requested or required (pay the surgeon's fee for a major operation) (a lawyer's retaining fee) (a pianist's fee for a concert) Pay can replace wages, salary, or stipend (fired and told to draw his pay) (a teacher's pay) (even a preacher needs adequate pay) and is the one of these four terms freely used in combination and attributively (waiting for payday) (paycheck) (crumpled his empty pay envelope) Hire, which basically denotes payment made for the temporary use of something (as the property or money of another), is occasionally and especially in legal use applied to compensation for labor or services and is then equivalent to wages or salary (the laborer is worthy of his hire—Lk 10:7) (lends his pen for small hires—Meredith) Emolument, usually in the plural, often means the financial reward of one's work or office (the emoluments of a profession—Gibbon) (a worthier successor wears his dignity and pockets his emoluments—Hawthorne) or more specifically rewards and perquisites other than wages or salary (emoluments of value, like pension and insurance benefits, which may accrue to employees—Boyce) (salary £550 with no emoluments—Farmer and Stock-Breeder)

Ana remuneration, recompensing or recompense (see corresponding verbs at PAY) wager *bet, stake, pot, ante waggish sportive, frolicsome, *playful, impish, mischievous, roguish

Ana facetious, jocose, jocular, humorous, *witty: jovial, jolly (see MERRY): comic, comical, *laughable, droll, ludicrous, funny

Con *serious, earnest, sober, grave, sedate, staid wail vb weep, *cry, whimper, blubber, keen

Ana mourn, *grieve: lament, bewail, bemoan, *deplore: moan, sob, *sigh, groan wait *stay, remain, abide, tarry, linger

Ana *delay, loiter

Con depart, leave, *go, withdraw, retire waive cede, yield, resign, abandon, surrender, *relinquish, leave

Ana *forgo, forbear, sacrifice: concede, *grant, allow

Con *demand, claim, require, exact: assert, *maintain, defend waken awaken, arouse, rouse, *stir, rally

Ana excite, stimulate, quicken, galvanize, *provoke: fire, kindle (see LIGHT): impel, *move, actuate, drive

Ant subdue —Con *pacify, mollify, placate wall vb *enclose, envelop, fence, pen, coop, corral, cage

Ana *surround, environ, encircle, hem: confine, circumscribe, *limit, restrict wallow, welter, grovel can imply heavy clumsy movement and, when the reference is to man, a debased, pitiable, or ignoble condition. Wallow basically implies a lurching or rolling to and fro (as of a pig in the mire or a ship in the trough of a wave) (whenever the animals grew hot and tired, they would lie down and wallow—Heiser) (a jeep came wallowing through the mud—Mailer) In extended use the term may suggest the state of an animal wallowing in mud and then variously imply complete self-abandonment (wallowing in self-pity) or absorption (enjoyed sitting . . . and wallowing in the sensual melodies—Osbert Sitwell) or helpless involvement (the economic catastrophe in which they were . . . wallowing—J. P. O'Donnell) or especially sensual enjoyment and indifference to the defilement or degradation that the condition suggests (publicly wallowed in his infamies—Merle Miller) (in port Rootes would roar off to the fleshpots, in which he would wallow noisily until an hour before takeoff—Theodore Sturgeon) Welter is often employed in place of wallow, but it frequently carries a stronger implication of rolling or tossing helplessly or confusedly or at the mercy of the elements or other external forces (he must not float upon his watery bier unwept, and welter to the parching wind—Milton) (beneath the welting of the restless tide—Shelley) (the mass of the people were welting in shocking poverty whilst a handful of owners wallowed in millions—Shaw) Welter, however, may not always imply movement, as when it suggests the position of one who has been killed and lies soaked in blood (they lie—the fifty corpses—welting in their blood—Michell) (score technical successes, even if their backers welter in red ink—Gabriel) Grovel implies a crawling or wriggling with face close to the ground (as in abject fear, awe, self-abasement, or complete humiliation or degradation) (upon thy belly groveling thou shalt go, and dust shalt eat all the days of thy life—Milton) (one moment he towered in imagination, the next he groveled in fear—G. D. Brown)

Ana crawl, *creep: defile, pollute, *contaminate, taint: *debase, debauch, corrupt, deprave, pervert

Con soar, mount, ascend, *rise wan pallid, *pale, ashen, ashy, livid

Ana blanched, whitened, decolorized (see WHITEN): *languid, languishing, languorous: *haggard, cadaverous, worn wander, stray, roam, ramble, rove, range, prowl, gad, gallivant, traipse, meander can mean to move about more or less aimlessly or without a plan from place to place or from point to point. Most of these verbs may imply walking, but most are not restricted in their reference to human beings or to any particular means of locomotion. Wander implies the absence of a fixed course or more or less indifference to a course that has been fixed or otherwise indicated; the term may imply the movement of a walker whether human or animal or of any traveler, but it may be used of anything capable of direction or control that is permitted to move aimlessly (<wand'ring thoughtful in the silent wood—Pope) <his eyes wandered over the landscape> (his mind wandered and he was unsure of himself—Shirer) <she wandered frequently from her subject> Stray carries a stronger suggestion of deviation from a fixed, true, or proper course, and often connotes a being lost or a danger of being lost (<fallows grey, where the nibbling flocks do stray—Milton) <we have erred, and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep—Book of Common Prayer) <though we stumbled and we strayed, we were led by evil counsellors—Kipling> Roam carries a stronger suggestion of freedom and of scope than wander; it usually carries no implication of a definite object or goal, but it seldom suggests futility or fruitlessness and often connotes delight or enjoyment (<like us, the Libyan wind delights to roam at large—Arnold) <let the winged Fancy roam—Keats> <type of the wise who soar, but never roam—Wordsworth> <the charm of a quiet watch on deck when one may let one's thoughts roam in space and time—Conrad> Ramble, in contrast, suggests carelessness in wandering and more or less indifference to one's path or goal (<to ramble through the country and to talk about books—Marquand) It often, especially in its extended uses, implies a straying beyond bounds, an inattention to details that ought to serve as guides, or an inability to proceed directly or under proper restrictions ( Rove comes close to roam in its implication of wandering over extensive territory, but it usually carries a suggestion of zest in the activity, and does not preclude the possibility of a definite end or purpose (<invaders roved through the country burning and pillaging homes in their pathway> <ravenous beasts freely roving up and down the country—Fuller d. 1661> <to seek thee did I often rove through woods and on the green—Wordsworth> Range is often used in place of rove without loss; it may be preferred when literal wandering is not implied or when the stress is on the sweep of territory covered rather than on the form of locomotion involved (<earth ships had ranged the cosmos far and wide—Theodore Sturgeon) <her imperious and hoarse voice ranged over a complete octave of requited social ambitions—Cheever> <his thoughts always ranged far afield—Mencken> Prowl implies a stealthy or furtive roving, especially in search of prey or booty. It is used not only of animals (<even a tomcat who cannot get the tabby he wants will prowl around her prison for days—Edmund Wilson) but often also of human beings intent on marauding (<now goes the nightly thief prowling abroad—Cowper) but it is also applied with little or no connotation of an evil intention to persons, especially those of a restless or vagabond temperament, who rove, often singly, through the streets or the fields in a quiet and leisurely manner (<I should prowl about the streets a long time, don't be uneasy—Dickens) Gad and gallivant imply a wandering or roving especially by those who ought to be under restrictions (as servants, children, husbands or wives, and persons who have not much strength or enough money). Gad, usually with about, may suggest a bustling from place to place idly or for the most trivial ends and often to the detriment of one's actual duties (<her upper housemaid and laundry maid, instead of being in their business, are gadding about the village all day long—Austen) <he disapproved of her gadding about by herself—Galsworthy> Gallivant adds to gad the implication of a search for pleasure or amusement or the use of an opportunity to display one's finery (<her father refused to allow her to go gallivanting around with any of her suitors> <young girls dressed in their Sunday best gallivanting along the high-ways> Traipse, which commonly suggests more vigor in movement and less aimlessness in intent than the remaining terms, may come close to come, go, or travel in meaning (<in her late sixties she traipsed over Europe with a crony of equal years—Leavitt) <how old . . . does he think a man should be before he is barred from traipsing around making political speeches—N. Y. Times> <here traipsed into town a little thing from away off down in the country—Welty> Even when used with reference to an erratic course traipse ordinarily implies a positive purpose (<they lacked the time and energy to traipse around looking for the sort of thing they had in mind—Kahn) or stresses a bustling activity (<other crowds like this: the yellow-faced swarm that pours out of shipyards, say, at five o'clock, the swarm that traipses Oxford Street, the mad swarms at the greyhound tracks—Pritchett) or a wearying expenditure of energy (<she traipsed around the provinces playing small parts in second-rate companies at a miserable salary—Maugham) <kings . . . traipsed here and there with frenetic energy—J. E. M. White> Sometimes the term loses most of its reference to a course and then stresses a dashing or flaunting manner of going (<people . . . who traipsed about in trite monotonous flippery—Peggy Bennett) <I got a job . . . as a model. I'd traipse around stepping through lace hems and gabbing to the customers—New Yorker> Meander may be used in reference to persons and animals but more characteristically in reference to things (as streams, paths, or roads) that follow a winding or intricate course in such a way as to suggest aimless or listless wandering (<rovers that . . . meandered across the vast plains—Haggard) <across the ceiling meandered a long crack—Galsworthy> <the gray gelding meandered along through the hills—Anderson>

wane *abate, subside, ebb

Ana *decrease, dwindle, lessen, diminish

Ant wax —Con *increase, augment: mount, soar, tower, surge, *rise want vb 1 *lack, need, require

Ana *demand, claim, exact

Con *have, hold, own, possess, enjoy

2 *desire, wish, crave, covet

Ana *long, yearn, hanker, pine, hunger, thirst: aspire, pant, *aim

Con refuse, *decline, reject, repudiate, spurn want n 1 *lack, dearth, absence, defect, privation

Ana *need, necessity, exigency: deficiency (see corresponding adjective at DEFICIENT)

Con plentifulness or plenty, abundance, copiousness (see corresponding adjectives at PLENTIFUL)

2 destitution, *poverty, indigence, privation, penury

Ana pinch, strait, pass, exigency (see JUNCTURE): meagerness, scantiness, exiguousness (see corresponding adjectives at MEAGER)

Con affluence, opulence, riches, wealth (see corresponding adjectives at RICH) wanton 1 *licentious, libertine, lewd, lustful, lascivious, libidinous, lecherous

Ana *immoral, unmoral, amoral: *abandoned, profligate, dissolute, reprobate

Ant chaste —Con pure, modest, decent (see CHASTE): virtuous, *moral

2 *supererogatory, uncalled-for, gratuitous

Ana *malicious, malevolent, spiteful: wayward, *contrary, perverse war vb battle, *contend, fight

Ana *resist, withstand, combat, oppose, fight: strive, struggle, endeavor, essay, *attempt warble vb *sing, troll, carol, descant, trill, hymn, chant, intone ward avert, *prevent, preclude, obviate

Ana block, bar, obstruct, impede, *hinder: forestall, anticipate (see PREVENT): *frustrate, balk, thwart, foil

Ant conduce to

wariness chariness, caution, circumspection, calculation (see under CAUTIOUS)

Ana alertness, watchfulness (see corresponding adjectives at WATCHFUL): *prudence, discretion, foresight, forethought, providence

Ant foolhardiness: brashness (of persons) —Con carelessness, heedlessness, thoughtlessness, inadvertence (see corresponding adjectives at CARELESS): recklessness, rashness (see corresponding adjectives at ADVENTUROUS) warlike *martial, military

Ana bellicose, *belligerent, pugnacious, combative, contentious: fighting, warring, contending, battling (see CONTENT)

Con *pacific, peaceable, peaceful warm adj warmhearted, sympathetic, *tender, compassionate, responsive

Ana *loving, affectionate: cordial, *gracious, affable: ardent, fervent, passionate (see IMPASSIONED): *sincere, heartfelt, hearty, wholehearted

Ant cool: austere

warmhearted warm, sympathetic, *tender, compassionate, responsive

Ana *loving, affectionate: *kind, kindly, benign, benignant: heartfelt, hearty, wholehearted, *sincere

Ant coldhearted —Con austere, *severe, stern: *cold, cool, frosty, frigid warn, forewarn, caution can mean to let one know of approaching or possible danger or risk. Warn is the most comprehensive of these terms; in most of its senses it stresses a timely notification that makes possible the avoidance of a dangerous or inconvenient situation (<warn ships of an approaching hurricane> <five minutes before the end of the class period, a bell rings to warn teachers and pupils> <the steamship company warned those who had taken tickets of the advanced sailing>). Additionally, the word may carry an implication of admonition (<warned him of the consequences of his folly> or of exhortation <the priestly brotherhood . . . prompt to persuade, expostulate, and warn—Cowper>) or of threats of punishment, reprisal, or personal violence (<I shall not take him at his word about fishing, as he might change his mind another day, and warn me off his grounds—Austen>). Forewarn carries a stronger implication of advance notification than warn and may also suggest impending though not imminent danger or peril (<I will arm me, being thus forewarned—Shak.> <he knew not one forewarning pain—Wordsworth>). Caution commonly emphasizes advice that puts one on one's guard or that suggests precautions (<cautioned him against unwarranted expectations> <the doctor cautioned him against overindulgence in strenuous exercise>).

Ana apprise, *inform, advise, notify: admonish (see PROVE): advise, counsel (see under ADVICE)

warp vb distort, contort, *deform

Ana twist, bend (see CURVE vb): *injure, damage, impair, mar warrant vb 1 *assert, declare, profess, affirm, aver, protest, avouch, avow, predicate

Ana state (see RELATE): *maintain, assert: assure, *ensure, insure

2 *justify

Ana vindicate, justify (see MAINTAIN): sanction, *approve, endorse: *authorize wary chary, *cautious, circumspect, calculating

Ana alert, *watchful: prudent, discreet, foresighted, forethoughtful, provident (see under PRUDENCE)

Ant foolhardy: brash (of persons) —Con *careless, heedless, thoughtless, inadvertent: reckless, rash, venturesome (see ADVENTUROUS)

waspish snappish, *irritable, fractious, peevish, petulant, pettish, huffy, fretful, querulous

Ana testy, touchy, cranky, cross, *irascible: *impatient: *contrary, perverse: spiteful, *malicious waste n 1 Waste, desert, badlands, wilderness can mean a tract or region of land not usable for cultivation or general habitation. Waste is the general term applicable to a tract or region which because of natural features (as poor stony soil, excessive wetness or dryness, or abrupt elevations) or because of barrenness induced by human agency is unfit or unsuitable for cultivation or human habitation (<at this . . . point of its nightly roll into darkness the great and particular glory of the Egdon waste began—Hardy> <wastes of sand and thorns—Montague>). Desert tends to stress aridity; it calls to mind arid regions where areas of shifting sand prevail and there is little or no vegetation (<the Sahara desert>) but technical use generally applies it to regions that have less than ten inches of annual rainfall or are incapable of supporting a significant population without an artificial water supply. Badlands applies to a barren waste where soft rocks that suffer from continual erosion prevail and hills are steep, furrowed, and often fantastic in form, drainage is labyrinthine, and water-courses are normally dry (<there are extensive badlands in southwest South Dakota and northwest Nebraska>). Wilderness may apply to a waste which human beings find not only incapable of cultivation or habitation but difficult to make their way through for lack of actual or even possible paths or trails, but perhaps more often the term denotes an area or region that has not been extensively occupied or cultivated by man without implying anything about its potential uses (<oh for a lodge in some vast wilderness, some boundless contiguity of shade—Cowper> <O my poor kingdom . . . thou wilt be a wilderness again, peopled with wolves—Shak.>).

2 *refuse, rubbish, trash, debris, garbage, offal waste vb 1 devastate, *ravage, sack, pillage, despoil, spoliage

Ana plunder, loot, *rob, rifle: *destroy, demolish: *ruin, wreck

Ant conserve, save

2 Waste, squander, dissipate, fritter, consume are comparable when they mean to spend or expend freely or futilely. Waste often implies careless or prodigal expenditure (as of money or of things which cost money) but it may also imply useless or fruitless expenditure (as of time, talent, or energy) (<allowing no money to be wasted on whims and luxuries—Shaw> <the windows were thickly frosted over, so that Mr. Povey's art in dressing them was quite wasted—Bennett>). Squander heightens the implications of waste by emphasizing reckless or lavish expenditures that tend to deplete or exhaust; often it suggests impoverishment or complete exhaustion (<the money, after all, was theirs; seeing it all squandered on a house and a garden, why didn't they rise up . . . ?—Huxley) <willing to squander their lives on the gratuitous work that great art demands—Edmund Wilson) <the most brilliant journalist of my generation . . . often squanders his genius for invective—T. S. Eliot) Dissipate, in the specific sense here considered (see also SCATTER), implies loss by extravagance, as if what is expended had been scattered to the four winds; it goes further than waste or squander, which do not, as does dissipate, in themselves imply exhaustion or near exhaustion of the store or stock <its endowment dissipated in worthless securities, the institution was closed—Amer. Guide Series: N.C.) <the face of one whose essential innocence could not be dissipated by maturity, even tragedy—Hervey) Fritter, usually with away, implies expenditure on trifles or by bits; it usually suggests a gradual disappearance (as of money, of property, or of something of value) (the friend had lost $300,000, and Lasker had frittered away almost as much—Cerf) <if we fritter and fumble away our opportunity in needless, senseless quarrels—L. B. Johnson) Consume basically stresses a devouring or destroying <the house was consumed by fire) (see also EAT, MONOPOLIZE), but it can mean to waste or squander entirely as if by devouring. In this use it is decreasingly frequent with regard to money or property <having then consumed all his estate he grew very melancholy—Anthony Wood) but in reference to time or energy spent unprofitably, it is not uncommon <the day was consumed attending to a multitude of little things> <the heat, the exertion had consumed all superfluous energy—Hervey)

Ana *spend, expend, disburse: *distribute, dispense: *scatter, disperse, dispel: *deplete, drain, exhaust, impoverish

Ant save: conserve wasted pinched, cadaverous, *haggard, worn, careworn

Ana gaunt, scrawny, skinny, angular, rawboned (see LEAN adj)

Con sturdy, *strong, stout, stalwart: robust, *healthy waster *spendthrift, profligate, prodigal, wastrel

Ana idler, loafer, lounger (see corresponding verbs at IDLE): squanderer, dissipater, fritterer (see corresponding verbs at WASTE)

wastrel *spendthrift, profligate, prodigal, waster

Ana reprobate, *outcast: loafer, idler, lounger (see corresponding verbs at IDLE): scoundrel, rascal, rogue, scamp (see VILLAIN)

watch vb 1 *tend, mind, attend

Ana guard, protect, shield, safeguard (see DEFEND)

2 look, *see

Ana *gaze, gape, stare, glare: *scrutinize, scan, inspect, examine watchful, vigilant, wide-awake, alert are comparable when they mean on the lookout especially for danger or for opportunities. Watchful is the general word <the five watchful senses—Milton) <became almost remote, strangely watchful, looking back from time to time as though they were being followed—Malamud) Vigilant implies keen, courageous, often wary, watchfulness <be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour—1 Pet 5:8) <we should be eternally vigilant against attempts to check the expression of opinions that we loathe—Justice Holmes) Wide-awake stresses keen awareness, more often of opportunities and relevant developments than of dangers <merchants who . . . were . . . wide-awake and full of energy—van Loon) Alert stresses readiness or promptness in apprehending and meeting a danger, an opportunity, or an emergency <not only watchful in the night, but alert in the drowsy afternoon—Pater) <our wits are much more alert when engaged in wrongdoing . . . than in a righteous occupation—Conrad)

Ana *cautious, wary, chary, circumspect: *quick, ready, prompt

Con *careless, heedless, thoughtless, inadvertent waterlog *soak, drench, saturate, steep, impregnate, sop waterspout *whirlwind, cyclone, typhoon, hurricane, tornado, twister wave vb *swing, flourish, brandish, shake, thrash

Ana wield, swing, manipulate, *handle, ply: undulate, sway, *swing, fluctuate: *shake, quiver, quaver waver vb 1 fluctuate, oscillate, pendulate, vibrate, *swing, sway, undulate

Ana flicker, flutter, hover, *flit, flitter: quiver, quaver, tremble, *shake

2 falter, *hesitate, vacillate

Ana balk, boggle, stickle, scruple, *demur, shy: fluctuate, oscillate (see SWING) way n 1 Way, route, course, passage, pass, artery mean, in common, a track or path traversed in going from one place to another. Way is general and inclusive of any track or path; it can specifically signify a thoroughfare especially in combinations and in fixed phrases <highway> <live across the way> <the city accepted the new street as a public way> <long inclined ways, paved with cobblestones, leading down between great warehouses to the water's edge—Santayana) or a direction or track that is, or can or should be, followed <lost his way> <the short way to town> <the only other village was one day's mule trip farther into the interior, but the way was so steep and slippery in places that we walked almost as much as we rode—Hitchcock) <the water continues its way down the valley for 5 kilometers—Heiden) The term also can be extended to what leads in a specified or implied non-spatial direction or toward a specified or implied end <cleared the way for a more purely rational interpretation of the world—Ashley Montagu) <the way was now open for the final act—W. C. Ford) Route signifies a way, often circuitous, followed with regularity by a person or animal or laid out to be followed (as by a tourist or army)   <the dog team trails and canoe routes of trader, trapper and missionary in the bush country—Granberg)  Course may be interchangeable with route but more often implies a path followed by or as if by a stream, star, or other moving natural object impelled by or in a path determined by natural forces <the course of a river>   <the course of the seasons> or a predetermined or more or less compulsory way or route followed in human activities or enterprises    Passage stresses a crossing over or a passing through, often designating the thing passed through, usually something narrow where transit might be restricted   <restrict the passage into the stomach> Pass usually designates a passage through or over something that presents an obstacle (as a mountain or river)   Artery is applied to one of the great continuous traffic channels (as a central rail route, river, or highway) from which branch off smaller or shorter channels (the Congo river would remain the main traffic artery—Weigend) <the main artery between Buffalo and Niagara Falls—Retailing Daily) <the need for improvement of main arteries interconnecting cities and for express highways in cities—

Britannica Bk. of the Yr.

2 *method, mode, manner, fashion, system

Ana procedure, *process, proceeding: *plan, design, scheme: practice, *habit, habitude, custom, use, usage, wont waylay *surprise, ambush

Ana *attack, assault, assail: *prevent, forestall wayward perverse, froward, restive, *contrary, balky

Ana *insubordinate, contumacious, rebellious: refractory, recalcitrant, intractable, headstrong, *unruly: capricious, *inconstant, fickle, unstable

Con amenable, tractable, *obedient: *compliant, acquiescent weak, feeble, frail, fragile, infirm, decrepit can mean not strong enough to bear, resist, or endure strain or pressure or to withstand difficulty, effort, or use. Weak is by far the widest in its range of application, being not only interchangeable with all of the succeeding words but also capable of being applied where they are not. Fundamentally it implies deficiency or inferiority in strength; it may apply to the body, the will, the mind, or the spirit (a character too weak to resist temptation) (she wasn't a weak and silly creature . . . She didn't swoon and give way to feelings and emotions—Farrell) (thou, though strong in love, art all too weak in reason—Wordsworth) Often it implies a lack of power, skill, efficiency or ability to control (a weak government) (a weak team) (a weak influence) It may also suggest a sign of impairment of a thing's strength (as a defect, a fault, or a dilution) (a weak tread in a stairway) (a weak tea) (a weak argument) (a weak facetious echoes of a style . . . ten years outmoded—Wouk) Feeble not only is more restricted than weak in its range of application but also carries a stronger implication of lamentableness or pitiableness in that weakness. It is chiefly applied to human beings and their acts and utterances, then usually implying a manifest lack or impairment of physical, mental, or moral strength (a feeble, tottering old man) (a feeble attempt to resist the enemy's advance) (rigid principles often do for feeble minds what stays do for feeble bodies—Macaulay) As applied to things, feeble implies faintness, indistinctness, impotency, or inadequacy (a feeble light) (a feeble sound) (a sense of feeble lust, of desire that mumbled incoherently as in a restless dream—Hervey) Frail, when it implies physical weakness, suggests not so much the impairment of strength as natural delicacy of constitution or slightness of build (a small, frail man, all heart and will—Masefield) (it was marvelous that . . . the energy of her spirit could carry through so triumphantly her frail nervous system and her delicate constitution—Ellis) As applied to things the term usually implies liability to failure or destruction if the thing has physical existence (shoot the rapids in a frail canoe) (I would lie . . . and listen to Yuriko's voice as it floated . . . through the frail partitions—Mailer) or, if immaterial, an incapacity for dealing with forces or powers opposed to it, or tending to destroy it (beauty, frail flow'r that ev'ry season fears—Pope) When frail is applied to the will, the conscience, the moral nature of man, it carries an even stronger implication of lack of power to resist than weak (if he prove unkind, (as who can say but being man, and therefore frail, he may)—Cowper) Fragile (see also FRAGILE 1) is frequently used in place of frail, but it usually carries even a stronger suggestion of delicacy and of likelihood of destruction (physically fragile, she was spiritually tough—Sackville-West) (passionately realizing the moment, its fleeting exquisiteness, its still, fragile beauty—Rose Macaulay) Infirm usually implies a loss of strength, especially of physical strength, with consequent instability, unsoundness, or insecurity (elevators in loft buildings . . . that, infirm and dolorous to hear, seem to touch on our concepts of damnation—Cheever) As referred to human beings, it implies illness or more often old age (a poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man—Shak.) As referred, however, to the tempers, the designs, or the intentions of men, it often implies wavering or serious vacillation (infirm of purpose! Give me the daggers—Shak.) Decrepit is as applicable to things as to persons that are worn out or broken down by use or age (such is its misery and wretchedness, that it resembles a man in the last decrepit stages of life—Fielding) (the bus is decrepit and the seats and several of the windows are held together with friction tape—Cheever)

Ana debilitated, weakened, enfeebled (see WEAKEN): *powerless, impotent

Ant strong —Con stout, sturdy, tough, stalwart, tenacious (see STRONG) weaken, enfeeble, debilitate, undermine, sap, cripple, disable can mean to lose or cause to lose, strength, vigor, or energy. Weaken, the most general term of this group, most frequently implies loss of the physical strength or functional efficiency characteristic of a healthy living thing or of any of its parts or loss of the soundness or stability characteristic of a strong material structure (overexercise has weakened his heart) (unfertilized plants weaken and die) (the illness has weakened him considerably) (decay has weakened the wooden supports of the bridge) but it may imply a loss in quality, intensity, or effective power in something material or immaterial (as by a natural or forced reduction in resources, numbers, means of support, or strengthening principle) (wearing down the weakening defenders in battles of attrition—Shirer) (the growing power of Parliament weakened the authority of the sovereign) (weaken tea with water) (the spirit of adventure is not stimulated but weakened by poverty—Cohen) Enfeeble implies a more obvious and a more pitiable condition than weaken; it suggests the state of a person greatly weakened by old age, by severe or prolonged illness, or by a state comparable to it and usually implies helplessness or powerlessness more strongly than weaken does (so enfeebled by illness that he will probably never walk again) (a country crushed and enfeebled by war) Debilitate may be used in place of enfeeble but it tends to suggest a somewhat less marked and often more gradually developed impairment of strength or vitality (her frail nervous system and her delicate constitution, still further debilitated by the slow progress of disease—Ellis) (a debilitating climate) Undermine and sap imply a weakening by something or someone working surreptitiously or insidiously and may further suggest a draining of strength or a caving in or breaking down (her health has been undermined by lack of rest and proper food) (some of the new philosophies undermine the authority of science, as some of the older systems undermined the authority of religion—Inge) (but sloth had sapped the prophet's strength—Newman) (his moral energy is sapped by a kind of skepticism—Dowden) Cripple basically means to deprive of the use of a limb; in extended use it suggests a deprivation of something causing a loss of strength or effectiveness comparable to that resulting from the loss of a limb (crippling diseases) (crippled by arthritis) (the obstacles which stunt and cripple the mind—Inge) (the war economy which marries full production to a necessarily crippled market—Mailer) (a writer possessing . . . a sense of style only partially crippled by his reckless fecundity—A. C. Ward) Disable implies an intervention (as an event, an injury, or an influence) that deprives of strength or competence (these consoling yet nonetheless disabling illusions—Straight) (disabled soldiers) (do not let your mind be disabled by excessive sympathy—Shaw)

Ana enervate, emasculate, *unnerve, unman: impair, *injure, damage: dilute, *thin, attenuate, extenuate

Ant strengthen —Con energize, *vitalize, activate: *improve, better wealthy *rich, affluent, opulent

Ant indigent

wean *estrangle, alienate, disaffect

Ana *separate, part, divide, sunder, sever, divorce

Ant addict

weariless unwearying, unwearied, tireless, *indefatigable, untiring, unflinching

Ana dogged, pertinacious (see OBSTINATE): assiduous, sedulous, diligent (see BUSY)

Con lagging, dawdling, procrastinating (see DELAY): indolent, faineant, slothful, *lazy wearisome tiresome, tedious, boring, *irksome

Ana fatiguing, exhausting, fagging, tiring (see TIRE vb): dull, slow, *stupid

Con exciting, stimulating, quickening (see PROVOKE) weary vb *tire, fatigue, exhaust, jade, fag, tucker

Ana debilitate, enfeeble, *weaken: *depress, oppress, weigh

Con energize, *vitalize: animate, *quicken, enliven, vivify weave, knit, crochet, braid, plait, tat mean to make a fabric or textile or to form an article by interlacing threads or strands of material. Weave usually implies crossing rows of threads or strands interlaced into a web, irrespective of method, material, or pattern (weave baskets). Specifically the term means to interlace warp and weft yarns, by means of a loom, into a textile fabric, the yarns being passed over and under each other according to a predetermined pattern. Knit implies the use of a single strand, commonly of yarn, to produce an elastic fabric and, in its specific sense, the use of two smooth-pointed needles alternately holding the material and forming a new row of interlacing loops (knit a sweater) (knit stockings) (knitted fabrics). Crochet specifically differs from knit by implying the use of a single hooked needle and in not necessarily suggesting a building up by successive rows (crochet an afghan) (crochet lace). Braid implies the entwining of three or more strands (as of hair, cord, or cloth strips) by passing one strand over another in such a manner that each strand winds a sinuous course through the ribbonlike or ropelike contexture that is thus produced (braid rag strips to make a rug) (a whip of braided rawhide). Plait is sometimes identical in meaning with braid, but it tends to be used especially of the braiding of strands of hair or of the interlacing of straw or reeds (as in hatmaking or basketmaking) whether the method approaches that of braiding or weaving. Tat implies the making of lace by the use of a single thread and of one or more shuttles by means of which a series of sliding knots and, usually, loops is formed in that thread.

wedding *marriage, matrimony, nuptial, espousal, wedlock wedlock *marriage, matrimony, nuptial, espousal, wedding wee diminutive, tiny, teeny, weeny, *small, little, minute, microscopic, miniature, petite weeny tiny, teeny, wee, diminutive, minute, microscopic, miniature, little, *small weep *cry, wail, keen, whimper, blubber

Ana bewail, bemoan, lament, *deplore: sob, moan, *sigh, groan weigh 1 *consider, study, contemplate, excogitate

Ana *ponder, meditate, ruminate, muse: *think, reflect, cogitate, reason, speculate

2 *burden, encumber, cumber, weight, load, lade, tax, charge, saddle

Ana balance, ballast, trim, poise (see STABILIZE): *set, settle

3 *depress, oppress

Ana *worry, annoy, harass, harry: torment, torture, *afflict, try, rack

Con lighten, *relieve, alleviate, assuage, mitigate, allay weight n 1 significance, *importance, moment, consequence, import

Ana *worth, value: magnitude, *size, extent: seriousness, gravity (see corresponding adjectives at SERIOUS)

2 *influence, authority, prestige, credit

Ana effectiveness, efficacy (see corresponding adjectives at EFFECTIVE): *emphasis, stress: powerfulness, potency, forcefulness, forcibleness (see corresponding adjectives at POWERFUL) weight vb 1 load, *adulterate, sophisticate, doctor

2 *burden, encumber, cumber, weigh, load, lade, tax, charge, saddle

Ana see those at WEIGH 2 weighty *heavy, ponderous, cumbrous, cumbersome, hefty

Ana *onerous, burdensome, oppressive, exacting weird, eerie, uncanny can all mean fearfully and mysteriously strange or fantastic. Weird may be used in the sense of unearthly or preternaturally mysterious (when night makes a weird sound of its own stillness—Shelley) (weird whispers, bells that rang without a hand—Tennyson) or it may mean little more than strangely or absurdly queer (had somehow absorbed . . . a weird mixture of the irresponsible, megalomaniacal ideas which erupted from German thinkers during the nineteenth century—Shirer). Eerie does not connote ordinary justifiable or explainable fear but rather a vague consciousness that unearthly or mysterious and often malign powers or influences are at work; the term is used chiefly to create atmosphere rather than to define the character of the thing so described (found awe creeping over her as her brother's voice filled the vault of the temple, chanting words thousands of years old, in an eerie melody from a dim lost time—Wouk). Uncanny has in general use an implication of uncomfortable strangeness or of unpleasant mysteriousness that makes it applicable not only to persons or concrete things but to abstractions (as sensations, feelings, or thoughts) (the alien elements of the Soviet Union affect him as disquieting, uncanny, because they turn up in fusion with pretenses at Western discipline, Western logic—Edmund Wilson)

Ana *mysterious, inscrutable: *fearful, awful, dreadful, horrific: *strange, odd, queer, curious, peculiar welcome adj *pleasant, pleasing, agreeable, grateful, gratifying

Ana satisfying, contenting (see SATISFY): congenial, sympathetic (see CONSONANT)

Ant unwelcome —Con distasteful, *repugnant, repellent, obnoxious well adj *healthy, sound, wholesome, robust, hale

Ant unwell, ill —Con infirm, frail, feeble, *weak well-nigh *nearly, almost, approximately well-timed timely, *seasonable, opportune, pat

Ana apt, happy, felicitous, appropriate, fitting (see FIT adj)

Con *premature, untimely: late, *tardy, behindhand welter *wallow, grovel

Ana struggle, strive (see ATTEMPT vb) wet, damp, dank, moist, humid are comparable when they mean covered or more or less soaked with liquid. Wet may be used with no further implications or it may specifically imply saturation (wet clothes) (the rain lies in puddles on the wet ground). Often, however, the term refers to a surface covered with liquid (wet pavements) (wet hands) (cheeks wet with tears). But wet often means merely not dry, or not yet dry, especially when used in reference to something (as paint, ink, or glue) which has been applied to or used on a surface. Damp differs from wet chiefly in implying a slight or moderate absorption or covering and often in connoting the presence of unpleasant or disagreeable wetness (<damp shoes> <the sheets on the bed are damp> ). However damp usually implies less wetness than is commonly suggested by the adjective wet (<sheets should be damp when they are ironed>). Dank unequivocally applies to what is disagreeably, penetratingly or, from the point of view of health or comfort, dangerously, wet ( <dank forests> ). Moist often suggests little more than the absence of dryness or a not unpleasant dampness (<moist eyes> <moist air> <moist heat>). Humid is chiefly used to imply an oppressive degree of moisture in warm air (<the humid atmosphere of early August> <the humid prairie heat, so nourishing to wheat and corn, so exhausting to human beings—Cather> ).

Ana soaked, saturated, drenched, waterlogged (see SOAK vb)

Ant dry

wharf, dock, pier, quay, slip, berth, jetty, levee signify a structure used by boats and ships for taking on or landing cargo or passengers. Wharf applies to a structure projecting from the shore that permits boats or ships to lie alongside for loading or unloading ( <the townsfolk rush to the wharves to welcome with cheers and banners the precious cargo of food—Life> <at the foot of this street . . . a rude wharf of logs was chained together and moored—Amer. Guide Series: Vt.> ). Dock is usually interchangeable with wharf but can be restricted to signify an enclosed basin which permits the entrance of a vessel for loading or unloading or which, with floodgates and a method of exhausting water, can be used for building or repairing ships (  <the New York docks> <bring a ship into dock for repairs>). Pier is interchangeable with dock or wharf especially as applied to a large or long structure shooting out quite a distance into a body of water (  <pulled the canoe up on the pier to empty it> <the New York harbor piers>). Quay usually refers to an artificial embankment lying along or projecting from a shore and mainly used for loading or unloading; the term normally applies to wharves or piers characteristic of small places (<so she, also, got into the small boat; and together they went in to the quay, and got ashore—Black> ). Slip can apply to a sloping ramp usually constructed or used where the shore is high and shore water shallow (<on the slip a thick water hose was connected from a hydrant to the ship—Pizer> <rolling barrels down a slip into the ship's hold>) but it, like berth, can denote the space between two piers or wharves which gives room for a ship when anchored or not in use, and is more common for such a space intended or used for ferryboat landings or boardings (<about to sail from her berth at the foot of Fifth Street—Ships and the Sea>  <transatlantic liners in adjoining slips down at the docks> ). Jetty although commonly applied to a structure serving as a breakwater for a harbor applies also to a small and usually not very substantial pier of timbers (<the harbor, from 30 to 60 feet deep, is protected by white marble jetties—Amer. Guide Series: Fla.> <fishermen . . . take their accustomed places on the wharves and jetties for the summer sport of gawking—Anable> ). Levee primarily applies to an embankment for confining or restricting floodwaters but in the South and West, where a levee is often used for landing, the term is often the equivalent of quay (<build emergency levees to control a dangerously rising river> <down by the river's borders the new levees proclaim the grandsons' plans for a resurrected river traffic—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.>).

wheedle blandish, cajole, *coax

Ana entice, inveigle, *lure, seduce, decoy

Con bully, browbeat, bulldoze, cow, *intimidate wheel vb *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, twirl, whirl, swirl, pirouette, eddy while, wile, beguile, fleet mean to pass time, especially leisure time, without being bored. One whiles or wiles away a space of time by causing it to be filled by something pleasant, diverting, or amusing (<they can while away an hour very agreeably at a card table—Lamb> <attempt to wile away the long days . . . telling a story to his sister—Woolf>). One beguiles a space of leisure time or its tedium or irksomeness by occupying that time with some agreeable and not necessarily time-wasting employment (<and, skilled in legendary lore, the lingering hours beguiled—Goldsmith> <others . . . beguiled the little tedium of the way with penny papers—Hawthorne> <to beguile his enforced leisure, I tried to teach him sundry little tricks—Grandgent>). One fleets the time by causing it to pass quickly or imperceptibly; the term may or may not imply an effort to while time away (<many young gentlemen . . . fleet the time carelessly—Shak.> <fleeting the quiet hour in observation of his pets—Lewes>).

Ana divert, *amuse, entertain whim freak, fancy, *caprice, whimsy, conceit, vagary, crotchet

Ana inclination, disposition (see corresponding verbs at INCLINE); *fancy, fantasy, vision, dream: notion, *idea whimper vb weep, *cry, blubber, wail, keen whimsy *caprice, freak, fancy, whim, conceit, vagary, crotchet

Ana see those at WHIM whirl vb 1 twirl, spin, wheel, swirl, *turn, revolve, rotate, gyrate, circle, pirouette, eddy

2 *reel, stagger, totter whirlpool *eddy, maelstrom, vortex whirlwind, cyclone, typhoon, hurricane, tornado, waterspout, twister share the basic notion of a rotary motion of the wind. Whirlwind is applied to a small windstorm which begins with an inward and upward spiral motion of the lower air and is followed by an outward and upward spiral motion until, usually, there is a progressive motion at all levels. Cyclone, in technical use, is applicable to a system of winds that rotate, counterclockwise in the northern hemisphere, about a center of low atmospheric pressure; such a system of winds originating in the tropics (a tropical cyclone) may rotate at the rate of 75 miles per hour or more, sometimes exceeding 200 miles per hour. Typhoon is used of a severe tropical cyclone in the region of the western Pacific ocean. A tropical cyclone in the tropical north Atlantic and tropical western Pacific, with winds rarely exceeding 150 miles an hour, occasionally moving into temperate latitudes, is called a hurricane. In popular use, especially in the midwestern U.S., cyclone may take the place of tornado, the usual technical term, for an extremely violent whirling wind which is accompanied by a funnel-shaped cloud and which moves with great speed in a narrow path over a stretch of territory, often causing great destruction. A waterspout is a tornado that occurs over water. Twister is a familiar term often applied to a whirlwind, tornado, or waterspout.

whit mite, jot, iota, bit, *particle, smidgen, tittle, atom whiten vb 1 Whiten, blanch, bleach, decolorize, etiolate can all mean to change from an original color to white or almost to white. To whiten is to make white usually by the application or addition of something from without (<whiten shoes with pipe clay) To blanch is to whiten by the removal or withdrawal of color (<blanch almonds by scalding which removes the brown skin) or by preventing it from developing (<blanch celery by covering the stalks with earth, so as to exclude the sunlight) To bleach is to whiten or lighten in color, especially by exposure to sun and air or by chemical processes (<bleach linen by spreading it on the grass in the sun) (<bleach hair by use of peroxide) Decolorize implies the deprivation of color (as by processes of bleaching or blanching) but does not carry as strong an implication of whitening as do bleach and blanch (<decolorize a colored fabric by the use of chloride of lime) Etiolate is a scientific term used in reference chiefly to plants from which sunlight has been excluded with the result that the natural coloring of chlorophyll is not formed (<etiolated plants look sickly)

Ant blacken

2 whitewash, gloze, gloss, *palliate, extenuate

Ana see those at WHITEWASH whitewash vb whiten, gloze, gloss, *palliate, extenuate Ana *disguise, cloak, mask, dissemble, camouflage: condone, *excuse whole adj 1 entire, *perfect, intact

Ana sound, well, *healthy, robust, wholesome: complete, plenary, *full

Con *deficient, defective: impaired, damaged, injured, marred (see INJURE)

2 Whole, entire, total, all, gross are comparable when they mean including each and every part, particle, individual, or instance of without exception. Whole implies that nothing has been omitted, ignored, abated, or removed (<he devoted his whole energy to the task) (<the whole congregation approved the pastor's policy) (<the whole army will be mobilized) (<the whole country was affected) Entire may be used in place of whole in any of these illustrations; it also can, as whole cannot, imply actual completeness or perfection from which not only nothing has been taken but to which nothing can be added (<an entire stallion) (<whom to obey is happiness entire—Milton) (<granting entire liberty of conscience—Macaulay) Total implies that everything without exception has been counted, measured, weighed, or somehow included (<the total amount expended for welfare payments) (<the total output of the factory last year) Sometimes especially when applied to something that is often incomplete, total is used as an indication that no reservation is made (<total eclipse) (<total blindness) (<a total silence) All sometimes equals whole (<all the city was in an uproar), sometimes it comes closer to entire (<all their affection was centered on their children), and sometimes it equals total (<all their earnings were insufficient for their needs) Gross is used especially in financial statements in place of total to indicate that deductions (as for costs or expenses) have not yet been made (<gross earnings) (<gross receipts)

Ant partial whole n total, aggregate, *sum, amount, number, quantity

Ant part: constituent: particular —Con portion, piece, detail (see PART n): *item, detail: component, *element wholehearted whole-souled, heartfelt, hearty, unfeigned, *sincere

Ana ardent, fervent, *impassioned, passionate: genuine, bona fide, *authentic: earnest, *serious wholesale *indiscriminate, sweeping wholesome 1 *healthful, healthy, salubrious, salutary, hygienic, sanitary

Ant noxious —Con deleterious, detrimental, *pernicious

2 sound, *healthy, robust, hale, well

Ana *strong, sturdy, stalwart, stout whole-souled wholehearted, heartfelt, hearty, unfeigned, *sincere

Ana see those at WHOLEHEARTED whoop vb *shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler whoop n shout, yell, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler (see under SHOUT vb)

wicked evil, *bad, ill, naughty

Ana *immoral, unmoral, amoral: iniquitous, *vicious, villainous: *abandoned, reprobate, profligate, dissolute

Con *moral, virtuous, righteous, ethical, noble wide *broad, deep

Ana *spacious, capacious, ample: extended or extensive (see corresponding verb at EXTEND)

Ant strait —Con limited, restricted, confined (see LIMIT vb)

wide-awake *watchful, vigilant, alert

Ana *aware, alive, awake, conscious, sensible wield swing, *handle, manipulate, ply

Ana *swing, flourish, brandish, shake, wave: control, direct, manage, *conduct: exercise, drill, *practice wig vb tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, chew out, berate, *scold, upbraid, rate, rail, revile, vituperate

Ana reprimand, reproach, rebuke, *reprove, chide wild adj *furious, frantic, frenzied, frenetic, delirious, rabid

Ana distracted, bewildered, perplexed (see PUZZLE): confused, muddled, addled (see CONFUSE): agitated, upset, perturbed (see DISCOMPOSE): mad, crazy, demented, deranged (see INSANE) wilderness *waste, desert, badlands wile n artifice, feint, ruse, maneuver, *trick, stratagem, gambit, ploy

Ana *deception, fraud, trickery, chicanery, chicaner: cunning, *deceit, duplicity, dissimulation, guile wile vb *while, beguile, fleet

Ana see those at WHILE vb

will n Will, volition, conation can all refer to the power or act of making or effecting a choice or decision. Will applies not only to this power or act but also to the complex of rational and irrational, conscious and unconscious forces within a person that is the agent of this power and to the process by which one makes his choice, resolves it into an intention, and puts that intention into effect. In all of these senses will may vary greatly in its specific meaning; it may denote a dominant desire or inclination which determines one's choice (<when he was confronted by accidental extinction, he had felt no will to resist—Cather) or it may denote a power that derives from one's conception of what is good or right and that tests and accepts or rejects one's desires or inclinations (<appetite is the will's solicitor, and the will is appetite's controller; what we covet according to the one, by the other, we often reject—Hooker) Will often denotes mainly the determination that is inseparable from action or the effecting of one's decisions (<in the government of self, Bismarck's will broke down from time to time, as Richelieu's never did; and, after all, the government of self is the supreme test of will—Belloc) but it may be used when frustration or impossibility of action is suggested (spirits disillusioned, who still pathetically preserve the will to conquer, even when life no longer presents them with anything worth winning—Binyon) Further will may designate a subjective power, act, or process (luxurious feeling and pathetic imagination, which make no severe call upon . . . the will—Inge) or an objective force which must be encountered, challenged, or obeyed (submit oneself to the will of God) (this method of consulting the popular will—Bryce) Volition, in contrast to will, is a comparatively simple term. In its ordinary and most sharply distinguished sense, it designates merely the act of making a choice or decision; it usually carries an implication of deliberation, but it rarely suggests struggle or determination to put one's decision or choice into effect. Therefore it may be preferred when no other implications are desirable or important (surrendered his authority of his own volition) (our children do not seek school of their own volition—Grandgent) (the primal necessity for the faithful is that by an act of the will,—not necessarily an emotional act, but an act of pure and definite volition,—they should associate themselves with the true and perfect sacrifice—Benson) Conation usually implies a striving to get or achieve what is desired or willed. The term need not imply a conscious goal; it may suggest clearly directed striving or it may connote the restless aimless strivings which the mind cannot interpret or explain, but it stresses effort rather than choice (Religion or the desire for the salvation of our souls, Art or the desire for beautification, Science or the search for the reasons of things—these conations of the mind . . . are really three aspects of the same profound impulse—Ellis)

Ana *intention, intent, purpose, design: *choice, election, preference: character, *disposition, temper, temperament

will vb Will, bequeath, devise, leave, legate all mean to give a part or the whole of one's possessions to another by one's last will and testament. Will implies the provision or the existence of a legal instrument (a will) disposing of one's property after one's death (he has willed that his property be divided among his wife and children) (he willed his money to various charities) Bequeath is much used in wills by the testator (I bequeath all my property to my wife) and is frequent in legal, historical, and literary use; it may imply nothing more than a proved intention (as by a will or a definite oral or written statement) (William had bequeathed Normandy to his eldest son, Robert—J. R. Green) In legal use bequeath is commonly distinguished from devise, the one implying a gift of personality, the other a gift of realty (every article she possessed . . . every pot and pan, every garment, is separately bequeathed as an affectionate remembrance—Ellis) (I had never imagined rings as things one bought for oneself . . . They were things given, or bequeathed by grandaunts—Replier) (was the son of a white man by one of his slaves, and his father executed certain instruments to manumit him, and devised to him some landed property—Taney) Leave is the common and ordinary unspecific term for any of the preceding terms (he left a legacy to his nephew) (he left his land, money, books, pictures to Harvard University) Legate is not manifestly different from bequeath except that it invariably implies a formal will (the oval inlaid table I legate to _____—Law Reports, House of Lords) willful I deliberate, intentional, *voluntary, willing

Ana determined, decided, resolved (see DECIDE): intended, purposed (see INTEND): *obstinate, stubborn, dogged, pertinacious

Con acquiescent, *compliant: submissive, *tame 2 headstrong, intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, *unruly, ungovernable

Ana rebellious, contumacious, factious, *insubordinate: *obstinate, mulish, bullheaded, pigheaded

Ant biddable —Con tractable, docile, amenable, *obedient willing *voluntary, intentional, deliberate, willful

Ana prone, open (see LIABLE): inclined, predisposed, disposed (see INCLINE vb)

Ant unwilling —Con reluctant, loath, *disinclined, indisposed, averse wilt *droop, flag, sag

Ana slump, sink, drop, *fall: languish (see corresponding adjective at LANGUID) wily *sly, cunning, crafty, tricky, foxy, insidious, guileful, artful

Ana astute, sagacious, *shrewd: deceitful, cunning (see corresponding nouns at DECEIT) win gain, acquire, *get, obtain, procure, secure

Ana achieve, accomplish, effect (see PERFORM): attain, *reach, compass: *induce, persuade, prevail, get

Ant lose

wince *recoil, flinch, shrink, blench, quail

Ana cringe, cower (see FAWN): balk, shy, stick, stickle (see DEMUR): squirm, *writhe wind, breeze, gale, hurricane, zephyr are comparable rather than synonymous terms that can all basically mean air in motion. Wind is the general term referable to any sort of natural motion whatever its degree of velocity or of force (a strong wind) (there is no wind tonight) Breeze in general use is applied to relatively light but fresh wind, usually a pleasant or welcome one (the fair breeze blew, the white foam flew, the furrow followed free—Coleridge) In technical meteorological use the term specifically denotes a wind with a velocity of from 4 to 31 miles an hour. Breezes are sometimes further described as light (4–7 miles an hour), gentle (8–12), moderate (13–18), fresh (19–24), strong (25–31). Gale in ordinary use is applied to a high, destructive wind of considerable velocity and force; technically the term is applied specifically to a wind between 32 and 63 miles an hour; a whole gale is one having a velocity between 55 and 63 miles an hour. Hurricane is sometimes applied popularly to an exceedingly violent or devastating windstorm but technically the term denotes a rotating windstorm with winds of particular velocities (see also WHIRLWIND). Zephyr is a poetical term for a very light gentle breeze that delicately touches objects (fair laughs the morn, and soft the zephyr blows—Gray)

Ana *whirlwind, cyclone, typhoon, tornado, twister wind vb Wind, coil, curl, twist, twine, wreath, entwine mean to follow a circular, spiral, or writhing course or to make or form a corresponding figure. Wind fundamentally implies an axis or something suggestive of an axis around which another thing is turned so as to encircle, enclose, or enfold (wind thread on a spool) (wind a bandage around his arm) Often the word is extended in meaning to imply a result accomplished (as tightening, tensing, or lifting) by or as if by winding (wind a watch) (wind the strings of a mandolin) (her nerves are all wound up) (wound up his affairs) At other times the word implies movement or direction in a curving, sinuous, or devious manner (compare WINDING) (the road . . . wound on between low, quick-set hedges or wooden palings—Mackenzie) (a wagon . . . light enough and narrow enough to wind through the mountain gorges beyond Pueblo—Cather) Coil implies a curving so as to take the form of a spiral, often a flat spiral; it is used chiefly in reference to something (as a rope, a wire, a hose, or a snake) which is wound or winds itself in such a manner (ropes coiled on the deck and everything shipshape) <coil the hose before putting it away> <the snake coiled itself to strike> Curl basically implies the formation of the hair into large or small ringlets either by nature or by art; in extended use it is applied to something that forms itself or is formed into a curl or coil <curled his lip in disgust> <tree leaves curled by drought> <the smoke curled up from the chimney> <the dog curled itself up on the sofa> <shavings curled by the plane> <huge waves with crests curling over as they broke on the beach> Twist and twine can both refer to a step in the process of spinning or throwing in which two or more filaments are turned about each other to form yarn or thread. Twist retains this or a similar sense in more general use <form a cable by twisting several folds of wire together> Often in its extended senses twist implies a turning this way and that, a sudden turning around, a contorting, or a distorting <twisted his ankle when he fell> <caught the ball, twisted to avoid a tackler, then ran ten yards to a touchdown>  <twist the testimony of the witness so as to give it a new significance> Twine has nearly lost its implication of a mechanical process and usually emphasizes a winding around something by another thing which is flexible <let me twine mine arms about that body—Shak.> <let wreaths of triumph now my temples twine—Pope> <the bucket and rope had been encircled by twining tendrils of convolvulus—Binyon> Wreath may come close to coil, twist, or wind <about his neck a green and gilded snake had wreathed itself—Shak.> <therefore . . . are we wreathing a flowery band to bind us to the earth—Keats> <the smoke from his pipe wreathing about his head> Entwine usually implies a twisting together (as two or more similar things) and it often suggests the idea of interweaving, interlacing, or entangling <the lamp base looks like two snakes entwined> <the branches of the bushes were so thoroughly entwined that passage was impossible> But the word may imply nothing more than a winding about <entwine the lampposts with Christmas greens>

Ana twist, bend, *curve: *surround, encircle, circle, gird, girdle: *enclose, envelop

winding, sinuous, serpentine, tortuous, flexuous can all mean curving first one way and then another. Winding, the general and the ordinary term, often implies spiral ascent <winding stairs>  When applied to things in a horizontal plane it implies little more than weaving from side to side or in and out through some length, often without apparent plan   <following the serpent lightning's winding track—Shelley> Sinuous fundamentally suggests frequent departures from a straight or direct line by curving <streams . . . sinuous or straight, now rapid and now slow—Cowper> In its extended use where it may imply moral deviation this implication remains strong, but in respect to material things the word tends to stress the presence of curves in every line, bend, and movement and the absence of angularity, awkwardness, or stiffness <the stealthy terror of the sinuous pard—Thompson> <the sinuous movements of the leading lady> <gardens bright with sinuous rills—Coleridge> Serpentine implies curving in a pattern suggested by the smooth and flowing curves of a moving snake; it need not imply regularity in the size and shape of the inward and outward curves <up the heathy waste, [the road] mounts, as you see, in mazes serpentine—Wordsworth> As applied to a type of compound curve or to the front of a bureau or sideboard having such a curve the word implies that the bulging or convex curve is in the center. Tortuous, like sinuous, suggests lack of straightness and directness, but in contrast it stresses the number and intricacy of bendings, twistings, and turnings rather than the constant flow of curves <the course of the river became more tortuous as we neared its source> <there remained but a tortuous defile for carriages down the center of the street—Hardy> Flexuous, commoner in technical than general use, basically suggests alternation of gentle opposite curves or an easy zigzag course  <flexuous stems> In extended use it implies a lack of rigidity in action, and so comes very close to flexible <[a bacterium that] appears to move by changing the shape of its body which is not rigid but very flexuous and elastic—Biological Abstracts> <René's comings and goings, and each of his flexuous moods—E. P. O'Donnell> Ana curving, bending, twisting (see CURVE vb): circuitous, *indirect, roundabout: *crooked, devious: meandering (see WANDER) window, casement, dormer, oriel can mean an opening in the wall of a building that is usually covered with glass and serves to admit light and air. Window is the ordinary general term for the entire structure, including both its framework and the glass or the movable sashes which that framework encloses <come to the window, sweet is the night air—Arnold> Casement basically denotes a window sash attached to one of the upright sides of the frame by hinges; in ordinary use, however, the term is applied to a window or a series of windows (sometimes called casement window) with sashes of this character <magic casements, opening on the foam of perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn—Keats> Dormer denotes a window which stands out from a sloping roof and is typically enclosed by a gable-topped structure. An oriel differs from a dormer in projecting from a wall of a building rather than from a roof, in being at least three-sided and usually either semihexagonal or semisquare in shape, and in being supported by a corbel or bracket rather than by a rafter.

Ant straight

wing ell, extension, *annex wink vb Wink, blink both mean to move one's eyelids. Wink usually means to close and open the eyelids rapidly and usually involuntarily <houses so white that it makes one wink to look at them—Dickens> or to close one eye part way mischievously or teasingly or as a hint or a command <Asiatics do not wink when they have outmaneuvered the enemy, but . . . Mahbub Ali . . . came very near it—Kipling> To blink is to wink involuntarily and with eyes nearly shut as if dazzled, partly blind, half asleep, or suddenly startled <blink when roused from a sound sleep> <blink at the report of a gun> <he was . . . hauled up . . . blinking and tottering . . . into the blessed sun—Stevenson> In extended use wink implies connivance, and blink suggests evasion or shirking <wink at neglect of duty> <blink the issue> winner *victor, conqueror, champion, vanquisher

Ant loser

winning adj *sweet, engaging, winsome, dulcet

Ana charming, alluring, captivating, enchanting, bewitching, attractive (see under ATTRACT vb)

winsome *sweet, engaging, winning, dulcet

Ana see those at WINNING wipe *exterminate, extirpate, eradicate, uproot, deracinate Ana obliterate, *erase, efface, expunge, blot out: *abolish, extinguish, annihilate: *destroy, demolish wisdom judgment, *sense, gumption

Ana discretion, *prudence, foresight: judiciousness, sageness, saneness, sapience (see corresponding adjectives at WISE): sagacity, perspicacity, shrewdness (see corresponding adjectives at SHREWD)

Ant folly; injudiciousness wise, sage, sapient, judicious, prudent, sensible, sane are comparable when they mean having or manifesting the power to recognize the best ends and the best means to attain those ends. Wise applies to one or the acts or views of one who is so discerning in his understanding of persons, conditions, or situations that he knows how to deal with them, how to correct what is wrong in them, how to get the best out of them considering their limitations or difficulties, or how to estimate them fairly and accurately; often also the term implies a wide range of experience or of knowledge or learning (prudent and conservative, Edward was wise enough to know that these two qualities . . . were not enough—Buck) (knowing himself wise in a mad world—Meredith) (it is wise to be cautious in condemning views and systems which are now out of fashion—Inge) Sage characterizes one who is eminently wise and typically philosophical by temperament and experience. The term can suggest a habit of profound reflection upon men and events and an ability to reach conclusions of universal as well as immediate value, and has been applied chiefly to persons and utterances that are venerated for their wisdom and good counsel (what the sage poets, taught by the heavenly Muse, storied of old in high immortal verse—Milton) (for I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best—Pope) (the natural crown that sage Experience wears—Wordsworth) In somewhat lighter use sage often suggests the affectation or the appearance of great wisdom or knowledge, whether the matters concerned be of significance or not (the older women seemed to have a kind of secret among themselves, a reason for sage smiles and glances—Sackville-West) Sapient describes one exhibiting the utmost sagacity (contain valuable insights and sapient advice to educators—Larrabee) (the sapient leader who shall bring order out of the wild misrule—Parrington) but often the term is used ironically to imply a mere hollow sham of such sagacity (the generals . . . turned attractive profiles in their [photographers'] direction and put on expressions of sapient authority—Linklater) (a sapient, instructed, shrewdly ascertaining ignorance—Pater) Judicious applies to one who is capable of arriving at wise decisions or just conclusions; the term usually suggests the ability to distinguish fact from falsehood and to eliminate all bias so that one's judgments are fair, well-balanced, and level-headed as well as sound (I am perfectly indifferent to the judgment of all, except the few who are indeed judicious—Cowper) (I really think that, for wise men, this is not judicious—Burke) (the love of knowledge is not perhaps as insatiable as with us, but it is infinitely more judicious—Brownell) Prudent (see also under PRUDENCE; PRUDENT 3) applies to one who is so rich in practical wisdom that he is able to keep himself, his passions, and his actions under control and obedient to what he knows as right and necessary. In this sense prudent implies the use of one's reason in the attainment of the moral virtue that leads to right living, as distinguished from its use in the attainment of knowledge of things which transcend experience (the prudent man looketh well to his going—Prov 14:15) Sensible (see also AWARE, PERCEPTIBLE, MATERIAL) describes one who in speech or action does not exceed the bounds of common sense or of good sense; the term suggests a display of intelligence rather than of wisdom and of natural reasonableness rather than the exercise of the reason (to discuss the ultimate career of a child nine years old would not be the act of a sensible parent—Bennett) (whatever he took up he did in the same matter-of-fact sensible way; without a touch of imagination, without a spark of brilliancy—Woolf) Sane characterizes one who shows healthy-mindedness and level-headedness in prudent, judicious, or sensible acts and words (sane . . . persons who are so well balanced that they can adjust themselves to the conditions of every civilization—Ellis) (thankful in his heart and soul that he had his mother, so sane and wholesome—D. H. Lawrence)

Ana discreet, prudent, foresighted (see under PRUDENCE): *cautious, circumspect, calculating: sagacious, perspicacious, *shrewd, astute: knowing, *intelligent, alert, bright, smart

Ant simple

wisecrack n crack, gag, *joke, jest, jape, quip, witticism wish vb *desire, want, crave, covet

Ana *long, yearn, hanker, pine, hunger, thirst: aspire, pant, *aim: hope, *expect

Con spurn, refuse, *decline, reject, repudiate: scorn, *despise, disdain wishy-washy *insipid, vapid, flat, jejune, banal, inane

Ana spiritless, enervated, *languid, listless: *weak, feeble: diluted, attenuated, thinned (see THIN vb)

Con *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome, spunky, fiery, peppery, gingery: stimulating, exciting, piquing, provoking (see PROVOKE)

wit n 1 intelligence, brain, *mind, intellect, soul, psyche

Ana *reason, understanding, intuition: comprehension, apprehension (see under APPREHEND): sagaciousness or sagacity, perspicaciousness or perspicacity (see corresponding adjectives at SHREWD)

2 Wit, humor, irony, sarcasm, satire, repartee are comparable when they denote a mode of expression which has for its aim the arousing of sudden sharp interest that is accompanied by amusement or laughter or a quality of mind which leads or predisposes to such expression. Wit which can denote reasoning power or mental capacity more typically implies intellectual brilliance and quickness in perception combined with the talent for expressing one's ideas in a sparkling effective manner; in this sense wit need not imply the evocation of laughter, but it suggests a delighting and entertaining (they never meet but there's a skirmish of wit between them—Shak.) (true wit is nature to advantage dressed, what oft was thought, but ne'er so well expressed—Pope) Sometimes the implication of a power to evoke laughter or smiles becomes prominent and the term without any loss of its earlier suggestions of mental acuteness and swift perception, especially of the incongruous, adds notions of verbal felicity, especially as shown in the expression's unexpectedness of turn and aptness of application (if thou hast wit, and fun, and fire, and ne'er good wine did fear—Burns) Humor is often contrasted with wit, especially as one of two similar yet strikingly different modes of expression in literature. Humor may designate the peculiar disposition that leads one to perceive the ludicrous, the comical, or the ridiculous, and to express one's perceptions so as to make others see or feel the same thing (she was always saved by her crisp sense of humor, her shrewd and mischievous wit—Ellis) or it may imply more human sympathy, more tolerance, more kindness than wit, a deeper sense of the inherent incongruities in human nature and human life, and a feeling for the not readily perceived pathos as well as for the not readily perceived absurdness of characters, of situations, or of consequences (writers distinguish the humor of Chaucer and Shakespeare from the wit of Dryden and Pope; the wit of Molière's comedies from the humor of Don Quixote) (you expect wit from every man of any eminence in the eighteenth century. But of that sympathetic enjoyment of all the manifold contrasts and incongruities of life which we call humor, I think Wesley had very little—Winchester) Irony applies chiefly to a way of speaking or writing in which the meaning intended is contrary to that seemingly expressed (“Of course Constance is always right,” observed Sophia, with . . . irony—Bennett) (she was assisted by an impetuous girl called Caroline . . . who by the irony of language “waited” at table—Mackenzie) In a deeper sense irony applies both to the quality of mind of a person (as a poet, dramatist, or philosopher) who perceives discrepancies in life and in character (as between the appearance and the reality, or between what is promised and what is fulfilled, or between what is attempted and what is accomplished) and to the form of humor or wit which has for its aim the revelation of the mockery implicit in these contradictions (there must be some meaning beneath all this terrible irony—Shaw) (a kind of understatement which recalls to us at once the grim and conscious irony of those who knew that “their feet had come to the end of the world”—Day Lewis) Sarcasm applies chiefly to a savage, bitter form of humor intended to cut or wound. Sarcasm need not imply the use of verbal irony, sometimes suggesting no more than plain speaking, but it regularly implies as its aim the intent to make the victim an object of ridicule (in the intercourse of familiar life, he indulged his disposition to petulance and sarcasm—Johnson) (the arrows of sarcasm are barbed with contempt—Gladden) Satire primarily designates writing intended to hold up vices or follies (as of a people or an age) for ridicule and reprobation (Jonson’s drama is only incidentally satire, because it is only incidentally a criticism upon the actual world . . . that is, it does not find its source in any precise emotional attitude or precise intellectual criticism of the actual world—T. S. Eliot) Repartee applies chiefly to the power or art of answering quickly, pointedly, skillfully, and with wit or humor or, less often, irony or sarcasm (as for repartee in particular, as it is the very soul of conversation, so it is the greatest grace of comedy—Dryden) (I hadn’t known Jane spoke so well. She has a clever, coherent way of making her points, and is concise in reply if questioned, quick at repartee if heckled—Rose Macaulay)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana quick-wittedness, alertness, brightness, brilliancy, cleverness, smartness, intelligence (see corresponding adjectives at INTELLIGENT); raillery, *badinage, persiflage: pungency, piquancy, poignancy (see corresponding adjectives at PUNGENT)

witchcraft wizardry, witchery, sorcery, *magic, alchemy, thaumaturgy witchery *magic, sorcery, witchcraft, wizardry, alchemy, thaumaturgy with *by, through withdraw *go, leave, depart, quit, retire

Ana abscond, decamp, *escape, flee, fly: retreat, *recede Con arrive, *come wither, shrivel, wizen mean to lose or cause to lose freshness and smoothness of appearance. Wither implies a loss of vital moisture (as sap or body fluids) with consequent fading or drying up and ultimate decay or death (withered leaves) ([blossoms] which fall before they wither—Binyon) The term is often used in an extended sense implying a similar loss of vitality, vigor, or animation (age cannot wither her, nor custom stale her infinite variety—Shak.) (art, he thought, should flower from an immediate impulse towards self-expression or communication, and should wither with the passing of the impulse—Huxley) Shrivel carries a stronger implication of becoming wrinkled or crinkled or shrunken in size than wither; usually also it implies a cause (as a blasting or blighting by or as if by intense heat) or a lack of invigorating influences (as rain or, in extended use, encouragement, stimulation, or variety of employments) (the leaves shrivel in the hot sun) (age has shriveled her skin) (the man whose . . . practical life [is] shriveled to an insignificant routine—Ellis) Wizen, especially in the past participle, is often preferred to wither or shrivel when the ideas of shrinking in size, and the wrinkling of the face or other surface especially through age, lack of nourishment, or failing vitality are especially stressed (a wizened old man) (the wizened face of a poorly nourished boy) (a wizened shrub, a starveling bough—Browning)

Ana *dry, parch, desiccate: shrink, *contract, constrict withhold detain, keep back, keep out, retain, hold, hold back, reserve, *keep

Ana *restrain, curb, check, bridle, inhibit: refuse, *decline Con accord, *grant, concede, award, vouchsafe withstand *resist, contest, oppose, fight, combat, conflict, antagonize

Ana *bear, endure, stand, tolerate, suffer: thwart, baffle, balk, foil, *frustrate: assail, *attack, assault

Con submit, *yield, capitulate witness n *spectator, observer, beholder, looker-on, onlooker, eyewitness, bystander, kibitzer witness vb *certify, attest, vouch

Ana subscribe (see ASSENT)

witicism *joke, jest, jape, quip, wisecrack, crack, gag

Ana *wit, humor, sarcasm, satire, irony, repartee witty, humorous, facetious, jocular, jocose are comparable when they apply to persons and their utterances and mean provoking or intended to provoke laughter or smiles. Witty (compare WIT) suggests a high degree of cleverness and quickness in discerning amusing congruities or incongruities; it may connote sparkling pleasantries, especially in repartee, but it often suggests sarcasm or causticity (her tongue was as sharp and witty as ever—Sackville-West) (there’s no possibility of being witty without a little ill-nature; the malice of a good thing is the barb that makes it stick—Sheridan) Humorous is a generic term applied to whoever or whatever provokes laughter (a humorous account of a picnic) (a humorous lecture) (the humorous characters of Shakespeare’s plays) As opposed to witty, humorous often suggests sensibility rather than intellect, sympathy rather than aloofness in criticism, and sometimes, whimsicality rather than direct insight; thus, Pope is often described as a witty, Burns as a humorous, poet (whose humorous vein, strong sense, and simple style may teach the gayest, make the gravest smile—Cowper) (the genius of the Italians is acute . . . but not subtle; hence, what they think to be humorous is merely witty—Coleridge) Facetious usually applies to clumsy or inappropriate jesting or, somewhat derogatorily, to attempts at wittiness or humorousness that please their maker more than others (probably the most tedious bore on earth is the man who feels it incumbent upon him always to be facetious and to turn everything into a joke—Fiske) (her lines were weak facetious echoes of a style of college slang ten years outmoded—Wouk) Jocular also implies a fondness for jesting and joking but suggests as its motive the desire to make others laugh or to keep them amused. It need not imply loquaciousness but it tends to suggest a sustained jolly mood or habit of temperament (his more solemn and stately brother, at whom he laughed in his jocular way—Thackeray) (the watercolor lesson enlivened by the jocular conversation of the kindly, humorous old man was always great fun—Conrad) Jocose suggests waggishness or sportiveness in jesting and joking; it often comes close to facetious in suggesting clumsy inappropriate jesting (sundry jocose proposals that the ladies should sit in the gentlemen’s laps—Dickens)

Ana amusing, diverting, entertaining (see AMUSE): sparkling, scintillating (see FLASH vb): *caustic, mordant, acid, scathing: penetrating, piercing, probing (see ENTER) wizard *expert, adept, artist, artiste, virtuoso wizardry witchcraft, witchery, sorcery, *magic, alchemy, thaumaturgy wizen *wither, shrivel

Ana shrink, *contract: dwindle, diminish, reduce, *decrease wobble teeter, totter, shimmy, quiver, shiver, shudder, quaver, quake, *shake, tremble, dither woe grief, anguish, heartache, heartbreak, *sorrow, regret

Ana *distress, suffering, misery, agony, dolor: lamenting, bewailing, bemoaning, deploring (see DEPLORE)

Con *happiness, bliss, felicity woebegone disconsolate, dispirited, dejected, depressed, *downcast

Ana *melancholy, lugubrious, doleful: forlorn, *despondent: spiritless, listless (see LANGUID) woman *female, lady womanish womanlike, womanly, ladylike, feminine, *female, effeminate

Ant mannish —Con manlike, virile, masculine, manly, *male womanlike womanly, womanish, ladylike, feminine, *female, effeminate

Con feminine, womanly, womanlike, womanish, ladylike (see FEMALE) womanly womanlike, ladylike, womanish, feminine, *female, effeminate

Ana *mature, matured, grown-up, adult

Ant unwomanly, manly —Con mannish (see MALE): *youthful, juvenile, virgin, virginal, maiden wonder n 1 Wonder, marvel, prodigy, miracle, phenomenon can all mean something that causes astonishment or admiration. Wonder applies specifically to whatever excites surprise, astonishment, or amazement (as by its perfection, its greatness, or its inexplicableness) <the hotels were wonders of comfort—White> <the real wonder of jujitsu is . . . in the uniquely Oriental idea which the whole art expresses—Hearn> <Chinese painters are not . . . absorbed in expressing their sensuous delight in the wonder and glory of the world—Binyon> Marvel applies to something that excites surprise or astonishment especially by its extraordinariness, its strangeness, or its curiousness <“All I ask from them is discreetness.” “Ay,” said Adrian, whose discreetness was a marvel—Meredith> <had never believed that such marvels of the cooking art really existed—Wouk> <for the Roman army was still strong, and was to remain for centuries one of the marvels of the world—Buchan> Prodigy may name some extraordinary or abnormal fact or circumstance in nature seen as an omen or portent <were not comets formerly dreaded, as awful prodigies intended to alarm the world?—Jeremiah Joyce> or apply to something that makes one marvel because of its oddness or unusualness especially in degree of some quality (as skill, endurance, size, or achievement) <wondering whether her husband, a despotic and pitiless pedant, would have tried to turn their boy into a prodigy—Edmund Wilson> <women performing prodigies of endurance, bravery, and hope—Newsweek> Miracle applies to something that is accomplished or occurs which seems to those who are witnesses or have undergone the experience to exceed human powers and to require a supernatural or superhuman explanation <wonders ye have done; miracles ye cannot—Tennyson> In its nonreligious sense miracle retains its implication of wonder in its insistence on the fact that the person or thing so designated is beyond ordinary human comprehension or capacity to do or produce;

only occasionally does it suggest a supernatural or superhuman agent or agency <clung to their candles with an instinctive feeling that these primitive instruments were . . . more to be trusted than the miracles of science—Wolfe> <the miracle which we call genius—Lowe> <it was a miracle that the two men survived so many days' exposure in an open boat> <it was a miracle of rare device, a sunny pleasure dome with caves of ice!—Coleridge>

Phenomenon in its more popular sense, which is somewhat contrary in meaning to phenomenon as used by scientists and philosophers (compare phenomenal under MATERIAL), implies something exceptional or extraordinary; it applies to a person, animal, or thing that is regarded as a prodigy or marvel or occasionally merely as an oddity <the captain—a phenomenon during prohibition because he was honest—Dinneen> <Beat . . . the first phenomenon in years to come out of the Great Unwashed which Madison Avenue hadn't rigged, manipulated or foreseen—Mailer>

2 Wonder, wonderment, amazement, admiration can denote the complex emotion aroused by something that is inexplicable or incomprehensible and, often, awe-inspiring. Wonder and wonderment commonly suggest novelty or strangeness in what excites the emotion and astonishment or perplexity in the person affected <still the wonder grew that one small head could carry all he knew—Goldsmith> <showed no great zest . . . a quiet wonderment rather, faintly tinged with pleasure—Cather> In its richest use wonder often implies rapturous awe (nor any power above or under ever made us mute with wonder—Shelley)

Amazement stresses bewilderment or loss of power to collect one's thoughts; it rarely gives an indication of like or dislike for the object exciting the emotion <reports . . . which constantly express amazement at the extent and severity of Russian attacks . . . and despair at the German setbacks—Shirer>

Admiration, which in its most general sense implies an often enthusiastic recognition of superiority (see REGARD n), can add an implication of absorbed or ecstatic attention (as to the rare, the beautiful, or the sublime) that approaches awe in its elevation and intensity <respect which in the lay mind may well mount to admiration and even to awe—More> <considered the emotion of reverence to be very complex. Into it enters awe which itself is a blend of fear and admiration. Admiration, in turn, represents a fusion of negative self-feeling and wonder—G. W. Allport>

Ana awe, *reverence, fear: astonishment, amazement (see corresponding verbs at SURPRISE): perplexity, puzzlement, bewilderment (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE)

wonderment *wonder, amazement, admiration wont n *habit, habitude, practice, usage, custom, use

Ana way, manner, fashion (see METHOD) wonted accustomed, customary, habitual, *usual

Ana familiar, *common, ordinary: natural, *regular, normal, typical woo vb court, solicit, *invite, bid

Ana allure, *attract: *lure, entice, seduce: blandish, *coax, cajole, wheedle: pursue, chase, *follow, trail wooden *stiff, rigid, inflexible, tense, stark

Ana *firm, hard, solid: *heavy, weighty, ponderous: clumsy, *awkward

Con pliant, pliable, *plastic: *supple, limber word, vocable, term can mean a letter or combination of letters or a sound or combination of sounds capable of being pronounced and expressing an idea that is by tradition or common consent associated with the letters or the sounds. Word applies to a letter or combination of letters or a sound or a combination of sounds that forms an indivisible whole constituting one of the ultimate units of a language. Vocable throws emphasis upon a word as pronounced or spelled rather than as a unit of meaning (a flat denial of poetic possibilities, in the case of any vocable, is liable to disastrous refutation—Lowes) (accustomed to songs in which the words are often merely convenient vocables with the melody usually more important than the text—Scholl) Term applies both to words and to phrases that express a whole idea and form one of the units of expression in a language, applying especially to units with a more or less precise technical use or meaning (the term communism is used today to describe both a political philosophy and its translation into reality—Gatzke) (“The most important woman in Finland” is a term which has been applied—Current Biog.) (all professions are likely to develop innumerable terms that constitute an almost private jargon)

Ana expression, idiom, *phrase, locution

wordy, verbose, prolix, diffuse, redundant can all mean using or marked by the use of more words than are necessary to express the thought. Wordy often carries no further implications, though it may suggest garrulousness or loquacity when the reference is to speech (went into considerable detail about the Fuehrer’s thoughts and policies on almost every conceivable subject, being more wordy than any previous letter . . . to his Italian partner—Shirer) (a wordy, prolegomenous babbler—Stevenson) Verbose suggests overabundance of words as a literary fault characteristic especially of a writer or public speaker or of a work or speech; it often implies resulting dullness or obscurity of expression or a lack of incisiveness, confusion of ideas, or grandiloquence (a verbose style) (a dull verbose narrative) (his letters are full of interesting details but they are never verbose) Prolix implies such attention to minute details as to extend what is written or told beyond due bounds; the term carries a stronger implication of tediousness or wearisomeness than verbose (the belief, so prevalent abroad, that it is typical of Russian literature to be formless, prolix and hysterical—Edmund Wilson) (this, then, was Nuflo’s story, told not in Nuflo’s manner, which was infinitely prolix—Hudson) Diffuse usually implies verbosity, but it throws the emphasis upon the lack of organization and of the compactness and condensation needed for pointedness and for strength of style; it often attributes flabbiness, looseness, or desultoriness to what is written (the one can be profuse on occasion; the other is diffuse whether he will or no—J. R. Lowell) (though Seneca is long-winded, he is not diffuse; he is capable of great concision—T. S. Eliot) Redundant can apply to whatever is superfluous (older . . . occupations are becoming redundant and obsolete—Barkin) but in its specific application to words and phrases the term implies a superfluity that results from being repetitious or unneeded for clarity and accuracy of expression (revision of technical prose requires word by word review and elimination of whatever is redundant) In its corresponding application to writers, speakers, or utterances redundant implies the use of redundancies (see redundancy under VERBIAGE) (the naturally copious and flowing style of the author is generally redundant—Mackintosh) (she had been, like nearly all very young writers, superfluous of phrase, redundant—Rose Macaulay) (in sharp comment . . . quite demolished the emptiness and the pretentiousness of this redundant plan—Michener)

Ana *inflated, turgid, tumid, flatulent; bombastic, *rhetorical: loquacious, garrulous, voluble, glib, *talkative

Con laconic, *concise, terse, succinct, summary, pithy, compendious work n 1 Work, labor, travail, toil, drudgery, grind are comparable when they mean effort or exertion directed to the accomplishment of an end, or an employment or activity which involves such expenditure of effort or exertion. Work is the most comprehensive of these terms, for it may imply activity of body, mind, or machine or, in its largest sense, of a natural force. It is applicable not only to the exertion and to the employment which involves such exertion (six days shalt thou labor, and do all thy work—Exod 20:9) but also to what is accomplished or produced by such exertion (this statue is the work of a gifted but unknown sculptor) (you have done a day’s work in three hours) and to the material upon which one is employed (put your work away) Labor differs from work not so much in its specific denotations as in its implications; as a rule it implies human work and therefore suggests physical or intellectual exertion only, but it may suggest work of strenuous, onerous, or fatiguing kind (labor is doing what we must; leisure is doing what we like—Shaw) (the larger part of the labor of an author in composing his work is critical labor; the labor of sifting, combining, constructing, expunging, correcting, testing—T. S. Eliot) (Sir William Meredith, anticipating the labors of Romilly, protested against the barbarity and the inefficacy of a criminal code—G. O. Trevelyan) Travail carries a stronger implication of painful effort or exertion than does labor; that connotation is often so strong that the term tends to denote suffering rather than labor (the sentimentalist escapes the stern travail of thought—Lowes) (it breaks his heart . . . that all his hours of travail here for men seem yet in vain—Lindsay) Toil suggests labor that is prolonged and highly fatiguing but not necessarily physical (for years he led a life of unremitting physical toil—Buchan) Drudgery implies dull, irksome, and distasteful labor (thereafter, through . . . all the days she served in the store, the job was nothing but exasperating drudgery—Wouk) (labor of the hands . . . pursued to the verge of drudgery—Thoreau) Grind applies to labor that one finds toilsome and trying or exhausting to mind or body (the long grind of teaching the promiscuous and preoccupied young—Henry James)

Ana exertion, *effort, pains, trouble: *task, duty, job, chore

Ant play

2 Work, employment, occupation, calling, pursuit, business can all denote the specific kind of labor or activity in which a person engages seriously especially as a means of earning a livelihood. Work is the most general of these terms; it applies to any kind of labor, whether physical or intellectual, whether carried on by the hour, day, week, month, or longer period, and whether done for pay or not and, if the former, whether compensated for by an employer or out of fees for services or the profits of a business (be out of work) (his work is that of a railroad engineer) (he is at work on his book) Employment implies work for which one has been engaged and is being paid by an employer (he is unable to find employment) (his employment is that of a bookbinder) (I . . . went from town to town, working when I could get employment—Goldsmith) Occupation, though often used interchangeably with employment, can be more inclusive, for it does not necessarily connote service under an employer and may be referred to the work of a kind in which one engages habitually or for which one has been trained; thus, one seeks employment but follows a particular occupation (unable to find employment in his old occupation, he turned to common labor) (he is by occupation a teacher) (these are the chief questions which a man would ask . . . whom circumstances allowed to choose his occupation—Inge) Calling is sometimes used in place of occupation but is typically used of occupations which can be described as vocations or professions and to which one is likely to have been called by one's nature or special tastes (his calling is that of a preacher) (the learned callings) (Miss Jekyll had received that luckiest of fairy gifts, a calling . . . something that she loved to do—L. P. Smith) Pursuit, too, may be used in place of occupation but more specifically in the sense of a trade, craft, profession, business, or art that is followed often as a means of earning one's living (they never have to learn to adjust themselves to people whose tastes and pursuits are different from their own—Russell) (though it was supposed to be proper for them to have an occupation, the crude fact of moneymaking was still regarded as derogatory, and the law, being a profession, was accounted a more gentlemanly pursuit than business—Wharton) Business is often used in the sense of work or sometimes of occupation (the business of keeping a lunatic asylum—Denman) (I hated, and still hate, the awful business of research—Bennett)

Ana *trade, craft, handicraft, art, profession

3 Work, product, production, opus, artifact can all denote a concrete thing that is made or brought into being by the exertion of effort and the exercise of skill. Work is applied to what comes under this general definition (as something that is manufactured or that is constructed or built) only when used without reference to a particular thing (the work reveals the workman) or when used with a possessive (the cabinetmaker is proud of his work) (every church that is known as Christopher Wren's work) or in certain combinations (fireworks) (waxworks) Otherwise it is applied to a thing that results from mental labor, especially one involving composition and artistry in execution and specifically called a work of art (the works of Keats include his poems and usually his prefaces) (the works of Beethoven are all his musical compositions) (The Thinker is one of Rodin's works) (the new history of literature promises to be a monumental work) Product (see also PRODUCT 2) is applied chiefly to articles of manufacture whether they are made by hand or with the aid of machinery (the factory seeks a market for its products) (she was unwilling to part with the embroideries and laces that were the products of her handiwork) (synthetic materials impart their special properties to perfumes and flavors and when properly used, increase rather than diminish the value of the product—Morrison) When product rather than work is used of a poem, novel, statue, or painting, it is often either depreciative in its connotations or definitely noncommittal (this dull product of a scoffer's pen—Wordsworth) (shall a literary product reveal the spirit of its age and be silent as to the spirit of its author—Matheson) Production is sometimes used where work would be the commoner and more idiomatic term, but it has a formal or slightly bombastic effect except when qualified by a superlative (the noblest productions of literary genius) (the finest productions of Michelangelo) (so one [Pygmalion] whose story serves at least to show men loved their own productions long ago, wooed an unfeeling statue [Galatea] for his wife—Cowper) The term also is specifically applied to a theatrical or similar performance viewed as the work of a producer or director who is responsible for all the details (the recent Shakespearean productions) Opus is applied chiefly to a musical composition or group of compositions and in this use it is commonly followed by a number designating the order of publication or, sometimes, execution (Beethoven's opus 27) The term also has some specific application (as to work in mosaic or embroidery) and is used in light criticism of a work of art or literature often with a suggestion of facetious pomposity (British books on statistics are ever so much sprightlier and clearer than American opera on the subject—Forbes) (an instance of misplaced creativity, perhaps the first but not the last in Wright's prodigious opus—Mumford) Artifact basically denotes an artificial as distinguished from a natural product; it usually implies human workmanship, largely as a general designation for primitive weapons and implements as well as works of art (flints, arrowheads, and other artifacts of stone)

Ana article, object, *thing: accomplishment, achievement, performance (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM)

work vb operate, function, *act, behave, react worker, workman, workingman, laborer, craftsman, handicraftsman, mechanic, artisan, hand, operative, roustabout can all mean one who earns his living by labor, especially by manual labor. Worker, the most comprehensive and least specific of these terms, applies to someone who earns his living by work of hand or brain (office workers) (factory workers) Workman does not imply a specific kind of work, but in all but its extended senses it commonly implies manual labor. It may be applied to one engaged to do a specified piece of work or to help in the construction of something requiring many workers; it may also be applied to a skilled or to an unskilled worker. Usually it implies opposition to employer, or manager, or foreman (there were 50 workmen on the job) In extended use the term is applicable to a worker whether he works with his hands or with his mind provided he makes, constructs, invents, or creates something (high-minded and untiring workmen, they have spared no pains to produce a poetry finer than that of any other country in our time—Lowell) Workingman is more restricted in its range of application than workman, and is, in spite of varying legal definitions, applied commonly to a wage earner who at an hourly, daily, or weekly rate pursues a trade (as carpentry, masonry, or plumbing) or is similarly employed in a mercantile, manufacturing, or industrial establishment as distinguished especially from an industrialist, a merchant, and a professional man. Laborer commonly designates one whose work demands more strength and physical exertion than skill (as on a construction or excavation job) (day laborers) (farm laborers) Craftsman and handicraftsman basically apply to one who is a skilled workman in a craft or handicraft (see craft, handicraft under TRADE 1). Unlike the foregoing terms these two are common in general use and may apply as freely with reference to an avocation as to an employment. But the former may apply distinctively to a worker who is a competent technician or who is versed in the technique of his art, profession, or trade. It is especially used of artists, writers, playwrights, or skilled artificers (Pope . . . one of the most consummate craftsmen who ever dealt in words—Lowe) (the good craftsman constructs his product as perfectly as he can . . . He becomes an artist in so far as he treats his materials also for themselves—Alexander) Mechanic applies specifically to a workman skilled in the repair or adjustment of machines (an automobile mechanic) (an aviation mechanic) Artisan is more often opposed to artist (for this sense see under ARTIST 1) than employed as a designation of a particular type of workman. When applied to workingmen as such and without thought of opposition to artist, the term comes very close to craftsman and is commonly applied to one who is skilled in a trade (as carpentry, weaving, or shoemaking) that involves learned skills and their appropriate application as well as physical labor (we pass from the weavers of cloth to a different class of artisans—Macaulay) Hand is applied to one of a crew, a force, or a gang of workmen or sometimes to an owner's or proprietor's helper or assistant (a deckhand) (a farmhand) (mill hands) (my son has lately lost his principal hand by death—Franklin) Operative, a general term suggestive of modern industrial conditions, applies to a workman employed in a mill, a manufactory, or an industry utilizing machines (the steel-works employ as many as 2000 operatives) Roustabout usually adds to laborer distinguishing implications of muscular fitness for exceedingly heavy work, roughness, and, often, migratory habits (longshoremen and other roustabouts)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ant idler

workingman workman, laborer, *worker, craftsman, handicraftsman, mechanic, artisan, operative, hand, roustabout workman *worker, workingman, laborer, craftsman, handicraftsman, mechanic, artisan, operative, hand, roustabout world universe, *earth, cosmos, macrocosm worldly I mundane, *earthly, terrestrial, earthy, sublunary Ana temporal, *profane, secular: *material, physical, corporeal: *carnal, fleshly, sensual

Con *celestial, heavenly, empyrean, empyreal: sacred, *holy, spiritual, divine, religious

2 *sophisticated, worldly-wise, blasé, disillusioned worldly-wise worldly, *sophisticated, blasé, disillusioned worn *haggard, careworn, pinched, wasted, cadaverous Ana exhausted, tired, wearied, fatigued, fagged, jaded (see TIRE vb): gaunt, scrawny, skinny, *lean

Con refreshed, restored, rejuvenated (see RENEW): *vigorous, lusty, energetic, strenuous worried anxious, concerned, careful, solicitous (see under CARE n)

Ana apprehensive, afraid, *fearful: troubled, distressed (see TROUBLE vb): harassed, harried (see WORRY vb)

Con comforted, solaced, consoled (see COMFORT vb)

worry vb Worry, annoy, harass, harry, plague, pester, tease, tantalize can all mean to torment so as to destroy one's peace of mind or to disturb one acutely. Worry stresses incessant attacking or goading and an intention or sometimes an effect of driving the victim to desperation or defeat (pursue a policy of worrying the enemy) (worry him out till he gives his consent—Swift) (brother should not war with brother, and worry and devour each other—Cowper) Annoy (see also ANNOY 1) implies continued molesting, interfering with, intruding on, or bedeviling until the victim is angry or upset (wilt thou then serve the Philistines with that gift which was expressly given thee to annoy them?—Milton) (clouds of flies . . . annoyed our horses—Borrow) (my movements are all along a regular beat, which enables me to avoid things that bore or annoy me—Edmund Wilson) Harass usually implies persecution, especially continued petty persecutions, or burdensome demands or exactions that drive one to distraction or exhaust one's nervous or mental power (it is good for boys and girls to know that their father can be harassed by worries and their mother worn out by a multiplicity of details—Russell) (securing air and naval bases from which he could harass and blockade the British Isles—Shirer) Harry, though often used interchangeably with harass, more vividly suggests maltreatment and oppression (Button and Miss Wace had been harried and chivied . . . the latter getting visibly flustered, for tears came into her eyes—Sackville-West) (how on earth can you rack and harry and post a man for his losings, when you . . . live in the same station with him?—Kipling) Plague basically implies an affliction or infliction comparable to that of a devastating epidemic disease and even with greatly weakened implications tends to suggest a tormentor and an agonized or suffering victim (the gods are just, and of our pleasant vices make instruments to plague us—Shak.) (the kind of unhappy phrase that could plague a candidate right down to the wire—Michener) (misfortune plagued the plotters at every turn—Shirer) Pester implies the power to annoy past endurance (as by numbers or by repetition of attacks suggestive of the discomforts of an infestation of vermin) (pester the authorities with complaints) (Adrian . . . would accept him entirely as he seemed, and not pester him . . . by trying to unlock his heart—Meredith) Tease may imply repeated attempts to break down resistance by successive appeals or importunities (the children were teasing to be taken to the circus) (I have not been to the Rooms this age . . . except . . . last night with the Hodges's . . . they teased me into it—Austen) or it may imply an attempt to provoke or upset by raillery or tormenting (gets me mad when my analyst friends ask me some teasing question . . . Implying they know a hell of a lot more about me than I do—Wouk) (not soon provoked, however stung and teased, and, if perhaps made angry, soon appeased—Cowper) Tantalize stresses the repeated awakening of expectation and then its frustration (because they are so fabulous and beautiful, they create an atmosphere of suspense . . . something tantalizing, breathtaking—Dahl) (merciful love that tantalizes not, one-thoughted, never-wandering, guileless love—Keats)

Ana disquiet, disturb, *discompose, perturb, agitate, upset: torment, try, torture (see AFFLICT): oppress, persecute, *wrong, aggrieve

Con *comfort, solace, console worry n anxiety, concern, *care, solicitude

Ana *apprehension, foreboding, misgiving, presentiment: anguish, woe, heartache (see SORROW): *uncertainty, doubt, mistrust

Con *equanimity, composure, sangfroid: *certainty, assurance, certitude worship n adoration, veneration, reverence (see under REVERE vb)

Ana *honor, homage, obeisance: respect, *regard, esteem, admiration

Con *profanation, desecration, sacrilege: execration, cursing (see corresponding verbs at EXECRATE) worship vb I adore, venerate, *revere, reverence

Ana *exalt, magnify: respect, esteem (see under REGARD n)

Con *execrate, curse: *despise, scorn, disdain, contemn

2 *adore, idolize

Ana love, dote (see LIKE): admire, regard (see under REGARD n)

Con *hate, abhor, detest worth n Worth, value are close synonyms in more than one of their senses, often differentiated by demands of idiom rather than differences of meaning or connotation. Both worth and value denote the equivalent in money or sometimes in goods or services given or asked in exchange for another thing; thus, the value or worth of these coins to collectors is much greater than their monetary worth or value (the current exchange value of the dollar) (he always gets his money's worth) (gets full value for his money) When, however, worth and value mean the quality of being useful, important, excellent in its kind, or highly desirable or meritorious, they do not always come so closely together. In such use worth more often than value applies to what is excellent intrinsically (as by being superior morally, spiritually, intellectually, or aesthetically) (of ancient race by birth, but nobler yet in his own worth—Dryden) (Archer's . . . coherent thinking, his sense of the worth of order and workmanship—Montague)

<assumption . . . that the social whole has greater worth and significance than its individual parts—Huxley> Value, on the other hand, applies more frequently than worth to the qualities (as excellence, usefulness, or importance) imputed to a person or thing or to the degree in which that person or thing is regarded as excellent, useful, or important especially in its relation to other things  <there is always a gap between their appreciation of a man's value at any moment and his real weight—Belloc> <nothing in the [church] service was slighted, every phrase and gesture had its full value—Cather> Further, value may be applied, as worth is not, to something (as a principle, a quality, a condition, or a substance) which is regarded as important, useful, desirable, or of value, sometimes in its relation to other things, sometimes in the degree which seems proper or fitting to it, and sometimes absolutely <we may call food a value for the animal . . . because it is nutritious and fills his need of life—Alexander> <the opinion . . . that while science . . . contemplates a world of facts without values, religion contemplates values apart from facts—Inge> <prolongation of the . . . war . . . threatens not only the lives of millions, but the humanitarian values and goals which we are striving to maintain—Science>

Ana *excellence, merit, virtue, perfection: *use, usefulness, utility

wound n Wound, trauma, traumatism, lesion, bruise, contusion are comparable when they mean an injury to one of the organs or parts of the body. Wound generally denotes an injury that is inflicted by a hard or sharp instrument (as a knife, a bullet, or a club) forcibly driven or applied, and is characterized by breaking of the skin or mucous membrane and usually by damage to the tissues beneath <deep wounds made by a bayonet>  In extended use wound can apply to a figurative hurt or blow (as to the mind or to society) <inflicts wounds upon the human spirit which no surgery can heal—Woolf> <the perfect way to heal many of the world's worst wounds—Mazur> Trauma basically applies to a wound or other injury (as a strain, fracture, or concussion) resulting from external force or violence (as from a fall, a blow, a shot, a stab, or a burn) or from a cause incidental to birth or surgery. Often the term is extended to a mental or emotional blow or stress that results in disordered feelings or behavior or leaves a lasting abnormal impression on the mind <hysteria is a condition that often results from a psychic trauma> <great social traumas like the French Revolution and the American Civil War—Heard> <what psychologists call a trauma, a shock whose increasing aftereffects . . . testified to the susceptibility of the saint to sin—Thomas Mann> In this connection trauma tends to pass in meaning from the injury received to the effect it produces <the disillusion of the older generation had become the spiritual trauma of the younger—Aldridge>  Traumatism in general use is seldom clearly distinguished from trauma <the traumatisms of history with time . . . become embedded in the culture of a people—Edmond Taylor> but in technical use it tends to be applied specifically to the local or general disordered state that results from injury or wounding <fractures, sprains . . . burns and similar traumatisms—JAMA> Lesion basically implies an injury or impairment <the severe control . . . is no lesion to inward harmony and happiness—Muirhead> but in medical use it applies specifically to a usually clearly circumscribed pathological change in tissue that may be caused by a wound or injury or be symptomatic of a disease or degenerative process

<tuberculous lesions in the lung> <syphilitic lesions>  In much of its general use lesion is an extension of the medical sense and implies a damaged or defective point or a weak spot  <crime has . . . become the symptom of a radical lesion in the stamina of humanity—Zabel> Bruise is the general and contusion the more technical term for an injury, ordinarily due to impact, that results in more or less disorganization of tissues beneath the skin without breaking it but with black and blue discoloration due to oozing of blood into the tissues <his letter talks of a disjointed thumb, a contusion on the hip, and a sightless eye—Lucas> Only bruise has appreciable extended use and in this it tends to be strictly metaphoric <the social and economic bruises that have come from our violence to nature—Sears> <all sensitiveness, at bottom is an intimation of pain and of fear . . . a shrinking from the bruise, and an awareness of transitoriness—Behrman>

Ana *injury, hurt: burning or burn (see BURN)

wraith *apparition, phantasm, phantom, ghost, spirit, specter, shade, revenant wrangle vb quarrel, altercation, squabble, bicker, spat, tiff (see under QUARREL n)

Ana argue, dispute, debate (see DISCUSS): fight, *contend

Con *agree, concur, coincide wrangle n *quarrel, altercation, squabble, bickering, spat, tiff

Ana *argument, dispute, controversy: *discord, contention, dissension, conflict wrap vb *cover, overspread, envelop, shroud, veil

Ana *enclose, envelop: *surround, encompass, environ, gird, girdle: cloak, mask, camouflage (see DISGUISE)

wrath rage, indignation, ire, fury, *anger

Ana resentment, dudgeon, *offense: *acrimony, acerbity, asperity wrathful irate, indignant, *angry, mad, wroth, acrimonious

Ana infuriated, incensed, enraged (see ANGER vb)

Con *forbearing, tolerant, clement, lenient, indulgent, merciful wreathe *wind, coil, curl, twist, twine, entwine wreck vb *ruin, dilapidate

Ana *destroy, demolish, raze: *injure, damage, impair

Con *save, preserve, conserve wrench vb Wrench, wrest, wring can all basically mean to turn or twist forcibly, but they tend to vary widely in the implied purpose or result of the action. Wrench denotes a twisting or turning with considerable force, often with an abrupt tug or yank, so that the thing affected is twisted, distorted, or forced out of position; it may stress the violence of exertion in pulling or yanking <carelessly wrenching the pipe until it bent>  <jerked and wrenched savagely at his bridle, stopping the hard-breathing animal with a furious pull near the colonel—Crane> Wrest commonly implies a twisting or wrenching, sometimes with crude violence, sometimes with continuing deftness and dexterity, from another's possession into one's own <wrested the knife from his attacker> The term is common in extended use in which it implies a seizing, usurping, capturing, or extorting by such means <through the efforts of bold and ambitious men who wrest the power from the lords—Thilly> <while one group of Mississippi valley pioneers advanced into the Southwest to wrest Texas from its Mexican owners—Billington> <when we could wrest the initiative from our enemies—Roosevelt> Wring applies basically to a compressive twisting together, often to express or extract <wring out wet clothes> but in its extended use often implies a forcing or extorting (as by urgent demands or threats) that suggests a physical wringing (<wing a confession from a suspect> <more farm output, both of foodstuffs and raw materials, must be wrung from the hard-pressed peasants—Lieberman> <wringing more blackmail from this unwarlike nation—Forester> Ana twist, bend (see CURVE): *force, compel, coerce, constrain: strain, sprain (see under STRAIN n)

wrest vb *wrench, wring

Ana twist, bend (see CURVE): usurp, *arrogate, confiscate: extort, extract, elicit (see EDUCE): distort, contort (see DEFORM) wrestle, tussle, grapple, scuffle mean to struggle with an opponent at close quarters. Wrestle basically implies a struggle for mastery by gripping with hands, arms, and legs, often in ways governed by fixed rules; the term connotes the exercise of skill and ingenuity as well as strength. In its extended use wrestle also implies a struggle for mastery, but it may suggest either a striving for superiority or for a particular advantage or a laborious effort (as in understanding, in seeking, or in overcoming) <compelled to wrestle with the increasing difficulties of his office> <the perfectionist's instinct for wrestling with a problem until he had shaped it to his mental image—Kolodin> <the man who has never wrestled with his early faith . . . has missed not only a moral but an intellectual discipline—Ellis> Tussle also suggests a struggle for mastery, but it implies determination rather than skill or ingenuity and willingness to accept the rough-and-tumble conditions of such a struggle <the boys tussled long and hard> <tussle with a problem in mathematics>  Grapple stresses the action of taking hold of or coming to grips with; the term carries a stronger implication of being in a position to gain the mastery and, usually, of a successful struggle <grappled with his assailant, pinning one of his arms behind him> <the architect has grappled with more problems than one need hope to see solved in any single church—Henry Adams> <it has been mainly the academicians who have attempted to grapple with the . . . intricacies of Joyce's mysticism of the flesh—Mailer> Scuffle may imply brief, confused, usually not very serious fighting involving much scrambling and noise <boys scuffled with each other in the schoolyard> It may suggest hurry or superficiality in overcoming difficulties <you go to school and scuffle on the best way you can—Runciman>

Ana *contend, fight, battle, war: *resist, withstand, combat, oppose: strive, endeavor, essay (see ATTEMPT): labor, toil, travail (see corresponding nouns at WORK)

wretched *miserable

Ana *despondent, forlorn, hopeless, despairing: doleful, dolorous, *melancholy: abject, sordid, *mean: pitiable, piteous, *pitiful wring vb *wrench, wrest

Ana *press, squeeze: *crush, mash, smash, bruise: extract, extort, elicit (see EDUCE): distort, contort (see DEFORM): twist, bend (see CURVE) writer, author, composer can all denote a person who gives expression to his ideas or feelings, but they are not as a rule synonyms. Writer is a comprehensive term applied to someone whose occupation or chief employment is that of expressing something in words, especially for others to read. As an occupational designation, it implies that one's profession is writing for publication, and it covers such persons as novelists, essayists, dramatists, editors, and journalists  <news writers>  Author in its comprehensive sense (see under MAKER) is applicable to a producer or source (as of a work of art) <the author of my being> but it can be applied specifically to a person who has written for publication. It differs from writer in placing less stress upon the profession and more upon the fact of having written and published something (as a book or an article under one's own name or a pen name) <decide to become a writer> <the authors of some well-known books were not writers by profession> Author in this sense, too, implies an originator or source and is distinguished from reviser, adapter, editor, or dramatizer. Composer, like author, may be used generally and specifically. But because it emphasizes the bringing together of a number of things so as to form a whole (a composition), it is applied most frequently to those expressions of ideas or feelings achieved by bringing together musical tones, words, colors, or shapes so as to form an artistic pattern. It is the specific term for the author of a musical composition <the composer of the Peer Gynt suite> but, although this is its commonest application, it is also applicable to poets, painters, designers, and others when composition rather than creation or representation is the end <Shakespeare was not only a dramatist but a composer of lyrics and sonnets> writhe, agonize, squirm are comparable when they mean to twist or turn in physical or mental distress. Writhe regularly carries vivid suggestions of convulsive contortions (as of one in the throes of death, in a paroxysm, in an instrument of torture, or in a trap) and of fruitless struggling to escape. When used in reference to physical distress, it commonly implies also great pain <childhood and youth and age writhing in savage pains—Shelley> When extended to refer to mental distress, it usually implies a torturing sense of shame, of bafflement, or of frustration <thus, at every march, the hidden enemy became bolder and the regiment writhed . . . under attacks it could not avenge—Kipling> <corrupt men in the machines writhe in the presence of his obvious integrity—Helen Fuller> Agonize sometimes evokes the image of one in the pangs of death, struggling and in anguish; sometimes it evokes the picture of one wrestling or straining arduously to achieve a difficult victory <bled, groaned, and agonized, and died in vain—Cowper> <pages which cost a week of unremitting and agonizing labor—Huxley> Squirm evokes images of a less dignified or a more familiar character; it usually does not imply profound distress, but great unease (as in aversion to restraint or discipline) or a shrinking or wincing (as under sarcasm or criticism) <sleek-haired subalterns who squirmed painfully in their chairs when they came to call—Kipling>

Ana twist, bend (see CURVE vb): distort, contort (see DEFORM): wince, blench, flinch, *recoil wrong n *injustice, injury, grievance

Ana damage, *injury, harm, mischief: violation, infraction, *breach, trespass, transgression: hardship, *difficulty wrong adj 1 *false

Ana fallacious, sophistical (see under FALLACY): *misleading, deceptive, delusive, delusory

Ant right —Con *correct, exact, accurate, precise

2 *bad, poor

Ana improper, *unfit, inappropriate, unfitting, unsuitable, inapt, unhappy, infelicitous: *awry, askew: *amiss, astray

Con proper, *fit, appropriate, suitable, fitting: good, *right wrong vb Wrong, oppress, persecute, aggrieve can mean to inflict injury upon a person without just cause or in an outrageous manner. One wrongs another who injures him by unjustifiably depriving him of his property or his good name or by violating something he holds sacred <receive us; we have wronged no man, we have corrupted no man, we have defrauded no man—2 Cor 7:2) <such an air of wronged nobility—Cheever> One oppresses another who inhumanely lays upon him burdens too heavy to be endured or exacts of him more than he can possibly perform <how reviving to the spirits of just men long oppressed, when God into the hands of their deliverer puts invincible might—Milton> <may have missed the tender love of her parents . . . or been oppressed by her elderly uncle—Cheever> One persecutes another who relentlessly or unremittably subjects him to annoyance or suffering <if a boy has abnormal mental powers in some direction, combined with poor physique and great nervousness, he . . . may be so persecuted [by normal boys] as to be driven mad—Russell> One aggrieves another or, more often, causes him to be or to feel aggrieved who by wronging, oppressing, or persecuting him gives him ground for protest <several nations were aggrieved by the terms of the Treaty of Versailles> <so the bargain stood: they broke it, and he felt himself aggrieved—Browning>

Ana *abuse, mistreat, maltreat, ill-treat, outrage; *injure, harm, hurt

wroth *angry, irate, indignant, wrathful, acrimonious, mad

Y

yank vb *jerk, snap, twitch

Ana *pull, drag, tug; snatch, clutch (see TAKE): *wrench, wrest yap vb *bark, bay, howl, growl, snarl, yelp yardstick *standard, criterion, gauge, touchstone yarn tale, *story, narrative, anecdote yearn *long, pine, hanker, hunger, thirst

Ana crave, *desire, wish, want, covet; aspire, pant, *aim yeast *foam, froth, spume, scum, lather, suds yell vb *shout, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop

Ana vociferate, *roar, clamor, bellow, bawl yell n shout, shriek, scream, screech, squeal, holler, whoop (see under SHOUT vb)

yelp vb *bark, bay, howl, growl, snarl, yap yield vb 1 produce, turn out, *bear

Ana *generate, engender, breed, propagate; create, *invent; form, shape, *make, fabricate, fashion

2 *relinquish, surrender, cede, abandon, leave, resign, waive

Ana *forgo, forbear, abnegate, eschew, sacrifice; *abdicate, renounce, resign

Con *keep, keep back, retain, withhold; appropriate, *arrogate, confiscate

3 Yield, submit, capitulate, succumb, relent, defer, bow, cave can all mean to give way to someone or something that one cannot further resist. Yield (see also RELINQUISH; BEAR 2), when the reference is to a person implies being overcome (as by force, argument, or entreaty) <yield to persuasion> <yield to temptation> <he never yields except when the matter under discussion is of no significance to him> <the great principle in a contest with a child is: do not yield but do not punish—Russell> but when the reference is to a thing, the word implies elasticity, or lack of firmness, strength, or endurance in the thing that gives way <the door suddenly yielded to her hand—Austen> <the house they went to was . . . a human burrow or habitation that had yielded at every point to the crotchets and meanderings of a growing family—Cheever> Submit carries a more definite implication of contention or conflict than yield and, therefore, suggests more strongly a surrender after resistance to another's will, or because of a thing's strength or inevitableness <all is not lost—the unconquerable will . . . and courage never to submit—Milton> <the Indian summer of her heart, which was slow to submit to age—Stevenson>  <submitted to their joking with the best grace she could—Wouk> Capitulate

can mean to surrender on terms definitely agreed upon, but in its common extended use, it more often centers attention on a definite submission to a force or power that one has not the strength, the skill, or the will to overcome <I always tip for special services rendered but I will not capitulate before sheer impertinence—Wechsberg> <the universities would capitulate to a young, vigorous and revolutionary creed—Moberly> Succumb carries a stronger implication than any of the preceding terms of weakness or helplessness in the person or thing that gives way or of strength or irresistibility in the person or more often the thing that causes the giving way. The suggestion of sinking under that force or power is usually so strong in succumb that the word frequently implies a disastrous outcome (as death, destruction, or subjugation) <succumb to pneumonia> <the best of constitutions will not prevent ambitious politicians from succumbing . . . to the temptations of power—Huxley> <true passion . . . must be crushed before it will succumb—Meredith> All of the preceding terms usually imply a giving way on the part of a person or sometimes a thing that has not or cannot maintain the upper hand; they therefore often imply a weakening of the one that gives way. Relent, by contrast, implies a yielding on the part of the one who has the upper hand and who has been severe or harsh in his attitude to another person or fixed in his determination (as to punish, to interfere, or to frustrate). The term therefore implies a softening or mollifying that turns him from his previous course <can you hear a good man groan, and not relent?—Shak.> <when a second appeal, couched in more urgent terms, was dispatched to him, he relented—Cerf> Defer implies a yielding or submitting to because of respect or reverence for another or in recognition of another's authority or superior knowledge <everybody must defer . . . a nation must wait upon her decision, a dean and chapter truckle to her wishes—Sackville-West> <clearly conscious of her success and of the way these Londoners were deferring to her—Dahl> Bow is a picturesque equivalent of defer or submit; it may suggest a yielding through courtesy or through subjugation <bow to the inevitable> <bow to established authority> <he admired the tribal discipline which made May bow to this decision—Wharton> Cave, usually with in, can be a close synonym of succumb, but it often suggests resistance to pressure to the point of exhaustion and sudden collapse <in the end government caved in, and unconditionally agreed to inquiry—Punch>

Ana surrender, cede, waive (see RELINQUISH): concede, accord, award, *grant

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates festive place of treatment of each group.

yoke *couple, pair, brace yokel bumpkin, hick, rube, clodhopper, clown, lout, *boor, churl young n *offspring, progeny, issue, descendant, posterity youth, adolescence, puberty, pubescence are sometimes used interchangeably to denote the period in life when one passes from childhood to maturity. Youth is the most general of these terms, being applied sometimes to the whole early part of life from childhood or infancy to maturity (<youth, maturity, senility>). More often, however, youth is applied to the period between the maturing of the sexual organs and the attaining of full maturity. Youth often connotes the freshness, vigor, inexperience, or impetuosity characteristic of the young. Adolescence designates the same period as youth in the restricted sense, but it carries a stronger connotation of immaturity. Adolescence suggests the awkwardness resulting from the rapid growth during this period and also the mental and emotional instability resulting from the physiological changes. In legal use adolescence designates the period extending from puberty to the attainment of full legal age or majority. Basically puberty designates the age at which the signs of the maturing of the sexual organs appear (as the beard and changed voice in boys and the development of the breasts in girls); in law this age is commonly fixed at fourteen for boys and twelve for girls. In broader use puberty often designates the period covering the earlier years of adolescence during which the secondary sex characteristics are unfolding. Pubescence is sometimes used as equivalent to puberty, but often it applies distinctively to the condition of attaining the characteristics (as genital hair) of developing sexuality.

Ant age (sense 1) youthful, juvenile, puerile, boyish, virgin, virginal, maiden are comparable when they mean relating to or characteristic of one who is between childhood and adulthood; although their basic meaning is the same, they are seldom interchangeable because of widely differing implications and applications. Youthful suggests the possession or the appearance of youth, or of qualities appropriate to youth; it can be employed laudatorily or in extenuation (<youthful aspirations> <youthful indiscretions>). Juvenile often suggests immaturity of mind or body or lack of experience; it is applied especially to what is suited to or designed for boys and girls in their early teens (<juvenile dances> <juvenile fiction>). Puerile is applied especially to acts and utterances which, though excusable in a boy or girl or characteristic of immaturity, would be unpardonable or out of character in an adult; the word finds its commonest use in depreciatory reference to acts or utterances of the mature (<what seemed sapient discourse in 1940 is rather puerile chatter now—G. W. Johnson> <time and again the suspicion wounds us that we are puerile people, fetal minds, illegible tapestries—Peggy Bennett>). Boyish (compare mannish under MALE), though referred commonly to boys, is sometimes used in reference to girls or their clothes, appearance, or qualities. The term often suggests some of the engaging qualities or the physical attractiveness of normal, vigorous boys ( <boyish charm> <boyish enthusiasm>). Virgin and virginal, though referable usually to girls, in the extended use in which they suggest the freshness, innocence, purity, and inexperience that are associated with youthful virginity are applicable also to boys (<that beautiful mixture of manly courage and virginal modesty—Farrar> <he smiled like a girl, or like clear winter skies, a virginal light making stars of his eyes—Lindsay>). Maiden in its extended sense carries an even stronger suggestion than virgin or virginal of youthful lack of experience; it also implies that one's qualities (as virtue, worth, competence, or strength) have not been tried or tested ( <his maiden effort at authorship>).

Ana *immature, unmaturred

Ant aged —Con *mature, matured, grown-up

Z

zeal enthusiasm, fervor, ardor, *passion

Ana energy, force (see POWER): zest, gusto (see TASTE): earnestness, seriousness (see corresponding adjectives at SERIOUS): intensity, vehemence, fierceness (see corresponding adjectives at INTENSE)

Ant apathy —Con impassivity, phlegm, stolidity (see under IMPASSIVE) zealot *enthusiast, fanatic, bigot

Ana partisan, sectary, adherent, disciple, *follower: devotee, votary (see ADDICT) zenith apogee, culmination, meridian, *summit, peak, pinnacle, climax, apex, acme

Ant nadir

zephyr *wind, breeze, gale, hurricane zest relish, gusto, *taste, palate

Ana enthusiasm, fervor, ardor, zeal, *passion: spiritedness or spirit, high-spiritedness (see corresponding adjectives at SPRITED): enjoyment, delight, delectation, *pleasure zone belt, *area, tract, region

Ana *locality, district: section, sector, segment (see PART n)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

LIST OF AUTHORS QUOTED

The entries in italic type in the left-hand column are the actual forms used in citations in the Vocabulary of this Dictionary. These entries are arranged in the alphabetical order of surnames or titles. The right-hand column supplies an identification for each author or source cited. Only readily understood abbreviations (such as Amer. for American and Eng. for English) are used in this column.

As the names of books of the Bible are given wherever cited in the Vocabulary, these names are omitted from the list below. Unless otherwise stated at the citation itself in the Vocabulary, all biblical quotations are from the Authorized Version (or King James Bible). Quotations from other versions are indicated by the addition of the abbreviations R. V. for Revised Version (of 1885), D. V. for Douay Version (or Douay Bible).

Abbott . . . George Francis Abbott (1889-) Amer. playwright	Alcott . . . Louisa May Alcott (1832-1888) Amer. author	M. L. Anderson . . . Marcia Lee Anderson (1916-) Amer. educator
J. S. C. Abbott . . . John Stevens Cabot Abbott (1805-1877) Amer. historian	Aldington . . . Richard Aldington (1892-1962) Eng. writer	Quentin Anderson . . . Quentin Anderson (1912-) Amer. educator
Abel . . . Darrel Abel (1911-) Amer. educator	Aldor . . . Francis Aldor, The Good Time Guide to London (1951)	W. H. Anderson . . . William Harry Anderson (1905-1972) Amer. educator
Abend . . . Hallett Edward Abend (1884-1855) Amer. editor	Aldrich . . . Thomas Bailey Aldrich (1836-1907) Amer. author	Andrewes . . . Sir Christopher Andrewes (1896-) Eng. physician
Abernethy . . . Cecil Emory Abernethy (1908-) Amer. educator	Aldridge . . . John Watson Aldridge (1922-) Amer. critic	Andrews . . . Wayne Andrews (1913-) Amer. curator
Abse . . . Dannie Abse (1923-) Brit. poet	Alexander . . . Samuel Alexander (1859-1938) Austral. philosopher	Angell . . . Sir Norman Angell (1872-1967) Eng. author
Ace . . . Goodman Ace (1899-1982) Amer. writer	Franz Alexander . . . Franz Gabriel Alexander (1891-1964) Amer. (Hung.-born) psychiatrist	Angoff . . . Charles Angoff (1902-1979) Amer. (Russ.-born) author
Acheson . . . Dean Gopherham Acheson (1893-1971) Amer. diplomat	H. B. Alexander . . . Hartley Burr Alexander (1873-1939) Amer. philosopher	Anspacher . . . Louis Kaufman Anspacher (1878-1947) Amer. dramatist
Sam Acheson . . . Sam Hanna Acheson (1900-) Amer. editor	Algren . . . Nelson Algren (1909-1981) Amer. author	Appraisal Terminology & Handbook . . . American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers
Ackerman . . . Saul Benton Ackerman (1887-) Amer. educator	Alison . . . Sir Archibald Alison (1792-1867) Scot. historian	Archer . . . William Archer (1856-1924) Scot. critic
ACLS Newsletter . . . Amer. Council of Learned Societies	Allen . . . Alexander Viets Griswold Allen (1841-1908) Amer. clergyman	Arden . . . Ringgold Arden, Textile Industries (1954)
Action . . . John Emerich Edward Dalberg-Acton (1834-1902) 1st baron Acton. Eng. historian	F. L. Allen . . . Frederick Lewis Allen (1890-1954) Amer. editor	Clive Arden . . . pseud. of Lily Clive Nutt (1888-) Eng. author
Adair . . . James Adair (1709? -1783) Amer. (Irish-born) pioneer	Grant Allen . . . Grant Allen (1848-1899) Canad. author	Arendt . . . Hannah Arendt (1906-1975) Amer. (Ger.-born) political philosopher
Adams . . . John Adams (1735-1826) 2d president of the U.S.	Hervey Allen . . . (William) Hervey Allen (1889-1949) Amer. author	Arey . . . Leslie Brainerd Arey (1891-) Amer. anatomist
Evangeline Adams . . . Evangeline Smith Adams (1872-1932) Amer. astrologist	Allport . . . Floyd Henry Allport (1890-) Amer. psychologist	Argus . . . Seattle weekly newspaper
F. A. Adams . . . Francis A. Adams (fl. 1952) Amer. businessman	G. W. Allport . . . Gordon Willard Allport (1897-1967) Amer. psychologist	Arke . . . C. H. Arke, English Digest (1953)
Henry Adams . . . Henry Brooks Adams (1838-1918) Amer. historian	Alpert . . . Hollis Alpert (1916-) Amer. writer	Armbrister . . . Trevor Armbrister (1933-) Amer. writer
J. D. Adams . . . James Donald Adams (1891-1968) Amer. critic	Alsop . . . Stewart Johonnot Oliver Alsop (1914-1974) Amer. journalist	Armstrong . . . Harry George Armstrong (1899-) Amer. surgeon
J. Q. Adams . . . John Quincy Adams (1767-1848) 6th president of the U.S.	Altamira y Crevea . . . Rafael Altamira y Crevea (1866-1951) Span. jurist	Donald Armstrong . . . Donald Armstrong (1889-) Amer. army officer
J. T. Adams . . . James Truslow Adams (1878-1949) Amer. historian	Altick . . . Richard Daniel Altick (1915-) Amer. educator	E. A. Armstrong . . . Edward Allworthy Armstrong (1900-) Brit. clergyman
R. G. Adams . . . Randolph Greenfield Adams (1892-1951) Amer. librarian	Altschul . . . Frank Altschul (1887-1981) Amer. businessman	Arnold . . . Matthew Arnold (1822-1888) Eng. poet
S. H. Adams . . . Samuel Hopkins Adams (1871-1958) Amer. author	Ambler . . . Eric Ambler (1909-) Brit. writer	Edwin Arnold . . . Sir Edwin Arnold (1832-1904) Eng. poet
William Adams . . . William Adams (1706-1789) Eng. clergyman	Amer. Anthropologist . . . Amer. bimonthly	T. W. Arnold . . . Thurman Wesley Arnold (1891-1969) Amer. lawyer
Addison . . . Joseph Addison (1672-1719) Eng. essayist	Amer. Fabrics . . . Amer. quarterly	W. R. Arnold . . . W. R. Arnold, The Postmark (1955)
Adler . . . Mortimer Jerome Adler (1902-) Amer. philosopher	Amer. Guide Series . . . Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration	Aron . . . Raymond Aron (1905-) French sociologist
Æ . . . pseud. of George William Russell (1867-1935) Irish author	Americana Annual . . . Amer. yearbook	Artz . . . Frederick Binkerd Artz (1894-) Amer. historian
African Abstracts . . . Brit. quarterly	Americanas . . . Pan American Union monthly	Asbury . . . Herbert Asbury (1891-1963) Amer. author
African Wild Life . . . So. African quarterly	The Amer. Individual Enterprise System . . . Economic Principles Commission, Nat'l Assoc. of Manufacturers of the U. S.	Ascham . . . Roger Ascham (1515-1568) Eng. scholar
Agar . . . Herbert Sebastian Agar (1897-1980) Amer. writer	Amer. Jour. of Science . . . Amer. monthly	Ascoli . . . Max Ascoli (1898-1978) Amer. (Ital.-born) editor
Ageton . . . Arthur Ainsley Ageton (1900-1971) Amer. naval officer	Amer. Jour. of Sociology . . . Amer. bimonthly	Ashbrook . . . Frank Getz Ashbrook (1892-) Amer. biologist
Agnew . . . Seth Agnew (1921-1967) Amer. publisher	Amer. Mercury . . . Amer. monthly	Ashley . . . Frederick William Ashley (1863-1943) Amer. librarian
Aguecheek . . . pseud. of Charles Bullard Fairbanks (1827-1859) Amer. writer	Amer. Naturalist . . . Amer. bimonthly	Asimov . . . Isaac Asimov (1920-) Amer. (Russ.-born) educator
Aiken . . . Conrad Potter Aiken (1889-1973) Amer. poet	Amer. Sociological Review . . . Amer. bimonthly	Aswell . . . James R. Aswell (1906-1955) Amer. author
Ainsworth . . . William Harrison Ainsworth (1805-1882) Eng. nov.	Amer. Speech Anable . . . Amer. quarterly	Athenaeum . . . Eng. weekly incorporated in The Nation and Athenaeum 1921
Alan . . . Ray Alan (fl. 1953) Brit. journalist	Anthony Anable, Jr. . . . (fl. 1953) Amer. editor	Atkinson . . . (Justin) Brooks Atkinson (1894-) Amer. critic
Albright . . . William Foxwell Albright (1891-1971) Amer. orientalist	Anderson . . . Sherwood Anderson (1876-1941) Amer. writer	Percy Atkinson . . . Percy L. Atkinson (1886-1950) Amer. advertising executive
Alcine . . . Bill Alcine (fl. 1945) Amer. soldier	Ethel Anderson . . . Ethel Mason Anderson (1904-1958) Austral. writer	Atlantic . . . Amer. monthly
	Maxwell Anderson . . . Maxwell Anderson (1888-1959) Amer. playwright	Attlee . . . Clement Richard Attlee (1883-1967) 1st earl Attlee. Brit. statesman

- Atyeo* . . . Henry Clay Atyeo (1905-) Amer. educator
- Auchincloss* Louis Stanton Auchincloss (1917-) Amer. writer
- Auden* . . . Wystan Hugh Auden (1907-1973) Amer. (Eng.-born) poet
- Austen* . . . Jane Austen (1775-1817) Eng. nov.
- Austin* . . . Alfred Austin (1835-1913) Eng. poet
- Mary Austin* Mary Hunter Austin (1868-1934) Amer. nov.
- Sarah Austin* Sarah Austin (1793-1867) Eng. translator
- Autry* . . . Asa Autry (fl. 1945) Amer. soldier
- Axelrod* . . . Aaron Axelrod (fl. 1919) Amer. educator
- Aydelotte* . . . William Osgood Aydelotte (1910-) Amer. historian
- Ayer* . . . Alfred Jules Ayer (1910-) Eng. writer
- Baab* . . . Otto J. Baab (1896-1958) Amer. educator
- Babbitt* . . . Irving Babbitt (1865-1933) Amer. scholar
- Babcock* . . . Frederick Morrison Babcock, Valuation of Real Estate (1932)
- Bacon* . . . Francis Bacon (1561-1626) 1st baron Verulam. Eng. author
- A. M. Bacon* Alice Mabel Bacon (1858-1918) Amer. educator
- Peggy Bacon* Peggy Bacon (1895-) Amer. artist
- T. D. Bacon* Theodore Davenport Bacon (1863-1930) Amer. author
- Baerlein* . . . Henry Baerlein (1875-1960) Eng. author
- Bagby* . . . English Bagby (1891-1955) Amer. psychologist
- Bagehot* . . . Walter Bagehot (1826-1877) Eng. economist
- Bagot* . . . Richard Bagot (1860-1921) Eng. nov.
- Bailey* . . . Alfred Marshall Bailey (1894-1978) Amer. curator
- Margery Bailey* Margery Bailey (1891-) Amer. educator
- T. A. Bailey* Thomas Andrew Bailey (1902-) Amer. historian
- Baily* . . . Joe Baily, Jr. (fl. 1954) Amer. newspaperman
- Bainton* . . . Roland Herbert Bainton (1894-) Amer. (Eng.-born) theologian
- Baker* . . . Christina Hopkinson Baker (1873-1959) Amer. author
- Carlos Baker* Carlos Heard Baker (1909-) Amer. educator
- Dorothy Baker* Dorothy Dodds Baker (1907-1968) Amer. nov.
- J. H. Baker* John Hopkinson Baker (1894-1973) Amer. conservationist
- J. V. Baker* James Volant Baker (1903-) Amer. educator
- R. H. Baker* Robert Horace Baker (1883-) Amer. astronomer
- Balchin* . . . Nigel Marlin Balchin (1908-1970) Eng. author
- Baldwin* . . . Faith Baldwin (1893-1978) Amer. nov.
- James Baldwin* James Baldwin (1924-) Amer. author
- M. W. Baldwin* Marshall Whited Baldwin (1903-1975) Amer. historian
- Ballard* . . . Philip Boswood Ballard (1865-1950) Brit. educator
- Balliett* . . . Whitney Balliett (1926-) Amer. writer
- Bambrick* Winifred Bambrick (fl. 1946) Canad. author
- Banay* . . . Ralph Steven Banay (1896-1970) Amer. (Hung.-born) psychiatrist
- Bancroft* . . . George Bancroft (1800-1891) Amer. historian
- Banfield* . . . Edmund James Banfield (1852-1923) Austral. naturalist
- Bangs* . . . John Kendrick Bangs (1862-1922) Amer. humorist
- Barbour* . . . Thomas Barbour (1884-1946) Amer. naturalist
- Michael Barbour* Michael Barbour, Geographical Jour. (1954)
- Barclay* . . . Dorothy Edith Barclay (1918-) Amer. journalist
- Barham* . . . Richard Harris Barham (1788-1845) Eng. author
- Baring* . . . Maurice Baring (1874-1945) Eng. writer
- Baring-Gould* Sabine Baring-Gould (1834-1924) Eng. clergyman
- Barker* . . . Squire Omar Barker (1894-) Amer. writer
- Audrey Barker* Audrey Lillian Barker (1918-) Eng. writer
- Ernest Barker* Sir Ernest Barker (1874-1960) Eng. political scientist
- Barkham* . . . John Barkham (1908-) Amer. editor
- Barkin* . . . Solomon Barkin (1907-) Amer. economist
- Barkins* . . . Evelyn Werner Barkins (1918-) Amer. author
- Barkley* . . . Alben William Barkley (1877-1956) U.S. vice-president (1949-1953)
- Barlow* . . . Joel Barlow (1754-1812) Amer. poet
- Barnes* . . . Margaret Ayer Barnes (1886-1967) Amer. author
- H. E. Barnes* Harry Elmer Barnes (1889-1968) Amer. sociologist
- Barnett* . . . Vincent MacDowell Barnett (1913-) Amer. educator
- Barnouw* . . . Adriaan Jacob Barnouw, 77-1968 Amer. (Du.-born) philologist
- Barr* . . . Stringfellow Barr (1897-) Amer. educator
- Barrett* . . . William Barrett (1913-) Amer. educator
- C. L. Barrett* Charles Leslie Barrett (1879-) Austral. naturalist
- Barrie* . . . Sir James Matthew Barrie (1860-1937) Scot. author
- Barrow* . . . Isaac Barrow (1630-1677) Eng. theologian
- Barth* . . . Alan Barth (1906-1979) Amer. editor
- Bartlett* . . . Paul Bartlett (1881-) Amer. author
- Barton* . . . George Aaron Barton (1859-1942) Amer. (Canad.-born) educator
- Bartram* . . . William Bartram (1739-1823) Amer. naturalist
- Baruch* . . . Bernard Mannes Baruch (1870-1965) Amer. businessman
- Barzun* . . . Jacques Barzun (1907-) Amer. (Fr.-born) educator
- Basso* . . . (Joseph) Hamilton Basso (1904-1964) Amer. nov.
- Bateman* . . . John Henry Bateman (1892-1953) Amer. educator
- A. M. Bateman* Alan Mara Bateman (1889-1971) Amer. geologist
- Bates* . . . Katharine Lee Bates (1859-1929) Amer. poet
- E. S. Bates* Ernest Sutherland Bates (1879-1939) Amer. editor
- Graham Bates* Gladys Graham Bates (1890-1962) Amer. editor
- Battenhouse* Roy Wesley Battenhouse (1912-) Amer. educator
- Bauer* . . . Raymond Augustine Bauer (1916-1977) Amer. educator
- Baum* . . . Vicki Baum (1896-1960) Amer. (Austrian-born) nov.
- Baxter* . . . James Phinney Baxter (1893-1975) Amer. educator
- Baynes* . . . Helton Godwin Baynes (1882-1943) Eng. physician
- Beach* . . . Joseph Warren Beach (1880-1957) Amer. educator
- Stewart Beach* Stewart Taft Beach (1899-1979) Amer. editor
- Beachcroft* Thomas Owen Beachcroft (1902-) Brit. author
- Beaglehole* Ernest Beaglehole (1906-1965) N. Z. psychologist
- Beale* . . . Howard Kennedy Beale (1899-1959) Amer. historian
- Charles Beard* Charles Austin Beard (1874-1948) Amer. historian
- Mary Beard* Mary Ritter Beard (1876-1958) Amer. historian; wife of Charles
- Beaumont* Francis Beaumont (1584-1616) Eng. dramatist
- Gerald Beaumont* Gerald Beaumont (d. 1926) Amer. nov.
- Beck* . . . Warren Beck (fl. 1948) Amer. educator
- Becker* . . . Howard Paul Becker (1899-1960) Amer. sociologist
- Beckford* . . . William Beckford (1760-1844) Eng. author
- Beebe* . . . (Charles) William Beebe (1877-1962) Amer. naturalist
- Lucius Beebe* Lucius Morris Beebe (1902-1966) Amer. author
- Beecher* . . . Henry Ward Beecher (1813-1887) Amer. clergyman
- Barbara Beecher* Barbara Beecher, Britain Today (1953)
- Beerbohm* Max Beerbohm (1872-1956) Eng. critic
- Behrman* . . . Samuel Nathaniel Behrman (1893-1973) Amer. playwright
- Beidler* . . . Lloyd Mumbauer Beidler (1922-) Amer. educator
- Bejarano* . . . Jorge Bejarano (1888-) Colombian physician
- Belden* . . . Jack Belden (1910-) Amer. author
- Bell* . . . Adrian Hanbury Bell (1901-1980) Eng. author
- Clive Bell* Arthur Clive Howard Bell (1881-1964) Eng. critic
- Daniel Bell* Daniel Bell (1919-) Amer. educator
- E. T. Bell* . . . Eric Temple Bell (1883-1960) Amer. (Scot.-born) mathematician
- Lisle Bell* . . . Lisle Bell (1893-1952) Amer. literary critic
- Belloc* . . . Hilaire Belloc, pen name of (Joseph) Hilary (Pierre) Belloc (1870-1953) Brit. author
- Bellow* . . . Saul Bellow (1915-) Amer. (Canad.-born) nov
- Belluschi* . . . Pietro Belluschi (1899-) Amer. (Ital.-born) architect
- Bemelmans* Ludwig Bemelmans (1898-1962) Amer. (Austrian-born) author and artist
- Bemis* . . . Samuel Flagg Bemis (1891-1973) Amer. historian
- Bendiner* . . . Robert Marvin Bendiner (1909-) Amer. writer
- Benedict* . . . Ruth Fulton Benedict (1887-1948) Amer. anthropologist
- Benét* . . . William Rose Benét (1886-1950) Amer. writer
- Rosemary Benét* Rosemary Carr Benét (1898-1962) Amer. writer
- S. V. Benét* Stephen Vincent Benét (1898-1943) Amer. poet
- Benfield* . . . Adalbert Edwin Benfield (1911-) Amer. educator
- Benjamin* . . . Judah Philip Benjamin (1811-1884) Amer. (Brit.-born) lawyer
- Bennett* . . . (Enoch) Arnold Bennett (1867-1931) Eng. nov.
- H. S. Bennett* Henry Stanley Bennett (1889-1972) Eng. educator
- John Bennett* John Bennett (1865-1956) Amer. writer
- Joseph Bennett* Joseph Bennett (1922-1972) Amer. editor
- Lowell Bennett* Lowell Bennett (1920-) Amer. journalist
- Peggy Bennett* Peggy Bennett (1925-) Amer. writer
- Benson* . . . Arthur Christopher Benson (1862-1925) Eng. educator
- Edwin Benson* Edwin Benson, Life in a Mediaeval City (1920)
- G. W. Benson* George Willard Benson, The Cross: Its History & Symbolism (1934)
- Bentham* . . . Jeremy Bentham (1748-1832) Eng. philosopher
- Bentley* . . . Eric Russell Bentley (1916-) Amer. (Eng.-born) educator
- Bercaw* . . . Louise Oldham Bercaw (1894-) Amer. librarian
- Beresford* . . . James Beresford (1764-1840) Eng. writer
- J. D. Beresford* John Davys Beresford (1873-1947) Eng. nov.
- Berger* . . . John Peter Berger (1926-) Eng. art critic
- Bergin* . . . Thomas Goddard Bergin (1904-) Amer. educator
- Berkeley* . . . George Berkeley (1685-1753) Irish bishop
- Berkner* . . . Lloyd Viel Berkner (1905-1967) Amer. physicist
- Berle* . . . Adolf Augustus Berle (1895-1971) Amer. diplomat
- Berners* . . . John Bourchier (1467-1533) 2d baron Berners. Eng. politician
- Bernstein* . . . Walter Saul Bernstein (1919-) Amer. author
- David Bernstein* David Bernstein (1915-) Amer. writer
- Berrigan* . . . Darrell Berrigan (fl. 1954) Amer. journalist

- Besant* . . . Sir Walter Besant (1836-1901) Eng. author
- Bester* . . . Alfred Bester (1913-) Amer. writer
- Bethe* . . . Hans Albrecht Bethe (1906-) Amer. (Ger.-born) physicist
- Beuf* . . . Carlo Maria Luigi Beuf (1893-) Amer. (Ital.-born) writer
- Bevan* . . . Aneurin Bevan (1897-1960) Brit. socialist leader
- Biddle* . . . Francis Biddle (1886-1968) Amer. lawyer
- Bidwell* . . . Percy Wells Bidwell (1888-1970) Amer. educator
- Bienenstok* Theodore Rozeney Bienenstok (1907-) Amer. (Pol.-born) anthropologist
- Bierce* . . . Ambrose Gwynnett Bierce (1842-?1914) Amer. author
- Bierstedt* . . . Robert Bierstedt (1913-) Amer. sociologist
- Bigart* . . . Homer Bigart (1907-) Amer. journalist
- Billington* . . . Ray Allen Billington (1903-1981) Amer. educator
- L. E. Billington* Lillian Emily Billington (fl. 1950) Amer. educator
- Binger* . . . Carl Alfred Lanning Binger (1889-1976) Amer. psychiatrist
- Bingham* . . . Robert Worth Bingham (1871-1937) Amer. journalist
- Binyon* . . . Laurence Binyon (1869-1943) Eng. author
- Biological Abstracts* Amer. periodical
- Birney* . . . Alfred Earle Birney (1904-) Canad. educator
- Birrell* . . . Augustine Birrell (1850-1933) Eng. author
- Birtles* . . . Francis Birtles (fl. 1935) Austral. explorer
- Black* . . . William Black (1841-1898) Scot. nov.
- C. E. Black* Cyril Edwin Black (1915-) Amer. educator
- Blackie* . . . John Stuart Blackie (1809-1895) Scot. classical scholar
- Blackmore* Richard Doddridge Blackmore (1825-1900) Eng. nov.
- Blackmur* Richard Palmer Blackmur (1904-1965) Amer. writer
- Blackstone* Sir William Blackstone (1723-1780) Eng. jurist
- Blair* . . . Hugh Blair (1718-1800) Scot. clergyman
- Blake* . . . J. J. Blake (1893-1964) Amer. engineer
- Blankenagel* John Charles Blankenagel (1886-1969) Amer. educator
- Blanshard* . . . Paul Blanshard (1892-1980) Amer. author
- Brand* Brand Blanshard (1892-) Amer. philosopher; twin brother of preceding
- Bliven* . . . Bruce Bliven (1889-1977) Amer. journalist
- Bliven* . . . Bruce Bliven (1916-) Amer. writer; son of preceding
- Blofeld* . . . John Eaton Calthorpe Blofeld (1913-) Brit. author
- Bloom* . . . Edward Alan Bloom (1914-) Amer. educator
- Blue Book* Amer. monthly
- Blum* . . . Gerald Saul Blum (1922-) Amer. educator
- Blumer* . . . George Blumer (1872-1962) Amer. (Eng.-born) pathologist
- Blunden* . . . Edmund Charles Blunden (1896-1974) Eng. author
- Blunt* . . . John Henry Blunt (1823-1884) Eng. historian
- Boas* . . . George Boas (1891-1980) Amer. educator
- Franz Boas* Franz Boas (1858-1942) Amer. (Ger.-born) anthropologist
- Boatfield* . . . Helen C. Boatfield (1899-) Amer. historian
- Boesen* . . . Victor Boesen (1908-) Amer. writer
- Bogue* . . . Donald Joseph Bogue (1918-) Amer. sociologist
- Bok* . . . Edward William Bok (1863-1930) Amer. (Du.-born) editor
- B. J. Bok* . . . Bart Jan Bok (1906-) Amer. (Du.-born) astronomer
- Bolander* . . . Louis H. Bolander (1890-1957) Amer. librarian
- Bolingbroke* Henry St. John (1678-1751) 1st viscount Bolingbroke. Eng. statesman
- Bolitho* . . . (Henry) Hector Bolitho (1897-1974) Brit. writer
- Bonham* . . . Milledge Louis Bonham (1880-1941) Amer. educator
- Bonney* . . . Walter T. Bonney (1909-) Amer. government official
- Book of Common Prayer* The service book of the Anglican Communion (Church of England ed.)
- Book-of-the-Month Club News* Amer. periodical
- Booth* . . . Bradford Allen Booth (1909-1968) Amer. educator
- Borrow* . . . George (Henry) Borrow (1803-1881) Eng. author
- Boschen* . . . Henry C. Boschen (1906-) Amer. business executive
- Boston Journal* Boston daily newspaper consolidated (1917) with the Boston Herald
- Boswell* . . . James Boswell (1740-1795) Scot. author
- Alexander Boswell* Sir Alexander Boswell (1775-1822) Scot. poet
- Boitgehe* Italian multilingual periodical
- Bottomley* . . . Gordon Bottomley (1874-1948) Eng. poet
- Bottrall* . . . (Francis James) Ronald Bottrall (1906-) Eng. poet
- Anthony Boucher* pen name of William Anthony Parker White (1911-1968) Amer. writer
- Bowen* . . . Francis Bowen (1811-1890) Amer. philosopher
- C. D. Bowen* Catherine Drinker Bowen (1897-1973) Amer. author
- Elizabeth Bowen* Elizabeth Dorothea Cole Bowen (1899-1973) Brit. author
- H. R. Bowen* Howard Rothmann Bowen (1908-) Amer. educator
- R. O. Bowen* Robert Owen Bowen (1920-) Amer. author
- Bowers* . . . Claude Gernade Bowers (1878-1958) Amer. historian
- Faubion Bowers* Faubion Bowers (1917-) Amer. writer
- R. H. Bowers* Robert Hood Bowers (1906-) Amer. educator
- Boyce* . . . Carroll W. Boyce (fl. 1950) Amer. editor
- Boyd* . . . Julian Parks Boyd (1903-1980) Amer. educator
- Boyle* . . . Kay Boyle (1903-) Amer. author
- Hal Boyle* Harold Vincent Boyle (1911-1974) Amer. journalist
- Boy Scout Handbook* Boy Scouts of America
- Boys' Life* Amer. monthly
- Brace* . . . Gerald Warner Brace (1901-1978) Amer. educator
- Bracker* . . . Milton Bracker (1909-1964) Amer. journalist
- Bradbury* . . . Ray Douglas Bradbury (1920-) Amer. writer
- Braddon* . . . Mary Elizabeth Braddon (1837-1915) Eng. nov.
- Braddy* . . . Haldeen Braddy (1908-1980) Amer. educator
- Braden* . . . Thomas Wardell Braden (1918-) Amer. editor
- Bradford* . . . Gamaliel Bradford (1863-1932) Amer. biographer
- Roark Bradford* Roark Bradford (1896-1948) Amer. writer
- Bradley* . . . Andrew Cecil Bradley (1851-1935) Eng. literary critic
- Braithwaite* Warwick Braithwaite (1896-1971) Brit. conductor
- Brand* . . . Millen Brand (1906-1980) Amer. author
- Brandeis* . . . Louis Dembitz Brandeis (1856-1941) Amer. jurist
- Brandt* . . . Carl Brandt, New England Journeys (1954)
- Brecht* . . . Charles A. Brecht, Bulletin (1949)
- Breck* . . . Edward Breck (1861-1929) Amer. author
- Breit* . . . Harvey Breit (1913-1968) Amer. writer
- Brennan* . . . Robert Brennan, The Irish Digest (1953)
- Bretnor* . . . Reginald Bretnor (fl. 1953) Amer. editor
- Ann Bridge* pen name of Mary Dolling (Sanders), Lady O'Malley (1889-1974) Eng. author
- Bridges* . . . Robert Seymour Bridges (1844-1930) Eng. poet
- Bridges-Adams* William Bridges-Adams (1889-1965) Brit. theatrical producer
- Bridgman* William Charles Bridgman (1887-) Amer. educator
- Brief* . . . Amer. periodical
- Brinig* . . . Myron Brinig (1900-) Amer. nov.
- Britain Today* Brit. monthly
- Britannia* Brit. monthly
- Britannica & Eve* Brit. monthly
- Britannica Bk. of the Yr.* Amer. yearbook
- Brit. Book News* Brit. monthly
- Brittain* . . . Robert Edward Brittain (1908-) Amer. writer
- Brodkey* . . . Harold Brodkey (fl. 1955) Amer. writer
- Brogan* . . . Sir Denis William Brogan (1900-1974) Brit. political scientist
- Bromfield* Louis Bromfield (1896-1956) Amer. writer
- Bromley* . . . Dorothy Dunbar Bromley (1896-) Amer. editor
- Brontë* . . . Charlotte Brontë (1816-1855) Eng. nov.
- Brooke* . . . Henry Brooke (1703?-1783) Irish author
- Rupert Brooke* Rupert Brooke (1887-1915) Eng. poet
- Brooklyn Daily Eagle* New York daily
- Brooks* . . . Van Wyck Brooks (1886-1963) Amer. author
- Cleanth Brooks* Cleanth Brooks (1906-) Amer. educator
- John Brooks* John Nixon Brooks (1920-) Amer. journalist
- Phillips Brooks* Phillips Brooks (1835-1893) Amer. bishop
- Brophy* . . . John Brophy (1899-1965) Eng. author
- Brougham* Henry Peter Brougham (1778-1868) Baron Brougham and Vaux. Scot. jurist
- Brown* . . . Kenneth Irving Brown (1896-) Amer. educator
- Douglas Brown* Douglas Brown (1921-1964) Eng. writer
- E. K. Brown* Edward Killoran Brown (1905-1951) Amer. (Canad.-born) educator
- F. M. Brown* Frederick Martin Brown (1903-) Amer. physiologist
- G. D. Brown* George Douglas Brown (1869-1902) Scot. nov.
- Harrison Brown* Harrison Scott Brown (1917-) Amer. educator
- J. M. Brown* John Mason Brown (1900-1969) Amer. drama critic
- J. W. Brown* June Wilcoxson Brown (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
- Lawrason Brown* Lawrason Brown (1871-1937) Amer. physician
- R. H. Brown* Ralph Hall Brown (1898-1948) Amer. educator
- Rollo Brown* Rollo Walter Brown (1880-1956) Amer. author
- R. W. Brown* Roger William Brown (1925-) Amer. psychologist
- T. E. Brown* Thomas Edward Brown (1830-1897) Brit. poet
- Browne* . . . Sir Thomas Browne (1605-1682) Eng. author
- Brownell* . . . William Crary Brownell (1851-1928) Amer. critic
- Baker Brownell* Baker Brownell (1887-1965) Amer. educator
- Browning* . . . Robert Browning (1812-1889) Eng. poet
- E. B. Browning* Elizabeth Barrett Browning (1806-1861) Eng. poet; wife of Robert
- Bruun* . . . (Arthur) Geoffrey Bruun (1898-) Amer. (Canad.-born) historian
- Bryant* . . . William Cullen Bryant (1794-1878) Amer. poet
- Bryce* . . . James Bryce (1838-1922) Viscount Bryce. Brit. jurist
- Bryson* . . . Lyman Lloyd Bryson (1888-1959) Amer. educator
- Buchan* . . . Sir John Buchan (1875-1940) 1st baron Tweedsmuir. Scot. author

- Buchanan Daniel Crump Buchanan (1892-) Amer. (Jap.-born) orientalist
- Alfred Buchanan (1874-1941) Austral. writer
- Andrew Buchanan (1897-) Brit. film producer
- R. W. Buchanan Robert Williams Buchanan (1841-1901) Brit. writer
- Buck . . . Pearl Buck (1892-1973) Amer. nov.
- Buckle . . . Henry Thomas Buckle (1821-1862) Eng. historian
- Bulletin . . . Bulletin of the Nat'l Catholic Educational Assoc.
- Bullett . . . Gerald William Bullett (1893-1958) Eng. author
- Bullock . . . Alan Louis Bullock (1914-) Eng. educator
- F. H. Bullock Florence Haxton Bullock (1891-) Amer. writer
- Bunche . . . Ralph Johnson Bunche (1904-1971) Amer. diplomat
- Bundy . . . McGeorge Bundy (1919-) Amer. educator
- Bunyan . . . John Bunyan (1628-1688) Eng. preacher
- Burghardt Henry D. Burghardt (fl. 1919) Amer. educator
- Burk . . . John Naglee Burk (1891-) Amer. writer
- Burke . . . Edmund Burke (1729-1797) Brit. statesman
- K. D. Burke Kenneth Duva Burke (1897-) Amer. critic
- Richard Burke Richard Burke (1886-) Amer. author
- Burkholder Edwin V. Burkholder (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Burks . . . Richard Voyles Burks (1913-) Amer. educator
- Burlingame (William) Roger Burlingame (1889-1967) Amer. author
- Burnet . . . Gilbert Burnet (1643-1715) Brit. bishop
- Burney . . . Frances Burney (1752-1840) Madame d'Arbly. Eng. nov.
- Burnham . . . James Burnham (1905-) Amer. author
- Burns . . . Robert Burns (1759-1796) Scot. poet
- Al Burns . . . Al Burns (fl. 1934) Amer. stamp editor
- Burroughs John Burroughs (1837-1921) Amer. naturalist
- W. S. Burroughs William Seward Burroughs (1914-) Amer. writer
- Burton . . . Robert Burton (1577-1640) Eng. author
- H. A. Burton Howard A. Burton (1916-) Amer. educator
- J. H. Burton John Hill Burton (1809-1881) Scot. historian
- R. F. Burton Sir Richard Francis Burton (1821-1890) Brit. explorer
- Bury . . . Lady Charlotte Susan Maria Bury (1775-1861) Eng. nov.
- Bush . . . (John Nash) Douglas Bush (1896-) Amer. (Canad.-born) educator
- Asahel Bush Asahel Bush (1824-1913) Amer. banker
- Vannevar Bush Vannevar Bush (1890-1974) Amer. engineer
- Butcher . . . Fanny Butcher (1888-) Amer. journalist
- Butler Samuel Butler (1612-1680) Eng. satirist
- Butler Samuel Butler (1835-1902) Eng. nov.
- Bp. Butler Bishop Joseph Butler (1692-1752) Eng. theologian
- J. R. Butler Judson Rea Butler (1895-) Amer. educator
- Butterfield Lyman Henry Butterfield (1909-) Amer. editor
- Donn Byrne Brian Oswald Donn-Byrne (1889-1928) Amer. nov.
- Byron . . . George Gordon Byron (1788-1824) Eng. poet
- Cabell . . . James Branch Cabell (1879-1958) Amer. author
- Cable . . . George Washington Cable (1844-1923) Amer. author
- Caffey . . . Francis Gordon Caffey (1868-1951) Amer. jurist
- Cain . . . Robert E. Cain (1938-) Amer. librarian
- Caine . . . Sir (Thomas Henry) Hall Caine (1853-1931) Eng. nov.
- Cairns . . . Huntington Cairns (1904-) Amer. lawyer
- Caldwell . . . Erskine Caldwell (1903-) Amer. nov.
- Calisher . . . Hortense Calisher (1911-) Amer. author
- Callaghan Morley Edward Callaghan (1903-) Canad. nov.
- Callender Guy Stevens Callender (1865-1915) Amer. educator
- Cameron . . . Norman Alexander Cameron (1896-) Amer. (Canad.-born) psychopathologist
- James Cameron James Cameron (1911-) Brit. journalist
- J. M. Cameron James Munro Cameron (1910-) Eng. educator
- Campbell . . . Thomas Campbell (1777-1844) Brit. poet
- Joseph Campbell Joseph Campbell (1904-) Amer. educator
- Camper . . . Shirley Camper (1922-) Amer. writer
- Campion . . . Sarah Campion (fl. 1949) Eng. author
- Canad. Canadian monthly
- Forum Canad. Jour. of Economics & Political Science Canadian quarterly
- Canby . . . Henry Seidel Canby (1878-1961) Amer. editor
- Cane . . . Melville Henry Cane 1879-1980) Amer. lawyer
- Canfield Leon Hardy Canfield (1886-) Amer. educator
- Dorothy Canfield Dorothy Canfield Fisher (1879-1958) Amer. nov.
- Cannan . . . Robert Keith Cannan (1894-1971) Amer. educator
- Canning . . . George Canning (1770-1827) Brit. statesman
- Victor Canning Victor Canning (1911-) Eng. author
- Capern . . . Edward Capern (1819-1894) Eng. poet
- Capote . . . Truman Capote (1924-) Amer. author
- Cardozo . . . Benjamin Nathan Cardozo (1870-1938) Amer. jurist
- Carey . . . Rosa Nouchette Carey (1840-1909) Eng. writer
- Cargill . . . Oscar Cargill (1898-1972) Amer. educator
- Car Life . . . Amer. publication
- Carlyle . . . Thomas Carlyle (1795-1881) Scot. essayist
- J. W. Carlyle Jane Baillie Welsh Carlyle (1801-1866) Scot. writer; wife of Thomas
- Carnegie Mag. Carnegie Institute of Technology
- Carr . . . Lowell Juillard Carr (1885-) Amer. educator
- J. D. Carr John Dickson Carr (1906-1977) Amer. author
- Maurice Carr Maurice Carr (1913-) Brit. journalist
- R. K. Carr Robert Kenneth Carr (1908-1979) Amer. educator
- Carrel . . . Alexis Carrel (1873-1944) French surgeon
- Lewis Carroll pseud. of Charles Lutwidge Dodgson (1832-1898) Eng. storywriter
- Carruth . . . Hayden Carruth (1921-) Amer. poet
- Carruthers (Alexander) Douglas (Mitchell) Carruthers (1881-1962) Eng. naturalist
- Carson . . . Saul Carson (1895?-1971) Amer. writer
- Carter . . . George Goldsmith Carter (1911-) Brit. author
- Hodding Carter Hodding Carter (1907-1972) Amer. editor
- H. W. Carter Henry William Carter (fl. 1954) Brit. businessman
- John Carter John Carter (1905-1975) Eng. bibliographer
- Cary . . . (Arthur) Joyce (Lunel) Cary (1888-1957) Brit. nov.
- Cases & Materials on International Law New York (1950)
- Casey . . . Genevieve Mary Casey (1916-) Amer. librarian
- Caspary . . . Vera Caspary (1904-) Amer. writer
- Cassidy . . . Claudia Cassidy (fl. 1954) Amer. music and drama critic
- Cater . . . Douglass Cater (1923-) Amer. editor
- Cather . . . Willa Sibert Cather (1873-1947) Amer. nov.
- Catton . . . Bruce Catton (1899-1978) Amer. writer
- Cecil . . . Lord (Edward Christian) David Cecil (1902-) Eng. biographer
- Century . . . The Century Illustrated Monthly Magazine Amer. periodical
- Cerf . . . Bennett Alfred Cerf (1898-1971) Amer. publisher
- Walter Cerf Walter Cerf (1907-) Ger.-born educator
- Chafee . . . Zechariah Chafee (1885-1957) Amer. lawyer
- Chalmers . . . George Chalmers (1742-1825) Scot. historian
- Chamberlain John Rensselaer Chamberlain (1903-) Amer. critic
- H. S. Chamberlain Houston Stewart Chamberlain (1855-1927) Ger. (Eng.-born) writer
- L. M. Chamberlain Leo Martin Chamberlain (1896-) Amer. educator
- Chambers Ephraim Chambers (d. 1740) Eng. encyclopedist
- Chandler . . . Raymond Thornton Chandler (1888-1959) Amer. author
- Channing d. 1842 William Ellery Channing (1780-1842) Amer. clergyman
- Channing d. 1901 William Ellery Channing (1818-1901) Amer. poet
- Chapman Stuart Webster Chapman (1907-) Amer. educator
- Arnold Chapman (George) Arnold Chapman (1917-) Amer. educator
- Chapman-Huston Desmond Chapman-Huston (1884-1952) Brit. author
- Charles I. Charles I of England (1600-1649); king (1625-49)
- Charteris . . . Leslie Charteris (1907-) Amer. (Brit.-born) author
- Chase . . . Stuart Chase (1888-) Amer. economist
- F. H. Chase Frank Herbert Chase (1870-1930) Amer. librarian
- Chatham . . . William Pitt (1708-1778) 1st earl of Chatham. Eng. statesman
- Chaucer . . . Geoffrey Chaucer (1340?-1400) Eng. poet
- Cheek . . . Leslie Cheek (1908-) Amer. museum director
- Cheever . . . John Cheever (1912-1982) Amer. writer
- Chenery . . . William Ludlow Chenery (1884-1974) Amer. publisher
- Cheney . . . Sheldon Warren Cheney (1886-1980) Amer. critic
- Cherin . . . David Cherin, N. Y. Times Mag. (1955)
- Chesterfield Philip Dormer Stanhope (1694-1773) 4th earl of Chesterfield. Eng. statesman
- Chesterton Gilbert Keith Chesterton (1874-1936) Eng. writer
- Cheyne . . . Thomas Kelley Cheyne (1841-1915) Eng. theologian
- Cheyney . . . Edward Potts Cheyney (1861-1947) Amer. historian
- Chidsey . . . Donald Barr Chidsey (1902-) Amer. author
- Child . . . Francis James Child (1825-1896) Amer. scholar
- Childe . . . Vere Gordon Childe (1892-1957) Eng. anthropologist
- Childs . . . George William Childs (1829-1894) Amer. publisher
- M. W. Childs Marquis William Childs (1903-) Amer. journalist
- Chilton . . . Alexander Wheeler Chilton (1886-) Amer. army officer
- Chippendale Harry Allen Chippendale (1879-1953) Amer. sea captain
- Chisholm . . . Sir Roderick Milton Chisholm (1916-1967) Amer. educator
- I-Kua Chou I-Kua Chou (fl. 1955) Chinese-born educator
- Christian Century Amer. weekly
- Christian Science Monitor Boston daily
- Christie . . . Agatha (Mary Clarissa) Christie (1891-1976) Brit. writer
- Chronica Botanica Amer. bimonthly
- Chubb . . . Mary Alford Chubb (1903-) Eng. writer

- Churchill* . . . Winston Churchill (1871-1947) Amer. nov.
- Charles Churchill* Charles Churchill (1731-1764) Eng. satirist
- Sir Winston Churchill* Sir Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill (1874-1965) Brit. statesman
- Ciardi* . . . John Anthony Ciardi (1916-) Amer. poet
- Cibber* . . . Colley Cibber (1671-1757) Eng. dramatist
- Cilley* . . . George E. Cilley (fl. 1953) Amer. army officer
- Clare* . . . John Clare (1793-1864) Eng. poet
- Clarendon* Edward Hyde (1609-1674) 1st earl of Clarendon, Eng. historian
- Clark* . . . Joseph Thomas Clark (1911-) Amer. educator
- Eliot Clark* Eliot Candee Clark (1883-1980) Amer. artist
- Grenville Clark* Grenville Clark (1882-1967) Amer. lawyer
- J. W. Clark* John Williams Clark (1907-) Amer. educator
- Kenneth Clark* Sir Kenneth McKenzie Clark (1903-1983) Eng. art connoisseur
- Michael Clark* Michael K. Clark (1919-) Amer. journalist
- T. D. Clark* Thomas Dionysius Clark (1903-) Amer. historian
- W. G. Clark* William George Clark (1821-1878) Eng. scholar
- W. V. T. Clark* Walter Van Tilburg Clark (1909-1971) Amer. author
- Clarke* . . . John Smith Clarke (1885-1959) Scot. author
- A. C. Clarke* Arthur Charles Clarke (1917-) Eng. author
- Cowden Clarke* Charles Cowden Clarke (1787-1877) Eng. scholar
- Clemensen* Jessie Williams Clemensen (1901-) Amer. educator
- Clement* . . . William C. Clement, Philosophical Review (1953)
- Cleveland* (Stephen) Grover Cleveland (1837-1908) 22d and 24th president of the U. S.
- Cleveland Plain Dealer* Cleveland daily
- Clift* . . . John Russell Clift (fl. 1955) Amer. writer
- Clinton* . . . David Clinton, The Nation (1953)
- Clodd* . . . Edward Clodd (1840-1930) Eng. banker
- Cloete* . . . (Edward Fairly) Stuart (Graham) Cloete (1897-1976) So. African nov.
- Cloud* . . . Wilbur Frank Cloud (1895-) Amer. engineer
- Clough* . . . Arthur Hugh Clough (1819-1861) Eng. poet
- Clurman* . . . Harold Edgar Clurman (1901-1980) Amer. stage director
- Coast Artillery Jour.* Amer. bimonthly
- Coates* . . . Robert Myron Coates (1897-1973) Amer. author
- Cobb* . . . Irvin Shrewsbury Cobb (1876-1944) Amer. humorist
- Cobban* . . . Alfred Cobban (1901-1968) Eng. educator
- Cobbett* . . . William Cobbett (1763-1835) Eng. political writer
- Cockburn* Stewart Cockburn (fl. 1954) Austral. writer
- Cogan* . . . Thomas Cogan (1736-1818) Eng. philosopher
- Cogley* . . . John Cogley (1916-1976) Amer. journalist
- Cohen* . . . Morris Raphael Cohen (1880-1947) Amer. (Russ.-born) philosopher
- A. A. Cohen* Arthur Allen Cohen (1928-) Amer. author
- Cohn* . . . David Lewis Cohn (1896-) Amer. writer
- Coke* . . . Sir Edward Coke (1552-1634) Eng. jurist
- Coker* . . . Robert Ervin Coker (1876-1967) Amer. zoologist
- F. W. Coker* Francis William Coker (1878-1963) Amer. educator
- Colby* . . . Elbridge Colby (1891-) Amer. author
- Cole* . . . Arthur Charles Cole (1886-1976) Amer. historian
- Taylor Cole* Robert Taylor Cole (1905-) Amer. educator
- Colegrove* Kenneth Wallace Colegrove (1886-1975) Amer. educator
- Coleman* . . . Emily Coleman (fl. 1949) Amer. music and dance editor
- Coleridge* . . . Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772-1834) Eng. poet
- Collegiate Law Dict.* compiled by J. J. Lewis (1925)
- Collet* . . . Robert Collet, The Score and I.M.A. Mag. (1954)
- Collie* . . . Robert Collie (fl. 1964) Amer. clergyman
- Collier* . . . Theodore Collier (1874-1963) Amer. historian
- Collier's Yr. Bk.* Amer. yearbook
- Collins* . . . Frederic William Collins (1906-) Amer. newspaperman
- Tom Collins* pseud. of Joseph Furphy (1843-1912) Austral. author
- Wilkie Collins* (William) Wilkie Collins (1824-1889) Eng. nov.
- Collis* . . . Ernest Harry Collis (fl. 1948) Austral. writer
- Colum* . . . Padraic Colum (1881-1972) Amer. (Irish-born) author
- Colvin* . . . Sir Sidney Colvin (1845-1927) Eng. critic
- Combat Forces Jour.* Amer. monthly
- Comfort* . . . Alexander Comfort (1920-) Brit. author
- Commager* Henry Steele Commager (1902-) Amer. historian
- Commentary* Amer. monthly
- Commins* . . . Saxe Commins (1892-1958) Amer. editor
- The Commonwealth Compendium of Meteorology* Amer. Meteorological Society
- Compton* . . . Arthur Holly Compton (1892-1962) Amer. physicist
- Comstock* . . . Alzada Peckham Comstock (1888-1960) Amer. educator
- Conant* . . . James Bryant Conant (1893-1978) Amer. educator
- Congressional Record* U. S. periodical
- Congreve* . . . William Congreve (1670-1729) Eng. dramatist
- Conington* John Conington (1825-1869) Eng. translator
- Conklin* . . . Edwin Grant Conklin (1863-1952) Amer. biologist
- Connally* . . . F. G. Connally, The New Scholasticism (1953)
- Connolly* . . . Cyril Vernon Connolly (1903-1974) Brit. journalist
- Conrad* . . . Joseph Conrad (1857-1924) Brit. nov.
- Barnaby Conrad* Barnaby Conrad (1922-) Amer. author
- Contemporary Review* Brit. monthly
- Conway* . . . William Martin Conway (1856-1937) 1st baron. Eng. explorer
- Cook* . . . Captain James Cook (1728-1779) Eng. explorer
- R. L. Cook* Reginald Lansing Cook (1903-) Amer. educator
- T. I. Cook* Thomas Ira Cook (1907-1976) Amer. (Eng.-born) educator
- Cooke* . . . (Alfred) Alistair Cooke (1903-) Amer. (Brit.-born) writer
- E. V. Cooke* Edmund Vance Cooke (1866-1932) Amer. author
- M. C. Cooke* Mordecai Cubitt Cooke (1825-1913) Brit. mycologist
- R. P. Cooke* Richard Platt Cooke (1904-) Amer. writer
- Coolidge* . . . Calvin Coolidge (1872-1933) 30th president of the U.S.
- Coon* . . . Carleton Stevens Coon (1904-1981) Amer. anthropologist
- Coons* . . . Hannibal Coons (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Cooper* . . . James Fenimore Cooper (1789-1851) Amer. nov.
- Charles Cooper* Charles Cooper, London Calling, (1954)
- Copland* . . . Aaron Copland (1900-) Amer. composer
- Cordell* . . . Richard Albert Cordell (1896-) Amer. educator
- Corke* . . . Hilary Corke (fl. 1955) Eng. educator
- Corlett* . . . William Thomas Corlett (1854-1948) Amer. physician
- Corry* . . . James Alexander Corry (1899-) Canad. educator
- Corsini* . . . Ray Pierre Corsini (fl. 1954) Amer. author
- Cort* . . . David Cort (1904-) Amer. editor
- Corwin* . . . Edward Samuel Corwin (1878-1963) Amer. educator
- Costain* . . . Thomas Bertram Costain (1895-1965) Amer. (Canad.-born) writer
- Cotgrave* . . . John Cotgrave (fl. 1655) Eng. compiler
- Cotton* . . . Nathaniel Cotton (1705-1788) Eng. physician
- C. A. Cotton* Charles Andrew Cotton (1885-) N. Z. geologist
- Cottrell* . . . Leonard Slater Cottrell (1899-) Amer. psychologist
- Coulter* . . . Ellis Merton Coulter (1890-) Amer. historian
- Coulton* . . . George Gordon Coulton (1858-1947) Eng. historian
- Country Life* Brit. weekly
- The Countryman* Brit. quarterly
- Cournos* . . . John Cournos (1881-1966) Amer. (Russ.-born) writer
- Cousins* . . . Norman Cousins, (1912-) Amer. editor
- Coutts* . . . Alan John Coutts (fl. 1950) Austral. dramatist
- Cowen* . . . Robert Churchill Cowen (1927-) Amer. writer
- Cowie* . . . Alexander Cowie (1896-1978) Amer. educator
- Cowley* . . . Abraham Cowley (1618-1667) Eng. poet
- Malcolm Cowley* Malcolm Cowley (1898-) Amer. literary critic
- Cowper* . . . William Cowper (1731-1800) Eng. poet
- Cox* . . . Isaac Joslin Cox (1873-) Amer. educator
- Coxe* . . . Louis Osborne Coxe (1918-) Amer. educator
- Cozzens* . . . James Gould Cozzens (1903-1978) Amer. author
- Crabbe* . . . George Crabbe (1754-1832) Eng. poet
- Craig* . . . Gerald Spellman Craig (1893-) Amer. educator
- H. A. L. Craig* H. A. L. Craig (fl. 1955) Irish writer
- Cram* . . . Ralph Adams Cram (1863-1942) Amer. architect
- Crane* . . . Stephen Crane (1871-1900) Amer. writer
- Hart Crane* Hart Crane (1899-1932) Amer. poet
- Milton Crane* Milton Crane (1917-) Amer. educator
- Cranston* . . . Maurice William Cranston (1920-) Eng. author
- Crashaw* . . . Richard Crashaw (1613?-1649) Eng. poet
- Crawford* . . . Julia Crawford (1800-1885) Irish writer
- W. R. Crawford* William Rex Crawford (1898-) Amer. educator
- Crawley* . . . Aidan Merivale Crawley (1908-) Eng. journalist
- The Critic* Amer. periodical merged 1906 with Putnam's Monthly
- Crofts* . . . Freeman Wills Crofts (1879-1957) Irish writer
- Croly* . . . Herbert Croly (1869-1930) Amer. editor
- Cronin* . . . Archibald Joseph Cronin (1896-1981) Eng. nov.
- Cronk* . . . Paul B. Cronk (1896-) Amer. Coast Guard officer
- Cronyn* . . . George William Cronyn (1888-1969) Amer. writer
- Crops in Peace and War* U.S. Dept. of Agriculture Yearbook
- Crosby* . . . Frances Jane Crosby known as Fanny (1820-1915) Amer. hymn writer
- Cross* . . . John W. Cross (1909-) Amer. dog fancier
- Crossman* Richard Howard Stafford Crossman (1907-1974) Brit. politician
- Crothers* . . . Samuel McChord Crothers (1857-1927) Amer. clergyman
- Crowley* . . . Francis Joseph Crowley (1902-) Amer. educator
- Crowther* . . . Bosley Crowther (1905-1981) Amer. journalist

- Crozier* . . . Brian Crozier (1918-) Brit. (Austral.-born) writer
- Cruickshanks* Evelyn G. Cruickshanks (1930-) Eng. historian
- Cruise* . . . William Cruise (d. 1824) Brit. legal writer
- Cudworth* Ralph Cudworth (1617-1688) Eng. philosopher
- Cummings* Edward Estlin Cummings (1894-1962) Amer. poet
- Ridgely Cummings* Ridgely Cummings (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
- Cunnington* Cecil Willett Cunnington (1878-1961) Eng. physician
- Curran* . . . Charles Howard Curran (1894-1972) Canad. entomologist
- Current Biog.* Amer. periodical
- Current History* Amer. monthly
- Currier* . . . Charles Warren Currier (1857-1918) Amer. bishop
- Curtis* . . . Louis Woodson Curtis (1885-) Amer. educator
- Cushing* . . . Harvey Cushing (1869-1939) Amer. surgeon
- Cushman* . . . Robert Eugene Cushman (1889-1969) Amer. political scientist
- C. F. Cushman* Clarissa Fairchild Cushman (fl. 1942) Amer. writer
- H. E. Cushman* Herbert Ernest Cushman (1865-1944) Amer. educator
- Cutforth* . . . René Cutforth (1912-) Brit. reporter
- Cutsforth* . . . Thomas Darl Cutsforth (1893-) Amer. psychologist
- Dahl* . . . Roald Dahl (1916-) Brit. author
- Daifuku* . . . Hiroshi Daifuku (1920-) Amer. anthropologist
- Daily Express* London newspaper
- Daily Mail* London newspaper
- Daily Telegraph* London newspaper
- Damon* . . . Samuel Foster Damon (1893-1971) Amer. educator
- Dana* . . . Richard Henry Dana (1815-1882) Amer. author
- Julian Dana* Julian Dana (1907-) Amer. writer
- Dance Observer* Amer. monthly
- Clemence Dane* pseud. of Winifred Ashton (1888-1965) Eng. nov.
- Daniel* . . . Samuel Daniel (1562-1619) Eng. poet
- Clifton Daniel* (Elbert) Clifton Daniel (1912-) Amer. newspaperman
- Darrow* . . . Karl Kelchner Darrow (1891-) Amer. physicist
- Darwin* . . . Charles Robert Darwin (1809-1882) Eng. naturalist
- Bernard Darwin* Bernard Darwin (1876-1961) Eng. golf correspondent
- Davenant* . . . Sir William Davenant (1606-1668) Eng. poet
- Davenport* Marcia Davenport (1903-) Amer. author
- Basil Davenport* Basil Davenport (1905-1966) Amer. anthropologist
- Davidson* . . . Donald Grady Davidson (1893-1963) Amer. educator
- Avram Davidson* Avram Davidson (1923-) Amer. writer
- L. J. Davidson* Levette Jay Davidson (1894-1957) Amer. educator
- Davies* . . . Arthur Powell Davies (1902-1957) Amer. (Eng.-born) clergyman
- C. M. Davies* Charles Maurice Davies (1828-1910) Brit. author
- Robertson Davies* Robertson Davies (1913-) Canad. writer
- W. H. Davies* William Henry Davies (1871-1940) Brit. poet
- Davis* . . . Elmer Holmes Davis (1890-1958) Amer. newscaster
- A. K. Davis* Arthur Kyle Davis (1897-1972) Amer. educator
- A. V. Davis* A. V. Davis (fl. 1953) Eng. schoolteacher
- C. B. Davis* Clyde Brion Davis (1894-1962) Amer. nov.
- D. S. Davis* Dorothy Salisbury Davis (1916-) Amer. author
- H. E. Davis* Harold Eugene Davis (1902-) Amer. educator
- H. L. Davis* Harold Lenoir Davis (1896-1960) Amer. writer
- H. M. Davis* Harry Meyer Davis (1911-1949) Amer. scientist
- J. L. Davis* Joe Lee Davis (1906-1974) Amer. educator
- Kingsley Davis* Kingsley Davis (1908-) Amer. sociologist
- K. S. Davis* Kenneth Sydney Davis (1912-) Amer. author
- R. G. Davis* Robert Gorham Davis (1908-) Amer. educator
- R. H. Davis* Richard Harding Davis (1864-1916) Amer. writer
- Davy* . . . Sir Humphry Davy (1778-1829) Eng. scientist
- Dawes* . . . Chester Laurens Dawes (1886-) Amer. electrical engineer
- Dawson* . . . Virginia Douglas Dawson (1909-) Amer. author
- R. M. Dawson* Robert MacGregor Dawson (1895-1958) Canad. educator
- Day* . . . Clarence Shepard Day (1874-1935) Amer. author
- Deakin* . . . Frederick William Dampier Deakin (1913-) Eng. educator
- Dean* . . . Vera Micheles Dean (1903-1972) Amer. (Russ.-born) scholar
- Deasy* . . . Mary Margaret Deasy (1914-1978) Amer. author
- Defoe* . . . Daniel Defoe (1659?-1731) Eng. nov.
- de Kiewiet* Cornelis Willem de Kiewiet (1902-) Amer. (Du.-born) educator
- Dekker* . . . Thomas Dekker (1572?-1632) Eng. playwright
- de Kruijf* . . . Paul Henry de Kruijf (1890-1971) Amer. bacteriologist and author
- de Laguna* Frederica Annis de Laguna (1906-) Amer. anthropologist
- de la Mare* Walter de la Mare (1873-1956) Eng. author
- Deland* . . . Margaret Wade Deland (1857-1945) Amer. nov.
- Dell* . . . Floyd Dell (1887-1969) Amer. nov.
- De Morgan* William Frend De Morgan (1839-1917) Eng. nov. and artist
- Denman* . . . Thomas Denman (1779-1854) 1st baron Denman. Eng. judge
- J. V. Denney* Joseph Villiers Denney (1862-1935) Amer. educator
- Dent* . . . Lewis Dent (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
- De Quincey* Thomas De Quincey (1785-1859) Eng. author
- L. G. Deruisseau* pseud. of Anny Latour q.v.
- de Tocqueville* Alexis de Tocqueville (1805-1859) French political writer
- Deutsch* . . . Albert Deutsch (1905-1961) Amer. author
- Babette Deutsch* Babette Deutsch (1895-) Amer. writer
- Deutscher* . . . Isaac Deutscher (1907-1967) Brit. (Pol.-born) writer
- Deutschman* Paul E. Deutschman (fl. 1955) Amer. foreign correspondent
- Devlin* . . . Christopher Devlin (1907-1961) Eng. clergyman
- Devoe* . . . Alan Taylor Devoe (1909-1955) Amer. naturalist
- De Voto* . . . Bernard Augustine De Voto (1897-1955) Amer. author
- Dewey* . . . John Dewey (1859-1952) Amer. philosopher
- T. E. Dewey* Thomas Edmund Dewey (1902-1971) Amer. politician
- The Dial* . . . Amer. monthly, 1880-1929
- Diamant* . . . Gertrude Diamant (1901-1969) Amer. author
- Dibdin* . . . Charles Dibdin (1745-1814) Eng. songwriter
- Dick* . . . Sir Alexander Dick (1703-1785) Scot. physician
- Everett Dick* Everett Dick (1898-) Amer. educator
- Dickens* . . . Charles (John Huffam) Dickens (1812-1870) Eng. nov.
- Dickinson* . . . Goldsworthy Lowes Dickinson (1862-1932) Eng. essayist
- Emily Dickinson* Emily Elizabeth Dickinson (1830-1886) Amer. poet
- Dict. of Occupational Titles* U.S. Employment Service
- Diehl* . . . Edith Diehl (1876-1953) Amer. hand bookbinder
- Diez de Medina* Fernando Diez de Medina (1908-) Bolivian industrialist
- Dilliard* . . . Irving Dilliard (1904-) Amer. writer
- Dillon* . . . J. C. Dillon (fl. 1953) Canad. forest ranger
- Dimnet* . . . Ernest Dimnet (1869-1954) French abbé
- Dimond* . . . Stanley Ellwood Dimond (1905-) Amer. educator
- Dingle* . . . Herbert Dingle (1890-1978) Eng. educator
- Dinkler* . . . Erich Dinkler (1909-) Ger. theologian
- Dinneen* . . . Joseph Francis Dinneen (1897-) Amer. newspaperman
- Dinsmore* Charles Allen Dinsmore (1860-1941) Amer. clergyman
- DiSalle* . . . Michael Vincent DiSalle (1908-) Amer. politician
- Discovery* No. 3 Collection of new writings
- Diseases of Cattle* U.S. Bureau of Animal Industry
- Disraeli* . . . Benjamin Disraeli (1804-1881) 1st earl of Beaconsfield. Brit. statesman
- D'Israeli* . . . Isaac D'Israeli (1766-1848) Eng. writer; father of Benjamin Disraeli
- Ditmars* . . . Raymond Lee Ditmars (1876-1942) Amer. naturalist
- Dixon* . . . William Macneile Dixon (1866-1946) Eng. educator
- Dobie* . . . James Frank Dobie (1888-1964) Amer. folklorist
- Dobson* . . . (Henry) Austin Dobson (1840-1921) Eng. poet
- Dobzhansky* Theodosius Dobzhansky (1900-1975) Amer. (Russ.-born) zoologist
- Dock Leaves* Brit. review incorporated 1950 in The Anglo-Welsh Review (Pembroke Dock, Wales)
- Dodd* . . . Marion C. Dodd (fl. 1947) Amer. editor
- Dodge* . . . David Dodge (1910-) Amer. author
- Dodson* . . . Kenneth MacKenzie Dodson (1907-) Amer. sea captain
- Doherty* . . . Edward Joseph Doherty (1890-1975) Amer. editor
- Dole* . . . Charles Fletcher Dole (1845-1927) Amer. clergyman
- Dollard* . . . John Dollard (1900-1981) Amer. psychologist
- Donne* . . . John Donne (1573-1631) Eng. poet
- Donovan* . . . Robert John Donovan (1912-) Amer. journalist
- Dorrance* . . . Anne Dorrance (1873-1951) Amer. author
- Dos Passos* John Roderigo Dos Passos (1896-1970) Amer. writer
- Doty* . . . Robert Clark Doty (1915-1974) Amer. journalist
- Douglas* . . . Lloyd Cassel Douglas (1877-1951) Amer. nov.
- Lewis Douglas* Lewis Williams Douglas (1894-1974) Amer. businessman
- M. S. Douglas* Marjory Stoneman Douglas (1890-) Amer. author
- Norman Douglas* Norman Douglas (1868-1952) Eng. author
- P. H. Douglas* Paul Howard Douglas (1892-1976) Amer. senator
- W. O. Douglas* William Orville Douglas (1898-1980) Amer. jurist
- Dowden* . . . Edward Dowden (1843-1913) Irish literary critic
- Dowdeswell* Wilfred Hogarth Dowdeswell (1914-) Brit. ecologist
- Dowson* . . . Ernest Christopher Dowson (1867-1900) Eng. poet
- Doyle* . . . Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859-1930) Brit. author
- Drake* . . . Francis Vivian Drake (1894-1971) Amer. (Eng.-born) editor
- Draper* . . . William Henry Draper (1894-1974) Amer. economist
- Dreiser* . . . Theodore Dreiser (1871-1945) Amer. nov.
- Drew* . . . Elizabeth A. Drew (1887-1965) Amer. literary critic
- Drinker* . . . Henry Sandwith Drinker (1880-1965) Amer. lawyer
- Driscoll* . . . David Driscoll (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
- Drummond* Henry Drummond (1851-1897) Scot. writer

- William Drummond* . . . William Drummond (1858-1649) Scot. poet Dryden . . . John Dryden (1631-1700) Eng. poet Duffus . . . Robert Luther Duffus (1888-1972) Amer. author
C. E. Dull . . . Charles Elwood Dull (1878-1947) Amer. educator Dulles . . . Foster Rhea Dulles (1900-1970) Amer. author du Maurier . . . George Louis Palmella Busson du Maurier (1834-1896) Brit. artist and nov.
Duncan-Kemp . . . Alice Monkton Duncan-Kemp (fl. 1935) Austral. author Dunglison . . . Robley Dunglison (1798-1869) Eng. physician
Dunham . . . William Huse Dunham (1901-) Amer. educator
C. C. Dunsmoor . . . Clarence Clifford Dunsmoor (1899-) Amer. educator Dun's Review . . . Amer. monthly Durant . . . William James Durant (1885-1981) Amer. educator
Durkin . . . Peggy Durkin, N. Y. Times Mag. (1955)
Tillman Durdin . . . Tillman Durdin, N. Y. Times (1954)
Durrell . . . Lawrence George Durrell (1912-) Brit. writer Dworkin . . . Martin S. Dworkin (fl. 1954) Amer. writer Eastman . . . Max Forrester Eastman (1883-1969) Amer. editor
Easton . . . David Easton (1917-) Amer. educator Eaton . . . Walter Prichard Eaton (1878-1957) Amer. educator Eccles . . . Marriner Stoddard Eccles (1890-1977) Amer. economist Economist . . . Brit. weekly
Eddington . . . Sir Arthur Stanley Eddington (1882-1944) Eng. astronomer Edgeworth . . . Maria Edgeworth (1767-1849) Brit. nov.
Edinburgh Review . . . Scot. journal Edman . . . Irwin Edman (1896-1954) Amer. educator
Edmunds . . . Henry M. Edmunds, Land Reborn (1953) Educational Review . . . Amer. monthly Education Digest . . . Amer. monthly Edwards . . . John Edwards (1637-1716) Eng. Calvinist Ehrmann . . . Henry Walter Ehrmann (1908-) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator Einstein . . . Albert Einstein (1879-1955) Amer. (Ger.-born) physicist Eisenhower . . . Dwight David Eisenhower (1890-1969) 34th president of the U.S.
M. Barnard Eldershaw . . . pseud. of Marjorie Faith Barnard (1897-) and Flora Sydney Patricia Eldershaw (1897-) Austral. writers
Eliot . . . Charles William Eliot (1834-1926) Amer. educator George Eliot . . . pseud. of Mary Ann Evans (1819-1880) Eng. nov.
T. S. Eliot . . . Thomas Stearns Eliot (1888-1965) Brit. (Amer.-born) poet and critic Elisofon . . . Eliot Elisofon (1911-1973) Amer. photographer Ellery . . . Reginald Spencer Ellery (fl. 1945) Austral. psychiatrist Ellis . . . (Henry) Havelock Ellis (1859-1939) Eng. psychologist
F. H. Ellis . . . Frank Hale Ellis (1916-) Amer. educator Ellison . . . Ralph Waldo Ellison (1914-) Amer. author
Jerome Ellison . . . Jerome Ellison (1907-) Amer. editor
Elton . . . Sir Charles Abraham Elton (1878-1853) Eng. author
J. F. Embree . . . John Fee Embree (1908-) Amer. social anthropologist Emerson . . . Ralph Waldo Emerson (1803-1882) Amer. essayist Rupert Emerson . . . Rupert Emerson (1899-1979) Amer. educator Emporia Gazette . . . Emporia (Kansas) daily Empson . . . William Empson (1906-) Eng. critic Emrich . . . Duncan Emrich (1908-) Amer. writer Encore . . . Amer. monthly Encounter . . . Brit. monthly Encyc. . . . Encyclopedia Americana Americana
Encyc. Brit. . . . Encyclopaedia Britannica
Endeavour . . . Brit. quarterly Engel . . . Leonard Engel (1916-1964) Amer. journalist Engle . . . Paul Hamilton Engle (1908-) Amer. poet
T. L. Engle . . . Thelburn LaRoy Engle (1901-) Amer. educator English Digest . . . Brit. monthly Enright . . . Elizabeth Enright (1909-1968) Amer. author and illustrator Enters . . . Angna Enters (1907-) Amer. dancer Epoch . . . Amer. quarterly Ericson . . . George Ericson (1883-) Amer. editor
Ernst . . . Morris Leopold Ernst (1888-1976) Amer. lawyer Erskine . . . John Erskine (1879-1951) Amer. educator
Thomas Erskine . . . Thomas Erskine (1788-1870) Scot. biblical scholar Ertz . . . Susan Ertz (fl. 1938) Brit. writer Ervine . . . St. John Greer Ervine (1883-1971) Brit. author Etherege . . . Sir. George Etherege (1635?-1691) Eng. dramatist Eurich . . . Alvin Christian Eurich (1902-) Amer. educator
Evans . . . Sir (B.) Ifor Evans (1899-) Eng. educator Bergen Evans . . . Bergen Baldwin Evans (1904-1978) Amer. educator Ernestine Evans . . . Ernestine Evans (1889-1967) Amer. author
L. B. Evans . . . Lawrence Boyd Evans (1870-1928) Amer. lawyer
Rowland Evans . . . Rowland Evans (1921-) Amer. columnist Evelyn . . . John Evelyn (1620-1706) Eng. diarist Everett . . . Edward Everett (1794-1865) Amer. clergyman Everybody's Mag. . . . Amer. periodical Evet . . . Robert Evett (1922-1975) Amer. editor
Ewer . . . William Norman Ewer (1885-) Brit. writer Expose of Societ Espionage . . . U.S. Bureau of Investigation Expositor . . . Brit. monthly
E. S. Eyster . . . Elvin S. Eyster (1902-) Amer. educator Fadiman . . . Clifton Fadiman (1904-) Amer. writer Fairchild . . . David Grandison Fairchild (1869-1954) Amer. botanist Fairless . . . Benjamin Franklin Fairless (1890-1962) Amer. industrialist Falk . . . Werner David Falk (fl. 1953) German-born educator Farmer and Stock-Breeder . . . Brit. weekly Farmer's Weekly . . . Bloemfontein (So. Africa) newspaper Farrar . . . Frederic William Farrar (1831-1903) Eng. clergyman Farrell . . . James Thomas Farrell (1904-1979) Amer. nov.
Cliff Farrell . . . Cliff Farrell (fl. 1957) Amer. author Farrelly . . . John Farrelly (fl. 1949) Amer. writer Farrington . . . Benjamin Farrington (1891-1974) Eng. educator Fast . . . Howard Melvin Fast (1914-) Amer. author Fathauer . . . George Harry Fathauer (1918-) Amer. anthropologist Faulkner . . . William Faulkner or Faulkner (1897-1962) Amer. nov.
H. U. Faulkner . . . Harold Underwood Faulkner (1890-1968) Amer. educator Fay . . . Sidney Bradshaw Fay (1876-1967) Amer. historian Fearing . . . Franklin Smith Fearing (1892-1962) Amer. educator
Kenneth Fearing . . . Kenneth Fearing (1902-1961) Amer. author Federal Probat . . . U.S. Govt. quarterly journal Feis . . . Herbert Feis (1893-1972) Amer. historian Feld . . . Rose Caroline Feld (1895-) Amer. (Romanian-born) author Fellows . . . Otis Edward Fellows (1908-) Amer. educator Ferber . . . Edna Ferber (1887-1968) Amer. writer
Ferguson . . . John DeLancey Ferguson (1888-1966) Amer. educator
C. W. Ferguson . . . Charles Wright Ferguson (1901-) Amer. editor
Ferguson . . . Harvey Ferguson (1890-1971) Amer. writer
Ferrell . . . William F. Ferrell (fl. 1947) Amer. clergyman Ferril . . . Thomas Hornsby Ferril (1896-) Amer. poet Feuer . . . Lewis Samuel Feuer (1912-) Amer. educator Fforde . . . Sir Arthur (Frederic Brownlow) Fforde (1900-) Brit. educator Fiedler . . . Leslie Aaron Fiedler (1917-) Amer. educator Field . . . Eugene Field (1850-1895) Amer. poet Field-Fisher . . . Thomas Gilbert Field-Fisher, Animals and the Law (1950) Fielding . . . Henry Fielding (1707-1754) Eng. nov.
Temple Fielding . . . Temple Hornaday Fielding (1913-1983) Amer. author Fiinburgh . . . Wilfred Finburgh (1919-1958) Eng. statesman Financial Times . . . London daily
Richard Findlater . . . pseud. of Kenneth Bruce Findlater Bain (1921-) Eng. writer Fine . . . Benjamin Fine (1905-1975) Amer. educator Finlay . . . Sir Campbell Kirkman Finlay (1875-1937) Eng. jurist Firth . . . Raymond William Firth (1901-) Eng. anthropologist Fischer . . . Louis Fischer (1896-1970) Amer. journalist Fish . . . Carl Russell Fish (1876-1932) Amer. historian Fishbein . . . Morris Fishbein (1889-1976) Amer. physician Fisher . . . Vardis Fisher (1895-1968) Amer. author
C. B. Fisher . . . Charles Boddy Fisher (1908-) Canad. engineer
D. M. Fisher . . . Douglas Mason Fisher (1919-) Canad. librarian
W. B. Fisher . . . William Bayne Fisher (1916-) Eng. geographer
W. J. Fisher . . . William J. Fisher (1919-) Amer. educator Fishwick . . . Marshall William Fishwick (1923-) Amer. historian Fisk . . . McKee Fisk (1900-1978) Amer. educator Fiske . . . John Fiske (1842-1901) Amer. historian Mary Fitt . . . pseud. of Kathleen Freeman (1897-1959) Brit. educator Fitts . . . Dudley Fitts (1903-1968) Amer. educator Barbara Fitts . . . Barbara Fitts (fl. 1955) Amer. research assistant; wife of W. T.
W. T. Fitts . . . William Thomas Fitts (1915-) Amer. surgeon Fitzell . . . Lincoln Fitzell (1903-1958) Amer. author FitzGerald . . . Edward FitzGerald (1809-1883) Eng. poet
C. P. Fitzgerald . . . Charles Patrick Fitzgerald (1902-) Austral. educator
F. S. Fitzgerald . . . Francis Scott Fitzgerald (1896-1940) Amer. writer
S. M. Fitzgerald . . . S. M. Fitzgerald (fl. 1953) Amer. writer Fitzpatrick . . . John Clement Fitzpatrick (1876-1940) Amer. historian Kathleen Fitzpatrick . . . Kathleen Elizabeth Fitzpatrick (1905-) Austral. educator Fitzsimmons . . . Tom Fitzsimmons (fl. 1953) Amer. journalist Fixx . . . James F. Fixx (1932-) Amer. editor Flanner . . . Janet Flanner (1892-1978) Amer. writer; pen name Genet Flecker . . . (Herman) James Elroy Flecker (1884-1915) Eng. poet

- Fleming* . . . Denna Frank Fleming (1893-1980) Amer. educator
- Fletcher* . . . John Fletcher (1879-1925) Eng. dramatist
- Joseph Fletcher* . . . Joseph Fletcher (1905-) Amer. educator
- S. E. Fletcher* . . . Sydney E. Fletcher (d. 1953) Amer. author
- Flew* . . . Antony Garrard Newton Flew (1923-) Eng. philosopher
- Flint* . . . Austin Flint (1812-1886) Amer. physician
- Flood* . . . Charles Bracelen Flood (1929-) Amer. author
- Fogg* . . . Rushworth Fogg. The Irish Digest (1953)
- Foley* . . . Arthur Lee Foley (1867-1945) Amer. physicist
- Follett* . . . Wilson Follett (1887-1963) Amer. editor
- Foote* . . . Samuel Foote (1720-1777) Eng. dramatist
- Forbes* . . . Amer. periodical
- Alexander Forbes* . . . Alexander Forbes (1882-1965) Amer. physiologist
- Forcey* . . . Charles Budd Forcey (1925-) Amer. educator
- Ford* . . . John Ford (1886-1939) Eng. dramatist
- Corey Ford* . . . Corey Ford (1902-1969) Amer. humorist
- F. M. Ford* . . . Ford Madox Ford (1873-1939) Eng. author
- James Ford* . . . James Ford (1884-1944) Amer. sociologist
- Simeon Ford* . . . Simeon Ford (1855-1933) Amer. hotelkeeper
- W. C. Ford* . . . Worthington Chauncey Ford (1858-1941) Amer. statistician
- Forde* . . . Cyril Darryll Forde (1902-1973) Eng. educator
- Ford Times* . . . Ford Motor Co.
- Fordyce* . . . James Fordyce (1720-1796) Scot. clergyman
- Foreign Affairs* . . . Amer. quarterly
- Foreman* . . . Grant Foreman (1869-1953) Amer. author
- Forester* . . . Cecil Scott Forester (1899-1966) Eng. nov.
- Forrest* . . . Thomas Forrest (1729?-1802) Eng. navigator
- Forster* . . . Edward Morgan Forster (1879-1970) Eng. nov.
- Peter Forster* . . . Peter Forster (1926-) Eng. writer
- Fortnight* . . . Los Angeles periodical
- Fortune* . . . Amer. monthly
- Forum* . . . Amer. periodical merged into Forum and Century 1930, into Current History and Forum 1940
- Fosbroke* . . . Hughell Edgar Woodall Fosbroke (1875-1957) Amer. (Eng.-born) theologian
- Foulkes* . . . Siegmund Heinz Foulkes, Horizon (1946)
- Fowler* . . . Harold S. Fowler, Wall Street Journal (1954)
- Guy Fowler* . . . Guy Fowler (1893-1966) Amer. author
- W. M. Fowler* . . . Willis Marion Fowler (1900-) Amer. physician
- Fowlie* . . . Wallace Fowlie (1908-) Amer. educator
- Fox* . . . Sir Lionel Wray Fox (1895-1961) Eng. penologist
- Fox-Davies* . . . Arthur Charles Fox-Davies (1871-1928) Eng. barrister and heraldist
- Frank* . . . Waldo David Frank (1889-1967) Amer. author
- Joseph Frank* . . . Joseph Frank (1916-) Amer. educator
- Frankel* . . . Charles Frankel (1917-1979) Amer. educator
- Frankenstein* . . . Alfred Victor Frankenstein (1906-) Amer. editor
- Frankfurter* . . . Felix Frankfurter (1882-1965) Amer. jurist
- Franklin* . . . Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) Amer. philosopher and statesman
- Miles Franklin* . . . Stella Maria Sarah Miles Franklin (1879-1954) Austral. writer
- Fraser* . . . George Sutherland Fraser (1915-) Eng. author
- Allan Fraser* . . . Allan Fraser (1900-) Scot. animal husbandman
- P. M. Fraser* . . . Peter MacGregor Fraser (1891-) Amer. life insurance executive
- Fraser's Mag.* . . . Brit. periodical
- Frazer* . . . Steve Frazer (1909-) Amer. writer
- Frazer* . . . Sir James George Frazer (1854-1941) Scot. anthropologist
- Frederiksen* . . . Norman Oliver Frederiksen (1909-) Amer. psychologist
- Freeman* . . . Edward Augustus Freeman (1823-1892) Eng. historian
- D. S. Freeman* . . . Douglas Southall Freeman (1886-1953) Amer. historian
- M. E. Freeman* . . . Mary Eleanor Freeman nee Wilkins (1852-1930) Amer. writer
- French* . . . Thomas Ewing French (1871-1944) Amer. educator
- R. M. French* . . . Reginald Michael French (1883-1961) Eng. clergyman
- Friedlander* . . . Paul J. C. Friedlander (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
- Friendly* . . . Alfred Friendly (1911-) Amer. editor
- Frohman* . . . Charles Frohman (1860-1915) Amer. theater manager
- Frost* . . . Robert Frost (1874-1963) Amer. poet
- Froude* . . . James Anthony Froude (1818-1894) Eng. historian
- Frugé* . . . August Frugé (1909-) Amer. publisher
- Fry* . . . Roger Eliot Fry (1866-1934) Eng. painter
- Christopher Fry* . . . Christopher Fry (1907-) Eng. dramatist
- Frye* . . . William R. Frye (1918-) Amer. journalist
- Fuess* . . . Claude Moore Fuess (1885-1963) Amer. educator
- Fuller* . . . Thomas Fuller (1608-1661) Eng. clergyman
- d. 1661* . . . Thomas Fuller (1654-1734) Eng. physician
- d. 1734* . . . Edmund Fuller (1914-) Amer. author
- Edmund Fuller* . . . Helen Fuller (1914?-1972) Amer. editor
- Helen Fuller* . . . John Farquhar Fulton (1899-1960) Amer. physiologist
- Fulton* . . . Arthur Layton Funk (1914-) Amer. educator
- Funk* . . . Clifford Cook Furnas (1900-1969) Amer. chemist
- Furnas* . . . Joseph Chamberlain Furnas (1905-) Amer. writer
- J. C. Furnas* . . . Joseph Furphy (1843-1912) Austral. author
- Furphy* . . . George Edwin Fussell (1889-) Eng. historian
- Fussell* . . . Gilbert Wolf Gabriel (1890-1952) Amer. author
- Gabriel* . . . Francis Bendleton Gaines (1892-1963) Amer. educator
- Gaines* . . . Frances Ormond Jones Gaither (1889-1955) Amer. author
- Gaither* . . . Hugh Todd Naylor Gaitskell (1906-1963) Brit. socialist leader
- Gaitskell* . . . Lewis Galantière (1895-1977) Amer. writer
- Galantière* . . . John Kenneth Galbraith (1908-) Amer. (Canad.-born) economist
- Galbraith* . . . Buel Gordon Gallagher (1904-1978) Amer. educator
- Gallagher* . . . Mavis Gallant (1922-) Canad. author
- Gallant* . . . John Galsworthy (1867-1933) Eng. author
- Galsworthy* . . . John Galt (1779-1839) Scot. nov.
- Galt* . . . Erle Stanley Gardner (1889-1970) Amer. writer
- Gardner* . . . Charles Gardner (1912-) Brit. pilot and journalist
- Charles Gardner* . . . George Edward Gardner (1904-) Amer. psychiatrist
- G. E. Gardner* . . . Martin Gardner (1914-) Amer. author
- Martin Gardner* . . . Hamlin Garland (1860-1940) Amer. nov.
- Garland* . . . Richard Garnett (1835-1906) Eng. editor
- Garnett* . . . Arthur Campbell Garnett (1894-1970) Austral.-born educator
- A. C. Garnett* . . . David Garnett (1892-1981) Eng. author
- David Garnett* . . . Jean Garrigue (1914-1972) Amer. poet
- Garrigue* . . . William Lloyd Garrison (1805-1879) Amer. abolitionist
- Garrison* . . . Fielding Hudson Garrison (1870-1935) Amer. librarian
- F. H. Garrison* . . . Edward Ballard Garside (1907-) Amer. author
- Garside* . . . Lucius Garvin (1908-1977) Amer. educator
- Garvin* . . . Elizabeth Cleghorn Gaskell (1810-1865) Eng. nov.
- Gaskell* . . . Hans Wilhelm Gatzke (1915-) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Gatzke* . . . Christian Gauss (1878-1951) Amer. educator
- Gauss* . . . John Gay (1685-1732) Eng. author
- Gay* . . . Arthur Geddes (1895-) Brit. geographer
- Geddes* . . . Harold F. Gee (1899-) Amer. writer
- Gee* . . . Richard Boyd Gehman (1921-1972) Amer. writer
- Gehman* . . . Sir Archibald Geikie (1835-1924) Scot. geologist
- Geikie* . . . Maxwell David Geismar (1909-1979) Amer. literary critic
- Geismar* . . . Roland Gelatt (1920-) Amer. music critic
- Gelatt* . . . Frank Arthur Geldard (1904-) Amer. educator
- Geldard* . . . Emily Genauer (1911-) Amer. art critic
- Genauer* . . . Robert Cecil Gentry (1916-) Amer. meteorologist
- R. C. Gentry* . . . George Harvey Genzmer (1896-1978) Amer. educator
- Genzmer* . . . Brit. quarterly
- Geographical Jour.* . . . Edwin Black George (1896-1963) Amer. economist
- George* . . . Henry Gerber, Amer. Mercury (1947)
- Gerber* . . . Katharine Fullerton Gerould (1879-1944) Amer. author
- Gerould* . . . Ellen Mary Geyer (1879-1953) Amer. educator
- E. M. Geyer* . . . William James Ghent (1886-1942) Amer. author
- Ghent* . . . Hamilton Alexander Rossken Gibb (1895-1971) Eng. orientalist
- Gibb* . . . Edward Gibbon (1737-1794) Eng. historian
- Gibbon* . . . Charles Gibbon (1843-1890) Brit. author
- Charles Gibbon* . . . Stella Dorothea Gibbons (1902-) Eng. writer
- Gibbons* . . . Wolcott Gibbs (1902-1958) Amer. writer
- Gibbs* . . . Wilfrid Wilson Gibson (1878-1962) Eng. poet
- Gibson* . . . Harry David Gideonse (1901-) Amer. educator
- Gideonse* . . . Arthur Charles Giese (1904-) Amer. educator
- Giese* . . . Humphrey Gifford (fl. 1580) Eng. poet
- Gifford* . . . Sir William Schwenk Gilbert (1836-1911) Eng. librettist and poet
- Gilbert* . . . Gavin Robert Gilbert (1917-) N. Z. writer
- G. R. Gilbert* . . . Joseph Gilbert (1779-1852) Eng. clergyman
- Joseph Gilbert* . . . Brendan Gill (1914-) Amer. writer
- Gill* . . . pseud. of Edith Constance (Bradshaw) Burton-Jones (1906-) Brit. author
- Susan Gillespie* . . . Eric Walkey Gillett (1893-1978) Eng. educator
- Gillett* . . . James Martin Gillis (1876-1957) Amer. clergyman
- Gillis* . . . Donald Hugh Gillis (fl. 1953) Canad. educator
- D. H. Gillis* . . . LaSelle Gilman (1909-) Amer. writer
- Gilman* . . . William Gilpin (1724-1804) Eng. clergyman
- Gilpin* . . . Norman Cardinal Gilyroy (1896-1977) Austral. cardinal
- Gilroy* . . . Richard Ginder (1914-) Amer. clergyman
- Ginder* . . . Henry Giniger (1922-) Amer. journalist
- Giniger* . . . P. Adhelidi Ginnetti, Jour. of Philosophy (1954)
- Ginnetti* . . . Benjamin Ginzburg (1898-) Amer. government official
- Ginzburg* . . . Benjamin Ginzburg (1898-) Amer. government official

- Gipson* . . . Frederick Benjamin Gipson (1908–) Amer. author
- Girard* . . . Rene Noel Girard (1923–) Amer. (Fr.-born) educator
- Gladden* . . . Washington Gladden (1836–1918) Amer. clergyman
- Gladstone* . . . William Ewart Gladstone (1809–1898) Brit. statesman
- Glanvill.* . . . Joseph Glanvill (1636–1680) Eng. philosopher
- Glasgow* . . . Ellen Anderson Gholson Glasgow (1874–1945) Amer. nov.
- Glicksberg* Charles Irving Glicksberg (1901–) Amer. (Polish-born) educator
- Gloag* . . . John Edwards Gloag (1896–1981) Eng. author
- Glossary of Currently-Used Wage Terms* U.S. Dept. of Labor
- Glover* . . . C. Gordon Glover (1908–) Brit. writer
- Godwin* . . . William Godwin (1756–1836) Eng. philosopher
- Gogarty* . . . Oliver St. John Gogarty (1878–1957) Irish author
- Gohdes* . . . Clarence Louis Frank Gohdes (1901–) Amer. educator
- Gold* . . . Herbert Gold (1924–) Amer. author
- Goldsmith.* Oliver Goldsmith (1728–1774) Brit. author
- Goldstein.* Thomas Eugen Goldstein (1913–) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Gómez Sicre* José Gómez Sicre (fl. 1954) Cuban sociologist
- Goodenough* Ward Hunt Goodenough (1919–) Amer. anthropologist
- Goodman* . . . Kennard Everett Goodman (1899–) Amer. educator
- E. J. Goodman* Edward John Goodman (fl. 1887) Eng. author
- Walter Goodman* Walter Goodman (1927–) Amer. writer
- Gordimer* . . . Nadine Gordimer (1923–) So. African author
- Gordon* . . . Milton Myron Gordon (1918–) Amer. sociologist
- A. C. Gordon* Armistead Churchill Gordon (1897–1953) Amer. educator
- Gore* . . . John Francis Gore (1885–) Eng. journalist
- Gorer* . . . Geoffrey Edgar Gorer (1905–) Brit. anthropologist
- Gorrell* . . . Frank Gorrell (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Gosse* . . . Sir Edmund William Gosse (1849–1928) Eng. poet and critic
- Goudge* . . . Elizabeth de Beauchamp Goudge (1900–) Brit. writer
- Goudy* . . . Frederic William Goudy (1865–1947) Amer. typographer
- Gould* . . . Jay Gould (1836–1892) Amer. financier
- Gowers.* . . . Sir Ernest Arthur Gowers (1880–1966) Brit. government official
- Goyen* . . . (Charles) William Goyen (1915–1983) Amer. author
- Graham* . . . Frank Porter Graham (1886–1972) Amer. government official
- Billy Graham* William Franklin Graham (1918–) Amer. evangelist
- Gwethalyn Graham* Gwethalyn Graham (1913–1965) Canad. author
- Michael Graham* (Godfrey) Michael Graham (1898–1972) Eng. naturalist
- Grahame* . . . Georgina S. Grahame (fl. 1902) Brit. writer
- Grainger* . . . Thomas Hutcheson Grainger (1913–) Amer. bacteriologist
- Granberg* . . . Wilbur John Granberg (1906–) Amer. writer
- Grandgent* Charles Hall Grandgent (1862–1939) Amer. educator
- Granite* . . . Harvey Granite (fl. 1947) Amer. writer
- Grant* . . . Ulysses Simpson Grant (1822–1885) 18th president of the U.S.
- Granville* . . . George Granville or Grenville (1667–1735) Baron Lansdowne. Eng. writer
- Grattan* . . . Clinton Hartley Grattan (1902–1980) Amer. author
- Grau* . . . Shirley Ann Grau (1929–) Amer. author
- Graves* . . . Robert von Ranke Graves (1895–) Brit. author
- Charles Graves* Charles Graves (1868–1948) Amer. (Eng.-born) clergyman
- Mortimer Graves* (Frederick) Mortimer Graves (1893–) Amer. educator
- Gray* . . . Thomas Gray (1716–1771) Eng. poet
- G. W. Gray* George William Gray (1886–1960) Amer. scientific writer
- Henry Gray* Henry Gray (1825–1861) Eng. anatomist
- James Gray* James Gray (1899–) Amer. writer
- J. G. Gray* Jesse Glenn Gray (1913–) Amer. philosopher
- Sylvia Gray* Sylvia Gray, London Calling (1954)
- Green* . . . Matthew Green (1696–1737) Eng. poet
- J. R. Green* John Richard Green (1837–1883) Eng. historian
- Paul Green* Paul Eliot Green (1894–1981) Amer. author
- Greene* . . . Graham Greene (1904–) Eng. nov.
- J. D. Greene* Jerome Davis Greene (1874–1959) Amer. banker
- Greenhall* . . . Arthur M. Greenhall (1911–) Amer. zoologist
- Gregory* . . . Lady Augusta Gregory (1859?–1932) Irish playwright
- Horace Gregory* Horace Victor Gregory (1898–1982) Amer. poet
- Grenfell* . . . Russell Grenfell (1892–1954) Eng. naval officer
- Gressman.* Eugene Gressman (1917–) Amer. lawyer
- Greville.* . . . Charles Cavendish Fulke Greville (1794–1865) Eng. diarist
- Grey* . . . Sir Edward Grey (1862–1933) Eng. statesman
- Zane Grey* Zane Grey (1875–1939) Amer. nov.
- Gridgeman* Norman Theodore Gridgeman (1912–) Eng. statistician
- Griffin* . . . Harold John Griffin (1912–) Canad. newspaperman
- C. E. Griffin* Clare Elmer Griffin (1892–1979) Amer. educator
- Grigson* . . . Geoffrey Grigson (1905–) Brit. author
- Griswold* . . . Alfred Whitney Griswold (1906–1963) Amer. educator
- Grosart.* Alexander Balloch Grosart (1827–1899) Scot. scholar
- Gross* . . . Leo Gross (1903–) Amer. (Austrian-born) educator
- Grote* . . . George Grote (1794–1871) Eng. historian
- Groves* . . . Harold Martin Groves (1897–1969) Amer. educator
- Grove's Dict. of Music* Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians
- Gruber* . . . Ruth Gruber (1911–) Amer. journalist
- Gruening* . . . Ernest Gruening (1887–1974) Amer. politician
- Guérard* . . . Albert Léon Guérard (1880–1959) Amer. (Fr.-born) educator
- Guest* . . . Edgar Albert Guest (1881–1959) Amer. poet
- Guild* . . . Leo Guild (1911–) Amer. writer
- Gunn* . . . Harold Dale Gunn (1918–) Amer. anthropologist
- Gunther* . . . John Gunther (1901–1970) Amer. writer
- Gurko* . . . Leo Gurko (1914–) Amer. (Pol.-born) educator
- Gurney* . . . Edmund Gurney (1847–1888) Eng. philosopher
- Gustafson.* Axel Ferdinand Gustafson (1880–1949) Amer. agronomist
- Gutheim* . . . Frederick Albert Gutheim (1908–) Amer. editor
- Guthrie.* Alfred Bertram Guthrie (1901–) Amer. nov.
- Gwyn* . . . Rhys Gwyn, Dock Leaves (1958)
- Hacker.* . . . Andrew Hacker (1929–) Amer. political scientist
- Hackett* . . . Francis Hackett (1883–1962) Amer. (Irish-born) writer
- Hadley.* . . . Frederick Brown Hadley (1880–) Amer. veterinarian
- Haggard* . . . Sir Henry Rider Haggard (1856–1925) Eng. nov.
- Hahn* . . . Emily Hahn (1905–) Amer. author
- Hale* . . . Sir Matthew Hale (1609–1676) Eng. jurist
- E. E. Hale* Edward Everett Hale (1822–1909) Amer. clergyman
- Nancy Hale* Nancy Hale (1908–) Amer. nov.
- Robert Hale* Robert Hale (1889–1976) Amer. lawyer
- Hall* . . . James Norman Hall (1887–1951) Amer. nov.
- Fitzedward Hall* Fitzedward Hall (1825–1901) Amer. philologist
- R. A. Hall* Robert Anderson Hall (1911–) Amer. educator
- S. C. Hall* Samuel Carter Hall (1800–1889) Eng. editor
- Hallam.* . . . Henry Hallam (1777–1859) Eng. historian
- Hallowell.* John Hamilton Hallowell (1913–) Amer. educator
- Halsey* . . . Ashley Halsey (1908–) Amer. editor
- G. D. Halsey* George Dawson Halsey (1889–) Amer. business administrator
- Margaret Halsey* Margaret Frances Halsey (1910–) Amer. author
- Hambly* . . . William Frank Hambly (1908–) Austral. educator
- Hamburger* Michael Hamburger (1924–) Eng. poet
- Philip Hamburger* Philip Paul Hamburger (1914–) Amer. writer
- Hamerton.* Philip Gilbert Hamerton (1834–1894) Brit. artist
- Hamilton* . . . Sir William Hamilton (1788–1856) Scot. philosopher
- Edith Hamilton* Edith Hamilton (1867–1963) Amer. classicist
- M. A. Hamilton* Mary Agnes Hamilton (1883–1966) Brit. writer
- W. H. Hamilton* Walton Hale Hamilton (1881–1958) Amer. educator
- Hamley* . . . Sir Edward Bruce Hamley (1824–1893) Eng. general
- Hammett* . . . Samuel Dashiell Hammett (1894–1961) Amer. writer
- Hammond* Henry Hammond (1605–1660) Eng. clergyman
- John Hammond* John Hammond (1910–) Amer. executive
- Hamrah* . . . Louise A. Hamrah, Bulletin (1949)
- Handler* . . . M. S. Handler (fl. 1954) Amer. foreign correspondent
- Handlin* . . . Oscar Handlin (1915–) Amer. educator
- Hanscom* . . . Elizabeth Deering Hanscom (1865–1960) Amer. educator
- Hansen.* . . . Alvin Harvey Hansen (1887–1975) Amer. educator
- Hanson* . . . Howard Hanson (1896–1981) Amer. composer
- Han Suyin* pseud. of Elizabeth Chow Comber (1917–) Chin. author
- Hardwick.* Elizabeth Hardwick (1916–) Amer. nov.
- Hardy* . . . Thomas Hardy (1840–1928) Eng. author
- Gelston Hardy* Gelston Hardy, New England Journeys (1955)
- Harlow* . . . Alvin Fay Harlow (1875–1963) Amer. author
- Harmsworth* Albert Charles William Harmsworth (1865–1922) Viscount Northcliffe. Eng. (Irish-born) publisher
- Harper's* . . . Amer. monthly
- Harper's Bazaar* Amer. monthly
- Harradon.* Harry Durward Harradon (1883–) Amer. librarian
- Harrer* . . . Heinrich Harrer (1912–) Austrian geographer
- Harrington* Richard Harrington (fl. 1952) Canad. photographer
- Donal Harrington* Donald Harrington (fl. 1954) Amer. clergyman
- Harris* . . . Sydney Justin Harris (1917–) Amer. (Eng.-born) journalist
- Harrison* . . . Frederic Harrison (1831–1923) Eng. author
- Gordon Harrison* Gordon Andrews Harrison (1914–) Amer. writer
- G. R. Harrison* George Russell Harrison (1898–1979) Amer. physicist
- Richard Harrison* Richard Harrison (1901–) Eng. writer

- Harsch* . . . Joseph Close Harsch (1905–) Amer. journalist
- Hart* . . . Henry Hersch Hart (1886–1968) Amer. sinologue
- C. W. M. Hart* . . . Charles William Merton Hart (1905–1976) Austral. anthropologist
- J. D. Hart* . . . James David Hart (1911–) Amer. educator
- Harte* . . . (Francis) Brett Harte (1836–1902) Amer. short-story writer
- Hartford* . . . (George) Huntington Hartford (1911–) Amer. financier
- Hartford Times* . . . Hartford (Conn.) daily
- Hartmann* . . . Frederick Howard Hartmann (1922–) Amer. educator
- Hartwell* . . . Wayne Hartwell, Sat. Review (1954)
- Harvard Law Review* . . . Harvard Univ. periodical
- Harvey* . . . Sir Henry Paul Harvey (1869–1948) Brit. editor
- Haskin* . . . Frederic J. Haskin (1872–1944) Amer. journalist
- Hass* . . . Victor P. Hass (fl. 1949) Amer. editor
- Hastings* . . . Dict. of the Bible, ed. James Hastings
- Hatch* . . . Robert Hatch (fl. 1950) Amer. movie critic
- Haughton* . . . Samuel Haughton (1821–1897) Irish scientist
- Haupt* . . . Richard J. Haupt, The Spectator (1953)
- Hauser* . . . Ernest Otto Hauser (1910–) Amer. (Ger.-born) author
- Havighurst* . . . Walter Edwin Havighurst (1901–) Amer. educator
- Christopher Hawkes* . . . (Charles Francis) Christopher Hawkes (1905–) Brit. archaeologist
- Jacquetta Hawkes* . . . Jacquetta Hawkes (1910–) Brit. archaeologist
- Hawkrigde* . . . Emma Lois Hawkrigde (1889–) Amer. author
- Hawthorne* . . . Nathaniel Hawthorne (1804–1864) Amer. author
- Julian Hawthorne* . . . Julian Hawthorne (1846–1934) Amer. author; son of Nathaniel
- Hay* . . . Thomas Robson Hay (1888–) Amer. historian
- S. H. Hay* . . . Sara Henderson Hay (1906–) Amer. poet
- Hayes* . . . Samuel Perkins Hayes (1910–) Amer. educator
- Hays* . . . Will Harrison Hays (1879–1954) Amer. lawyer
- Hayward* . . . Sir John Hayward (1564?–1627) Eng. historian
- Hazlitt* . . . William Hazlitt (1778–1830) Eng. essayist
- Healey* . . . Denis Winston Healey (1917–) Brit. politician
- Heard* . . . (George) Alexander Heard (1917–) Amer. educator
- Hearn* . . . Lafcadio Hearn (1850–1904) Greek-born writer of Irish-Greek descent
- Heaton* . . . Peter Heaton (1919–) Eng. writer
- Heber* . . . Reginald Heber (1783–1826) Eng. prelate
- Hecht* . . . Ben Hecht (1894–1964) Amer. writer
- Hedges* . . . Joseph Edward Hedges (1904–1966) Amer. economist
- Hedley* . . . George Percy Hedley (1899–) Amer. (Chin.-born) educator
- Heggen* . . . Thomas Orle Heggen (1919–1949) Amer. author
- Heiden* . . . Noland Rall Heiden (1919–) Amer. geographer
- Heinold* . . . George Heinold (1913–) Amer. writer
- Heiser* . . . Victor George Heiser (1873–1972) Amer. physician
- Heitner* . . . Joseph Heitner, Automotive Mechanics (1953)
- Heller* . . . Judith Bernays Heller (1893–) Amer. writer
- Hellman* . . . Lillian Hellman (1905–) Amer. playwright
- E. C. Helmreich* . . . Ernst Christian Helmreich (1902–) Amer. educator
- Helps* . . . Sir Arthur Helps (1813–1875) Eng. historian
- Helsel* . . . Paul R. Helsel (1888–1961) Amer. educator
- James pseud. of Claud Cockburn* . . . (1904–) Brit. writer
- Helwick Hemingway* . . . Ernest Hemingway (1899–1961) Amer. writer
- Hendel* . . . Charles William Hendel (1890–) Amer. educator
- Henderson* . . . Thomas Greenshields Henderson (1906–1969) Canad. educator
- L. J. Henderson* . . . Lawrence Joseph Henderson (1878–1942) Amer. biochemist
- Hendrick* . . . Burton Jesse Hendrick (1871–1949) Amer. biographer
- Kimmis Hendrick* . . . Kimmis Hendrick (1910–) Amer. editor
- Henley* . . . William Ernest Henley (1849–1903) Eng. author
- Henning* . . . Rachel Biddulph Henning (1826–1914) Austral. writer
- Henri* . . . Florette Henri (fl. 1950) Amer. nov.
- Henry* . . . Patrick Henry (1736–1799) Amer. statesman
- O. Henry* . . . pseud. of William Sydney Porter (1862–1910) Amer. short-story writer
- Hentoff* . . . Nathan Irving Hentoff (1925–) Amer. editor
- Herbert* . . . George Herbert (1593–1633) Eng. poet
- Hergesheimer* . . . Joseph Hergesheimer (1880–1954) Amer. nov.
- Herrick* . . . Robert Herrick (1591–1674) Eng. poet
- Herron* . . . Edward Albert Herron (1912–) Amer. writer
- Herschell* . . . Farrar Herschell (1837–1899) 1st baron. Eng. jurist
- Hersey* . . . John Hersey (1914–) Amer. nov.
- Herskovits* . . . Melville Jean Herskovits (1895–1963) Amer. anthropologist
- Hervey* . . . Harry Clay Hervey (1900–1951) Amer. explorer
- Herzberg* . . . Max John Herzberg (1886–1958) Amer. educator
- Hewes* . . . Henry Hewes (1917–) Amer. drama critic
- Hewitt* . . . James Hewitt (1928–) Irish author
- Hewlett* . . . Maurice Henry Hewlett (1861–1923) Eng. nov.
- Heywood* . . . Thomas Heywood (1574?–1641) Eng. dramatist
- Hichens* . . . Robert Smythe Hichens (1864–1950) Eng. nov.
- Hicks* . . . Granville Hicks (1901–1982) Amer. author
- J. D. Hicks* . . . John Donald Hicks (1890–1972) Amer. educator
- Higginson* . . . Thomas Wentworth Storrow Higginson (1823–1911) Amer. clergyman
- Highet* . . . Gilbert Arthur Highet (1906–1978) Amer. (Scot.-born) educator
- High School Biology* . . . Amer. Institute of Biological Sciences
- Hildreth* . . . Gertrude Howell Hildreth (1898–) Amer. educator
- Hill* . . . Aaron Hill (1635–1750) Eng. dramatist
- A. A. Hill* . . . Archibald Anderson Hill (1902–) Amer. educator
- Hillary* . . . Sir Edmund Percival Hillary (1919–) N.Z. alpinist
- Hillyer* . . . Robert Silliman Hillyer (1895–1961) Amer. poet
- Hilton* . . . James Hilton (1900–1954) Eng. nov.
- Himstead* . . . Ralph Ebner Himstead (1893–1955) Amer. educator
- Hindemith* . . . Paul Hindemith (1895–1963) Amer. (Ger.-born) composer
- Hirsch* . . . Felix Edward Hirsch (1902–) Amer. (Ger.-born) librarian
- Hitchcock* . . . Charles Baker Hitchcock (1906–1969) Amer. geographer
- Hobbes* . . . Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679) Eng. philosopher
- Hobby* . . . Oveta Culp Hobby (1905–) Amer. newspaper publisher
- Hobson* . . . John Atkinson Hobson (1858–1940) Eng. economist
- Hocking* . . . Richard Boyle O'Reilly Hocking (1906–) Amer. philosopher
- R. E. Hodgson* . . . Ralph Edward Hodgson (1906–) Amer. dairy husbandman
- Hoff* . . . Charles Worthington Hoff (1898–1965) Amer. banker
- Hoffman* . . . Malvina Hoffman (1887–1966) Amer. sculptor
- Hofstadter* . . . Albert Hofstadter (1910–) Amer. educator
- Richard Hofstadter* . . . Richard Hofstadter (1916–1970) Amer. educator
- S. H. Hofstadter* . . . Samuel H. Hofstadter (1894–1970) Amer. (Austrian-born) jurist
- Hogarth* . . . William Hogarth (1697–1764) Eng. painter
- Hogben* . . . Lancelot Hogben (1895–1975) Eng. scientist
- Hogg* . . . Quintin McGarel Hogg formerly Lord Hailsham (1907–) Eng. statesman
- Holbrook* . . . Stewart Hall Holbrook (1893–1964) Amer. author
- Holcombe* . . . Arthur Norman Holcombe (1884–) Amer. political scientist
- Holland* . . . Josiah Gilbert Holland (1819–1881) Amer. author
- Holley* . . . Donald L. Holley (fl. 1947) Amer. educator
- Hollywood Reporter* . . . Los Angeles daily
- Holman* . . . Emile Frederick Holman (1890–1977) Amer. surgeon
- Holmer* . . . Paul LeRoy Holmer (1916–) Amer. educator
- Holmes* . . . Oliver Wendell Holmes (1809–1894) Amer. author
- H. H. Holmes* . . . pseud. of William Anthony Parker White (1911–1968) Amer. writer
- Justice Holmes* . . . Oliver Wendell Holmes (1841–1935) associate justice, U.S. Supreme Court
- Holt* . . . Lucius Hudson Holt (1881–1953) Amer. author
- Emily Holt* . . . Emily Holt, The Complete Housekeeper (1903)
- Hood* . . . Thomas Hood (1799–1845) Eng. poet
- Hook* . . . Theodore Edward Hook (1788–1841) Eng. nov.
- Sidney Hook* . . . Sidney Hook (1902–) Amer. philosopher
- Hooker* . . . Richard Hooker (1554?–1600) Eng. theologian
- Edward Hooker* . . . Edward Hooker (fl. 1633) Eng. editor
- Hooper* . . . John Hooper (d. 1555) Eng. prelate
- Hoover* . . . Herbert Clark Hoover (1874–1964) 31st president of the U.S.
- Hope* . . . Clifford Ragsdale Hope (1893–1970) Amer. businessman
- Horizon* . . . Brit. quarterly
- Horner* . . . Durbin Lee Horner (1910–) Amer. editor
- Horney* . . . Karen (Danielsen) Horney (1885–1952) Amer. (Ger.-born) psychoanalyst
- Hot-Metal Magic Household* . . . Union Carbide and Carbon Corp.
- Geoffrey Edward West House* . . . hold (1900–) Eng. nov.
- Houseman* . . . Alfred Edward Houseman (1859–1936) Eng. poet
- Houston* . . . Clifford Granville Houston (1903–) Amer. psychologist
- Houston Post* . . . Houston (Texas) daily
- Howard* . . . Walter Lafayette Howard (1872–1949) Amer. horticulturist
- Howe* . . . Irving Howe (1920–) Amer. educator
- Helen Howe* . . . Helen Huntington Howe (1905–1975) Amer. author
- Howells* . . . William Dean Howells (1837–1920) Amer. author
- W. W. Howells* . . . William White Howells (1908–) Amer. anthropologist
- Hubbell* . . . Albert Hubbell (1908–) Amer. writer
- Hubbs* . . . Carl Leavitt Hubbs (1894–1979) Amer. biologist
- Hudson* . . . William Henry Hudson (1841–1922) Brit. naturalist
- G. F. Hudson* . . . Geoffrey Francis Hudson (1903–) Eng. author
- Hudson Review* . . . Amer. quarterly
- Hughes* . . . Thomas Hughes (1822–1896) Eng. author
- D. P. Hughes* . . . Dorothea Price Hughes (1904–) Brit. author

- Richard Hughes* Richard Arthur Warren Hughes (1900-1976) Eng. writer
- Richard Hull* pseud. of Richard Henry Sampson (1896-) Eng. author
- Hume* . . . David Hume (1711-1776) Scot. philosopher
- Paul Hume* Paul Chandler Hume (1915-) Amer. music critic
- Hummel* . . . Arthur William Hummel (1884-1975) Amer. educator
- Humphrey* Hubert Horatio Humphrey (1911-1978) U.S. vice-president (1965-1969)
- Hugh Humphrey* Hugh Humphrey, Car Life (1954)
- Robert Humphrey* Robert Clay Humphrey (1919-) Amer. educator
- Humphreys* (Travers) Christmas Humphreys (1901-) Brit. lawyer
- Hunt* . . . (James Henry) Leigh Hunt (1784-1859) Eng. writer
- J. M. Hunt* Joseph McVicker Hunt (1906-) Amer. psychologist
- William Hunt* William Hunt (1842-1931) Eng. historian
- Hunter* . . . Evan Hunter (1926-) Amer. author
- Huntingford* George Wynn Bretoner Huntingford (1901-) Eng. anthropologist
- Huntington* Ellsworth Huntington (1876-1947) Amer. explorer
- Hurd* . . . Richard Hurd (1720-1808) Eng. bishop
- Hurff* . . . George Brian Hurff (1900-) Amer. economist
- Hurlbut* . . . Cornelius Searle Hurlbut (1906-) Amer. mineralogist
- Hussey* . . . Christopher Edward Clive Hussey (1899-1970) Eng. architectural historian
- Dyneley Hussey* Dyneley Hussey (1893-1972) Brit. music critic
- Hutchins* . . . Robert Maynard Hutchins (1899-1977) Amer. educator
- Hutchinson* George Evelyn Hutchinson (1903-) Amer. (Eng.-born) biologist
- Hutton* . . . (David) Graham Hutton (1904-) Eng. economist
- Charles Hutton* Charles Hutton (1737-1823) Eng. mathematician
- Huxley* . . . Aldous (Leonard) Huxley (1894-1963) Eng. author
- Julian Huxley* Sir Julian Sorell Huxley (1887-1975) Eng. biologist; brother of Aldous
- T. H. Huxley* Thomas Henry Huxley (1825-1895) Eng. biologist; grandfather of preceding
- Hyman* . . . Harold Melvin Hyman (1924-) Amer. educator
- S. E. Hyman* Stanley Edgar Hyman (1919-1970) Amer. educator
- Sidney Hyman* Sidney Hyman (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Hynd* . . . Alan Hynd (1908-) Amer. writer
- Idriess* . . . Ion Llewellyn Idriess (1890-) Austral. writer
- Idzerda* . . . Stanley John Idzerda (1920-) Amer. educator
- Iengar* . . . H. V. R. Iengar (1902-) Indian banker
- Iglesias* . . . Antonio Iglesias (1903-1953) Amer. (Mex.-born) journalist
- Infantry Jour.* Amer. monthly
- Infeld* . . . Leopold Infeld (1898-1968) Polish physicist
- Ingamells* Rex Ingamells (1913-1955) Austral. poet
- Inge* . . . William Ralph Inge (1860-1954) Eng. clergyman
- Ingelow* . . . Jean Ingelow (1820-1897) Eng. poet
- Inside Detective* Amer. monthly
- Investor's Reader* Amer. monthly
- The Irish Digest* Irish monthly
- Ironside* . . . Robin Ironside (1912-1965) Eng. painter
- Irving* . . . Washington Irving (1783-1859) Amer. essayist
- Isaacs* . . . Harold Robert Isaacs (1910-) Amer. author
- Isherwood* . . . Christopher William Bradshaw Isherwood (1904-) Amer. (Eng.-born) author
- Jack* . . . Theodore Henley Jack (1881-1964) Amer. educator
- Jackson* . . . Helen Maria Hunt Jackson (1830-1885) Amer. nov.
- Charles Jackson* Charles Reginald Jackson (1903-1968) Amer. author
- Holbrook Jackson* Holbrook Jackson (1874-1948) Eng. editor
- R. E. Jackson* Reid Ethelbert Jackson (1908-) Amer. educator
- R. H. Jackson* Robert Houghwout Jackson (1892-1954) Amer. jurist
- Shirley Jackson* Shirley Jackson (1919-1965) Amer. writer
- Jacobs* . . . Robert Durene Jacobs (1918-) Amer. educator
- JAMA* . . . The Journal of the American Medical Association
- James* . . . William James (1842-1910) Amer. philosopher
- C. L. R. James* Cyril Lionel Robert James (1901-) West Indian author
- F. C. James* Frank Cyril James (1903-1973) Brit. educator
- G. P. R. James* George Payne Rainsford James (1799-1860) Eng. nov.
- Henry James* Henry James (1843-1916) Brit. (Amer.-born) writer
- P. E. James* Preston Everett James (1899-) Amer. geographer
- Jameson* . . . Anna Brownell Jameson (1794-1860) Irish author
- C. G. Jameson* Colin G. Jameson (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Jarratt* . . . Vernon Jarratt (fl. 1951) Brit. film editor
- Jarrell* . . . Randall Jarrell (1914-1965) Amer. writer
- Jears* . . . Sir James Hopwood Jeans (1877-1946) Eng. physicist
- Jefferies* . . . Richard Jefferies (1848-1887) Eng. naturalist
- Jeffers* . . . (John) Robinson Jeffers (1887-1962) Amer. poet
- Jefferson* . . . Thomas Jefferson (1743-1826) 3d president of the U.S.
- Jeffery* . . . Arthur Jeffery (1892-1959) Austral.-born educator
- Jeffrey* . . . Francis Jeffrey (1773-1850) Lord Jeffrey Scot. literary critic
- Jekyll* . . . Joseph Jekyll (1752-1837) Eng. politician
- Jenkins* . . . Edward Hopkins Jenkins (1850-1931) Amer. chemist
- Jennett* . . . Sean Jennett (1912-) Brit. author
- Jennings* . . . James Jennings (fl. 1825) Eng. philologist
- Jernigan* . . . Muriel Molland Jernigan (fl. 1954) Eng. author
- Jerome* . . . Jerome Klapka Jerome (1859-1927) Eng. author
- Jesse* . . . Fryniwyd Tennyson Jesse (d. 1958) Eng. author
- Jessup* . . . Philip Caryl Jessup (1897-) Amer. jurist
- Jevons* . . . William Stanley Jevons (1835-1882) Eng. economist
- ohn O'London's Weekly* Brit. publication
- Johnson* . . . Samuel Johnson (1709-1784) Eng. lexicographer
- Allen Johnson* Allen Johnson (1870-1931) Amer. editor
- Alvin Johnson* Alvin Saunders Johnson (1874-1971) Amer. economist
- Charles Johnson* Charles William Heaton Johnson (1896-1964) Eng. art lecturer
- Edgar Johnson* Edgar Johnson (1901-1969) Amer. educator
- G. W. Johnson* Gerald White Johnson (1890-1980) Amer. author
- J. W. Johnson* Josephine Winslow Johnson (1910-) Amer. nov.
- L. B. Johnson* Lyndon Baines Johnson (1908-1973) 36th president of the U.S.
- Marguerite Johnson* Marguerite Marie Johnson (1916-) Amer. educator
- Pyke Johnson* Pyke Johnson, Jr. (fl. 1954) Amer. editor
- Wendell Johnson* Wendell A. L. Johnson (1906-1965) Amer. speech pathologist
- Jonas* . . . Carl Stebbins Jonas (1913-) Amer. nov.
- Jones* . . . Chester Lloyd Jones (1881-1941) Amer. educator
- Daniel Jones* Daniel Jones (1881-1967) Eng. phonetician
- Gwyn Jones* Gwyn Jones (1907-) Eng. educator
- H. M. Jones* Howard Mumford Jones (1892-1980) Amer. educator
- James Jones* James Jones (1921-1977) Amer. author
- R. M. Jones* Rufus Matthew Jones (1863-1948) Amer. educator
- William Jones* Sir William Jones (1746-1794) Eng. orientalist
- Ben Jonson* Benjamin Jonson (1573 ?-1637) Eng. author
- Jordan* . . . Thomas Jordan (1612?-1685) Eng. poet
- H. D. Jordan* Henry Donaldson Jordan (1897-1972) Amer. educator
- Joseph* . . . Richard Joseph (1910-1976) Amer. writer
- Josephson* . . . Matthew Josephson (1899-1978) Amer. author
- Jour. of Economic Entomology* Amer. bimonthly
- Jour. of Geology* Amer. bimonthly
- Jour. of Heredity* Amer. bimonthly
- Jour. of Philosophy* Amer. periodical
- Jour. of Religion* Amer. quarterly
- Jowett* . . . Benjamin Jowett (1817-1893) Eng. scholar
- Joyce* . . . James Joyce (1882-1941) Irish writer
- Jeremiah Joyce* Jeremiah Joyce (1764-1816) Eng. clergyman
- Jung* . . . Carl Gustav Jung (1875-1961) Swiss psychologist
- Junius* . . . Letters of Junius (1767-1772), reputedly by Philip Francis (1708?-1773) Eng. writer
- Kaderli* . . . Elizabeth Land Kaderli (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Kaempffert* Waldemar Bernhard Kaempffert (1877-1957) Amer. writer
- Kahn* . . . Ely Jacques Kahn (1916-) Amer. author
- Kalischer* . . . Peter Kalischer (fl. 1951) Amer. journalist
- Kallen* . . . Horace Meyer Kallen (1882-1974) Amer. educator
- H. V. Kaltenborn* Hans von Kaltenborn (1878-1965) Amer. newscaster
- Kandel* . . . Isaac Leon Kandel (1881-1965) Romanian educator
- Kane* . . . Harnett Thomas Kane (1910-) Amer. author
- Kaplan* . . . Charles Kaplan (1919-) Amer. educator
- Kardiner* . . . Abram Kardiner (1891-) Amer. psychiatrist
- Karsten* . . . Rafael Karsten (1879-1956) Finnish anthropologist
- Kaufmann* . . . Felix Kaufmann (1895-1949) Austrian philosopher
- Kaye-Smith* Sheila Kaye-Smith (1887-1956) Eng. nov.
- Kazin* . . . Alfred Kazin (1915-) Amer. writer
- Keats* . . . John Keats (1795-1821) Eng. poet
- Keble* . . . John Keble (1792-1866) Eng. clergyman
- Keene* . . . Frances White Keene (1908-) Amer. writer
- Keesing* . . . Nancy Florence Keesing (1923-) Austral. writer
- Kefauver* . . . Estes Kefauver (1903-1963) Amer. politician
- Keightley* . . . Thomas Keightley (1789-1872) Irish author
- Keith* . . . Agnes Newton Keith (1901-) Amer. author
- Kelleher* . . . John Vincent Kelleher (1916-) Amer. educator
- Kellogg* . . . Vernon Lyman Kellogg (1867-1937) Amer. zoologist
- Kelly* . . . James Kelly (1912-) Amer. author
- Seamus Kelly* Seamus Brian Kelly (1912-) Irish drama critic
- Kelman* . . . Norman Joseph Kelman (1914-) Amer. psychiatrist
- Ken* . . . Thomas Ken or Kenn (1637-1711) Eng. prelate
- Kennan* . . . George Frost Kennan (1904-) Amer. historian
- Kennedy* . . . John Fitzgerald Kennedy (1917-1963) 35th president of the U.S.

- A. J. Kennedy* Albert Joseph Kennedy (1879-) Amer. settlement worker
- R. W. Kennedy* Robert Woods Kennedy (1911-) Amer. architect
- Kent* . . . Patrick Kent, The Irish Digest (1952) Amer. quarterlyly
- Kenyon Review* Amer. author
- Kerouac* . . . Jack Kerouac (1922-1969) Amer. author
- Kersh* . . . Cyril Kersh, The Irish Digest (1953)
- Gerald Kersh* Gerald Kersh (1911-1968) Amer. (Eng.-born) journalist
- Kerwin* . . . Jerome G. Kerwin (1896-1977) Amer. political scientist
- Kettering* . . . Charles Franklin Kettering (1876-1958) Amer. engineer
- Key* . . . Francis Scott Key (1779-1843) Amer. lawyer
- Kiene* . . . Hugh Edward Kiene (1902-) Amer. psychiatrist
- Kilby* . . . Clyde Samuel Kilby (1902-) Amer. educator
- Killackey* . . . Edward R. Killackey (1931-) Amer. missionary priest
- Kimble* . . . David Kimble (1921-) Brit. educator
- King* . . . Clarence King (1842-1901) Amer. geologist
- S. S. King* . . . Seth S. King, N.Y. Times (1954)
- W. T. C. King* Wilfred Thomas Cousins King (1906-) Eng. economist
- Kingdon-Ward* Frank Kingdon-Ward (1885-1958) Eng. botanist
- Kinglake* . . . Alexander William Kinglake (1809-1891) Eng. historian
- Kingsley* . . . Charles Kingsley (1819-1875) Eng. nov.
- Kingston* . . . William Henry Giles Kingston (1814-1880) Eng. writer
- Kinkead* . . . Katharine T. Kinkead, New Yorker (1951)
- Kinne* . . . Ernest Webber Kinne (1904-) Amer. educator
- Kinross* . . . John Patrick Douglas Balfour (1904-1976) Lord Kinross Eng. author
- Kinsey* . . . Alfred Charles Kinsey (1894-1956) Amer. zoologist
- Kipling* . . . Rudyard Kipling (1865-1936) Eng. author
- Kirby* . . . Ellwood Kirby, New England Journeys (1955)
- Kirk* . . . Russell Amos Kirk (1918-) Amer. author
- G. L. Kirk* Grayson Louis Kirk (1903-) Amer. educator
- Kirwin* . . . Harry Wynne Kirwin (1911-1963) Amer. historian
- Kitchell* . . . Iva Kitchell (1912-) Amer. dancer
- Kitson* . . . Michael Kitson (fl. 1955) Eng. writer on art
- Kleiner* . . . Dick Kleiner (fl. 1966) Amer. newspaperman
- Kleppner* . . . Otto Kleppner, Advertising Procedure (1925)
- Kline* . . . Morris Kline (1908-) Amer. educator
- G. L. Kline* George Louis Kline (1921-) Amer. educator
- Knight* . . . Arthur Knight (fl. 1953) Amer. movie critic
- F. M. Knight* Francis McMaster Knight (1890-1958) Amer. banker
- Knott* . . . H. W. Howard Knott (d. 1930) Amer. educator
- Knox* . . . Israel Knox (1906-) Amer. (Russ.-born) educator
- John Knox* John Knox (1505-1572) Scot. reformer
- William Knox* William Knox (1789-1825) Scot. poet
- Kobler* . . . John Kobler (1910-) Amer. writer
- Kodak Abstract* Eastman Kodak monthly
- Kodak Reference Handbook* The Eastman Kodak Co.
- Koestler* . . . Arthur Koestler (1905-1983) Brit. (Hung.-born) author
- Kogan* . . . Herman Kogan (1914-) Amer. editor
- Kohler* . . . Dayton Kohler (1907-) Amer. educator
- Kolodin* . . . Irving Kolodin (1908-) Amer. music critic
- Koontz* . . . Harold Dayton Koontz (1908-) Amer. educator
- Krey* . . . Laura Lettie Krey (1890-) Amer. nov.
- Krim* . . . Seymour Krim (1922-) Amer. writer
- Kristol* . . . Irving Kristol (1922-) Amer. educator
- Krock* . . . Arthur Krock (1886-1974) Amer. journalist
- Kroeber* . . . Alfred Lewis Kroeber (1876-1960) Amer. anthropologist
- Kronenberger* Louis Kronenberger (1904-1980) Amer. drama critic
- Krout* . . . John Allen Krout (1896-) Amer. educator
- Krutch* . . . Joseph Wood Krutch (1893-1970) Amer. critic
- Kuney* . . . Joseph H. Kuney (fl. 1949) Amer. editor
- Kupferberg* Herbert Kupferberg (1918-) Amer. journalist
- Kurtz* . . . Paul Winter Kurtz (1925-) Amer. educator
- Kyne* . . . Peter Bernard Kyne (1880-1957) Amer. author
- La Barre* . . . Weston La Barre (1911-) Amer. anthropologist
- Harriet La Barre* Harriet La Barre (fl. 1954) Amer. editor
- Labor and Nation* Amer. bimonthly
- Lack* . . . Arthur Lack (1931-) Amer. journalist
- LaCossitt* . . . Henry LaCossitt (1901-1962) Amer. editor
- La Farge* . . . Oliver Hazard Perry La Farge (1901-1963) Amer. author
- Christopher La Farge* Christopher La Farge (1897-1956) Amer. poet
- Laird* . . . Charlton Grant Laird (1901-) Amer. educator
- Lamb* . . . Charles Lamb (1775-1834) Eng. essayist
- The Lamp* Standard Oil Company (N.J.)
- Lancaster* . . . Bruce Lancaster (1896-1963) Amer. nov.
- Osbert Lancaster* Osbert Lancaster (1908-) Eng. writer
- Lancet* . . . Brit. weekly
- Landis* . . . Paul H. Landis (1901-) Amer. sociologist
- Landman* . . . David Landman (1917-) Amer. writer
- Landor* . . . Walter Savage Landor (1775-1864) Eng. author
- Land Reborn* Amer. periodical
- Lang* . . . Andrew Lang (1844-1912) Scot. author
- Daniel Lang* Daniel Lang (1915-1981) Amer. journalist
- John Lang* John Lang (fl. 1852-1878) Brit. nov.
- P. H. Lang* Paul Henry Lang (1901-) Amer. (Hung.-born) musicologist
- Langdon* . . . William Russell Langdon (1891-) Amer. foreign service officer
- W. C. Langdon* William Chauncey Langdon (1871-1947) Amer. author
- Lange* . . . Oscar Richard Lange (1904-1965) Pol. diplomat
- Langer* . . . Susanne (Katherina Knauth) Langer (1895-) Amer. educator
- W. L. Langer* William Leonard Langer (1896-1977) Amer. educator
- Langfeld* . . . Herbert Sidney Langfeld (1879-1958) Amer. psychologist
- Langley* . . . Adria Locke Langley (fl. 1945) Amer. author
- Eve Langley* Eve Langley (1908-) N. Z. nov.
- Lanier* . . . Sidney Lanier (1842-1881) Amer. poet
- Lans* . . . Asher B. Lans (1918-) Amer. attorney
- Lardner* . . . John Abbott Lardner (1912-1960) Amer. writer
- Rex Lardner* Rex Lardner (1881-1941) Amer. journalist
- Ring Lardner* Ringgold Wilmer Lardner (1885-1933) Amer. writer
- Larrabee* . . . Harold Atkins Larrabee (1894-1979) Amer. educator
- Lasker* . . . Bruno Lasker (1880-1965) Amer. (Ger.-born) sociologist
- Laski* . . . Harold Joseph Laski (1893-1950) Eng. political scientist
- Lasswell* . . . Mary Clyde Grayson Lubbock Lasswell (1905-) Amer. author
- Latham* . . . Earl Ganson Latham (1907-1977) Amer. political scientist
- Lathrop* . . . George Parsons Lathrop (1851-1898) Amer. author
- Latimer* . . . Hugh Latimer (1485?-1555) Eng. Protestant martyr
- Anny Latour* Anny Latour (fl. 1956) French art historian
- Latourette* Kenneth Scott Latourette (1884-1968) Amer. religious historian
- Eleanor Latimore* Eleanor Holgate Lattimore (1895-1970) Amer. author; wife of Owen
- Owen Lattimore* Owen Lattimore (1900-) Amer. orientalist
- Lauber* . . . Patricia Grace Lauber (1924-) Amer. author
- Gladys Laubin* Gladys Laubin (fl. 1949) Amer. dancer; wife of Reginald
- Reginald Laubin* Reginald Laubin (fl. 1949) Amer. dancer
- Laver* . . . James Laver (1899-1975) Eng. writer
- Laverty* . . . Maura Laverty (1907-1966) Irish nov.
- Lawler* . . . John Lawrence Lawler (1916-) Amer. newspaperman
- Lawrence* . . . David Leo Lawrence (1889-1966) Amer. politician
- David Lawrence* David Lawrence (1888-1973) Amer. journalist
- D. H. Lawrence* David Herbert Lawrence (1885-1930) Eng. nov.
- E. O. Lawrence* Ernest Orlando Lawrence (1901-1958) Amer. physicist
- Robert Lawrence* Robert Lawrence (1912-) Amer. conductor
- T. E. Lawrence* Thomas Edward Lawrence (1888-1935) Lawrence of Arabia Brit. soldier
- W. H. Lawrence* William Howard Lawrence (1916-1972) Amer. broadcaster
- William Lawrence* William Lawrence (1850-1941) Amer. bishop
- Lawson* . . . Ted W. Lawson (1917-) Amer. Army Air Force officer
- Law Times* Eng. weekly journal
- Leakey* . . . Louis Seymour Bazzett Leakey (1903-1972) Brit. paleontologist
- Lear* . . . John Lear (1909-) Amer. writer
- Leary* . . . Lewis Gaston Leary (1906-) Amer. educator
- Leavis* . . . Frank Raymond Leavis (1895-1978) Eng. educator
- Leavitt* . . . Robert Keith Leavitt (1895-) Amer. author
- Le Beau* . . . Walter L. Le Beau (fl. 1954) Amer. priest
- Lebon* . . . John Harold George Lebon (1909-) Brit. educator
- Lecky* . . . William Edward Hartpole Lecky (1838-1903) Irish historian
- Ledig-Rowohlt* Heinrich Maria Ledig-Rowohlt (fl. 1955) Ger. publisher
- Lee* . . . Charles Lee (1913-) Amer. educator
- C. O. Lee* Charles Oren Lee (1883-) Amer. educator
- Sidney Lee* Sir Sidney Lee (1859-1926) Eng. editor
- Leech* . . . Margaret Leech (1893-1974) Amer. author
- Leedy* . . . Haldan A. Leedy (1910-) Amer. research executive
- Le Fanu* . . . Joseph Sheridan Le Fanu (1814-1873) Irish nov.
- Lehrer* . . . Thomas Andrew Lehrer (1928-) Amer. songwriter
- Lehrman* . . . Harold Arthur Lehrman (1911-) Amer. writer
- Leland* . . . Charles Godfrey Leland (1824-1903) Amer. humorist
- Lengyel* . . . Emil Lengyel (1895-) Amer. (Hung.-born) educator
- Leonard* . . . Jonathan Norton Leonard (1903-1975) Amer. journalist
- Lepawsky* . . . Albert Lepawsky (1908-) Amer. educator
- Lerner* . . . Max Lerner (1902-) Amer. (Russ.-born) author

- L'Estrange* Sir Roger L'Estrange (1616-1704) Eng. journalist
- Le Sueur* . . . Meridel Le Sueur (1900-) Amer. writer
- Levin* . . . Harry (Tuchman) Levin (1912-) Amer. educator
- Martin Levin* Martin Levin (fl. 1963) Amer. editor
- Levy* . . . Milton Levy (1903-1976) Amer. scientist
- Lewes* . . . George Henry Lewes (1817-1878) Eng. writer
- Lewis* . . . Roy Lewis (1913-) Eng. economist
- C. I. Lewis* Clarence Irving Lewis (1883-1964) Amer. philosopher
- C. S. Lewis* Clive Staples Lewis (1898-1963) Clive Hamilton Eng. writer
- Day Lewis* Cecil Day Lewis (1904-1972) Eng. author; pen name Nicholas Blake
- D. B. Lewis* Diana Bonner Lewis, N. Y. Herald Tribune Book Rev. (1953)
- Flora Lewis* Flora (Gruson) Lewis (1922-) Amer. writer
- G. M. Lewis* George Morris Lewis (1899-1966) Amer. (Canad.-born) physician
- Naomi Lewis* Naomi Lewis (fl. 1953) Eng. writer
- Norman Lewis* Norman Lewis (fl. 1955) Brit. author
- Oscar Lewis* Oscar Lewis (1893-) Amer. author
- Robert Lewis* Robert Lewis (1909-) Amer. theatrical director
- Sinclair Lewis* Sinclair Lewis (1885-1951) Amer. nov.
- W. A. Lewis* Sir (William) Arthur Lewis (1915-) Eng. political economist
- Wyndham Lewis* Wyndham Lewis (1884-1957) Brit. painter
- Lewisohn* Ludwig Lewisohn (1883-1955) Amer. (Ger.-born) author
- Library Jour.* Amer. monthly
- Liddon* . . . Henry Parry Liddon (1829-1890) Eng. clergyman
- Lie* . . . Trygve Halvdan Lie (1896-1968) Norw. statesman; secy.-gen. of U.N.
- Lieb* . . . Frederick George Lieb (1888-1980) Amer. sportswriter
- Lieberman* Henry R. Lieberman (1916-) Amer. newspaperman
- Liebling* . . . Abbott Joseph Liebling (1904-1964) Amer. journalist
- Life* . . . Amer. weekly
- Limb* . . . Ben Chik Limb (1893-1976) Korean diplomat
- Lincoln* . . . Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865) 16th president of the U.S.
- C. H. Lincoln* Charles Henry Lincoln (1869-) Amer. editor
- F. C. Lincoln* Frederick Charles Lincoln (1892-1960) Amer. biologist
- Freeman Lincoln* (Joseph) Freeman Lincoln (1900-1962) Amer. journalist
- Lindeman* . . . Eduard Christian Lindeman (1885-1953) Amer. educator
- Lindner* . . . Robert Mitchell Lindner (1914-1956) Amer. psychologist
- Lindsay* . . . (Nicholas) Vachel Lindsay (1879-1931) Amer. poet
- Linebarger* Paul Myron Anthony Linebarger (1913-1966) Amer. educator
- Lingard* . . . John Lingard (1771-1851) Eng. historian
- Linguaphone Mag.* The Linguaphone Institute, London
- Link* . . . Arthur Stanley Link (1920-) Amer. educator
- Linklater* . . . Eric Linklater (1899-1974) Scot. author
- Linton* . . . Ralph Linton (1893-1953) Amer. anthropologist
- Lippincott* . . . Isaac Lippincott (1881-1959) Amer. educator
- Lippmann* . . . Walter Lippmann (1889-1974) Amer. writer
- Littell* . . . Robert Littell (1896-1963) Amer. writer
- Littlefield* . . . Henry Wilson Littlefield (1905-) Amer. educator
- Littleton* . . . Ananias Charles Littleton (1886-) Amer. accountant
- Liturgical Arts* Amer. quarterly
- Livingston* John Joseph Livingston (1906-) Amer. military engineer
- Livingstone* David Livingstone (1813-1873) Scot. explorer
- R. W. Livingstone* Sir Richard Winn Livingstone (1880-1960) Brit. classical scholar
- Richard Llewellyn* pen name of Richard Dafydd Vivian Llewellyn Lloyd (1907-) Brit. author
- Locke* . . . John Locke (1632-1704) Eng. philosopher
- Alain Locke* Alain Leroy Locke (1886-1954) Amer. educator
- W. J. Locke* William John Locke (1863-1930) Brit. nov.
- Lockhart* . . . John Gibson Lockhart (1794-1854) Scot. biographer
- Lockridge* . . . Ross Franklin Lockridge (1914-1948) Amer. educator
- Lockyer* . . . Sir Joseph Norman Lockyer (1836-1920) Eng. astronomer
- Lodge* . . . John Davis Lodge (1903-) Amer. diplomat
- Loewy* . . . Raymond Fernand Loewy (1893-) Amer. (Fr.-born) industrial designer
- London* . . . Jack London (1876-1916) Amer. writer
- London Calling* Brit. weekly (BBC)
- Long* . . . Augustus White Long (fl. 1939) Amer. author
- Lois Long* Lois Long (1901-1974) Amer. writer
- Longfellow* Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882) Amer. poet
- Lord* . . . Russell Lord (1895-) Amer. writer
- Los Angeles Examiner* Los Angeles daily
- Los Angeles Times* Los Angeles daily
- Lovelace* . . . Richard Lovelace (1618-1658) Eng. poet
- Loveman* . . . Amy Loveman (1881-1955) Amer. editor
- Lover* . . . Samuel Lover (1797-1868) Irish nov.
- Lovett* . . . Robert Morss Lovett (1870-1956) Amer. educator
- Sidney Lovett* Sidney Augustus Lovett (1890-1979) Amer. theologian
- Lowe* . . . Robert Lowe (1811-1892) Viscount Sherbrooke, Brit. political leader
- Victor Lowe* Victor Augustus Lowe (1907-) Amer. educator
- Lowell* . . . Amy Lowell (1874-1925) Amer. poet
- J. R. Lowell* James Russell Lowell (1819-1891) Amer. author
- Robert Lowell* Robert (Traill Spence) Lowell (1917-1977) Amer. poet
- Lowenthal* . . . Marvin Lowenthal (1890-1969) Amer. author
- Lowes* . . . John Livingston Lowes (1867-1945) Amer. educator
- Lowie* . . . Robert Harry Lowie (1883-1957) Amer. (Austrian-born) anthropologist
- Lowrie* . . . Walter Lowrie (1868-1959) Amer. clergyman
- Lowry* . . . Robert James Lowry (1910-) Amer. nov.
- E. G. Lowry* Edward George Lowry (1876-1943) Amer. journalist
- Lubbock* . . . Sir John Lubbock (1834-1913) 1st baron Avebury, Eng. author
- Lucbell* . . . Samuel Lucbell (1911-) Amer. (Pol.-born) writer
- Lucas* . . . Edward Verrall Lucas (1868-1938) Eng. writer
- Dione Lucas* Dione Narona Margaris (Wilson) Lucas (1909-1971) Eng. restaurateur
- Samuel Lucas* Samuel Lucas (1818-1865) Eng. writer
- Ludwig* . . . Jack Barry Ludwig (1922-) Canad.-born educator
- Lueders* . . . Edward George Lueders (1923-) Amer. editor
- Lukens* . . . Raymond James Lukens (1930-) Amer. plant pathologist
- Lustgarten* . . . Edgar Lustgarten (1907-1978) Brit. nov.
- Lydgate* . . . William Anthony Lydgate (1909-) Amer. editor
- Lyell* . . . Sir Charles Lyell (1797-1875) Brit. geologist
- Lynch* . . . Thomas Toke Lynch (1818-1871) Eng. hymn writer
- Lynd* . . . Robert Lynd (1879-1949) Irish journalist
- Lynes* . . . Thomas C. Lynes (fl. 1948) Amer. research chemist
- Lytton* . . . Edward George Earle Lytton Bulwer-Lytton (1803-1873) 1st baron Lytton, Eng. author
- Maas* . . . Anthony J. Maas (1858-1927) Amer. (Ger.-born) priest
- McAllister* (Samuel) Ward McAllister (1827-1895) Amer. society leader
- MacArthur* Douglas MacArthur (1880-1964) Amer. general
- Macaulay* . . . Thomas Babington Macaulay (1800-1859) 1st baron Macaulay, Eng. historian
- Rose Macaulay* Dame Rose Macaulay (1881-1958) Eng. nov.
- McAuliffe* . . . Mike McAuliffe, The Irish Digest (1952)
- McCain* . . . Arthur Williamson McCain (1894-) Amer. banker
- MacCallum* William George MacCallum (1874-1944) Amer. (Canad.-born) pathologist
- McCarten* John McCarten (1916-1974) Amer. writer
- M'Carthy* . . . Justin M'Carthy (1830-1912) Irish writer
- Desmond MacCarthy* Desmond MacCarthy (1878-1952) Eng. journalist
- J. McCarthy* Rev. J. McCarthy, The Irish Digest (1954)
- Mary MacCarthy* Mary Therese McCarthy (1912-) Amer. author
- McCartney* Eugene Stock McCartney (1883-) Amer. educator
- McCloskey* John Clement McCloskey (1895-) Amer. educator
- McClung* . . . Paul McClung, Inside Detective (1958)
- McClure's Mag.* Amer. monthly
- MacColl* . . . Mary MacColl (fl. 1936) Amer. educator
- McColvin* . . . Lionel Roy McColvin (1896-1976) Eng. librarian
- McComas* J. Francis McComas (fl. 1954) Amer. editor
- McConathy et al* Osbourne William McConathy (1875-1947) Amer. music editor
- McCourt* . . . Edward Alexander McCourt (1907-) Canad. (Irish-born) educator
- McCrae* . . . Hugh Raymond McCrae (1876-1958) Austral. poet
- McCrone* . . . Guy McCrone (1896-) Scot. nov.
- McCullers* Carson Smith McCullers (1917-1967) Amer. author
- Macdonald* George Macdonald (1824-1905) Scot. writer
- Alexander Mac Donald* Alexander MacDonald (1889-) Amer. writer
- Dwight Macdonald* Dwight Macdonald (1906-) Amer. journalist
- McDougall* William McDougall (1871-1938) Brit. psychologist
- MacFall* . . . Haldane MacFall (1860-1928) Brit. nov.
- McFee* . . . William McFee (1881-1966) Eng. writer
- McGiffert* . . . Arthur Cushman McGiffert (1861-1933) Amer. theologian
- McGranery* James Patrick McGranery (1895-1962) Amer. jurist
- McHugh* . . . Vincent McHugh (1904-) Amer. writer
- MacInnes* . . . Helen MacInnes (1907-) Amer. (Scot.-born) author
- MacIver* . . . Robert Morrison MacIver (1882-1970) Scot. sociologist
- Mackay* . . . Charles Mackay (1814-1889) Scot. poet
- McKean* . . . Dayton David McKean (1904-1977) Amer. educator
- Mackenzie* Sir Compton Mackenzie (1883-1972) Eng. nov.
- Henry Mackenzie* Henry Mackenzie (1745-1831) Scot. nov.
- McKeon* . . . Richard Peter McKeon (1900-) Amer. educator
- McKinley* . . . William McKinley (1843-1901) 25th president of the U.S.

- Mackintosh* Sir James Mackintosh (1765-1832) Scot. philosopher
- Maclaren-Ross* Julian Maclaren-Ross (fl. 1954) Eng. author
- McLean* Alan Angus McLean (1925-) Amer. psychiatrist
- Fitzroy Maclean* Sir Fitzroy Hew Maclean (1911-) Brit. politician
- H. N. Maclean* Hugh Norman Maclean (1919-) Canad. educator
- Maclean's* Canad. periodical
- MacLeish* Archibald MacLeish (1892-1982) Amer. poet
- MacLennan* Hugh MacLennan (1907-) Canad. nov.
- Ian MacLennan* Ian MacLennan (fl. 1958) Scot. journalist
- Macmahon* Arthur Whittier Macmahon (1890-1980) Amer. educator
- Patrick McMahon* Patrick McMahon (fl. 1953) Amer. editor
- McMahon* William Miller Macmillan (1885-1974) So. African (Scot.-born) historian
- MacNeice* Louis MacNeice (1907-1963) Brit. (Irish-born) poet
- McNulty* John McNulty (1895-1956) Amer. journalist
- Faith McNulty* Faith McNulty (1918-) Amer. writer
- McNulty McPherson* John Hanson Thomas McPherson (1865-1953) Amer. historian
- Macy* John Albert Macy (1877-1932) Amer. author
- Magill* Roswell Foster Magill (1895-1963) Amer. lawyer
- Mahan* Alfred Thayer Mahan (1840-1914) Amer. historian
- Maher* Nellie Maher (fl. 1953) Irish writer
- Mahler* Jane Gaston Mahler (1906-) Amer. educator
- Mailer* Norman Mailer (1923-) Amer. author
- Mais* Stuart Petre Brodie Mais (1885-1975) Eng. writer
- Maitland* Frederic William Maitland (1850-1906) Eng. legal historian
- Majdalany* Fred Majdalany (1913-) Eng. author
- Malahoff* Alexander Malahoff, Science (1966) Amer. writer
- Malamud* Bernard Malamud (1914-) Amer. writer
- Malcolm* Donald F. Malcolm (fl. 1955) Amer. writer
- Malik* Charles Habib Malik (1906-) Lebanese diplomat
- Malinowski* Bronislaw Kasper Malinowski (1884-1942) Pol. anthropologist
- Mallock* William Hurrell Mallock (1849-1923) Eng. writer
- Mallon* James Joseph Mallon (1875-1961) Eng. sociologist
- Malone* Kemp Malone (1889-1971) Amer. educator
- Dumas Malone* Dumas Malone (1892-) Amer. historian
- J. R. Malone* John R. Malone, New Printing Methods (1949)
- Malthus* Thomas Robert Malthus (1766-1834) Eng. economist
- Manchester Examiner* Brit. daily
- Manchester Guardian* Brit. newspaper
- Mandel* Siegfried Mandel (1922-) Ger.-born educator
- Mandelbaum* David Goodman Mandelbaum (1911-) Amer. anthropologist
- Mandeville* Bernard Mandeville (1670?-1733) Eng. (Du.-born) satirist
- Mann* Horace Mann (1796-1859) Amer. educator
- Thomas Mann* Thomas Mann (1875-1955) Amer. (Ger.-born) author
- Mannes* Marya Mannes (1904-) Amer. writer
- Manning* Henry Edward Manning (1808-1892) Eng. cardinal
- Mannix* Jule Mannix, Omnibook (1954)
- Manoukian* Madeline Manoukian (1921-) Brit. social worker
- Mansfield* Katherine Mansfield (1888-1923) Brit. writer
- Manship* Paul Manship (1885-1966) Amer. sculptor
- Manual for Courts-Martial* U.S. Dept. of Defense 1949
- Manual of Prayers* a manual of prayers for the use of the Catholic laity
- Manual of Seamanship* Admiralty, London
- Manual of Style* Univ. of Chicago Press
- Marcuse* Jacques Marcuse (fl. 1964) Belgian-born foreign correspondent
- Margolis* Joseph Zalman Margolis (1924-) Amer. educator
- Louis Margolis* Louis Margolis (fl. 1922) Amer. engineer
- Markham* (Charles) Edwin Markham (1852-1940) Amer. poet
- Mark Twain* pseud. of Samuel Langhorne Clemens (1835-1910) Amer. author
- Marlowe* Christopher Marlowe (1564-1593) Eng. dramatist
- Marquand* John Phillips Marquand (1893-1960) Amer. writer
- Marryat* Frederick Marryat (1792-1848) Eng. naval officer & nov.
- Marsh* Dame Ngajo Marsh (1899-1982) N. Z. writer
- Philip Marsh* Philip Merrill Marsh (1893-) Amer. educator
- Marshak* Robert Eugene Marshak (1916-) Amer. physicist
- Marshall* George Catlett Marshall (1880-1959) Amer. army officer
- Archibald Marshall* Archibald Marshall (1866-1934) Eng. nov.
- Bruce Marshall* Bruce Marshall (1899-) Scot. nov.
- C. B. Marshall* Charles Burton Marshall (1908-) Amer. author
- Edison Marshall* Edison Marshall (1894-1967) Amer. author
- John Marshall* John Marshall (1755-1835) chief justice, U.S. Supreme Court
- N. B. Marshall* Norman Bertram Marshall (1915-) Eng. naturalist
- S. L. A. Marshall* Samuel Lyman Atwood Marshall (1900-1977) Amer. military critic
- Martin* Sir Theodore Martin (1816-1909) Brit. writer
- Harry Martin* Harry Martin, Retailing Daily (1954)
- J. B. Martin* John Bartlow Martin (1915-) Amer. journalist
- John Martin* John Martin (1893-) Amer. dance critic
- J. S. Martin* James Stewart Martin (1911-) Amer. author
- Pete Martin* Pete Martin (1901-) Amer. editor
- Martineau* Harriet Martineau (1802-1876) Eng. nov.
- James Martineau* James Martineau (1805-1900) Eng. theologian; brother of Harriet
- Marvel* Tom Marvel (1901-1970) Amer. author
- Masani* Minocheher Rustom Masani (1905-) Indian diplomat
- Masefield* John Masefield (1878-1967) Eng. poet
- Mason* Francis Van Wyck Mason (1901-1978) Amer. nov.
- S. F. Mason* Stephen Finney Mason (1923-) Eng. scientist
- Masson* David Masson (1822-1907) Scot. author
- Masters* John Masters (1914-) Eng. author
- Mather* Frank Jewett Mather (1868-1953) Amer. educator
- K. F. Mather* Kirtley Fletcher Mather (1888-1978) Amer. geologist
- Matheson* George Matheson (1842-1906) Scot. clergyman
- Mathews* Mitford McLeod Mathews (1891-) Amer. editor
- Mathewson* Christopher (Christy) Mathewson (1880-1925) Amer. baseball player
- Mathews* (James) Brander Mathews (1852-1929) Amer. educator
- H. L. Mathews* Herbert Lionel Mathews (1900-1977) Amer. journalist
- Matthiessen* Francis Otto Matthiessen (1902-1950) Amer. educator
- Mattingly* Garrett Mattingly (1900-1962) Amer. historian
- Maude* Angus Edmond Upton Maude (1912-) Eng. economist
- Mauer* Edgar Frank Mauer (1908-) Amer. physician
- Maugham* (William) Somerset Maugham (1874-1965) Eng. author
- Maughan* Charles Maughan, Britain Today (1953)
- Maule* Harry Edward Maule (1886-1971) Amer. editor
- Maurer* David W. Maurer (1906-1981) Amer. educator
- Maurice* Sir John Frederick Maurice (1841-1912) Eng. writer
- Maurois* André Maurois (1885-1967) French author
- Maury* Matthew Fontaine Maury (1806-1873) Amer. scientist
- Maxwell* James A. Maxwell (1912-) Amer. writer
- May* Sir Thomas Erskine May (1815-1886) 1st baron Farnborough. Eng. jurist
- Derwent May* Derwent May (1930-) Brit. writer
- Mayer* Milton Sanford Mayer (1908-) Amer. educator
- Mazur* Paul Myer Mazur (1892-1979) Amer. investment banker
- Mead* Margaret Mead (1901-1978) Amer. anthropologist
- Hunter Mead* Hunter Mead (1907-1961) Amer. educator
- Meeker* Oden Meeker (fl. 1954) Amer. author
- Mehdevi* Anne Sinclair Mehdevi (fl. 1954) Amer. author
- Melby* Ernest Oscar Melby (1891-) Amer. educator
- Melden* Abraham Irving Melden (1910-) Canad. philosopher
- Meltzer* Bernard Nathan Meltzer (1916-) Amer. sociologist
- Melville* Herman Melville (1819-1891) Amer. nov.
- Mencken* Henry Louis Mencken (1880-1956) Amer. editor
- Mendel* Arthur Paul Mendel (1927-) Amer. educator
- Menen* Aubrey Menen (1912-) Brit. author
- Menninger* Karl Augustus Menninger (1893-) Amer. psychiatrist
- Mercantile Marine Mag.* Brit. magazine
- Mercer* Samuel Alfred Browne Mercer (1880-1969) Amer. (Eng.-born) Egyptologist
- Meredith* George Meredith (1828-1909) Eng. author
- Mereness* Newton Dennison Mereness (1868-) Amer. editor
- Merivale* Charles Merivale (1808-1893) Eng. historian
- Meriwether* Robert Lee Meriwether (1890-) Amer. educator
- Merrill* Paul Willard Merrill (1887-1961) Amer. astronomer
- G. P. Merrill* George Perkins Merrill (1854-1929) Amer. geologist
- Merriman* Roger Bigelow Merriman (1876-1945) Amer. historian
- Messenger* Donald Messenger (1898-) Brit. journalist
- Metalious* Grace de Repentigny Metalious (1925-1964) Amer. author
- H. C. Metcalfe* Harold Clark Metcalfe (1919-) Amer. educator
- Meyer* Agnes Elizabeth Meyer (1887-1970) Amer. publisher
- A. G. Meyer* Alfred George Meyer (1920-) Amer. (Ger.-born) political scientist
- Mezger* Fritz Mezger (1893-1979) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Miall* Agnes MacKenzie Miall (1892-) Eng. author
- Michelson* Edward J. Michelson (fl. 1954) Amer. reporter
- Michener* James Albert Michener (1907-) Amer. author
- Middle East Jour.* Amer. quarterly
- Middleton* Thomas Middleton (1570?-1627) Eng. dramatist
- Drew Middleton* Drew Middleton (1913-) Amer. journalist
- Miers* Earl Schenck Miers (1910-1972) Amer. editor

- Mikesell* . . . Raymond Frech Mikesell (1913-) Amer. economist
- Miles* . . . Josephine Miles (1911-) Amer. educator
- Mill* . . . James Mill (1773-1836) Scot. philosopher
- J. S. Mill* . . . John Stuart Mill (1806-1873) Brit. philosopher; son of James
- Millan* . . . Verna Carleton Millan (fl. 1939) Amer. author
- Mill & Factory* . . . Margaret Ellis Millar (1915-) Amer. (Canad.-born) author
- Millard* . . . Joseph John Millard (1908-) Amer. writer
- Millay* . . . Edna St. Vincent Millay (1892-1950) Amer. poet
- Miller* . . . Arthur Miller (1915-) Amer. playwright
- D. F. Miller* . . . Rev. D. F. Miller, The Irish Digest (1953)
- G. A. Miller* . . . George Armitage Miller (1920-) Amer. educator
- Henry Miller* . . . Henry Miller (1891-1980) Amer. writer
- L. M. Miller* . . . Leonard M. Miller (fl. 1942) Amer. educator
- Merle Miller* . . . Merle Miller (1919-) Amer. author
- P. L. Miller* . . . Philip Lieson Miller (1906-) Amer. librarian
- Millett* . . . Fred Benjamin Millett (1890-1976) Amer. educator
- Mills* . . . Charles Wright Mills (1916-1962) Amer. sociologist
- Millstein* . . . Gilbert Millstein (fl. 1955) Amer. writer
- Milman* . . . Henry Hart Milman (1791-1868) Eng. historian
- Milner* . . . Donald Rigby Milner (1923-) Brit. reporter
- Milton* . . . John Milton (1608-1674) Eng. poet
- Mims* . . . Edwin Mims (1872-1959) Amer. educator
- Miner* . . . Roy Waldo Miner (1875-1955) Amer. curator
- Audax Minor* . . . pseud. of George F. T. Ryall (1887?-1979) Amer. sports-writer
- Mitchell* . . . Donald Grant Mitchell (1822-1908) Amer. author
- Joseph Mitchell* . . . Joseph Mitchell (1908-) Amer. author
- Mitford* . . . Mary Russell Mitford (1787-1855) Eng. author
- Nancy Mitford* . . . Nancy Mitford (1904-1973) Eng. author
- Mizener* . . . Arthur Moore Mizener (1907-) Amer. educator
- Moberly* . . . Sir Walter (Hamilton) Moberly (1881-1974) Eng. educator
- Modern Industry* . . . Amer. magazine
- Modern Language Notes* . . . Amer. periodical
- Modern Textiles Mag.* . . . Amer. monthly
- Mogey* . . . John McFarland Mogey (1915-) Irish-born sociologist
- Mohler* . . . John Robbins Mohler (1875-1952) Amer. pathologist
- Moir* . . . Guthrie Moir, London Calling (1954)
- Moley* . . . Raymond Moley (1886-1975) Amer. journalist
- Monaghan* . . . James (Jay) Monaghan (1891-) Amer. author
- Monroe* . . . Elizabeth Monroe (1905-) Brit. educator
- Monsanto Mag.* . . . Monsanto Chemical Co.
- Montagu* . . . Lady Mary Wortley Montagu (1689-1762) Eng. writer
- Ashley Montagu* . . . (Montague Francis) Ashley Montagu (1905-) Amer. (Eng.-born) anthropologist
- Montague* . . . Charles Edward Montague (1867-1928) Eng. author
- Montrose* . . . James Graham (1612-1650) 1st marquis of Montrose. Scot. soldier
- Moody* . . . William Vaughn Moody (1869-1910) Amer. author
- M. H. Moody* . . . Minnie Hite Moody (1901-) Amer. author
- Mooney* . . . Hughson F. Mooney (fl. 1954) Amer. educator
- Moore* . . . William Levi Moore (1889-) Amer. educator
- A. B. Moore* . . . Albert Burton Moore (1887-1967) Amer. educator
- Asher Moore* . . . Asher Moore (1919-) Amer. educator
- George Moore* . . . George Moore (1852-1933) Irish author
- J. B. Moore* . . . John Bassett Moore (1860-1947) Amer. jurist
- John Moore* . . . John Moore (1729-1802) Scot. physician
- Thomas Moore* . . . Thomas Moore (1779-1852) Irish poet
- W. R. Moore* . . . William Robert Moore (1899-) Amer. writer
- Moorehead* . . . Alan McCrae Moorehead (1910-) Austral. writer
- Morby* . . . Edwin Seth Morby (1909-) Amer. educator
- More* . . . Paul Elmer More (1864-1937) Amer. author
- Morehead* . . . Albert Morehead (1910-1966) Amer. editor
- Morgan* . . . Forrest Morgan (1852-1924) Amer. librarian
- Morgenthau* . . . Hans Joachim Morgenthau (1904-1980) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Morison* . . . Samuel Eliot Morison (1887-1976) Amer. historian
- Morley* . . . Christopher Darlington Morley (1890-1957) Amer. writer
- Felix Morley* . . . Felix Muskett Morley (1894-) Amer. educator; brother of Christopher
- John Morley* . . . John Morley (1838-1923) Viscount Morley of Blackburn. Eng. author
- Morning Post* . . . London daily
- Morris* . . . William Morris (1834-1896) Eng. poet and artist
- Charles Morris* . . . Charles William Morris (1901-) Amer. educator
- Clara Morris* . . . Clara Morris (1848-1925) Amer. (Canad.-born) actress
- Edita Morris* . . . Edita Morris (1902-) Amer. (Swed.-born) author
- I. V. Morris* . . . Ira Victor Morris (1903-) Amer. author
- J. A. Morris* . . . Joe Alex Morris (1904-) Amer. journalist
- R. B. Morris* . . . Richard Brandon Morris (1904-) Amer. educator
- Morrison* . . . Abraham Cressy Morrison (1864-1951) Amer. chemist
- Arthur Morrison* . . . Arthur Morrison (1863-1945) Eng. author
- Morse* . . . Robert Morse (1906-) Amer. writer
- Wayne Morse* . . . Wayne Lyman Morse (1900-1974) Amer. politician
- Morton* . . . Frederic Morton (1924-) Amer. (Austrian-born) nov.
- Mosely* . . . Philip Edward Mosely (1905-1972) Amer. educator
- Moses* . . . Robert Moses (1888-1981) Amer. public official
- Moss* . . . Claude Beaufort Moss (1888-1964) Eng. prelate
- Howard Moss* . . . Howard Moss (1922-) Amer. writer
- Motley* . . . John Lothrop Motley (1814-1877) Amer. historian
- The Motor* . . . Brit. weekly
- Mott* . . . Frank Luther Mott (1886-1964) Amer. journalist
- Mott-Smith* . . . Geoffrey Mott-Smith (1902-1960) Amer. mathematician
- Mowat* . . . Farley McGill Mowat (1921-) Canad. author
- Mowrer* . . . Edgar Ansel Mowrer (1892-1977) Amer. columnist
- Mozley* . . . James Bowling Mozley (1813-1878) Eng. theologian
- Muggeridge* . . . Malcolm Muggeridge (1903-) Eng. editor
- Muir* . . . John Muir (1838-1914) Amer. (Scot.-born) naturalist
- Muirhead* . . . John Henry Muirhead (1855-1940) Brit. philosopher
- Mullahy* . . . Patrick Mullahy, New Republic (1952)
- Muller* . . . Herbert Joseph Muller (1905-1980) Amer. educator
- F. M. Müller* . . . Friedrich Max Müller (1823-1900) Brit. philologist
- Mumford* . . . Lewis Mumford (1895-) Amer. writer
- Munro* . . . Sir Leslie (Knox) Munro (1901-1974) N. Z. diplomat
- Murchie* . . . Guy Murchie (1907-) Amer. author
- Murchison* . . . Carl Murchison (1887-1961) Amer. psychologist
- Murdock* . . . Kenneth Ballard Murdock (1895-1975) Amer. educator
- Murphy* . . . Arthur Edward Murphy (1901-1962) Amer. educator
- Murray* . . . Sir James Augustus Henry Murray (1837-1915) Brit. lexicographer
- G. W. Murray* . . . George William Murray (1885-1966) Eng. geographer
- R. W. Murray* . . . Raymond William Murray (1893-) Amer. clergyman
- William Murray* . . . William Murray (1926-) Amer. journalist
- Murry* . . . John Middleton Murry (1889-1957) Eng. author
- Musical America* . . . Amer. monthly
- Muzzey* . . . David Saville Muzzey (1870-1965) Amer. historian
- My Baby Mag.* . . . Amer. monthly
- Myers* . . . Frederic William Henry Myers (1843-1901) Eng. writer
- W. S. Myers* . . . William Starr Myers (1877-1956) Amer. political scientist
- Nagel* . . . Ernest Nagel (1901-) Amer. (Czech-born) educator
- Namier* . . . Sir Lewis Bernstein Namier (1888-1960) Brit. historian
- Nash* . . . Thomas Nash (1567-1601) Eng. author
- Nathan* . . . George Jean Nathan (1882-1958) Amer. editor
- The Nation* . . . Amer. weekly
- Nation's Business* . . . Amer. monthly
- Nat'l Fur News* . . . Amer. monthly
- Nat'l Geog. Mag.* . . . Amer. periodical
- Nat'l Jewish Monthly* . . . Amer. periodical
- The Naval Reservist* . . . U.S. Government
- Nazi Conspiracy and Aggression* . . . U.S. Government Printing Office
- Nebel* . . . Frederick Nebel (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Neff* . . . Frederick Clifton Neff (1913-) Amer. educator
- Neill* . . . Thomas Patrick Neill (1915-) Amer. educator
- Nelson* . . . Horatio Nelson (1758-1805) Viscount Nelson. Eng. admiral
- J. C. Nelson* . . . James Cecil Nelson (1908-) Amer. educator
- N. E. Nelson* . . . Norman Edward Nelson (1899-) Amer. educator
- Nemerov* . . . Howard Nemerov (1920-) Amer. educator
- Nemetz* . . . Anthony Nemetz (1923-) Amer. educator
- Nethercot* . . . Arthur Hobart Nethercot (1895-1981) Amer. educator
- Neuberger* . . . Richard Lewis Neuberger (1912-1960) Amer. politician
- Neumann* . . . Robert Gerhard Neumann (1916-) Amer. (Austrian-born) educator
- Nevins* . . . Allan Nevins (1890-1971) Amer. historian
- New Books* . . . Hodder & Stoughton (London)
- Newcomb* . . . Theodore Mead Newcomb (1903-) Amer. educator
- Newell* . . . Homer Edward Newell (1915-) Amer. physicist
- New England Journeys* . . . Ford Motor Co.
- Newhall* . . . Richard Ager Newhall (1888-1973) Amer. educator
- Newman* . . . John Henry Newman (1801-1890) Eng. cardinal
- Al Newman* . . . Albert Henry Newman (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- J. P. Newman* . . . John Philip Newman (1826-1899) Amer. clergyman
- R. H. Newman* . . . Robert H. Newman (1917-) Amer. author
- New Republic* . . . Amer. weekly
- The New Scholasticism* . . . Amer. quarterly
- New School Bulletin* . . . New School for Social Research, N.Y.

- News Front* Amer. monthly New Statesman Brit. weekly
- Newsweek* Amer. weekly
Newton . . . Sir Isaac Newton (1642-1727) Eng. mathematician
- Eric Newton* Eric Newton (1893-1965) Eng. art critic
- New Yorker* Amer. weekly
- Nicholls* . . . Norton Nicholls (1742?-1809) Eng. clergyman
- Nichols* . . . Dale Nichols (1904-) Amer. artist
- Nicholson* . . . Meredith Nicholson (1866-1947) Amer. author
- Nicolaeva-Legat* Nadine Nicolaeva-Legat (fl. 1947) Russ. dancer
- Nicolson* . . . Lionel Benedict Nicolson (1914-1978) Eng. journalist
- Harold Nicolson* Sir Harold George Nicolson (1886-1963) Eng. author
- Nida* . . . Eugene Albert Nida (1914-) Amer. linguist
- Niebuhr* . . . Reinhold Niebuhr (1892-1971) Amer. theologian
- Nixon* . . . Herman Clarence Nixon (1886-) Amer. educator
- Nock* . . . Albert Jay Nock (1870-1945) Amer. historian
- O. S. Nock* Oswald Stevens Nock (1905-) Eng. engineer
- Nordhoff* . . . Charles Bernard Nordhoff (1887-1947) Amer. author
- Norris* . . . Charles Gilman Norris (1881-1945) Amer. nov.
- North* . . . Roger North (1653-1734) Eng. lawyer
- North American Review* Amer. quarterly
- Norton* . . . Charles Eliot Norton (1827-1908) Amer. educator
- Noss* . . . John Boyer Noss (1896-1980) Amer. educator
- Notes & Queries* Brit. monthly
- Notes and Queries on Anthropology* Royal Anthropological Institute of Great Britain and Ireland
- Notes on The Art of Bookbinding* London (1952)
- Robert Novak* Robert David Sanders Novak (1931-) Amer. journalist
- Noyes* . . . Alfred Noyes (1880-1958) Eng. poet
- W. A. Noyes* William Albert Noyes (1898-1980) Amer. chemist
- Nurnberg* . . . Maxwell W. Nurnberg (fl. 1951) Amer. educator
- Nursing World* Amer. monthly
- N. Y. American* New York daily
- N. Y. Evening Post* New York daily
- N. Y. Herald Tribune* New York daily
- N. Y. Times* New York daily
- Vanya Oakes* pseud. of Virginia Armstrong Oakes (1909-) Amer. author
- O'Brien* . . . Patrick Joseph O'Brien (1892-1938) Amer. writer
- O'Casey* . . . Sean O'Casey (1880-1964) Irish playwright
- O'Connor* . . . Michael Patrick O'Connor, The Irish Digest (1955)
- Frank O'Connor* pseud. of Michael Joseph O'Donovan (1903-1966) Irish author
- Johnson O'Connor* Johnson O'Connor (1891-1973) Amer. psychometrician
- O'Dea* . . . Thomas Francis O'Dea (1915-) Amer. educator
- Odegard* . . . Peter H. Odegard (1901-1966) Amer. educator
- O'Donnell* Cyril James O'Donnell (1900-) Amer. educator
- E. P. O'Donnell* Edwin P. O'Donnell (1895-1943) Amer. writer
- J. P. O'Donnell* James Preston O'Donnell (1917-) Amer. journalist
- O'Donovan* Patrick Antony O'Donovan (1918-) Brit. journalist
- O.E.D.* . . . A New English Dictionary on Historical Principles, Oxford Univ. Press
- O'Faolain* . . . Sean O'Faolain (1900-) Irish writer
- O'Flaherty* Liam O'Flaherty (1896-) Irish nov.
- Ogdon* . . . William D. Ogdon (fl. 1955) Amer. editor
- Ogg* . . . Frederic Austin Ogg (1878-1951) Amer. educator
- O'Hearn* . . . Walter O'Hearn (1910?-1969) Canad. army officer
- O'Leary* . . . Frank O'Leary (1902-) Amer. journalist
- Oliphant* . . . Margaret Oliphant (1828-1897) Scot. nov.
- Oliver* . . . Frederick Scott Oliver (1864-1934) Brit. jurist
- H. J. Oliver* Harold James Oliver (1916-) Austral. educator
- W. D. Oliver* William Donald Oliver (1907-) Amer. educator
- Olivier* . . . Warner Olivier, Sat. Evening Post (1954)
- O'Meara* . . . Walter Andrew O'Meara (1897-) Amer. author
- Omnibook* Amer. monthly
- O'Nolan* . . . Brian O'Nolan (1912-1966) Irish nov.
- Oppenheimer* Julius Robert Oppenheimer (1904-1967) Amer. physicist
- Orsino* . . . Joseph Anthony Orsino (1908-) Amer. (Ital.-born) chemist
- Orth* . . . Allen Orth (1902-) Amer. writer
- George Orwell* pseud. of Eric Blair (1903-1950) Eng. author
- Osborne* . . . Albert B. Osborne (1866-1913) Amer. writer
- Osler* . . . Sir William Osler (1849-1919) Canad. physician
- Ouida* . . . pen name of Marie Louise de la Ramée (1839-1908) Eng. nov.
- Oursler* . . . (Charles) Fulton Oursler (1893-1952) Amer. writer
- Overstreet* Harry Allen Overstreet (1875-1970) Amer. educator
- Packard* . . . Vance Oakley Packard (1914-) Amer. writer
- Padover* . . . Saul Kussiel Padover (1905-1981) Amer. historian
- Paepke* . . . Walter Paul Paepke (1896-1960) Amer. businessman
- Page* . . . Walter Hines Page (1855-1918) Amer. diplomat
- William Page* William Page (1861-1934) Eng. editor
- Paget* . . . Henry William Paget (1768-1854) 1st marquis of Anglesey, Eng. soldier
- Pahlow* . . . Edwin William Pahlow (1878-1942) Amer. historian
- Paine* . . . Thomas Paine (1737-1809) Amer. (Eng.-born) political philosopher
- Pakistan Affairs* Embassy of Pakistan, Washington, D.C.
- Paley* . . . William Paley (1743-1805) Eng. theologian
- Palfrey* . . . John Gorham Palfrey (1919-1979) Amer. government official
- Palgrave* . . . Sir Francis Palgrave (1788-1861) Eng. historian
- Pall Mall Gazette* London daily
- Palmer* . . . Charles B. Palmer (1908-1963) Amer. writer
- Panther-Downes* Mollie Panther-Downes (1906-) Eng. journalist
- Pap* . . . Arthur Pap (1921-1959) Amer. (Swiss-born) philosopher
- Pares* . . . Sir Bernard Pares (1867-1949) Eng. historian
- Pargellis* . . . Stanley Pargellis (1898-1968) Amer. librarian
- Park* . . . Orlando Park (1901-) Amer. educator
- Ruth Park* Ruth Park (fl. 1947) N. Z. author
- Parker* . . . Sir Gilbert Parker (1862-1932) Canad. author
- Dorothy Parker* Dorothy Rothschild Parker (1893-1967) Amer. writer
- George Parker* George Parker (fl. 1953) Amer. banker
- W. B. Parker* William Belmont Parker (1871-1934) Eng.-born editor
- W. R. Parker* William Riley Parker (1906-1968) Amer. educator
- Parkman* . . . Francis Parkman (1823-1893) Amer. historian
- Parrington* Vernon Louis Parrington (1871-1929) Amer. literary historian
- Parris* . . . Robert Parris (fl. 1955) Amer. writer
- Parshley* . . . Howard Madison Parshley (1884-1953) Amer. zoologist
- Partridge* . . . Eric Honeywood Partridge (1894-1979) Brit. lexicographer
- Pasternack* Richard Pasternack (fl. 1948) Amer. chemist
- Pater* . . . Walter Horatio Pater (1839-1894) Eng. writer
- Patmore* . . . Coventry Kersey Dighton Patmore (1823-1896) Eng. poet
- Derek Patmore* Derek Coventry Patmore (1908-) Eng. author
- Paton* . . . William Andrew Paton (1889-) Amer. educator
- A. S. Paton* Alan Stewart Paton (1903-) So. African writer
- Pattee* . . . Fred Lewis Pattee (1863-1950) Amer. educator
- Patterson* . . . Ellen Day Patterson (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Pattishall* . . . Beverly W. Pattishall (1916-) Amer. lawyer
- Pattison* . . . Mark Pattison (1813-1884) Eng. scholar
- Patton* . . . Frances Gray Patton (1906-) Amer. author
- G. S. Patton* George Smith Patton (1885-1945) Amer. general
- Paul* . . . Elliot Harold Paul (1891-1958) Amer. editor
- Paulding* . . . C. Gouverneur Paulding (fl. 1956) Amer. editor
- Pawley* . . . Kenneth Pawley (1916-) Brit. barrister-at-law
- Paxson* . . . Frederic Logan Paxson (1877-1948) Amer. historian
- Payne* . . . (Pierre Stephen) Robert Payne (1911-1983) Amer. (Eng.-born) author
- S. L. Payne* Stanley LeBaron Payne (1911-) Amer. writer
- Payton* . . . J. Russell T. Payton (1910-1976) Canad. lawyer
- Peabody* . . . Francis Weld Peabody (1881-1927) Amer. physician
- Peace Handbooks* 25 vols., Historical Section of (British) Foreign Office (1920)
- Peacock* . . . Thomas Love Peacock (1785-1866) Eng. author
- Max Peacock* pseud. of Dennis Max Cornelius Woodruffe-Peacock (1899-) Brit. author
- Pearson* . . . Charles Chilton Pearson (1879-1956) Amer. historian
- H. G. Pearson* Henry Greenleaf Pearson (1870-1939) Amer. educator
- H. S. Pearson* Haydn Sanborn Pearson (1901-1967) Amer. writer
- Peattie* . . . Donald Culross Peattie (1898-1964) Amer. botanist
- Peden* . . . William Harwood Peden (1913-) Amer. educator
- Peerman* . . . Dean Gordon Peerman (1931-) Amer. editor
- Peers* . . . Edgar Allison Peers (d. 1952) Eng. educator
- Peffer* . . . Nathaniel Peffer (1890-1964) Amer. educator
- Pegler* . . . Westbrook Pegler (1894-1969) Amer. columnist
- Penn.* . . . William Penn (1644-1718) Eng. founder of Pennsylvania
- Pepper* . . . Stephen Coburn Pepper (1891-1972) Amer. educator
- Pepys* . . . Samuel Pepys (1633-1703) Eng. diarist
- Perelman* . . . Sidney Joseph Perelman (1904-1979) Amer. writer
- Perkins* . . . Gwen Kirtley Perkins (1918-) Amer. writer
- Perry* . . . Bliss Perry (1860-1954) Amer. educator
- Frank Perry* Frank Anthony Perry (1921-) Amer. physician
- G. S. Perry* George Sessions Perry (1910-1956) Amer. author
- O. H. Perry* Oliver Hazard Perry (1785-1819) Amer. naval officer
- The Personalist* Amer. quarterly
- Personnel Jour.* Amer. monthly
- Persons* . . . Frederick Torrel Persons (1869-1948) Amer. librarian
- Petersen* . . . William Petersen (1912-) Amer. sociologist
- Peyre* . . . Henri Maurice Peyre (1901-) Amer. (Fr.-born) educator

- Green Peyton* Green Peyton Wertenbaker (1907-) Amer. author
- Pfeffer* Leo Pfeffer (1910-) Amer. (Hung.-born) lawyer
- Pfieger* Elmer F. Pfieger (fl. 1957) Amer. educator
- Phalen* James Matthew Phalen (1822-1954) Amer. physician
- Pharr* Clyde Pharr (1885-) Amer. educator
- Phelan* Patrick J. Phelan, The Irish Digest (1952)
- Phelps* Clyde William Phelps (1897-) Amer. economist
- Phillips* Wendell Phillips (1811-1884) Amer. orator
- Cabell Phillips* Cabell Phillips (1904-1975) Amer. journalist
- Henry Phillips* Henry Phillips (1838-1895) Amer. writer
- J. D. Phillips* James Duncan Phillips (1876-1954) Amer. publisher
- John Phillips* John Phillips (1800-1874) Eng. geologist
- U. B. Phillips* Ulrich Bonnell Phillips (1877-1934) Amer. educator
- Phillpotts* Eden Phillpotts (1862-1960) Eng. nov.
- Philosophical Review* Amer. quarterly
- Pick* Robert Pick (1898-) Amer. (Austrian-born) author
- Pierce* Ovid Williams Pierce (1910-) Amer. nov.
- Pike* James Albert Pike (1913-1969) Amer. bishop
- E. W. Pike* Elizabeth Wecter Pike, Sat. Review (1953)
- Pimlott* John Alfred Ralph Pimlott (1909-1969) Eng. government official
- Pinckney* Josephine Pinckney (1895-1957) Amer. nov.
- Pirsson* Louis Valentine Pirsson (1860-1919) Amer. geologist
- Pizer* Vernon Pizer (1918-) Amer. writer
- Plamenatz* John Petrov Plamenatz (1912-1975) Eng. lecturer
- Ploscowe* Morris Ploscowe (1904-) Amer. (Pol.-born) lawyer
- Plucknett* Theodore Frank Thomas Plucknett (1897-1965) Brit. historian
- Plumb* John Harold Plumb (1911-) Eng. historian
- Plummer* Alfred Plummer (1896-1978) Eng. educator
- PMLA* Publications of The Modern Language Association of America
- Poe* Edgar Allan Poe (1809-1849) Amer. author
- Pohl* Frederik Pohl (1919?-) Amer. author
- Poleman* Horace Irvin Poleman (1905-1965) Amer. orientalist
- Political Science Quarterly* Amer. periodical
- Pollack* Jack Harrison Pollack (1914-) Amer. author
- Pollard* John Albert Pollard (1901-1968) Amer. educator
- Pollet* Elizabeth Pollet, Botteghe Oscure (1953)
- Pollitzer* Anita Pollitzer (fl. 1950) Amer. suffragist
- Pollock* Sam Pollock (1903-) Brit. broadcaster
- Pollok* Robert Pollok (1798-1827) Scot. poet
- Poole* Derek Michael Poole (d. 1953) Brit. geographer
- Poore* Charles Graydon Foore (1902-1971) Amer. writer
- Pope* Alexander Pope (1688-1744) Eng. poet
- Porteous* Richard Sydney Porteous (fl. 1954) Austral. writer
- Porter* Jane Porter (1776-1850) Eng. nov.
- K. A. Porter* Katherine Anne Porter (1890-1980) Amer. writer
- McKenzie Porter* McKenzie Porter, Maclean's (1953)
- Portz* John Portz (fl. 1955) Amer. literary critic
- The Postmark* Canad. Postal Service (Ottawa)
- Potter* George Edwin Potter (1898-) Amer. zoologist
- Jeremy Potter* Jeremy Potter (1922-) Brit. publisher
- Stephen Potter* Stephen Potter (1900-1969) Eng. author
- Pound* Ezra Loomis Pound (1885-1972) Amer. poet
- Roscoe Pound* Roscoe Pound (1870-1964) Amer. jurist
- Powell* Anthony Dymoke Powell (1905-) Eng. nov.
- Power* William Longford Power (1909-) Amer. (Austral.-born) educator
- Powers* Edwin Powers (1896-) Amer. psychologist
- Powys* John Cowper Powys (1872-1963) Eng. author
- Praed* Winthrop Mackworth Praed (1802-1839) Eng. poet
- Pratt* Fletcher Pratt (1897-1956) Amer. author
- Presbrey* Charles Presbrey (1882-) Amer. businessman
- Prescott* William Hickling Prescott (1796-1859) Amer. historian
- Orville Prescott* Orville Prescott (1906-) Amer. journalist
- Pressey* Sidney Leavitt Pressey (1888-) Amer. psychologist
- Prewett* Virginia Prewett (1911-) Amer. author
- Price* Lucien Price (1883-1964) Amer. writer
- E. T. Price* Edward Thomas Price (1915-) Amer. educator
- G. R. Price* George Rennie Price (1909-) Amer. educator
- Priest* Ivy Baker Priest (1905-1975) Amer. politician
- Priestley* John Boynton Priestley (1894-) Eng. author
- H. I. Priestley* Herbert Ingram Priestley (1875-1944) Amer. historian
- Printers' Ink* Amer. weekly
- Prior* Matthew Prior (1664-1721) Eng. poet
- Pritchett* Victor Sawdon Pritchett (1900-) Eng. journalist
- Progressive Prynne* William Prynne (1600-1669) Eng. Puritan pamphleteer
- Psychiatry Publishers' Weekly* Amer. quarterly
- Puckle* Sir Frederick Puckle (1889-1966) Eng. government official
- Punch* London weekly
- Purcell* Victor William Williams Saunders Purcell (1896-1965) Eng. historian
- Purdy* James Purdy (1923-) Amer. author
- Purtell* William Arthur Purtell (1897-1978) Amer. politician
- Pusey* Edward Bouverie Pusey (1800-1882) Eng. theologian
- N. M. Pusey* Nathan Mesh Pusey (1907-) Amer. educator
- Putnam* Samuel Putnam (1892-1950) Amer. writer
- Pyle* Ernie Pyle (1900-1945) Amer. journalist
- Pyles* Thomas Pyles (1905-1980) Amer. educator
- Pynchon* Thomas Pynchon (1936-) Amer. nov.
- Quarles* Francis Quarles (1592-1644) Eng. poet
- Quiller-Couch* Sir Arthur Thomas Quiller-Couch (1863-1944) Eng. author
- Quillin* H. D. Quillin, True (1954)
- Quinn* Arthur Hobson Quinn (1875-1960) Amer. educator
- Rabi* Isidor Isaac Rabi (1898-) Amer. (Austrian-born) physicist
- Radcliffe* Ann Radcliffe (1764-1823) Eng. nov.
- Radin* Max Radin (1880-1950) Amer. (Pol.-born) educator
- E. D. Radin* Edward David Radin (1909-1966) Amer. author
- Rafferty* Keen (Alexander) Rafferty (1902-) Amer. educator
- Rago* Henry Anthony Rago (1915-1969) Amer. educator
- Raleigh* Sir Walter Alexander Raleigh (1861-1922) Eng. writer
- Rama Rau* Santha Rama Rau (1923-) Indian-born author
- Ramsay* David Ramsay (1749-1815) Amer. historian
- Ramsdell* Charles William Ramsdell (1877-1942) Amer. educator
- Rand* Christopher Rand (1912-1968) Amer. journalist
- Randall* John Herman Randall (1899-1980) Amer. educator
- R. P. Randall* Ruth Painter Randall (1892-1971) Amer. author
- Ransom* John Crowe Ransom (1888-1974) Amer. poet
- Raven* Charles Earle Raven (1885-1964) Eng. educator
- Rawlings* Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings (1896-1953) Amer. author
- Ray* Perley Orman Ray (1875-) Amer. educator
- Read* Sir Herbert Read (1893-1968) Eng. writer
- Reade* Charles Reade (1814-1884) Eng. nov.
- Reckless* Walter C. Reckless (1899-) Amer. criminologist
- Redman* Ben Ray Redman (1896-1961) Amer. author
- Alvin Redman* Alvin Redman (fl. 1954) Brit. publisher
- Reed* Henry Hope Reed (1808-1854) Amer. educator
- John Reed* John Reed (1887-1920) Amer. writer
- Rees* Leslie Clarke Rees (1905-) Austral. writer
- Reese* Lizette Woodworth Reese (1856-1935) Amer. poet
- Reeves* Jesse Siddall Reeves (1872-1942) Amer. political scientist
- Reid* Robert Reid (1895-) Brit. broadcaster
- Reilly* William John Reilly (1899-1970) Amer. educator
- Reinhardt* Kurt Frank Reinhardt (1896-) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Renwick* William Lindsay Renwick (1889-1970) Scot. educator
- The Reporter* Amer. biweekly
- Report on Nat'l Development* Royal Commission on National Development in the Arts, Letters, and Sciences, 1949-1951
- Repplier* Agnes Repplier (1855-1950) Amer. essayist
- Restatement of the Law of Security* American Law Institute
- Retailing Daily* New York newspaper
- Revel* Jean-Francois Revel (fl. 1965) Fr. writer
- Révész* Géza Révész (1878-1955) Hungarian-born psychologist
- Reynolds* Sir Joshua Reynolds (1723-1792) Eng. portrait painter
- L. G. Reynolds* Lloyd G. Reynolds (1910-) Amer. (Canad.-born) economist
- P. J. Reynolds* P. Joyce Reynolds, Country Life (1951)
- Rice* James Rice (1843-1882) Eng. nov.
- Elmer Rice* Elmer L. Rice (1892-1967) Amer. playwright
- L. L. Rice* Laban Lay Rice (1870-1973) Amer. educator
- P. B. Rice* Phillip Blair Rice (1904-1956) Amer. philosopher
- Robert Rice* Robert Rice (1916-) Amer. writer
- Richards* Ivor Armstrong Richards (1893-1979) Eng. educator
- O. W. Richards* Owain Westmacott Richards (1901-) Eng. entomologist
- Richardson* Samuel Richardson (1689-1761) Eng. nov.
- Ricketts* Charles Ricketts (1866-1931) Brit. artist
- Rickword* C. H. Rickword (fl. 1948) Brit. writer
- Riegel* Emil Raymond Riegel (1882-) French-born educator
- Riesman* David Riesman (1909-) Amer. social scientist
- Riggs* Robert Langmuir Riggs (1901-1980) Amer. newspaperman
- Riker* Ben H. Riker (1889?-1962) Amer. bookseller
- Riley* James Whitcomb Riley (1849-1916) Amer. poet
- Ringe* Donald Arthur Ringe (1923-) Amer. educator

- Ripley . . . William Zebina Ripley (1867-1941) Amer. economist
 Dillon Ripley (Sidney) Dillon Ripley (1913-) Amer. zoologist Ripplin . . . Richard C. Ripplin, Ships and the Sea (1953) Ritchie . . . Leitch Ritchie (1800?-1865) Scot. nov.
 Road and Track . . . Amer. monthly Roberts . . . Elizabeth Madox Roberts (1886-1941) Amer. nov.
 C. G. D. Roberts . . . Sir Charles George Douglas Roberts (1860-1943) Canad. poet Kenneth Roberts . . . Kenneth Lewis Roberts (1885-1957) Amer. nov.
 Robertson . . . Alexander Robertson (d. 1970) Brit. author
 F. W. Robertson . . . Frederick William Robertson (1816-1853) Eng. clergyman
 R. B. Robertson . . . Robert Blackwood Robertson (1913-) Scot. writer
 William Robertson . . . William Robertson (1721-1793) Scot. historian Robinson . . . Henry Crabb Robinson (1775-1867) Eng. diarist Cyril Robinson . . . Cyril Edward Robinson (1884-) Brit. historian
 E. A. Robinson . . . Edwin Arlington Robinson (1869-1935) Amer. poet
 F. N. Robinson . . . Fred Norris Robinson (1871-1966) Amer. educator
 F. W. Robinson . . . Frederick William Robinson (1830-1901) Eng. nov.
 Richard Robinson . . . Richard Robinson (fl. 1950) Brit. writer
 Robson . . . William Alexander Robson (1895-1980) Eng. educator Roche . . . John Pierre Roche (1889-1960) Amer. advertising executive Rock . . . Daniel Rock (1799-1871) Eng. ecclesiologist Hazel Rockow . . . Hazel Marcia (Kory) Rockow (1909-) Amer. interior decorator Julius Rockow . . . Julius Rockow (1912-) Amer. interior decorator Rodell . . . Fred Rodell (1907-1980) Amer. educator
 Roehm . . . A. Wesley Roehm (1908-) Amer. educato Roetter . . . Charles Roetter (fl. 1953) Brit. editor Rogers . . . Samuel Rogers (1763-1855) Eng. poet Rogow . . . Lee Rogow (fl. 1954) Amer. writer Rohne . . . John Magnus Rohne, Dict. o Amer. Biog.
 Rolfs . . . Mary Jane Rolfs (1916-) Amer. writer Rolo . . . Charles James Rolo (1916-) Amer. editor Rølvaag . . . Ole Edvart Rølvaag (1876-1931) Amer. (Norw.-born) educator Romulo . . . Carlos Pena Romulo (1901-) Filipino editor Roney . . . James Givens Roney (1918-) Amer. physician Rooney . . . Philip Rooney (1909-) Irish author Roosevelt . . . Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882-1945) 32d president of the U.S.
 Eleanor Roosevelt . . . (Anna) Eleanor Roosevelt (1884-1962) Amer. writer; wife of preceding Rorick . . . Isabel Scott Rorick (1900-) Amer. author
 Rose . . . George Rose III (fl. 1908) Amer. writer Rosebery . . . Archibald Philip Primrose (1847-1929) 5th earl of Rosebery. Eng. statesman
 Rosen . . . Harold Rosen (1908-) Amer. physician Rosenberg . . . Bernard Rosenberg (1923-) Amer. educator
 Harold Rosenberg . . . Harold Rosenberg (fl. 1964) Amer. writer Rosenblum . . . Morris Rosenblum (fl. 1951) Amer. educator Rosenfeld . . . Isaac Rosenfeld (1918-1956) Amer. educator Rosenthal . . . Abraham Michael Rosenthal (1922-) Amer. (Canad.-born) journalist Harold Rosenthal . . . Harold David Rosenthal (1917-) Eng. music critic Rosenzweig . . . Saul Rosenzweig (1907-) Amer. psychologist Rosner . . . Charles Rosner (1902-) Amer. (Hung.-born) artist Ross . . . Emory Ross (1887-1973) Amer. missionary Ishbel Ross . . . Ishbel Ross (1897-) Amer. (Scot.-born) author Mary Ross . . . Mary Margaret Ross (1918-) Amer. author Victor Ross . . . Victor Ross (1919-) Brit. army officer Rossetti . . . Christina Georgina Rossetti (1830-1894) Eng. poet Rossiter . . . Clinton Lawrence Rossiter (1917-1970) Amer. educator Rosten . . . Leo Calvin Rosten (1908-) Amer. (Pol.-born) author Rothman . . . Nathan L. Rothman (1904-) Amer. writer Roucek . . . Joseph Slabey Roucek (1902-) Amer. (Czech.-born) social scientist Roueché . . . Berton Roueché (1911-) Amer. writer Rourke . . . Constance Mayfield Rourke (1885-1941) Amer. author Rovere . . . Richard Halworth Rovere (1915-1979) Amer. author
 Rowe . . . Nicholas Rowe (1674-1718) Eng. dramatist
 D. N. Rowe . . . David Nelson Rowe (1905-) Amer. educator
 H. K. Rowe . . . Henry Kalkock Rowe (1869-1941) Amer. educator
 Rowlands . . . John James Rowlands (1892-) Canad. writer Rowse . . . Alfred Leslie Rowse (1903-) Eng. historian Roy . . . Ralph Lor Roy (1928-) Amer. theologian Rubinstein . . . Ronald Rubinstein (1896-1947) Brit. writer
 Rufus . . . Will Carl Rufus (1876-1946) Amer. astronomer Rukeyser . . . Muriel Rukeyser (1913-1980) Amer. poet Runciman . . . James Runciman (1852-1891) Eng. writer Rusinoff . . . Samuel Eugene Rusinoff (1894-) Amer. (Russ.-born) engineer Ruskin . . . John Ruskin (1819-1900) Eng. author Russell . . . Bertrand Arthur William Russell (1872-1970) 3d earl Russell. Eng. philosopher Nancy Rutledge . . . pseud. of Leigh Bryson (fl. 1956) Amer. author Ryan . . . Abram Joseph Ryan (1838-1886) Amer. priest
 W. L. Ryan . . . William L. Ryan (1911-) Amer. journalist Ryle . . . Gilbert Ryle (1900-1976) Eng. educator Saarinen . . . Aline Bernstein Saarinen (1914-1972) Amer. art critic Sabatini . . . Rafael Sabatini (1875-1950) Eng. (Ital.-born) author Sabine . . . George Holland Sabine (1880-1961) Amer. political philosopher
 Sackville-West . . . Victoria Mary Sackville-West (1892-1962) Eng. writer Edward Sackville-West . . . Edward Charles Sackville-West (1901-1965) 5th baron. Eng. author Sacramento . . . Sacramento (Calif.) daily Bee . . . Mutual Savings Central Fund Safety for Your Savings . . .
 Saintsbury . . . George Edward Bateman Saintsbury (1845-1933) Eng. critic Salinger . . . Jerome David Salinger (1919-) Amer. nov.
 Salisbury . . . Harrison Evans Salisbury (1908-) Amer. journalist Salomon . . . Isidore Lawrence Salomon (1899-) Amer. poet Albert Salomon . . . Albert Salomon (1891-1966) German-born sociologist L. B. Salomon . . . Louis Bernard Salomon (1908-) Amer. educator Sampley . . . Arthur McCullough Sampley (1903-1975) Amer. college administrator Sampson . . . George Sampson (1873-1950) Eng. educator
 Samuel . . . Maurice Samuel (1895-1972) Amer. (Romanian-born) author and translator of Sholem Asch
 Edward Samuel . . . Edward Samuel, Farmer's Weekly (1953)
 Sandburg . . . Carl Sandburg (1878-1967) Amer. author
 Sanders . . . Jacquin Sanders (1922-) Amer. editor Sandwell . . . Bernard Keble Sandwell (1876-1954) Canad. journalist Santayana . . . George Santayana (1863-1952) Span.-Amer. philosopher Sapir . . . Edward Sapir (1884-1939) Amer. linguist Sargeant . . . Winthrop Sargeant (1903-) Amer. music critic Saroyan . . . William Saroyan (1908-1981) Amer. writer Sassoon . . . Siegfried Lorraine Sassoon (1886-1967) Eng. writer
 Sat. Evening Post . . . Amer. periodical Sat. Review (London) . . . Brit. weekly Sat. Review (of Literature) . . . Amer. weekly Saunders . . . O. Elfrida Saunders (fl. 1932) Eng. art historian Savory . . . Theodore Horace Savory (1896-) Eng. biologist Sawyer . . . Walter Warwick Sawyer (1911-) Eng. mathematician Saxon . . . Lyle Saxon (1891-1946) Amer. author Sayers . . . Dorothy Leigh Sayers (1893-1957) Eng. writer
 Sayre . . . Wallace Stanley Sayre (1905-1972) Amer. political scientist Morris Sayre . . . Morris Sayre (1885-1953) Amer. businessman Scalia . . . Samuel Eugene Scalia (1903-) Amer. educator Schafer . . . Joseph Schafer (1867-1941) Amer. editor Schapiro . . . Jacob Saliwn Schapiro (1879-) Amer. historian Scheingold . . . Stuart A. Scheingold (fl. 1966) Amer. educator Scherman . . . Harry Scherman (1887-1969) Amer. economist Schlesinger d. 1965 . . . Arthur Meier Schlesinger (1888-1965) Amer. historian Schlesinger b. 1917 . . . Arthur Meier Schlesinger (1917-) Amer. historian; son of preceding Schoettle . . . Edwin J. Schoettle (fl. 1949) Amer. yachtsman Scholl . . . Evelyn Harwood Scholl (1899-) Amer. educator School and Society . . . Amer. weekly Schorer . . . Mark Schorer (1908-) Amer. educator Schrecker . . . Paul Schrecker (1889-1963) Amer. (Austrian-born) educator Schreiner . . . Olive Schreiner (1855-1920) So. African nov.
 Schulberg . . . Budd Schulberg (1914-) Amer. author Schultz . . . Howard Schultz (1907-) Amer. educator Schumpeter . . . Joseph Alois Schumpeter (1883-1950) Amer. (Ger.-born) economist Schuyler . . . Robert Livingston Schuyler (1883-1966) Amer. educator Schwartz . . . Delmore Schwartz (1913-1966) Amer. poet Schytt . . . Valter Schytt (1919-) Swedish geologist Science . . . Amer. weekly Science News Letter . . . Amer. weekly Scientific American . . . Amer. monthly Scientific Monthly . . . Amer. monthly
 The Score and I.M.A. Mag. . . Brit. quarterly The Scotsman . . . Edinburgh daily Scott . . . Sir Walter Scott (1771-1832) Scot. nov. & poet
 F. N. Scott . . . Fred Newton Scott (1860-1930) Amer. educator
 G. G. Scott . . . Sir George Gilbert Scott (1811-1878) Brit. architect
 H. D. Scott . . . Hugh Doggett Scott (1900-) Amer. senator

- H. S. Scott* Hugh Stowell Scott (1862-1903); pseud. of Henry Seton Merriman. Eng. nov.
- Peter Scott* Peter Scott (1922-) Brit. educator
- W. T. Scott* Winfield Townley Scott (1910-1968) Amer. writer
- Scribner's Mag.* Amer. monthly
- Scripture* Edward Wheeler Scripture (1864-1943) Amer. phonetician
- Scudder* Horace Elisha Scudder (1838-1902) Amer. author
- Seago* John Seago, London Calling (1954)
- Sears* Paul Bigelow Sears (1891-) Amer. botanist
- L. M. Sears* Louis Martin Sears (1885-) Amer. educator
- W. R. Sears* William Rees Sears (1913-) Amer. engineer
- Seaver* George Seaver (1890-1976) Brit. clergyman
- Seecombe* Thomas Seecombe (1866-1923) Eng. biographer
- Sedgwick* Anne Douglas Sedgwick (1873-1935) Amer. nov.
- Sédillot* René Sédillot (1906-) French historian
- Seitz* Frederick Seitz (1911-) Amer. physicist
- Seldes* Gilbert Vivian Seldes (1893-1970) Amer. journalist
- Seliger* Robert Victor Seliger (1900-1953) Amer. psychiatrist
- Sellars* Roy Wood Sellars (1880-1973) Amer. (Canad.-born) educator
- Sellery* George Clarke Sellery (1872-1962) Amer. educator
- Seltzer* Leon Eugene Seltzer (1918-) Amer. writer
- Semon* Richard Wolfgang Semon (1859-1918) Ger. naturalist
- Service to Youth* Division of Youth Service of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts
- Sevareid* (Arnold) Eric Sevareid (1912-) Amer. broadcaster
- F. E. Seymour Shafesbury* Francis Eugene Seymour (1883-) Amer. educator
- Anthony Ashley Cooper (1671-1713) 3d earl of Shaftesbury. Eng. philosopher
- Shak.* William Shakespeare (1564-1616) Eng. dramatist
- Shalowitz* Aaron Louis Shalowitz (1892-) Amer. engineer
- Shannon* William Vincent Shannon (1927-) Amer. author
- Shaplen* Robert Modell Shaplen (1917-) Amer. author
- Sharp* Margery Sharp (1905-) Eng. nov.
- Shaw* George Bernard Shaw (1856-1950) Brit. author
- Irwin Shaw* Irwin Shaw (1913-) Amer. author
- Desmond Shawe-Taylor* Desmond Shawe-Taylor (1907-) Eng. music critic
- Joseph Shearing* pseud. of (Margaret) Gabrielle Long (1888-1952) Eng. author
- Sheean* Vincent Sheean (1899-1975) Amer. writer
- Sheffield* John Sheffield (1648-1721) 1st duke of Buckingham. Eng. writer
- Shehan* Lawrence Joseph Shehan (1898-) Amer. cardinal
- Sheldon* Arthur N. Sheldon (1877-) Amer. engineer
- Shelley* Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792-1822) Eng. poet
- M. W. Shelley* Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley (1797-1851) Eng. nov.
- Shenstone* William Shenstone (1714-1763) Eng. poet
- Shepard* Francis Parker Shepard (1897-) Amer. geologist
- Shepherd* Massey Hamilton Shepherd (1913-) Amer. clergyman
- Sherberg* M. Sherberg, Nat'l Jewish Monthly (1953)
- Sherbo* Arthur Sherbo (1918-) Amer. educator
- Sheridan* Richard Brinsley Sheridan (1751-1816) Irish dramatist
- Clare Sheridan* Clare Consuelo Sheridan (1885-1970) Eng. sculptor
- Sherman* Stuart Pratt Sherman (1881-1926) Amer. critic
- Shields* Dan B. Shields, The Caduceus of Kappa Sigma (1952)
- Shils* Edward Albert Shils (1911-) Amer. educator
- Ships and the Sea* Amer. quarterly
- Shipton* Eric Earle Shipton (1907-1977) Eng. mountaineer
- Shirer* William Lawrence Shirer (1904-) Amer. journalist
- Shirley* James Shirley (1596-1666) Eng. dramatist
- Luke Short* pseud. of Frederick Dilley Glidden (1908-1975) Amer. writer
- Shorthouse* Joseph Henry Shorthouse (1834-1903) Eng. nov.
- Shreve* Randolph Norris Shreve (1885-1975) Amer. chemical engineer
- Nevil Shute* full name Nevil Shute Norway (1899-1960) Eng. nov.
- W. G. Shute* William George Shute (1887-) Amer. mathematician
- Siberts* Bruce Siberts (1868-1952) Amer. writer
- Sidgwick* Henry Sidgwick (1838-1900) Eng. philosopher
- Sidney* Sir Philip Sidney (1554-1586) Eng. poet
- Siler* Thomas Terrill Siler (1909-) Amer. writer
- Sill* Edward Rowland Sill (1841-1887) Amer. poet
- Silveus* Marian Silveus (1904-) Amer. educator
- Simmons* Ernest Joseph Simmons (1903-1972) Amer. educator
- Simnett* William Edward Simnett (1880-1958) Eng. writer
- Simpson* George Gaylord Simpson (1902-) Amer. paleontologist
- R. H. Simpson* Robert H. Simpson (fl. 1956) Amer. writer
- Sinclair* May Sinclair (1865?-1946) Eng. nov.
- Harold Sinclair* Harold Augustus Sinclair (1907-1966) Amer. nov.
- Upton Sinclair* Upton Beall Sinclair (1878-1968) Amer. author
- Sisk* John Paul Sisk (1914-) Amer. educator
- Sitwell* Dame Edith Sitwell (1887-1964) Eng. author
- Osbert Sitwell* Sir Osbert Sitwell (1892-1969) Eng. author; brother of preceding
- Sacheverell Sitwell* Sacheverell Sitwell (1897-) Eng. author; brother of preceding
- Skidmore* Hobert Douglas Skidmore (1909-) Amer. nov.
- Skinner* Cornelia Otis Skinner (1901-1979) Amer. actress
- Samuel Slade* Samuel Slade (fl. 1922) Amer. engineer
- Smart* Charles Allen Smart (1904-1967) Amer. author
- Smelser* Marshall Taylor Smelser (1912-1978) Amer. historian
- Smith* Adam Smith (1723-1790) Scot. economist
- A. D. H. Smith* Arthur Douglas Howden Smith (1887-1945) Amer. author
- Bernard Smith* Bernard Smith (1916-) Austral. educator
- Beverly Smith* Beverly Waugh Smith (1898-1952) Amer. editor
- C. M. Smith* Cecil Michener Smith (1906-1956) Amer. music critic
- D. C. Smith* Datus Clifford Smith (1907-) Amer. publisher
- D. E. Smith* David Eugene Smith (1860-1944) Amer. educator
- Don Smith* Don Smith (1909-) Amer. writer
- E. W. Smith* Edmund Ware Smith (1900-) Amer. writer
- F. D. Smith* Frederick Daniel Smith (fl. 1950) Eng. author
- Goldwin Smith* Goldwin Smith (1823-1910) Eng. historian
- Harrison Smith* Harrison Smith (1888-1971) Amer. editor
- H. G. Smith* Hugh G. Smith, N. Y. Times (1954)
- H. H. Smith* Herbert Heebner Smith (fl. 1941) Amer. writer
- H. L. Smith* Henry Ladd Smith (1906-) Amer. educator
- Horace Smith* Horace Smith (1779-1849) Eng. poet
- J. L. B. Smith* James Leonard Briery Smith (1897-1968) So. African ichthyologist
- Lillian Smith* Lillian Eugenia Smith (1897-1966) Amer. author
- L. P. Smith* Logan Pearsall Smith (1865-1946) Amer. essayist
- M. O. Smith* Martha Otis Smith (fl. 1947) Amer. educator
- Mortimer Smith* Mortimer Brewster Smith (1906-) Amer. writer
- P. J. Smith* Paul James Smith (fl. 1945) Amer. educator
- Preserved Smith* Preserved Smith (1880-1941) Amer. historian
- R. A. Smith* Robert Aura Smith (1899-1959) Amer. journalist
- R. B. Smith* Reginald Bosworth Smith (1839-1908) Eng. historian
- R. R. Smith* Rolland Ryther Smith (1894-) Amer. educator
- S. F. Smith* Samuel Francis Smith (1808-1895) Amer. hymn writer
- Stevie Smith* pen name of Florence Margaret Smith (1902-1971) Eng. poet
- Sydney Smith* Sydney Smith (1771-1845) Eng. essayist
- W. C. Smith* Walter Chalmers Smith (1824-1908) Scot. poet
- W. E. Smith* William Ernest Smith (1892-1969) Amer. educator
- W. P. Smith* Wendell P. Smith (1892-) Amer. ornithologist
- Smollett* Tobias George Smollett (1721-1771) Brit. author
- Smythe* George Franklin Smythe (1852-1934) Amer. clergyman
- Snaith* John Collis Snaith (1876-1936) Eng. nov.
- Snapp* James Cecil Snapp (1907-) Amer. educator
- Soby* James Thrall Soby (1906-1979) Amer. art critic
- Social Science Abstracts* Amer. monthly
- Sokolosky* George (Ephraim) Sokolosky (1893-1962) Amer. columnist
- Sorokin* Pitirim Alexandrovitch Sorokin (1889-1968) Amer. (Russ.-born) educator
- Soule* George Henry Soule (1887-1970) Amer. editor
- South* Robert South (1634-1716) Eng. clergyman
- Southerly* Austral. periodical
- Southern* Richard William Southern (1912-) Eng. educator
- Terry Southern* Terry Southern (1924-) Amer. author
- Southey* Robert Southey (1774-1843) Eng. writer
- Space Hand-book* U. S. Government Printing Office
- Spaeth* John Duncan Spaeth (1868-1954) Amer. educator
- Spaulding* Oliver Lyman Spaulding (1875-1947) Amer. army officer
- Spearman* James Morton Spearman (fl. 1828) Brit. artilleryist
- Spears* John Randolph Spears (1850-1936) Amer. writer
- Spectator* Eng. daily newspaper
- The Spectator* Eng. weekly
- Spectorsky* Auguste Comte Spectorsky (1910-1972) Amer. (Fr.-born) editor
- Spence* James Spence (fl. 1861) Brit. writer
- Spencer* Herbert Spencer (1820-1903) Eng. philosopher
- Theodore Spencer* Theodore Spencer (1902-1949) Amer. educator
- Spender* Stephen Spender (1909-) Eng. poet
- Spenser* Edmund Spenser (1552?-1599) Eng. poet
- Sperry* Willard Learoyd Sperry (1882-1954) Amer. theologian
- Bella Spewack* Bella Spewack (1899-) Amer. (Romanian-born) playwright; wife of Samuel
- Samuel Spewack* Samuel Spewack (1899-1971) Amer. (Russ.-born) playwright
- Spicer* Edward Holland Spicer (1906-) Amer. anthropologist

- Spiers* . . . Al Spiers, Sat. Evening Post (1954)
- Spilsbury* . . . R. J. Spilsbury (fl. 1953) Brit. educator
- Spina* . . . Michele Spina, Kenyon Review (1949)
- Spitzer* . . . Silas Spitzer (fl. 1954) Amer. writer
- Spock* . . . Benjamin McLane Spock (1903–) Amer. physician
- Sprigge* . . . Cecil Jackson Squire Sprigge (1896–1959) Eng. journalist
- Springfield Republican*
Springfield Union
Spurgeon . . . Charles Haddon Spurgeon (1834–1892) Eng. preacher
- Squire* . . . Anne Squire (fl. 1929) Amer. writer
- S. R. L.* . . . Saturday Review of Literature
- Stafford* . . . Jean Stafford (1915–1979) Amer. author
- Stahl* . . . Ernest Ludwig Stahl (1902–) Eng. (So. African-born) linguist
- Stamp* . . . Sir (Laurence) Dudley Stamp (1898–1966) Brit. geographer
- Standen* . . . Nika Standen (1912–) Amer. (Ital.-born) writer
- Robert Standish Stanley* . . . pseud. of Digby George Gerahy (1898–) Eng. author
- Stanley* . . . Arthur Penrhyn Stanley (1815–1881) Eng. clergyman
- J. A. Stanley* . . . Jay A. Stanley, Electronics for the Beginner (1960)
- Starr* . . . Harris Elwood Starr (1875–) Amer. biographer
- Mark Starr* . . . Mark Starr (1894–) Amer. (Brit.-born) author
- Statesman's Year-Book*
Stead . . . William Henry Stead (1899–1959) Amer. economist
- Steck* . . . Francis Borgia Steck (1884–1962) Amer. clergyman
- Stegmuller* . . . Francis Stegmuller (1906–) Amer. author
- Steele* . . . Sir Richard Steele (1672–1729) Brit. essayist
- A. T. Steele* . . . Archibald Trojan Steele (1903–) Amer. (Canad.-born) correspondent
- Steen* . . . Marguerite Steen (1894–1975) Eng. writer
- Stefansson* . . . Vilhjalmur Stefansson (1879–1962) Canad. arctic explorer
- Stegner* . . . Wallace Earle Stegner (1909–) Amer. author
- Stein* . . . Sol Stein (1926–) Amer. publisher
- Steinbeck* . . . John Ernst Steinbeck (1902–1968) Amer. nov.
- Steiner* . . . Walter Ralph Steiner (1870–1940) Amer. physician
- Stenton* . . . Sir Frank Merry Stenton (1880–1967) Eng. educator
- Stephen* . . . Sir Leslie Stephen (1832–1904) Eng. philosopher
- Stephens* . . . James Stephens (1882–1950) Irish writer
- J. L. Stephens* . . . John Lloyd Stephens (1805–1852) Amer. author
- Sterling* . . . Claire Sterling (fl. 1956) Amer. writer
- Stern* . . . James (Andrew) Stern (1904–) Brit. author
- E. M. Stern* . . . Edith Mendel Stern (1901–1975) Amer. author
- Sterne* . . . Laurence Sterne (1713–1768) Brit. nov.
- Stevens* . . . Wallace Stevens (1879–1955) Amer. poet
- L. C. Stevens* . . . Leslie Clark Stevens (1895–1956) Amer. naval officer
- W. E. Stevens* . . . Wayne Edson Stevens (1892–1959) Amer. historian
- Stevenson* . . . Robert Louis Stevenson (1850–1894) Scot. author
- A. E. Stevenson* . . . Adlai Ewing Stevenson (1900–1965) Amer. diplomat
- Stevenson-Hamilton*
Stewart . . . James Stevenson-Hamilton (1867–1957) Brit. author
- Dugald Stewart* . . . Douglas Alexander Stewart (1913–) Austral. writer
- Dugald Stewart* . . . Dugald Stewart (1753–1828) Scot. philosopher
- F. G. Stewart* . . . Dr. F. Gordon Stewart, African Wild Life (1948)
- G. R. Stewart* . . . George Rippey Stewart (1895–1980) Amer. educator
- Potter Stewart* . . . Potter Stewart (1915–) Amer. jurist
- Stimson* . . . Henry Lewis Stimson (1867–1950) Amer. statesman
- Stirling* . . . Sir William Alexander (1567?–1640) Earl of Stirling. Scot. poet
- Monica Stirling*
Stobart . . . Monica Stirling (1916–) Brit. author
- John Clarke Stobart* (1878–1933) Brit. archaeologist
- Stoddard* . . . Ernest M. Stoddard (1889–1965) Amer. plant pathologist
- Stoker* . . . Bram Stoker (1847–1912) Brit. writer
- Stokes* . . . George Stewart Stokes (fl. 1950) Amer. educator
- Stone* . . . Randall Stone, Brief (1952)
- Irving Stone* (1903–) Amer. writer
- Jerome Stone*
Stone . . . Jerome Stone, Sat. Review (1954)
- Stoney* . . . Samuel Gaillard Stoney (1891–) Amer. architect
- Stong* . . . Philip Duff. 'd Stong (1899–1957) Amer. writer
- Storrs* . . . Sir Ronald Storrs (1881–1955) Brit. government official
- Stoumen* . . . Louis C. Stoumen (fl. 1945) Amer. soldier
- Stowe* . . . Harriet Beecher Stowe (1811–1896) Amer. author
- Strachey* . . . Evelyn John St. Loe Strachey (1901–1963) Eng. socialist
- Straight* . . . Michael Whitney Straight (1916–) Amer. editor
- Strand Mag.*
Strange . . . W. E. Strange, Science (1966)
- Strauss* . . . Harold Strauss (1907–1975) Amer. editor
- Street* . . . Julian Leonard Street (1902–) Amer. writer
- Streeten* . . . Paul Patrick Streeten (1917–) Eng. economist
- Streit* . . . Peggy Streit (fl. 1964) Amer. writer
- C. K. Streit*
Clarence Kirshman Streit (1896–) Amer. writer
- Stringer* . . . Arthur John Arbutnott Stringer (1874–1950) Canad. author
- Strong* . . . Leonard Alfred George Strong (1896–1958) Eng. writer
- Strunsky* . . . Simeon Strunsky (1879–1948) Amer. (Russ.-born) writer
- Jan Struher* . . . pseud. of Joyce Maxtone Graham (1901–1953) Eng. author
- Strutt* . . . Jacob George Strutt (fl. 1850) Brit. painter
- Stuart* . . . Graham Henry Stuart (1887–) Amer. educator
- Stubbs* . . . William Stubbs (1825–1901) Eng. historian
- Theodore Sturgeon*
pseud. of Edward Hamilton Waldo (1918–) Amer. author
- Styron* . . . William Styron (1925–) Amer. author
- Suckow* . . . Ruth Suckow (1892–1960) Amer. author
- Sugrue* . . . Thomas Sugrue (1907–1953) Amer. author
- Sullivan* . . . William Lawrence Sullivan (1903–1967) Amer. educator
- Walter Sullivan*
Sulzberger . . . Walter Seagar Sullivan (1918–) Amer. writer
- Cyrus Leo Sulzberger* (1912–) Amer. journalist
- Summer* . . . William Graham Sumner (1840–1910) Amer. sociologist
- C. R. Sumner*
Cid Ricketts Sumner (1890–1971) Amer. author
- Sutherland* . . . James Runcieman Sutherland (1900–) Brit. educator
- Sutton* . . . Horace Ashley Sutton (1919–) Amer. editor
- Suzzallo* . . . Henry Suzzallo (1875–1933) Amer. educator
- Swaim* . . . Joseph Carter Swaim (1904–) Amer. theologian
- Swanberg* . . . William Andrew Swanberg (1907–) Amer. author
- Swartz* . . . Harry Felix Swartz (1911–) Amer. physician
- Sweeney* . . . James Johnson Sweeney (1900–) Amer. art museum director
- Sweet* . . . William Warren Sweet (1881–1959) Amer. educator
- W. J. Sweetman*
W. J. Sweetman (fl. 1947) Amer. dairy husbandman
- Swift* . . . Jonathan Swift (1667–1745) Eng. (Irish-born) satirist
- E. H. Swift*
Emerson Howland Swift (1889–1975) Amer. educator
- Swinburne*
Algernon Charles Swinburne (1837–1909) Eng. poet
- Swindler* . . . William Finley Swindler (1913–) Amer. educator
- Swinnerton*
Frank Arthur Swinnerton (1884–1982) Eng. nov.
- Swinton* . . . William Elgin Swinton (1900–) Brit. paleontologist
- Sydney Bulletin*
Sykes . . . Sydney (Australia) weekly
- Christopher Hugh Sykes* (1907–) Eng. author
- Sylvester* . . . Harry Sylvester (1908–) Amer. author
- Symonds* . . . John Addington Symonds (1840–1893) Eng. author
- Symons* . . . Arthur Symons (1865–1945) Brit. writer
- Taffel* . . . Alexander Taffel (1911–) Amer. educator
- Talbot* . . . Godfrey Walker Talbot (1908–) Eng. news reporter
- Taney* . . . Roger Brooke Taney (1777–1864) chief justice, U.S. Supreme Court
- Tarkington*
(Newton) Booth Tarkington (1869–1946) Amer. nov.
- Tasaki* . . . Hanama Tasaki (1913–) Jap. journalist
- Tassooin*
Paul Tassooin (fl. 1953) Brit. writer
- Tate* . . . (John Orley) Allen Tate (1899–1979) Amer. author
- William Arnold Tate* (1911–) Brit. broadcaster
- Tatler* . . . Brit. weekly; merged 1940 in Tatler and Bystander
- Taubes* . . . Frederic Taubes (1900–) Amer. (Austrian-born) artist
- Taylor* . . . Jeremy Taylor (1613–1667) Eng. author
- A. J. P. Taylor*
Alan John Percivale Taylor (1906–) Eng. historian
- Ann Taylor*
Ann Taylor (1782–1866) Eng. nursery-rhyme writer (James) Bayard Taylor (1825–1878) Amer. writer
- Edmond Lapierre Taylor* (1908–) Amer. writer
- Elizabeth Taylor* (1912–1975) Eng. author
- Floyd Taylor*
Floyd Taylor (1902–1951) Amer. journalist
- Henry Taylor*
Sir Henry Taylor (1800–1886) Eng. poet
- H. O. Taylor*
Henry Osborn Taylor (1856–1941) Amer. historian
- Isaac Taylor*
Isaac Taylor (1787–1865) Eng. author
- Jane Taylor*
Jane Taylor (1783–1824) Eng. nursery-rhyme writer; sister of Ann
- J. L. Taylor*
Jack L. Taylor, Laboratory Techniques in Space Environment Research NASA (1962)
- Richard Taylor*
Richard Taylor (1919–) Amer. philosopher
- R. L. Taylor*
Robert Lewis Taylor (1912–) Amer. journalist
- W. W. Taylor*
Walter Willard Taylor (1913–) Amer. anthropologist
- Technical News Bulletin*
U.S. National Bureau of Standards monthly publication
- Temple* . . . Sir William Temple (1628–1699) Brit. statesman
- Tennyson* . . . Alfred Tennyson (1809–1892) 1st baron Tennyson. Eng. poet
- Hallam Tennyson* (1921–) Eng. writer
- Terrien* . . . Samuel Lucien Terrien (1911–) Amer. (Fr.-born) clergyman
- Terry* . . . Estelle Clarke Terry (1908–) Amer. educator
- Textile Industries*
Amer. monthly
- Thackeray*
William Makepeace Thackeray (1811–1863) Eng. author
- Thesiger* . . . Wilfred Patrick Thesiger (1910–) Brit. explorer
- Thienes* . . . Clinton Hobart Thienes (1896–) Amer. pharmacologist
- Thilly* . . . Frank Thilly (1865–1934) Amer. educator
- Third Degree*
Mystery Writers of America, Inc.

- Thirkell . . . Angela Margaret Thirkell (1890-1961) Eng. nov.
- Thirlwall . . . Connop Thirlwall (1797-1875) Eng. historian
- Thomas . . . Norman Mattoon Thomas (1884-1968) Amer. socialist
- W. L. Thomas . . . William Leroy Thomas (1920-) Amer. anthropologist
- Thompson . . . Francis Thompson (1859-1907) Eng. poet
- C. L. Thompson . . . Carol Lewis Thompson (1918-) Amer. editor
- Craig Thompson . . . Craig Thompson (1907-) Amer. journalist
- Dorothy Thompson . . . Dorothy Thompson (1894-1961) Amer. journalist
- P. W. Thompson . . . Paul Williams Thompson (1906-) Amer. army engineer
- W. S. Thompson . . . Warren Simpson Thompson (1887-) Amer. sociologist
- Thomson . . . James Thomson (1700-1748) Scot. poet
- Archbishop Thomson . . . William Thomson (1819-1890) Brit. clergyman
- J. A. Thomson . . . Sir John Arthur Thomson (1861-1933) Scot. biologist
- Virgil Thomson . . . Virgil Thomson (1896-) Amer. composer
- Don Thorburn . . . Donaldson Bride Thorburn (1907-) Amer. writer
- Lois Thoreau . . . Lois Long, q.v., formerly Lois Long Thorburn
- Guy Thorne . . . Henry David Thoreau (1817-1862) Amer. author
- Thornton . . . pseud. of Cyril Arthur Edward Ranger Gull (1876-1923) Eng. author
- William Thornton (fl. 1953) Brit. writer
- Thorogood . . . Horace Thorogood, Country Life (1951)
- Thorp . . . Raymond W. Thorp (1896-) Amer. writer
- Thruelsen . . . Richard Delmar Thruelsen (1908-) Amer. editor
- Thurber . . . James Grover Thurber (1894-1961) Amer. author
- Tilden . . . David Tilden, N.Y. Herald Tribune Book Rev. (1953)
- Tilford . . . John Emil Tilford (1912-) Amer. educator
- Timasheff . . . Nicholas S. Timasheff (1886-1970) Amer. (Russ.-born) educator
- Time . . . Amer. weekly
- The Times . . . London daily
- Times Lit. Sup. . . . Times Literary Supplement, Brit. weekly
- Tinker . . . Chauncey Brewster Tinker (1876-1963) Amer. educator
- Toch . . . Ernst Toch (1887-1964) Amer. (Austrian-born) composer
- Todd . . . John Aiton Todd (1875-1954) Brit. economist
- Tomkins . . . Alan Tomkins, The Irish Digest (1953)
- Tomkinson . . . Joan Tomkinson, Wesfarmers News (1955)
- Topsell . . . Edward Topsell (1572-1625) Eng. naturalist
- Toulmin . . . Harry Aubrey Toulmin (1890-1965) Amer. author
- Towster . . . Julian Towster (1905-) Amer. (Pol.-born) educator
- Toynbee . . . Arnold Joseph Toynbee (1889-1975) Eng. historian
- Philip Toynbee (Theodore) Philip Toynbee (1916-) Eng. nov.
- Tracy . . . Honor Tracy (1915-) Eng. author
- Travis . . . Martin Bice Travis (1917-) Amer. educator
- Trench . . . Richard Chenevix Trench (1807-1886) Eng. archbishop
- Trevelyan . . . George Macaulay Trevelyan (1876-1962) Eng. historian
- G. O. Trevelyan . . . Sir George Otto Trevelyan (1838-1928) Eng. historian; father of George Macaulay
- Trewartha . . . Glenn Thomas Trewartha (1896-) Amer. geographer
- Triebel . . . Louis Augustus Triebel (1890-) Austral. writer
- Trilling . . . Lionel Trilling (1905-1975) Amer. educator
- Trollope . . . Anthony Trollope (1815-1882) Eng. nov.
- Troy . . . William E. Troy (1904-1961) Amer. educator
- True . . . Amer. monthly
- Trueman . . . Sir Arthur Elijah Trueman (1894-1956) Eng. educator
- Truman . . . Harry S Truman (1884-1972) 33d president of the U.S.
- Tucker . . . Abraham Tucker (1705-1774) Eng. philosopher
- B. F. Tucker . . . B. Fain Tucker (1899-1970) Amer. jurist
- Tunley . . . Roul Tunley (1912-) Amer. writer
- Turnbull . . . Agnes Sligh Turnbull (1888-) Amer. author
- Tyndall . . . John Tyndall (1820-1893) Brit. physicist
- Udall . . . Stewart Lee Udall (1920-) Amer. secretary of the interior
- Uhl . . . Alexander Herbert Uhl (1899-) Amer. journalist
- Uhlan . . . Edward Uhlan (1912-) Amer. publisher
- Ukers . . . William Harrison Ukers (1873-1954) Amer. author
- Ulich . . . Robert Ulich (1890-1977) Amer. (Ger.-born) educator
- Ullmann . . . Stephen Ullmann (1914-1976) Brit. educator
- Ullyett . . . Kenneth Ullyett (1908-) Eng. author
- U.N. Background Papers . . . United Nations publication
- Uniform Code of Military Justice . . . U.S. Government Printing Office (1951)
- Univ. of Fla. Bulletin . . . University of Florida (1953)
- Untermeyer . . . Louis Untermeyer (1885-1977) Amer. poet
- J. S. Untermeyer . . . Jean Starr Untermeyer (1886-1970) Amer. poet
- Upjohn . . . Everard Miller Upjohn (1903-1978) Amer. educator
- Upson . . . William Hazlett Upson (1891-1975) Amer. writer
- Urban . . . John Urban (fl. 1947) Amer. educator
- Urey . . . Harold Clayton Urey (1893-1981) Amer. chemist
- U. S. Code . . . Code of the Laws of the U.S. (1934 ed.)
- The Use of English . . . Brit. quarterly
- Usher . . . Roland Greene Usher (1880-1957) Amer. historian
- U. S. News and World Report . . . Amer. weekly
- Ustinov . . . Peter (Alexander) Ustinov (1921-) Eng. actor
- Utley . . . Francis Lee Utley (1907-1974) Amer. educator
- Valentine . . . Alan Valentine (1901-1980) Amer. educator
- Valtin . . . Jan Valtin (1904-1951) Ger. author
- Van Alstyne . . . Richard Warner Van Alstyne (1900-) Amer. historian
- Vance . . . Thomas Hume Vance (1908-) Amer. educator
- Vandenberg . . . Arthur Hendrick Vandenberg (1884-1951) Amer. politician
- Van der Spuy . . . Una Van der Spuy (fl. 1953) So. African writer
- S. S. Van Dine . . . pseud. of Willard Huntington Wright (1888-1939) Amer. writer
- Van Doren . . . Carl Clinton Van Doren (1885-1950) Amer. editor
- Mark Van Doren . . . Mark Van Doren (1894-1972) Amer. author
- van Dyke . . . Henry van Dyke (1852-1933) Amer. author
- J. C. Van Dyke . . . John Charles Van Dyke (1856-1932) Amer. educator
- Van Loan . . . Herbert Carroll Van Loan (1924-) Amer. stock adviser
- van Loon . . . Hendrik Willem van Loon (1882-1944) Amer. (D.-born) historian
- Van Nostrand's Scientific Encyclopedia . . . Samuel Van Valkenburg (1890-1976) Dutch geographer
- Van Vechten . . . Carl Van Vechten (1880-1964) Amer. writer
- Vanzetti . . . Bartolomeo Vanzetti (1888-1927) Ital.-Amer. anarchist
- Vaughan . . . Robert Alfred Vaughan (1823-1857) Eng. clergyman
- Vaughan-Thomas . . . Wynford Vaughan-Thomas (1908-) Brit. commentator
- Veblen . . . Thorstein Bunde Veblen (1857-1929) Amer. social scientist
- Vernon . . . Raymond Vernon (1913-) Amer. educator
- Vierck . . . Charles John Vierck (1906-) Amer. educator
- Viereck . . . Peter Viereck (1916-) Amer. educator
- L. A. Viereck . . . Leslie A. Viereck (1930-) Amer. research botanist
- Viets . . . Henry Rouse Viets (1890-1969) Amer. neurologist
- Villiers . . . Alan John Villiers (1903-) Austral. author
- Visalberghi . . . Aldo Visalberghi, Jour. of Philosophy (1953)
- Vogel . . . Victor Hugh Vogel (1905-) Amer. physician
- Vogt . . . Evon Zartman Vogt (1918-) Amer. anthropologist
- von Engeln . . . Oskar Diedrich von Engeln (1880-1965) Amer. geologist
- Von Mises . . . Ludwig Edler Von Mises (1881-1973) Amer. (Austrian-born) economist
- Vorse . . . Mary Heaton Vorse (1881-1966) Amer. writer
- Vosseller . . . Aurelius B. Vosseller (1903-) Amer. naval officer
- Vucinich . . . Wayne S. Vucinich (1913-) Amer. historian
- Waage . . . Thomas Olaf Waage (1912-) Amer. banker
- Waggoner . . . Hyatt Howe Waggoner (1913-) Amer. educator
- Wagley . . . Charles Walter Wagley (1913-) Amer. anthropologist
- Wagner . . . Herman Alexander Wagner (1864-1960) Amer. (N. Z.-born) engineer
- Wain . . . John Barrington Wain (1925-) Brit. writer
- Walcutt . . . Charles Child Walcutt (1908-) Amer. educator
- Walden . . . David Walden, The Season (1942)
- Hubert Wales . . . pseud. of William Pigott (1870-1943) Eng. nov.
- Walford . . . William W. Walford (fl. 1849) Eng. clergyman
- Walinsky . . . Louis Joseph Walinsky (1908-) Amer. (Eng.-born) economist
- Walker . . . Stanley Walker (1898-1962) Amer. journalist
- Walkley . . . Arthur Bingham Walkley (1855-1926) Eng. drama critic
- Wallace . . . Pat Wallace, Punch (1953)
- Waller . . . Edmund Waller (1606-1687) Eng. poet
- Wall Street Jour. . . . New York daily
- Waln . . . Nora Waln (1895-1964) Amer. writer
- Walpole . . . Horace Walpole (1717-1797) 4th earl of Orford. Eng. author
- Hugh Walpole . . . Sir Hugh Seymour Walpole (1884-1941) Eng. nov.
- Walsh . . . Thomas Walsh (1875-1928) Amer. writer
- Maurice Walsh . . . Maurice Walsh (1879-1964) Irish nov.
- Walton . . . Izaak Walton (1593-1683) Eng. author
- Warburg . . . James Paul Warburg (1896-1969) Amer. (Ger.-born) banker
- Warburton . . . William Warburton (1698-1779) Eng. bishop
- Ward . . . Mrs. Humphry Ward, née Mary Augusta Arnold (1851-1920) Eng. nov.
- A. C. Ward . . . Alfred Charles Ward (1891-) Brit. literary critic
- A. W. Ward . . . Sir Adolphus William Ward (1837-1924) Eng. historian
- Barbara Ward . . . Barbara Ward (1914-1981) Lady Jackson. Brit. economist
- Warfel . . . Harry Redcay Warfel (1899-1971) Amer. educator
- Warner . . . John Warner (fl. 1954) Amer. labor expert
- S. T. Warner . . . Sylvia Townsend Warner (1893-1978) Eng. writer
- Warren . . . Robert Penn Warren (1905-) Amer. writer

- Austin Warren (1899-) Amer. educator Dale Warren (1897-) Amer. publisher Earl Warren (1891-1974) Amer. jurist Shields Warren (1898-1980) Amer. pathologist Sidney Warren (1916-) Amer. historian
 Thomas Warton (1728-1790) Eng. poet
 George Washington (1732-1799) 1st president of the U.S.
 Frank Waters (1902-) Amer. author
 Vincent Stanislaus Waters (1904-1974) Amer. bishop Charles Waterton (1782-1865) Eng. naturalist Gordon S. Watkins (1889-) Amer. (Welsh-born) economist Morris Watnick (fl. 1948) Amer. educator
 Sir William Watson (1858-1935) Eng. poet
 James Bennett Watson (1918-) Amer. educator Ralph Watson, New Yorker (1956)
 Sara Ruth Watson (1909-) Amer. educator Douglas Benjamin Watt (1914-) Amer. music critic Isaac Watts (1674-1748) Eng. hymn writer Richard Watts (1898-) Amer. journalist
 Walter Theodore Watts-Dunton (1832-1914) Eng. writer Evelyn Arthur St. John Waugh (1903-1966) Eng. author Coulton Waugh (1896-1973) Amer. cartoonist Andrew Thomas Weaver (1890-1965) Amer. educator Richard Malcolm Weaver (1910-1963) Amer. educator Warren Weaver (1894-1978) Amer. mathematician Mary Gladys Meredith Webb (1881-1927) Eng. nov.
 Walter Prescott Webb (1888-1963) Amer. educator
 Howard Webber, New Yorker (1963)
 Daniel Webster (1782-1852) Amer. statesman John Webster (1580?-1625) Eng. dramatist
 Joseph Wechsberg (1907-) Amer. (Czech-born) writer Dixon Wecter (1906-1950) Amer. educator
 John Merrill Weed (1897-) Amer. engineer Edward Augustus Weeks (1898-) Amer. editor Raymond Weeks (1863-1954) Amer. educator
 Jerome Weidman (1913-) Amer. author
 Guido Gustav Weigend (1920-) Amer. (Austrian-born) educator
 Charles Weir, Jr., Univ. of Toronto Quarterly (1944) Molly Weir (fl. 1956) Scot. actress Emilio Weiss (1918-) Amer. bacteriologist Theodore Russell Weiss (1916-) Amer. poet Paul B. Weisz (1921-) Amer. (Austrian-born) biologist Joseph Nye Welch (1890-1960) Amer. lawyer Thomas Dewar Weldon (1896-1958) Eng. educator René Wellek (1903-) Amer. (Austrian-born) educator Sumner Welles (1892-1961) Amer. diplomat Arthur Wellesley (1769-1852) 1st duke of Wellington, Brit. general Paul Iselin Wellman (1898-1966) Amer. author Carolyn Wells (1869-1942) Amer. writer
- H. G. Wells Herbert George Wells (1866-1946) Eng. author Eudora Welty (1909-) Amer. author
 Barrett Wendell (1855-1921) Amer. educator Alfred Werner (1911-1979) Amer. (Austrian-born) author Glenway Wescott (1901-) Amer. nov.
 Austral. periodical
 Charles Wesley (1707-1788) Eng. clergyman; brother of John John Wesley (1703-1791) Eng. founder of Methodism Dame Rebecca West, pseud. of Mrs. Henry Maxwell Andrews (1892-1983) Eng. nov.
 Anthony Panther West (1914-) Amer. (Eng.-born) author
 Robert Athow West (fl. 1844) Amer. (Eng.-born) writer
 Ray Benedict West (1908-) Amer. educator Allan Ferguson Westcott (1882-1953) Amer. educator
 Robert Westerby (1909-) Eng. nov.
 Edward Alexander Westermarck (1862-1939) Finnish anthropologist Alan Furman Westin (1929-) Amer. educator Bruce Hutchinson Westley (1915-) Amer. educator Christine Weston (1904-) Amer. (Indian-born) nov.
 Cornelius Weygandt (1871-1957) Amer. educator Edith Newbold Wharton (1862-1937) Amer. nov.
 John Franklin Wharton (1894-1977) Amer. lawyer Richard Whately (1787-1863) Eng. theologian Henry Benjamin Wheatley (1838-1917) Eng. bibliographer
 Jere Hungerford Wheelwright (1905-1961) Amer. author Philip Ellis Wheelwright (1901-1970) Amer. educator George Frisbie Whicher (1889-1954) Amer. educator
 Edwin Percy Whipple (1819-1886) Amer. writer
 Fred Lawrence Whipple (1906-) Amer. astronomer William Whiston (1667-1752) Eng. theologian William Allen White (1868-1944) Amer. journalist Andrew Dickson White (1832-1918) Amer. educator
 Elwyn Brooks White (1899-) Amer. writer
 George H. White, Addresses on Current Issues in Higher Education (1951) Gilbert White (1720-1793) Eng. naturalist Jon Ewbank Manchip White (1924-) Welsh author
 Kenneth Douglas White (fl. 1953) So. African writer Leslie Alvin White (1900-1975) Amer. anthropologist Lynn Townsend White (1907-) Amer. educator Morton Gabriel White (1917-) Amer. philosopher Patrick Victor Martindale White (1912-) Austral. author Stewart Edward White (1873-1946) Amer. nov.
 Terence Hanbury White (1906-1964) Eng. writer
 Theodore Harold White (1915-) Amer. author Walter Francis White (1893-1955) Amer. author
 Sir William Henry White (1845-1913) Eng. naval architect William Smith White (1907-) Amer. journalist
- Alfred North Whitehead (1861-1947) Eng. mathematician
 Albert Carlton Whitehead (1875-) Amer. author William Whitehead (1715-1785) Eng. poet
 Charles Henry Whiteley (fl. 1950) Eng. educator Walt Whitman (1819-1892) Amer. poet
 William Dwight Whitney (1827-1894) Amer. philologist
 Peter Dwight Whitney (1915-) Amer. writer John Greenleaf Whittier (1807-1892) Amer. poet William Hollingsworth Whyte (1917-) Amer. writer George John Whyte-Melville (1821-1878) Brit. nov.
 Tom Wicker (1926-) Amer. journalist Norbert Wiener (1894-1964) Amer. mathematician Albert Ernest Wier (1879-1945) Amer. music editor
 Albert Edward Wiggam (1871-1957) Amer. author Kate Douglas Wiggin (1856-1923) Amer. author Samuel Wilberforce (1805-1873) Eng. bishop Barbara Wilcox (fl. 1950) Eng. author
 Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde (1854-1900) English (Irish-born) writer Howard Baker Wilder (1901-) Amer. educator George F. Wilder (fl. 1927) Amer. educator Thornton (Niven) Wilder (1897-1975) Amer. author
 Peter William Wiles (1930-) Eng. writer Vernon Lee Wilkinson (1909-) Amer. lawyer
 Paul Willen (fl. 1953) Amer. writer
 Harry Willets, Russia Under Khrushchev (1962)
 Gordon Randolph Willey (1913-) Amer. anthropologist Stanley Thomas Williams (1888-1956) Amer. educator Albert Rhys Williams (1883-1962) Amer. author Greer Williams (1909-) Amer. writer
 George Valentine Williams (1883-1946) Eng. writer
 Harrison Arlington Williams (1919-) Amer. senator Howel Williams (1898-) Amer. (Eng.-born) geologist John E. Williams (fl. 1960) Amer. educator Philip Williams (1918-1955) Amer. educator Tennessee Williams (1911-1983) Amer. playwright William Carlos Williams (1883-1963) Amer. writer
 Wirt Alfred Williams (1921-) Amer. educator Henry J. Willingham (1868-1948) Amer. educator Nathaniel Parker Willis (1806-1867) Amer. editor
 Harry Parker Willis (1874-1937) Amer. economist Wendell Lewis Willkie (1892-1944) Amer. politician Colin Wills (1906-) Austral. author Albert Potter Wills (1873-1937) Amer. educator Betty Douglas Wilson (1906-) Amer. writer Angus Frank Johnstone Wilson (1913-) Eng. writer Edmund Wilson (1895-1972) Amer. writer Ethel Davis Wilson (1890-) Canad. nov.
 Francis Graham Wilson (1901-1976) Amer. educator Henry Wilson (1812-1875) U.S. vice-president (1873-1875)

- H. H. Wilson* . . . Horace Hayman Wilson (1786-1860) Eng. orientalist
- Paul Wilson* . . . Paul Wilson (fl. 1952) Amer. attorney
- W. H. Wilson* . . . William Harmon Wilson (1905-) Amer. writer
- Woodrow Wilson* . . . (Thomas) Woodrow Wilson (1856-1924) 28th president of the U.S.
- Winant* . . . John Gilbert Winant (1889-1947) Amer. diplomat
- Winchell* . . . Alexander Winchell (1824-1891) Amer. geologist
- Winchester* . . . Caleb Thomas Winchester (1847-1920) Amer. educator
- Windham* . . . William Windham (1750-1810) Eng. statesman
- Winnett* . . . Ralph Winnett (1914-) Amer. writer
- Wintringham* . . . Thomas Henry Wintringham (1898-1949) Eng. soldier
- Wirth* . . . Louis Wirth (1897-1952) Amer. (Ger.-born) sociologist
- Wissler* . . . Clark Wissler (1870-1947) Amer. anthropologist
- Wister* . . . Owen Wister (1860-1938) Amer. nov.
- Witmer* . . . Helen L. Witmer (1898-) Amer. sociologist
- Wodehouse* . . . Pelham Grenville Wodehouse (1881-1975) Eng. nov.
- Wolfe* . . . Thomas Clayton Wolfe (1900-1938) Amer. nov.
- A. F. Wolfe* . . . Ann F. Wolfe (fl. 1947) Amer. writer
- B. D. Wolfe* . . . Bertram David Wolfe (1896-1977) Amer. writer
- D. M. Wolfe* . . . Don Marion Wolfe (1902-1976) Amer. educator
- Wolfers* . . . Arnold Oscar Wolfers (1892-1968) Amer. (Swiss-born) educator
- Wolfert* . . . Ira Wolfert (1908-) Amer. journalist
- Wolff* . . . Perry Sidney Wolff (1921-) Amer. writer
- Wollaston* . . . William Wollaston (1660-1724) Eng. clergyman
- Wollstonecraft* . . . Mary Wollstonecraft Godwin (1759-1797) Eng. author
- Women's Wear Daily* . . . New York newspaper
- Wood* . . . Ralph Charles Wood (1904-) Amer. linguist
- Anthony Wood* . . . Anthony Wood (1632-1695) Eng. historian
- Clement Wood* . . . Clement Wood (1888-1950) Amer. writer
- Woodburn* . . . John Moore McKeehan Woodburn (1901-1952) Amer. editor
- Woodcock* . . . George Woodcock (1912-) Brit. author
- Woodfin* . . . Jane Woodfin, Of Mikes & Men (1951)
- Woodham-Smith* . . . Cecil Blanche (Fitzgerald) Woodham-Smith (1896-1977) Eng. historian
- Woodring* . . . Paul Woodring (1907-) Amer. educator
- Woodward* . . . Comer Vann Woodward (1908-) Amer. historian
- Woollard* . . . George Prior Woollard (1908-1979) Amer. educator
- Woolbert* . . . Robert Gale Woolbert (1903-1954) Amer. historian
- Woolf* . . . Virginia Woolf (1882-1941) Eng. author
- Wordsworth* . . . William Wordsworth (1770-1850) Eng. poet
- Dorothy Wordsworth* . . . Dorothy Wordsworth (1771-1855) Eng. diarist; sister of William
- Work* . . . Henry Clay Work (1832-1884) Amer. songwriter
- World's Work* . . . Amer. monthly
- Wouk* . . . Herman Wouk (1915-) Amer. author
- Wren* . . . Sir Christopher Wren (1632-1723) Eng. architect
- Wright* . . . Thomas Wright (1810-1877) Eng. antiquarian
- Boyd Wright* . . . Boyd Wright, Wall Street Jour. (1954)
- F. L. Wright* . . . Frank Lloyd Wright (1869-1959) Amer. architect
- Georg von Wright* . . . Georg Henrik von Wright (1916-) Finnish philosopher
- L. B. Wright* . . . Louis Booker Wright (1899-) Amer. librarian
- Wyatt* . . . A. W. Wyatt, African Abstracts (1951)
- Woodrow Wyatt* . . . Woodrow Lyle Wyatt (1918-) Brit. diplomat
- Wyld* . . . Henry Cecil Kennedy Wyld (1870-1945) Eng. lexicographer
- Wylie* . . . Elinor Morton Hoyt Wylie (1885-1928) Amer. author
- I. A. R. Wylie* . . . Ida Alexa Ross Wylie (1885-1959) Eng. author
- Philip Wylie* . . . Philip Wylie (1902-1971) Amer. writer
- Wynmalen* . . . Henry Wynmalen (1889-) Eng. horse breeder
- Wynne* . . . John Joseph Wynne (1859-1948) Amer. clergyman
- Wythe* . . . George Wythe (1893-) Amer. government official
- Yale Review* . . . Amer. quarterly
- Ybarra* . . . Thomas Russell Ybarra (1880-) Amer. author
- Yeats* . . . William Butler Yeats (1865-1939) Irish poet
- Yerby* . . . Frank Garvin Yerby (1916-) Amer. nov.
- Yoder* . . . Robert McAyeal Yoder (1907-1959) Amer. journalist
- Yonge* . . . Charlotte Mary Yonge (1823-1901) Eng. nov.
- Young* . . . Edward Young (1633-1765) Eng. poet
- A. M. Young* . . . Arthur Morgan Young (1874-) Eng. author
- Arthur Young* . . . Arthur Young (1741-1820) Eng. agriculturist
- Kenneth Young* . . . (Charles) Kenneth Young (1916-) Brit. editor
- Kimball Young* . . . Kimball Young (1893-1973) Amer. educator
- Stark Young* . . . Stark Young (1881-1963) Amer. writer
- Young Zabel* . . . Morton Dauwen Zabel (1901-1964) Amer. educator
- Zacharias* . . . Ellis M. Zacharias (1890-1961) Amer. naval officer
- Zangwill* . . . Israel Zangwill (1864-1926) Eng. writer
- Zimmer* . . . Fred Zimmer (fl. 1954) Amer. writer and painter
- Zink* . . . Harold Zink (1901-1962) Amer. political economist
- Zinsser* . . . Hans Zinsser (1878-1940) Amer. bacteriologist
- Zirato* . . . Bruno Zirato (1884-1972) Amer. (Tal.-born) orchestra manager
- Zirkle* . . . Conway Zirkle (1895-1972) Amer. biologist